Fear, not apathy, blamed

Public accepts violence

In recent weeks New York's civic leaders and newspapers have expressed shock over public indifference toward mounting violence and bloodshed in the city.

In one incident scores of citizens watched — and did nothing—as two women were savagely attacked on the streets.

Here's is a special report on the mood of the metropolis and the depth of its callousness.

By JOHN MILLER

NEW YORK (TNS) — The lights of law and order are growing dim all over Wonderful Town.

An executive in his early 30s grabs a quick drink in the Penn Bar at the Statler-Hilton. He's about to commute to his home on Long Island. Around the bar are late city editions that shout from Page One:

DEBATE RAGES ON 'HATE GANG'

On page two:

WAGNER DECRIES CITY'S APATHY

The executive shrugs. "This is a city of 9,000,000 people," he says, "so you get a few stabbings and you say ' a few people have been stabbed.

"I wouldn't say the people are concerned. They're probably like me — I'll worry when I get stabbed. Sure, they've got problems in Harlem but that's a very small percentage of the population of New York City.

"All big cities anywhere in the world have crime, so why get too disturbed? And don't forget that a lot of the people who work on Manhattan Island leave it at 5 o'clock. They go to the suburbs because if they've got kids, they need a backyard."

REASSURING

Other commuter comments you hear are more reassuring, although perhaps not as honest. You get replies such as "I'm profoundly disturbed" or "this is no longer a truly civilized city and naturally I'm concerned" or "something's got to be done but the situation seems kind of hopeless."

These citizens give the impression all they know about the city's lawlessness is what they read in the papers and, understandably, they prefer it that way.

They're articulate and well educated. They seem to want to be considered "liberal" at all costs. Accordingly, they're reluctant to touch on the city's underlying racial tensions as an indisputable factor in the outbreak of violence.

Not so, however, with the white New Yorker who lives on Manhattan or in Brooklyn, the Bronx or Queens. If he's willing to talk about the matter at all (and many merely say they've no opinions whatever, then flee), he immediately begins to talk about "them."

The maitre d'hotel of a famous Manhattan restaurant spares a minute to lose his customary aplomb and say: 'I live in Queen's and it's getting bad there now. Bit by bit the Negroes are moving in, so eventually the whites will move out. They don't want this stabbing business you find in Harlem. No sir, they'll just have to move out."

DISCIPLINE

The overseer - cum-bouncer of a Broadway club, normally a satanic face peering out of a silk suit, sits down to voice a torrent of concern.

"First, I live in Brooklyn and I want to say that they're not disciplining the kids at home like we were. I was one of seven and I remember as a kid that if I spoke back to a teacher or a cop, I'd get my head kicked in.

"The kids today? — hell, 10-year-olds are talking back to teachers and the teachers are scared to do anything because the parents are calling the shot on how their kids are to be treated. It's wrong and this is where the trouble starts in this town."

He looked out on Broadway, still crowded at 2.30 a.m. "This street isn't the same as it was 10 years ago. I predict in another five years this is going to be another Harlem. Only the brave or the very drunk will show up."

New York's cab drivers, white and colored, have come to accept the prospect of violence as a way of life —as have many other New Yorkers, which, to an outsider, seems incredible.

A Negro driver, a native of Harlem who now lives in Brooklyn, drives you around his old neighborhood around 10 o'clock at night and then

June marks coalition centenary

By GEORGE HOGAN

In the middle of June, Canada will pass an important centennial. It was just a century ago that George Brown rose in the Parliament of the old United Province of Canada and shook hands with John A. Macdonald to form the coalition that led to Confederation. Because of that event, this year's more famous centennials, the Charlottetown and Quebec Conferences, were made possible.

There is a curious parallel between the situation in the 1860s in the Province of Canada, and that in the 1960s in the Dominion of Canada. The Province of Canada had been created in 1840 as a union of the former colonies of Upper and Lower Canada East (Quebec) and Canada West (Ontario), were given equal representation in the united Legislature, although their populations were unequal.

As the population of Canada West grew in relation to its neighbor, that part of the province became progressively more under-represented. A great agitation, led by Brown, arose for representation by population, or "rep by pop."

SAME SPIRIT

The resulting controversy finally brought government under the old constitution to a standstill. In the frequent elections, French - speaking Canada East tended to elect an overwhelming majority of Conservatives pledged to maintain the existing union, while English-speaking Canada West tended to elect Reformers pledged to support "rep by pop." The even balance of these two forces created an unstable situation of minority governments and repeated elections, leading to complete political impasse.

Finally, in the early summer of 1864, after there had been within the previous three years, two general elections and four minority governments, Brown made the great gesture which paved the way to a solution.

Even if we did not have a great new constitutional crisis boiling all around us, it would still be important that the planning for the Centennial of Confederation should take place in the same non-partisan spirit that led to Confederation itself.

I have advocated frequently, as have many others, that a far greater recognition should be given to importance of Sir John A. Macdonald in the founding of our country. Certainly Macdonald was the driving force in the whole process, whose strategy and generalship brought together the diverse elements which made up a nation. But without the active support and co-operation of Brown and Cartier, who were the effective majority leaders in English and French Canada respectively, the thing could never have been done.

Plot to betray Kennedy revealed

WASHINGTON—(TNS)— A plot by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency to betray President Kennedy during the calamitous Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba is described by four Cuban leaders in a recently published book.

The Cubans charge they were told by the CIA agent in charge of training their assault brigade to go ahead with the invasion even if the President called it off. For show, they were to imprison their American CIA leaders, cut communications and then attack Cuba.

Haynes Johnson, a senior reporter with the Washington Star wrote the book The Bay of Pigs in collaboration with the leaders of Brigade 2506 — Manuel Artine, Pepe A. Roman, Erneido Oliva and Enrique Ruiz-Williams.

Johnson said he submitted proofs of the book to the CIA to give the agency a chance to rebut the charges. The CIA did not reply.

The invasion, in April, 1961, failed hopelessly and discredited American foreign policy. It left hundreds of prisoners in Castro's hands, who were later ransomed at great expense.

President Kennedy accepted full responsibility for the plan although it had been conceived during the Eisenhower administration. The Cubans said they were training at a secret CIA base in Guatemala called Tase Trax when their American Leader, a CIA agent called Frank told them forces in the U.S. government were trying to block the invasion. If Frank was ordered to stop it he would tell Pepe and Oliva.

By GORDON DONALDSON

Pepe said Frank told him: "If this happens, you come here and make some kind of a show as if you were putting us, the advisers, in prison. And you go ahead with the program as we have talked about it and we will give you the whole plan even if we are your prisoners.

"Frank was quite specific. They were to place an armed brigade soldier at each American's door, cut communications with the outside and continue the training until he told them when and how to leave for Trampoline (the advance base)."

The book said Frank later told Artime that if he received orders to stop the invasion he also had orders from "my bosses" to continue anyway.

Allen Dulles, head of the CIA, was retired after the Bay of Pigs fiasco, rated as the biggest bloomer in the ill-starred history of the U.S. intelligence service.

According to Johnson's book the invasion plan drawn up by the CIA and approved by the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff badly under-estimated Castro's air power and even provided faulty maps.

Real issues misrepresented

Columbia treaty may Balkanize Canada

The Columbia development has already become one of the great Canadian controversies of this century, and its outcome will profoundly affect the future of all Canadians. Yet it is taking place amid public confusion and unparalleled misrepresentation of the real issues.

By failing to retain control of the water in B.C., the province has lost an opportunity to develop a multi-million dollar industrial empire in the lower mainland area.

PLEDGE UNKEPT

The government has reversed Canada's historic national policy of encouraging and even insisting on east-west economic development so that the various regions of Canada nourish one another. Instead, it has allowed British Columbia to integrate the Columbia basin southward into a U.S. system. This is economic separatism of an extremely dangerous kind and if continued could lead to a fatal balkanization of Canada.

The intolerable defects of the treaty for Canada have been known for some time now. The present government came to office pledged to correct them. It has not done so, and in fact, has indicated it has no intention of doing so.

No plan for the Columbia can serve Canada properly unless it satisfies the following three principles:

1. All Canadian water must be stored in Canada where it is physically and legally under Canadian control.

2. This water must be stored at as high an elevation as supply permits, to allow the best physical use of the water by both countries and to provide maximum flexibility for future development.

By JAMES G. RIPLEY

3. The decision as to the use of Canadian water, including flood water that can be captured by Canada, must remain in Canadian hands — just as the U.S. insists, rightly, on unrestricted freedom to use its own water to its own best advantage.

Of these three principles for the best use of Columbia water, let us compare the Treaty plan with the plan proposed by General McNaughton.

The treaty allows the giant Libby project on the U.S. section of the Kootenay. This transfers physical control of what is essentially a Canadian river to U.S. hands and represents 25 per cent of the storage capacity of the Canadian basin.

AMERICAN CONTROL

High Arrow places another 30 per cent of our storage virtually on the U.S. border where it is of no use to anyone but the U.S.

The McNaughton plan places all the storage in Canada, in locations where it can be directed in any direction, north, south, east or west. Even if we continue to sell flows to the U.S., the price of such service will be determined by the value of our real alternatives.

The treaty places storage at the lowest possible elevations relative to the U.S. border. The McNaughton plan places it at the highest.

The treaty places control of all flows in the hands of the Americans. Libby gives them physical and jurisdictional control of the Kootenay. Arrow gives them effective control of the Columbia because of its location and because the criterion for its operation is to optimize output for the

Mass hysteria on mining mart

TORONTO—(TNS) —What makes penny stock gamblers tick?

That's a question a lot of people have been asking ever since the big mining discovery near Timmins triggered a penny stock spree, the likes of which has never been seen before on any stock market in North America.

And recently two experts at the University of Toronto and York University came up with remarkably similar answers: they compared with the kind of crowd hysteria that led to witches being burned in the Middle Ages—or could inspire a lynching mob today.

"Mass infectivusness" was the way Dr. Laniel Cappon of the U. of T. described it "not very different from witches being burned in the Middle Ages."

Prof. M. H. Appley of York compared the excitement generated by stock market fever with the excitement of a lynching mob. "Once somebody starts beating the drum, everybody comes running and starts jumping on the bandwagon."

He attributed much of the mania to the influence of a present penny stock buying "get-rich-quick" culture.

"People always identify themselves with the hero. In a case like the stock market, the hero is the individual who makes, or has made, millions from playing stocks.

"No matter how much advice is given warning the public not to stake their fortunes on speculations like penny stocks, they still identify themselves with these heroes and believe, if he did it, why can't I?"

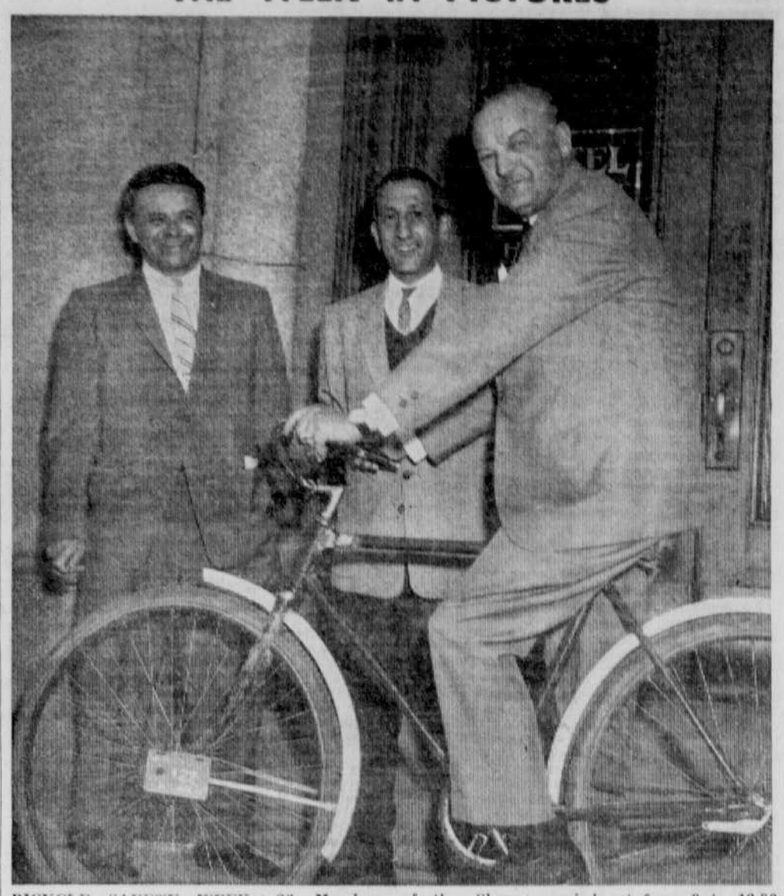

Prof. Appely said the get-rich-quick attitude has become almost folklore in the U.S. and Canada simply because such stories are always highlighted.

"To counteract a fever like this public speculation, you would have to write several stories about people who had lost fortunes in the stock market," he felt.

Dr. Cappon argued that the get-rich-quick fantasy is stronger today than ever before. "It's stronger because of the mobilitly of people the feeling of rootlessness," he said.

In the past, he felt, things were more rooted. People lived—and died—in a certain place. They knew what income they could expect, within limits. For the middle classes, money was made through hard work, and death was regarded as an accepted release.

Leave cities

Sunny and mild weather across most of Canada welcomed the start of the Victoria Day holiday Friday and today.

Long lines of cars streamed from cities Friday night as thousands of cottage owners moved to open up their cottages for the summer season.

Bus, rail and plane depots were crowded, too, as Canadians flocked to other cities and resorts, some outside Canada.

The near - perfect weather forecast had police and safety officials worried about how high the accidental death toll might rise.

Free pilots

PANMUNJOM (AP) — North Korean Communists today released two United States helicopter pilots shot down last May, then claimed the United Nations Command had acknowledged the pilots committed a border violation on an espionage mission.

A UN Command spokesman confirmed delivery of a receipt for the prisoners admitting they committed espionage but, he said later, the admission "is, of course, meaningless."

Free after exactly one year in prison, Capt. Ben W. Stutts, 31, of Florence, Ala., and Capt. Carleton W. Voltz, 27, of Frankfort, Mich., were flown to Seoul, where doctors said they were in good condition.

Hunger strike

MONTREAL (CP) — Seven suspected Armee de Liberation du Quebec terrorists are in Montreal's Bordeaux jail after a short, successful hunger strike Friday.

The seven, facing more than 50 charges in connection with the looting of two Quebec armories and at least five hold-ups, refused to eat their Friday noon meal in protest against conditions in Montreal Court House cells.

To quit on flag?

OTTAWA (CP) -- The controversial issue of a distinctive Canadian flag may boil over in Parliament within a few weeks.

On Friday sources close to the government confirmed earlier published reports if Parliament doesn't accept the government's proposed maple leaf flag, the minority Liberal administration will offer its resignation.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

DOUBLE SHORTENING MAKES RICH COUP

J. Edward Morrow was the bridge editor of the Dallas News 30 years ago when I moved to Dallas. He retired 15 years ago and now lives in Joplin, Mo., where he still plays an occasional bridge game.

He writes, "Here is a double trump coup that I played recently in a duplicate in Neosho, Tex.

"My partner's seven-heart bid was enthusiastic, to say the least, but after I won the first trick with dummy's ace of diamonds and the nine of trumps held the second, things seemed to be looking up. I led dummy's eight of trumps for another finesse and West dropped a diamond. Things were looking bad once more.

"There was hope if I could shorten myself twice and then develop a coup against East, so I went after it. I ruffed one of dummy's diamonds and then proceeded to cash three club tricks winding up in dummy. Then I led and ruffed dummy's last diamond. East discarded a spade. He had nothing better to do. I cashed dummy's ace-king-queen of spades while East followed and finally led the fourth spade. East had to ruff and I overruffed for my grand slam."

Jed sure played the hand well. Incidentally North did do some really strong bidding. Once Jed took him out of three no-trump, he carried Jed right to seven hearts.

Q—The bidding has been:

North	East	South	West
1 Dia.	Pass	?

You, South, hold: Spades, A-Q-6; Hearts, K-J-4-2; Diamonds, A-2; Clubs, A-Q-9-4.

What do you do?

A—With 20 points, including three aces, and the king of the fourth suit, you are going to a slam somewhere. The problem is to explore grand slam possibilities. One heart is suggested as your response but if you want to jump to two hearts that is all right, too.

Today's Question

You bid one heart and your partner rebids to one no-trump. What do you do now?

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Oscar and Emmy are finally going to get together.

The meeting will take place on the annual television academy awards telecast May 25, and it will be strictly for laughs. The opening sketch will show an actor's mangle, on which are displayed an Oscar and an Emmy. Dissolve. The pair become Dick van Dyke and Mary Tyler Moore who then engage in a discussion about their mutual problems.

Permission to portray Oscar took some doing. Consent finally came from the Motion Picture Academy people, who apparently realized the skit might help displace some of Oscar's over-seriousness.

The Oscars have become institutionalized and stuffy. They are handed out in a cold auditorium and the only real liveliness comes at the Oscar ball, which isn't televised.

The Emmy affair has always seemed like a warm family party — sometimes chaotic, as such parties can be. The guests usually gather around dinner tables in a festive atmosphere, as members of the Motion Picture Academy did in its early days.

Day spent in little red school

READIN', RITIN',' RITHMETIC — Grade five pupils from the Sunnyside High School in Stanstead were given a living history lesson when they spent their regular Friday studying in the one-room-schoolhouse in Stanstead. Seen taking in the three R's like Grandmother used to do are Pamela Greer, Nancy Nourse and Brenda Sisco. Grade five teacher is Mrs. Janice Soutiere. (Record photo by

By IRWIN BLOCK
(Record staff reporter)

A living history lesson for some 35 students of Sunnyside High School in Stanstead brought to life a 145-year-old, one room, red brick schoolhouse which has been lying dormant since 1927.

The sounds of children's laughter, the stern voice of a grade five teacher, and the crackle of wood in the old iron stove reverberated through the walls of the old school yesterday.

The children, all in the grade five class of Mrs. Janice Soutiere, spent the day in the school, as part of the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers.

But the sudden return of children's voices to the old schoolhouse, being preserved by the Stanstead' Women's Institute was more than a simple testimonial.

The pupils stepped back into time. They pretended they were living in a century long since past. The students in the first row were in grade one; those in the second row in grade two. And just as was commonplace then the grade one students would be taught separately while the other children worked.

Then the teacher would teach different material to grade two students, while the others worked by themselves. This is the way education was run before the king-sized, glass facade, laboratory equipped schools we know today existed.

"Patsy" lit the fire in the old wood stove; "Johnny" took one of the younger students to the outhouse; "Jane" filled the basin with drinking water during lunch hour; all the children helped to clean up after lunch was eaten.

And this was all done at the little red schoolhouse yesterday.

Pictures of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, of bearded and luxuriously mustached old gentlemen who were in the vogue during the gay nineties were not an anomoly; they sprung to life in the environment which they had themselves known in their day. The children knew it too — not by being able to recite a few facts, repeated over and over again. But by a vital experience, lived first hand by those who played pioneer yesterday.

For photographer it's cherry pink and apple blossom white time

The shutter bugs are getting ready with their favorite film to photograph cherry and apple blossoms which are about to burst forth; wild cherry, are already in bloom.

One should take advantage of these interesting subjects as they give necessary contrast either in colour or black and white. The various shades of green in the young spring growth add to the scene by giving depth.

Probably this is a good a time as any to bring up the use of a polarizing filter; in fact its one of the best examples for its use.

The polarizing filter can be used with colour film to great advantage as it does the same job as when you use a yellow or red filter in black and white photography to bring out the clouds by darkening the sky. However, in colour film it has no effect on the colour balance of your film but will give better colour saturation.

For instance, when photographing blossoms against a blue sky, use the sky area of the north and adjust the filter angle for maximum depth of blue.

The delicate colours of pink in apple blossoms will all be registered and the white petals will show up against the darken blue in the sky.

There are many other uses for polarizing filter's such as photographing pictures behind glass, fish in ponds or any reflections from polished or glossy surfaces. Providing the reflection is between 70 degrees and 40 degrees to the normal, it will be removed allowing you to see clearly what the reflection was hiding.

By removing reflections from leaves and grass one will have a truer renditions and more colour in your scene.

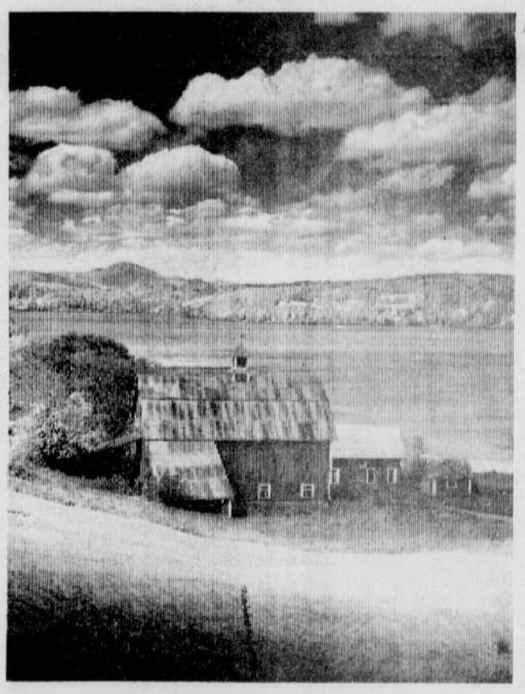

How does a polarizing filter work? First we must analyze light itself.

Ordinary light can be said to travel in waves that vibrate in all directions at right angles to the direction among which the light is travelling.

Certain crystals or filters will only allow electric-magnetic waves to pass through if they are vibrating in one particular plane.

So any light that passes through the filter emerges vibrating in the one place, along which the filter is transparent. Light vibration such as this is called polarized.

The light in the blue of the north sky is partially polarized any way, and almost completely when a polarizing filter is used in front of the lens.

There are, of course, two drawbacks in wide spread use of polarizing filter. First perhaps is its cost. In Canada, its price tag is around $18.00. The other not quite so serious is its filter factor of 4. This means a reduction of film speed by 4 times and in colour this could be a handcap at times.

Evans Joslin; 50 years of service

Sherbrooke residents today join with his business associates in extending congratulations to Evans C. Joslin who is marking completion of a half-century of service with one of Sherbrooke's major industries, the American Biltrite Rubber Co. (Canada) Ltd.

Mr. Joslin entered the employ of the Panther Rubber Co., of Canada, Ltd., predecessor to the present company, in 1914, shortly after its establishment here.

Over the years he served in various departments of the company until his nomination as vice-president and general manager of the firm in 1944, on the death of his father, Charles A. Joslin, who had been instrumental in the establishment of the plant here.

In recent years the company has expanded its operations greatly until it has become one of the leading employers of labor in Sherbrooke. This expansion has resulted not only from the growth of its traditional markets but also from a wide diversification of its operations.

Recognition of his position in the industry came a few years ago when he was named president of the Rubber Association of Canada,, a trade organization embracing all branches of the industry in Canada.

But in addition to his attention to his profession, he has also found time to take an important part in community affairs and has served actively with many local institutions and societies.

He is president of the Sherbrooke Hospital and is past president of the Y.M.C.A., the Sherbrooke Rotary Club and St. George's Club. He also has held various posts with Trinity United Church.

Haydn S. Pearson's COUNTRY FLAVOR

Stone crop yields without sowing

We hear much concerning farm surpluses and that one farmer today can produce food and fibers for 25 persons while a generation ago he produced enough for a dozen. This country, unlike others, has never had a food famine. Sufficient food is part of our national blessing.

But there is one crop which is more certain than any other. A man does not plant it; he never has to worry about frosts, bugs or blights. Four times an ice sheet has moved down over the land and each time it planted a crop of stones and rocks.

Each spring after a winter of cold, the stones move toward the surface and when a man plows he turns up the harvest. On a pleasant Saturday, Father would say, "Son, hitch Belle to the stoneboat and pick the stones from the upper field." It was slow, back-breaking, monotonous work.

One put the larger stones around the edge of the stoneboat and filled in with smaller ones; then he drove Belle to the big stone heap at the end of the field. Of course, if one were out of sight of the house and eyes of self-appointed, warden sisters, one could take his time unloading and throw the smaller rocks at a target.

But, when boys were expected to do their tasks, a lad knew that it didn't pay to dally. The sooner he finished the task, the more likely Father would come out, survey the scene and say, "A pretty good job. Why don't you call it a day and see if you can get us a good mess of trout for supper."

Other papers say:

Elected politicians not all-wise

(The Ottawa Journal)

Political parties have an unjustified confidence that the parliamentary caucuses of their elected members are endowed with supernatural wisdom.

In consequence, they turn over to the leader and the MPs not only the operation of the party but the custody of its ideals and policies as well.

This is risky. Prime Minister Mackenzine King insisted that the strong Liberal Federation look after the political education of party adherents and stay away from the elected representatives on Parliament Hill. When Mr. King died, it did not take long for the Liberal organization to fall in ruin, and the Liberal Government with it.

The Conservatives, whose vast majority of 1958 withered to defeat in 1963, have done no better. Hindsight suggests that had there been a more nervous party association, immune to the consolations and complacencies that come easily to politicians in power, it would have warned the Conservative administration of its decline in favor, and suggested remedies, before the 1962 election.

Encouraging evidence that the Conservative Association of Canada is prepared to do more thinking for itself is contained in the announcement of Mr. Dalton Camp, president, that a national conference on Canadian goals will be held in September.

Conservative supporters can do their party immense good by frank, informed and reasonable public discussion on subjects such as the prospects for Confederation and the role of government in developing the national economy. But the conference will achieve little if the delegates selected feel they are dominated by the Conservatives elected to national or provincial governments and who already have a forum.

At this conference, when the party non-professionals examine great issues, a display of modesty, indeed shyness, would become the MPs and MLAs very well. This is one occasion when they can profitably listen more and speak less.

The Voice of Women

Like turtle, it sticks neck out

VICTORIA (CP) — The Voice of Women is like a turtle—"it sticks its neck out," says its president.

"Sometimes we have to stick our necks out in order to rouse public opinion to the threat of all-out nuclear war and that is an ever-present threat so long as we continue manufacturing nuclear weapons," says Kathleen Macpherson of Toronto.

VoW's public demonstrations against nuclear weapons are sometimes regarded as "too radical" by its more conservative members, she admits. "But there is no point in being a voice if it is too quiet to be heard. What we need is a scream of protest against the use, spread and testing of nuclear weapons in Canada and everywhere else."

Mrs. Macpherson, a physiotherapist by profession, made her comments during a Victoria stopover on a Western tour. She later travelled to The Hague for meetings with women from the 15 North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries.

She will report at the VoW's annual meeting in Banff, Alta., June 30-31 on efforts at The Hague to build a new women's movement.

FOUNDED IN 1960

The VoW was founded in Toronto in 1960, has 4,000 members and has made contacts with like-minded women on both sides of the Iron Curtain. It has sent travel missions to the Soviet Union and other European countries to stimulate interest.

"We believe it is possible and highly desirable for the countries of the world to convert their war plants to peacetime production," Mrs. Macpherson says.

"The chief fear in the public mind is that this will cause unemployment. That is a fallacy. There is a crying need for all kinds of peacetime production—housing, hospitals, schools, food for hungry nations, mechanical and scientific appliances to improve the health and living standards of people everywhere.

Adventures with God

Only the God-fearing can save children from moral corruption

"The good old days" and the good old ways kept bumptious youth manageable. Parents then had a truer sense of values. Honesty, industry, respect of parents and property, to say nothing of a greater reverence for God and His word, were taught by precept and example.

And youth generally accepted the moral code as laid down by God and their parents.

The majority of parents took their vows and responsibilities much more seriously. Consequently such phases as "the battered child syndrome" and "delinquent parents" were unheard of.

Juvenile court and correction centres were held in the back shed.

It was a cheaper and more effective way of keeping law and order in home, school and community and for fulfilling the solemn vows to "train up the children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord."

But the good old days and the good old ways went out with the horse and buggy and "the charm from the skies" that "hallowed" the quiet, orderly homes of 50 years ago went out with them.

Modern homes, modern youth and modern parents (with few exceptions) live in a whirl of activity that leaves neither time nor energy to commune with each other or with God.

TEMPTING

The benefits of time-saving devices has been cancelled by the time-consuming vices that have been channeled into the homes and the minds of young Canadians.

The affluent and influential Joneses have moved right into tempt the appetities of aspiring parents and children for luxuries, gadgets, food, drink and toys that they cannot afford and do not need to develop their brain and brawn and souls.

Not only has the family pattern been wrecked but in too many instances the family budget and the family peace has been shattered beyond repair.

If it is true that home standards create world standards (and I believe it is) then world conditions are a sad commentary on the failure of many parents to function effectively in their God-given role.

Higher living standards are a contributing factor to the lower moral standards of the jet age.

In their quest for bigger and better homes, greater freedom and recognition as persons, they have lost their perspective, their sense of values and the love, obedience and respect of their children.

Today many parents are caught in a vicious circle of debt and delinquents. They have better homes but unmanageable children.

Children need the example of devout and disciplined parents in their formative years. Mothers have the greater share of responsibility for their development because they are closer to them and less indispensable in their baby days than fathers.

It is unfortunate that financial pressures and the growing emphasis on the total emancipation of women have led to the moral dilemma of our nation's youth.

Children who ought to be learning the rules for good earthly and heavenly citizenship at their mother's knee are now turned out to nursery school as mere infants.

They learn very early in life how to get along with other children and without their parents.

Atom opposition grows in France

PARIS (Reuters)—France is engaged in a lively debate over its nuclear defence force and there is little doubt the issue will be a major one in the presidential elections next year.

A strong majority in Parliament favors France's developing its own atomic industry and weapons, and in the country a majority seems to favor it too.

At the same time, there is a growing minority opposition, backed by the Communists, but headed by such men as Socialist Jules Moch, who was one of the strongest anti-Communists in 1947 and 1948. But he relies on Communist support for his election to the National Assembly.

At a rally of left-wing and pacifist sympathizers recently, Moch described France's atomic force as "not only ruinous but ineffective."

This viewpoint is strongly contested by government supporters who are finding it necessary to defend their policy to an increasing degree. Formerly they merely relied for sufficient proof of its excellence on the fact that President Charles de Gaulle had so decided.

COST DEBATED

The deputy chairman of the defence committee of the National Assembly, Alexandre Sanguinetti, has just dealt with the argument of cost.

He pointed out that France's 1964 military budget amounts only to 7.5 per cent of the national revenue and to only 20.5 per cent of the total budget, one of the lowest percentages of expenditure on defence France has known for 150 years.

He recalls Russia probably spends 16 per cent of its national revenue on defence and the United States about 10 per cent. He insists both Britain and West Germany spend more than France.

Sanguinetti maintains that not only is France not overreaching herself financially, but that her atomic armament costs less than would the maintenance of the 14 divisions she is supposed to—but in fact does not—keep available for the European command of NATO.

OPINION SPLIT

Opinion remains divided between those who think France should have her own atomic strike force and those who think the contrary. But the most recent poll reveals the interesting fact that the number of people with a definite view is growing and the number of "do-not-knows" is declining.

Asked whether their country should have its own atomic force, 39 per cent said yes, 40 per cent said no. Last August 30 per cent said yes and only 29 per cent said no.

Asked whether France could face up to the cost, 29 per cent said yes, against 15 per cent a year ago, and 45 said no, against 52 per cent a year ago.

The opinion polls and other indications suggest that for the time being the average Frenchman identifies his own and his country's vitality and vigor with having an atomic force.

Gerald Waring REPORTING

OTTAWA — Despite the idealism of those who make a moral case for diplomatic recognition of Red China, the Golden Rule won't decide whether or when we'll trade ambassadors with Peking. The deciding factor will be our own selfish, national interest.

This is something to keep in mind when Ottawa jiggles in the direction of Peking's recognition and admission to United Nations membership — as it did earlier this week, through the lips of Foreign Minister Martin at the NATO Council meetings in The Hague.

Mr. Martin's jiggle was his comment that circumstances "may require some modification of our position" on the China question after the fall meeting of the UN Assembly. Reporters at The Ha.gue — no doubt well briefed — explained that Mr. Martin foresees the Assembly may vote Peking in over US objections, and before any provision has been made to protect the interests of the people of Formosa.

The government's policy is opposed to a political settlement that would hand over Formosa to Peking against the wishes of the Formosans. How the Formosans could say anything but "no" with Chiang Kai-shek running their country is difficult to see. Perhaps Mr. Martin is coming around to acknowledging that the Ottawa policy on Formosa is unrealistic. Perhaps this is the "modification" he meant.

Would this be selling Formosa down the river? If in theory yes, then only in theory. Formosa's independence will be maintained not by Canada's policy of self-determination for the Formosans, but by continued US willingness to keep US military commitments to Chiang Kai-shek.

That being the case, how should Ottawa react to the Assembly's admission of Red China as a UN member? If it is illogical now, as many argue, to ignore the government of 600 million people in our diplomatic contacts, it would be much more unrealistic to continue this ostracism after Red China becomes a UN member. Peking now trades with us despite our non-recognition policy. Would it then?

So the question is where our national interests lie. What would Canada gain from recognition of China? What would it risk or lose by recognizing China?

By exchanging ambassadors with Peking we might solidify our sales of wheat and open markets for other Canadian products. Alvin Hamilton, former agriculture minister, has just returned from a three weeks visit to China glowingly optimistic about trade possibilties.

Theoretically, by talking to the Chinese we might help bring about a peace settlement between China and the US. But while there are some signs that Washington is rethinking its position vis-a-vis China, recognition is undoubtedly far distant. The US is fighting a war in Vietnam against Communist allies of Peking.

The deep anger of the Americans if we pulled a de Gaulle on them could ruin us. That is why Martin hastened to assure NATO that "We have no intention of doing anything that would add to the difficulties of our friends". But still he jiggled. Now he will be watching and listening for US reaction. Will there be some degree of sympathy in influential US quarters? Or will the US reaction be shrilly emotional? If events require a review of our China policy in the fall, these are things the government must be able to judge: the risks of recognition, and the gains.

REAL ISSUES

system as a whole, which of course is largely American.

SHORT TERM SALE

Premier Bennett and his supporters in Ottawa have created what is essentially a short term power sale to the U.S. and have tailored the Canadian system specifically to supply U.S. needs. Their thinking has not gone beyond this concept and within this limited framework, they can say, rightly enough, that the engineering studies support their proposals.

The American wanted, and managed to obtain complete control, and unrestricted use of, Canadian water for consumptive purposes for all time; firm power now; peaking power later; and flood control always.

For this enormously valuable water, they pay us nothing.

We are paid for downstream benefits to power production in the U.S. But water for consumptive purposes is being given away free in perpetuity. It is beyond comprehension that a provincial premier would deny another province badly needed water in order to turn it over to another country.

The story is simple.

- The Prairies need water.
- It is available from the Columbia.
- They aren't going to get it.

Mica Dam must be the hub of any Canadian development of the Canadian half of the Columbia basin. And the key to the profitable development of Mica is to make sure it can be supplied with Kootenay water.

It is as simple as this: on a river such as the Columbia, where storage is essential, you locate your main power generating planfs at the high head sites, then arrange for up-stream storage to keep up the head of water behind the power plants.

SIMPLE FAILURE

If Mica is the key, we should be locating our auxiliary storage above it, namely in Bull River-Luxor.

What does the treaty do? Precisely the opposite. The storage is located below Mica, where it is useless for power generation in Canada.

This simple failure to understand the basis of the Canadian system will cost us as much as $25 millions a year in lost energy, or several billion dollars over the life of the dams.

For two years the government has tried desperately to justify the treaty. They have lied, exaggerated, misled and conceived arguments that border on fantasy. Their case remains unconvincing.

The present treaty assigns all the risks and obligations to Canada and most of the benefits to the U.S. An outsider reading the terms of the treaty could be excused for assuming they had been imposed on a conquered country which had surrendered unconditionally after a war (TNS).

FEAR, NOT APATHY

into so-called Spanish Town, the Puerto Rican ghetto.

Your overriding reaction, reinforced later on a Saturday afternoon visit, is simply that there's too much humanity here. It's only 10 o'clock, but already the air is filled with shouts and imprecations that you might hear outside a rundown Toronto beverage room at closing time.

"Then years ago Harlem was a tourist attraction," your driver comments. "But who wants to come here now—I mean to get out of the cab and walk around?"

At the corner of 7th ave. and 125th st., just a few doors down from Sugar Ray's, a Negro is on a stand talking to a crowd of about 40 other Negroes.

"That's a Black Muslim meeting," the driver says. "This is where the trouble starts."

Two detectives in the upstairs squadroom of the 32nd Precinct station house on 135th st. are surprised to see you until they hear you came to the door by cab and that it's waiting outside.

Asked about public apathy, they say that in Harlem it's not so much apathy as fear. People won't talk because they figure they'll get their names in the papers. They're frightened because if someone finds out they've talked, then some hood's going to get them through their kids."

They complain that "liberal" legislators are making their jobs even tougher.

"We've got to knock on a door, nice and polite, and announce ourselves from outside even though we know there's narcotics or stolen goods inside. By the time the door's opened, the stuff has gone.

"We've got 26,000 people on the force and we could police this city with that number if we were given a freer hand. Right now, the criminal's rights seem to me to be protected more than the decent citizen's."

SIX KILLED

Six New York policemen were killed last year. Two have been killed so far this year. In 1962 there were four deaths; in 1961, three.

Yet with millions streaming into New York this summer for the World's Fair, together with the prospect of growing militancy in the civil rights field, the city's police have been told that they must not be placed in the false position of "aggressors."

There are 1,000,000 Negroes and 700,000 Puerto Ricans in New York. The Police Department refuses to segregate its employes statistically into racial categories, but it was learned there are 1,500 Negroes and 600 officers of Spanish origin on the force.

At police headquarters on Centre st. in downtown Manhattan, there is a show of optimism at the way the battle is going. A captain notes that crime by juvenile gangs is a minor factor, that the rumbles of the 50s are a thing of the past.

But last year, presumably on an individual basis, 13,025 people were beaten up in New York City, 6,823 were robbed and 549 were killed. Eight hundred and twenty-three women were raped.

And still there's apathy. The most astonishing thing a visitor finds is that New Yorkers, scared or not, have accepted this situation as normal —or at least something you learn to live with.

When day is done it's simple: you stay out of the jungle (and the beatings, stabbings and murders aren't all confined to Harlem—every precinct in the city has its share).

Last week Mayor Robert Wagner recalled the March 13 slaying of a Queens barmaid during which a score of New Yorkers reportedly had heard her cries for help in the night — and did nothing.

He also recalled last week's sexual assault on a teen age switchboard operator in the Bronx in which 20 New Yorkers heard her shrieks—and did nothing.

He told his citizens they can no longer refuse to get involved in the problems and dangers of the world they live in, and said the city ought to get more civilized.

"The fact is that our present problems and dangers require that every New Yorker consider himself his brother's keeper."

Similar pleas for public cooperation have been made recently by Police Commissioner Michael J. Murphy.

Scouting and Cubbing

By KEN BARTLETT

In Scouting it is a good thing to have a parents' night once in a while. A case in point is the successful Parents' Night the Red and Blue Packs of Cowansville held recently. The Fathers and Mothers were invited to Trinity Hall to witness a regular meeting for the first part of the evening. The usual flag break, grand howl inspection and steam-off game were held. First Stars were awarded to Cubs Bobby Kelly, Homer Hauver, Bruce Tinkler and George Fulford, and then the regular meeting ended.

During the second part of the evening several movies were shown-one depicting the Cowansville Pack at the first camp at Trouser Lake-the other showing the Scouts at a Camporee near Sutton. Refreshments were served by Cub Instructors, and Assistant District Commissioner Redmile led the group in a closing sing-song.

Boys of Cub age love to make things. This time of year it is a good plan to allow them to indulge a little in this constructive pastime. Bird houses is a fine starting point. The Red Pack of Cowansville have been collecting nails, hinges and wood etc. for their spring project-bird houses. All finished Products were judged by Scoutmaster Adams and Assistant Scoutmaster Sanstead. Extra points were given to the Cub who remembered that a bird house needs ventilation, and an opening to clean it out! Assistant Cubmaster Auger presented prizes to New Chum Robert Gagne in the eight to nine year group, and Cub Barry Page in the ten to eleven year category.

Second Lennoxville

The Second Lennoxville Pack has been very busy at star work. The Second Star is a big milestone in Cubbing and Philip Smith, Lyle Sample and Paul Gentry all are well on their way to this goal; they have passed their clove hitch and bowline knot tests. Another important test for Second Star work is Highway Safety. The following Cubs have passed this-Peter Diorio, Dean Rick, Bruce Yeandel, Philip Smith, Lyle Sample, Richard Blais and Paul Gentry. Two Cubs-Peter Heath and Scott Parker have showed Akela Pratt they know how to grow things.

The Pack recently welcomed a Cub to its ranks, and Terry Rodell now proudly wears the red and white colors of Second Lennoxville. Another Cub, who has every right to be proud, is Peter Diorio. He is now a full fledged Two Star member of the Pack. And Scott Parker has passed his First Star Knots, too! Good luck to all of you.

Rally Results

Although it is known that at the Cub Rally at Bulwer last Saturday the Tenth Sherbrooke, Second Lennoxville and the Seventh Sherbrooke were the leading Packs in competition, the individual event winners are not so well known. Here are those results: Inspection, First Sherbrooke, Tenth Sherbrooke, Second Lennoxville; Display, Fift' Sherbrooke and Second Lennoxville equal; Knots-God Save the Queen, Tenth Sherbrooke, First Sherbrooke, Bury; Law, Promise-Life of 'B.P.', Bury, Second Lennoxville, First and Third Sherbrooke equal; Second Star Knots, Bulwer, Fifth Sherbrooke Tenth Sherbrooke; Flags-O Canada-Highway Code, First Lennoxville, Tenth Sherbrooke, Seventh Sherbrooke; Hopping-Balancing, Second Lennoxville, Tenth Sherbrooke, Fifth Sherbrooke; Signalling-Birds-Trees, Bulwer, Seventh Sherbrooke, First Sherbrooke.

Bury News

The big news from Bury is the fact that a good part of the Pack has gone up to the Troop. At a Going-Up Ceremony six Cubs-Robert Grey, Bill Grey, Richard Lowe, Alfred Coates, Dana Harper and Michael Stoddard shook hands with Akela Morrill and the other Cubs, and then went into the Scout Horseshoe to be welcomed by Skipper Robert Harper and his Patrol Leaders. Sunday Sermon Subject for May 17th, 1964.

When the Bible describes human existence as a dream, is this meant as poetry, or should it be taken literally? This question will be gone into at the services in Christian Science churches this Sunday, in the weekly Lesson-Sermon entitled "Mortals and Immortals." The text will be taken from Ephesians: "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." Relevant selections from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will include: "Mortal existence is a dream; mortal existence has no real entity, but saith 'It is I.' Spirit is the Ego which never dreams, but understands all things; which never errs, and is ever conscious; which never believes, but knows; which is never born and never dies."

For and about Women

Cooper-Marion wedding

ST. ANNE DE BELLEVUE — The marriage of Denyse Ethel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger A. Marion of Baie d'Urfe, to Const. Alan Cooper, R.C.M.P., Toronto, son of Mrs. Donald Davis of Waterloo, and the late Donald Cooper, took place May 2, 1964 in St. George's Church, Ste. Anne de Bellevue. Rev. John Kerr officiated at the double-ring ceremony, during which the Holy Eucharist, was celebrated. Mr. Robert Fleming was the organist.

The bride's aunt, Mrs. H. I. Brereton of Knowlton, decorated the church with arrangements of white and red carnations and white gladioli. Satin bows, trimmed with white heather, marked the guest pews.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white double crepe and lace, the fitted bodice having a scalloped neckline and wrist-length sleeves of lace. The full skirt extended in an applique lace train, embroidered with sequins and pearls. Her elbow-length veil of scalloped tulle was held in place by a beaded cap headdress. She carried a cascade of sweetheart roses on a lace-covered prayer book.

Miss Susan Edmonds and Mrs. A. Kureshi, sister of the bride, as attendants, wore identical gowns of periwinkle blue organza, in a tiered sheath style, with overskirts. They wore white picture hats and carried colonial bouquets of yellow and white carnations and white heather.

Miss Linda Marion, the bride's sister, was flower girl, and wore a full-skirted dress of pastel blue lace, with white picture hat, and also carried a colonial bouquet.

The best man was Const. Enzo Santori, R.C.M.P. and the ushers were Const. Frank Zielski, Const. Alan Scott, Const. Claude Sweeny and Const. Lawrence Keyes, all of the R.C.M.P.

The mother of the bride chose a chestnut brown silk sheath with a lace jacket and beige accessories. She carried a clutch purse trimmed with Talisman roses.

The bridegroom's mother wore a blue silk print gown with matching hat, navy accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church hall, where candelabra, encircled by blue iris and gold pompons decorated the bride's table.

Later the couple left for Nassau, the bride wearing a raspberry red silk suit with silver pin, the gift of the bridegroom, and cafe ou lait accessories.

On their return the couple will reside in Toronto.

Guests included friends from Montreal, the Lakeshore area, Toronto and the Eastern Townships.

MUSIC ON RECORDS

By JOSEPH WEARING

BEETHOVEN — Symphony No. 7 in A; London Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux, cond. (RCA VICTROLA Mono VIC-1061) — Monteux gives what is undoubtedly one of the best performances of the 7th. The playing is crisp and the sound is very good for almost the whole record. As one of Victor's cheaper reissues, this is a wonderful bargain. Anyone who has not a recording of the 7th need look no further. The only criticism that I must make is that something goes wrong with the sound in the last few bars of the last movement. Monteux builds up to an exciting, wild climax but, just at that point, the orchestra seem suddenly to recede into the background. Did the sound engineers go back to their annoying habits of the old 78 days and turn down the volume when Monteux got the orchestra to a triple forte? Whatever the reason, it does take the top off a really thrilling climax.

BEETHOVEN — Symphony No. 5 in C Minor; SCHUBERT - Symphony No. 8 in B Minor ("Unfinished"); Columbia Symphony Orchestra and New York Philharmonic, Bruno Walter, cond. (COLUMBIA Stereo MS 6506) — Walter brings these old warhorses to life in a way that few other conductors could do. A bonus record is included of Walter rehearsing the first and second movements of the Beethoven. This is of fairly limited interest. He reveals no great personal insights into the work, nor does a Walker rehearsal provide the amusing remarks which make the Beecham rehearsal record such a gem. What does become evident is Walter's particular attention to details of rhythm and dynamics. And in the performances themselves this gives a freshness to these works that one has heard so often. I could recommend the record enthusiastically were it not for a serious amount of surface noise on the Beethoven and a generally thin sound throughout.

BEETHOVEN — Piano Concerto No. 3 in C Minor; Gary Graffman, pianist; Chicago Symphony, Orchestra, Walter Hendl, cond. (RCA VICTROLA Mono VIC-1059) — Another bargain reissue provides some very spirited playing, particularly in the last movement, by Graffman. Except for the opening bars of the second movement, his rhythm is impeccable. At times the orchestra is somewhat muddy, though not seriously so. This is a fine recording.

Constitution Day, which is a Norwegian national holiday, will have its sesquicentennial on May 17th and will be celebrated by the release of a silver commemorative coin, the first crown-sized coin to be issued by Norway since 1872.

There was a silver commemorative issued in 1914 on the centennial of the signing of the Constitution but it was smaller than the present coin and had a nominal value of 2 kroner. The 1964 commemorative will have a nominal value of 10 kroner, or approximately $1.50 Canadian.

This coin will not have the king's portrait on the obverse but will have the coat of arms of Norway, with a lion rampant bearing a battleaxe in its forepaws.

The reverse of the coin will depict the 'Edsvollsbyningen', the building where the Norwegian constitution was signed in 1814.

Earlier this year a new denomination was added to the regular coinage when a 5 kroner copper coin was issued. Unlike the smaller denominations which depict animals and birds, the 5 kroner had the coat of arms on the reverse, but the profile portrait of King Olav V facing left on the obverse.

As more and more countries replace silver with nickel in their regular coinage issues, there are correspondingly more silver commemoratives being issued. In 1963 Austria issued two crown-sized silver coins, each with a value of 50 schillings, one to commemorate the 600th anniversary of the union of the Tyrol with Austria and the other for the Winter Olympics at Innsbruck.

In mid-January the Greek government released a silver crown, dated 1963, to commemorate the centennial of the ruling house and with the portraits in medallions of each of the five kings who have reigned during the past hundred years, with the dates of the reign in each medallion.

The reverse of the coin has a map of Greece with the value, 30 drachmai.

This coin was released shortly before the death of King Paul and there has been considerable demand for the coin as it was the last issue of his reign.

Coins bearing the effigy of King Constantine II are expected later in the year.

The choice-human sanity or a rat-like existence; The answer — semantics

LANGUAGE IN THOUGHT AND ACTION, by S. I. Hayakawa, Longmans Canada Limited, 350 pages, $6.50

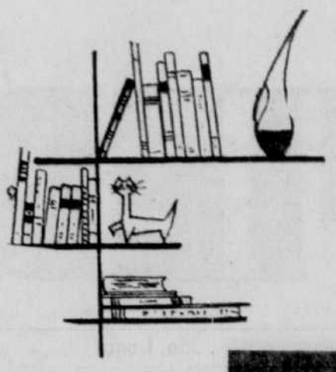

(Man — a white rat in a linguistic cage.)

In research a rat becomes insane because it cannot solve the frustrating problems presented to it, but, this is not the rat's fault because the problems are beyond the rat . . . made up by a researcher. Man is in a different position. Though like the rat he is being frustrated by apparently insolube problems, racial integration, nuclear arms, etc. to almost the same degree - insanity, these are within man's scope. They are man problems. To not be able to come to terms with them is surely, then, to be less than human. Mr. Hayakawa shows us that one of the ways to come to terms is to have a deeper understanding and command of communication.

How necessary is this? Consider the problem, the unbearable dosage of language of mass communication aimed daily at the violable human being by masive industries of radio, TV, pulp magazines, and agencies, political platforms, lectures . . . and consider, too, the variation of language, from Finnegan's Wake, Naked Lunch, E. E. Cummings' poems, to the cold language of science, law, and hot propaganda, comic books, advertising blurs, jingles, and so on. We swim amid a barrage of words. Our concept of reality is moulded, made up, and held, by word identities inside and outside ourselves. In this way Mr. Hayakawa points out, the control of language may well be the difference between sanity or a rat-like Orwellian world for the individual, for the nation. With electronics we can word ourselves into a schizophrenia or worse, a psychopathic existence. To understand language is to avoid this pit. And Mr. Hayakawa's book does an admirable job.

The subject and its importance might suggest that the book is dry, pedagogical or even hysterical. It is not. It is very readable as shown by such wide appeal that it was one of the most popular of the Book of the Month Club Selections and the fact that it is a reprint. Also, Mr. Hayakawa's reputation for perception, humour and sensibility is well known and respected and all of them are found amply in his book.

As readers of this column will be aware from my frequent mention of it, the Readers' Club of Canada is one organization which I think merits unlimited support from Canadian readers. While I have long applauded the Club's efforts to bring more Canadian books, more cheaply, to more Canadian readers, this week I applaud it for its attempt — by example and comment — to raise the moral tone of Canadian books.

Since Publisher Peter Martin's own words on the subject are probably more to the point than mine might be, I have taken the liberty of quoting his comments on FROM A ROADSIDE WINDOW by Ethel Chapman reviewed elsewhere on this page) which is the latest book published by his firm.

"It isn't often today that you run across an entertaining and well-written book which is also a "good" book . . . that is a book that pays more attention to good than to evil. In her book Ethel Chapman reminds us of the qualities of Canadian life which were alive yesterday in the Canadi: countryside and which survive today on the farms, in the cities, and in the hearts and lives of the good people she writes about. She brings vividly alive the qualities of kindness, charity, gaiety and self-reliance in the Canadian people. She talks about careers of service — about librarians, teachers, social workers, and ordinary men and women alert to the needs of others. There's no u: pretending that Miss Chapman is writing in the mainstream; she isn't. Today's writers are concerned with the dissolution of values, the destruction of the human soul, and the threat of armageddon. By contrast, Ethel Chapman is an optimist, a believer, almost in the perfectability of the human spirit and in the attainability of a just and equitable society. She sees a continuity between yesterday and today which makes the patterns of ideal behaviour of yesterday relevant in the world of today."

CANADIAN AUTHOR VIEWS WORK — Ethel Chapman, author of FROM A ROADSIDE WINDOW, examines a copy of her recently published volume of essays, stories and impressions.

Impressions profound and compassionate

FROM A ROADSIDE WINDOW by Ethel Chapman, T. H. Best Printing Co., 118 pages.

"We would warn readers not to look for anything profound in these impressions." So cautious Ethel Chapman in the preface of her "From a Roadside Window," a volume of eightly-one short essays, stories, and impressions. I must dispute this statement. I found it a book full of profound and compassionate wisdom. In "Don't Touch" does it not show wisdom as well as determination to be able to retain the 'don't touch' policy when all one's being cries out to interfere? In "Child Psychology" did the father not show wisdom when he secretly watched over his son while giving him freedom to learn to stand on his own feet?

Are these not profound statements? "This drive to remake people into what they don't want to be or never could be, just to satisfy ourselves, seems a prety ornery sort of selfishness."—"A good deal of money is spent on toys for children: perhaps not so much imagination goes into providing experiences of such enjoyment that they are never lost, either in our memories or in the growth of our souls."—"So we discourage and possibly destroy our potential crusaders and inventors and thinkers and leaders because we don't want our childen to be 'different'."

With From a Roadside Window as a guide, it is interesting to conjecture about Miss Chapman's personality. One can imagine that she comes from a close-knit family where the emphasis is on working together and sharing. A bit of nostalgia and a certain questioning of current hustle and bustle creeps into her writing.

She shows herself a lady of few prejudices, with a rare appreciation of nature. But above all her deep-seated concern and compassion for people shines through all her writing and the chief value of the book is that some of this must rub off on the reader.

DARBY BY BELLA BELLA

Pioneer doctor devoted life to aid indians

DARBY OF BELLA BELLA, by Hugh W. McKervill. The Ryerson Press, 159 pages, price $4.95.

Hugh W. McKervill has recorded the life and work of a remarkable man, who devoted 45 years to the service of others, on the west coast of British Columbia.

McKervill worked for four years among the Indians at Bella Bella where Dr. Darby operated his medical mission, and had opportunity of observing, at first hand, this great pioneer Doctor at work.

The author has rendered a great and useful service in giving us the story of Dr. Darby who was called to be teacher and healer, pastor and preacher, counsellor and judge, father and friend to the scattered population of many miles of rugged and dangerous coastline.

Dr. Darby is described as a man who represented the point at which the coast's spiritual, medical, and social needs intersected. This biographical account has all the marks of struggle, suspense, pathos, and accomplishment. It should appeal to young and adventurous people.

This book contains numerous stories of Darby's experiences. Being a medical doctor brought him close to many human crises, birth, accidents, and death. Frantic calls from distant places, often across the angry seas, were thrilling but sometimes dangerous. There were the long periods of separation from wife and family, because of the children's schooling, which could not be obtained at Bella Bella, where the doctor operated his hospital. Operations performed under a variety of makeshift conditions which miraculously saved the patients' lives.

On a late summer day in 1943 news came that his son Jim had been lost over the English Channel while on active duty. The surgeon applying skill and selfless concern in order to preserve the life of others, was powerless to help his own son.

However despite the struggles and frustrations this is an achievement story. It took over forty years of dedication and patience but in the end he left behind him the R. W. Large Memorial Hospital, sponsored by the United Church of Canada, equipped and staffed to take care of the needs of the Bella Bella natives and the environs. Many honors came his way, but perhaps the one most appreciated was bestowed upon him by Chief Moody Humchitt of the Indians, when it was decreed that henceforth he would be known as WO-YA-LA. "The Highest."

Let us have more books like Darby of Bella Bella!

Four-lettered sex is featured by the chapterful, plus venom

THE GOD HUNTERS, by William Kelley, Musson Book Company, 541 Pages, $6.25.

One is at a complete loss to imagine why a man would write such a book as "THE GOD HUNTERS" and one finds it equally incomprehensible that a reliable publishing house would assume the responsibility of placing such a novel at the disposal of the public. It is a sad commentary on our intellectual and moral standards that both parties concerned would be so convinced that the book would sell. I feel very strongly that an author, more than others, has a serious obligation to the public. His is an influence that can affect so many for good or for evil. I would not want to even remotely share with William Kelley the awesome responsibility of this novel.

He shows himself to be a writer of some depth and perception, hence it is doubly tragic that he should turn out this book of profound and pointless obscenity. His profanity is shocking. One almost winces physically from the written word. If, in this aimless, abusive and degenerate book Mr. Kelley has achieved any point, it has eluded me.

The complete story occurs within three weeks. It is the rather vague tale of two brothers, identical twins, who have both been, understandably enough, expelled from religious orders. They were, for reasons of the greatest obscurity, attempting to enter the priesthood.

It is one of those sibling rivalry, love-hate affairs, all mixed up with incredible profanity and vulgarity. It is an actual fact that one turns away in shock and sorrow from the pages.

There is sex by the chapterful as lurid and four-lettered as ever seen in print. The brother who is especially determined to enter the priesthood as a missionary is seduced by his step-sister, a young woman who makes Lady Chatterly seem indeed like a spoilsport.

Since the author is a Kelley, one might assume that he is a Roman Catholic. Or perhaps he is not a Roman Catholic and nourishes a particular venom toward that religion. I say particular because the book is equally offensive to all Christians. If any clear cut issue emerged from all this mockery and blasphemy there might be some excuse for the novel. As it is one can only turn in abhorrence from this work of an apparently greatly disturbed writer.

Julia's dangerous doings and spy catching cousins

THE DANGEROUS ISLANDS by Ann Bridge, 255 pgs, Chatto & Windus, London, $4.25.

Ann Bridge, the author of 16 previous books, writes a story fraught with drama, adventure and intrigue, well seasoned with romance and humour, and does it most ably. She has the art of bringing her characters into clear focus, whether they are leading ones or only very minor; her story is spiced with fascinating tid-bits of folk-lore, legend, superstition, and her backgrounds are very vivid.

THE DANGEROUS ISLANDS — all of them off the coasts of the British Isles — involves the daring-does of Julia Probyn who has appeared in previous stories.

Spy-catching Julia, her cousin Colin Munro, and his sister and brother-in-law become involved in some very mysterious business. Colonel Jamieson arrives to investigate.

A certain amount of animosity colours Julia's first feelings about the handsome, fortyish colonel who is inclined to give orders and to keep her out of his confidence. On the other hand, Julia's beauty attracts Jamieson while her — actually only superficial — flipperty-gibbitt air at first confuses him. As they face danger together, Jamieson finds her ingenuous manner and her linguistic ability very valuable assets in his undercove work. They fall in love, a love that too often seems ill-fated.

There is a great deal of drama in this modern spy story, there are many chuckles, a few tears and much that is heart-warming.

Collecting in the Townships

The collecting of airmail stamps has been one the most fascinating and popular fields, of philately for many years. The field has become specialized and now that stamps featuring space capsules have become common the whole area has once again come to the forefront of stamp-collecting.

The Crown Agents Bulletin for the month of May contains the following article on Airmail stamps:

"In order to deal with the subject of Air stamps adequately, developments from the earliest days throughout the world must first be briefly touched upon. The sending of messages by air is not by any means a modern innovation; indeed, references go back two thousand years, at which time we learn that Egypt and other nations were familiar with the use of carrier pigeons for the purpose of carrying urgent messages. According to the elder Pliny, Decius Brutus sent messages in this manner when the Roman Empire was at the height of its power. Sultan Noureddin Manmood, who died in 1174, established in Baghdad a pigeon post which was so successful that it operated until the city fell to the Mongols in 1258. There were pigeon posts during the Dutch War in the sixteenth century, besieged Haarlem using them in 1573 and Leyden in 1574.

In more modern times, Ceylon was the scene of a pigeon post service in 1850 when an "express" service was instituted on the 24th of September by the "Ceylon Observer" newspaper. The birds flew between Galle and Colombo, a distance of 72 miles. They carried selected commercial and political news items which had been extracted from London papers and printed on special flimsies.

Far better known to philatelists is the Pigeongram service operated in New Zealand in 1898. The Great Barrier Pigeongram Service had been established the previous year to forward flimsies carried by pigeons from the islands to Suckland, 6-d and 1/ stamps were used.

A similiar service was opened for the benefit of the miners working on Marotiri Island, a special stamp being used there. France introduced another type of air mail in the sixty or more balloons which, between them, carried 11,000 kilos of mail as well as some passengers and a number of pigeons out of Paris during the siege of 1870-1871. The birds were to be used for the pigeon post which was the only successful method of getting news into the city from unoccupied France.

Britain's first air mail service was of a different type. It dates back to 1558, to the siege of Calais. English troops, trying to relieve the city, were close to the walls, but closer were the enemy troops and it was impossible to force a way through. The English commander thought up a way of communicating with the beleagured garrison, but before doing so, had to ask permission of the Privy Council.

Their minutes, dated 7th January, 1558 read: "A letter to be sent to the Earl Warden signifying unto him that the device of shooting letters with crossbows into Calais is well liked, and because they might light the tops of houses or other places where they may come by, he is willed to cause divers doubles of the same letters to be made up and shot". We will conclude this interesting article next week.

The collecting of Canadian First Day Covers by more and more collectors has resulted in increased prices for many of them. Some are, in fact, very difficult to find.

The addition of First Flight Covers is a challenge and the file has many such covers. You must remember that such covers come in pairs for the most part, broken pairs are comparatively cheap. There are many collectors who deplore the use of peelable labels and the resulting envelope with no address.

This argument has much to offer but the cold realism of the resale values must be taken into consideration. Collectors do not wish to purchase covers with someone else's name on them, and so offer a much lower price. The earlier cannot be found with no address for the most part, although many were addressed with pencil and so could be erased.

The First Day Covers of the United States are not as scarce as ours and are colourful. Commercial covers from overseas countries are now one of the hotter items at stamp shows. Covers with stamps about five or ten cents sell for twenty-five to fifty cents each. If you have put off collecting covers you would do well to start now.

We were unable to attend the last meetings of the Eastern Townships and St. Francis stamp clubs but will be at the coming meetings.

The plans for the annual picnic are well underway at the St. Francis Club.

It is planned to have an auction during the afternoon. Collectors are urged to send along their material for the auction in the immediate future so as to ensure the listing in the auction catalogue which will be mailed to collectors throughout Canada. Details will be found here in the next week or so.

St Lambert's new track brings comments

ST. LAMBERT, Que. (CP)—Two years ago, St. Lambert's track and field promoters began wrestling with a perplexing problem.

It arose after the city and Royal Canadian Legion branch 68 decided to build a track and field park incorporating every modern technique.

The question was whether to build an asphalt track, knowing that any world records set on it wouldn't be recognized, or to put down a traditional cinder track that would be harder to maintain but would qualify for international recognition.

The promoters went to various persons for advice, including Lt.-Col. Jack Davies, an engineer and also Canada's representative on the International Amateur Athletic Federation, governing body of world track and field.

Told that the group had been approached about using a commercial asphalt mixture for the running track, Davies said:

"I'm warning you now; world or national records set on any thing but a conventional cinder track won't be recognized by the world governing body."

"This bit of advice really shook us," says Ed Ruthven, a Legion member of the track committee. "We spent a lot of days and nights discussing this. There was a great deal of controversy and some frayed tempers."

Presently, the committee decided to install the commercial mixture. The asphalt track is much like an ordinary road surface but more resilient. Athletes wear the short pin spikes used on boards at indoor meets rather than the customary ½-inch outdoor spikes.

Deciding on the asphalt track was "a decision not taken lightly," Ruthven says.

When Davies heard about it he was strongly critical. "This is foolish. It's silly. I can't understand what they're doing."

He said the IAAF stand won't change in the forseeable future because all European track powers "are 100 per cent against it."

About the same time the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada released the result of a poll of its provincial branches showing the majority in favor of the IAAF refusal to recognize records set outdoors on any but cinder tracks.

The Quebec Track and Field Association, an AAU member, backed St. Lambert, announcing it would recognize any records set on the asphalt track. But this was feeble support.

Before the controversy blew up, St. Lambert had been awarded the 1964 Canadian Olympic trials. There was some fear that the fuss might result in a change of venue.

However, N. A. Beach of Toronto, national AAU chairman, assured St. Lambert that it would get the trials. They'll be held Aug. 7-8, the official opening of the $100,000 park.

James K. Stewart, the alderman representing the city on the track building committee, wondered what all the controversy was about anyway. He said only three world outdoor records have been set in Canada in 20 years, all by Vancouver sprinter Harry Jerome.

"There is a trend toward non-traditional type tracks," he said. "We are constructing this track as a municipal facility to help train youngsters in track and field."

Stewart noted that there are about 160 non-traditional tracks in the United States, 93 of which are made of the same material as St. Lambert's.

EASY TO MAINTAIN

Construction of St. Lambert's Seaway Park Track and Field Centre is due to be completed in mid-June. The Legion is paying $35,000 of the cost. There will be seating for 3,800 with room for additional seats. Track maintenance cost will be nil as compared with the $1,000 to $2,000 needed to keep a cinder track in shape each year.

Hugh McMillan, a Toronto architect and former track athlete recommended by Davies as a consultant, examined the proposed site—land reclaimed from the St. Lawrence River — and approved it.

Soil tests were carried out on the rock and rubble fill and, Stewart said, they showed a serious drainage problem, one that could be solved most easily with an asphalt-type surface. It would be waterproof and usable eight months of the year.

"But there was more to it than just that," says Ian Hume, chairman of the St. Lambert Community Sports Association. "Our idea was to give athletes the best possible track on which to run. There was no feeling that we were going to deprive athletes of any records."

"There's a safety angle, too," says Stewart. "Youngsters using rubber-soled shoes have a tendency to slip and fall on a cinder track but they will have surer footing on asphalt.

"Also athletes using spikes, while they don't slip on cinder, will have surer and more uniform footing on this surface."

The winningest pitcher plays it hot but not as hot as Wally Bunker

When the winningest pitcher in Baltimore's 10-year American League tenure tosses a shutout before the home fans, collects two hits in three trips to the plate and still gets upstaged by a veteran of four major league appearances, he has to be bucking a hot attraction.

Milt Pappas found out what it's like to follow fuzzy-cheeked Wally Bunker's act Friday night when the two right handers pitched the Orioles to a double-header sweep over Los Angeles Angels.

Pappas blanked them on eight hits and plunked a single and run - scoring double in Baltimore's 12-0 nightcap victory. But he played second banana to Bunker's 6-1 four-hit masterpiece—third straight complete game victory for the 19-year-old bonus bird—in the opener.

The second-game decision was Pappas' 83rd as an Oriole and evened his 1964 record at 2-2. He was the same age as Bunker is now when he won his first game.

Bunker, a $70,000 bonus sensation less than a year removed from high school, has allowed two earned runs and 14 hits in 27 innings.

Pappas' shutout was one of four in AL activity. John Buzhardt of Chicago White Sox blanked Washington Senators 2-0 on three hits; Camilo Pascual of Minnesota Twins edged Bill Monbouquette of Boston Red Sox 1-0 on a six-hitter and Diego Segui of Kansas City Athletics scattered nine hits and tamed New York Yankees 11-0.

Cleveland Indians ripped Detroit Tigers 10-6 in the only game not marked by fine pitching.

Home runs by Luis Aparicio and John Orsino and Bob Johnson's two-run triple backed Bunker in the Orioles - Angels opener. Norm Siebern chipped in with three hits.

Pappas struggled for his shutout, stranding 10 LA base runners, but the outcome was decided when the Orioles scored six unearned runs in the fourth. Jackie Brandt hit a three-run homer in the eighth.

Buzhardt retired the last 18 batters he faced and won his third of five decisions. He struck out nine and walked one. The White Sox scored a tainted run in the third inning and Dave Nicholson singled home the other in the sixth.

Bill Crothers named Canada's top athlete

TORONTO (CP)—Bill Crothers of Toronto, a world-ranking half-miler and considered an almost certain medal winner in the summer Olympics at Tokyo next October, was named winner, Friday of the Lou Marsh Memorial Trophy as the outstanding athlete of 1963 in Canada.

The trophy, which goes annually to the Canadian athlete, amateur or professional, for outstanding performances, is awarded in memory of the late Lou Marsh, former sports editor of the Toronto Star.

The 23-year-old Crothers was one of half - a - dozen athletes who received serious consideration from the five-man board of judges.

In 1963 he won in Canada, the United States, England, Ireland, Sweden and Norway at distances of 660 yards to one mile. He won Canadian, U.S. and British indoor championships. He took the 880-yard U.S. title in 1:47.1, the second fastest in the world last year.

Marvelous Marv, the ball dropper haunts painstakingly inept Pirates

Whatever happened to Marvellous Marv Throneberry?

The first baseman, who dropped into undeserved obscurity after dropping everything else in sight in the course of helping New York Mets to a 10th-place finish in their first National League season, would have felt at home in Los Angeles Friday night.

No, the Mets weren't in town. They've suddenly become the scourge of the first division, winning six of their last nine games and bearing an uncanny resemblance to a real ball club.

The mantle of Throneberry and his 1962 associates seems to have fallen, temporarily at least, on Pittsburgh Pirates, whose painstaking display of fielding ineptitude in the fourth inning gave Los Angeles Dodgers a 6-0 victory.

The Mets, meanwhile, ran their current winning streak to three as they downed San Francisco 4-2, knocking the Giants out of first place in favor of Philadelphia Phillies, who whipped Houston Colts 4-0. Cincinnati Reds bombed Chicago Cubs 10-5 and St. Louis Cardinals outslugged Milwaukee Braves 10-6 in the other games played.

The Dodgers had taken a legitimate 1-0 lead over the Pirates on Frank Howard's run-scoring single in the fourth when things suddenly began to go haywire.

On the next play, Willie Stargell drop-kicked John Roseboro's single while attempting to make a pickup, sending Howard to third.

Tim Horton gets $6,500 in bonuses

MONTREAL (CP)—Defenceman Tim Horton of Toronto Maple Leafs made more money in bonuses for his National Hockey League play this season than the majority of Canadians earn in a year.

The all-star rearguard picked up $6,500 cash, $1,500 more in extra loot acquired from NHL bonuses than any other player, figures compiled by the NHL show.

His extra spending money is made up of $3,500 in playoff awards, $2,000 for being named to the first all-star team in each half of the season and in the final competition, $500 for Leafs' third-place finish and $500 for coming second in the James Norris Memorial trophy voting for the League's best defenceman.

The NHL said it gave out a total of $220,500 in cash awards this year and gave this breakdown: $135,000 to teams in the Stanley Cup playoffs; $54,000 to the first four teams in the final standings; $18,500 to players named to the all-star teams; $13,000 to individual trophy-winners and runners-up.

The awards to teams are made on the basis of an 18-man team.

Leafs, who won the Stanley Cup, picked up a total of $76,250 in various awards. Detroit Red Wings got $51,250, Montreal Canadiens $48,750, Chicago Black Hawks $44,000 and New York Rangers $250— the amount Camile Henry received for being placed on the second-all-star team for the second half of the season.

Sam Pollock new GM, "The Rocket" moves up

NAMED GENERAL MANAGER OF CANADIENS — Sam Pollock, shown above, was named general manager of the Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League yesterday. He succeeds Frank J. Selke, Sr.

(CP Wirephoto)

MONTREAL (CP)—Sam Pollock became general manager of Montreal Canadiens Friday, replacing Frank L. Selke in a series of front-office moves announced by the National Hockey League club.

At 38, Pollock, farm system director since 1955, becomes the youngest club manager in the NHL.

Selke, 71, announced his retirement to a crowded press conference after 18 years as Canadiens' manager.

Another move brought Maurice (Rocket) Richard, 42, one of the all-time great players during 18 seasons with Canadiens, into the front office as assistant to the president. He is to have special responsibility for public relations and the development of new players.

Senator Hartland Molson, Canadiens' owner, said both he and Selke are stepping out of the team administration in favor of younger men, but they will remain active in the parent Canadian Arena Company.

Molson is board chairman and Selke vice - chairman of the Arena Company.

COUSIN APPOINTED

David Molson, 35, a cousin of the senator, was appointed president of the Arena Company and the hockey club.

Frank Selke jr., 34, was named vice - president of the Arena Company for sales and publicity.

Pollock began running Canadiens' farm system after seven seasons as coach of Montreal Junior Canadiens.

The sweeping changes ended a week of speculation about front-office movements following Ken Reardon's resignation as vice-president and assistant general manager of the club.

The duties performed by Reardon are expected to be done partly by Pollock and partly by Richard, club sources said, as a result of a rearrangement of jobs in the administration.

RICHARD DELIGHTED

Richard, expressing delight to be back with the club, said he plans to meet David Molson, the new club president, shortly to "work out" his role in player development.

He declined comment on what lineups changes may be in store for next season, saying the club that finished first this season "is still in a rebuilding stage."

Asked who will replace him as farm director, he said: "I haven't decided yet."

Amid all the shuffling in the administrative ranks, it was announced that Toe Blake will carry on as coach.

"This makes me very happy," Senator Molson said.

"I'm looking forward to handling the team again," Blake said. It will be his 10th season as coach.

During Selke's 18 seasons as manager, Canadiens won the Stanley Cup six times and the NHL title eight times.

Senator Molson said Selke "has had probably the most successful individual career in the history of hockey."

Selke came to Canadiens in July 1946 after several years in the Toronto Maple Leafs administration.

WON CUP IN 1953

Under him, they won the Stanley Cup in 1953 and a record five-year span from 1956 to 1960 inclusive. They finished first in 1957, 1956, 1958 to 1962 inclusive and again this year.

Reminiscing during a buffet luncheon that followed the press conference, he told reporters the 1960 Canadiens were the most powerful team he had. They finished first by 13 points and breezed through the playoffs with eight consecutive wins.

However, no one championship team had given him more satisfaction than another.

"The most satisfying thing was simply to see Canadiens become recognized as the greatest hockey team in the world, . . ."

He said Canadiens are building another powerful team "that should be ready in about a year."

Asked who was the greatest player he ever managed, Selke said "Rocket Richard, there's absolutely no question about it.

"Jean Beliveau is great also, the finest, most polished centreman in the game, and an exceptional gentleman to boot."

Hill Rise is favored by track handicapper for Preakness with Northern Dancer as second choice

BALTIMORE (AP) — The temperature dipped to 45 degrees at Pimlico Friday and there was joy in a barn where Kentucky Derby winner Northern Dancer awaits Saturday's 88th running of the Preakness—the race that could give him two legs on the coveted triple crown.

"This is his kind of weather," said trainer Horatio Luro shortly before giving E. P. Taylor's Canadian-bred ace a three-eighths of a mile blow-out.

The dazzling Dancer, who again will be ridden by Bill Hartack, was full of vim as he pranced onto the track and then reeled off the three furlongs in 35 4-5. He galloped out the half-mile in 48 and 3-5.

That was the colt's final prep for Saturday's 1 and 3-16-mile race against five other 3-year-old thoroughbreds.

The weatherman said the thermometer would drop again Friday night before climbing into the 70s for the big event scheduled to start at 5:45 p.m. EDT.

Although skies were overcast Friday, there was no rain in sight. That set up a fast track for the test of speed and stamina before a capacity crowd of some 30,000 and a national television audience. It will be covered on the CBC-TV network 5.30 to 6 p.m. EDT.

HILL RISE ALSO OUT

Hill Rise, 7-5 choice to square matters with Northern Dancer after being beaten by a neck in the Derby, also was on the track for his final blow-out. The big California comet from El Peco Ranch poured a leisurely first quarter in 26 3-5 and went three-eighths in 40 flat.

"We are ready," said his trainer, Bill Finnegan. Jockey Willie Shoemaker, who switched from Northern Dancer to Hill Rise prior to the Derby, is due in Baltimore early Saturday morning from California.

Roman Brother, smallest horse in the field, and carrying the hopes of Harbor View Farm, completed his training with a half-mile blow-out of 48 4-5. He worked the first quarter in 24 2-5 and the three-eighths in 36 3-5.

The other three—Quadrangle, from Rokeby Stable; Rex Ellsworth's The Scoundrel and Harriet N. Ball's Big Pete—each galloped once around the mile track.

With six starters the race will have a value of $176,700 with $124,200 going to the winner.

PEEKABOO — Rookie Jerry Grant of Kent, Wash., may appear to be wearing a helmet a few sizes too large but actually the headgear just has an unusually long visor that covers over half of Grant's face. He was about to take his No. 45, Bardahl Special, for a few practice laps around the Indianapolis Motor Speedway in preparation for today's time trials.

Clash in first exhibition game, Als present several new faces in lineup, game slated for 2 p.m.

Sherbrooke Alouettes will tangle with Acton Vale Beavers at the Park Avenue Stadium Sunday afternoon in an exhibition tilt commencing at 2 p.m. The first game between the teams, which was scheduled for last Sunday in Acton Vale, was rained out.

Manager Len Cote figures Coach Claude St. Vincent will use as many players as possible Sunday to see what they can do under fire. The Als have six hurlers and it looks as though Real Rousseau will get the starting chore with Carlos Thorn coming in next.

Other members of the hurling staff are Andy Bessette, Marcel Caron, Claude Prud'Homme and Wayne Nugent. Bessette is the only leftover from last year's staff. Prud'Homme finished out the season with the Granby Knights while the others are newcomers.

In the outfield the Als will have Jacques Monette, Gilles Robichaud and Normie Dussault with Jean-Guy Dion as the fourth member of the pasture men. All four are capable of patrolling the outfield and can deliver at the plate with timely hits.

Richard Sawyer has been holding down first base with Guy Desrochers and Maurice Hurtibise teaming up at second. Coach Claude St. Vincent will be at short while on the hot-corner it will be Andy Pratte. Pratte and St. Vincent are the only men from last season while the others are all new men.

Behind the plate will be Fern Dube, who is no newcomer to local fans. Dube has been in the shadow of Lilas Poole for the past few years and saw only limited service but the experience he acquired should help him in his regular spot.

Manager Cote stated the Als will play in Acton Vale Tuesday evening replacing the rained-out tilt from last Sunday. Only General admission will be sold Sunday and the price will be a $1.00. The children will be admitted for the sum of .25 cents for Sunday's game. The regular opening will be held next Sunday when the Als will clash with the Canadiens of Coaticook in a Sunday double fixture.

Stirling Moss will be back at Mosport for "Player's 200" in new role of racing team manager

MONTREAL — Motor racing's best-known personality will be back at Mosport on Saturday, June 6, in his new role as team manager. Stirling Moss, who drove a Lotus 19 to victory in the first "Player's 200", has entered a Porsche 904 in this year's event.

The driver has not yet been confirmed but it will likely be Hugh Dibley, a London airline pilot and successful Formula Junior racer in the U.K.

Moss switched to managing racing teams following his serious crash at Goodwood in 1962. Prior to the accident, he won most of the big races on the international circuit but no world championships.

Ironically, with a German car entered in next month's "Player's 200", racing experts feel it was Moss's reluctance to drive anything but British-made cars that cost him the world title.

Moss will fly to Canada on Tuesday, June 2, following the German Grand Prix and be on hand in Toronto for the festivities during race week. These will include a parade, fashion show and gala pre-race banquet and ball.

Remember when

Sir Thomas Lipton, one-time errand boy who became world-famous as a merchant and sportsman, was elected a member of the exclusive Royal Yacht Squadron 33 years ago today. Sir Thomas was many times unsuccessful challenger for the America's Cup and his election to the RYS, generally acclaimed, was in recognition of his efforts.
