Gratton O'Leary Speaker Rotary International Meet

Largest Gathering of Its Kind Held Under Auspices of Local Club

The international meeting of Rotary Clubs held at Huntingdon on Tuesday, September 29th, was one of the largest gatherings ever held here under the auspices of the club. The Club Dining Room would not hold all the guests and an overflow was taken into the Cocktail Lounge. Rotarians from many points in the States and Province of Quebec together with their Rotary Anns and guests were in attendance.

The guest speaker following the dinner was Mr. Gratton O'Leary, Editor of The Ottawa Journal and the title of his talk was "Standing Between Two Worlds". Rotarian Louis Levine, President of Huntingdon Rotary Club, was chairman and called upon Rotarian Gilbert MacMillan to introduce the speaker.

Mr. Gratton O'Leary thanked the gathering and said he was glad to be in Huntingdon and to be out of Mr. Bryan White's car after a ride from Ottawa in just over two hours. He explained that the needle on the speedometer never shifted from 70 miles per hour all the way and he felt quite relieved to step out of the car and be safe in Huntingdon. Further, he said, Mr. White would persist in filling and lighting his pipe and never slackening the speed. Mr. White is editor of The Ottawa Farm Journal.

Mr. O'Leary said that in coming to Huntingdon they had crossed and recrossed the border of Canada and the United States without the slightest difficulty and he could not help thinking that a difference that was to some other countries in the world. He said that at one time this border had been the scene of much fighting and that Canada had assisted both sides in the American revolution, but for all this the people of both countries were now firm friends and neighbors. But, he said, how many people remember these things today. As another illustration, he said that a canal had been built in Canada about 100 years ago for the purpose of defending Canada against the Americans. A large number of people could no longer remember what the canal was built for.

With this introduction he entered into his address on "Standing Between Two Worlds". He spoke of all the talk that following World War II there would be a Brave New World. There were people who said that following the war there would be a new world, where are those people today, they are in retreat because there is no news in the world. He reminded that Matthew Arnold, a poet, had spoken of Standing Between Two Worlds. Today, he said, a new world is struggling to be born and this makes men afraid. He could think of three things to avert tragedy.

We hear of people who tell of setting things in order for this new world. But can these people set the world in order before putting their own affairs in order. Some people can tell the things that are happening in other parts of the world, but they do not know what is going on in their own community.

Farmers, Textile Industry Affected by Conditions

Recent Talk Given Huntingdon Rotary Club By T. E. Chapman, Asst. Supt. B. of M.

The following is a condensed account of an address given by Mr. T. E. Chapman, Asst. Supt., Bank of Montreal, at a recent meeting of the Huntingdon Rotary Club. It gives some idea of the factors affecting the economy of farmers and the textile industry.

When the United States embargo on import of Canadian cattle was lifted in March 1953 cattle breeders in this district looked for a resumption of the previous lucrative export business to the United States. This did not transpire to the extent anticipated due to the disappearance of the premium on U.S. funds; the high price of milk cows which U.S. buyers would not meet, the large increase in American cattle herds and the fact that our holdings of milk cows had also increased. Apart from the premium and price factors we had more milk cows to sell to the United States and they in turn had increased their own holdings and did not therefore come into our market as eagerly as had been expected.

Although the export of dairy cattle has begun to pick up the trade in beef cattle remains poor and here again we have to consider that the U.S. cattle population at the end of 1952 was at an all-time high. Pork was also supplanted beef from time to time when the prices of the latter rose beyond the reach of the average buyer. Added to all the foregoing is the record wheat crop in the four major producing countries, i.e., the United States, Canada, Argentina and Australia. In 1953 wheat available for export or carryover totalled 1,284 million bushels, almost double the 1952 figure. With little or no storage space available, a large quantity will of necessity be piled on the ground. A good percentage of this will be damaged and fit only for feed so there will be a further incentive to in-

We talk of democracy, but what is democracy? Democracy needs more support and especially when it comes to voting in an election. In the last election only 62 persons out of 100 troubled to cast a vote. People were away on vacation and did not have enough interest to return to cast their vote. How long will we have democracy if this continues. Those people who fail to cast a vote are traitors to democracy and if they continue to show this indifference then democracy is doomed.

The tragedy is with the newspapers of today. The newspapers are afraid to discuss the issues for fear of offending the Liberals or the Conservatives. Many newspaper publishers and editors are more concerned with the tinkle of the cash register than discussing controversial issues which may give offense to the advertisers.

The candidates today prefer to talk over the radio from a script that has been prepared for them, than to face the people of the electorate from a platform at close quarters. They have lost the old art of holding meetings where questions may be asked and perhaps they may receive a little heckling. They prefer to leave it to the hucksters to do their advertising and the writing of their speeches to be given over the radio.

Education is said to be needed, but we have gained the wrong idea of education. We have gone into specialization. Business men of today say they want people who can do jobs, they want all know-how and know-why and no wisdom. Education is many things and we must have them if we are to fight off Communism and such. As to the standards of specialization there was no better example of this than that which came about in Nazi Germany. No one can say that this nation was not specialized, they were specialized in everything and where did it get them. If we do not return to real education and continue in this specialization, we shall soon be in the same state and God help us.

Before we can obtain real lasting peace, we must return to religion. There must be more love, more thought, more kindness, all are part of education. Education means knowing all these things and more and we cannot do without it. We cannot do without religion, there must be more time for religion in all our lives. Until we have it there can be no real peace in the world. While there is hate and covetousness there will be the need to be ready to defend.

The speaker received a great round of applause at the end of his address. He was thanked by Rotarian Erle Martin.

Following the luncheon the gathering adjourned to the Gai Lounge where a Floor Show was put on. This was a floor show and probably the violinist and the conjurer obtained the greatest applause, the violinist being recalled many times for further selections.

increase cattle holdings to some extent and the price of beef may decline still further.

The industrial worker who reads his daily paper and finds that the Government has arranged to pay the grain growing farmers $64, or $100, million dollars is apt to grumble that the farmer is being catered to without fully realizing that the only payment the Government will make for grain NOT IN STORAGE is a "token" one on the basis of three bushels per specified acre. The farmer has to wait for their money until their grain moves into storage and payment is therefore usually made nine to twelve months after the harvest.

The textile industry in Canada has been experiencing considerable difficulty over the past eighteen months or more due to the dumping on our market of foreign made goods at prices which cannot be met by Canadian producers at present operating costs. Considerable overproduction has taken place in the United States and the excess has been unloaded here to the detriment of our industry. Imports of rayon and synthetic fabrics from the United States in the first quarter of 1953 were 9,245,000 square yards, or four times the figure for the same period in 1950. Imports of cotton fabrics from the United States rose again this year as did imports of wool fabrics from the United Kingdom and our domestic textile mills will be fortunate this year if they are able to retain 50% of our own market. The remedy is in closer application of present import laws which our textile manufacturers say are adequate if properly interpreted and applied; this it is hoped the Government will see fit to do.

Students Give McGill $5,500 in Emergency

McGill students on October 1st, announced a $5,500 gift to the university in view of its "substantial deficit during the past session due to the loss of federal aid."

James A. Robb, president of the Students' Society, announced that the Students' Executive Council had voted to split profits amounting to about $11,000 from last year's operation of the McGill Book Store between the society's general funds and the university.

A resolution passed unanimously declared "every effort made to aid the university in the present emergency would directly benefit the students generally."

Town Council Pushing For Skating Rink to Be Built

Water Pressure, Tax Rates, Milk Reports, Among Matters Before Council

The regular meeting of the Huntingdon Town Council was held on Monday evening at the County Building with all members present except Mayor Leo Cappiello and with Pro-Mayor J. D. McGerrigle in the chair.

The minutes and a number of bills were passed as read.

Messrs. Soucy and McNair called on the council for a lowering of the rate of taxation on automatic machines. They asked that the rate be lowered from $15 to $10 per machine and for $5 for additional machines in the same premises. A letter was also read from Leach Textiles regarding two machines on their premises used exclusively for their employees. They objected to any charge being made whatever as no profit was made from drinks dispensed by the machines.

After a lengthy discussion it was decided to reduce the tax to $10 per machine regardless of how many were operated. It is presumed that this will also apply to those operated at Leach Textiles Ltd. The only exemption in the by-law is if a machine is in a private house for the use of the owner.

Mr. Pat. Feeny came before the council to complain about the business tax paid by contractors, builders, etc. He had obtained a list of those who paid taxes to the town and he maintained that there were still many who were operating as contractors, but had not paid the tax. He objected to his being made a scapegoat and having been fined while others are still allowed to go free. He said the season is wearing on and these people are operating and taking away jobs from others who paid the tax. He objected to the tax as not having paid sufficient. He asked the council to investigate who was in charge of the hospital building and why no tax had been paid for this and several other jobs that were being done in the town. In five minutes, he said, you will find out just who it is and who is paying the men and if they are hiring men they are contractors and should pay the tax. You have your policemen to find out these things and they can do it.

After considerable discussion the council decided to have Const. Trepanier check on all who have not paid and to find out full facts in all cases as to who are responsible and should pay.

At this point a rather unusual ceremony took place, probably the first time that any such ceremony has been conducted at a council meeting.

A number of the officers and executive of the Huntingdon Junior Chamber of Commerce were present and Mr. L. Fredette asked that these members be sworn into office to which they had recently been elected by their membership. He explained that he was the new president and the others were officers and members of the executive of the Chamber. He asked Pro-Mayor McGerrigle if he would kindly administer the Oath of Office and have the members duly sworn in. The Oath was administered en masse and the various members withdrew after thanking the council.

Alderman Picard wondered at the proceeding and could not quite see the object of it, but agreed to the ceremony, but he said he hoped every organization in town would not want to do the same thing.

Mr. D. Grant and Mr. M. Rosenchtein, representing the Huntingdon Woolen Mills, came before the council to register a complaint regarding water pressure and the state of the road in front of the mill. Mr. Grant said the Woolen Mills was probably one of the largest tax payers in the town and yet they were not accorded very good service. The road in front of the mill was a mass of holes and water stayed in them for a considerable length of time. Alderman Picard promised to have this road fixed and placed in good state of repair. Mr. Rosenchtein told the members that at certain times of the day the pressure of the water would sink to as low as 12 pounds and he understood it should be from 40 to 45 pounds. He explained that certain chemicals are used in processing the cloth and this must be cleaned from the cloth quickly and that pressure is relied upon to obtain this result. From not having the pressure, many pieces of cloth had been spoiled and consequently were a great loss. He asked that something be done to improve this condition.

Alderman McWhinnie said that when certain repairs had been completed at the Filter Plant, it was certain that the pressure would improve. The installation of the altitude valve at the plant was intended to effect this result.

A letter from a lawyer for Mr. St. Jean of Huntingdon, was read and in which it was stated that Mr. St. Jean was most impatient as to the action taken regarding the sewer under his house and that he intended to start proceedings at once.

Two permits were asked for, one for a garage behind a house and the other to move a building from

High School Students Holding Salesmanship Campaign This Week

Students of Huntingdon High School have launched their own salesmanship week throughout the school district. This activity is sponsored by the Student Council under the supervision of Council President, Edna Nielsen.

This plan, presented by a Canadian Publishing Company and sponsored by your school has proven immensely successful in schools throughout Canada. It enables the school to obtain money for many extra-curricular activities not always provided for in the annual school budget. Hundreds of schools across Canada have earned much needed money to buy athletic equipment, movie projectors, band equipment and to finance educational tours through this grand program.

Citizens of this community are being offered the opportunity to assist and encourage the high school students, and at the same time subscribe by subscription to Canada's leading magazines, as well as the best of American publications.

Tire Slasher Arrested at Hemmingford

Pays $50 Fine And Assessed Value of Damage

Some years ago complaints came from Hemmingford that tires on cars were being ruthlessly slashed and the tires ruined. At that time The Gleaner ran a story in the hope that the nuisance would be stopped. Apparently a short time after that a person was found who was responsible for the damage.

In the past few months a rash of the same sort of thing broke out and again tires were slashed. On April 3rd there were two victims, Messrs. Aylmer Hadley and Ross Hawkins, each had two of the tires on their cars slashed and made useless. On the night of August 23-24, Edwin Keady had 4 tires slashed and there were as many as 50 holes in some of them. Again on September 12-13, Mr. Keady had one tire slashed and it had 52 holes in it.

During the intervening time a Provincial Police detective made an investigation and as a result arrested a young man on September 21st. This young man appeared at court in Valleyfield on September 22nd, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to time already spent in jail, fined $50, and costs and must pay back the value of the property damaged.

The holes were punched into the tires by means of a small pocket screwdriver. It is hoped that this nuisance has again been cleared up and that no more of this sort of thing will bother Hemmingford residents.

Leduc's garage to the lot of C. J. Kyle. Both were granted.

Milk reports of samples taken on September 14th were read as follows: Monique, 21,000cc; Pringle Bros. 85,000cc and R. Goodfellow 94,000cc.

Alderman Caza said he had received many complimentary letters on the action the council is taking with regard to the milk being supplied the people of the Town of Huntingdon. He said this proved that the people want good milk and it is up to the council to see that they get it. Letters had been sent out to the dealers with poor reports and the reports just read showed improvement. They are still not good enough. The by-law calls for 50,000cc or less and that must be what we go by. There is still a few days of grace allowed by the letters sent out. Alderman Caza thought that the council would wait for another report and if this did not show the desired improvement, then the dealers' permits should be cancelled until they could prove that they were complying with the law. Letters will be sent out again to this effect.

Tenders were received for the heating equipment at the fire hall. This equipment has not been in satisfactory order at any time since it was first installed and latterly it has been completely out of order and there is no heat in the fire hall at present. The council has been of the opinion for some time that far too much oil was being used and decided that something should be done before starting the present season. The tenders covered several plans for repairing the present unit to renewing the whole, burner and boiler.

After discussing the various plans and the cost, it was decided to repair the unit and install a sump pump. The tender for this repair work was given as $165. It added that unless a sump pump be installed there was no guarantee that the water in the pit would not again cause damage to the burner.

The tender was received from Laberge & Lalonde. Another tender was received from Lloyd Duheme. The council is also to check on the insulation possibilities of the roof of the fire hall.

A delegation from the Huntingdon Citizens' Band waited upon the council and sought a contribution to the band as this is Band Week. Mr. I. McWhinnie was the speaker and he pointed out the good work the band has done and that it had had no help from the Town Council for over three years. It was decided to give a grant of $100 at this time and (Continued on page 12)

Geo. Cowie, C.N.R., Talks On "Postscript to An 8-hour Day"

Addresses Huntingdon Rotarians at Monday's Luncheon Meeting

GEORGE COWIE

Mr. George Cowie, Treasurer of the Canadian National Railways and Canadian National Steamships spoke to the Huntingdon Rotarians on Monday. Mr. Cowie is a friend of long standing of Gilbert MacMillan and Frank Napier and is known to many about Huntingdon due largely to the great interest he has taken in behalf of the Junior Calf Club judging competitions, sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Montreal.

There are very few of us in this room who are able to devote their entire working day to the battle against Cancer. We have to earn our livelihoods first, see that our families are fed and clothed and attend to other mundane duties. But it is after a day's work is, to all intents and purposes, done that we put forward our extra effort in the cause of something we believe in. In our case it is Cancer. It could be many another worthy endeavour. Whatever it is, the hours and effort we devote to our chosen objectives are in the nature of a postscript to our 8-hour day.

I don't say this with any feeling of smug satisfaction or in the belief that we deserve particular commendation because, in fact, we don't. We are doing this work because we like it or because we believe in it and because our efforts are repaid with a feeling of satisfaction or a sense of accomplishment or some kind of emotional reward.

Having thought the matter out thus far, the next step followed almost automatically. I recalled that in the far-flung Canadian National family to which I belong there are literally thousands of other men and women who are devoting time and effort to things they believe in. They are serving their communities in many ways and, since this is one aspect of railroading which the general public is inclined to overlook altogether, I thought that you, as kindred spirits, might be interested in learning some of the activities to which they have devoted themselves on their own account after their hours on duty have ended for the day.

When a railway employee wants to impress an audience with the size of his organization he has statistics at hand which are practically fool-proof for the job—that is, the size of the labour force.

We on the Canadian National for instance can say that our 120,000 employees with their immediate families and dependents could create a city of half a million people if grouped together in a single community. To amaze our listeners still further we might put the C.P.R. into the act and achieve a Toronto or a Montreal. However, such calculations paint only a partial picture. Canadian National employees are more than statistics, they are individuals who not only operate a widespread and diversified transportation system but are pretty good citizens into the bargain. The very qualities which make a good railway man are also those which make a responsible member of the community.

All railway jobs are to a greater or lesser degree ones of trust and responsibility. In the operating end of our business the railroad has either the lives or the property of his fellows in his care during his time on duty.

An operating man is concerned with the hundreds of rules and practices that have taken a century of railroading to develop and are designed to cover every possible circumstance where the safekeeping of lives and the protection of property is involved. He is indeed his brother's keeper.

And railroaders may be found wherever you go in Canada. More than 20,000 Canadian National employees, for instance, belong to the Maintenance of Way group; these are the section men who keep the track in shape and are literally the backbone of the railway. You won't find more than a handful of them in the cities; they are spread out over a network of 33,000 miles of track.

Engineers, firemen, conductors, trackmen and others whose job directly concerns itself with operating trains are another large group. Most of them are to be found in "railway towns"—an expression that has become part of the national language. These are the little centres of population that have grown up around railway terminals. The principal features of a railway town are its acres of tracks and its roundhouse which competes with the local church spire or grain elevator to dominate the skyline. True, many of the men in the "running trades" as we call them, live in cities, but by far the bulk of them live in small towns.

Then there are agents and operators, the jacks-of-all-trades who staff 5,000 stations on the C.N.R. System. There are 12,000 operators and agents in Western Canada alone. Probably the average size of a town in which these men are located would be a little over one hundred people. You will find railway men even where there are no railways, and a prime example is the 250 Canadian National Telegraph employees who patrol 12,000 miles of highway between Dawson Creek and the Alaska border maintaining the (Continued on page 8)

Town and News

Drive Is On Band Week is at hand and reports received this morning (Wednesday) indicate that the citizens of Huntingdon are more than willing to help in the present drive for funds.

A number of the residents called upon said they had wanted to make a contribution ever since they read in this column that the Band was short of money, some weeks ago, but had put it off hoping that a house-to-house canvass would take place.

Everyone seems proud of Huntingdon Citizens' Band and proud to be able to do their part in maintaining it.

Industries Use More Soap

The housewife who grumbles over the size of the weekly wash should find some consolation in the fact that Canada's primary textile industry each year scours to the extent of using some 5,000,000 pounds of soap.

kept for soap consumption among the country's more than 700 mills there are many processes during which fibres and fabrics require washing, and there are some facts available. For instance, in one year woolen textile mills used nearly 2,000,000 pounds of soap, dyeing and finishing plants went through more than 1,225,000 pounds, the knit goods industry bought 744,278 pounds and hosiery producers another 335,750 pounds.

Thanksgiving

ONCE again the time of year has arrived when citizens will be celebrating a period of thanksgiving. On Monday, October 12th, a special holiday has been proclaimed for the purpose of Thanksgiving. In churches throughout the country special services will be held to offer thanks to God for the bountiful harvest and the fact that all have been provided for in one way or another. As a further expression of thankfulness, the congregations of several churches in the Chateaugay Valley will bring gifts to their respective churches and in turn these gifts will be handed over to the hospitals in the area and to homes operated by the churches. This considerable help will be given to these institutions by way of replenishing their larders and perhaps the coffers too, as cash donations are gratefully received.

Since the inception of the hospitals in the Chateaugay Valley the practice of people taking gifts to the harvest thanksgiving services has become well established and has proved a wonderful help to both the Barrie Memorial and the Huntingdon County Hospitals.

We should all be truly thankful that a Divine Providence has helped to provide us with such a bountiful harvest of all things. This does not only mean the things we grow and produce, but it means that there is so little unemployment, or poverty and want in our land. Most people today are gainfully employed and in at least a fairly prosperous state. This is not true of people in many other lands and in offering up our thanks at the church services, a little prayer for the less fortunate would not be amiss. We might also be glad that we are able to enjoy the liberty and free life which is ours, this alone means more than we realize. Yes, we really have much to be thankful for. Too few of us however look at our good fortune with gratitude, we are prone to take these things for granted and our due and just rights. Even the fact that we enjoy good health and are able to go about our regular tasks is something for which we must be thankful. At the same time our sympathy should be aroused for those who are not so fortunate, the shut-ins, the crippled, the blind and others who are suffering in various ways.

As to the holiday, this is the last holiday before Christmas and it is natural that many people will be planning to spend it with relatives and friends who live at other points. When you drive on the highway, please drive carefully, avoid accidents, better to start a little earlier than wait and have to use speed. Make it a truly thankful holiday.

A Time To Take Stock

THERE are many things that go on around us and of which we take but scant notice. At this time the economy of our country is receiving more attention and at several meetings of various associations there has been mentioned that we may be headed for a small depression. It is not expected that this will develop to a great extent as there is a larger market in our own country to supply than was formerly the case. However, it is something to check upon and to plan for in order to overcome.

Depressions also take place in the human race and according to an article in the House Organ of the Bell Telephone Co. "The Blue Bell", there were not enough babies in the depression days. The result today is that the Bell has not enough applicants for the jobs it has available for the younger people. The Bell puts the reasons this way: 1) our business is getting bigger; 2) there is more competition for jobs and more marriages and consequently more people leave us; 3) there was quite a fall off in the birth rate of girls and boys back in the depression and so there are not so many teenagers knocking on the door of our employment office as we would like to see. There is stiff competition for the relative few young men and women who are about to embark on business careers.

Now this brings us to the question of the problem that is presently troubling our schools. In our schools in the district, the enrolment in the lower grades is considerably higher than it has been for some years. The higher grades are not so well filled, but in the course of a few years they will be, due to the lower grades passing up through the school. The lower grade problem has come about through the higher birth rate due to the war years and to the many marriages which are still taking place. This condition is liable to carry on for several years and thus meantime we have a depression in human stock to take positions which are offering as for instance the Bell Telephone Co. On the other hand we have inflation insofar as our schools are concerned.

In a few years these youngsters who are now entering school for the first time, will be through their school course and will be those who will be knocking on the employment office door. Will the economics be such that they will be in demand as much as is the case today? If a depression hits us as has been suggested it may, there may again be too many to fill the jobs offered. With conditions as they are there need not be a serious depression, for the world at large is in need of what we can produce and supply. We must adjust ourselves to holding the markets we have and to seeking new ones.

Going back to the influx of new pupils in our schools, we read an account with regard to the condition of the Chateaugay, N.Y. school. The following figures are given of the enrolment by grades: Kindergarten, 31; Grade 1, 68; Grade 2, 70; Grade 3, 53; Grade 4, 62; Grade 5, 69; Grade 6, 51; Grade 8, 62; Grade 9, 56; Grade 10, 45; Grade 11, 31 and Grade 12, 20. The heavy enrolment is in the lower grades, but it is quite high in the upper grades too. This should show us quite clearly what to expect in the matter of about three or four years. It points also to the need for preparing to have greater accommodation in our schools to take care of the increased enrolment of the future. It is not a time to delay, it is time to take stock and make preparations in accordance. The problem is bad now and it is quite evident that it is not going to improve by itself.

Something Should Be Done

THE school grounds of the Huntingdon High School offer considerable attraction to the small fry of the town. The reason is the many articles that provide amusement for the children that are placed there for the use of the school children during school hours. The school hours is the important part. It is what is taking place after school hours that carries potential danger with it.

While a high fence encloses this particular part of the school grounds, there is nothing to stop the children from using the playthings after the school is closed. In consequence it is common to see children from all parts of the town (those who belong to the school and those who do not) gathered at this point long after school has closed. During school hours this play is supervised and precautions taken to safeguard against accidents, but after hours the children are on their own. Actually they should not be permitted to make use of these play things and especially if they do not belong to the school. The school grounds are private property and the playthings are also private.

In addition to this, the Huntingdon High School has just had erected a tubular fire escape. For some time now, this has become another attraction and children have been climbing up to the roof of the school and sliding down the tube to the ground. Apart from the noise created, is the danger of someone being injured and possible damage that may result to the new escape. Already one accident has been reported from the school, not from the escape, but from playing around.

The school board is at loss to know just how to stop this. It has been suggested that more fence be erected, but this would be quite a job and a costly one at that and it may not entirely prevent the children from getting into the grounds.

Another matter that has the staff and schoolboard worried is, the hazard of accidents happening with the children playing and crossing the roads. Dalhousie and King Streets, on which the school fronts, are very busy especially at the school corner. We regret to say that all drivers of automobiles and trucks do not use as much precaution here as they should. Consequently the principal and teachers are in constant fear for the safety of the children. The children use the park across the street for playgrounds and they therefore cross the streets and often run onto the street for a ball and what not. Car drivers drive along these streets at a fast clip and many a near accident has occurred. The schoolboard hopes that car drivers will use every precaution when driving near the school. They realize that the situation is not ideal, but until some remedy has been found for it, there will be the accident hazard. The only way to prevent accidents is for car drivers to co-operate by using every precaution when driving on these streets near the school, especially during school hours.

Parents should co-operate by advising their children to stay away from the school after school hours unless they have a particular reason for being there due to some extra school activity. The schoolboard cannot be responsible for accidents which occur during after school hours.

Random Glimpses of The Past Taken from Gleaner Files

April 1
Buyers of horses for the war have been busy in this district. The standard of horses has apparently been bettered and many animals were refused. The average price here was $155. 18 horses were bought at Ormstown, 13 at Howick, at Ste. Martine, 12 at Huntingdon, 6 at St. Phileas and 6 at St. Urbain, and 1 at Kensington.

The property now occupied by Joe Harte on Front Street, belonging to the Kelly estate has been purchased by Fred Lefebvre. Reported price is $1400.

April 22
Automobile speeding and horse racing is becoming a popular pastime on Front Street, especially on Sunday evenings.

The post office authorities have made one sensible change in authorizing the use of war stamps to pay ordinary postage. They should make another by issuing 3c stamps. Putting two stamps on a letter to make 3 cents is a nuisance. As the rules stand, it is more convenient to hand a supply of one cent stamps than of any other.

Memorial services were held in the three Protestant churches on Sunday, when fitting tributes were paid to the Canadians who died at Langemark. The pulpit of the Methodist church was occupied by the British ensign and the pillars had festoons of small flags. Both Mr. Norman and Mr. Maclean contrasted the disgrace brought on Canada by unscrupulous contractors and the honors cast upon her by the conduct of her soldiers.

John H. McCartney of Godmanchester has been appointed a J.P.

We hear of a few changes of property. George Reid has bought the Hawes property at Athelstan, Donald MacNair has got the Narney lot in the village and John Mack has sold his farm in Elgin to John McCallum, reported price about $7000.

Red plum tree in blossom during the last week of April deserves to be recorded. It was better than usual on the first of June last year. Hay has fallen $2 a ton in price.

Mr. Robb, M.P. has given $100 towards equipping the McGill medical corps. Dr. Elder is head of the surgical department.

M.A.—Corbett, Percy Ellwood.
B.A.—MacLennan, Mary Muriel Currie, Chateaugay Basin.
B.Sc.—Boyer, George Coonley, Athelstan.

B.Sc.—Taylor, Andrew Gilmore, Dewittville.
B.Sc.—MacDougall, Winfred Gregor, Tatehurst.
Law—Scott, Robert Allan, Valleyfield.

All the students from the district passed in their respective years, none plucked.

The village by-law orders that autos do not drive along the leading streets at a faster rate than nine miles. They can be heard seen along the road from 15 to 25 miles, thus violating both the provincial and local laws. This is foolishness for the result will be a demand from the rural sections that all autos be geared so that they cannot go faster than 15 miles. The way to end a privilege is to abuse it.

THE HUNTINGDON GLEANER'S 90 YEARS

The bond between a newspaper and the community it serves becomes very real. And there are many who will take a very personal interest at this time, when The Huntingdon Gleaner celebrates its 90th Anniversary.

The area served for these 90 years by The Huntingdon Gleaner lies within 30 miles of the town of Huntingdon, its centre. Within this circle are such communities as Valleyfield, Ormstown, Howick, Hemmingford and Chateaugay. Busy. The territory is the same in area as in the early days of the paper, but it has undergone great changes. Many businesses and industries have been established, including one of the largest electric power developments in the world. Farming, the original staple of the district, has developed also, especially the dairy farming.

The intimate touch that the paper has with its readers comes largely from the fact that it has been carried on all these years by the members of the one family. Robert Sellar came from Upper Canada to found The Gleaner in 1863. When he died in 1919, his son, Leslie Sellar, succeeded him as the editor, and at his death he was succeeded by his brother, R. Watson Sellar, who today serves the whole country in the important office of Auditor General of Canada. Since 1924 the youngest son of Robert Sellar, Adam Sellar, has directed The Gleaner.

This family direction has given The Gleaner a stability amidst all the changes of the years. It has grown as its district has grown. But underlying change is the feeling of belonging to its own community.

The name of The Gleaner and the name of the Sellar family are alike part of the history and the development of that important area in the old Province of Quebec. The Gazette, Montreal.

Dear Mr. Sellar,
On this the Gleaner celebration of ninety years of newspaper service to the community, on behalf of the Board of Governors of the Barrie Memorial Hospital, we wish to offer you our heartfelt congratulations.

Even more impressive than the

The Week At Ottawa...

OTTAWA, (CP)—The new parliament opening next month will receive government legislation aimed at providing smaller down payments, and a longer time to pay off mortgage loans, for Canadians who want to build new houses.

Prime Minister St. Laurent has announced the government is considering both these measures "to broaden the opportunity for people of moderate incomes to build their own homes." This legislation will provide for establishment of residential mortgage insurance, and will enable the chartered banks as well as other lending institutions to lend money on insured home mortgages.

Mr. St. Laurent said the government feels the present sources of mortgage loans are not sufficient to keep pace with housing needs. Although housing construction is at the highest level in history, the growth of the population requires a further expansion of housing.

Banks Enter Field

The official announcement said: "Having in mind the increase in construction costs since the present limit of $10,000 on National Housing Act loans was set, the government is considering a higher limit for loans under the new system. Consideration is also being given to increasing the property of loans to lending values, in order to make possible a smaller down payment for lower-priced houses."

"To take care of these factors and possible variations in interest rates, it is contemplated that the period of repayment will be lengthened by the new arrangement."

The statement explained that the great bulk of personal savings in Canada are in the chartered banks, which are not legally empowered to loan money on residential mortgages. The establishment of mortgage insurance will make it possible to remove this barrier.

Trade Problem

What is the United States going to do about Canadian trade? There is concern here about the agitation against imports to the U.S., and now Prime Minister St.

Laurent has said straight out that Canada wants to know where she fits into U.S. trade policy.

This country, he said, does not want to be regarded as a "marginal supplier to be cut off (from U.S. markets), whenever the going is tough."

Investigations are being made, or about to be made, by U.S. tariff bodies into the import of Canadian oats, ground-fish fillets, lead and zinc.

The U.S. which last year took more than half of Canada's total exports, has already imposed restrictions on Canadian cheese and dried milk products. Despite protests, the restrictions stay.

Northern Defence

Canadian and American defence experts, concerned about Russia's growing atomic power, are studying the expansion of their continental defences.

At present both Canadians and Americans man radar stations in Canada, Canada pays a third of the cost, the U.S. the rest.

A Washington report said planners there believe the first step to strengthen defence should be "expansion of the radar warning net in high latitudes of the Arctic as well as stations further south."

Asked where the money would come from to pay Canada's share of such an expansion, an Ottawa spokesman said: "There's still some left in the kitty."

He added that if more is needed an additional appropriation will be sought.

Canada was testing this summer a new low-cost electronic device known as "McGill fence" to supplement the radar warning system.

More beef-cating

The price of beef has fallen below the price of pork for the first time since the Second World War.

The Agriculture Department says Canadians are eating more beef than ever. In the first eight months of this year they ate 456,000,000 pounds—100,000,000 pounds more than in the same time last year.

But beef exports are sharply down. Only 14,000,000 pounds were shipped against 40,000,000 pounds last year.

Big Plane Plant

The Federal Government is willing to sell arms plants to private industry if buyers will keep them ready for defence production.

A. V. Roe Canada Ltd., the aircraft manufacturer, have bought up the Mialton, Ont., jet engine plant on that basis. Since the outbreak of the Korean war the Government has invested about $200,000,000 in defence plants. "If we sell out," a federal official said, "we would like to get back 100 cents to the dollar on the taxpayers' investment. We are not willing to sell for fire-sale prices."

For Sale
Fisheries Minister Sinclair and officials of the canning industry have gone selling salmon to Britain. The dollar shortage over there has caused imports of Canadian salmon to be cut drastically since 1945.

Now members of the B.C. industry, with a big surplus of salmon, have put together "parcel" of orders for equipment made in England. The Fisheries Department says it is hoped Britain will take "several million dollars' worth of salmon in exchange."

Sold
Canadian retailers sold a record $3,135,900,000 worth of goods in the second quarter of this year (April-June), the Bureau of Statistics reports.

Despite Finance Minister Abbott's warning several months ago about the danger of excessive credit, about one third of the quarter's sales were on credit.

She commented upon the apparent prosperity to be found everywhere and was greatly impressed with the many new developments around Ormstown, in particular, the Barrie Memorial Hospital.

The Big Barn Goes -- Production Line

By Gilbert MacMillan
The Ottawa Farm Journal

A drive through most any section of the United States emphasizes the change that is taking place in farming operations. The silo is fast becoming the chief means of preserving crops for winter use. In many cases silos are the most impressive feature of the farm buildings, and in many instances two, and sometimes three are seen.

Very few new barns of the two-story type, with large hay lofts, are being built now, due no doubt to the use of the field baler. In addition to those changes there is another type of dairy operation making one wonder what changes are in store for us.

Big Operation
I saw a large-scale commercial milk-producing plant in operation. I am not sure of the acreage, but it must have been in the neighborhood of 700 acres. There are 125 cows kept milking all the time. These cows are handled in loafing sheds and milked in an eight-unit milking parlor operated by two men. The usual time of milking is just a little over two hours.

No milk pails are used, the milk being piped directly to a holding tank in the milk room, where it is kept mechanically in motion until completely cooled.

It was certainly an assembly-line operation, the cows waiting line always on the ramp leading to the milking parlor.

Clean Operation
There was an attendant in the holding pen, but he had next to nothing to do, except to get a cow out of the line if the milker had something wrong. There were no frills to the operation, but every cow's teats were carefully washed, and as the milking units were held in suspension at the end of the udder, there was little possibility of getting any foreign matter in the milk.

The milker in use was a "Surge" and was fitted so that the degree of pressure could be easily regulated. No strip cup was used, and the milker tried each teat before attaching the machine. Each cow's udder was handled as the machine was removed, and if a little milk was left it was stripped directly into the test cup.

This was the only milk exposed to the air and there was very little of it. The cows proceeded direct from the milking parlor to the field.

In Order
The milking hours are 5 a.m. to 4 p.m. I pointed out that unless the cows came through in the same order, there might be a considerable variation in the milking periods. The men claimed, however, that the cows nearly always came through in the same order, which says something for the intelligence of the cows.

The grain is fed from an overhead chute directly into the feed box, the quantity being regulated by the number of turns the attendant gives a handle. The success of an operation of this kind on a large scale must depend a great deal on efficiency of men doing the work. They have to be quick and continually on the alert for half a dozen things happening at once.

With no paid to employ and operating in a pit that kept them level with the cows' udders there was actually no heavy work.

All Routine
I dropped in just after milking operations started without any warning and only saw a routine operation. In the course of nearly an hour's stay I did not see a hitch. The barns are located in the centre of a large plain on what was once one of the most famous estates in Northern New York, but is now broken up and used commercially.

The cows in the summer go direct to the fields from the milking parlor, but can come back when they like to lay in the feedracks in the loafing pens.

The men told me that in the morning the cows are generally all there waiting for their turn to be milked.

What Cost?
The most important question to me about this method of operation, and on which, unfortunately, I have no information, is that of cost of production of milk. It would be highly informative if we had some reliable information on this type of operation.

An operation of this scale is, of course, beyond the reach of the average farmer but it would be very interesting to know the minimum size at which this method of operation is practical and profitable.

In the first place this plan is only possible when there is a route covered by a tank truck to pick up the milk. One surprising feature is the claim, there are no road results of 300 yards or more in carrying the milk to the processing plant.

The much bigger question to me is this—if this type of production is cheaper, what will it eventually do to the small individual producer? If in turn it eliminates him, what would happen to our whole rural economy?

Is this part of the price the country may have to pay for the 40-hour week in nearly every other line of effort except dairy farming? It might be good mental exercise to try and think this thing through to what the final results might be for everybody.

shooting methods, weapons, etc., will be published in the Migratory Bird Regulations and on posters before the beginning of the open season.

More Experience Required When Hunting

Statistics from the four Canadian provinces and 31 U.S. states which report details of all hunting accidents to a central agency reveal that about one third of all casualties result from the accidental firing of a gun.

The other two thirds, says Ken Morris of Montreal, executive director of the Canadian Civilian Association of Marksmen, occur when a hunter intentionally pulls the trigger.

"There may be some excuse for the hunter who unintentionally pulls the trigger as he stumbles," Mr. Morris says, "but there is no excuse for horseplay, carrying loaded guns in cars or leaving them loaded around the hunting camp."

Some hunters wear drab clothes hoping to blend into their surroundings and thus improve their chances of hunting success. But in doing this, he warns, they increase the risk that some other hunter will mistake them for game. No game bird or animal is bright red or yellow in color and the wearing of bright-colored caps and jackets is the best insurance.

Some inexperienced hunters are the victims of "buck fever" and imagine that every sound heralds the approach of an animal.

"Altogether too often such hunters shoot before their target comes into view. As a matter of fact, most animals move silently in the bush and loud noises usually indicate the presence of another human."

Most accidents are caused by young shooters, but youthfulness in itself is not the main reason. It is lack of proper instruction and experience.

Hunting, says Mr. Morris, is not a dangerous pastime. Records show that one is safer in the hunting field than while driving the family car, riding in a public conveyance, swimming or boating. But the application of a few common sense rules will make hunting even safer than it now is.

New hunters should become familiar with their weapons before they go hunting. They must remember that a shot gun is dangerous up to a distance of 300 yards and that the bullet from a hunting rifle may carry as far as two miles. Even the little .22 rim-fire bullet is dangerous up to a mile.

To use a firearm once or twice a year is not enough to get to know it and to feel at home with it. The experienced shooter is the safe shooter, and one way to gain experience is through active membership in a trap, skeet or rifle club," he says.

Mr. Morris cited the records again. During the 15 years in which accident records have been maintained, not a single hunting fatality has been charged against any one of the 300,000 members of the National Rifle Association of America and the Canadian Civilian Association of Marksmen.

Cut Road Toll, Test Drivers "Under Hats"

An examination to learn what auto drivers have "under their hats" is recommended by the Montreal District Chambre de Commerce as a measure to reduce the motor accident death toll.

"Why not take appropriate measures to develop serious drivers out of those who have a tendency to go crazy at the wheel?" asks the Chambre in a bulletin distributed yesterday to its 4,000 members.

It proposes the following five-point program to cut down the number of accidents:

1. Have speed limit indicators on all highways.
2. Have posters proclaiming that a particular area is "under police supervision." This strategy in localities where it was tried has proved successful.
3. Have spot news appeals asking motorists to be careful.
4. Have more than one highway safety campaign a year.
5. A uniform motor vehicle act providing jail terms rather than fines for certain types of offenders.

The Chambre claims that it's easy for the authorities to detect careless drivers on the highways.

Toothbrush and Dentists Not the Only Safeguards

Saving your teeth from decay means more than brushing them and forgetting them, more than seeing your dentist regularly for thorough check-ups. It also means eating wisely with a view to sound body-building—and so tooth-building—foods.

Here is a six-point summary of dietary rules that will help to prevent tooth decay. It is reproduced by the Health League of Canada from "Your Child and Mine."

- 1) Good wholesome food is as essential to build strong teeth as it is to build strong muscles.
- 2) An appetite for sweet foods can be acquired by children at a very early age. Therefore, it is essential to refrain from giving foods high in sugar content during childhood.
- 3) Children should not consume candies, jam, chocolate, or soft drinks, as they contain too much sugar.
- 4) Immediately after eating, food particles should be removed from the teeth by thorough brushing and rinsing. This alone is known to reduce decay up to 60 per cent.
- 5) If it is inconvenient to brush teeth after eating, the mouth should be rinsed thoroughly with water or the meal should be finished with a cleansing food such as raw fruit.
- 6) Candies, jams, cookies, or cakes are particularly harmful to teeth when eaten between meals or at bedtime.

GOOD HUNTING
ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—A good season for hunters of small game including rabbits is predicted. A considerable number of bird licenses had been issued by early September, and there was a big demand for other types of permits.

Good Deeds you may have done unknowingly

1. Here's a new home you may have helped provide for one of your neighbours — if you are a life insurance policyholder. For part of your premium money is invested by your life insurance company in ways that provide funds for building not only houses, but schools, roads, power plants, other developments.

2. Perhaps, too, you can take a small part of the credit for Tommy's recovery from a serious illness. Medical science is always learning more, through research, about how to combat disease. And you may be providing some of the funds that life insurance companies contribute to such vital research projects.

3. Ever help a man get a job? You may have — unknowingly. For life insurance money, invested in ways that enable an industry to expand, has played an important part in providing new jobs for many workers — including, perhaps, yourself.

4. As a life insurance policyholder, you do all your fellow-citizens a service. For the financial security you've provided for your family reduces the chance of their ever becoming a burden to others. The more protection you own, the more that chance is reduced.

In all these ways, millions of life insurance policyholders are building security for their future — and helping to make Canada a better land to live in!

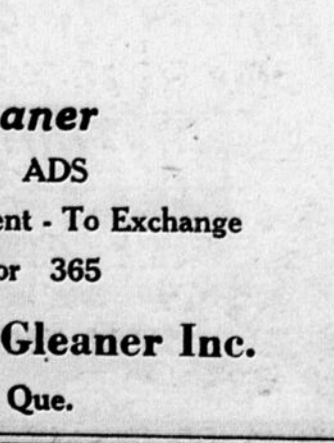

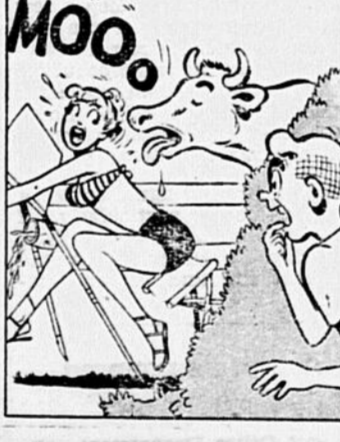

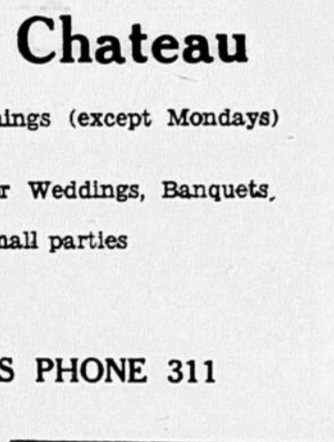

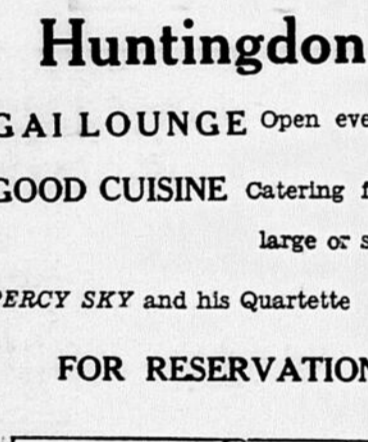

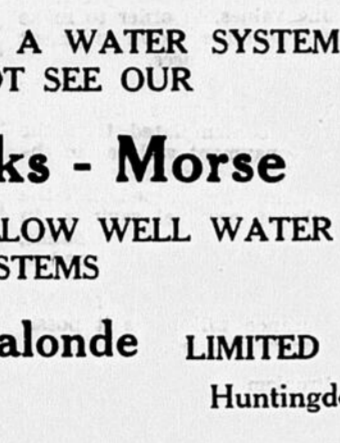

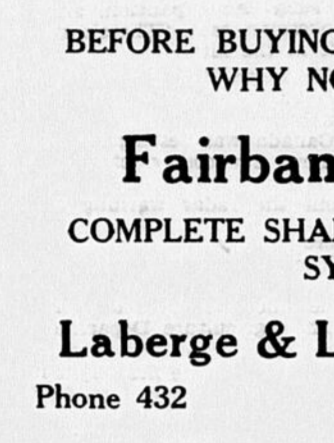

AT YOUR SERVICE — A trained life underwriter, representing one of the more than 50 Canadian, British and United States life insurance companies in Canada, will help you plan for your family's security and your own needs in later years. Rely on him!

THANKSGIVING
It is a happy custom at Thanksgiving to gather with our friends to give thanks for the bountiful gifts of the harvest and for the gift of life in Canada. Actually, the Festival, which is primarily a religious one dates back to our early ancestors.

Just as Easter and Christmas have their age old customs, so there are traditions to Thanksgiving. We adorn our churches with fruits and vegetables, and we gather around the family table for a dinner of roast turkey and pumpkin pie.

Thanksgiving this year has a special significance to the home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture. In August, two of the home economists attended the Convention of the Associated Country Women of the World, held in Toronto. There were a thousand women delegates and members of the organization represented five and a half million rural women from all parts of the world. Many of the delegates came from countries where there was very little food and they were absolutely astonished at the abundance of everything we had in Canada. Sometimes you would see these women sitting, with tears in their eyes, unable to eat, thinking of their homes where so many people had no food at all. This actual contact with women who knew of want for food and who had experience with starving families impressed the home economists and at this time, they want to impress upon you that we should give special thanks for the abundance we have in Canada.

Speaking of the traditional Thanksgiving meal of turkey and pumpkin pie, this year, homemakers will be able to buy small turkeys, medium size ones, 25 to 30 pound toms. It does not matter whether you buy a large turkey or a small one so long as you look for the signs of good quality, that is plump breast with a broad breast and thick-skinned thighs. A bird which has clear yellow skin, free from pin feathers, cuts and bruises. Of course when you buy a Grade A bird, it should have all these qualities. A Grade B bird will not be quite so well-fleshed and will not have quite as good an appearance as Grade A, but both grades are good eating and are fine for the table.

Perhaps you will want to have turkey for Thanksgiving this year, but a big turkey is too large for the size of your family, a half turkey is the solution to your problem. Most butcher shops today sell half turkeys that weigh from 10 to 15 pounds. They are cooked in the same way that you cook a whole turkey but the preparation for roasting is slightly different. These are the recommendations from the home economists of the Department of Agriculture. After the turkey is washed, sprinkle the inside of the body cavity with salt and then tie the leg to the tail and skewer the wing against the breast. Next fasten the skin along the neck of the breast meat to the keel bone. If this is not done, the skin will shrink back during roasting and the breast meat which is exposed will dry out. Then the bird is ready to go into the roasting pan. Just before putting the bird in the pan trim a double thickness of waxed paper, brown paper or aluminum foil to the approximate size and

Helpful Household Hints and Suggestions

Before beginning an indoor painting job settle the dust with a fine spray of water. Point spray at the floor and up in the air in a wide area around the work spot. An insect spray gun is good for this.

Theoretically, if a family lived in a house which was absolutely vapor-tight, the house would soon be so saturated with moisture that it would rain indoors.

Adequate ventilation is the answer to problems created by excessive indoor water vapor.

The ventilation may be either natural—opening of doors and windows—or forced. The latter includes by proper-size exhaust fans, attic louvers, outlets for fireplaces (vapor can escape up a chimney) and other devices.

Next time you wash windows try adding a few drops of kerosene and a little bluing to the soapy water you use. They will give windows an extra sparkle.

After cleaning door knobs, hinges and other hardware, apply a thin coat of fresh white shellac to keep them bright longer.

Duck Hunter's Bag Limited to Eight

Quebec duck hunters will be allowed a daily bag limit of eight ducks during the 1953 season, it was announced Wednesday from Quebec. This eight-duck limit is exclusive of American and red-breasted mergansers and may include one wood duck.

Five geese, eight Wilson's snipe, eight woodcock, and twenty-five rails, coots, and gallinules (all told — not twenty-five of each) may be taken in the province each day.

Open seasons will be as follows (all dates inclusive): ducks, geese (other than Brant), rails, coots and gallinules (central districts) September 19th to November 17th. Hunting of Wilson's snipe will be allowed in the central district from October 3rd to November 6th and the hunting of Brant will be allowed from October 17 to November 17th.

A new regulation has been added this year to prevent the use of live birds as decoys. Persons possessing game birds under permit are now required by law during the open season to keep the birds on their premises in an enclosure or to otherwise prevent them from approaching within one-quarter mile of any area where waterfowl hunting is taking place.

Glenelm W.A. Meeting GLENELM The W.A. of Kensington United Church met at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Stewart, Huntingdon, on Friday afternoon, October 2. A good number of visitors and members were present. The president, Mrs. Salter, opened the meeting, business was discussed, and plans made for fall activities. A lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by her sister, Mrs. Lenny of Montreal. Collection amounted to $13.30. Mrs. E. Salter, Mrs. Chambers, and Mrs. W. Crawford attended the Sunday School Convention held in Hemmingford the past Thursday, which proved very helpful in carrying on Sunday School work. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Anderson of the Gore visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Goodfellow Sunday. Mr. Wallie Tannahill and Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Tannahill of Worcester, Mass., are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Gavin. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott of Ormstown spent Sunday at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Watson. Rev. T. McLeod preached at the morning service in Kensington United Church. He had just returned from a vacation at his home in New Brunswick. A very inspiring sermon was delivered on the subject, "The Mountain of Doubt". Next Sunday will be Thanksgiving Sunday, and the congregation is asked to remember the Huntingdon County Hospital by giving gifts of fruits, vegetables, etc. Mr. and Mrs. J. Brown left last Friday for a motor trip to the Laurentians, and were visitors at the Chute, Mont Tremblant, and went to St. Jerome. The beauty of the autumn leaves as usual, was beyond description. The trip by their daughters, Miss Evelyn and Miss Merle, Mr. and Mrs. Brown returned home Sunday in time for church service, much benefited by their trip.

Huntingdon Locals

St. Andrew's W.M.S. St. Andrew's W.M.S. started their year's activities on Wednesday, September 30, when they met at the home of Mrs. Walter Hogg, Garden City. Mrs. George Paul conducted the meeting. Twenty-two members answered the roll call by repeating a verse on "Fellowship". A letter of thanks from Miss Lowden acknowledged a birthday gift sent to her at the Patterson Nursing Home by the W.M.S. members. The president read a letter explaining the Presbyterian Leadership Training Institute which is being started this fall. The Annual South Shore Sectional Meeting held at Riverfield was attended by five members: Mrs. Paul, Miss Turner, Mrs. Hamilton, Mrs. Maclean and Mrs. Ritchie, and all reported a fine meeting. An invitation was extended to the members to attend the Athelstan Thank-offering meeting to be held at the home of Miss Kimball and Miss Tully on Thursday, October 22.

These countries have not enough land under cultivation to feed their own people. Lack of water is a problem. Another is the illiteracy of the peasants, who are unable to use information about better methods of farming. But the people are restless and dissatisfied, and emancipation of women is one of the changes that have taken place in Pakistan and India. Of Communism she says: "Freedom to eat is one of the most important freedoms, and it is what the Communists are promising the people of India." Caste distinction, although abolished by law, is still practised in the villages and will not entirely disappear for a long time with prayer by the president. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess and Mrs. Brown, as a social hour was enjoyed by all.

Loses Finger in Corn Blower On Wednesday afternoon, September 30, while attempting to fill a silo, Mr. Raoul Durancieu, Athelstan Road, accidentally caught his left hand in a corn blower. The first joint of the middle finger was cut off. Dr. George Lefebvre attended the wounded man. It is believed that the wound is not serious.

Young Married Couples Club At the October 11th meeting, the Club will begin a series of talks in connection with child development and training. The speaker will be Miss Daisy McNeil, Secretary of Children's and Girls' Work, Council of Christian Education, and her topic will be "The Responsibility of the Home to the Child." A question period will follow Miss McNeil's address. The subject of the November meeting will be "The Responsibility of the School to the Child," when Mr. E. A. Kine, Principal of Ormstown High School, will speak. In December, Rev. Randolph MacLean will address the group on the topic "The Responsibility of the Church to the Child," and Rev. MacLean, Rev. Beal and Rev. Hatcher will lead a discussion. All believe the series will prove interesting and helpful and trust the meetings will be well attended by members and friends of the Club.

Successful Legion Entertainment A highly successful event was staged by the Entertainment Committee of Huntingdon branch, No. 81, Canadian Legion, on Saturday evening, October 3, at the Legion Hall. Approximately one hundred members, their wives, guests, etc., were in attendance. Those in attendance had the option of either watching the "All Star" Canadian hockey match and other events on the T.V. set, or else taking part in the old time barn dances, the music for same being provided by French's Orchestra. On account of the coldness of the weather, the scheduled wiener roast could not be staged; however, the guests were served their hot-dogs in the orthodox way during the course of the evening.

Ford Tractor Demonstration On Monday afternoon, October 5, a demonstration of Ford tractors, sponsored by the Empire Garage, was presented in a field at the farm of Mr. Sidney Barrington, Huntingdon. A group of interested farmers attended. The show was made possible through the efforts of Jean Legaré, District representative for Ford tractors sales and equipment, who announced over the microphone the various feats performed by the Ford tractors; H. P. Higgins, local representative for Empire Garage, Ford tractor dealers, who demonstrated the Fordson Major; and Noel Polys, of the Empire Garage, who welcomed the gathering. For demonstration purposes, Mr. Leo Beauchamp supplied his tractor. The demonstration was not of ploughmanship, but of the power of the Ford NNA which Mr. Beauchamp owned and operated for show. Later in the afternoon, the extreme power and versatility of the Fordson Major was demonstrated to the assembled spectators.

Salvation Army Campaign The Salvation Army Campaign for funds is proceeding slowly in Huntingdon County. To date $695.00 has been collected with 17 collectors reporting or approximately one third of the total number. The work of the Salvation Army is so well known that it needs no comment, in view of this the campaign officials hope that citizens will give generously when the canvasser calls. All contributions help in continuance of the good work of the Army. School Closed This Week For Convention The Huntingdon High School pupils will have a holiday on Thursday and Friday of this week, as the Teachers' Conventions is being held in Montreal on those dates. As Monday is Thanksgiving, there will be no school until Tuesday morning, October 13th. New Fire Escape at School A new tubular fire escape is presently being installed at Huntingdon High School. The old fire escape has been repaired also, but the new one is considered to be the latest and recommended type. The children simply sit in it and slide to the ground and can rapidly be evacuated from the upper floor of the building. However, the new escape provides quite an attraction for the children and its use at the moment is more than for fires.

To Receive Queen Scout Badge Scouting is again getting under way in Huntingdon and 22 Scouts are attending the regular meetings. Cubs will shortly be holding their regular meetings. On Saturday, Oct. 24th, a gathering is to be held in the basement of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church when the parents and others interested will witness the presentation of the Queen's Scout Badge to Peter Fox and several proficiency badges to other members. The Huntingdon County Hospital has gratefully acknowledged and received the following annual memberships: $10.00—Mrs. Thos. Goun-drey, Mr. Tom Ross, Mr. Hugh Graham Black, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Bickford, and Mrs. Ellen B. Elder. Mrs. A. R. Russell and Miss Katherine Barrie, from Boston, Mass., are visiting Mrs. Wm. E. Barrie.

Postscript to an 8-hour day Mr. Cowie quoted a few figures relative to C.N.R. and were as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Item and Amount. Includes Tons of freight carried, Passengers carried, Express shipments carried, etc.

The Money Earned and Spent Operating Revenues $ 675,218,415 Operating Expenses 634,852,915

Net operating revenue 40,365,500 Taxes, equipment rents, etc. 16,061,052

Available for interest and dividends 24,305,448 Interest Charges 24,163,121

Surplus 142,327 The total payroll amounted to $405,000,000. This means that out of every expense dollar, 60 cents was for wages.

From what I have said you can judge that a railway must be a difficult form of industrial enterprise to administer, especially when you realize that most of the men and their supervisors are out on the line constantly beyond the reach of executive supervision.

This is in direct contrast to our conception of most industries where management can cover its operations in a matter of hours, and where a supervisor can reach an employee in a matter of seconds.

When our President sets out to inspect the property he administers, for example, he has to consult the calendar, divide the job in three or four parts, each to be accomplished separately, and then bid Montreal good-bye for from 10 days to a month.

In every real sense railway management must rely on the ability of its men and officers to do the job themselves. It also relies on their loyalty so that their supervised jobs are carried out efficiently.

We have the kind of country in Canada that I think provides the finest railway men in the world. Trains may be halted, delayed or derailed, but they get through because these employees have developed a third characteristic, and that is resourcefulness.

It ranks with ability and loyalty in the type of industrial operation we conduct. Having developed such characteristics it is little wonder that C.N.R. workers are to be found giving their time and talents as good citizens to a multitude of activities outside of their regular work.

The motivation is a sense of the duties of citizenship and a sincere desire to help others through charitable institutions and service clubs. There are hundreds of Canadian National people engaged in the supervision of such bodies, and thousands listed as active members.

The scope of the full time and spare time work being done by railway men, and railway women too, is amazingly wide and includes Government positions ranging from Cabinet Members of Provincial Legislatures down a long list that includes mayors, Reeves, aldermen and other civic officials; officers of just about every service club on the continent; health and disaster relief associations, technical and business societies, sports and recreational groups.

All give freely of their time to promote the well-being of the communities in which they live.

Canadian National men and women are serving on the directorates of blood clinics and hospitals, as well as in the supervision and direction of societies which are dedicated to the battle against specific diseases like cancer, arthritis and heart disease.

A magnificent example of the work being done in this field is the C.N.R. Blood Donors' Association, composed of employees who are literally willing to give their life's blood for the benefit of their fellow employees. The idea was conceived by a worker in the big Point St. Charles Shops, and was started some years ago.

Needless to say, the organization was given the full cooperation of the Company's Medical Department, and it expanded to the point where its sponsors were able to set up its own blood bank. A Montreal hospital assists by storing the blood donations, which are available for the use of any C.N.R. employee or his dependents who need it. Nor is the railway itself a lukewarm citizen. I could take you into Northern Ontario and show you two quite modern Y.M.C.A. buildings erected by the C.N.R. I could also point to a couple of hospitals to which we have given very material support since they were founded.

In cooperation with the Ontario Government we have a School Car and a Dental Car moving over our lines in the more remote districts of the Province bringing health and education to otherwise isolated citizens.

There are scores of places across Canada where we share our facilities with the community - such services as water, light and sewerage. As these communities grow the shoe goes on the other foot, and we become the work done by railroaders during the Winnipeg flood. More recently, employees of our Motive Power shops in Stratford helped to clear the debris left in the wake of the tornado which crossed Northern and Southern Ontario, and right now the shop facilities are at the disposal of farmers in the district helping to repair damaged machinery and other farm equipment.

What little I have said concerning the activities of railway people can only be considered the sketchiest outline. The full story of the contributions which my fellow employees are making to the Canadian community will probably never be known, for these people believe in that admonition from the greatest of sermons: "Therefore, when thou doest thine aims, sound not a trumpet before thee." They do not seek the glory of men. They know that what they are doing is fundamentally right. That conviction, in itself, is reward enough for their labours.

WERE NOT SO SICK!

I think it was Job who said that we bring upon ourselves the things we fear. I have never been one to give much thought or study to Christian Science or such matters, but from what I hear and see I think they make a lot of sense. Years ago I read what the famous psychologist, William James, had to say about the religion of health-mindedness, and it seemed to come out to about the same thing—if we think in terms of sickness and poverty and danger, we may well expect it; but if we think on health-ier lines, we are likely to be healthy.

It is for this reason among others that I cannot get excited about national health schemes. It seems to me that if we go too far in this direction, we think ourselves into a race of neurotics. I am told that in England, where national health has absorbed much of their time and energy, enough aspirin is sold each year to practically anesthetize the whole blessed country. For awhile, every English politician seemed to devote his talk to the amount of effort the government was making to keep Englishmen healthy. Did it really work? I don't think so. I think the present government has done more for the health of the country by supplying more good food and letting people buy it. I may be all wrong, but it seems to me that men like Churchill, who spoke of courage and endurance, did more to make the English people healthy in one single speech than the labor government did by talking as if the island was composed of semi-invalids who could be made happy with free spectacles and hearing aids.

Now I am not such a dunce as to say that I think there need be no such thing as sickness. I've been stung by plenty of viruses in my day! But I'm equally sure that a morbid mind has sometimes bit harder than a virus can bite.

I read the other day that one dollar out of every four of all the money Ottawa collects in taxes goes into social security and welfare. Some politicians would go even further. The money spent by National Health and Welfare in sending out little stories about the common cold, diet, and all the rest of it, adds up to a large amount. I wonder if some of this doesn't do more harm than good. Every time you pick up a newspaper or listen to the radio you are reminded that you are subject to disease and that the dear old government must warn you again and again. It's enough to make you sick just reading and listening to it! I sometimes think that the fellow in Ottawa who writes all these little notes is probably suffering from a chronic cold in the head himself! I wish he'd take a holiday and look after his own health. Most of us are feeling fine and have other things to think about.

Opening Exercises at Hemmingford High School

The formal school opening and presentation of prizes was held in the school auditorium on Wednesday night, September 23. Great interest was shown by the attendance of parents, ratepayers and visitors. The stage was beautifully decorated with baskets of autumn flowers. The members of the School Board; the clergy; for president of the Students' Council; the president of the Women's Institute, Mrs. Greer; the convener of agriculture of the Women's Institute; Mr. Brach, the English supervisor of the department of education and the principal, Mr. R. M. Brown, were seated on the platform. Mr. H. A. D. Somerville acted as chairman for the evening. An interesting program opened with the singing of "O Canada" with Miss Esther Fisher as accompanist. The Rev. D. Andrews led in the opening prayer. The chairman, Mr. Somerville, welcomed the audience and mentioned the financial conditions of the school, grants given, improvements made, changes made in the staff, and gave words of encouragement to staff and pupils.

The guest speaker was Mr. Brach who spoke of the value of oral and written English. Mrs. Greer, organizer of the school fair told of its benefits and the interest taken in it, also of the plans for the next fair. She mentioned Mr. G. Simpson's interest in the woodworking section. Miss Heather Rutherford, president of the newly organized Students Council told of its activities. Mrs. Palmer mentioned the part taken by the Women's Institute in presenting $75.00 for new school equipment. She also presented the scholarship shield to Dorothy Fisher for the highest percentage obtained from grades 8 to 11.

The members of the board, Messrs. R. Hadley, A. R. Kelly, and V. Ellerton presented the prizes. The principal, Mr. Brown, explained the change of system and arrangement in the school by having subjects taught by various teachers instead of the class method as previously followed. He also thanked the donors of the prizes and everyone for all the interest taken in the school. The programme was closed with a benediction by Rev. W. Holmes and the singing of the National Anthem. Then an inspection of the rooms was made by the guests.

In Demand as Judge Alex. Wallace, son of J. M. Wallace, Fairview Ayrshire Farm, Athelstan, Que., is apparently a popular judge insofar as Red and White and other Ayrshire shows in several parts of Ontario are concerned.

On Thanksgiving day, he is scheduled to judge the Ayrshires at Woodbridge Fair. This will be the tenth time he has judged at that Fair.

On Saturday last he judged the annual Red and White Show of the Toronto District Ayrshire Breeders' Club at Markham Fair. That show was the eleventh consecutive show of that Club to be held at Markham, Ont. In that respect, it would have been a sort of homecoming event for Alex. Wallace, at the Woodbridge and Markham II was at Credholme Farm, Streetsville, Ont., in the Toronto Club area that he established the reputation he now enjoys as an authority on Ayrshires. He was herdsman and herd manager at Credholme during the years that (now former) herd was being built up, and during most of the time it was one of the great Ayrshire herds of its day.

He has also judged a considerable number of other Ayrshire shows in various districts of Ontario, over a considerable number of years. However, his activities as a judge have not been confined to Ayrshires. At Beachburg, Ont. Fair, a few weeks ago, he judged the cattle classes as also some 20 pens of pigs.

As apart from his "off time" Ayrshire activities, Alex. Wallace is actually one of Swift Canadian's most prominent district representatives. Emanating from Smiths Falls, Ont., he covers a wide district for Swifts in Central Ontario.

"Timber-Top" Field Day Over 100 members of the Laurentian (southwest district) Ayrshire Breeders' Club, and others visited "Timber-Top" Farm of J. H. & W. McConnell, Mont Rolland—in the Laurentian Mountains—on September 26. The occasion was the annual field day of the Club, at which the Messrs. McConnell are members.

One of the main attractions of this event was the viewing and inspection of the naturally Polled members of the "Timber-Top" herd. However, the Horned (or rather the dehorned) members of the herd also played a leading part. Four of the latter—an "Excellent", a "Very Good", a "Good Plus" and "Good" were used by S. W. MacKechie, Vice President of Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association, in a Type Classification demonstration. The new Secretary of Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association, Mr. J. H. Winters, made his initial appearance there at an Ayrshire event in Eastern Canada.

A Sunnyside Product Sunnyside Vicky was first prize cow, 4 years old, or over, in milk, in the Ayrshire section at the recent Pacific National Exhibition, Vancouver, B.C. As indicated by her name, Sunnyside Vicky is a product of the Sunnyside herd of Russell Logan, Howick, Que.

South Carolina and Maryland Gilbert MacMillan had a busy time of it on Friday last when he supervised the shipment of 21 head of cattle (16 Holsteins, 5 Ayrshires) for South Carolina; 8 head of Ayrshires for Maryland. All except 3 of these animals having been purchased in this area.

The S. C. Shipment The South Carolina shipment was consigned to J. Willis McGee, Anderson, S.C., who had purchased these animals during previous week in company with Gilbert MacMillan. The Holsteins, all springers, were all purchased in this area, as follows:

Donald Orr, Hemmingford—3 cows w.m., 2 heifers, Gore Road—1 cow and 2 bred heifers; R. R. Blair, Franklin Centre—2 cows; Walter B. Donnelly, River Road—2 cows.

One cow each from Stanley Whaley, Gore; E. A. Rankin, New Erin; R. J. Goodfellow, Huntingdon; Fred McGregor, Boyd Settlement; Donald Hamilton, Athelstan. A bred heifer from D. L. Brown, Elgin.

The Ayrshires shipped to J. Willis McGee included a heifer and a cow which were purchased at the Glencameron, Knowlton, Que., dispersal sale. The others were: one cow each from Henry Wilson & Son, Brooklet, and W. T. Harkness, Trout River; a heifer from J. D. Hamilton, Huntingdon.

The cattle were shipped by a truck owned by Kimball of Millerton, N.Y.

The Maryland Shipment The 8 head of Ayrshires for Maryland were consigned to Phil Knatz, Owings Mills, Md., having been purchased by Mr. Knatz when he attended the Glencameron dispersal sale and when he visited this district during the two following days.

One of the animals shipped was a heifer which was purchased at the Glencameron sale. The others were purchased as follows: 6 heifers from W. W. Harkness, Trout River; 1 heifer from the Robert Arthur Estate.

The Maryland shipment was taken out in the E. Bruce Nest & Son, Howick, Que., trailer truck. In that respect we understand that that truck created a near record, inasmuch as it made the round trip in just over 3 days, having arrived at Howick early on Sunday morning. We also understand that this was the second

How Canada's Dollar Evolved

by H. Don Allen

Canada hasn't had to punch the centre out of a silver dollar or declare a playing card a bank note in many a decade, but the story of how present day currency evolved and of the efforts of early governments to keep a supply of good money within the nation includes many an interesting tale.

Money itself can be highly interesting. It has been observed that "much can be learned of men and of nations from a study of their money" and, in New York City, a 75,000-item museum collection has been built about that belief. Canada's currency tells an exceptional story.

full economic sense of the word, capable of being hoarded or traded, subject to inflations, depressions and the all-encompassing law of supply and demand.

With the coming of the White Man new money was introduced, and the evolutionary process began. The unofficial Indian monetary unit became the "made beaver" or prepared beaver pelt, and the French-Canadian and later the English made use of whatever coinage could be attracted to the Colonies.

French garrisons were paid annually in small copper coins called Old France. Then for a few months each year Canada had money. But soon the soldiers had spent all and the coins were hoarded in merchants' tills to be shipped back to the Old World in exchange for goods.

Worse conditions seemed in the offing when, in 1684, the boat bringing the year's pay from France failed to arrive in Quebec. But the resourcefulness of the Indians wrote a new chapter in monetary history. Soldiers' playing cards were confiscated, cut in quarters, sealed, signed and declared legal currency in the Colony. Next spring each card was fully redeemed and New France accepted the new notion of a paper currency.

With the British regime few paper notes were issued until the founding of private banking institutions. The Bank of Montreal was started up in 1817; others soon afterwards, contributing immeasurably to the financial status of British North America. For over a century it was the banks that issued the greater part of Canada's monetary notes.

Coinage continued to be a problem. Gold and silver was internationally recognized and freely traded, but it tended to leave the Colonies more rapidly than it could be brought in. It was the silver Spanish milled dollar that ruled supreme for many decades. Copper coinage was issued by individuals, banks and governments, but long remained in short supply.

Prince Edward Island's "Holey Dollar" reflects the desperation and ingenuity of the times. The shortage of coins was acute on the Island in the 1830's and Spanish dollars continued to leave as rapidly as they could be imported. Authorities decided to make the drastic move of punching the centre out of an issue of Spanish dollars. Thus mutilated, the coins would be unlikely to be accepted elsewhere. The centre pieces could be circulated as shillings. The plan worked, except that the centre pieces were soon found to contain more than a shilling's worth of silver and rapidly disappeared from circulation. Not a single one is known to exist today.

The decade that followed, however, witnessed the introduction of large quantities of private tokens throughout the nation; some anonymous, many carrying advertising, mottoes or political slogans. Banks struck their distinctive tokens in increased numbers. Provincial governments began regular issuing of coinage. Pounds, shillings and pence, made in (or for) Canada, had taken the place of the dollar of Spain.

In 1858 the combined governments of Upper and Lower Canada made a drastic move that has simplified immeasurably the nation's bookkeeping ever since. They adopted as the national unit the dollar, equivalent to 100 cents. A dollar equal to 5/13 of the pound Sterling.

With Confederation the decimal system was taken over by the nation, and the familiar Queen Victoria coinage was first struck. To the present day, the issuing of coinage in Canada remains a monopoly of the federal government.

Bank note issues further evolved. In 1870 provision was made for a "Dominion of Canada" paper money series and such notes were issued in large quantities until 1935. The nation's early banking institutions were consolidated, and notes of the ten chartered banks that resulted circulated freely until the last decade.

In 1935 government's the Bank of Canada was brought into being, charged with the responsibility of regulating Canada's dollar. That year it issued its first paper money, and later it assumed a monopoly of note issuing in Canada.

Such is the situation today. All new notes and coinage are federal government issues. But the older varieties did their part, served their purpose, and have won their place in Canada's history.

Wedding

LUNAN-DUMAS
Saturday, September 19th, at nine-thirty o'clock St. Bridget's Church, Trout River, was the scene of a pretty wedding when Eunice Dumas, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Dumas of Westville, N.Y., became the bride of William Lunan, eldest son of Mrs. Mildred Lunan and the late Lauriston Lunan of Trout River. Rev. Frederick Shue officiated. The bride, given in marriage by her father, entered the church to the strains of the Wedding March played by Mrs. Louise Quenneville. She wore a waltz length gown of Chantilly lace over satin, her bridal veil of illusion embroidered in lace, was held in place by a crown of seed pearls, and she carried a prayer book with white roses and lily of the valley shower. Miss Joyce Dumas, as her sister's bridesmaid, wore a waltz length gown of yellow net over satin, a crown of orchid sweet peas, and she carried a bouquet of yellow rosebuds and sweet peas. George Lunan, cousin of the groom, was best man. Douglas Dumas, brother of the bride, and James Lunan, brother of the groom, were ushers.

Washington - The United States government recently disclosed for the first time its official list of the 193 cities which are rated as probable targets of atomic attack in the United States. It named 70 "critical" target areas, including centres of industry and the capital city of Washington. The 70 critical areas are cities or population centres classed as metropolitan areas, each having at least 40,000 manufacturing workers and at least one city with a population of 50,000 together with its closely-linked suburban areas. The critical list includes: Albany-Schenectady-Troy, N.Y.; Boston, Mass.; Buffalo, N.Y.; Chicago, Ill.; Dallas, Cleveland, Columbus and Detroit; Detroit, Erie, Pa.; Flint, Mich.; Kansas City, Los Angeles and Milwaukee, Wis.; Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minn.; New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Portland, Ore. and Rochester, N.Y.; St. Louis, San Diego, San Francisco, Seattle and Syracuse, N.Y.

At Ottawa, Maj-Gen. F. F. Worthington, civil defence co-ordinator, said Canada also has prepared a list of areas which it considers probable targets in the event of atomic attack. For various reasons, however, the list was being kept secret.

MALONE, N.Y.

A delightful sing-song formed the entertainment part of the programme with Mrs. E. A. Barwick as pianist. Among the invited guests was Mrs. S. Bidner, who together with her three children recently came to join her husband to make their home in Canada. Mr. Bidner is employed by J. M. Wallace and son at Powerscourt.
A hearty welcome was extended to Mrs. Bidner, all wishing her much happiness in the new land to which she had come to make her home. On behalf of the Association she was presented with a lovely rocking chair, in which she was asked to be seated, and immediately following this a beautifully decorated basket was placed before her, it being filled to overflowing with gaily wrapped parcels containing miscellaneous gifts for use in her home. The guest of honor was so completely surprised, she found it difficult to find words to express her sincere appreciation, but wanted all to know how happy they had made her, and how deeply thankful she was for the lovely gifts. A social hour closed this pleasant get-together. Mrs. Anders offered her home for the next meeting.

After the gifts were opened and passed around to be admired, Helen graciously thanked everyone for the lovely gifts received and invited all present to visit her in her new home. Everyone then joined in singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow," after which several flash pictures were taken. Refreshments were served by the ladies. Included among those present were relatives from Montreal, Ormstown and Huntingdon.

Prevent Rust Stains

It is easier to prevent rust stains than to prevent them after they have formed. You will have less trouble if, before storing clothes, you remove pins, metal ornaments, and clips. Sometimes metal hangers are responsible for rust on garments, for the dampness in the air can cause rust if you allow clothes to remain on hangers for any length of time.

Therefore wooden or plastic hangers are the best to use when hanging clothes. There are many sturdy inexpensive new hangers on the market, that it seems really a shame to take a chance.
