St. Agnes R.C. Church Lost In Fire Sunday Afternoon

Estimated Loss Well Over $30,000 — Insured For $19,000 — Cause Not Known

A fire of undetermined origin completely destroyed the Ste. Agnes Roman Catholic parish church early Sunday afternoon and threatened at one time to spread to the nearby outbuildings and frame house of Mr. Gregor Leslie, who owns the adjoining lot and causing a loss estimated to be well over $30,000.00. According to information received from the Curé of the Parish, Rev. Fr. Jeannotte, mass had been held as usual in the morning and immediately afterwards a meeting of the assessment board was held, but when everyone left the building nothing untoward was noticed.

However, at 12.15 Mr. Lawrence Carriere, who was visiting at a nearby house saw smoke pouring from the side entrance to the church. With others he rushed to the building and proceeded to ring the church bell for help. Fr. Jeannotte, who was eating dinner at the time, also rushed out to see if he could save some of the valuables from the inside of the church but found it impossible to enter the burning structure which even at that time seemed to be on fire from end to end. Despite the fact that the local telephone line was out of order due to an automobile accident which broke a telephone pole, communication to Fort Covington was secured via another line and the Village Fire Dept. in response to the call for help immediately despatched their fire-engine to the scene but were hampered by lack of water when they first came till a well was secured where sufficient water could be secured to keep the machine in operation. By this time, however, word had spread around the countryside and dozens of men gathered and formed a bucket brigade, and being forced to abandon any hope of saving the Church structure, turned their attention to saving the outbuildings of Mr. Gregor Leslie which were a scant distance of thirty feet or so from the burning building. Despite the intense heat from the fire when it was at its height, and with some help from the fire engine when it finally got going, the willing helpers saw their efforts crowned with success and the buildings saved.

Several local trucks also contributed in no small manner to keeping the flames from spreading by the efficient manner in which water was drawn for the bucket brigade, a considerable distance. By 3.30 the church, a brick-veneer edifice and the tower had completely collapsed into a smoking heap of ruins and twisted girders. The structure was built in 1928, when Rev. Father J. A. David was rector, and had very beautiful vestments and interior decorations.

The loss is estimated to be well over $30,000 and this is partly covered by insurance to the extent of $19,000.00.

It is understood that there is an indebtedness still remaining on the building to the amount of $16,000, so that the amount of the insurance will not go very far toward replacing the church.

Penicillin Provides Topic For Address at Rotary Club

Much Valuable Information is Given on This New Scientific Discovery

Most people are interested in knowing about the latest achievements in the world and when it is possible to learn more about them, are eager to do so. The Gleaner feels that in giving a short synopsis of the various outstanding speakers at the weekly luncheons of the Huntingdon Rotary Club, much valuable information is passed on to its readers. The speaker at the luncheon on Thursday was Mr. W. Harrison, of Ayerst, McKenna & Harrison Ltd., of Montreal, and his subject was "Penicillin," in which his firm is vitally interested.

Most people today are greatly interested in this new drug and have realized its tremendous powers of healing and in helping the medical profession to save life. While we have not covered the subject in full, we have taken exerpts which we believe will cover the story of penicillin so that all will have a better understanding of this latest of scientific discoveries. The story is as follows:

Penicillin

"Penicillin is a definite chemical substance. Its chemical structure has been clearly defined and it has been prepared in small quantities in pure crystalline form. The production of penicillin synthetically has been hinted at from time to time but no authoritative announcement has been made, and the sole source of supply is, therefore, obtained from nature, which uses a minute microscopic living organism to produce it. This organism is a little mould which is usually associated with a certain mushroom growth which is known technically and impressively as 'Penicillum Notatum', hence the name of its active principle 'penicillin.' There are brothers and sisters and probably some cousins of this little mould which also give off penicillin and perhaps other and even more effective substances in the treatment of disease which will come into use as their place in medicine is demonstrated. . . .

"Penicillin is outstandingly successful in the treatment of such well-known and dangerous diseases as acute osteomyelitis (a disease of the bone marrow), meningitis, pneumonia, gas gangrene, peritonitis, septicaemia (general glood infection), puerperal sepsis (which is responsible for so many deaths at childbirth), staphylococcus infections such as boils and carbuncles, gonorrheal infections, including those cases which are resistant to the sulfa drug treatment. . . .

"Penicillin has also been found to be effective in certain other diseases, such as syphilis and bacterial inflammation of the heart lining, although the full extent of its usefulness in these conditions has not been clearly defined.

History of Development

". . . Its discovery was made by Alexander Fleming, Professor of Bacteriology of St. Mary's Hospital in London, in 1929. . . . Dr. Flemgave penicillin its name and was the first to suggest that it might have clinical value if it were possible to produce it on a larger scale. Another scientist, Dr. Raistrick, of the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, undertook to produce it in some practical quantity. . . . He was unable to interest his medical colleagues in making clinical tests at that time, therefore Raistrick in 1932 published his work as a matter of record and turned to what were then more promising fields of investigation. Penicillin thus very nearly died a natural death, for it was not until seven years later, in 1939, that interest was revived at Oxford University by a group of chemists and biologists under the leadership of Dr. H. W. Florey, Professor of Pathology. To Dr. Florey and his group goes a vast amount of credit for the entire penicillin developments. . . .

"Because of the extensive bombing of England at that time, the manpower shortage and other contributing factors, England did not seem to be the place to attain the quickest results. Accordingly, the Rockefeller Foundation brought Dr. Florey and one of his associates to the United States to enlist help on the problem and they were at once sent to Peoria, Ill., where members on the staff of the Northern Regional Research Laboratory had had extensive experience in mould fermentations. . . . The story of how the methods of producing penicillin were successfuly developed under one of the most intensive drives that has ever been known in the field of scientific research (and which in fact is still going on) is indeed a living monument to those men whose lives are devoted to applying nature's secrets to man's benefit. . . .

"Dr. Fleming and Dr. Florey were both knighted for their outstanding contributions to science of such immediate and important value to the armed forces.

Weights and Potency

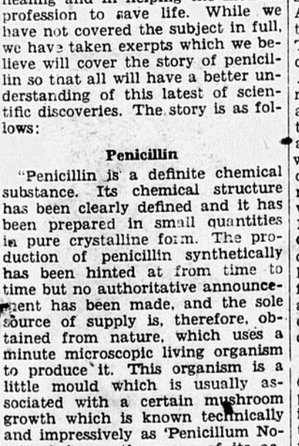

"In describing amounts of penicillin which are administered to patients, we talk in figures of hundreds of thousands and millions of units, but you would be amazed at what a little bit of penicillin there is represented in a million units. Actually there is just about ten grains of pure material.

"However, penicillin employed ordinarily is not in its absolutely pure form, so that there would be 50 to 75 grains with certain inert matter which clings to it which would be represented in one million units, and a million units is the total average amount required for the complete treatment of a severe case of septicaemia or osteomyelitis. . . .

"In the earliest days of penecillin production, the United States government paid $200 for one million units ($20 for a vial of 100,000 units), or as we have just said, for 10 grains of pure penicillin, and I think it is generally agreed that this figure did not actually cover the cost of production at that time. . . . Today the million units which formerly cost the armed forces $200 now cost the civilian hospitals in Canada about $9.50, and I should not be

RETURNS FROM OVERSEAS

SGN. A. M. ROWAT,
Athelstan, Que., arrived home on Sunday after more than three years overseas. Sgmn. Rowat was a passenger on the "Empire MacKendrick' sailing from Liverpool, and docked at Montreal harbor early Sunday morning after a ten days' voyage.

Town Council Meeting

An adjourned meeting of the Huntingdon Town Council was held on Thursday evening, but there was very little business to discuss. Aldermen Fawcett and Riel were absent.

A number of bills were read and passed for payment and the contract drawn up with the Dodge Construction Company with regard to work on the sewer and water projects was accepted on the motion of Alderman Warden and Alderman J. O. Lalande, and signed by Mayor W. E. S. McNair.

Mr. E. C. Martin gave a report on the results of the referendum on By-Law No. 254.

A light will be placed on West Street in the near future as soon as arrangements can be completed.

Loan Results Chateauguay West

With a view to keeping citizens advised as to the progress in Chateauguay West, we give the results of the first two days of the campaign, with the results in the 8th Victory Loan campaign for a similar period:

9th Loan

	Objective	Sales	Appl's
Ormstown	$185,000	$13,450	28
Howick	137,000	8,350	9
St. Chrysostome	80,000	500	1
St. Antoine	8,000	—	—
	$410,000	$22,700	38

8th Loan

Ormstown	$177,000	$ 8,800	18
Howick	130,000	11,500	21
St. Chrysostome	75,000	600	2
St. Antoine	8,000	2,100	4
	$390,000	$23,000	45

It will be noticed that while sales are approximately the same as in the 8th Loan, there is a falling off in the number of buyers. As the 9th Loan is really two loans in one, the War Finance Committee would like to see the usual cash buyers also buy on the deferred payment plan or the monthly payment plan. Victory Loan salesmen will be glad to have an opportunity of discussing these plans with you.

Seek Better Winter Wheat For Ontario

Researchers Make Progress in Development of New Strain

GUELPH, Ont.—(CP)—Progress is reported by the Ontario Agricultural College in its search for a variety of Ontario winter wheat which will have greater disease resistance, greater strength of straw, increased yield and resistance to sprouting in the stock. The work is being carried on to meet the objections to principal strains now being grown and develop the best possible strain for pastry flours.

Higher quality Ontario winter wheat brings a premium and can be shipped to the Pacific coast and still command the market over prairie hard wheat chemically treated to produce pastry flour.

In its research the O.A.C. made an extensive collection of the best winter wheat from all parts of the world and these were treated to determine to what extent they met the requirements. Coupled with this was the development of new strains by cross-breeding, using home-grown materials as a basis.

To speed up research the O.A.C. grows wheat in greenhouses under electric lights, enabling the production of two crops a year and cutting research time in half. One generation of plants is grown in the open field in summer and another generation in the greenhouse in winter.

Along with this there has been developed a laboratory for quality testing of the main varieties included in the project. There is also under way a program to determine the particular requirements of the major winter wheat areas in Ontario so that varieties may be produced which will fit into the particular climatic and soil conditions of these areas.

Other Projects

Projects similar to that in winter wheat are also under way with barley and oats, supported by malting and brewing companies interested in the development of a superior barley for malting.

New barley strains have been developed which have smooth awns and a high degree of resistance to stem rust and to mildew, two of the serious barley diseases in Ontario. At the same time, a definite advance has been made in the combining of a smooth-awned condition with good malting quality, a combination which was considered almost impossible a few years ago. Now the problem on which researchers are working is to obtain those two desirable characteristics in combinations with high yield, strength and straw and early maturity.

In the work with oats very definite advances have been made in producing new strains in which resistance to leaf and steam rust and resistance to smut have been combined in several varieties, while high yield and good strength of straw have been maintained.

The O.A.C. is also conducting far-reaching experimental work in co-operative crop testing. The objetive is to find the best variety of each type of grain for each climatic soil zone. In these test plots new varieties are given their initial tests and when one looks promising it is placed out with farmers to find the variety which best suits the particular type of soil where it should be placed eventually for commercial growing.

Chateauguay Day Programme To Feature "Welcome Home" To Returned Forces Personnel

Seventh Annual Occasion of Celebration at Ormstown High School, on Friday

The observance of Chateauguay Day at Ormstown high school will take the form of a "welcome home" to men and women of the services. Friday, Oct. 26, is the date selected this year and it is hoped that a large number of veterans will be present. Two addresses will be given, one by Major Grant Hollingworth, who has recently returned from overseas, and another by a representative of the Department of Veterans' affairs. Major Hollingworth will describe life in Great Britain during wartime and Mr. Suckling, director of the Montreal office of the Department of Veterans' Affairs, will describe the government's rehabilitation program. An opportunity will be given for discussion, so that those who have particular problems will be able to ask questions. Coffee will be served by a ladies' committee and the public is asked to bring sandwiches, cake, sugar and cups. Recreation will follow.

Trophies Will Be Shown

This is the seventh occasion that Chateauguay Day has been observed and the program is again sponsored jointly by the Ormstown Study Club and the Ormstown Protestant School Board. Speakers in previous years have included the late George Finlayson, Mrs. Robt. Elliott, Arthur W. Lang, Dr. W. P. Percival, Jean Charles Harvey, Dr. E. A. Corbett and Harry W. Spenser. As in the past, a museum exhibit will be arranged, including trophies of the present war brought home by local veterans. The program will begin at 8.15 and the public is welcome.

The Study Club's Mock Parliament will be held on Friday, Nov. 2, instead of the date previously announced. Following the successful mock parliament held last year, this function is expected to attract wide interest. The bill to be introduced for discussion will propose the removal of wage and price controls. The president of the club, D. J. McEwen, will act as prime minister, while the leader of the opposition will be John K. Dickson.

Ormstown Board of Trade Holds Interesting Meeting

Fire Prevention, Victory Loan and Rehabilitation Among Matters For Attention

The regular monthly meeting of the Ormstown Board of Trade was held in the town hall on Tuesday evening, Oct. 16. Two members of the Montreal Junior Board of Trade, Messrs. Morris and Neale, were present to show a film on the work of "Underwriters' Laboratories," an organization which tests most commercial equipment and appliances for safety against fire. As this program was arranged in connection with Fire Prevention Week, it was of timely interest, and the president of the Board of Trade, R. F. Corkran, thanked the visitors for attending the meeting.

Dr. T. J. Quintin, joint-chairman of the Victory Loan Committee, spoke briefly on behalf of the 9th Victory Loan and a loan film was also shown. Committee reports were presented.

The president announced the result of the voting on the new municipal by-law, authorizing the council to proceed with improvements in the water supply.

The chairman of the rehabilitation committee, Dr. Stalker, reported on plans to assist returning service men and women. He also announced that his committee would plan the program for the next meeting of the Board of Trade, on Tuesday, Nov. 20. A speaker from the Department of Veterans' Affairs will be present to answer questions on rehabilitation.

U.C. Members Armed Forces Feted

Special "Welcome Home" Evening on Saturday

A very happy event took place in the Huntingdon United Church, on Saturday evening, when the congregation gave a "welcome home" banquet and entertainment to members of the services from that congregation who have already returned home. Of the 52 who served from the United Church congregation 21 were present on Saturday evening. The congregation entertained these members of the services, their wives and parents. 79 sat down to the beautifully arranged tables and were served a delicious menu followed by the customary toasts etc. To say the menu was delicious is putting it mildly, for not only was it of the finest but of abundance, for to the guests almost 100 pounds of turkey was served.

During the evening, members of the congregation were pleased to hear the programme as prepared and presented by the choir. It was an all round fine evening and fully appreciated by all present. The Rev. Mr. Knowles stated that when others arrived home and if found possible to entertain them the congregation would undoubtedly be pleased to do it. Of the names of the 52 who served in the various services from this congregation, three paid the supreme sacrifice viz. William Munro, William Bowden and his twin brother Donnie. In respect to these three young men a minute of silence was observed followed by prayer by Mr. Knowles. Mr. Knowles further stated that a committee had been named to see about having a suitable memorial placed in the church to commemorate the heroic deeds of these three young men who paid the supreme price for King and Country. Special thanks are due the Women's Association, who assumed the responsibility of putting on the menu for the banquet, and its excellence.

MODIFY STAND

CHARLOTTETOWN, (CP)—Modifying a previous stand, Prince Edward Island doctors have decided to issue six-month liquor prescriptions according to their "conscience and practise." At the same time, they urged the provincial government to introduce government sale of liquor to remove the onus of issuing prescriptions from them.

31-4 Tons of Clothing Shipped

Splendid Response Obtained For Drive

The clothing drive which was sponsored by the Huntingdon Rotary Club in Huntingdon County, has met with splendid success and a shipment comprising 3¼ tons was sent to headquarters of the National Clothing Committee, in Montreal, on Saturday.

Mr. D. J. O'Connor, M.L.A., chairman of the committee for the Rotary Club, says that the appeal made by the churches in answer to a letter sent to each minister, obtained wonderful results. The general publicity given the drive was responsible for bringing in many smaller donations which totalled to a large amount in the aggregate, and after the amount mentioned had been shipped on Saturday, many more donations were still coming in. He also intimated that bundles of used clothing will still be accepted as there is a great need to obtain all possible. He is quite pleased with the response given to the appeal and wishes to thank all those who contributed and who helped in making this drive such a success.

Valleyfield Rotary Hold Ladies Night

Interesting Film of South America Shown

To travel 35,700 miles, 30,000 of which was by air, and visit 25 countries, all in 80 days, is in itself quite an accomplishment, yet that is what was done by Mr. Normand Holland, president of Brandram-Henderson, Limited. Mr. Holland visited Valleyfield Rotary Club on Monday evening, and for their pleasure and edification he screened technicolor moving pictures he took when on this extended business trip over South America. It was ladies' night at the Rotary, so they, like their husbands, were afforded an opportunity of seeing the pictures and hearing Mr. Holland. Mr. Holland's remarks were enlightening and entertaining.

Mr. Holland, being vice-chairman of the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children, spoke of the work being carried on in that institution. In order that the importance of the hospital work being carried on would leave a firm impression in the minds of the audience, he screened a film showing children being cared for in the Shriners' Hospital. The picture showed patients being admitted and the progress they made over a period of years. Mr. Holland wrote a book of his extensive trip over South America, and the gross proceeds from the book go to the benefit of the Shriners' Hospital. Several copies of the book were purchased at the close of the evening's enlightening entertainment.

A number of Huntingdonians accepted the invitation of the Valleyfield Rotary Club to attend this first ladies' night of the club.

Home Front Appeal Still Going Slow

The committee in charge of the Salvation Army Home Front Appeal in Huntingdon District are quite disappointed with the results so far obtained. They report that the amount obtained thus far, which is $730.00, is away below any received in previous campaigns. Last year an amount of $1200 had been collected before the campaign had been on as long as this one has.

It is hoped that a sum of at least $1,000 can be reached before the campaign is closed off. Nothing has been heard from Dundee, Elgin, and Athelstan and it is hoped that canvasses from these districts will have good reports to send in so that the general report will show as well as in previous years. This is not a war fund appeal, but purely one of help for work in Canada—or on the Home Front. If you have delayed with your donation, send it in without delay.

First Meeting F.A.O. at Quebec

Objectives of the Food and Agriculture Organization which opened its meeting at Quebec City on October 16, are in brief:

Raising levels of nutrition and standards of living of the peoples under their respective jurisdictions;

Securing improvements in the efficiency of production and distribution of all food and agricultural products;

Bettering the conditions of rural populations thus contributing toward an expanding world economy.

As provided in the proposed constitution, which will be approved or amended at the Quebec meeting, the Food and Agriculture Organization, the result of recommendations made at the United and Associated Nations conference on Food and Agriculture, held at Hot Springs, Va., in May, 1943, has a simple structure. There is to be a representative Conference, a director-general, and a permanent staff. In the representative council each nation, whether it be large or small, has one vote. Each of the 44 countries that were represented at the Hot Springs Conference and on the Interim Commision may become members of the permanent organization simply upon accepting its constitution. Other countries may be admitted upon the concurrence of two-thirds of the organization's total membership.

To Meet Annually

The representative Conference will meet annually. An executive committee of not less than nine nor more than 15 members to carry on certain work which the Conference may delegate to it, is proposed.

The director-general will be the principal official of the Organization and will supervise the day to day work of the permanent staff. He is to be elected at the meeting in Quebec and the headquarters of the Organization will be selected.

The plan to finance F.A.O., as the Organization is commonly termed, is that each member nation would be required to contribute a proportunate share of the budget. For the first year the total budget is estimated at $2,500,000, of which Canada will pay about five per cent. or $125,000.

At the meeting at Quebec the organization of F.A.O. is to be completed and policies discussed. The Organization on its formation will then proceed to serve primarily as a fact finding and fact disseminating body in the fields of food, agriculture and nutrition. It will have no power to direct or control the agricultural program of any member country, but it is expected to become a powerful influence in shaping world opinion on food and agriculture, and in advancing the progress of the industry.

Clarenceville Grange Meets With Maple Leaf Grange Here

Third and Fourth Degrees Given by Maple Leaf Grange Degree Team

An outstanding event that will be long remembered took place at the last regular meeting of Maple Leaf Grange, on Tuesday evening, Oct. 16, when 45 patrons of Clarenceville Grange chartered a Provincial Transport bus and were guests of Maple Leaf Grange at Kensington.

Last June, those same Grangers met with a disappointment in making their visit to Kensington, when the bus in which they were travelling met with an accident somewhere between Lacolle and Hemmingford, and they were obliged to return home; fortunately no one was seriously injured. However, not being daunted by this mishap, they unanimously accepted this invitation to meet with Maple Leaf Grange when degrees were to be conferred. Clarenceville Grange was instituted 11 years ago, being affiliated with Vermont State Grange, and having a membership of over 200 patrons.

The third and fourth degrees were exemplified by the ladies' degree team of Maple Leaf Grange, with Mrs. George Paul as degree master. Miss L. M. Murdock had charge of the tableau work and Mr. Ernest Salter acted as pianist. The soloists were Mrs. D. F. Grant, Miss M. Wilson and Mrs. E. Salter. Ten candidates received the degrees, including four from Clarenceville Grange.

National Deputy Present

The Grange was favored with a visit from the National Grange Deputy, Bro. T. A. Delancey, of Oswego, N.Y., who took an active part in instituting Maple Leaf Grange four years ago. Bro. Delancey, in his address, stated that this Grange had excelled all his expectations, and he felt well rewarded for his efforts. He also mentioned the kind hospitality of the Canadian people during his short stay here at that time. He also complimented the degree team on their splendid efficiency, and the introduction of patriotism along with their ritualistic work.

Bro. S. R. Blandford, Vermont State Deputy, residing at Clarenceville, was called upon and expressed his pleasure at being here on this occasion, and being able to meet a New York State Deputy, Bro. Roy Jarvis, of Burke, N.Y. He mentioned the long distance between the two Canadian Granges and hoped that before long many more Granges would be organized along the border line. He recalled a meeting with Bro. Delancey several years ago at a 5th Degree Grange meeting. Brief remarks were also made by New York State Deputy Bro. Roy Jarvis; Past N.Y. State Deputy Bro. Fay Hapgood, of Malone; also Mrs. Roy Jarvis and Mrs. Macabee, of Malone.

Born in Ontario

The W.M. of Clarenceville Grange, Mrs. Blandford, expressed appreciation of the warm welcome extended to them and also told the gathering that she was born in Ontario. Her father was a Granger, and at that time the Grange organization was strong in several districts of Ontario. She spoke of the advantages the present generation have in travelling about, and how our forefathers would never have dreamed of the following generation driving over 60 miles to attend a Grange meeting the same evening.

Refreshments were served at midnight by the hospitality committee, after which dancing was enjoyed by the two Canadian and United States Granges.

The patrons of Maple Leaf Grange are planning on a return visit to Clarenceville Grange in the near future.

Ninth Loan Campaign Opens With Results Coming in Slow

Sales and Amount Much Less Than Obtained in Same Period of 8th Loan

Results for the Ninth Victory Loan Campaign in Huntingdon for the period up to Tuesday noon show that 60 sales have been made and $31,900 was the amount purchased. This is considerably less than the results obtained in the same period of the Eighth Victory Loan, which amounted to $119,500, the total sales by canvassers amounted to 109 for $71,500.

The campaign in the Dominion as a whole amounted to $77,482,950 for the first day, as compared with $67,785,300 in the Eighth Loan. Thus the campaign got off to a good start as far as the whole of Canada is concerned.

The results received by the Huntingdon War Finance Committee up to Tuesday noon are as follows:

SHIPPING SHORTAGE TO DELAY MIGRATION

LONDON, (CP)—One million persons wanting to emigrate to the dominions and colonies may have to wait months and even years because of shipping shortage. Every day 250 fresh applications are made at the High Commissioner's offices in London and another 250 inquiries are made at shipping companies and travel agencies.

An official of the Ministry of War Transport said: "Until demands of men and materials in Europe and the Far East have ceased it will not be possible to arrange for normal travel."

AUSSIES FIGHT SOIL EROSION

CANBERRA, (CP)—Australia has suffered much from erosion, both by wind and water, in recent years. Water erosion has gullied vast areas, especially in New South Wales, and the wind storms have blown a good deal of the continent into the sea.

The first large-scale test of contour conservation has been started at Gulgong in New South Wales, in the heart of the erosion area. It includes the making of seven miles of grassed waterways, the contour banking of 50 acres and the pasture furrowing of 800 acres.

Fire Completely Destroys St. Agnes R. C. Church

THE above group of pictures show various stages of the fire which completely destroyed St. Agnes Roman Catholic Church on Sunday afternoon. This church was built for around $30,000 in 1928, and a portion of this amount is still outstanding in the sum of $16,000. The building was insured for $19,000. In the lower right hand picture is seen the Fort Covington fire engine which answered the call for assistance and helped in keeping the fire from spreading to adjacent premises.

Huntingdon, Wed., October 24th, 1945

Streets of Huntingdon Still Safe

DURING the latter part of the past week rumours have been prevalent that several young girls and women have been attacked or chased and the police have had some busy nights running down the complaints that have come to their notice. However, there is no truth to the reports that have been received and the police still believe the streets of Huntingdon are quite safe for the women.

Several reports were investigated and one young girl who was frightened said she heard some leaves rustling and although it was reported she had seen a man, she says she did not but imagined there was one. One young fellow whose name was given to the police as a suspect, was with the police at the time when another girl was supposed to have been attacked by him. Thus this young man had an alibi and a good one as the police were questioning him with regard to having molested women before, and the young man was quite frightened as several men had chased him because they had been told he was responsible for all the frightened women. Several cases were reported to the police during the latter part of the past week and in every case the ones supposedly attacked have said that there was no truth to the reports. The police moreover have not been able to trace any incident that had even the flavour of an attack. One man who was supposed to have been attacked, laughed loud and long when approached by the police, and admitted that he had made up the story.

Such stories at a time when the nerves of the women are on edge, does not help matters for the police nor do they make them feel safe on the streets. The police have informed The Gleaner that they can find no reason for all the rumours going around regarding these recent attacks and have asked us to pass along this information in order that the fears of the women and young girls can be allayed and confidence restored in the safety of the streets of Huntingdon from unknown attackers.

It is possible that the women have become afraid on account of reports from other towns that such occurrences have taken place. They can rest assurred, however, that all precautions are being taken by the police to take care of any such outbreak if it should occur in this town.

Why We Should Buy Victory Bonds

THE Ninth Victory Loan Campaign opened on Monday morning and it should prove just as successful as any of the previous ones. If you have that feeling that the war is over and we do not need to bother any more about buying Victory Bonds—forget it. The need is just as urgent and the offer is every bit as attractive as it was during the war. Some people who have bought Victory Bonds through deductions from payroll and on the deferred payment plan, would never have saved this money in any other way. It has provided a means for people to save their money and it still provides this means. The only difference in this loan is that everyone will have twelve months in which to pay for their Victory Bonds and in this way they should be able to double the amount of their purchases. That is if they bought a $100.00 Bond in the last loan which gave them six months to pay, they should be able to buy a $200.00 Bond in this loan because they have twelve months in which to pay. In this way their savings will be kept on the same basis. Besides being a means of saving money that might otherwise be spent for things not needed at the moment, Victory Bonds provide the soundest investment that anyone can make.

The Financial Post gathered together several opinions on the question "Why Must We Buy Victory Bonds?" and The Gleaner has picked out three that are considered the best, for reproduction in this column. We believe the content of these expressions of opinion will provide sufficient reason why all should buy Victory Bonds in this, the Ninth Loan.

J. G. PARKER
General Manager, Imperial Life Assurance Co., Toronto

The most forceful argument in selling this victory loan is that "this loan is for Canada". The loan is a necessity—for our boys now in the forces, for our boys in the hospitals, in schools, in vocational institutions, for the blind, for the maimed, for the paralyzed, for the dependents of those who gave their life for Canada. Furthermore, Canadians are good enough businessmen to know that they must immediately extend credit to their old customers to preserve them as customers. This loan is credit for Canada.

ERNEST G. ROBINSON
President and general manager, Jenny Lind Candy Shops Ltd., Toronto.

In selling our employees the Ninth Victory Loan bonds, we will stress strongly the imperative necessity of each individual continuing the "saving habit" learned so arduously by himself and hundreds of thousands of other Canadians during the war years. In this connection, we would point out such salient features as the following:

(1) Thousands of Canadian citizens have, since the war began, developed into steady, consistent savers and have joined the ranks of other bondholders with a definite financial stake in this country.

(2) Such Canadians have created for themselves a measure of security and laid the foundation for sound economic planning for the future.

(3) Money thus invested will help stem the tendency of inflation which conceivably could disrupt our whole price structure and indubitably the living of every Canadian.

But, above all, we will emphasize the importance of no backsliding from a worthy custom acquired during the war which has transformed the lives of thousands, giving each one a new sense of security, independence and even affluence.

CHARLES SMART
Former editor, The Times, Morden, Man.

I believe the most forceful argument in selling the next victory loan will be that of impressing upon the people more strongly than ever that this is the safest investment in Canada. The argument advanced in the raising of previous loans that to win the war we must lend to the Government every possible dollar we can afford will be of no use in this campaign. But the plea that the savings of the citizens are absolutely necessary to pay for the return home of our active servicemen and their rehabilitation will weigh strongly with all our people.

One could go on and name many more reasons why Victory Bonds should be bought in this loan just as much as any during the time the war was on, but we believe the foregoing will provide plenty of food for thought. To those, therefore, who have had the feeling that they do not need to buy Victory Bonds, we suggest that they think the matter over very carefully and decide to keep on with their regular purchases and double up.

A Wartime Service Passes

ALTHOUGH it was known that at some time or another when war was over, the Huntingdon Soldiers' Club would have to close its doors, it was with a feeling of regret that the announcement to close the doors on Thursday last was received. During the past year the club had not been as well patronized as when the Chateauguay Barracks was a basic training centre. For one thing the number of personnel at the barracks during the latter time has not been so large as it was formerly. In the training centre days upwards of 1500 men occupied this khaki village. Naturally they sought amusement and attractions in the town during their off hours. While the Soldiers' Club has only been in operation a matter of a little better than three years, it has proved a boon to many a soldier who was stationed at the centre in Huntingdon. Facilities were placed at his disposal so that he had a quiet place to read or write letters, to play a few games, or to enjoy the home cooking provided at the club and served to him by the ladies of the town in a cheery manner. The lunches were served at a small cost, but all other services were provided free.

The people of Huntingdon were proud of this club and gave freely toward its upkeep, the ladies who served night after night during these years also gave their services without remuneration. That the men who patronized this club during their stay in Huntingdon appreciated it was amply recognized by the many letters received by the officers from these men when they left for other parts. Many people visiting Huntingdon from other points made it their business to ask all about it with an eye to perhaps opening something of similar nature in their own towns. Many mothers wrote words of appreciation for the services that had been accorded their sons and which they had written home about.

There is no doubt that this club exerted much influence on the lives of the men passing through the Chateauguay Barracks, who were perhaps lonely and homesick, but which the atmosphere of the club dispelled at least momentarily. There is no doubt that Huntingdon added to its good name through the words of praise that were given by these same men after they had gone on to other places.

While it is regretted that this club had to be closed, we believe that it carried on its duty while there was still a duty to do and it was known that some day it would have to cease its activities for its usefulness would have ended. The workers who gave of their services, the officers of the club who watched carefully the organizational matters and financial interests, the people who made donations in any way, may all feel quite proud of the record achieved and are deserving of the thanks of the entire community for carrying on the Soldiers' Club during the three and one-half years of its existance. There have been some trying times in a financial way, but outside of the initial donations, and one appeal for funds, there was never a further call on the general public for assistance with which to carry on. For an enterprise of this nature which was not meant to make a huge profit, but only sufficient to carry on, such a record is one that both the officers and the public can be very proud of.

The Soldiers' Club should therefore go down in the history of the Town of Huntingdon as one of its most successful wartime services.

Small Majority Votes For Liquor Store

AS is known, the results of the vote on By-law No. 254 gave a majority of 80 in favour and it is supposed that in due time there will be a Quebec Liquor Commission Store in Huntingdon and that Grocery Store permits will be granted to those making application for them. While it is known that this newspaper does not favour the results that the vote attained, this is a democratic country and what the majority says is the rule and we must abide by it.

There is one thing, however, and that is that if the privileges granted under this By-law are abused in any way and they come to the notice of this newspaper, it will not be slow in bringing them to the public attention. It is known that when similar circumstances prevailed some years ago, there were abuses and such may occur again. If they do, this newspaper will make them public if known and make an effort to see that proper measures are enacted to have them stopped. That also is a democratic privilege and we believe that in the best interests of the people it is up to the community newspaper to see that such interest is properly looked after.

We also look upon the vote as a warning for the people of Huntingdon to be on their toes at all times in matters of municipal interest and the general harmony of the people. There must be more far-sighted voters in the future and there must be those who will have the courage to vote on the issue and not be persuaded to vote against their better judgment. We trust that we shall never have cause to regret the decision made in this referendum and we trust that we shall not be called upon to make public, abuses of the privileges that will be granted as a result of it. It will take a very honest man to carry out the law in all its sense at all times as to the selling of the commodities that he will be privileged to do. But if he does the job conscientiously and honestly, he will receive the backing of this newspaper insofar as that part of the bargain goes. No doubt many of the citizens will be watching this matter very closely at all times and if the vendor is wise he will not try to abuse the privilege granted no matter from what direction the pressure may be brought to bear. If the situation is under rigid control at all times, it is just possible that no more harmful results than formerly will accrue, but if abuses are allowed, conditions may become deplorable.

THIS WEEK at OTTAWA

(Written Specially for The Huntingdon Gleaner)

OTTAWA. (CP)—Canada's House of Commons has turned from pressing domestic problems long enough to stamp its approval on a document of global significance—the United Nations Charter for future world peace. But though actual approval was unanimously given, there were speeches of criticism during debate and at one point an open move to block immediate endorsement of the plan framed by the United Nations at San Francisco.

Commons approval does not mean that Canada's weight as a nation is yet officially behind the Charter. It must get Senate approval, probably this week, and then will go direct to the King for Royal Assent.

Arguments that the Charter was not perfect were heard from all sides of the House during the two days it was debated. CCF Leader Coldwell, who attended the San Francisco Conference, believed it had been outmoded by the atomic bomb, but supported it. L. R. Beaudoin, a Liberal from Quebec's Vaudreuil-Soulanges constituency, said he realized he was supporting adoption of universal peacetime military training and universal compulsory wartime service, but he too urged its adoption..

Without Protest

The main opposition came from Social Credit Leader Solon Low. He declared that in all 111 articles of the Charter he could find no clear specific provision for the preservation of the Christian principles of the sanctity of human personality, no bill of human rights, no protection of the individual against tyranny.

Mr. Low proposed an amendment suggesting a one-month educational program to acquaint the people of Canada with the contents of the Charter, after which it would be re-discussed. Speaker Gaspard Fauteux ruled the amendment out of order and when Mr. Low appealed the House supported the speaker 155 to nine.

Even Justice Minister St. Laurent, one of the Charter's two Canadian signers, who piloted it through the Commons, said "everyone agrees there are things in the Charter which we deplore."

But when the resolution was put to the House not a voice was raised in protest of its passing.

Debate on the Charter was interrupted long enough for the Progressive Conservative party's chief financial critic, M. J. Macdonnell, to deliver the main opposition blast against Finance Minister Ilsley's recent budget. Chief faults he found were antiquated taxation methods, failure to relieve the low income tax payers and failure to curtail extravagant expenditures.

Launching his lengthly criticism which led off the budget debate with Mr. Ilsley still absent on a bond-selling tour in the West, Mr. Macdonnell moved an amendment to the budget motion. It was an amendment which had the effect of a want of confidence motion and would declare the House's regret that no effective plan had been proposed to ensure full production and employment, that no satisfactory policy had been announced for elimination of "extravagant governmental expenditures" and that no adequate provision had been made for immediate relief of people in the lower income brackets from excessive taxation. The vote on the Progressive Conservative, and any other amendment that may be introduced, won't come until the debate ends.

Labor Troubles

Labor was still Canada's sore spot of the week and Labor Minister Mitchell still the capital's busiest man. He spent several days in Toronto meeting with representatives of the Ford Motor Company of Canada and striking United Automobile Workers (CIO) of its Windsor, Ont., plant. But at the week's end he had to report to Parliament that a compromise suggestion he made for settlement had been turned down by both parties and the strike was still on.

The labor minister said, however, he asked both sides to give further consideration to his compromise. Mr. Coldwell suggested a Dominion controller for the Ford plant, such as had been put in control of packing plants across the nation. But to this the minister made no direct answer, saying a "willingness to come together and talk" was essential to a settlement. It was indicated there would be further negotiating to get the big plant back ino operation and get the post-war cars rolling.

Meanwhile, the labor department said the scale of available jobs and available manpower was quickly levelling off. So much so in fact that post-war work projects now are required in the Maritimes to relieve unemployment.

By October 9 the number of available jobs had dropped to 145,600, a reduction of 10,500 from two weeks previously. At the same time the number of unplaced workers in Canada had risen to 133,000, an increase of 9,000, and one that was partially attributed to a speed-up in demobilization from the forces.

The demand for building tradesmen and general construction workers continued high throughout the Dominion, but a shortage of important materials was creating a serious bottleneck.

The Nazis' sins are coming home to roost. The gigantic crime committed against society by the Hitler gang is to be paid for—at least in part—by the punishment of the leaders of the group which led Germany down the path to ruin and seduced their Axis partners to go with them.

Nearly all the old gang except Hitler were rounded up for the beginning of the war crimes trial of 24 of the top men who helped start Germany's war. Himmler and Goebbels were also absent—unavoidably and for the same reason. But from the triumvirate down the ranks, the rest were named in the indictment brought by the Allies against Germany's gangsters.

This indictment is something new in international history and an important building block in the structure of world peace. For one, the greatest crime of all is to be paid for in a court of law in the manner of civilized nations.

Cynics had predicted Hitler and company would escape scot free as did the Kaiser after the First Great War and it is fairly well established that many of the men now standing trial thought that if they lost the war the Allies would again be capable of forgetting the day of retribution.

Not only have the ringleaders been rounded up to pay the consequences of their acts, but there are indications now that Russia, for one, may insist on trying every member of the Nazi party as a war criminal. Seizure of master file of 8,000,000 party membership cards by Allied investigators would facilitate the task of sifting out Nazis from the German population if such a colossal task is seriously undertaken by the Allies.

But even without such a thoroughgoing purge of the huge party's small-fry membership, the forthcoming Nuernberg trials will be fair, square warning to dictators of the future that no longer will the vanquished aggressor be shipped to a Doorn or an Elba to end his days reminiscing on his past. A legal precedent will have been set for the punishment of global evildoers.

Violence flared in two South American countries—in Venezuela, on the northern coast of the continent, and in Argentina in the south.

A revolutionary junta, which announced it would follow a democratic line, unseated President Isaias Medina Angarita of Venezuela in a bloody uprising which cost 50 lives and left 100 wounded.

The seven-man junta came into power after young army officers, ranging from the rank of major down, rebelled against the Andinos, a military clique which had dominated national politics for a century. The new rulers promised a general election by direct, secret vote.

President Medina and Gen. Eleazar Lopez Contreras, former president who had announced his candidacy for the 1946-51 presidency, were reported under arrest and scheduled to face swift trial on charges of graft and fraud.

A state of siege existed in the capital, Caracas, after the revolution broke out on Friday. Newspapers were censored, radio stations closed, transport paralyzed and electric current shut off. Thousands of civilians began to loot homes shortly after the government fell.

Mobs also ruled in Buenos Aires after Col. Juan Peron, forced out of his dictatorship last week by an army revolt, returned to power through the support of labor unions he had formed. After a 24-hour general strike groups of irresponsible and rowdy young men were in possession of the capital's streets.

Later calm ruled but beneath the surface the political pot was still boiling. While the reaction of the dictatorship's adversaries to Peron's return to power was feeble because of unpreparedness, there appeared to be a great body of the population opposing him. Correspondents say it is not clear to what extent he enjoys the support of labor but it is clear that whatever support he has comes from the working class and in general from the humblest and rowdiest elements in it.

The United States has stepped in with an offer to settle peacefully the rebellions of natives in French Indo-China and the Dutch East Indies.

In making the offer, John Carter Vincent, director of the U.S. state department's office for Far Eastern affairs, said the States does not question French sovereignty in Indo-China or Dutch sovereignty in the East Indies. It was not the intention of the United States to participate in enforcement measures but it would be prepared to lend its assistance in efforts to reach peaceful agreements in the disturbed areas.

At the same time Mr. Vincent recalled a policy declaration by former state secretary Cordell Hull last year that countries should help dependent peoples in their charge "to prepare themselves for the duties and responsibilities of self-government and to attain liberty."

Mr. Vincent's statement on Indo-China and the East Indies was the first from a state department policy-making official since native unrest flared in the two colonies and native leaders demanded independence.

From Washington also came news that the United States has averted an immediate showdown with Russia over the issue of a control commission for Japan. The state department announced that the first meeting of a Far Eastern advisory committee representing 10 countries, including Canada, has been postponed from Oct. 23 to Oct. 30 because of delegates' travel difficulties.

This gave President Truman and other leaders of the Big Three powers at least a few more days in which to try to iron out critical differences over post-war settlements, disclosed at the recent foreign ministers' meeting in London.

OPINIONS Of Others

HURTING THEMSELVES

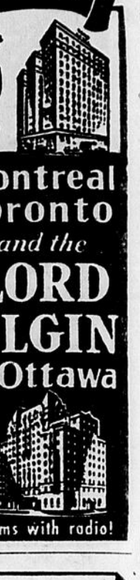

By delaying conversion of industry, strikers are hurting themselves. A factory cannot stop turning out tanks one day and start turning out automobiles the next. It has to be re-tooled and re-equipped, and this cannot be done during a strike. And until it is done the factory certainly isn't going to absorb any great number of men on civilian production.

Higher taxation and inflation will result if strikes continue and spread. Today everyone is conscious of shortages, and everyone looks forward to normal conditions when the dollar will buy what you want it to buy. Industrial strife not only lowers the buying power of that dollar but it postpones the day when a devalued dollar can be put to use. At the same time it throws added burdens upon the community which will of course be reflected in higher taxation.

Labor leaders, in these days of demands for shorter hours and higher wage rates, are loudly declaring that industrial companies have enormous profits made during the war and that the demands therefore can be readily met. They do not tell their followers that the greater part of the war profits were paid to the government in taxes, that shareholders received less than in pre-war years, and that whatever money is remaining is needed to rebuild and replace plants and machinery wasted by war or rendered obsolete by competitive advances.

I've Just Had a Talk with Myself . . about Me and this Victory Loan

A LOT OF CANADIAN PEOPLE are asking themselves two questions today:

1. Is a Victory Loan necessary? and

2. (If it is admitted that there is a need for money to be borrowed at this time) Do we actually need a billion and a half dollars?

As most of us are interested in the first person singular, when we get down to brass tacks, let us talk about what will be done with the billion and a half dollars we are being asked to lend in this Ninth Loan; and how it will affect us—each one of us, personally—if the money is raised, or is not available, in its relation to the first person singular . . . . Me! From here on let us suppose that the "I" talking to himself is "me"—you and me.

"Perhaps I can get at the best basis of looking into what money is needed now, If I examine the reasons, very briefly, why I lent money to the government for the prosecution of the war. Broadly, there were three basic reasons and these were:

"1. If Germany wins this war I won't have anything I can call my own. Therefore, it's up to me to help in every way I can. We must have money to defeat Germany, so I'd better let the government have my savings; I'll get them back anyway, with interest. We can't let the Empire down. The Germans think they can lick us. They thought so before. We'll show 'em, etc.

"2. Everyone is making big money now, but goods are hard to get. If all of us keep trying to get goods and keep offering more money for them, prices of these goods are going to skyrocket . . . in spite of government controls. If they do, that means what dollars I have in my pocket are only going to be worth 75 cents, or 50 cents, or even less, as the prices climb over the level of cost prevailing when my wages were set. That's what they mean by inflation. This means that instead of having three thousand dollars saved when peace comes, I'll have, actually, fifteen hundred dollars, or less, in actual buying value, based on what I thought I was going to have when I started to save. Besides, if I put this money into savings it will be that much less buying pressure, which is the force that sends prices up and the value of my dollar down. Besides, I'll be getting interest that will make my three thousand grow.

"3. When this war is over I'm going to need money to get a lot of things that are wearing out that I can't replace now, so I've got to save some money. Victory Bonds pay good interests. Okay, I'll put all I can into Victory Bonds.

"That's stripping thinking down to its selfish essentials. These reasons do not take into account the feelings I had about helping my country, nor about the pride I took in seeing that my community held a proud place in Loan contribution. Nor about the obligation which I realised and accepted to the boys from our neighborhood who put their lives on the line and whom I had to back up. Everyone of these were powerful influences in making me buy, too. But, the above three satisfied me that I was looking after my own interests, while fulfilling my duties as a citizen and answering the dictates of my emotions.

"But now the kid next door is on his way home. We've licked Germany; but good. And the Japs are right where we want them, too. War industries have had contracts cancelled so we don't have to pay for munitions . . . well, at least only for our army of occupation, and that won't amount to a hill of beans compared to what we've had to do. Sure, sure, we have to pay transportation for the fellows coming home, and pay them and look after them when they get here. But we put a lot of money into the Eighth Loan, six months ago. Surely, we don't need A BILLION FIVE HUNDRED MILLION so soon? I hear we have to lend a lot to other countries. Sure, it's tough to be cold and starved, and I don't want anyone to get hurt if I can help; and I have helped and am helping with clothing and Red Cross and all the rest. But why do we have to lend them millions of dollars, even if they were good customers of ours and bought a lot of the surplus goods we made but couldn't use ourselves? The war is over. I'm going to need my money to buy a lot of things that I've been saving for during the war. No telling when they'll be on the market and I want to be ready to buy. Besides, look at all the money that will be collected by taxation. I'm still paying income tax and so is everyone else. Won't that money fill a lot of the needs?

"I'm not complaining, but I want to know. I want to stand behind the people in all the armed services and see them get a square deal. I want to see Canada come through the peace as she did through the war: with flying colours; because Canada is me. If she really needs the money, I want to help. But first of all I want to KNOW that she needs it.

WE'RE STILL IN THE WAR

"I was reading the other day that the Government has not been able to issue a complete breakdown of how the money from the Ninth Loan is to be spent, but one of the most level-headed talkers of commonsense on money matters gave a conservative analysis of what he thought would be needed in the next year for Canada to get started right on a peacetime basis, so that she could avoid unemployment and another depression.

"He says in the next 12 months, starting November 1st this year, Canada will need three billion 900 million dollars to cover expenditures which are necessary and vital. He thinks that taxation will remain about the same for the 12 months and that the revenue collected by taxes will cover about half that amount. That would leave a balance to be borrowed of about 1 billion 900 million dollars to cover the outlays necessary from November 1st, 1945, to November 1st, 1946.

"He divides the outlays into two groups which he calls "Outlays for War and Reconstruction" and "Regular Outlays". In these groups he estimates that 2 billion 700 million dollars will be required for War and Reconstruction Outlays and gives us some idea of how that amount will be spent.

WHEN THE BOYS GET HOME

"First of all he estimates that 900 million dollars will be required in pay and allowances, gratuities and re-establishment credits to returning men and women of the armed services. That's a lot of money. It is almost half of the total amount Canada will have to borrow and is about one quarter of the total expenditures which he estimates for the year. I'm all for it and I'm glad to know just how big a part it plays in the picture, for I did not think it would be that much. This man stresses—and I certainly agree—that this is our first responsibility.

"The next part of the War and Reconstruction expenditures covers one of the points I mentioned in the foregoing, namely, lending money to other countries: This man points out that during the war years, under our Mutual Aid plan, we transferred large amounts of munitions, food, raw materials and other things to Allied countries. This plan made it possible for them to get things which they had to have in the war against our common enemy when circumstances made it impossible for them to pay for everything they needed. That plan has come to an end with the end of the war. But the British Isles, France and other countries still urgently need food, raw materials and supplies of all kinds. It will take years for them to recover from the devastating effects of the war without material and immediate assistance from other countries.

WHY LEND MONEY TO OTHERS?

"With all the problems facing us in our own country why should this condition of other countries affect us seriously then? I have known for a good many years that here in Canada we can use slightly more than half of what we can produce, when there is employment for everybody, and that the balance, three-eights of what we produce, had to be sold to someone else outside Canada if we hoped to keep everybody profitably at work. But I never realised, really, who that "someone else" was until I read this man's discussion on the importance of the second part of War and Rehabilitation expenditures. A very large part of the purchases of our surplus production that keeps us working full time is made by the countries to whom we are to lend money. In other words, they are very largely our "somebody else".

"As this man points out, we can do one of two things: First, we can ship to them only the things they can pay for as they get them. Or, we can lend them money to help them buy the things they urgently need, but cannot pay for until they manage to get their countries repaired and operating. And they cannot get into operation until they have the supplies which we control. So let's see what it means to ME if we do either of these two things:

"Suppose we refuse to supply these countries until they can pay for the goods as they get them. Two things happen. As these countries definitely have not the money or collateral at the moment to pay for goods, they cannot place orders with us. As almost fifty per cent of our production is sold for export, and these countries represent a large part of our export trade, Canadian factories would curtail production, which means lay-offs on a large scale. Thousands of us would suffer an immediate decrease in income. Many of us would lose our jobs; perhaps I would be one of these. The rapid closing off of export orders would cause a terrific loss of income to factories, workers and everyone dependent upon them for the custom which their orders and wages create. It would put quite a hole in the revenue of the country in income tax alone. No wages, no income tax. Most serious of all it would entirely upset our plans for an orderly change to peacetime living, creating as it would large scale unemployment with its consequent loss of revenue all round the business and government cycle.

"The other thing that would happen, of course, would be that the people of these countries would be in a much tougher position then, than they ever were before. But the main point is, even if I had no regard for the suffering of others, that the well-being of these people and their ability to buy things which I help manufacture means dollars and cents to me now and, it seems likely, for some time to come. I'd never thought of that angle before. Looks to me as though it would be sound business, as well as the Christian thing to do, to help them get on their feet again, especially as Canada is playing a part as one of the great nations of the earth, for the first time in her history, in attempting to rebuild a peaceful and prosperous world.

"Well, let's suppose we lend them the money to buy the things necessary to their living as human beings again. It will come back to us in wages and for the purchase of our raw materials and these wages mean that we will be employed steadily and have jobs for the boys and girls who are coming back into civilian life after many years of the hell of warfare. And it will help us to carry on until international trade—upon which we depend to take three-eighths of our production—gets back onto a normal footing again. The sooner these countries get back to the place where they need and can buy—and pay for—the things we have to sell, the sooner we can be assured here of a regular and sensible prosperity.

"This gentleman says his own "personal guess" at the amount that we would have to lend these countries, to protect our own incomes, in the year would be about 900 millions of dollars and is the second outlay of that amount in his estimate of War and Reconstruction costs.

THE CLEANING UP END

"His third group of outlays under this heading also amounts to 900 million dollars. This amount, he estimates, will be needed in transporting our troops home from all over the globe; to clean up the outstanding munition contracts; to meet the cost of providing food, clothing, medical, hospitalization and other supplies and services to the boys and girls coming home, until they are discharged; to the cost of maintaining our occupation forces and supplying them with equipment, and to other war costs which have not yet ceased, although the shooting has stopped. These three groups of 900 million dollars each total the 2 billion 700 million he mentioned as the total for War and Reconstruction outlays for the 12 months ending November 1st, 1946.

"900 million dollars! That's a power of money to talk about lending to anybody. But it's just as powerful an amount when I think of it as money being poured back into Canada as payment for wood and minerals and wheat, and meat and vegetables and all the other things of which we own so much; and in wages to provide jobs; steady, good paying jobs, in spite of the fact that the war has ended. I guess if there is anyway in which the government can put up money to create jobs, that's just about the soundest there is. To say nothing at all about the helping hand we'd pass out to folks like ourselves who happen to be unfortunate enough not to have been born on this side of the ocean.

"Yes, I like that proposition. It sounds straight and aboveboard. Now I can see that we can't go on making things to sell if our customers haven't the money to buy. Pretty soon there would not be any jobs, I guess, and then my savings would peter out in just trying to keep my head above water. If I lend my money now, it looks as though I'd have income in the future to buy things that I was going to buy with savings . . . and more savings later on, as well. But how about the rest of it, the 1 billion 200 million for "Regular Outlays"?

"This fellow says that the big items in this group of expenditures are: first, interest charges on the public debt (like paying the interest on Victory Bonds) that will take 480 millions. Next, Family Allowances 250 millions; payments to provinces under tax agreements, 85 millions and the regular expenditures of running the country amounting to something over 400 millions. That makes a total of 1 billion 200 million. Added to the war and Reconstruction total a grand total of expenditures for the next year is 3 billions 900 millions.

"Well, there it is. Makes a lot of difference in your thinking when you get the facts plainly spread out in front of you; a lot different than just taking a guess, or judging by your own feelings. Come to think of it, I guess the reason I wanted to be shown was that I had a feeling that a lot of controls would be lifted now that the shooting had stopped and that I'd be able soon to start spending money that I haven't been able to spend for five or six years. I didn't realise that we are still in the war up to our necks as far as many of our obligations go.

WILL WE LOSE THIS PEACE, TOO?

"I remember one thing, too, from the last war, that I wouldn't like to have to remember about this one: "We won the war, but we lost the Peace". Guess we quit fighting too soon last time. We just can not afford to do that again. Which brings to mind another thing this chap said about a secondary reason for the sales of Victory Bonds during the war. By taking money out of the pockets of people (where it was burning holes with a desire to spend) and putting it into savings the danger of inflation was removed. The fact my money is worth just about as much as it ever was is proof enough that the idea was sound. One of the reasons why I felt that I would be able to spend money now, was because I felt sure that the danger of inflation had passed. Of course, it has not passed. A little thought will show plainly that there is perhaps a greater danger of inflation now than before. Take my own feeling, for instance, that I wanted to get spending money; and multiply it by just about every other Canadian's desire to buy and spend; that desire that has been bottled up for many years; the shortages of many lines of clothing articles and certain lines of food; the huge amount of savings represented through all of us, in government securities and bank deposits, and the cause and danger of inflation can be seen to be present and very real. On top of that, take my own and everyone else's desire to be rid of war time restrictions and controls, and it becomes plain to me that the place for our money is in investment and savings where it is out of buying circulation long enough to relieve inflation-pressure.

"Looks to me as though I had every bit as much reason to buy Bonds now as during the war years . . . perhaps more pressing reasons. I'm certainly obligated to do all I can to see the people, who did my fighting on the fronts of this war, given every chance to set settled properly into civilian life. I've certainly got to do my part in seeing that we don't lose this peace. So, I've got to help provide money for the army of occupation; I have to see, as far as I am able, that we meet our debts in interest payments, etc.; I think it's only good sense to take out insurance on my income for the future by endeavouring to put the customers who keep me at work in a position where they can buy and pay for the goods I help make! I am bound to abide by the rules and put up with the inconveniences of rationing and other restrictions, which are imposed in my best interests.

"It all gets down to the question, I imagine, of whether it takes the booming of guns, the sacrifices of our boys and the tramp of their marching feet, and a threat to my personal liberty to bring out my patriotism and good citizenship qualities; of whether I can cooperate and dig in now when the going is really tough, without the casualty lists and stories of atrocities to stimulate me.

"I'm rather proud of the fact that I know the answer to that. It's easy for me to give my answer to all of the questions I've asked myself. I can answer and help in all of the problems by putting all I can into this Ninth Victory Loan. In the back of my mind, too, is the glow of pride I'll get—as I have always done before—when the nations of the world point in amazement and say: "Look! Canada Has Done It Again"!

Advertising Always Pays

It has been pointed out that advertising costs money. At the mention of that fact some people wag their heads and say, "Yes, we have to pay you advertising men every time we buy an automobile, a light bulb, or a stick of chewing gum." Many believe that the consumer is shouldering the burden of the producer's elaborate advertising.

For the benefit of those who still cherish that idea, let us take a simple illustration of the cost and effect of advertising. Suppose an automobile manufacturer is making 10,000 cars a year. By the utmost economy, let us say, he can produce those 10,000 cars at a total cost of $10,000,000—or $1,000 per car.

Suppose, for the sake of argument, that he can sell 10,000 cars a year without advertising. Suppose that, by spending $1,000.00 for advertising he can increase his annual sales to 90,000 cars.

To produce the minimum of 10,000 a year, he must have certain machinery, certain factory space, distribution facilities, and overhead expense. For the larger volume—because he is operating more efficiently, buying materials in larger and more economical lots, and working full-time instead of part-time—he can make 90,000 cars for $8,000,000. His production and advertising costs together will total only $81,000,000—or $900 per car, a saving of $100.

Some of that $1,000,000 for advertising may have been wasted, it is true. Possibly the manufacturer would have sold just as many cars if he had eliminated one magazine from the advertising campaign, and if he had used half-pages instead of full pages, or had he run his advertisements in two colours instead of four colours. It's impossible to say how much money he should have put into advertising to get maximum results. But the fact remains that advertising, because it has made possible a more economical production of goods, has cost the consumer nothing—has actually saved him money by increasing the efficiency of production and distribution.

The same logic applies to the manufacture and sale of almost anything you can name—cigarettes, radios, refrigerators, fur coats, pianos, stockings, typewriters. By increasing the production to an economical volume, the manufacturer can reduce the price per unit. With out advertising, his volume would be so small that the unit cost would remain high. Consequently, the consumer would pay more for the goods that were sold without advertising than for advertised products.

THE ROAD AHEAD

A Column for Service People

Must I pass a medical examination before I can take out a veterans' insurance policy?

No, except in a few special cases. In fact, a main purpose of veterans' insurance is to protect the dependents of those ex-service people who, because of impaired health, cannot pass the medical exams required by commercial insurance companies.

I have a chance to become a partner in a small radio repair shop. Can my Re-establishment Credit be used for this purpose?

No. Under present regulations, the Credit can only be used to help finance your own business or to help you buy one.

How soon after discharge must I apply to my former employer if I want my old job back?

Normally, you must apply within three months after discharge in Canada, or four months after discharge overseas.

Can I complete my matriculation under the rehabilitation program?

Yes. If your occupation calls for "matric," you may receive both a speed-up course and maintenance grants. You are eligible equally if you are preparing for university study. However, in this second case you would do better to foot your own bills for your preparatory work—tuition fees are higher at university, so it's a good idea not to exhaust part of your benefit period before you even get there!

What is "rehabilitation training?"

This term is often used in referring to the whole program of occupational training for veterans. Instruction is given not only in full-time (and part-time) classes, but also by apprenticeship, by training "on the job," and by correspondence courses.

Do I have to apply for a small holding under the Veterans' Land Act within 10 years after my discharge?

No; there is no time limit.

Where can I find out about veterans' insurance policies?

An easy-to-read booklet, "What's Ahead," tells the whole story. You can get a copy from the nearest office of the Department of Veterans' Affairs.

As a veteran, am I entitled to a job in the Dominion Civil Service?

If you have been overseas, and if you are preparing for university sition calls for, you will receive an outright preference over all non-veteran applicants. The veteran who has been awarded a disability pension is considered first.

Can I take a part-time job while I am receiving a training grant from the Department of Veterans' Affairs?

Yes. While you are training, you may earn up to $40 a month without your grant being reduced.

Can my Re-establishment Credit be used to reduce the mortgage on my house?

Yes. Apply to the District Supervisor of Re-establishment Credit at D.V.A.'s nearest office.

Is there any provision for loans to veterans who want to set up in business?

Not under the rehabilitation program. However, Re-establishment Credit—which is a grant, not a loan—may be used to help buy a going concern, purchase tools and equipment, or provide working capital.

Is it true that I am entitled to free medical and dental treatment for one year after my discharge?

Yes. Both services are provided through D.V.A.

Can I apply for my Re-establishment Credit to help pay the down payment on a small holding under the Veterans' Land Act?

No. You may apply for both vocational training AND a small holding. But the Re-establishment Credit is intended primarily for those who do not take advantage of either of these benefits.

The CRACKER BARREL by Politicus OTTAWA

CCF Falls in Manitoba

AFTER the big bid for power by the CCF in the Ontario provincial election and the federal general elections last spring, there was more or less quiet along the political front. Now the results of the voting in Manitoba are available, and the CCF has suffered its third major set-back in less than six months.

Political observers across the Dominion are drawing two conclusions from this event. Some are saying that the defeat of the CCF in Manitoba shows that socialism in Canada as represented by an organized political party can make no headway.

As an aside, it is interesting to have the ultra-Tory "Ottawa Journal" remarking that while the electorate rejects the CCF socialist party in Canada, it is prepared to accept socialist ideas when they appear in the program of the Liberal party. This is a phenomenon which alarms the "Otawa Journal," but we feel it is merely a difficulty of terminology. The Tories naturally think that everything which is of value to the masses of people is socialism!

But to return to the other kind of commentary resulting from the CCF defeat in Manitoba.

Fate of Third Parties

The case of the United States is being accepted as a useful and revealing parallel. Third parties south of our border have been fluid and temporary, nothing more.

Writing in the current "Political Science Quarterly" Frank Tannenbaum notes that United States political third parties usually last long enough to demonstrate that they really represent a considerable element in the voting population, and as soon as that becomes evident the larger and older parties tend to absorb them by taking over their programs.

There is evidence to support this contention. The Granger Movement was so absorbed; the Prohibition Movement and the movement for old age pensions met similar fates. These are but a few samples of that wide political process.

In the United States the large parties, in spite of their seeming narrowness and definiteness, says Mr. Tannenbaum, have survived because in the long run they are open to third groups as soon as such groups become important.

There is a similar response to public demand in Canada, particularly by the Liberal Party, and if there is any just basis for the fear of the ultra-Tories, that is it.

The historical record shows that, since Confederation, more people have favored the Liberal Party than any other party; or, to put it conversely, the Liberal Party has consistently presented programs which responded most closely to public demands.

No Budget Bombshells

Contrary to expectations, there were no major bombshells in Mr. Ilsley's budget, and the document has been very well received up and down the country. Taxes remain high, but they have come down some; expenditures remain high, but they have also come down.

It certainly was not the easiest of all budgets to prepare, and there is general appreciation of this fact. Nevertheless, the never-very-jolly Mr. Ilsley presented a document more cheerful than most or us had been led to expect. On the whole, the taxation tide has turned, and this is not unwelcome.

The Government has set up its new fiscal machinery to encourage the return of industry to its peacetime footing easily and to promote its capacity to increase production. This will have the effect of expanding the job lists throughout the country.

The budget has also indicated a reduction in the former huge Government expenditures, and the retention of safeguards against sudden and unmanageable inflationery trends.

Some long time ago the Government indicated that it would look with favour upon the creation and modest expansion of small businesses, since it had a conviction that a vast number of healthy small businesses are more conductive to a steady and effective political economy than a few huge industrial empires. To this end, the budget names very specific relief measures to encourage the founding and operation of small businesses.

Discussion of the budget will take place early in the Commons, and while some minor modifications can be expected, on the whole there is no reason to doubt that the Government policy will be acceptable.

Stunting the Monopolies

In keeping with this Government policy of promoting small businesses and restraining the huge ones, look for an increase in the efficiency quotient of the Canadian Combines Investigation Commission. For a long time this machinery has been in the department of labor, but it has now been transferred to the department of justice.

A special study of cartels and monopoly operations has been going on for the past year, and this study will now be examined by Justice Minister St. Laurent.

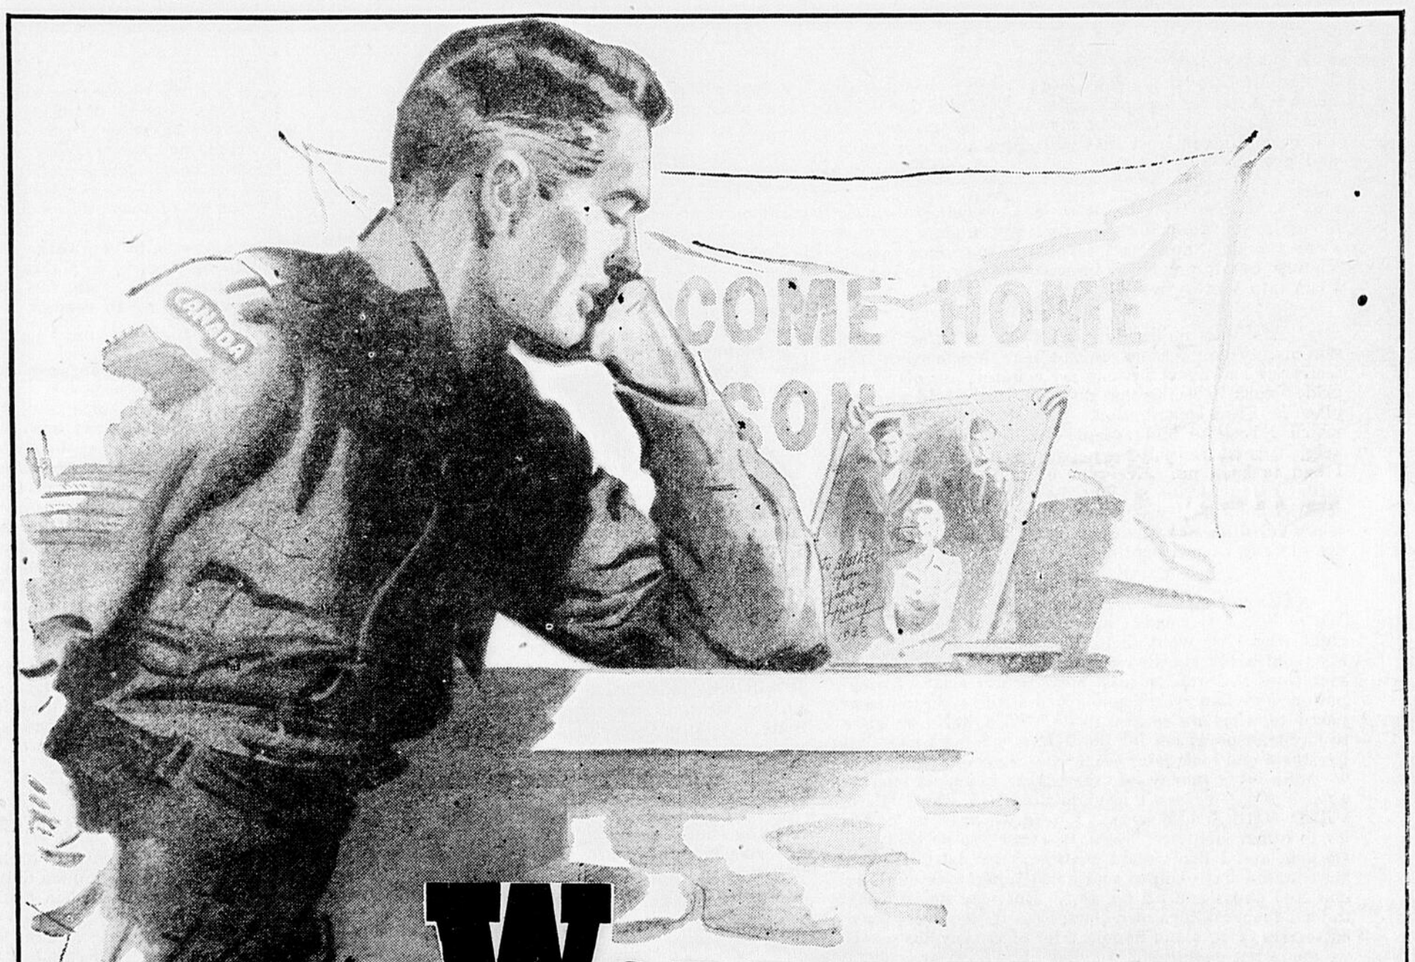

Another development in the CIC is the extension of its activities by the appointment of additional investigation officers. Some of these men—indeed, perhaps all of them—will be World War II veterans of high calibre.

In due course it is expected that this whole matter will come before Parliament, since some amendments to the Combines Investigation Act are expected. The debate on this will be extremely interesting, since the Government will be striking at th very heart of some of the famous Conservative strongholds throughout the country. The defence of Mr. Bracken and his boys should be good to listen to.

The day when big business consistently drove the locomotives and the little fellow rode the rods is past in Canada.

WORDS FAIL..

● Home at last! . . . words fail to express his feelings . . . and the feelings of those who for years have awaited this reunion. Words also fail in expressing the debt we owe to our fighting men. No words can measure our gratitude for the tremendous task they have completed. They are returning home now . . . their job finished. They have forever SIGNED THEIR NAMES FOR VICTORY.

But our job is not yet finished! Our duty is to see that these fighting men of today are given every opportunity to re-establish themselves as citizens of tomorrow. This duty every Canadian is eager to fulfill.

Scout Meetings to Re-commence

A meeting was held on Monday evening to re-organize the 1st Huntingdon Boy Scout Troop for the coming winter months. Twenty boys turned out for this initial meeting, and all showed great enthusiasm and interest. Boys must be 12 years of age before they can become scouts, and as there were a number under this age at the meeting, an effort will be made to form a Wolf Cub Pack for their benefit. The next meeting will be held on Monday evening next, in the Masonic Hall, at 7.30 sharp, and all boys interested in joining this organization should make a point of attending.

W.M.S. Thankoffering

The W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Church held their annual thankoffering meeting in the annex on Wednesday. Rev. Pritchard, of Ormstown, delivered an earnest address on "What we do, and what we should do." Taking the words, "Come," "Tarry" and "Go," he brought home to his hearers their responsibility, first in coming to God, tarrying with Him, and then going with the message to others to evangelize the world. Miss Mary Moody presided, and prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Maclean. The hymn, "Count your many blessings," was sung during the offering, by Mrs. McDermid, Miss Paul and Mrs. Bruce, accompanied by Miss Walker at the piano. Refreshments were served at the close.

Repairing Bridge

Repairs are being made on the Henderson Street Bridge in Huntingdon this week, and traffic is being routed by way of Fairview Road and the Lorne Avenue Bridge while this work is being done. New planks are being laid and it is a much-needed repair, as the traffic over this bridge, on account of the barracks, is considerable.

LEAVES ON TREES

Poets have long painted a dreary picture of autumn in terms of "melancholy days, the saddest of the year," accentuating the dismal aspect of this season. Yet it is at this time that Nature paints her autumn canvas, the most beautiful of all landscape scenes. For a long time, little was known about Nature's method of painting this picture of unforgettable loveliness; however, recent researches in plant physiology have uncovered many of her trade secrets and now her methods of producing this gorgeous spectacle are better understood.

The colors in plants are produced by two types of pigments. First, there are plastid pigments, so named because they are contained in small structures, called plastids. These pigments are chlorophyll, which is responsible for the common green color of plants, and the carotinoids, xanthophyll and carotin, which produce the yellow and orange tints. Then there are the red and purple anthocyanin pigments which may be likened to dyes dissolved in the sap of cells of the plant tissue. These anthocyanins are produced from sugar in the presence of sunlight.

During the summer, the yellow pigments are present in the leaves in small quantities but are hidden from view by the more abundant green chlorophyll. As the season advances, the low temperature of autumn retards activity in the trees and a process of slow death starts in the aging leaves. Soon the chlorophyll, the least stable of all the pigments, disintegrates and the green color fades from the leaves, leaving the yellow coloring matter unmasked. Additional yellow granules result from the decomposition of the green pigment and other substances.

Thus, the landscape is painted in tints of yellow and gold, the autumn coloration of the elms, poplars, birches, ash, and several other common species of trees. Yellowing of the leaves may be hastened by drought, as a consequence of which the yellow tints appear more quickly in seasons of low rainfall.

Meanwhile, another change initiated by the low temperature is in progress; a layer of cork cells forms at the base of the petiole, or leaf-stem, blocking off the vessels which carry the nutrients from the leaf to the stem. This corky layer, the point at which the leaf eventually is severed from the stem, constitutes an additional barrier to the removal of food material from the leaf and thus contributes to the enrichment of the leaf with sugar. Therefore, the most brilliant coloring appears when, in the autumn, cool nights alternate with sunny days.

RED IN SUNSHINE

Since the anthocyanins are produced best in direct sunlight, the sun-kissed side of apples and the most-exposed tips of leaves are reddest. In fact, the area of red color on a tree is sometimes sharply defined by the edge of a shadow.

The typical autumn hues of leaves sometimes appear even during the summer when premature, slow death and the enrichment of the leaf tissue with sugars follow drought, low temperature, insect injury or other wounds. For example, when a branch of a maple tree is partially severed from the tree in summer, the leaves die slowly, developing the characteristic red color of autumn. Also, under conditions of drought, the Virginia creeper commonly dons its reds and purples as early as August.

Nature mixes the red and yellow pigments in varying proportions, producing a gorgeous interfusion of tints and shades. But these pigments are all unstable and, as the season advances, they decompose and lose their color as did the green at an earlier date, revealing the drab brown tannins which are so stable they remain until the leaves rot on the ground.

This brilliant display of color can be produced only when the transition from summer to autumn proceeds gradually and without the occurrence of a severe frost. If the mercury drops to the level of a killing frost early in the season Nature quickly transforms the color of the autumn countryside from the green of chlorophyll to the dull brown of the tannins, omitting that beautiful spectacle so characteristic of a Canadian fall.

New Radio Heating

LONDON, Eng.—The world's first exhibition of another revolutionary United Kingdom development—radio heating—was opened in London recently. The new development enables radio energy to heat materials ranging from wood, glue and rubber to the hardest steel, or from powders and chemicals to wool and fabrics. It is based on the principle that radio energy can be passed right through many substances which are poor conductors of heat, and that if the radio currents are large enough, the materials will heat up internally at rates sufficiently high to meet the most rigorous demands. The system was evolved by scientists of leading United Kingdom radio companies during the war for the use of the aircraft industry. In order that the immense production schedules set up in 1940 should be met it was essential that there should be no bottlenecks. Thus, means had to be found of speeding the production of glued aircraft components and other vital parts by heating at much higher rates than those possible by ordinary means. Radio heating, which neither burns nor otherwise spoils surface layers, provided the perfect solution. The new system will play a still greater part in Britain's peacetime industry.

Rotary Club Has Planned Big Treat For Hallowe'en

Parade to Curling Rink and Entertainment And Treats For Children

The members of the Rotary Club are going to entertain the children on Hallowe'en and it is expected that this will be a big treat for the children of Huntingdon. In the past few years, and more especially this year, there has been much difficulty in obtaining candies and apples for the treats the children expect on Hallowe'en. Thus, in order to save the citizens worry in trying to provide something they cannot get, and so that the children will not have to forego the fun of Hallowe'en and getting treats, the Rotary Club has decided to stage a party for all the children.

A parade will be formed, with the high school band leading it, and the children will fall in behind in their costumes. This will take place at Prince Arthur Square, at 7 o'clock, and all children are invited to take part and join in the fun. The parade will march to the curling rink, where a couple of hours entertainment and treats will be provided for. Prizes will be given for the best costumes, comic and otherwise, so the boys and girls are asked to do their best to have costumes of some kind. The committee in charge promises there will be plenty of fun and also asks that the children do not go around bothering people, as this plan is especially for the purpose of providing the treats of the evening.

Children should start preparing for this big event now and be sure to be on time for the big parade on Hallowe'en, starting from Prince Arthur Square at 7 o'clock. Wednesday, Oct. 31, is Hallowe'en.

THIS WEEK

Specially Written for The Huntingdon Gleaner

QUEBEC—(CP)—A provincial by-election in Beauce county is on the books for Nov. 21, and what promises to be a spirited campaign got underway last week-end. Indications that the election may be viewed as a test of party strength and a key to future trends, are seen in reports in political circles that both Premier Duplessis and Liberal leader Adelard Godbout are to address meetings on behalf of their respective candidates.

Early this week, three candidates had been nominated to contest the seat declared vacant upon the resignation because of ill-health of Edouard Lacroix, who sat in the Legislature under the banner of the Bloc Populaire Canadien. They were: Octave Poulin, Union Nationale, Hon. Henri Renault, Liberal and J. Ernest Gregoire, Social Credit.

No Bloc Populaire candidate has yet been named, nor has that party given any hint as to whether they plan to contest the constituency.

Mr. Gregoire, former member of the legislature as a Union Nationale and a onetime mayor of Quebec, was chosen at a nominating meeting at Beauceville last Sunday. He said other parties in Canada were forming coalitions against advances of Social Credit. He spoke of the war and said that "the traditional parties, conservative and liberal," were responsible for both world wars. Neither the Japanese nor the Germans had provoked Canada, and besides, Japan even provided this country with products unobtainable elsewhere. He said that the allies were destroying Japanese and German industry so as to eliminate competition.

Hon. Wilfrid Hamel, Minister of Lands and Forests in the former Godbout cabinet, speaking at a liberal rally for Mr. Renault, stated bluntly that the by-election would be "a turning point in the political history of the province of Quebec," and added that on Nov. 21 the people would give notice to the government to be prepared to abandon power next year.

Party platforms for the campaign have not yet been clearly outlined but this development is expected shortly. Premier Duplessis in a press interview at Quebec early this month indicated that plans for greater rural electrification would soon be revealed, and this may be discussed during the campaign.

How Farmers Can Obtain Army Trucks

On October 30, the first official sale of army type trucks to farmers will be conducted by a joint committee representing the Quebec Council of Farm Forums, the Union Catholique des Cultivateurs, the Quebec Department of Agriculture, and the Canadian Federation of Agriculture in co-operation with War Assets Corporation, R. Alex Sim, secretary, Quebec Council of Farm Forums, announced this week.

The demand for the equipment is so great, Mr. Sim pointed out, that applications will be assembled by the U.C.C. and the Farm Forum Council. These applications will be placed in a draw and the names will be drawn out until the supply of trucks has been exhausted.

Those whose names are drawn will be notified and a certified cheque to cover the cost of the truck must be in to War Assets before November 9. The trucks released from Montreal will be ready for delivery on November 14, and those in Quebec city on November 16.

Those who are not fortunate enough to secure a truck in the first draw will have chances at subsequent draws which will be duly announced from time to time as equipment is declared surplus.

Application Forms Published

The procedure for securing application forms is as follows: Application forms have been published in a number of daily and weekly papers. These may be clipped out and used. Printed forms will be mailed to agronomes and Farm Forum secretaries as soon as they are received from the printers, by the middle of this week, it is hoped.

Only bona-fide farmers are eligible to apply for trucks. Their application forms must be co-signed by an agronome, a Farm Forum or a U.C.C. secretary to establish the identity of the applicant. Only one application for farm operator is allowed.

Two types of truck will be on sale on October 30, the 15-cwt. truck at the ceiling price of $330, and the field artillery tractor at the ceiling price of $280.

The Quebec Council of Farm Forums has put its facilities at the disposal of the Quebec farmers in carrying out this scheme in an effort to help farm operators who need equipment to obtain it at reasonable cost. The council is not in a position to vouch for the condition of the equipment on sale, and it is hoped that only those farmers who need the equipment, and can use it efficiently, will apply.

People of New Erin Fete Men Returned From Overseas

Welcome Home Party Held at Rod and Gun Club, Port Lewis

Saturday evening, Oct. 20th, marked a gala event in the history of New Erin, for on that date, her kindly people organized a dinner at the St. Francis Rod and Gun Club, at Port Lewis. This was the "Welcome Home Party" to L./Cpl. William Feeny, Sgt. Patrick J. Feeny and Tel. T.O. Allison Sparrow.

The manager and his staff deserve much credit for the delicious meal and the good service rendered to the thirty-eight guests.

Mr. B. A. Rankin, as Master of Ceremonies, spoke words of welcome and appreciation to the brave boys, who had gone forth to defend their country and expressed himself pleased to find them all re-united once more with their loved ones. He then called on Mr. Allen Hunter to propose a toast to the King, which he did in a very capable manner, recalling to mind the great sacrifices these boys had made to defend and protect us, who had remained here and enjoyed all the comforts of home. Then all joined in singing "God Save the King". Mr. C. L. Sparrow proposed the toast to the returned men. In a few well chosen words he thanked them for their noble work and was quite pleased to welcome them back home.

Sgt. Patrick J. Feeny replied most courteously, saying that he was surprised to learn that such an event had been arranged in their honor. He did not consider he had done more than many others, but felt that he and his brother William were among the lucky ones to get back and that he was delighted to meet so many of his former neighbors and friends and thanked all for their corodial greetings. L./Cpl. William Feeney also made a very suitable reply, thanking all for their kindness and told how he tried to locate another pal, Cpl. Ross Cameron, while in Italy, but was unsuccessful. To the bereaved family he expressed sorrow, that their boy was not among the number to return. Tel. T.O. Allison Sparrow said that work in the Navy was different and that he had been more fortunate than the other boys in getting home often.

Mr. Rankin asked all to stand and observe two minutes silence in memory of Cpl. Ross Cameron who had made the supreme sacrifice. F./O. Leslie Voisey was asked to say a few words. He said he was pleased to honor our boys on their return and thought that New Erin people must have a friendly spirit, which is rarely found in large cities. Mr. C. L. Starr, a Veteran of the last war was invited to speak. He said he was pleased to meet the boys and knew from experience that it would take them a long time to get accustomed to civilian life.

Mrs. Roy Murphy, a sister, of Ormstown, said that during the past year she had received many blessings, but the greatest of all was the safe return of her brothers; she knew well the grand neighborly spirit of the New Erin people and she expressed words of thanks and appreciation for all concerned. Miss Maureen Newell of Calumet Island, a niece of William and Patrick, was present to offer greetings and this she did in a delightful and charming manner. Mr. Richard Durnin welcomed the boys in a fitting way, also recalling to mind, how singular it was that we were meeting on the same shores, where the pioneers landed more than a century ago. He hoped the boys would be very successful in their new undertakings. He also offered a few consoling words to the Cameron family, whose son had not returned with the others, but felt that he had fulfilled his mission here, that he was happy and now enjoying a much better Home than any of us could offer him. Mr. Bernard Durnin spoke briefly, expressing his sentiments of pleasure and admiration for the returned man.

Messrs. Wilfred Daoust and Albert Chartrand addressed a few words of "Bienvenue" for the French Canadian Neighbors. They said they always enjoyed William and Pat's company and were happy to see them back home and able to join in their sports again.

Miss Ellen McCarthy read an address of Welcoome, in which she referred to William and Patrick's heroism, which no doubt had been inherited from their Gaelic ancestors, as history revealed that they were a brave, hospitable race. Mrs. James Smith of Chateaugay Lake, N.Y., read an amusing article on "The Experiences of a Young Soldier." Miss Rose McCarthy read a Salutation starting with the Irish "Cold Mille Failthe", "A Hundred Thousand Welcomes to New Erin", she also recalled the happy scenes of childhood spent under the roof of "The Little Green School House" at New Erin.

Space does not permit to continue an account of all that was said, but among others who offered words of welcome were: Mrs. B. A. Rankin, Mrs. C. L. Sparrow, Miss Mabel Brady, Mrs. Allan Hunter, Mrs. C. L. Starr and others.

Much credit is due Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Rankin, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Sparrow and Mr. Richard Durnin for they organized the most agreeable evening that has taken place here in many years, and one which will always remain a great event in the History of New Erin.

T.B. Test to be Given Cattle in This District

Exact Time of Test Not Known Yet

For a good many years Huntingdon County has been a T.B. Free area as to bovine tuberculosis. Periodically such free areas have to be checked over by the Federal Government Department of Agriculture veterinaries. The District Holstein Breeders' Club realizing that Huntingdon County should be tested before March 1, 1945, brought this matter to the attention of Mr. D. E. Black, M.P., through the Club secretary Mr. A. H. Crutchfield. The exchange of correspondence and interviews Mr. Black has had wtih Dr. H. Barton, Deputy Minister of Agriculture indicates that there was a strong possibility of the testing not being done, due to the fact that there is such a lack of veterinaries to do the work. It was hoped blood testing could be carried on at the same time but this will have to stand in abeyance for the time being. The most recent information Mr. Black was able to obtain is to the effect the T.B. testing will be done. The accreditation status for Chateauguay County stands good until May 1st, 1949.

In the course of information obtained by Mr. Black he was assured that when "blood testing" was done by the Federal Government Department of Agriculture, Huntingdon County would be the first county to be so favoured with a test.

Here's Quick Relief from

SINUS PAIN

3-Purpose Medicine Helps Clear Out Congested Sinus Areas

ONE best way to get relief from torturing sinus pain is to clear congestion from nasal passages and give sinuses a chance to drain. A few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol in each nostril is usually enough to bring this comforting relief.

3-Purpose Medicine . . . Va-tro-nol is so successful because it does three important things: (1) shrinks swollen membranes of the nose; (2) helps clear out pain-causing congestion and (3) soothes irritation. Many sinus sufferers say it's best relief they've found. Try it!

Dundee

The Roast Chicken Supper held in the U. Church under the auspices of the Board of Managers, Thursday evening, was a very successful affair exceeding financially any like affair held in recent years in this community. At 5.30 p.m. the tables were ready and the early comers, a large number of whom were from the U.S., sat down to a sumptuous supper of roast chicken, ham, etc. The total proceeds amounted to $243. This is an annual affair and the President and Vice-President, Mrs. Jos. Platt and Mrs. A. H. Fraser are very grateful to the members of the congregation and others who helped to make the event such a success.

Mrs. A. H. Fraser attended the Young People's Convention in St. Andrew's United Church, Westmount, Saturday and Sunday. While in the city she visited her cousin, Miss Ernestine Derick, of Montreal.

Several from Dundee attended the Sunday School Convention held Thursday at Athelstan, among whom were Rev. A. E. Hagar, Mrs. John Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Steven, Mrs. Jim Colquhoun, Mr. Archie Colquhoun and Mrs. A. H. Fraser.

On Tuesday, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Fraser motored to Henrysburg where they spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Cockerline and Miss Louise Cockerline. Mrs. Fraser remained for a few days with her parents. Miss Laura Cockerline also motored out with them after spending a few days with her sister.

Mrs. Gordon who was the former Miss Janie Fraser visited relatives here in Dundee a few years ago and part of her stay is being spent with her sister, Mrs. Lillie Howden, of Huntingdon. Mr. Gordon is a brother of Mr. Arthur Gordon and Mrs. Jessie Vass.

When it comes to fooling the wily wild geese local hunters have nothing on Mr. Wm. Jones, of Fraser's Point, who recently bagged a couple of good plump wild geese in rather a novel and unusual manner. Mr. Jones spied the geese feeding in a field not far from his farm buildings so grabbing a shotgun he set out to get the birds. Lest the geese suspect his approach he used one of his farm work horses as a screen to hide his approach walking beside the animal till he had gotten quite near the birds without having them sense his presence. When he judged the right moment had arrived he stepped from behind the horse and fired almost point blank at the two geese which were quite close together and bang he got them both with one shot. Both were good sized specimens and made good eating.

Mrs. John Huntington, of East Thetford, Vermont, also Mr. and Mrs. Frank Douglas and children George and Joanne, of Chateaugay, N.Y., were recent guests at the home of Mrs. D. A. Fraser.

Penicillin provides topic ...

surprised if within a short time the cost will not be lower still. . . .

Method of Manufacture

"I should like to give you a brief sketch of how penicillin is made. There are three steps in the process: first is the growth of the mould, second is the recovery of the penicillin from the liquid on which the mould grows, and third is the process by which the material is dried and sealed in ampoules ready for shipment. The mould from which penicillin is made is common to the mushroom. It grows best on a diet of corn-steep liquor (a by-product of the corn products industry), to which lactose or milk sugar has been added.

"There are two principal methods by which the mould has been grown. The first is that known as surface culture, in which this specially prepared liquid broth is placed in quart milk bottles, just partially filled. The bottles are laid on their sides and the broth is sprayed with seed mould. After a period of several days, under proper conditions, the entire surface of the broth is covered with a thick mat of mould, in the growth of which penicillin is released into the underlying broth. The second method of growing mould is known as deep culture. This operation takes place in large tanks, under continuous agitation. By this method, the mould grows in the form of small particles about the size of peas, and in the process penicillin is also released into the broth in which the mould is agitated.

Original Method

"The first method, that is the surface culture method, was the original one used. Its weakness lies in the fact that it requires a great deal of growing time and hand labor. It has the advantage, however, of the minimum of loss through contamination from the air during the growth period. The second, or deep culture method, produces larger and probably purer yields and at less expense, but is exposed to the risk of a large quantity being unexpectedly destroyed through contamination during the course of the operation. This method, however, is the method of choice today, and has virtually replaced the surface culture method.

"After the broth has been impregnated with penicillin from the growing mould, it is separated from the mould and, through steps of delicate chemical procedure, is finally reduced to a form known as the liquid sodium or calcium salt. At this stage the solution is tested for its potency, also to ensure that it is entirely sterile, that it has no toxic, or poisonous, effect and that it does not contain any temperature raising properties when injected into patients. After these points have been determined, the liquid is filled into glass ampoules, so that each will contain about 100,000 units, and by means of extremely low temperatures obtained through the use of dry ice and under conditions of high vacuum, the moisture is removed almost completely and the ampoule is sealed, dated and labelled as to its relative priority.

"When the penicillin ampoule is about to be used, the physician fills the ampoule with suitably sterilized and tested water, or what is known as "physiological salt solution," gives it a shake and he has a sterile solution ready for injection. Penicillin in its present form is administered by injecting into a muscle or directly into the blood stream and, because of this, the greatest possible care must be exercised to ensure its freedom from the slightest contamination, which might easily prove fatal to the patient. Time and experience will very probably evolve less complicated methods of manufacture. This can be particularly true where penicillin is to be used as a local application on wounds and where obviously less pure forms of the material would be required.

Penicillin as a War Measure

" . . . In the early summer of 1943, sufficient advance had been made in production and research in the United States that the value and need of penicillin were proved beyond a doubt and the Dominion Government was requested by the medical advisors of our armed services to ensure adequate supplies for the needs of the Canadian forces. Shortly afterward the department of munitions and supply appointed two laboratories to undertake the work —one in Montreal, Ayerst, McKenna & Harrison Ltd.—and one in Toronto, Connaught Laboratories—and the necessary equipment allocated by the United States for this purpose was made available. Prior to this time and for several months afterwards the only penicillin made in Canada was produced in an experimental way under the direction of the National Research Council.

" . . . Outlay in the United States for penicillin installations ultimately rose to between 20 and 25 million dollars several months before the close of the war and was producing about 400 pounds of pure penicillin a month. . . .

"In Canada the outlay has been somewhat lower proportionately, but the quantity and quality of material made here in proportion to the outlay and size of our installations compare very favorably indeed with the experience across the line and in Great Britain. In the two laboratories in Canada, production has been carried out entirely for the department of munitions and supply at a cost of production.

Penicillin for Civilian Use

"As penicillin has been so urgently required for the forces overseas and the supply was so limited it was not possible to make it available for civilian use until July 1944. This situation was not peculiar to Canada, as the same condition had existed in Great Britain and in the United States. Since March 1945 production has been so expanded in the Canadian and American plants that civilian requirements have been well supplied in both countries."

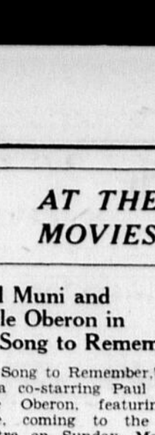

AT THE MOVIES

Paul Muni and Merle Oberon in "A Song to Remember"

"A Song to Remember," romantic drama co-starring Paul Muni and Merle Oberon, featuring Cornel Wilde, coming to the O'Connor Theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 28, 29 and 30, presents a new form of entertainment in which glorious music springs from the story, just as the story springs from the heart. Reports from audiences who have already seen this picture, seem to make that statement justified. Seldom have they been more glowing, seldom more frequent.

To anyone seeing a great picture such as "A Song to Remember" evidently is, the smoothness of its presentation, the technical perfection of its historical background are taken as a matter of course—and should be—or the picture could not be great. But to achieve that perfection, audiences seldom realize the research, the hours of toil, yes, the theatrical blood, sweat and tears which have gone into its making.

Since the story is about the love of the great composer of romantic melodies, Frederic Chopin, for Madame Sand, and the conflict of this love with the composer's ambition to write great music to aid his beloved Poland in her struggle for freedom, this research also might well have started with Chopin's youth in that oppressed land, and followed the growth of his genius under the tender ministrations of his music master, Professor Joseph Elsner. But wherever it started, it had to be done painstakingly. Audiences can be very critical of mistakes in historical facts.

ARMY PATTERN TRUCKS (Four-wheel drive)

To be sold to farmers by War Assets Corporation in co-operation with the Canadian Federation of Agriculture.

These trucks were designed for military use and vary from conventional design in many respects. In view of this and the fact that farmers have greater ingenuity and opportunity than others to put these vehicles to many uses besides those for which they were designed, it has been decided to restrict their sale to farmers on the following understanding:

(1) Operating and maintenance expense will be higher than those of standard design of similar load carrying capacity.

(2) The corporation, the original manufacturer, the agent of the manufacturer or the Federation will not be obligated in any way—

(a) To supply or continue to supply special type and size of tires with which the vehicle is equipped.

(b) To make available maintenance spares peculiar to the vehicle and not normally manufactured.

(3) The Corporation, the original manufacturer, the agent of the manufacturer or the Quebec Council of Farm Forum accepts no responsibility for the mechanical condition of the vehicle, the sale being purely on an "as is" and "where is" basis.

(4) The ultimate trade in or resale value of these trucks will be purely nominal. They will be sold accordingly.

(5) Deduction will be made from the ceiling price established by Wartime Prices and Trade Board to cover the cost of painting and the estimated cost of necessary repairs, in accordance with Motor Vehicle Controller's Order No. A-1493.

Personality Factor in Feminine Appeal

Painter of Movie Stars Says Make-up Not Necessary Key to Success

New York—(CP)—The next time you feel inclined to look like your favorite movie star, think twice before you copy her lips, the curve of her eyebrow or the color of her hair. Because it may not be any of these things that are responsible for her appeal.

You may find it is her personality that has contributed to the star's success, says Ladislas Segy, who has just completed a series of paintings of moving picture actresses to be shown at his next portrait exhibit.

If you must imitate a star, Mr. Segy advises, discover the personality key of the one that is most like you. Then try to develop your personality along the same lines. With so many types in the movies this shouldn't be difficult. He explains:

"Your admiration may lean toward Katherine Hepburn, who has more of the cool calculating type of intellectual appeal. If you like independence you can be this type and attract an intellectual man."

To attract a man who likes to be dominated you've got to have a bit of the Bacall in you. Lauren, says Segy, is the mysterious type of person who emphasizes her mystery in her walk, speech and general manner.

Garson Technique

But if you want the man to wear the pants, he says, you can appeal to the he-man with a little of the Greer Garson technique. This is the ultra feminine type who must constantly be building a man's ego and must adjust herself to his whims without saying boo!

Hedy Lamarr is the beauteous type and one of Hollywood's exceptions. She is the decorative type of woman a man marries because he likes to see her admired by other people and because he likes her cool and composed attitude showing "intellectual control", says Segy, who adds:

"If you are nervous and sensitive, women like Bette Davis, you should appeal to the cultured type of sensitive man.

"But if you are cool and detached like Veronica Lake, whose passive personality flares up only under extreme pressure of circumstances, you will probably attract the cool, reserved type of man."

Of course you may find yourself not in sympathy with any of these personalities. In that case, advises Segy, develop your own. And if you are the "naive' type don't underestimate yourself. There are many men, says Segy, who admire unspoiled naive women and it is worth developing this charm.

Useful Hints on Care House Plants

In the care of house plants in the winter time, the chief points to consider are atmosphere, heat, drainage, drafts, and the varying effects of sunlight on the different plants. A dry atmosphere is to be avoided because it not only stunts the plants but helps to increase certain insect pests, such as red spider aid thrips. Moisture in the air around the plants may be increased by standing the pots in shallow trays filled with pebbles, gravel, or moss and keeping them moist. Normal moisture is also dependent on good drainage. This can best be arranged by using soil in the pot that will allow both air and water to pass through easily. A mixture of two parts good garden loam soil, one part rotted manure, and one part sand will generally fulfil the soil requirements of potted plants. To prevent the surface of the soil from caking and thus prevent the access of air, stir the surface gently from time to time. Further drainage may be obtained by placing pebbles or small stones or broken parts of an old pot at the bottom of the pot, so as to help draw off excess water.

The placing of the plants to their best advantage calls for some consideration. All plants will not flourish anywhere, and care should be taken to put the plant where it will not stand in a draft. Concerning sunlight, different plants apparently have different preferences. For example, ferns should not be placed in direct sunlight but where there is an abundance of light all round. On the other hand, flowering plants as a rule require all the sunlight they can get, particularly in winter time. Foliage plants can thrive all right in dim light but in winter time they should be placed in direct sunlight.

However, the great secret of having fresh-looking plants in the home in winter is to avoid the over-heating of rooms. It is a good plan to commence the winter care of the plants as soon as the heat is turned on in the fall. More house plants have been killed by heat than by cold. Plants should never be placed too near radiators. The ideal temperature for house plants is about 65 degrees, or better, still from 60 to 65 degrees F., three degrees less than the recommended house temperature from the health point of view. If one desires to have the plants in the living rooms, the best thing to do is to keep the rooms as cool as possible consistent with personal comfort. Many, or large plants should not be kept in bedrooms, particularly at night, or for preference none at all in winter when all the windows are closed.

A vote of thanks was given the host, the hostess, Miss V. Semple, and the singing of "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows" brought a very pleasant gathering to a close.

Helps Check Colds Quickly

You can often check a cold quickly if you follow these instructions.

Just as soon as you feel the cold coming on and experience headache, pains in the back or limbs, soreness through the body, take a Paradol tablet, a good big drink of hot lemonade or ginger tea and go to bed.

The Paradol affords almost immediate relief from the pains and aches and helps you to get off to sleep. The dose may be repeated, if necessary, according to the directions. If there is soreness of the throat, gargle with two Paradol tablets dissolved in water. Just try Paradol the next time you have a cold and we believe that you will be well pleased. Paradol does not disappoint.

Conshohocken, Pa. — (CP) — If you want to cement a lasting friendship with pretty Rita Hartzell, just mention she's a good mixer. That's her business. She's working with a cement crew.

A junior high school pupil here, 16-year-old Rita moved to Conshohocken from Camden, N.J., two months ago. She asked George Gebhardt, cement contractor, for a job after school and on Saturdays. He put her to work learning the cement business. "She does a better job than most men in the gang," says her boss.

Mr. and Mrs. Crawford were spending the evening with their aunts, Mrs. Maggie Wilson and Mrs. D. K. Later Miss Hattie Coffey called the gathering to order and in a well worded address conveyed the best wishes of all, while Miss Margaret Wilson presented the honoured couple with a purse of money in behalf of those assembled. Mr. Crawford feelingly replied. After a few hours of social chat and short addresses by Messrs. J. A. Brown, D. K. Gordon and William Graham, welcoming the happy couple who will make their home in the midst of their friends and neighbors in Elgin, sandwiches, cake and coffee were served to the guests by several of the ladies. A Message TO FARMERS from a Farmer

H. H. Hannam is President and Managing Director of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture. In a message addressed to farmers, Mr. Hannam says:

"The farmer who is wise will look ahead and plan carefully.

"And in these years when prices and returns are more satisfactory than they have been, when labor is scarce, when farm machinery is restricted, when building materials are not readily available, a good course to follow would be that of putting a substantial share of the year's earnings into sound securities such as Victory Bonds. These reserves will not only provide a measure of insurance against difficulties in less favorable years, but at such time when supplies are favorable and costs will probably be lower, their purchasing power will be greater and return from them correspondingly increased.

"We believe this is good planning from the farmer's standpoint. At the same time, it is the very best of planning from the standpoint of the Nation."

PLANNING for TOMORROW'S FARMING

ONTARIO'S FUTURE IN CHEESE

By W. H. SPROULE,
Professor of Dairying, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Ont.

(Note—This is the fifth in a series of comments by well-known authorities, written expressly for the weekly press.)

Last year Ontario's cheese output was over 178 million pounds, an increase of 49% over the five-year average prior to the war. During the same period 131 million pounds were exported to the United Kingdom. It is largely because of its position in the export market that cheese commands so much attention in Canadian agricultural policy.

In periods of favorable prices for cheese and other farm products it is well to give careful study and consideration to the future. It is beyond our reach to accurately anticipate what the post-war period may bring. We know that prices which we now enjoy are induced by war demands. It is therefore quite natural to expect that when the war is over and normal demands are resumed many of the price advantages we now enjoy will, of necessity, adjust themselves to lower levels. It was generally recognized, while negotiations regarding the cheese contracts were under way between the British Ministry of Food and the representatives of the Canadian Government, that while twenty-cent cheese was possible during the war it could scarcely be considered as a post-war price. However, it is not necessary that the future be viewed with alarm but rather from the standpoint of exploring possible trends and challenges.

The Aftermath of War

The impact of war is bound to create changed conditions, and these conditions—the aftermath of war—may be expected to be different from those which prevailed in pre-war times, or during the period of the war itself. In order that the cheese producer may successfully meet the demands and uncertainties of the post-war period, a policy of conservation of financial resources now, when farm income is at a high level, would seem to provide the best assurance for the future adjustment period. The temptation to spend in keeping with increased earning power in the purchase of non-essentials should be avoided as far as possible. Funds thus preserved will be available later for both farm and cheese factory equipment which is likely to undergo considerable improvement in design, wearing quality and cost. Reserves of savings accumulated through the purchase of Victory Bonds and bank savings will enable dairymen not only to withstand loss of markets or decline in prices, should such occur, but also to make possible carrying through such post-war plans as may be deemed necessary in the best interests of the industry.

Let us recall that for the past five years of war the cheese industry has enjoyed a noncompetitive market for all cheese supplies. With the termination of war and the resumption of normal international trade, competition in markets is certain and with it quality will become the deciding factor. To assure the quality of cheese, high quality in milk supplies will be necessary. This involves the possible improvement and modification of many stables in which milk is produced and also, the acquisition of modern milk cooling facilities on many farms. Undoubtedly the fundamental cause of much of our second-grade and mediocre cheese is traceable to inferior milk supplies. It will be better in the future to provide the facilities and equipment necessary to assure high quality of product, even at the expense of quantity. These improvements should not be attempted now because of the shortage of labor and materials. The future need of these improvements is one of the essential reasons for conserving finances at the present time.

Must Improve Production

Among other considerations to which the cheese milk producer should give study immediately is the cost of producing milk from his own herd. Not only will the industry be confronted with competition in cheese quality, but price and cost of production also will be a vital factor in his future. One of the most important ways to reduce the cost of milk production will be to improve the average production per cow. There is no doubt that among our cheese-producing herds of Ontario may be found many individual cows and even herds which, at probable post-war prices for milk, would pay their maintenance, not to mention profits, to their owner. To establish these herds upon a paying basis at lower price levels for cheese will require drastic culling of low-producing cows. This will entail a policy of herd improvement which will involve the keeping of milk and fat production records, followed by judicious selection of good cows for replacements. The acquisition of bulls of proven ancestry and the possible introduction of additional females into the herd where necessary will of course require the investment of capital which should be provided for post-war plans.

Improved Manufacturing

From the standpoint of cheese-manufacturing costs there is little doubt of the existence of too many small, poorly-equipped factories in Ontario—factories in which the present cheese tonnage output is too small to permit employing sufficient trained personnel to manufacture cheese economically. Many of these factories have been carrying on year after year with old equipment which has reached a poor state of repair and is not conductive to high quality cheese. Future demands will undoubtedly make necessary a recognition on the part of cheese producers and factory owners of the need for improved manufacturing facilities. In many instances the amalgamation of two or more existing factories may offer a solution. In such cases, a new building fully equipped with modern vats, cheese presses and curing rooms could be provided, for which the cost can be partly subsidized by the government. The remaining 50% of the cost might be provided from a reserve established for this purpose, facilitated by authorizing that deductions be made from milk payments now when prices are most favorable. The aggregate of funds thus collected might be invested in Victory Bonds, in which form funds would be readily available at a future time when needed. The main point to keep in mind is that careful consideration and planning in advance will be necessary if cheese producers are to secure the greatest benefits from the present improvement of their financial position.

DUTCH BULBS FOR BRITISH MARKET

LONDON. (CP) — Dutch bulb-growers are hurrying to be first in the British market. People who bought their bulbs from Holland before the war are already getting catalogues through the mail

English bulb growers are not allowed to distribute catalogues through the mail unless they have first been asked for them. A catalogue received here from P. de Jager and Sons, Heiloo, Holland, contains a preface thanking the "courageous, steadfast people of Britain."

They also thank British authorities for allowing the importation of £725,000 ($3,262,500) worth of bulbs.

BRITAIN'S FOOD NEEDS

London — (CP) — Food Minister Sir Ben Smith gives these figures of the amount of food needed to meet Britain's current ration for a week; meat 30,000 tons, bacon 7,000 tons, fats 10,000 tons, butter 3,000 tons, cheese 4,000 tons, preserves 6,000 tons, tea 3,000 tons and sugar 30,000 tons.

SOME HELPFUL HINTS

Shoe Polish

White vaseline jelly is a good dressing for russet or patent leather shoes. Then polish with absorbent cotton or a soft cloth.

Baking Pans

The brown stains on baking dishes can be cleaned by using a strong solution of borax and water. Soak them in it over night.

Curtain Rods

Cover the end of the curtain rod with an old glove finger and it will not catch when running in the hems of scrim or net curtains.

Sandwiches

To keep sandwiches fresh, wrap them in a dry napkin and then in a towel wrung out of cold water. Place them in the refrigerator.

Removing Scorches

Slight scorches on cotton or linen may be removed by wetting the spots with soap and water and exposing to direct sunlight for a day or more.

Japanned Ware

Japanned ware can be cleaned by washing with a sponge and warm water, then drying with a soft cloth. Sweet oil will remove any stains.

The Wash Wringer

The rubber rolls on the wringer will last longer if the pressure is removed when they are not in use. The release will prevent cracking and flattening.

Care of Ferns

A fern should not be moved from place to place, and should not be kept in very strong sunlight. Do not water it every day, but soak it thoroughly every third day.

Adjoining Rooms

Adjoining rooms that have a wide doorway between will look better if both rooms are painted or papered alike. A neutral tone or a vague pattern is preferable.

When Scrubbing

Fold two towels into small squares and stuff them into the knees of the stockings. There will be no sore knees by the time all the floors are scrubbed and cleaned.

Muslin Cuffs

Thin muslin cuffs can be made stiff by adding to each bowl of starch one teaspoonful of Epsom salts and dissolving in the usual way by boiling. Articles starched with this will be much stiffer.

BE OURSELVES

We spent a week in the United States recently and not in any single place did we see a Union Jack hung or displayed. The Stars and Stripes? hundreds—yes, thousands of them. And this in our humble opinion ins as it should be.

But contrast the condition in Canada. One does not have to leave Hanover to see the American flag hung almost as conspicuously as our own, at public gatherings, patriotic meetings, in the park, and where have you? Why? We'd like to know. There are proper occasions for flying other nations' flags, and to a display of all our Allies' ensigns we have no objections. But this obsequious subservient unnecessary display is becoming a bit irksome, and others think so too, according to this expression in the Amherstburg Echo:

"The complaint is again heard that some people in this district are trying to woo the American tourist business with the excessive use of American flags. It has been pointed out, time and time again, that most Americans would much prefer to see Canadian and British flags when they come to this country on a holiday and do not appreciate too much fawning. Make them welcome—but let them know we are Canadians, is the best form of reception possible."

TUNA RETURNS HOME

WEST JEDDORE, N.S. (CP)— When a tuna fisherman Douglas Baker harpooned made off to sea with 100 fathoms of mooring cable and a buoy, Baker gave his equipment—and tuna—up for lost. Several hours later he found the exhausted tuna lying in his own slipway, with the line and buoy beside it.

SHUN NEW PLAN

United Kingdom Will Export Electrically Heated Suits

LONDON.—Long distance truck drivers, busmen, cold storage workers and private motorists will soon be able to buy English electrically heated suits. These suits were made in the United Kingdom during the war for both British and U.S. airmen and tank crews. The factories are now turning to production for home and export. Orders from Australia, Canada, New Zealand, America, Sweden, Norway and Holland are pouring in, reports the "London Daily Express." The manufacturers of this heated clothing will be opening a big new factory in the north of England in order to step up production. The output will be on a very large scale—it is estimated that 1,400 workers can turn out 1,000 suits a day—but it will be some time before the supply meets the demand.

Home Economists Give New Ideas In School Lunch Suggestions

The school lunch box is down from the pantry shelf, neatly packed and off to school again. With lunches the problem of the butter ration returns—everyone knows how sandwiches literally "eat up" the butter. The home economists of the Dominion department of agriculture suggest a few "tried and true" ways of making the most of a little.

Soften the butter but do not melt. Salad dressings, cream cheese or prepared mustard, by themselves, are good for spreading bread. To stretch butter combine it with mustard, chili sauce, catsup, chopped onion, chives, parsley or horseradish. Jam or jelly sandwiches can be spread with cream cheese.

If milk is provided at school, why not use the thermos for a hot soup or a stew, home-baked beans, spaghetti or a chowder? Grand hot dishes for cold days!

The meat shortcake recipe given below makes a dinner dish that is tasty and ration-wise. It is good cold, too, and carries well in the lunch box.

Meat Shortcake

3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
OR 3 1-3 cups sifted pastry flour
4 level teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons salt
1-3 cup fat
1¾ cups milk.

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Cut in fat. Add milk to make a soft but not sticky dough. Pat half the dough in a greased pan 9x9x1½ inches. Over it spread the following meat mixture:

Meat Mixture—
1½ cups ground cooked left-over meat
1 egg
¼ to ½ cup milk
1½ teaspoons salt
Few grains pepper.

Combine ingredients and mix well. Spread over dough; cover with remaining dough rolled to fit pan. Bake in a hot oven, 400° F., for 45 minutes. Cut in squares and serve hot with tomato sauce or cold, either with mayonnaise or catsup. Eight servings.

Sweet Meat Sandwich Spread

1 cup ground cooked meat
¼ cup marmalade or jam
2 tablespoons peanut butter
½ teaspoon cinnamon
Salt and pepper to taste.

Combine ingredients thoroughly and store in a covered container. Yield: 1 cup.

Pepper and Cheese Sandwich Filling

½ pound mild cheese
1 small onion
3 chopped sweet, red or green peppers
3 chopped hard-cooked eggs
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika
4 tablespoons salad dressing.

Grind cheese, onion and sweet red or green peppers. Add eggs, salt, paprika and salad dressing. Mix well together and store in refrigerator until ready to use. Keeps several days. Yield: 2¼ cups.

Ships Prize Animals

Mr. D. M. Foster shipped two fine animals on Monday afternoon to Mr. Rolland Aldrich, North Springfield, Vermont. One animal was his herd sire, "Elm Curve Mutual Rag Apple," for which he received $1,500. The other was a yearling heifer, a daughter of this fine animal, for which he received $500. On showing at the Ormstown, Huntingdon and Malone, N.Y., fairs, these animals received many prizes. Mr. Wylie McArthur, son-in-law of Mr. Foster, went to care for these animals.
