

NO LIMO FOR JOE ???

OTTAWA (CP) — Joe Clark doesn't want the Silver Bullet. Aides say the Progressive Conservative leader is perfectly happy with the humble four-door Chevy Impala he's been using and that he has no intention of claiming the five-ton silver-grey Cadillac limousine that has hauled Prime Minister Trudeau around for the last five years.

Security officers presented Trudeau with the $84,000 car in 1974 and he has been using it around Ottawa ever since. It is telephone equipped, bears licence number CAN 001 and can withstand the force of a hand grenade.

Trudeau was in it Wednesday when he dropped in to tell Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer he is quitting.

But while Clark can lay claim to the car along with the prime minister's 24 Sussex Drive residence and his Harrington Lake retreat north of Ottawa, press aide Donald Doyle says he has no plans to use it. Instead, he would get around in the blue 1979 Chevy, licence number OFJ 087, with the big blue pillow in the back and a space for a trailer hitch.

Ironically, it is the same kind of car that security police use to trail the Silver Bullet.

The Cadillac is one of two specially-built silver-grey limousines purchased by government security agents to transport the prime minister and visiting VIPs.

Trudeau, like Clark, initially objected to the car — he said he preferred his Mercedes sports car. But security forces convinced him to use it.

Clark predicts Tory survival

JOE CLARK... officially accepts power

OTTAWA (CP) — Joe Clark officially served notice Wednesday that he is ready to form a minority Progressive Conservative government, predicting it would survive a four-year term despite policy differences with opposition parties.

During a private meeting with Gov.-Gen. Ed Schreyer, Clark accepted an invitation to replace Pierre Trudeau's defeated Liberal administration and made plans to be sworn in with his cabinet at a precedent-setting televised ceremony Monday at Government House.

Although short of a 142-member majority in the 282-seat Commons, Clark later said the country is "fatigued of politicking" and that he expects to govern for the normal four-year parliamentary term.

However, as he spoke, there were signs of a brewing quarrel with one of the smaller parties that could help keep his government in office.

New Democrat leader Ed Broadbent, who met Clark earlier in the day, told a news conference he would bring a Conservative government down if it followed through with plans to dismantle the government oil company Petro-Canada.

Clark said he will do just that.

"It will remain a priority, although I can't say whether we'll get to it in June or July," he said, referring to cabinet study of a dismantling procedure to be worked out by a trustee group.

RESULTS NOT FINAL

Results of last week's general election still are not final, but as things now stand Clark has 136 seats and could govern with support from any of the three opposition parties. Liberals hold 114 seats, New Democrats 26 and Social Credit six.

The Newfoundland riding of Burn-Burgeo will become vacant when Liberal External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson resigns to devote his full time to being Newfoundland Liberal leader and to the provincial election campaign.

Broadbent said he hadn't gone to Clark with "a shopping list of do's and don'ts" in exchange for support in the minority Commons. But he said he and the Progressive Conservative leader "do not agree at all" on Petro-Canada. "That was firmly established."

...but mortgage rate rises

TORONTO (CP) — House owners expecting a tax break from the new federal government received bad news Wednesday from some major mortgage lenders.

Two banks and a trust company raised key mortgage rates a quarter point.

Economists had predicted the Progressive Conservative election promise on mortgage interest deduction would raise mortgage rates. The Conservatives have promised a four-year program under which home owners might deduct up to $5,000 a year on their mortgage interest and $1,000 on property tax.

Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Bank of Montreal and Canada Trustco Mortgage Co. of London, Ont., were the first to announce increases.

Effective immediately, the banks' rates on closed, five-year and three-year National Housing Act-approved mortgages increased to 11 per cent from 10 3/4 per cent.

The rate on five-year conventional and NHA open mortgages, at 11 1/2 and 11 1/4 respectively, were not changed.

The trust company raised its rates for one-through five-year mortgages to 11 per cent for NHA mortgages and 11 1/4 for conventional mortgages.

Kinross Mortgage Corp., a subsidiary of Canadian Imperial, increased its five-year debenture rate by one-quarter.

Canadian Imperial said the increase "reflects the continuing high cost of funds to the bank."

The mortgage rates had to rise because "money costs have risen to the level that lending rates could not be sustained" at current levels.

Lenders were unsure of how widespread the rate increases would be, although the Canadian Imperial spokesman said other lenders would be "right on our heels."

THE WEATHER

Word has been received that sunshine and blue sky has been sighted over the Laurentians and as far east as Montreal, but don't hope for anything in the Townships until this afternoon. That quasistationary low we've been talking about for the last week is finally on the move, but its breakup will be slow, with cloud predicted into tomorrow and a gradual rise in temperature. About that good weekend they've been promising... Saturday's forecast is now for cloud and thunderstorms, although Sunday and Monday should be fair and warm.

Highlights

ANOTHER WIN

The Expos put it to the Philadelphia Phillies again yesterday. Bill Lee, now 5-2, stymied the Phillies 2-0 before a big crowd at the Olympic Stadium, boosting the Expos to a two-game lead over Philadelphia. Gary Carter's two-run home run was all the scoring the hometown favorites needed. Page 13.

Acknowledges risk

Levesque beseeches Quebecers to vote yes

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque said Wednesday he will "beseech and implore" Quebecers to "take on the dignity and responsibilities of a people" and vote yes in the forthcoming referendum on the province's constitutional future.

Speaking during a debate on a motion by Liberal Leader Claude Ryan calling on the government to take the lead in bringing about a renewed federalism in Canada, Levesque said Quebecers have a right to a separate existence as a people.

He acknowledged that trying to go it alone was "a calculated risk," but he said that without taking the risk "no society can succeed."

Levesque said the results of the May 22 federal election, which saw the Progressive Conservatives take power with only two MPs from Quebec, prove that English Canada has rejected Quebec.

"English Canada wanted to get rid of French power," he said, adding that "Quebec has to face the reality that whenever English Canada wants to do something without Quebec it can."

"I have the impression that Canada outside Quebec has finished its search for an identity — at least until we Quebecers have clarified ours."

Levesque also devoted part of his speech to attacking Ryan and his party, saying the Liberal leader suffered from "vanity and the dangers of illusion that accompany it."

'SAD' SPEECH

The premier described Ryan's speech on the motion two weeks ago as sad, saying it was "calculated to induce fear."

And he said Ryan's vision of Quebec's future was "narrow and shrivelled, confounding servility with tolerance and fear of everything with prudence," adding that the leadership the Liberals could provide would be backwards.

Levesque said Quebecers and Canadians are two peoples and that "there must be between peoples the same relationship as between individuals, one based on equality."

"I'm confident that when the time comes, the leader of the Canadian government will find this democratic spirit, but first we will have to show that desire for freedom and equality. We're convinced that we can and that we will soon prove it," Levesque said.

CLARK DECLINES MORATORIUM ON TALKS

RENE LEVESQUE... keeps door open

MONTREAL (CP) — Prime Minister-elect Joe Clark has rejected a suggestion by Claude Morin, Quebec intergovernmental affairs minister, that constitutional talks be suspended until Quebec holds its referendum on sovereignty-association.

La Presse quotes Clark in an Ottawa dispatch as saying he intends to go ahead with his election promise to hold a federal-provincial conference on the constitution this fall.

Clark also told the newspaper that he is prepared to advance the date of the conference if the Parti Quebecois government decides to hold the referendum before the fall.

Morin called this week for a moratorium on federal-provincial constitutional talks during the pre-referendum period.

Morin, architect of the provincial government's referendum plans, told the national assembly Wednesday that he made the request because the provincial government "simply wishes to consult the people in peace" without federal government interference.

Meanwhile, in Quebec City, Premier Rene Levesque said his government would keep the door open to any movement from the new administration in Ottawa for constitutional discussions.

But, the premier added, there must be some significant move to break the present impasse in negotiations.

"If the Clark government lifts the blockade on the Quebec proposals, which have been on the table for several years, so much the better," he said. "We shall applaud."

"But, all the same, it must not do so just to shuffle the cards at the approach of a major event like the referendum in which Quebecers will be asked to vote on their political future."

Levesque was replying in the national assembly to questions by opposition members about an earlier statement by Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin that the federal government should observe a moratorium on constitutional negotiations between now and the Quebec referendum on independence

DETAILS SOUGHT

Liberal Leader Claude Ryan asked Morin to expand on the statement.

Morin said he hoped people elsewhere in Canada would understand the necessity of not interfering in the referendum.

While Canada will be interested in the referendum, it was first and foremost for Quebecers to decide, Morin said.

"We simply wish to consult the people in peace" and avoid any desperate attempt at obstruction by the federal government.

The premier also noted that during the referendum period his government plans to act as though it were about to become a national government.

For two and a half years, it has behaved as a good provincial government, he said. Now it will be justified in trying to persuade the people to make it national.

However, he added, "I can count on my friends in the opposition to maintain a potentially provincial government until the end of their days."

PQ grassroots

want vote

MONTREAL (CP) — La Presse says interviews with Parti Quebecois regional officials show the party's grassroots activists are champing at the bit to get on with the independence referendum.

But in a separate item in today's editions the newspaper also quotes key PQ strategist Claude Morin as saying the referendum could be more than a year off.

Morin suggested in an interview with La Presse that the government could serve its full five-year term before calling elections, and he said it shouldn't be assumed that in setting a referendum date the government is

Khomeini troops stop rebel port takeover

KHORAMSHAHR, Iran (AP) — The forces of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini peppered the Arab quarter of Khoramshahr with gunfire through the night after checking an attempt by armed fighters of the Arab minority in southern Iran to take over the country's largest port.

Officials sources reported 25 killed in fighting Wednesday and early today, including 22 in Khoramshahr and three in nearby Abadan, the site of the world's largest oil refinery. Arab sources put the death toll at 80.

Khoramshahr's largest hospital reported 102 wounded.

Details of the fighting in Abadan were not available, but the National Iranian Oil Co. said operations at the refinery were not affected.

Khomeini's revolutionary guards and army troops by nightfall had driven most of the Arab fighters into the Arab quarter across the Karoun River from the main part of the city of 100,000 at the head of the Persian Gulf.

KEEP UP FIRE

Firing First World War bolt-action rifles, U.S. repeater carbines and a machine-gun, the guards on the east bank directed a hail of fire through the night across the 200-metre-wide river and the barges and ships lining both banks.

There was no return fire from the shattered houses and shops along the west side of the river and no report of more Arab casualties. But the revolutionary guards said one of their men was killed early today during the capture of a police station on the Arab side of the river.

The Arabs are a Moslem minority among Iran's Moslem Persian majority, but they are in the majority in oil-rich Khuzestan province. They have been pressing for a bigger share of the oil revenues their labor produces, autonomous control of the province, wider use of the Arabic language and an end to alleged job discrimination.

The fighting began about 4 a.m. Wednesday after a tense week during which Arabs occupying several government buildings rejected orders from Admiral Ahmad Madani, the provincial governor-general and the head of the Iranian navy, to give up the buildings and turn in their weapons.

It is the third challenge to Khomeini's regime from a rebellious ethnic minority seeking autonomy since the regime of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi was overthrown 3 1/2 months ago. The others came from the Kurds in northwest Iran, who were promised a new deal in the Islamic constitution now being drawn up, and the less-numerous Turkomans in the northeast, whose rebellion was put down.

Broadbent maintains Petro-Can stand

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrat Leader Ed Broadbent says he has no shopping list of demands for Joe Clark's government but would be prepared to bring the Conservative minority down if it does not keep Petro-Canada.

At a news conference Wednesday after a 50-minute private meeting with Clark, Broadbent said "I didn't go in there with a shopping list of dos and don'ts."

However, there was an exception to that — Petro-Canada, on which "we do not agree at all. That was firmly established."

Broadbent, who campaigned to keep the Crown-owned oil company under government control, said the NDP would definitely vote against any Conservative proposal to turn it over to the private sector as Clark advocates.

But the government could survive such a vote with support from Liberal or Social Credit MPs.

Broadbent said the 26-member NDP caucus would support the Conservative government as long as it presents good legislation — "There are no deals."

It was Broadbent's first public statement about the election results since election night.

Broadbent said Clark told him he would consider reinstating milk and bread subsidies — part of the NDP's election platform.

Doctor kills Canada goose

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sherman Thomas, a Washington physician, was charged Wednesday with killing a Canada goose with his putter May 3 at the Congressional Country Club in suburban Maryland.

Club members said the goose honked just as Thomas was putting on the 17th green, causing Thomas to miss his putt and attack the goose in a rage.

A second version of the incident offered by club members is that the goose was injured when accidentally hit by the ball as Thomas made his approach shot. Thomas then killed the injured bird to put it out of its misery.

CHICOUTIMI, Que. ### Insurance bill tabled

QUEBEC (CP) — A bill to revise Quebec's insurance legislation was tabled in the national assembly Wednesday by Lise Payette, minister responsible for consumers, co-operatives and financial institutions. Coroner Marcel Bernier ordered reporters not to publish the man's name because he was a juvenile when the shooting occurred.

REFERENDUM

hemmed in by the need to call an election by 1980.

The date of the next provincial election depends in part on the timing and result of the referendum, said Morin, minister of intergovernmental affairs, and it could be delayed until 1981, five years after the PQ's November, 1976, election victory.

But La Presse says many PQ activists, meeting this weekend in Quebec City at the party's annual convention, want to get going soon with the referendum.

The newspaper said it interviewed 10 of the PQ's 13 regional presidents, and most said the feeling in their regions was that if the government delayed the referendum beyond the autumn, it would lead to defeatism and demoralization in party ranks.

'ITCHING TO FIGHT'

"People are fed up — they're itching to get into the fight," said Mario Lavellee of the Montreal Centre region. "It's been dragging on long enough," said Pierre Desaulniers, president of the PQ's Quebec City region.

"The more we delay, the more we give the impression we're not ready," said Claude Boucher of the Eastern Townships.

Premier Rene Levesque has said he will announce the approximate date of the referendum when the national assembly begins its summer adjournment around June 22.

Meanwhile Morin, the person often credited with the PQ's step-by-step approach to independence, says the Quebec government would consider waiting the full five years the constitution allows before calling an election, just as outgoing prime minister Pierre Trudeau did.

No Quebec government in this century has waited that long.

Clark acts on civil service cuts

Deterrent medical fees suggested

TORONTO (CP) — Deterrent fees would reduce medical care costs for governments and taxpayers without cutting into the quality of such care, says the president of the Canadian Association of Accident and Sickness Insurers.

But reasonable access to medical care must be maintained or the principle of universal health insurance coverage is defeated, Patrick Burns said in a recent interview.

Muzorewa takes over from Smith

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Eighty-eight years of white domination in Rhodesia come to an end at midnight tonight when Bishop Abel Muzorewa's black-majority government takes over from Ian Smith, the outgoing white prime minister.

US questions gas price increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration's anti-inflation agency said Wednesday that the sharp rise in U.S. gasoline prices since January is "far larger than can be explained by increases in oil prices alone."

The Council on Wage and Price Stability also said that Amerada Hess Corp. of New York, a major petroleum producer and refiner, violated the administration's price guidelines in the last six months. Several other oil companies are probable violators, it said, without naming them.

Vance urges NATO to modernize

THE HAGUE (AP) — While members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization support the SALT II treaty with some reservations, U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance has urged them to modernize their arsenals swiftly.

The allies gave their backing after Vance briefed them Wednesday on the first day of a two-day conference of NATO foreign ministers. France, however, wanted to see more details of the accord before embracing its concepts totally.

Maine to stop spraying

AUGUSTA, Me. (AP) — Potential health problems have caused the Maine Forest Service to drop plans to spray the experimental pesticide Matacil over 20,000 acres of budworm-infested forest.

PCs would increase deficit

TORONTO (CP) — Data Resources of Canada, a private forecasting organization, says in an analysis prepared before the May 22 federal election that Progressive Conservative policies will significantly increase the federal deficit.

The organization, in a statement that had been prepared for release May 18, said the length of the period of deficit would depend on whether the provinces follow the federal lead in the deducting of mortgage interest and property taxes from income tax.

Siamese twins' heads separated

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — For the first time in their lives, 19-month-old siamese twins Lisa and Elisa Hansen are sleeping in separate beds, recovering from the delicate surgery that separated their fused skulls.

As soon as medically possible, their parents, David and Patricia Hansen of Ogden, will be able to hold Lisa and Elisa in their arms, one at a time, officials said.

Stevens denies PCs will peg dollar

OTTAWA (CP) — Sinclair Stevens, the Progressive Conservative economic spokesman, denied on Wednesday rumors that the new federal government plans to peg the dollar.

"We have absolutely no intention of pegging the dollar," said Stevens, who could be finance minister or in another senior economic portfolio when Joe Clark announces his cabinet Monday.

The MP for York-Peel, who acted as the party's chief economic critic while in Opposition, said he is baffled as to why the rumors got started.

The Winnipeg-based Richardson Securities of Canada suggested earlier this week that the Conservative government would peg the dollar, basing the prediction on party criticism of the Liberal government for its decline the last two years.

"We've never said we would peg it," Stevens said.

The report started a flurry of dollar trading on money markets, although the value changed little. It closed at 86.25 cents U.S. Tuesday.

PEGGED IN 1960s

The dollar was pegged by the Conservative government of John Diefenbaker at 92.5 cents U.S. in the early 1960s but was allowed to float by the Liberals in 1970.

That means the dollar is allowed to find its own value in relation to other currencies in world money markets. The Bank of Canada intervenes in the market to varying degrees, buying and selling dollars to slow a too-rapid rise or cushion a sudden drop in value.

The Conservatives rapped the Liberal government over what they termed "the diving dollar" in and out of the Commons in the last year.

The dollar has recently dropped to as low as 83 cents U.S. — from a peak of about $1.03 U.S. in 1976 — although it has recovered some value in the last few months.

Opposition stalls asbestos bill second reading

QUEBEC (CP) — Opposition parties in the national assembly are trying to delay second reading of a bill that would allow the Quebec government to expropriate U.S.-owned Asbestos Corp.

The Union Nationale began a filibuster Wednesday in support of a Liberal party motion calling for the bill to be shelved for three months to permit a study of the economic aspects of expropriation.

UN leader Rodrigue Biron said he was upset by statements of Daniel Perlestein, president of the Societe Nationale de l'Amiante — the government company that would take control of the mining concern — that expropriation would cost "a fortune" because of the need for environmental protection measures.

But Natural Resources Minister Yves Berube said the government's decision to acquire Asbestos Corp. — controlled by General Dynamics Corp. of St. Louis, Mo. — is irreversible.

He accused the Liberals of being "in collusion with the multinationals," saying that any delay in passage of the legislation will allow the parent company to "pocket more profits."

Quebec, which wants to increase asbestos processing in the province, has offered $42 a share, or $62 million, for General Dynamics' 54.6 per-cent interest in the company.

SETS DEADLINE

The parent company is holding out for $99.75 a share — $154.5 million — and Premier Rene Levesque has said General Dynamics will be given until the end of 1979 to accept the lower offer or face expropriation.

Maurice Bellemare, UN house leader, said a fall election should be fought on the issue.

He said Premier Levesque is using the same arguments for the takeover of Asbestos Corp. as those that he used in the 1962 election when, as natural resources minister in the Lesage Liberal government, he championed nationalization of hydro-electric companies.

Biron said the government has yet to give a satisfactory answer to Asbestos Corp.'s offer to supply high-quality asbestos fibre to processing companies the government might eventually set up.

He demanded that the government make a full accounting of its negotiations to date with General Dynamics.

Meanwhile, the Committee for an Independent Canada has endorsed Quebec government plans to expropriate Asbestos Corp.

The nationalist group issued a statement Wednesday saying a committee convention May 11-13 unanimously supported the Parti Quebecois threat to expropriate the corporation owned by General Dynamics Corp. of St. Louis, Mo.

The convention agreed with Quebec Premier Rene Levesque that expropriation of Canada's second-largest asbestos company could result in more asbestos fibres being processed domestically. Only three per cent of the asbestos mined in Canada is processed at home.

Quebec Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau said four weeks ago he had been unable to reach agreement with General Dynamics to purchase the company. Parizeau said expropriation legislation will be enacted if no solution is reached by the end of the year.

The Quebec government's last published offer was for $42 a share, or about $62 million. The last company offer was $99.75 a share or $154.5 million.

Available at 826-3781, the doctors will either dispense advice over the phone, advise the patient to go to their nearest hospital or clinic or make a house call themselves, depending on the nature of the individual case.

The service responds to a long-time request by the area's population, with the tab being picked up by the CLSC.

Legion marks D-Day anniversary

SHERBROOKE (NW) — Branch 10 of the Royal Canadian Legion will be observing the 35th anniversary of the June sixth, 1944, D-Day invasion with a bilingual memorial service to be held at Saint Peter's Anglican Church on Dufferin Street. The service will take place Sunday, June 3 at 10:30 a.m. following a brief parade. Legion members and all veterans are welcome and are asked to form up at the Sherbrooke Hussars armoury on Williams Street at 10 a.m.

The service will be conducted by Archdeacon Alan Fairbairn, the unit's chaplain and he will join a delegation from the unit to go to memorial services in France at St. Contest de Buron. The citizens of St. Contest de Buron are apparently renaming one of their streets to Avenue de Sherbrooke to commemorate the Sherbrooke Hussars then named the Sherbrooke Fusiliers involvement in the invasion. There is already a cairn in the town built a number of years ago with the cooperation of the City of Sherbrooke. The cairn is near the abbey of the town, the orchard of which was the scene of a grisly execution of a number of captured allied troops under orders of SS colonel Kurt Meyer, following the D-Day landing.

Providing a booming demonstration on the art of firing a musket, the Champlain College data professor's alter ego told of the 18th-century battle re-enactment, which will be staged in June, July and August in Castine and Boothbay.

...he already paid dearly

Mark J. McKewan, 18, of Richford, Vt., pleaded guilty to four counts of simple theft in Abercorn on May 25. Crown attorney Noiseux told the court the young man stole goods from four cars which were parked in the yard of the Prince of Wales Hotel. He suggested a fine of $50 and costs on each count and that the accused be fined $20 and costs, in default 30 days, on each count and forbade him to enter Canada for one year.

"Justice was done in the hotel," defence lawyer Donald Bissonnette said. "My client and a young companion were held by their victims who beat them up prior to calling the police. All the goods were recovered and he spent the weekend in jail. Considering all those facts I think the fine suggested by the Crown is a bit excessive."

Judge Normandin fined the accused $20 and costs, in default 30 days, on each count and forbade him to enter Canada for one year.

Roger Surprenant, of Farnham, changed his option and pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of drugs with intent to traffic. Judge Gerard Normandin then told defence lawyer Jean Paul Couture he could not refuse his request for preparation of a pre-sentence report. The judge then upheld Crown attorney Claude Noiseux's motion the accused be remanded in custody pending preparation of the report after Noiseux said this was Surprenant's third infraction of a similar nature.

Nicolas Barbone, of Montreal, renounced his rights to preliminary hearing on a charge of having had possession of stolen goods and was cited to the assizes by virtue of article 476 of the criminal code. He then renounced his right to jury trial, chose trial before a magistrate alone which was continued to Aug. 20.

Nick Dinarzo, of Bedford, pleaded guilty to a charge of assault causing bodily harm on the person of Albert Lachance in Bedford, Apr. 25.

"It's an open-and-shut case," defence lawyer Francois Bourassa said. "My client is an alderman and the plaintiff had been harassing him. It got to be too much and Mr. Dinarzo hit him in a bar when they had both been drinking." Judge Gerard Normandin imposed the $50 fine suggested by the crown.

Rolland Ouellette, of Cowansville, pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of 18 grams of hashish with intent to traffic in Cowansville, Dec. 14, 1978.

Crown attorney Noiseux suggested sentencing be continued to November to study the compartment of the accused. "That's too long, it is punishable by life imprisonment," Judge Normandin said. "September 17 should be a sufficient delay."

Sherbrooke to police U de S

SHERBROOKE (FJM) — University of Sherbrooke Rector Yves Martin announced yesterday that the University has decided to abolish both its nine member campus police force and its security services.

He said the decision would allow the University to avoid situations involving uncertainty over responsibility — the campus police had to answer both to the solicitor general, due to the Police Act, as well as to their employer, the University.

Martin said he had reached a verbal agreement with the Sherbrooke police to the effect that they would assume responsibility for police work on campus.

The rector said the cost of operating the campus police came to about half a million dollars annually. He pointed out that, of all the universities in the province, only the University of Montreal and the University of Quebec at Trois Rivieres still maintained its own campus police.

Pair charged with breakin

Allan Barnes and Kevin Woodard, both of Mansonville, entered no pleas at their arraignment on charges of breaking and entering with intent to commit a crime, and to having wilfully caused approximately $500 damage to the Mansonville Post Office on May 24. Defence lawyer Donald Bissonnette chose jury trial and preliminary hearing was continued, for the form, to June 4.

They were remanded in custody pending a bail hearing which was continued to June 4 at the request of the defence.

KEITH SPICER COMMENTS:

Culture-rift doomsayers should look at the facts

Canada's English-French "doomsday" has dawned, and the noise of acclaimed or denied apocalypse is deafening.

With the hair-trigger jumpiness of prophets eager to make history serve them, Quebec secessionists leap on May 22 as final proof of a tribalized Canada. Federalists, with the blunted axe of the status quo to grind, marshal 36 reasons why the exchange of a French for an English political elite was really just a sensible little exchange of real estate between Stornoway and 24 Sussex.

When the dust has cleared, I suspect we'll find that both camps can salvage a chunk of truth from the election.

A Tory English Canada and a Grit Quebec do make fine referendum fodder for Rene Levesque's pequistes. Whatever PM-elect Joe Clark's goodwill toward Quebec (it is very vague, but real), Mr. Levesque can point to federal cabinet ministers on TV each evening as proof that Ottawa is a "foreign" government.

The faces will all be English, except for a couple of 1950s-style Quebecers from the Tory backwoods and a few parachuted new senators known mainly in the Montreal Stock Exchange.

This sorry pass is the harvest of a century of Conservative contempt for French-speaking Canadians. This began with Riel, and continued through two conscription crises, the 1976 air traffic control fiasco and more or less subtle sabotage of federal and provincial moves to respect French language rights.

Not even the too-brief leadership of a civilized man such as Robert Stanfield was able to change the deep instincts of most Tories in Parliament, backrooms and riding associations: Instincts of English colonial insecurity linked to multicultural Prairie populism.

But to blame Pierre Trudeau's defeat on "anti-French" feeling in English Canada is a grotesque twisting of reality.

A partial checklist of stronger reasons:

—16 years of Liberal power, 11 under Trudeau as the longest-ruling leader in the western world;

—The tiredness of the Liberal team: Virtually no strong voice remained from English Canada, and Trudeau himself had lost, at least temporarily, the zest and freshness of mind which hoisted him to power in 1968;

—Shattered Liberal organizations in the provinces: with not a single Liberal government outside Ottawa, Grit troops lacked the numbers and structured zeal of their adversaries;

—A brilliantly cautious Tory campaign with a Saran-wrapped Clark kept from walking into bayonets;

—Trudeau's own campaign mistakes: Calling farmers "complainers" and some jobless "drinkers" needing to "get off their asses", ruminating about clinging to power with less seats than the Tories, then boring people to tears with amending formulas — all this took a toll;

Claude Ryan's recent stunning victories for Quebec Liberals against Levesque: this made Trudeau look less indispensable as nation-saver;

—State election-financing and union backing for the NDP: in some areas such as B.C., the Liberal vote went straight to an Ed Broadbent campaigning on plausible issues while Trudeau and Clark bashed each other;

—Attractive Tory policies: Tax cuts (even if strangely married to a "balanced budget" with a "stimulative deficit") and mortgage deductibility seduced the urban and suburban middle class;

In spite of these factors, the Liberals pulled in 40 per cent of the popular vote, four per cent more than the "victorious" Conservatives. Even Ottawa civil servants, allegedly in the grip of a hysterical anti-bilingual backlash, dumped two key Tories (Jean Pigott, Rene de Cotret) to bring back the "French power" boys, including Mr. National Unity himself, Jean-Luc Pepin.

Another anti-tribalist fact is Mr. Trudeau's dignified decision to stay on as opposition leader. For years, many thought that on losing he would go into a sulk, pick up his marbles and go home.

Despite all the wear and tear of 11 years, despite his sometimes difficult traits of personality, Mr. Trudeau is still a giant on the federal scene. Indeed, with Mr. Levesque's crocodile-tear embrace of the PM as "a member of the family" (after calling him an "ex-Quebecois" for years), a fighting Pierre Trudeau as opposition leader — as visible stand-by PM — will remain a powerfully highlighted and needed Quebec presence in Ottawa.

Beyond the Liberals' grief and the Tories' euphoria, the election was a healthy exercise in democracy — a sea-change but not a national shipwreck.

Both pequistes and federalists will do themselves a favor by keeping their propaganda within that horizon.

Palpitating

It is obvious the Quebec government is experiencing what turn-of-the-century folk used to call palpitations and would hazard the guess that this is due to the upcoming PQ national convention this weekend.

What else could explain the most curious chain of events in the last few days? First Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin wants a moratorium on all constitutional talks in Canada until after the referendum. Mr. Morin's apparent disregard for whatever the other provinces may or may not want was justified in view of the fact "the referendum is not that far away" and "the rest of Canada must respect the democratic process Quebecers will be undertaking."

That was yesterday. Today, Mr. Morin tells us there is absolutely no reason why the referendum couldn't be more than a year away, even though Premier Levesque has already undertaken to give us a definite date by the end of next month.

Mr. Clark was correct in not agreeing to any such moratorium. It appears the Levesque government is caught up in chasing its own promises. Let us hope this weekend's meeting of Parti Quebecois minds can help it catch them.

It won't work

The Conservatives have promised a policy on the development of Canada's sports potential. Their chief spokesman in this matter is Otto Jelinek, the MP for Ontario Halton who has had something to say on the subject for years.

We have seen Mr. Jelinek's proposals for the development of a national sports policy, and the truth is they were lifted wholesale from the writings of one Mr. Douglas Gilbert, a one-time sportswriter for the Montreal Gazette, now writing for the Edmonton Sun, who probably knows more about the East German nation's ascendancy to international sports supremacy than any other single westerner.

The problem with having a national sports policy is that it must be just that; it has to begin in nursery school and grow from there. It must involve all youngsters regardless of their latent athletic ability, so as not to create what we have in North America today — a nation of flabby spectators.

Will Ontario and Quebec sit down long enough with Alberta and Nova Scotia to discuss the athletic well-being of their youth? Quebec has already demonstrated the benefits of a concerted athletics funding policy by its overall victories in the Canada Games and various individual sporting events, but are the other provinces even interested?

Once, not too long ago, it was felt that North American society was being hypocritical in paying lip service to the Christian way of life. Today, we could say the same thing about the healthy way of life.

Our students are bused to school, spend the whole day indoors and are bused home too late to spend any real time outdoors. Athletics are confined to those who show proficiency for them and gym classes are neither long enough nor frequent enough to do much good.

We'd say any efforts the Conservatives made in this direction while well-meant, are destined to failure. Attitudes must be changed on the part of parents and school boards before our young will benefit from the establishment of any overall sports development policy, no matter how well-funded.

JAMES DUFF

Letters

Editor:

Bravo - for once we're informed of an event BEFORE it takes place. The proposed seminar with Camille Laurin, but alas, it's only for some elusive, mysterious group who were "invited" to speak on behalf of English-speaking Quebecers collectively.

Is this group supposed to be representative of all, or even of a majority of us? If so, why haven't they made themselves known - sent out questionnaires, anything, to gain a complete consensus from us all?

This discussion is so important, representing our only lifeline of hope in getting our views across - and possibly relieving our anguish, which has been intolerable in some cases - and we're not even consulted by our peers to contribute our thoughts.

If the Record truly intends to serve all of its English-speaking readers - it just might opt to publish a name and address of someone willing to accept our opinions and take them to this seminar, making certain that Dr. Laurin fully comprehends the many facets of the English-speaking populace. There are no stereotypes - and many are not even "English."

A seldom-mentioned entity is the recent immigrant whose label belies the fact that in order to gain admission to Canada (and - or Quebec) he spent considerable time and effort being qualified and scored, based upon his education, financial status, physical condition and ability to speak EITHER French or English - not exactly one who requires the "sympathy" of French Canadians - as Dr. Laurin suggested - (and not one whose wife wears a babushka carrying a bed-sheet full of belongings). But he is one who has achieved some status in life - and CHOSE Quebec as his place in the sun - often actually BECAUSE the French people were so endearing - making the traumatic move worthwhile. Will his voice be heard?

Just a name and address isn't too much to ask - is it? Dr. Laurin's would do just fine.

Remember - a democratic system should represent the voice of ALL the people, - not just a chosen few.

The postal service on our Record has improved somewhat, but is still rather erratic - no paper for several days and then several on the same day, and usually several missing each month. We appreciate whatever you have done to improve the service, and hope you will continue to do whatever prodding is necessary to improve it further. I should add that occasionally we get a paper the next day after printing, which shows it is possible!!

Bed's the place

Editor:

I was listening to Channel 9 news in Sherbrooke, and they were talking about drivers' insurance. Good enough.

But take Huntingville here a week ago. There was a bad accident. A GMC truck and a Pontiac were mashed to bits and for all I know the man killed might have left a wife and small children to mourn his loss.

Some crazy fool was trying to pass the traffic ahead. This accident happened near the former Nick Dean's Barn Dance.

My husband and I came close to hitting a car pulling out of the La Paloma Dance Hall road. The man was lucky he had a high-speed car to get away fast enough or there would have been a three-car pileup for sure. Lucky the car coming down jammed on his brakes and my husband did the same, but there was a very foolish driver. Why couldn't he have waited until the way was clear, then go? No wonder poor people have to pay so much insurance on their cars. This is outrageous.

Believe you me, if I could get a few licence plate numbers, the police would be busy hunting for them all.

The speed limit is 55 out of town and 30 in town, and if you can't figure out the new speed-limit signs, tough luck.

Another piece of good advice - if you are going to drink, for Pete's sake, take it home and drink. The grocery stores sell beer. Get it there, go home and drink with your wife and if you get loaded, hit the old bed. It's the safest place yet, my pals.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Chemical-free farming interests U.S. Ag secretary

WASHINGTON — For the past two years we have reported on the efforts of some independent-minded farmers to break loose from the chemical industry's evertightening stranglehold on American agriculture.

By improving the age-old methods of crop rotation, natural pest control and organic fertilizer, these latter-day pioneers hope not only to avoid the skyrocketing expense of chemical farming, but to save their land from the destructive effects of heavy chemical use. Every time we have detailed these farmers' modest successes, we have drawn the wrath of the chemical industry and the agribusiness community with which it is so closely linked.

Now the big boys may really have something to scream about. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland has begun to take an interest in chemical-free farming.

Bergland was approached on his 2,000-acre Minnesota farm during the Christmas holiday by Paul Billberg, a seven-year practitioner of natural farming who has become a true believer. Billberg told our associate Hal Bernton that Bergland "really understands the problems with the misuse of chemicals" and asked the right questions.

Though Bergland is far from a convert — he uses heavy doses of chemical pesticides and fertilizers to produce his own crops of wheat, flax and grass seed — he did ask a top Agriculture Department researcher, Dr. Hanson Bertram, to look into the subject for him.

So far the department has allocated some $70 million to investigate so-called "alternative" farming methods. Even this relatively modest amount has drawn fire from chemical-farming advocates.

A shrill critic of chemical-free farming is the Council of Agricultural Scientists (CAST), a supposedly objective scientific organization formed in 1972 to clear up the public's "misunderstanding" of agricultural-environmental problems.

CAST is a shining example of the incestuous relationships that exist in the agricultural establishment. It was initially given an operating base and more than $200,000 worth of free services by Iowa State University. And the Des Moines Register found that two-thirds of CAST's funding came from agribusiness firms whose products it is supposed to be evaluating objectively? Dow Chemical, Eli Lilly, Mobil Chemical, Monsanto and Shell Chemical.

Small wonder that one participant in a CAST task force came to the conclusion that the organization's hierarchy "seemed convinced that organic farming and gardening were part of some sort of conspiracy being directed at the very survival of the U.S. and advanced industrial society."

Hall of Heroes: Pitched into the inky waters of a squall-swept lake in Maine on a canoeing trip gone awry, a 13-year-old Boy Scout showed cool courage in the crisis, saving his brother and another companion from drowning in a night of terror. For his grit and levelheaded behavior in a panic situation, Charles Ouellette, 13, of Frenchville, Maine, has earned a place in our special Hall of Heroes.

On the morning of July 5, 1977, 12 Scouts and four adults, including Charlie's father and a guide, Pete Daigle, set out in eight canoes on a day-long expedition.

A brisk wind soon made the waters choppy and difficult for paddling. By dusk, conditions became so bad that the party pulled in to shore and waited for the wind to die down. A little after 9 o'clock, Daigle decided it was safe to continue.

As a precaution, the eight canoes were tied together with Daigle's motor-powered canoe in the lead. But in the middle of the lake another squall struck, and the line between the third and fourth canoes tore loose.

Those in the last five canoes cut their lines and made it to shore separately. The first three continued on together, powered by Daigle's outboard.

Minutes later, a 5-foot wave crashed into the second canoe, flipping it over and dumping Charlie and 11-year-old Jean Paul Paradis into the water. They struggled to the rear canoe with 14-year-old Dave Albert and another 11-year-old, Mark Corriveau.

Then another wave capsized that canoe, and the four youngsters swam desperately to Daigle's craft.

Young Paradis panicked and tried to climb aboard the one canoe still upright, and it turned over. After making sure the boys had handholds on the bottom of his canoe, Daigle set off on the 1,000-yard swim to shore for help. Inexplicably, young Corriveau decided to follow him. He never made it.

Then Tommy Ouellette lost his grip on the overturned canoe and began drifting away. His brother, Charlie, holding onto the canoe with one hand, swung his body around so Tommy could grab his foot.

Paradis went into shock and passed out. When the adults finally returned in a rescue canoe, they found Charlie supporting his unconscious friend with his own body. He volunteered to stay while the rescuers went off with Tommy and Dave Albert.

For another hour he clung to the capsized canoe with young Paradis, flashing his flashlight until the rescuers returned.

With a reticence worthy of his personal hero, Charles A. Lindbergh, Charlie, now a scholarship student at Phillips Exeter Academy, doesn't talk much about his heroic exploit. "I just felt I had to do what I did," he told us. "I never thought of giving up."

Gas-saving gadget reduces auto fuel consumption

TORONTO (CP) — Andrew MacGuire had to look outside Canada for the support needed to develop his device for improving gasoline mileage and reducing pollution.

But after years of testing and development, the device has been recognized as the best invention patented last year in the United Kingdom.

MacGuire, who will receive the 1978 Richardson Gold Medal from the Institute of Patentees and Inventors in London in June, said that if his Pollution Elimination Device was on every automobile in Canada it would save from 1.5-to-two million gallons of gasoline every day.

And, he added, it would sell for about $30.

Documents from various tests, by both scientists and ordinary motorists, indicate the gadget has regularly reduced fuel consumption by as much as 15 per cent while significantly reducing harmful exhaust emissions.

TESTED IN CANADA

The fuels research centre of Canada's energy department tested an early version of the device and found fuel economies ranging from 12-to-17 per cent.

Yet that's as far as it went in Canada, MacGuire said, although Ottawa passed on the results of its tests to the auto industry.

MacGuire's gadget, not much larger than a man's fist, uses pulsing air to force a cylinder flame to spread faster and more fully.

He said the device draws in filtered air and feeds it to the intake manifold. It accounts for only about half of one per cent of an engine's air needs.

As the air is drawn through at varying speeds to meet the needs of the engine, three heat-resistant plastic balls vibrate, emitting the air in high-frequency pulses into the car's airflow stream.

Fuel particles are further atomized by this process, and the turbulence set up in each cylinder spreads the fuel and the flame.

CANADA'S BUSINESS

By Bruce Whitestone

It was just a little over seven years ago that Britain made the "Historic Decision" to join the European Common Market; a review of that venture is long overdue.

What is obvious, first of all, is that Britain's entry into the Common Market went a long way to destroy the remaining effectiveness of the British Commonwealth.

Once Britain joined we were told the economic effects would be startling. While Britain's economy provided increased living standards in the post-war era, those of France and Germany had increased much faster. Entry would change all that. French and German steel mills, automobile plants, and chemical concerns would provide a tonic, a stimulus for British industry. Britain would boom again. This column noted then that British entry was supposed to provide a "cold shower" but that cold showers can be fatal.

The remarkable misconceptions of the Market enthusiasts were to become evident in the succeeding years.

Common Market enthusiasts claimed that membership would revive British industry and improve its deficit with the European Economic Community (EEC). Nevertheless, Britain's trade deficit with the original six nations of the European Community, which had been 496 million pounds in 1972 on the eve of entry, climbed to 2.4 billion pounds by 1976. The flood of manufactured imports worsened the problems of British manufacturing, for the time being at least.

While some market opponents had claimed that membership would drive up British food costs by 50 per cent, that turned out to be an exaggeration. According to the most recent estimates the complex farm support system of the EEC in 1978 cost British consumers 12 per cent more than under the old arrangement.

However, over time the elaborate price support system to protect and increase the incomes of farmers at the expense of consumers clearly will mean an additional burden to the British.

There were those who asserted that British membership would lead to a vast flow of continental investment in British plants. Yet, for the years 1973 and 1974, Britain directly invested 866 million pounds in EEC plants which contrasts with 177 million pounds that Market members put in Britain. Some could claim that the imbalance would have been greater if Britain had stayed out, but no one can know that for sure.

For those who believe in the benefits of competition, EEC membership has been a great disappointment. While the Community utters brave words about the joys of competition, it has been busy trying to fix up cartels for shipbuilding, oil refining and steel producers. The expense of cartels and their lack of efficiency have been notable features of the Common Market.

It was estimated at the time Britain first contemplated joining the European Common Market that the economies from larger production runs, the pressure of competition on managers, and the growth of investment in plant and equipment would add between 1.5 and 5 per cent to British total output. Evidence suggests that this is a vain hope. The crazy-quilt of protective levies and cartel-like arrangements suggests that the Community membership will not live up to those expectations.

Now the European Community is in the process of establishing a common Monetary System. From all the information at hand that too will contain so many loopholes that its effect will be blunted.

The foes of entry into the European Common Market have had the better case, for Britain's first seven years at least.

Bonus for gardeners...

By PEARL GRENIER

KNOWLTON — One of the town's oldest establishments has taken on a new look with the establishment of The Garden Centre on Knowlton Street.

Under the management of Ian Fisher, who took over Brome Building Supplies in 1978, the store carries on the Fisher family tradition of having an interest in agriculture. His father, the Honorable Sidney Fisher, established a fund for school children with the idea of promoting an interest in the cultivation of vegetables and flowers. Seeds and eggs for hatching were also distributed and the results were exhibited at school fairs in the fall.

Located in the Robb block, Fisher has given the area a dynamic appearance with the establishment of his new enterprise. Maintaining the name of Robb's Hardware, the western end of the operation is stocked with hardware supplies of all descriptions. Well patronized since its opening in mid-April, a good selection of potted plants are in stock. There are also bulbs, seeds, rose bushes and shrubs, potting soil, fertilizers, tools, lawn furniture and fishing equipment are also available.

Still in the process of being organized, anyone who wishes to order a specific item, not yet in stock can be assured of prompt service.

The location of the new business is in one of the more historic locales in the town. Built in 1872 the building first housed a carriage making business which was then diversified by the owner, George Robb, include a furniture store on the second floor, a grocery store, a hardware store, a general store and funeral parlor located in the west end of the building.

A meat market was added along with Robb's store in later years.

The establishment changed hands over the years with the emphasis on the hardware trade and the establishment of a small dry goods and clothing store known as the "Family Shoppe" under the management of Mrs. Faye Kendrick. It was she who sold the property to Ian Fisher.

The Garden Centre adds a great deal to the atmosphere and the color of the centre of town and is a great boon for area horticulturalists.

CN and CP to pay damages

FREDERICTON (CP) — Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railways were ordered Monday to pay about $500,000 to three New Brunswick potato exporting companies because of ruined potato shipments.

The order came in a written judgement released by the Queen's Bench division of the provincial Supreme Court. The 27-page judgement was issued May 18 but not released until Monday.

Justice J. Paul Barry said hundreds of carloads of potatoes had arrived in Halifax and Saint John, N.B., for shipment to Europe in an unusable form. The shipments were sent between November, 1976, and February, 1977.

"If the railways wished, at their head offices, to be rid of this potato carrying business, that desire has been accomplished," Justice Barry said.

Liberals make final money move

OTTAWA (CP) — In one of their last functions, the Liberals have made sure that the government has enough money to get through the month of June.

The Canada Gazette released Monday shows that the government of Prime Minister Trudeau has approved the expenditure of about $1.806 billion on certain day-to-day operations for next month.

The new Progressive Conservative government of Joe Clark, which takes over Monday, will have the responsibility of approving this needed money on a monthly basis until Parliament meets in September or early October.

Pursues electronics career

Richmond soldier earns award

RICHMOND (NF) — Jay Gunter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Gunter of Richmond, Quebec, presently a private in the Canadian Armed Forces has recently been awarded the Skill at Arms Trophy for marksmanship at the Cornwallis Armed Forces base.

When Jay left home in January to begin training, his parents' reaction was rather mixed. Jay's father was glad to see him in the army.

"The army is a good thing," Cliff explained. "It's a place to learn discipline, something we don't have very much of these days. The army is probably the best way to build character and for a young man it's a good way to meet people."

While she has now come to accept her son's decision, Dorothy Gunter admits to having been worried. "I didn't like the idea," she said. "We're not at war today and perhaps it's silly to worry, but being in the army would mean that if anything did happen, Jay would be one of the first to go. I couldn't help thinking of World War II and Viet Nam. But Jay wanted to do it and now I see he's very happy in the army and I can accept his decision."

For the Richmond lad, the army was more of an interesting job opportunity than a patriotic call to arms.

"I'm enjoying the armed forces," he explained. "I've been in with a good bunch of guys and it's been interesting. I really joined up because it seemed the best place to get a good training in electronics."

Jay is planning to pursue a communications and electronics engineering program.

This comes as no surprise to his friends or family. "He got started quite young," explained his mother. "When he was eight years old we bought him a Heathkit model and he's been fascinated by electronics ever since."

"He's done some interesting things too," continued Cliff Gunter. "He built a burglar alarm system for the house and he also built a rain alarm system. I couldn't explain exactly how it works, but when it rained the alarm would signal which windows were open." Over the last several years Jay also got involved with ham radio and citizens' band radio.

While electronics may be Jay's biggest love, he won the marksmanship trophy for his ability with guns — which are his second biggest love. Marksmanship tends to run in the Gunter family. Both his father and his uncle, Doug, are better than average shots during hunting season. Furthermore, Jay's grandfather and great-grandfather "Uncle Jim Gunter" who established Gunter's Hotel, enjoyed good reputations as marksmen in their days.

"Jay has had an interest in guns since the age of nine or ten," his father commented. "He was taught how to use a gun and he's always been very careful handling guns. He became an avid bullet collector; he's got almost 300 different shells in his collection including a bullet from an elephant gun." Jay honed his shooting skills with the Lennoxville Sand Hill Rifle Club and with the army reserves.

Winning the trophy was quite an honor. "I don't remember receiving the trophy at all. I was incredibly nervous going up to the front; I don't know how I manage to look so calm in the photos," he said.

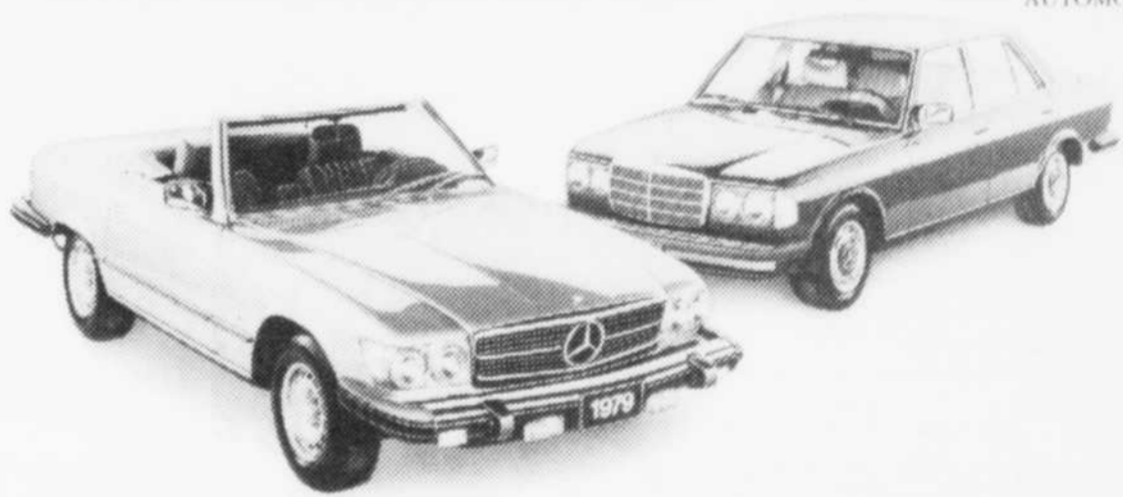

For Jay, the Skill at Arms Trophy is an auspicious beginning of a military career. As he continues his training program at the Kingston Armed Forces Base, Jay will hopefully be able to continue to hone his shooting skills, as well as pursue his career in electronics.

Scout troop flag handed over

First Inverness Scout Troop flag shown as displayed on the wall of the hall.

INVERNESS (CWM) — Duke of York, L.O.L. No. 678, and Orange Lily Lodge, No. 1041, of the L.O.B.A., co-owners of the former Inverness Academy, were highly honored by a gift recently from Bro. Lloyd C. Beattie and Mrs. Beattie, of Lennoxville. This gift was the flag of the First Inverness Troop of Boy Scouts and the Scarf of the Assistant Scout Master of the same unit. These they wished would be retired within the walls of that great old school, and were gratefully received by the Lodge of which Bro. Beattie is a member. The Secretary of the Lodge was instructed to convey our thanks to the Beatties from their thoughtfulness in entrusting these emblems to our care.

After considerable thought it was decided that this arrangement of emblems should be placed on the west wall of the High School Rooms, facing the entrance with the Honor Roll in the desired position under the Union Jack, for which they fought, and the flag of the Boy Scouts immediately beneath it, the Honor Roll is flanked by the colors of the Inverness Troop, which, appropriately, were the colors of the academy as well - blue and gold, while, beneath, on the floor, at each end of the banner with its slogan, "Be Prepared", a nice wreath of enduring flowers stands guard on their easels in their mute, but expressive way to convey the admiration that the members of the two lodges hold for all the emblems, and what they represent. We trust that this arrangement will be satisfactory to our many friends.

Accordingly, a committee was named, composed of Bros. Lyman White, John Smith, and C.W. McVetty to select a proper place in the High School Room for these gifts with the School Roll Honor to remain in the central position as we are all intensely proud of this Honor Roll on which the names of 47 former school mates are engraved, as volunteers, to serve their country in World Wars I and II. Sad to say, that seven of these fine lads made the supreme sacrifice that we might be free from foreign domination.

A color snapshot of this arrangement, the same size as the one appearing with this write-up, can be secured at a cost of one dollar, each, by applying to C.W. McVetty, R.R. No. 1, Inverness, Que., B0S 1K0, provided that a self-addressed, stamped, envelope accompanies the remittance. Kindly allow a delay of approximately ten days before delivery date.

Ann Landers says

Lazy writers...

Dear Ann Landers: Some time ago you printed a letter from a woman who wondered why she never received answers to her letters from her friends. You let them off the hook by saying, "Often, people are self-conscious about their grammar and spelling and put off writing for this reason."

Well, maybe you're right, but the message they convey through silence is, "Even though we were once close friends, I no longer care enough about you to take the time to reply." This letter is being written by a person who went to a lot of trouble to look up the addresses and married names of several girlhood friends and received, in return, dead silence. — Might As Well Put Messages In Bottles

Dear Bottles: You are not alone in your criticism. A great many others scolded me for letting the "slobs" off the hook so easily. The best suggestion came from "Side-Stepped In Spokane." She wrote, "If people are ashamed of their grammar, spelling or handwriting, they can pick up a phone and say, 'It was good to hear from you.'"

From 11:00 p.m. to 8:00 a.m. during the week, all day Saturday and until 5:00 p.m. on Sunday, you can call San Francisco from New York and talk for three minutes for 55 cents!

What's prudish? What's O.K.? If you aren't sure, you need some help. It's available in the booklet: "Necking and Petting -- What Are the Limits?" Mail your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611, enclosing 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Elvidge-Speck

The marriage of Patricia Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Elvidge of Cowansville, to Mr. Dannie Glen Speck of London, Ontario, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Speck of Lennoxville, was celebrated in Emmanuel United Church, Cowansville, on Saturday afternoon, May 12, at 4:30.

The Reverend James H. Sinclair of North Bay, Ont., officiated at the ceremony and was assisted by the Reverend Douglas Warren of Lennoxville and Mr. Charlie Ketcheson of Kingston, Ont. Mrs. Margaret Smith played the wedding music and a full choir was in attendance.

Miss Fran Drolet, an Anglican theology student of Lachine, Que., read a prayer prior to the Sacrament of Holy Communion being served to the bridal couple. Sister Kay Duffin of the congregation of Notre Dame, Montreal, sang "All I Ask of You" (from "Songs for Celebration" by the Monks of Weston Priory) with guitar accompaniment by herself and Mr. Ernie Mendoza of Cowansville.

The church was tastefully decorated with arrangements of spring flowers and apple blossoms. Candles and white satin bows completed the decor.

The bride was escorted down the aisle by her father to the accompaniment of "The Dominion March", composed by her great-grandfather, Mr. Philip E. Layton. She wore a gown of white nylon organza and chantilly lace with a chapel train. Her finger-ti-length veil of tulle illusion and chantilly lace was held in place by a bandeau of lace. She carried a semi-cascade bouquet of white daisies, yellow sweetheart roses and gypsophila.

Miss Barbara Wilkinson of Waterloo, Que., maid of honor, was gowned in daffodil-yellow eyelet-embroidered cotton, and the three bridesmaids, Miss Linda Speck, sister of the groom, and Miss Carolyn and Miss Judy Elvidge, sisters of the bride, wore matching gowns of apple-green eyelet-embroidered cotton. All four attendants wore picture hats with bows the same color as their dresses, and they carried nosegays of yellow and white daisies and gypsophila.

Mr. Brian Porter of Edmonton, Alta., was best man and the ushers were Mr. Garry George, of Lennoxville, Mr. James McIntyre of Ottawa, cousin of the bride, and Mr. Randall Speck of Toronto, brother of the groom.

The mother of the bride wore a floor-length gown of aquamarine jersey and a corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother was dressed in a floor-length gown of dusty rose, with a corsage of pink carnations.

Mrs. Gilbert Layton of Montreal, maternal grandmother of the bride, wore pale blue chiffon. Mrs. Kenneth Elvidge, of Cowansville, paternal grandmother of the bride, wore a gown of pink and beige print. The grandmother of the groom, Mrs. George Speck of Randboro, Que., was gowned in a green and black print.

The wedding reception was held at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall in Cowansville. The tables were decorated with colorful spring flowers and candles, most artistically arranged by Mrs. Margaret Smith, who was also responsible for the graceful and delicate arrangements in the church. Yellow and white daisies decorated the wedding cake, which was made by Mrs. Kenneth Elvidge.

The bride was toasted by her uncle, Mr. Robert Layton, of Hudson, Que. Later, the couple left for their honeymoon in Cape Cod, the bride travelling in an ivory linen suit with beige and brown accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Speck will be residing in London, Ont.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Stiff from arthritis

DEAR DR. LAMB — I had a complete physical exam two years ago and the doctor found that I have arthritis of the spine. He gave me pills for the pain and a series of exercises to follow. I've been very pleased because my condition has improved. I no longer have the pains I used to have and I no longer take pills. I do continue to do the exercises and I'm quite active.

I'm concerned because my spine doesn't bend very much because of the arthritis. It's made the joints calcified and I'm not very flexible although I try to bend and stretch with the exercises. Is it possible to break up the calcium deposits in any way so the joints could again function somewhat like they used to? I'm a 48-year-old man and have suffered with arthritis for about 12 years. I don't care how long it takes but if it is possible to be more flexible, I'd like to work toward that goal.

DEAR READER — Your story sounds like you have a special form of rheumatoid arthritis that involves the spine. It's particularly apt to occur in young men. It may not be associated with arthritis of other joints although that's not a set rule. It does behave a little bit different than the usual variety of rheumatoid arthritis. However, I'm sending you The Health Letter number 4-11, Rheumatoid Arthritis, to give you more information on this problem as it's related to your condition and the letter contains some comments about rheumatoid arthritis of the spine.

It sounds like the treatment your doctor has given you has been very good. Being pain free and being able to be active is an important achievement.

It's often impossible to avoid the spine becoming stiff and fused, regardless of what you do. Your best route to maintaining flexibility is through exercises. If a physical medicine department is available to you in your community, you might see a specialist in physical medicine and physiotherapy for additional advice and consultation about the forms of exercises that can be used to maintain as normal function as possible.

THE STORY OF THE FLOUR BAG:

There were white ones, pink ones, blue ones and green. There were checkered ones and printed ones. The colors you wouldn't believe! The white ones were bleached and made into sheets and pillow slips too. No matter how hard you rubbed and scrubbed, some letters wouldn't come off.

The checkered ones and printed ones were saved to make new dresses and bloomers for me. The new dresses were cut with the bloomers to match, so to start school in the fall. I went tripping along, and then I fell for all eyes to see, 98 lbs. of Robin Hood, across the seat was wrote.

The laughter that followed, I still can hear, as the school kids, gathered around. They laughed with glee and shouted whoopee. "She has taken old Robin Hood down." Whenever I see checks and prints, it brings back memories to me, of my mother saying, which will it be. "The red or the blue, the green or the pink?" "Anything will do," I said, "But please, ma, not the print!"

MRS. BERNICE BOOTH

THE BIRTHDAY JUNE 18th, 1925

You were my sister, so beloved,
That the angels brought from heaven;
This I was told, and so believed,
As I was not yet seven.

I looked up in the blue, blue sky,
White clouds were scudding by,
I gazed up there a long, long while,
(For when you first came to greet us)
I thought I'd see you smile,
But then I heard you cry!

MARG. MILLER

NIGHT TIME THOUGHTS

As I sit here alone watching T.V.
These thoughts seem to run through my head.
How soon will this hockey be over?
So I can go sleep in my bed?

I wonder who'll win the election?
On Tuesday, we'll know I bet.
Clark don't seem to know what he wants
But we all know Levesque wants Quebec.

How many are voting for Trudeau?
How many are strong on Broadbent?
Who'll be the best to keep us a nation,
Instead of a separate Quebec.

How long will the gas and oil last?
How long is the sun going to shine?
How long will we sing the National Anthem?
Before some of us sing Auld Lang Syne.

Oh bother! The Canadiens have tied it,
So here we go into overtime.
How many are going to bed now?
Goodnight! I'm sure going to mine.

JESSIE PATTERSON,
Inverness.

"WASH DAYS"

Clean white sheets, billowing on the line
Snapping briskly in the wind, on a day so fine
Ships in full sail, on a wind-blown sea—
Pirate ships and merchantmen, all so real to me!

Quickly dried, then they're gathered in
Smelling "fresh-air" clean and fragrant, once again.
My little chickadee sails in, cheeping as he lands
Begging for a peanut, from my friendly hand.

A stately tulip, in silent greeting, nods its head
And in the cedar, robins nesting snug-ahed
On eggs as blue as any Summer sky—
These things I see... oh, how lucky I!

I hear a busy chattering from above, and see
Chubby Red Squirrel's saucy face, peeping down at me—
I pause a moment, to enjoy my little friends
Oh, what pleasure their small presence lends.

My wash is gathered, folded, fragrant - clean
My heart uplifted, by my observations, keen
My little journey in a land of fantasy and sun
They all add up, to making wash-day fun.

THE HIGH SCHOOL PROM

The High School Prom had just begun,
As she came into view.
In her pretty white organdy gown,
With a sash that was pale blue.
Her cheeks were flushed like rosebuds.
Her hair was curly and brown.
She looked like a fairy princess.
The fairest in the town.

My heart began to beat real fast,
As I stepped to her side.
I asked her if I could have this dance,
And my love I tried to hide.

She whispered "Yes" in a voice real low,
And we danced around the floor.
Then I whispered, "I love you, darling."
I could keep it to myself no more.

It took place many years ago,
We're now married with a family,
But I still remember that High School Prom.
The first night she danced with me.

DOWNTOWN

Downtown in the morning
When all the world's asleep,
All muted sounds surrounding
But for the birdie's cheep.

Downtown in the morning
In the softly falling rain,
And the bell that keeps on clanging
On the early morning train.

Downtown in the morning
When the rain has washed the streets,
Waiting for the dawning
Of the new day that it greets.

Downtown in the morning
There's a feeling quite apart,
Like music that's uplifting
To the lonely, sinking heart.

Downtown in the morning
There's courage once again,
To take all hopes and longing
On that early morning train.

Stanstead Historical Society 50th anniversary

By JOAN MacDONALD
STANSTEAD — 1979 is the 50th anniversary of the Stanstead Historical Society and a series of events are planned in celebration. At the opening of the Colby-Curtis Museum in Beebe on June 2nd at 2 p.m. the public is invited to a sherry party and an exhibition of Edwin Earle's water colours of the Hopi Kachinas.

Edwin Earle is an active member of the Stanstead Historical Society and we are honoured to have his exhibition on display. As a young man he studied at the Massachusetts School of Art in Boston and the Arts Students League and The Grand Central School of Art in New York. On his way to a visit in California he stopped at the Hopi Reservation in northeastern Arizona and was so impressed, that, in 1935 he returned to spend a year among the Hopi at the village of Oraibi. Fascinated with their life and culture he decided to record the costumes of the dances of the Kachina cycle.

In the course of Mr. Earle's work he had to be not only artist but ethnologist as well. The Kachina dances are described as "a scene in the drama of the gods and their relation to men" and are a vital part of Hopi life. Edwin wrote: "Every type of Kachina has its subtle personality and every dance its peculiar charm. Whatever it may do for a Hopi, it is balm for the agitated mind, if one would be receptive."

Edwin Earle observed the Kachina dances in the village plazas, night dances in the kivas and the annual appearance of certain chief Kachinas who do not dance but perform other rites. From his observations he later made sketches of each figure (no one is allowed to sketch or photograph at the dances) and checked them with his Hopi hosts. Many of his original sketches will also be on display.

The exhibition will be at the Museum for six weeks. The Museum also features its usual Canadianna collection with nostalgic glimpses into our history and our military background. A doll room will be of special interest to the younger visitors.

Admission to the exhibition and the museum is free.

Your Birthday

June 1, 1979
This coming year a number of opportunities will be offered to you in areas of your work or career. You might have a problem trying to decide which ones to take advantage of.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It isn't likely you'll get too many tasks done today. Chances are you'll yield to making yourself more comfortable than doing what needs to get done.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It isn't necessarily your fault, but friendships could be fickle today. The best thing you can do: Don't bank too heavily on others for your entertainment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't be uncharacteristically envious of another because you feel he is getting the breaks that you think you should be getting. Your day will come.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Although you normally are practical, today your ideas aren't apt to be of much use to you because they are based upon pipe dreams.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today, there is a good chance you could be lured into buying an illusion rather than quality. Be sure to look beneath the glitter.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your erratic behavior could cause complications in a relationship that is important to you. Try not to do things that throw others into a lizzy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Too many interruptions may hamper completion of things you had your heart set on getting done today. Don't fight what you can't control.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Outside interests could take up much more of your time than you had planned unless you budget your hours carefully.

Baptist Mission
Circle meets

SUTTON—On May 17, the monthly meeting of the Olivet Baptist Mission Circle met at the Baptist Parsonage with Mrs. K. Woodard as hostess. The President, Mrs. K. Woodard chaired the meeting and welcomed the nine members and two visitors, especially Mrs. Ola Gibson who was able to attend the meeting. The opening hymn was read in unison "O Happy home, where Thou art loved the dearest".

The President gave the devotional exercises, reading from the first chapter of Hebrews. The theme was "Let us go on to perfection". Are we seeking with God's help to go on? We should rise up and go on to face future duty. There are 3 C's: Conviction, Co-operation and Courage. We must have courage to stand up against wrong. May the Lord help us.

The Study chosen by Mrs. Orton Baker was, "We are Partners in Mission". Our task is to make Christ known to the ends of the earth and to minister to human needs in Christ's name. Countries we once regarded as places we sent missionaries are now sending their own missionaries to other parts of the world - even Canada. Brazil is one country who has sent missionaries to Canada. The First Baptist Church in Calgary held meetings called Missionfest when over one thousand people attended in one meeting.

The Newscast was given by Mrs. C. Lawrence Brazil held a youth conference when over one thousand attended. In Germany and Russia Bibles are more popular now than in the past. The oldest Baptist Church in Canada is on Goat Island, N.S.

Prayer requests were given by Mrs. G.F. Knights. Prayers were offered for the hungry and for the missionaries that they may receive spiritual food. Thanks and praise were given for a new task force in Africa.

Money was voted to give to "One hour of sharing" to help those who are starving. Mrs. Ola Gibson thanked everyone for the cards and gifts she had received while in hospital and at home.

Hymns were used throughout the meeting, the closing hymn being, "Lord, while for all mankind we pray, of every clime and coast".

A generous offering was taken up for Missions, then Mrs. R. Gibson closed the meeting with prayer.

MANN FOUND GUILTY

MONTREAL (CP) — Jimmy Mann, one of the first choices in the professional hockey draft in August, was found guilty Wednesday of assault in a hockey fight last year in which another player suffered a fractured nose.

Mann, a former right winger with the Sherbrooke Beavers of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League, was given an unconditional release.

Lawyer Jean-Laurier Demers argued that the hockey player had been defending himself and brought honor to his team, his province and his country. Mann had been charged with assault causing bodily harm but the charge was reduced to assault.

It was Mann's second unconditional release on an assault charge.

Als' training camp opens here

By GUS HAIG
SHERBROOKE — There will be some sore bodies walking around the University of Sherbrooke today as the Montreal Alouettes got down to business in earnest yesterday. The dreaded two-day practices commenced yesterday morning and Joe Scarella and his collection of assistants put some 45 rookie hopefuls through some rugged paces. The veterans are expected to arrive late tomorrow evening, after the customary physical examinations are done with.

There was some fierce hitting on the field yesterday. The youngsters were broken into different groups before coming together for a mini-scrimmage and some head-busting in full gear. The camp thus far consists of 35 rooks, four junior players with the Verdun Maple Leafs and six vets who decided to get a jump on the more established members of last year's Grey Cup finalists.

Following yesterday morning's practice, all the hopefuls were subjected to a 40-yard sprint which were eyed carefully by Scarella and his staff. There were grumbings immediately afterwards by some of the players who claimed that the uneven terrain at the campsite slowed them down considerably. In all fairness, the field — well, even the cows would be embarrassed to do their thing. In spite of the conditions, there were some very impressive times turned in. Charles Burgess, who can indeed run like the wind, ran a 4.5 forty. Burgess looks like he has a legitimate shot at sticking with the club, although Scarella wasn't tipping his hand at this early stage.

Ron Calcagni, who will be battling Joe Barnes and Montreal's own Gerry Dattilio for the QB spot, was at the throttle throughout the practice. The former University of Arkansas star is vying for a spot due to the gaping hole left by Sonny Wade's defection to the National Football League.

There are holes elsewhere. Chuck Zapiec and Vernon Perry went south of the border as well, so there are spots available. The rookies will have at least a couple of days of hanging out with the big boys before the grim reaper (also known as the first cuts) comes courting.

Former Bishop's standout Nick Aragki was the only local product in camp. He will be joined tomorrow by another former Gaiter, Larry Smith, who incidentally has not missed a single game since joining the Als eight years ago. Aragki was the favorite of the handful of curious spectators who gathered at the practices yesterday. Even in this sea of beef, Aragki was the most imposing figure on the field physically — for what it's worth. Hang in there, Nick. Stay tuned...

It's official: Cherry signs with Rockies

DENVER (AP) — Colorado Rockies have landed Don Cherry in a move the National Hockey League team is calling the most significant event in the history of the franchise. Cherry, the controversial but highly-successful former coach of Boston Bruins, was named Wednesday as coach of the Rockies.

At a news conference, Rockies general manager Ray Miron said Cherry has signed a multi-year contract which makes him the highest-paid coach in the

NHL. Miron declined to give the exact terms of the contract, but published reports earlier in the week out of Boston put the pact at around $150,000 a season over five years. Cherry became available after the Bruins announced last week that he had been released from his contract, which ran through July 31. The 45-year-old Cherry is reported to have had philosophical differences with the Bruins management and also was outspoken in his belief that he was vastly underpaid at $60,000 a year.

But Cherry said money wasn't the only factor in his decision to take over the team which had the worst record in the NHL last season (15-53-12), as well as the lowest attendance.

Bruins' head coach, Cherry led the club to four straight Adams Division titles. Two of those seasons Boston reached the Stanley Cup final, and, in the other two, reached the semi-finals.

Cherry compiled a 231-105-64 record at Boston. During the same period, the Colorado franchise was 81-249-70, the first two years of which were in Kansas City. Cherry said his coaching philosophy is simple.

Bowman says he'll decide by weekend

TORONTO (CP) — Scotty Bowman, who has guided Montreal Canadiens to five Stanley Cup championships in the eight seasons he has coached the National Hockey League club, is seriously considering joining Toronto Maple Leafs as general manager. In a telephone interview from Florida where he is on vacation, Bowman said Wednesday he will know by the end of the week whether or not he will leave the Canadiens.

A clause in his contract allows him to explore NHL managerial possibilities for the next 10 days.

"My agent (Gerry Petrie) will be coming down here Thursday (today) and we will be going over a couple of the offers I have received," Bowman said.

Petrie has said Bowman has received offers from four clubs. Buffalo Sabres are reported interested in offering the 45-year-old Bowman the dual job of coach and general manager, while his role with the Leafs would probably be that of strictly general manager.

"I've thought about my future in hockey for some time and I don't want to go on just being a coach," Bowman said. "I've got my family to think about. Toronto is an attractive alternative."

Bowman would replace Jim Gregory as the Leafs' general manager, with the Toronto coaching situation still in doubt. Roger Neilson's contract as coach has expired and he has not been offered a new deal, and the Leafs lost out in the bidding war for Don Cherry when the former Boston Bruins coach signed Wednesday with Colorado Rockies.

Edwards' future cloudy

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Jimmy Edwards, the Canadian Football League's outstanding player in 1977 and rushing leader in the Eastern Conference the last three years, will not be back with Hamilton Tiger-Cats this season, coach John Payne said Wednesday.

The coach said the running back will be traded or released.

Payne said Edwards, 26, a graduate of North East Louisiana University, had come to training camp "a little late" complaining of a sore foot but that numerous tests had found no damage and the medical staff had declared him fit for practice.

Sonics lead NBA series 3-1

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Seattle SuperSonics are on cloud nine.

The Sonics, with a commanding 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven series with defending champions Washington Bullets, can win their first National Basketball Association title Friday night.

"We have been fighting off adversity all year long," guard Fred Brown said. "But here we are, one game away from the world championship."

The Sonics got a big boost Tuesday night by winning their third straight game over the Bullets 114-112 in overtime in a contest that featured 58 fouls and 72 free-throw attempts.

Although no team has ever come back from a 3-1 deficit in an NBA final, the Bullets won three in a row to win the Eastern championship against the San Antonio Spurs.

Turcotte named man-of-year

TORONTO (CP) — Ron Turcotte, who rode Secretariat to his Triple Crown victory in 1973, has been named Canadian horse racing's man of the year.

George Frostad, chairman of the Sovereign Awards committee and a member of the Jockey Club of Canada, announced Turcotte's selection at Woodbine race track Wednesday.

The Sovereign Awards are selected in a vote of selected sports writers, racing secretaries and employees of the Daily Racing Form across Canada.

The presentation will be made to the Grand Falls, N.B., native at the Sovereign Awards dinner here June 28. Awards will also be presented to the outstanding individuals last year in Canadian thoroughbred racing.

Turcotte's career ended in a spill last July 13 at New York's Belmont Park which left him paralysed from the waist down.

Canadian canoeists on tour

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian canoeists, who will try to paddle their way back into the top-10 rankings at the world championships in August, embark on a month-long European tour next week.

The 19-member paddling team, dominated by Quebec and Ontario, will compete on successive weekends in Holland, Belgium, England and Scotland.

Ross Bales, technical co-ordinator of the Canadian Canoe Association, said the team needs all the international experience it can get prior to the world championships in West Germany.

The team finished ninth in the 1977 championships but fell to 14th place last year.

"We hope to do much better this year," Bales said.

Holdovers from the 1976 Montreal Olympic team include Hugh Fisher of Burnaby, B.C., Sue Holloway of Ottawa, Reed Oldershaw and Greg Smith of Mississauga, Ont., Karen Lukanovich and Steve King of Montreal and Denis Barre of Quebec City.

HOW to Write a Classified Ad that Sells!

GIVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

An ad that's too short becomes expensive if it doesn't sell your item. "Golf Clubs, 000-0000" leaves the reader with too many questions. What kind? What model? Condition? State the price or say "Make an offer"

STATE THE ITEM

Tell your readers exactly what you're selling right away. Don't bother with fancy features yet. They don't want to know it's "Wilson K28" until after they know it's a set of golf clubs.

BE HONEST

Don't omit obvious flaws or exaggerate the quality. "Never used" might get lots of calls but "damaged number three iron" may get more offers. Your readers want to buy from someone that they can trust.

MAKE SURE CUSTOMERS CAN REACH YOU

Just a phone number is enough if you will be home all the time the ad is running. If not, your caller may get discouraged and decide not to call back. By adding "After 6 P.M." your customer knows exactly when he can reach you.

GET TO THE POINT

Avoid long-winded language when short phrases will do. "Super deluxe, attractive blue and white Atlantic bag" can be shortened to "blue and white Atlantic bag." That way you can convey a lot of information while taking advantage of our low Person-to-Person rates.

A well-written classified ad will sell just about any item or service you're selling. The example above suggests a few ways to make your ad effective. But even the best ad won't do the job unless you put it in the right place. In our Classifieds. In the Classified, your ad will reach your best prospects at the lowest price. It will be read by ready buyers in your area, the ones most likely to come over and complete the sale. So when you're placing an ad for anything, make it count. By writing it the right way and putting it in the right place. In our Classifieds.

Elated Lee has a shave after shutting out Phillies

By TERRY SCOTT
MONTREAL (CP) — Lefthander Bill Lee of Montreal Expos would prefer to fade into obscurity in spite of recording his fifth victory of the National League baseball season.

"I want to remain anonymous for the next couple of months," said Lee, after shaving off the beard he's been cultivating for more than a year following his 2-0 conquest of Philadelphia Phillies on Wednesday.

The shutout was Montreal's second straight over the Phillies and increased the club's lead to two games over Philadelphia in the East Division.

While Lee was engaging in post-game hijinks, his performance on the field was no joke to the staggering Phillies, who were tamed for the sixth time in their last seven starts by the 32-year-old southpaw's four-hitter, raising his record to 5-2.

The whitewash, coming after a 9-0 victory by Steve Rogers on Tuesday, stretched the Expos shutout string against Philadelphia to 22 consecutive innings.

PROVIDES PUNCH

Gary Carter's second-inning home run, his ninth of the season, on the heels of a single by Tony Perez, provided all the runs Lee required to "shave" the Phillies.

"He was out of gas in the sixth inning," said manager Dick Williams of his pitcher.

"He told me he had three fastballs left and he proceeded to use two of them on Greg Luzinski."

But Lee reached deeper into his bag of pitching repertoire and came up with an assortment of sinkers and slow curve balls to keep the Philadelphia hitters off balance.

"Actually, I lost my fastball in the third inning," said Lee. "But there's all degrees of fastballs. It's all very relative."

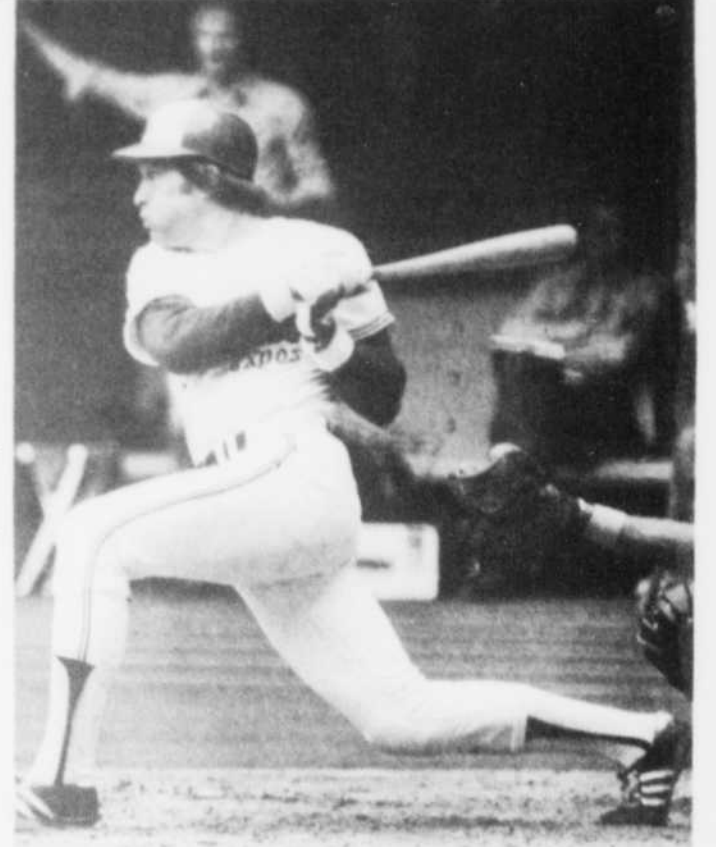

His most serious threat came in the ninth when Luzinski and Bob Boone singled in between a pair of outs but with reliever Elias Sosa ready in the bullpen, Lee retired Ramon Aviles on a fly ball to end the game.

Carter's blast was the only blemish on a strong six-inning outing by Nino Espinosa, 5-5, and was the Montreal catcher's first homer since May 6.

The victory was the eighth in their last 10 games for the Expos, who will conclude the three-game series with Philadelphia today by sending Scott Sanderson, 3-3, against Larry Christenson, 0-1.

In the other NL games, Los Angeles Dodgers edged San Francisco Giants 6-5, San Diego Padres hammered Atlanta Braves 10-2, Pittsburgh Pirates whipped Chicago Cubs 9-2, St. Louis Cardinals defeated New York Mets 7-3 and Houston Astros downed Cincinnati Reds 6-3.

GARY CARTER... another crucial homer

Red-faced Bosox can't handle Texas Rangers

Texas Rangers always get their man — and their man always seems to be Boston Red Sox.

The Rangers made it nine in a row over the red-faced Red Sox in Arlington Stadium on Wednesday night when Richie Zisk singled Al Oliver home from second base in the 10th inning for a 3-2 American League baseball triumph. The Red Sox haven't won in Texas since September, 1977.

"I guess everybody knows we have lost nine in a row in Texas," said Boston manager Don Zimmer. "That's what happens when you don't get clutch hits and leave runners on base. We left six on base in the last five innings."

In other AL action, Kansas City Royals nipped Baltimore Orioles 2-1. New York Yankees downed Milwaukee Brewers 5-2 in 11 innings. California Angels edged Seattle Mariners 3-2. Oakland A's shaded Minnesota Twins 5-4. Detroit Tigers whipped Toronto Blue Jays 8-2 and Cleveland Indians beat Chicago White Sox 6-4.

Oliver opened the Rangers' 10th with a single off reliever Dick Drago for his fourth hit and Bill Sample sacrificed. After an intentional walk to Pat Putnam, Zisk, hitting only .240, came through with just his 18th RBI of the year.

Unbeaten Texas reliever Jim Kern earned his seventh victory by allowing two hits in four innings.

Royals 2 Orioles 1

Amos Otis hit a two-run homer in the first inning and Rich Gale pitched out of several jams before giving way to Al Hrabosky in the ninth. George Brett singled with one out in the Kansas City first and with two out Otis hammered a Mike Flanagan pitch for his third home run of the season and 144th of his career, making him Kansas City's all-time leader, surpassing John Mayberry's 143.

Yankees 5 Brewers 2

Juan Beniquez and Bucky Dent hit sacrifice flies and Mickey Rivers added a run-scoring double in New York's three-run 11th inning. Play was interrupted for 32 minutes when 6-foot-4, 217-pound Cliff Johnson collided with plate umpire Lou DiMuro after scoring the second run of the inning.

DiMuro, who was conscientious and responsive to questions, was taken by ambulance to a hospital for treatment of possible neck or back injuries. However, x-rays showed no damage.

An unusual umpire candidate...

By JOHN McCAGHEY
WEST BOLTON — Things get stranger and stranger — at least Casey Drogheda was eliminated as the umpire in chief of the local Lob-Ball league at a meeting in Brome last week. Now Patty Ellison, wife of publican Barry, who started the geriatric exercise outside the Thirsty Boot, has had the temerity to suggest "George" could take over.

An obviously unilateral decision on her part, however, those who have lived along the Liffey are so inclined, but a one-week-old calf of dubious lineage can never replace an Irish Setter!

"He came out of 'MOO' with an assist from St. Hyacinthe through their breeding program," Patty said. "As our first grandchild, he should adapt to the situation rapidly. 'MOO' umpired all the 'trials' (practices) held last year and did more than adequately."

When queried on the suggested umpire's lineage, Mrs. Ellison said it was a stray which was left to them and they made sure there was a continuation of the breed.

"Although he is only four days old and a bit shaky his feet, he is still giving 'Primrose', our goat, a good run for his money around the pen."

Fern Pouliot, manager of the Boot's team, was contacted north of Sault aux Moutons where he was, to that point, enjoying a fishing trip.

"That's the absolute worst suggestion I have ever heard — dogs can be told to take off, and, although I have never been a sailor, if I can't make a ewe turn I can make its eyes pop."

"Dogging around was bad enough but this is the almost absolute end. I heard that Patty was a great friend of your publisher, enough said."

The season, which was to have gotten underway last weekend, will start in serious on Sunday.

Mrs. Ellison told us, all kidding aside that she and Barry have been more than gratified over the excellent response they have received following the New Year's Tourney when they managed to collect enough funds to look after one child at Camp Garagona for one camping session this summer.

Garagona is a project of the District of Bedford Association for the Mentally Retarded operated and mainly funded by local contributions.

Guides-Brownies Mother and Daughter Banquet held

RICHMOND — How attractive the Legion Hall in Richmond looked on Tuesday evening, May 15, when the Brownies, Guides, their mothers and honoured guests gathered for the annual Mother & Daughter Banquet. Long tables were adorned with blue and white table cloths and centerpieces. Brownie and Guide faces made of tissue rolls covered with paper doilies, had been made by Guider Mrs. Nancy Benoit, assisted by Mrs. Josie Fowler. The head table was decorated with a beautiful plant, donated by Richmond Florist, which was later raffled and won by Guide Sharon Henderson.

Seated at the head table were Mrs. Sophie Evans, Division Commissioner; Mrs. Kathy Dalton, Local Association President and her daughter, Brownie Heidi; Mrs. Marge Lancaster, Brown Owl; Mrs. Dorothy Bedard, Guide Captain and her daughter, Guide Denise. At the other end of the hall, a long table groined under the load of delicious casseroles, salads and rolls supplied by the mothers. A variety of pies for dessert had been made by the Guiders and the Local Association executive. As each person entered, she received a place card, daintily decorated with dried flowers and worded "Welcome to our Mother and Daughter Banquet 1979", which had been made by the Guiders, assisted by Guider Miss Dawn Goodby and Mrs. Pat Whitty. While waiting, the guests were entertained by Donna Noel, Ranger, at the piano.

The evening opened by Donna leading the girls in the singing of the Hunger Grace, after which everyone enjoyed the buffet meal, served and cleared away by fathers R. Benoit, E. Clark, G. Blouin, R. Lancaster and O. Fournier. During the meal, toasts were proposed to the Queen by Brownie Missy Johnston, to the mothers by Guide Sharon Henderson and to the Guiders by Ranger Donna Noel.

Following the meal, Mrs. Dalton welcomed everyone and expressed her pleasure at seeing such a large turnout. She stressed the importance of attending the next L.A. meeting, to be held on June 14 at 7:30 p.m. in St. Ann's Church Hall, when elections for executive and committees would be held. Mrs. Dalton then went on to say that as Guiders and executive retired after several years' service, it was this group's policy to present the retiring workers with souvenir spoons. She proceeded to present them to Miss Wanda Taylor, former Guide Lieutenant; Mrs. Jean Storry and Mrs. Rita Noel, retired L.A. Secretary and President and to Mrs. Ann Clark, former Camp Advisor. Mrs. Evans spoke bilingually of her pleasure at attending Richmond's banquet and appealed to all the mothers that, in this International Year of the Child, each mother support the L.A. wholeheartedly, to make the groups better for the girls. She said she was indeed happy to present long service bars to three ladies who had given well over ten years service to the organization - Mrs. Rita Noel who had served as L.A. President and Ranger Advisor; Mrs. Jean Storry working as L.A. Secretary and Guide Lieutenant, then Guide Captain; and Mrs. Doris Taylor local as well as Division Badge Secretary. These three had also helped out in countless other ways with their support.

The Brownie Guiders were introduced by Mrs. Marge Lancaster, Brown Owl. They were Mrs. Chris Blake, Mrs. Janet Banfill, Mrs. Nancy Benoit, with special mention of Miss Vicki Lancaster, who has helped out in every capacity. She gave her report of a very active Brownie year, which will end with what is becoming an annual joint Brownie-Guide summer camp on June 25 to 28 at Spooner Pond. International Year of the Child pins had been purchased jointly by the L.A. and the groups' funds and were presented to each Brownie, together with their service stars and I.Y.C. crests, which can be worn on the sleeve of their uniforms. Some samples of the impressive work the girls had done to earn these crests was on display around the Hall. The following badges were presented to the 25 Brownies:

Lynda Lynch, Cook, Housekeeper, Signaller,

The Guiders also received their I.Y.C. crests and pins, as well as their service stars - Mrs. Benoit 1st year; Mrs. Banfill 4th year; Mrs. Lancaster 6th year; and Mrs. Blake 7th year. Each year, the Six with the best inspection record win a trophy and this year's winner was the Elvies Six, under Sixer Tina Bushey. The other lucky Brownies of that Six are Sonya Boisee, Debra Fortier, Laurie Clifford, Tracey Brown, Sarah Fowler and Helen Begin.

This ceremony completed, Mrs. Lancaster said each year a Brownie is chosen as winner of a plaque. The Brownie recipient displays qualities of leadership, follows her law, promise and motto in all her doings. This year's winner was a beaming Missy Johnston.

The limelight swung to the Guiders next, when Mrs. Bedard, Guide Captain, introduced her Lieutenants, Misses Dawn Goodby and Vicki Blouin, then gave a report on the year's programme of the twelve Guides. Each Guide and Guider received her service star and I.Y.C. pin, as well as badges earned.

The next item on the programme was the traditional flying-up ceremony for four Brownies, while Holly Blouin "walked" up to Guides. The four flyers were Missy Johnston, Tina Bushey, Vicki Murphy and Lynda Lynch, who were warmly welcomed by the entire Guide Company.

Mrs. Dalton displayed a crib quilt which had been lovingly made by five of last year's Guiders, under the guidance of Mrs. Pearl Storry and donated to the L.A. to aid their work for the groups. Colleen Johnston, Vicki Lancaster, Helen Bedard and Patty Fowler were introduced. Both Kelley Storry and Mrs. Pearl Storry were absent through illness. Many tickets had been sold and the winner of the quilt was Mrs. Ann Tyler of Drummondville.

On behalf of the invited guests, Mrs. Rita Noel thanked the L.A. for their invitation to the Banquet. The helpful men in the kitchen were called out to be thanked with a round of applause.

A pleasant evening closed with everyone forming a giant circle around the Hall and joining in the singing of Taps. Guide cookies were on sale for those wishing to purchase them and the Guides had a table of used books, many of which were soon picked up.
