Mao's answer to nuclear treaty

Chinese test is expected

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — (NEA) — Red China is expected to explode an atomic device in October as Mao Tse-tung's answer to the treaty on a partial test ban among the United States, Britain and Russia.

Asian diplomats in touch with Peking predict that the Chinese test will take place in the province of Sinkiang on the 13th anniversary of Mao's seizure of power.

Nikita Khrushchev assured U.S. Undersecretary of State Averell Harriman that it will be a "long, long time" before the Chinese had a nuclear capability of their own.

But Ho Chi Minh, president of Communist North Viet Nam, asserts Peking will be producing nuclear weapons "in the near future."

Ho Chi Minh, who backs Mao in his conflict with Khrushchev, is a battle-scarred Red who was once the Communist International's chief of Southeast Asia.

To retain power in Viet Nam, he had to calculate shrewdly before throwing his support to Mao.

Despite Khrushchev's assurances, Asian diplomats also are convinced that the Chinese are well advanced on a nuclear weapon. They fear the psychological impact the Chinese explosion of even a "crude" bomb will have in Asia. In their view, it will be foolhardy to let enthusiasms of the test ban treaty blind the United States to the peril of relying on the Russians and freezing out the Chinese.

Could it be that American experts underrated Red China as they once underrated Khrushchev himself? It is a historic fact that the Russian atomic bomb and the first hydrogen bomb explosions came well before the dates forecast by the United States experts.

As early as 1955 — shortly after Khrushchev met with Gen. Eisenhower at the first Geneva summit meeting — the Russians began to supply China with natural uranium thorium, Uranium 233 and

By LEON DENNEN

235, tritium, plutonium and heavy water. They also delivered to Peking TU4 bombers — Russia's equivalent to the U.S. B29 which dropped the atomic bombs on Japan — and twin-jet IL28 light bombers.

Premier Khrushchev may well regret today that he trusted the Chinese and did not adhere more fully to the "historic spirit of Geneva." When, in 1960, the Russians discontinued all technical assistance to the Chinese nuclear development program, Mao's scientists were already well advanced on a do-it-yourself program.

In addition to the nuclear reactor in Sinkiang which the Russians helped the Chinese put into operation in June 1958, Mao is also believed to have reactors in Northern Manchuria, Chungking and a uranium plant in Urumchi to process Chinese ores from Sinkiang and Tibet.

These presumably produce enough plutonium for two test devices this year and a dozen bombs in five years. Although it will undoubtedly take some years before the Chinese develop modern delivery systems, they have enough TU4 bombers to threaten India and terrorize all Asia.

The world must therefore be prepared to see the infamous mushroom-shaped cloud over China this year. And those who think seriously of international affairs must be prepared for the waves of public reaction that Chinese explosion will produce.

The Chinese bomb, coupled with what is known of Mao's ambitions, will strike fear into the hearts of millions.

Why, then, did Khrushchev, in his confidential talk with Ambassador Harriman, show "complete unconcern" with China's nuclear progress? It is hardly in the nature of the man — unless he has urgent and compelling reasons — to invite more bricksbats from the Reds by revealing to a "capitalist American" military secrets about a Red nation with whom Russia is still allied through a mutual military assistance pact.

In the view of specialists on communism, Khrushchev needs badly the "historic" diversion of the test ban treaty while he mends his crumbling fences in the Red world.

He desperately wants to avoid what every statesman dreads — a two-front conflict with China and the West. He also hopes to gain other benefits at a summit meeting with President Kennedy, including expanded East-West trade that will serve as a tranquilizer for Russia's restive satellites.

But the United States Senate cannot underrate or ignore China in the debate on the ratification of the test ban agreement.

'Pairing' loses its appeal for parliamentarians lately it got to the ridiculous point."

And Stanley Knowles, New Democratic Whip, claims pairing "encourages absenteeism. It is completely one-sided, and only benefits the Government."

THE VOTE-PAIRING system was inherited by Canada from Westminster, although it has no official recognition either here or in Britain. Despite this, Members since Confederation have repeatedly found it a useful device. It operates this way:

When a certain Member — usually a Cabinet Minister — has to be absent from the Commons, he arranges with another MP from the Opposition side to abstain on crucial or non-confidence votes. Thus the Members are "paired" and a vote is neutralized on each side.

In times of a minority government, pairing becomes extremely important. For it's

Try joining Negroes' struggle

Communist aid unwelcome

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Secretary Gus Hall and the American Communist party are making a determined attempt to infiltrate the civil rights struggle.

On July 11, the Communist Party U.S.A. issued secret orders to its members to get in on the August 28 Negro March on Washington. In other communications, Hall and the other party bosses have instructed Communists, white and Negro, to join in Negro demonstrations in their communities.

The information in this dispatch comes from authoritative sources.

The Reds are meeting with resistance. The Daily Worker of July 7 complained in this regard that, "It is also a fact to be reckoned with, that some of the most respected and dedicated of the Negro people's leaders, who are themselves often the target of slanderous Red-smears, continue to indulge in the McCarthyite-age fashion of genuflecting before the 'sacred symbol' of anti-communism."

Some of the major Negro organizations have already taken steps to warn their people of the new Communist approach. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has research men who study the Daily Worker and the National Guardian in order to keep abreast of the twists and turns of Communist action.

Just recently, Dr. John Morsell, assistant to NAACP Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins, passed around a memorandum to key personnel outlining the latest Communist ist approach and writing below it, "For your information — what they are up to now."

Because of this resistance among the national Negro leadership, the Communist Party U.S.A. is now sending specialized Communists to attempt infiltration into the local branches of the Negro civil rights organizations. It is attempting to get its people in on local demonstrations. It is putting a major emphasis on new groups led by young and inexperienced leaders.

These Communists are

"sleepers." They have been instructed to keep their party membership and Communist sympathies secret from the public and from the Negroes they are volunteering to work with. These infiltrators have been instructed not to take overly prominent roles in civil rights demonstrations, nor to openly push for violence, for fear they'll be investigated and their Communist identity become known.

This grass roots attempt to infiltrate the civil rights movement is currently, at least, one of the major activities of the Communist Party U.S.A. It is part of a long-standing Communist aim of winning over Negroes. In the past the party has been singularly unsuccessful with the southern Negro. Reports by the Justice Department have consistently shown membership in the South to be slight.

It is too early to tell how successful the Communists will be in their current drive. Reports indicate that so far the number of these secret Communists who have participated in most southern demonstrations have been quite small; usually, it's reported, only a handful. Their appearance has been spotty. There were some Communists seen

Which brings up another topic of conversation — swimming is compulsory in Iceland.

If a child hasn't learned by the time he or she is 8, swimming becomes a school subject.

The thermal springs, too, put Iceland into the tropical fruit business. In green-houses, heated by the thermal waters, bananas ripen to luscious yellowness and tomatoes to a bright red.

There is ice in Iceland, but as a summer tourist all I could do was see it, not touch.

The island's major glacier (Vatnajökull) covers more than 3,140 square miles and is the largest in Europe. I didn't get closer to it than about 40 miles.

But the word Europe opened up a new line of questioning for me.

"Is Iceland under American or European influence?" I asked an Icelandic friend.

"We remain Europeans," was the firm response.

But a few days in this conversation-piece land made me feel that my informant was wrong.

Icelanders are a race unto themselves, adopting from both America and Europe the best ways of life, but retaining the sturdy independence and integrity of their Viking heritage.

As in Canada, aviation has played a major part in developing Iceland (there are more than a score of landing fields served by scheduled flights) and in linking the land with the rest of the world.

Seat belts may become regular equipment

NEW YORK — (NEA) — After three years of dispatches from this reporter and persistent efforts by consumer and civic organizations, the United States automobile industry may at long last begin installing safety seat belts as an item of standard equipment on all new models.

Usually reliable sources close to the car makers say that the industry is now deliberating whether to install the belts at this time as a voluntary move rather than wait until coast-to-coast legislation makes it mandatory.

At present nearly 20 states require safety belts on either 1963 or 1964 models. The auto industry offers the belts as standard equipment on only two models — both of them higher-priced cars. One manufacturer is offering the belts on all of his models, but only as optional gear with a price saving if you choose not to take them.

An across-the-board assembly-line seat belt installation on new cars, however, would represent a remarkable change of Detroit policy toward both cars and drivers.

When this reporter first looked into the seat belt story nearly a decade ago, Cornell University had just demonstrated the effectiveness of safety belts in auto crash test experiments.

Despite test results that predicted 5,000 lives saved and upward of a half-million injuries avoided yearly with the use of belts, auto industry interest could be measured by the yawn. But belt, webbing and buckle manufacturers saw in the statistics an impending change in auto safety legislation — and, with more than 80 million cars on the roads, an enormous market.

When this reporter looked in on the auto belt story again six years later, the situation could be described best in one word: mess.

Three states and federal government specifications required belts on vehicles. Many civic groups had endorsed the use of properly made and properly installed belts.

But who could say for sure just what those specifications were? In addition, the belt industry had become a teaming market place, with fl-ly installed) belts was on the assembly line.

The auto industry responded meagerly two years ago by agreeing to provide seat belt anchors in new models — holes drilled in the frame for affixing the belt hardware.

"There are two reasons why we're not putting in belts," an auto company spokesman told this reporter at the time.

"First, because it's bad for the image. Seats belts in a new car might make a customer think he was buying something that wasn't safe."

"And second, because cars are a highly competitive item. Unless every manufacturer installed them, cars without belts could sell for consider-

News in brief

Suspends guards

MONTREAL (CP) — Albert Tanguay, Bordeaux jail governor, said Friday he has suspended three rookie guards who tried to form a union at the jail.

Under law, prison guards, like provincial police officers, are forbidden to form any association for collective bargaining.

Governor Tanguay said a report will be sent to the attorney-general's department "which will decide the future of the three guards."

To bury baby

BOSTON (AP) — President Kennedy prepared to bury his son today with a special mass for children said by his close personal friend, Richard Cardinal Cushing, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Boston.

Mrs. Kennedy remained at the Otis Air Force Base Hospital recuperating from the caesarean section delivery in which she gave birth to Patrick Bouvier Kennedy Wednesday.

The third child of the president died Friday at Boston's Children's Hospital Medical Centre nearly 40 hours after his birth.

To end talks

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Church leaders representing 44,000,000 Anglicans throughout the world were to wind up preliminary talks here today before departing over the weekend for the Anglican world congress in Toronto.

Scheduled to hold their final discussions were the advisory council on missionary strategy and the Lambeth consultative body, both of which are composed of archbishops of the 18 autonomous churches in 75 countries within the Anglican communion.

The heads of 48 Anglican colleges from all over the world ended their conference Friday.

One church primate who attended talks here will be unable to go on to Toronto for the congress.

Rusk to Bonn

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk comes to Bonn today to rally West German support for the nuclear test-ban treaty after nuclear test-ban talks with Soviet Premier Khrushchev on cold war issues.

Rusk scheduled the 20-hour stop partly to soothe West German apprehension over the limited test-ban pact which Communist East Germany plans to sign. Bonn fears the treaty could be manipulated to force recognition of East Germany and seal the division of Germany.

West Germany wants assurance that the test treaty will not be used to jeopardize the freedom and security of West Berlin.

Broke ring

MONTREAL (CP) — A United States Federal Bureau of Narcotics undercover agent, working in Montreal, was the key man in breaking up a multi-million dollar international narcotics ring piping drugs from Europe to North America.

Police in Paris, Montreal and New York Friday announced the arrest of five men and seized 13 pounds of heroin with an underworld retail value of $3,000,000.

Those arrested are Roger Laviolette, 40, Alain Phaneuf, 30, Roger Lapierre, 40, all of Montreal, Anatole Ethier, 35, of Rockland, Ont., and wealthy Paris restaurant owner Roger Coudret.

SKILL MAKES UP FOR OVERBID
If you want to overbid a little, that is fine. All you have to do is to play the hand well, and also find the opponents' cards favorably located.

In this connection Arlene Monheim of Steubenville, Ohio, writes, "I don't suppose you approve of my five club bid, but I was playing with a very conservative partner and I felt like overbidding a trifle. I couldn't have overbid too much because I would not make an extra trick after my opponents each led a trump."

Her play is a good example of giving the cards a chance to

She discarded her one heart on the ace of spades, returned to her hand by ruffing a heart, played her last trump to pull West's last tooth, and claimed the balance with her remaining three diamonds.

The Doctor Says

ALL INSECTS CAN IRRITATE BUT TICKS WIN TOP HONORS.

Bees, wasps and hornets are not the only insects that may cause trouble this summer, although they are the commonest causes of severe discomfort.

The next most dangerous is the wood tick which is not truly an insect. Insects have six legs and ticks and other arthropods have eight. Ticks are common in grassy and wooded areas. They drop from low bushes or grass stalks onto animals or persons and spend several hours crawling around looking for a relatively undisturbed place in which to feed.

Before they attach themselves to the skin they can be readily brushed off. They feed by burrowing the length of their head into the skin then sucking your blood.

This would do you no harm were it not for the fact that they carry the germs of Rocky Mountain spotted fever in their saliva and will pass it on to you without a quail. Once they are firmly attached to the skin they cannot be brushed off but the quicker they are removed the better.

If not removed they have been known to remain attached to the skin for over a week. They can be removed by touching them with the end of a match that has been struck and then blown out, or by coating them completely with finger nail lacquer or thick oil then gently pulling them out with tweezers.

Do not use your fingers to pull them out or crush them because in this way you may get infectious matter on you. Once removed, the tick should be dropped into a fire or into kerosene, alcohol, or turpentine. If in removing them the head remains buried in your skin as sometimes happens, it must be dug out. This is a painful process at best.

When the tick has been removed, whether whole or piece-meal, the wound should be painted with tincture of iodine and the hands should be thoroughly washed with soap and water.

When you go into a tick-infested area wear protective clothing with elastic at the openings. High boots provide a further protection. The clothing should be sprayed with a tick repellent such as diethyltoluamide (Deet). The body and clothing should be inspected daily or better still twice a day for ticks. This type of clothing also protects against chiggers.

Consultants study use of Brome land

In a small office room on the main street in Knowlton, you'll find a group of people hard at work.

Plastered on the walls are maps. At one end of the room, a geomorphologist studies an aerial photograph. In one corner a girl is tabulating results of a survey just completed, and near the door a geographer is drawing a population map.

In this hub of activity, a regional planning consultants firm from Montreal is centering its operations of a major land use study which it has been undertaken in six Eastern Township counties.

The company, Societe Technique d'Aménagement Regional (STAR), has 10 men working at this particular site, while the company is also working on another similar project in the Rouge Valley watershed in the Laurentian-Ottawa Valley area.

In Knowlton, STAR has an economist, geographers, planners, geomorphologists, agronomists and civil engineers.

The object of the project will be to produce a practical, comprehensive plan for the use of land and improvement of the local economy, taking into account (1.) basic resources of the region, (2.) existing legislation for the consolidation and reuse of land, (3.) the potential for re-orientation of human resources.

"The final plan for the area would recommend precise means for improving farm incomes," said W. T. Perks, STAR's supervisor for this project. "This may be accomplished by various means such as by land consolidation, technical and financial assistance to improve production and safe guard highly productive farm enterprises."

"Other sectors of industry and population will also benefit," Mr. Perks said, "since possibilities and means will be explored for encouraging industrial growth."

The survey will take in Brome County, part of Missisquoi County, half of Sherbrooke County, Stanstead County, the west section of Sherbrooke County and Richmond County on the west side of the St. Francis River.

The project has been divided into two phases. The first is in an inventory of resources which is being carried out in the areas at this moment, and should be completed in seven months.

The second phase is an analysis of the inventory which will be completed in Montreal, the headquarters for the consulting firm.

The first phase of the project will cost the federal and provincial governments, which are financing the program in conjunction with ARDA legislation, approximately $68,000, exclusive of aerial photographs (expected to cost another $30,000). This phase which was started in June, is expected to be completed by February 1964.

The second phase of the project will take another nine months, and will cost approximately the same amount. The work of the first phase has been split into seven different areas of study. They are: (1.) state of the agricultural economy and land use, (2.) farm management, (3.) tourists, (4.) population, (5.)

regional economy, (6.) conservation and (7.) communication and energy.

STAR considers the tourist survey will be one of the more significant ones in the area, as it is a major source of revenue.

"Tourism in the area can no longer be considered as a casual occupation or sideline," said Mr. Perks. "It is a modern industry from which the whole community benefit if proper investment planning is adopted and chaotic use of land is avoided."

A tourist questionnaire will be asking about 20 per cent of all summer residents living in the areas where the survey is being carried out, such questions as their place of permanent residence, their occupation, how long they stay in the area as tourists, and how much they spend when they are living in their second home.

A second aspect of the tourist survey will be to study two tourist areas that are close to a community of 1,000 people or more. The two sites chosen are Knowlton at Lake Brome, and Sutton which neighbors some of the Townships' finest mountains.

Some interesting findings have already come out of the pre-survey that has been done on tourism in the area.

"We have found out that the French people tend to spend more money on entertainment than English people," said Bryn Greer-Woottem, a demographer and geographer with the consulting firm.

The geographers with STAR have also been hard at work on population studies in the surveyed areas. They have mapped their results which will act as part of the inventory used for analysis in the second phase of the study.

"The end result on the population survey will be an attempt of forecasting future population in various sectors," said James Hogg of Montreal, a graduate geographer of McGill University.

A soil and physical geography study is also in the workings. The study will attempt to establish the optimum use of land. Demographers and geologists study aerial maps, identify different land masses, and then mark down its probable type of soil construction. When an area has been mapped in this manner the demographers will confirm their soil identifications by going to the area and testing the soil content in different localities.

Another important aspect of the study being done in the Eastern Townships area is the farm survey. The aim of the study is to establish the type of farming carried on, the income and expenditures from the farm, and the demographic aspects on the farm population which were not given in the last census.

The survey is expected to show the changes in agricultural density, and will probably give statisticians the information needed in making a rough forecast of the number of people coming to and leaving the country.

"There have been changes as high as 72 per cent loss in farms in certain areas," said Mr. Hogg.

STAR has also been working with town secretaries of various municipalities in the area who have given them the valuation rolls to determine property ownership in each area.

At the same time the town secretaries can usually tell STAR the use of land, whether it is actually farmed, or owned by an absentee landlord, etc. . . .

"All the information can be brought together, and then the regional optimum use of the land can be worked out later," says Mr. Hogg.

But what will the probable outcome of the land-use study be?

"The probable outcome will be practical and significant projects affecting individuals as well as communities and for which financial assistance is available," says Mr. Perks. "For example a half dozen farms, small in size, with low income yields but situated on favourable soils could be consolidated into one or two highly productive units through financial assistance."

"At the same time, alternative employment and technical training will be provided for those people involved in such a project and for those who wish to improve their standard of living," said Mr. Perks.

But the Montreal consultant went on: "However, let us not be mistaken. No projects or plans will be carried out by state decree or through any compulsion."

"The success of ARDA will depend entirely on the intelligence and good sense of the people who recognize their particular problems and who voluntarily take hold of the opportunity offered to them."

Geography expert Claire Hamilton interviews Mrs. Leslie Armstrong of Knowlton.

Bulldozers available for farms

An additional 1,300 hours of service by provincial government bulldozers for farm improvement work will be available to the farmers of Sherbrooke county during the current season. Labor Minister Carrier Fortin, MLA for Sherbrooke announced Friday afternoon.

Mr. Fortin said this service, which will be available to farmers of St. Eusebe d'Orford, Rock Forest, Capelton and Ascot Township, will be in addition to the regular farm improvement assistance carried out by the government in Sherbrooke County.

Thirteen of the Waterloo Calf club members will present their calves at the Bedford Fair this weekend and six of these will be selected to exhibit at the Sherbrooke Fair.

At Anglican Congress

Christian disunity will be a key issue

By JOHN FRASER
(Record staff reporter)

The world mission of the Anglican communion on the religious, cultural and political frontiers will be explored in Toronto, August 13 to 23 at an international congress that will have no legislative teeth but could determine the pace of Christian unity.

The Anglican Congress, which will bring together about 1,500 bishops, priests and laymen from 340 dioceses throughout the world, representing more than 40,000,000 persons, will provide among other things, the first opportunity for Anglicans, as a body, to assess decisions reached at the last session of the Vatican Council of the Roman Catholic Church.

One of the more important delegates to the Congress is the Reverend T. J. Matthews, rector of St. George's Church, Lennoxville, and one of eight representatives on the Plenary Committee for the Ecclesiastical Province of Canada.

"One of the things I really hope the Congress will bring out," said Archdeacon Matthews, in an interview with The Record Wednesday "is to make people, especially in North America, realize and have an awareness of the problems of their fellow human beings throughout the world."

"I don't think the vast majority of people in North America have the slightest idea of the plight of the other 90 per cent of the world the starvation, filthy living and the lot."

Archdeacon Matthews felt that the most important topic under discussion will be the work of the church in the changing political and racial frontier. "It is here where most of the world's problems lie."

"Another thing which should have top priority for discussion is the fact that the Christian position as a whole is diminishing in the world today. Only thirty-three per cent of the world population is Christian, and if the present decline keeps going at the same rate, only twenty per cent will be Christians in the year 2000."

Attributing the decline in Christianity to a lack of unity, Archdeacon Matthews said "look at the Muslims or the Buddhists. When a young African joins their religion, he becomes a member of a large united family. On the other hand, if he becomes a Christian, he may be a Roman Catholic, or an Anglican, or a Baptist, or any other of the many divisions within our church. This disunity is well on its way to destroying our religion. This is obviously a very serious matter."

"You know, the Anglican Church is a good example of how Christian unity can work. Within our church itself, there are high Anglicans with a certain philosophy and low Anglicans with an altogether different philosophy, and then again you have variations in between the two extremes. Yet they are all part of one church. I've often wondered why our church has been able to stay united in face of these facts. It's certainly not the Bible which binds us, everyone has that. It's not the creed, for everyone has that too, nor is it the sacraments for the same reasons. No, when you look at it closely, it is the ministry of the Anglican church which keeps us together. That more than anything."

Archdeacon Matthews has been a busy contributor to the congress, and has worked towards it in his various official posts for more than three years. Among other things he is on the editorial committee and the program committee.

Perhaps his most interesting contribution was in the form of a suggestion. During the congress week, there will be daily service in St. James Cathedral.

Program of ballet at JMC camp tonight

Tonight's program at the Jeunesses Musicales camp at Mount Orford by Les Grand Ballets Canadiens is entitled Choreographers' Workshop, and will feature several ballet numbers.

The workshop, organized during the summer courses at the ballet company's academy, is a further step in study, practice, and experience for both students and professional members of the company. It will be held at 8:30 p.m.

For the students it provides an opportunity to appear with professionals, dancing to new choreographies created by leading members of the company who also gain experience in this area of their art.

Tonight's program is as follows:
The first piece is Etude by Schumann with choreography by L. Chiriac. This will be followed by Fievre with choreography by Michel Boudot and Concerto in "F" by Haydn with choreography by Brydon Paige.

The fourth work to be presented Saturday evening is Legende with choreography by M. Niderlova and the fifth is Chopin's Pantomime with Brydon Paige the choreographer.

The final piece will be Bach Suite No. 3 and R. Nickolaus is the choreographer.

Wednesday night l'Atelier de Sherbrooke will present their prize-winning show "En Attendant Godot," at the J.M.C. camp.

TODAY IN HISTORY

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Aug. 10, 1963 . . .

The Canadian Bill of Rights guaranteeing human rights and fundamental freedoms in all fields of federal government jurisdiction became law three years ago today — in 1960. The bill's principal operative clauses require the courts to interpret all present and future federal legislation in recognition of the basic human rights and ensure that no one shall be denied access to the courts to protect them by reason of race, religion, sex or color.

1910 — Air mail services were first organized in Britain.

1779 — Royal Engineer John By founded Ottawa.

CONCERN AT INCREASE American health organizations have asked for a $10,000,000 federal appropriation to expand a control program against venereal disease.

MUCH UNWORKED The world has vast resources of untapped arable land and only about four per cent of South America now is under cultivation.

Work for relief logical proposal

Whatever one may think of many of the actions of Newfoundland's Premier Joey Smallwood, most Canadian taxpayers will endorse his suggestion that federal relief legislation be amended to permit the use of unemployment assistance funds for the creation of jobs.

Most Canadian provinces are finding it difficult to carry out many useful works projects because of financial shortage. At the same time they are paying out millions of dollars in assistance to the unemployed who are ineligible for unemployment insurance benefits. The provinces are unable to institute a works-relief program if they wish to receive subsidies from Ottawa.

Premier Smallwood believes, and with reason, that recipients of these assistance payments should be expected to perform some useful work in return for their maintenance. Otherwise, he says, the payments do nothing more than provide subsidized idleness.

In his proposals, the premier suggests that any work performed under the relief program be paid for at current wage rates and that it be of a nature which would not otherwise be performed. These provisions, he believes, would not endanger the jobs of those already employed.

The two-day conference of premiers decided that the question of unemployment assistance deserved further consideration and felt it should be studied at a federal-provincial meeting.

Doubtless there would be many difficulties in the way of implementing Mr. Smallwood's proposals but most of these could be ironed out with the co-operation of all parties concerned.

Work-for-relief might not cut down the burden on the taxpayer but it would assure that he received more in public services for each dollar spent.

Haydn S. Pearson's COUNTRY FLAVOR

A man needs to dunk his doughnuts

A strong-minded man with a wife and daughters inevitably faces certain hazards. It is a natural feminine trait to attempt to guide a man along the accepted channels of social amenities. There are areas of activity, however, where a man should take a stand. It may be wise to ask advice concerning colors of ties and socks; but when it comes to doughnuts a man should write his platform plank and govern himself accordingly.

There is some doubt concerning the invention of the doughnut hole, although Maine folks claim that Captain Hanson Gregory in 1832 was the first to see the potentiality of the circular space. Captain Gregory's wife, according to legend, cut a section from a fried cake so he could place a cake or two over a spoke of the wheel by which he steered his ship.

Dunking Association is vigorously pressing a campaign for dunking freedom. As one reads the long list of available types of doughnuts today, he hopes the younger generations are finding satisfaction in dunking. Over the years certain basic tenets have been established.

To keep dunking on the level of gracious living, a man should break his sinker in two, and then immerse one end of a semi-circle in his coffee. A two-second dunk is about right for most citizens.

Lift the dunked end and pause briefly for drainage. Then unhurriedly lift the coffee-flavored section to the oral cavity. If there is difference of opinion in the family, and wife and daughters are acutely conscious of etiquette books, a man is wise if he goes ahead and dunks and keeps his eyes on the doughnut.

Other papers say:

NDP favors Balkanization of Canada

Meeting in Regina, the delegates to the New Democratic Party youth convention have approved a resolution suggesting the appointment of a French-speaking associate national president of the NDP from Quebec. This follows a rift with the Quebec wing of the party earlier this year.

Toronto Globe and Mail

door to possibilities which should chill the blood of every sensible Canadian. If one political party should have an associate national president from Quebec, obviously all parties should have them. But why stop at Quebec? Of all Provinces, Ontario is the greatest contributor to national income. Surely Ontario deserves an associate national president of the NDP, or of any other party which has a Quebec national president? But should not the Maritimes be represented in any such re-grouping of powers? After all, there are economic arguments that Confederation short-changed the East. Do the Prairie Provinces deserve special consideration? Again, why stop with political parties? If Quebec deserves this kind of special representation in politics, why not in economic affairs? Interprovincial companies should obviously have associate, French-speaking presidents from Quebec.

The departure suggested by the youthful NDP delegates implies a kind of balkanization of political, and presumably economic, powers in Canada at which the mind boggles.

In the Soviet Union

Equality of sexes is a reality

MOSCOW (CP)—Two gnarled old women swathed in black shawls and leaning on wooden sticks stood in front of Moscow's biggest department store looking at a display of modern fashions.

"I tell you this frankly," said a girl in Kiev. "At first we tried to develop our own styles, and we failed. Now we are taking the fashion from other countries, only toned down a little because our tastes are simpler."

One nudged the other and shook her head. "We wouldn't dress like that now because we are too old and we wouldn't have dressed like that when we were young because it wouldn't have been proper."

The true story illustrates the gulf between generations. Just as they talk of a clash between fathers and sons in the Soviet Union, so there is disparity on the distaff side.

It looks as though younger women are trying to escape from the world image of the Soviet female as a bulky, comfortable sort of person, a solid citizen no doubt but utterly devoid of glamor.

The young things want to be more decorative. They wear makeup, take time with their hair and dress as well as modest means permit.

MAKE OWN CLOTHES They confess to a liking for stiletto heels, which they call nails, spires or hairpins, and occasionally try eye shadow or mascara. Spurning store fashions, many of them make their Women outnumber men. The 1959 census counted 115,000,000 females against 94,000,000 males, the difference of 21,000,000 being roughly equivalent to Soviet dead in the Second World War. The habit of working became ingrained in wartime and now many women miss their jobs if illness forces them to stay home.

More than 6,000,000 women specialists have a higher or specialized secondary education. There are 390 women deputies in the Supreme Soviet, nearly one-third of the total. A Latvian, Lyubox Ulanova, is probably the world's first woman pilot of a jetliner.

In Norilsk, beyond the Arctic circle, the chief architect is a woman, Larisa Nazarova. Three-quarters of all doctors are women; 70 per cent of teachers. Troubled by a stomach ailment, I visited a free clinic, was admitted without waiting and was briskly examined by a capable-looking, broad-shouldered woman who exchanged deadpan jokes with me through an interpreter.

Men accept women on the job

The readers say:

Says events presage Second Coming

Dear Sir: In your Record of August 5th appears a letter from the United Church minister of Cookshire. Mr. Skuce charges that certain statements of Miss Jane Scott's "Adventures with God", July 27th, are a collection of pious nonsense.

I wonder why a Christian minister should think such a thing, let alone say it. Does he not accept the entire Bible? Are Christians not to try to understand the prophetic portions of Scripture?

It is not clear from Mr. Skuce's remarks whether he accepts, or refuses to accept the doctrine of the Second

Coming of Christ. If he does not accept it, I would suggest that Acts I: 9-11 should make the matter clear. Now believing that His coming will be a literal coming that all can see (Matt. 24: 27 "For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."), is it not good reasoning for church leaders to bring before the public the Bible's information on the signs which shall appear before Christ's Second Coming? I would venture to say that the stage is very definitely set for the greatest drama of the ages. Current events fall into the pattern of conditions which precede the Second Coming according to many passages of Scripture including II Timothy 3: 1-7. Everyone will agree that the date is left a mystery. It is not hard to understand the answer in advance, Christians need only to be ready for His coming, and to help to prepare others. I think Miss Scott is doing her duty. Is Mr. Skuce, in attempting to ridicule her? I hope you keep "Adventures With God" a weekly feature in the Sherbrooke Record. Yours sincerely, C. Perkins, Danville, Que.

Adventures with God

Consciousness must be alerted to the unseen, eternal forces

A fish dies when it is removed from the water because it cannot adjust to a new environment. For the same reason a man or a woman who has not had a change of nature cannot adjust to a spiritual environment.

He or she is out of his or her element in an atmosphere where Psalms-singers and sky-pilots spend their days talking about the greatness, the grace and the holiness of God.

"Man is of the earth earthy" and his interest centres mainly on the enjoyment of things he can see and feel and taste.

In a very real sense this is man's world and only a few daring adventurers want to be changed to exist in a new spiritual environment or in space.

The majority are satisfied without self-consciousness, indeed with real comradeship. After a while you cease to notice the army of white-smocked women wielding scythes (instead of power mowers) in the scrupulously clean parks or carrying bricks at a building factory in central Asia.

Capacity for work is accompanied by refreshing modesty and absence of sophistication. The approach to sex is straightforward, almost too natural, lacking in coquetry, shorn of Western nuances.

"We're not just looking for things to excite us," a Leninist woman said replying to a comment about the slightly old-fashioned tone of books, television and films allowed into the Soviet Union.

I asked at least a dozen women how they feel about working and this reply from a 19-year-old student of languages was typical:

"I think all work is respectable. My own job as part-time interpreter is very interesting. You must have some aim in life. Home and the family are not enough."

When I said to a male Russian there were so many women working I wondered what the men found to do, he replied without hesitation: "There is work enough for everyone."

CUDDLE IN CABS

Thus it looks as though the late James Thurber would have been deprived of a favorite subject in Russia, for this is not a country of the war between the sexes. There are few jokes about women. British author Wright Miller said Soviet company of those who delight themselves in the Lord and the company of kindred minds.

On the other hand, men and women who have had what the early theologians called the new birth, are equally uncomfortable and ill-adjusted in an environment where the name of God is used only in profanity and the stag party atmosphere prevails.

Amusements which one satisfied seem empty and unseating. One recoils from the life of living that once was the accepted norm.

CHANGE OF HEART

This experience of dissatisfaction is one of the outward signs of an inward change of heart. Old things are passing away and the new nature is beginning to manifest.

Not only does the new creature feel disgusted with the old way of life but he begins to love the kind of people and the things he once considered to be queer and limiting.

Men like Stuart Hambleton and Tony Fontaine begin to write and sing sacred songs and to feel at home with the Christian "squares" they earlier avoided like the plague.

I don't know who wrote the song "I don't feel at home in this world any more" but whoever wrote it had an experimental knowledge of the process of God's transforming power.

What is a Christian? in the parlance of the horticulturist a Christian is a hybrid whose nature has been crossed with a higher spiritual breed. He is one who has been grafted into the vine and is now producing the spiritual fruits that grace the life of Christ

OTTAWA — As we bade farewell to the national legislators for what is left of our overly short summers here in Ottawa, we noted a reluctance in their leaving.

Some foot-dragged like youngsters being summoned to face parental wrath over grubby fists in the cookie jar. How come, Maw would be asking, that you grabbed them cookies and lit out without fetchin any for Gram-paw?

How indeed! A whole country full of grampaws and grammas had been expecting action to give them an extra $10 a month on their old age pension cheques. But all they got was a lot of talk. Then the MPs, in the fastest form they've shown all session, voted themselves an increase of $666.66 a month, half of it tax free.

Mind you, there are extenuating circumstances. Premier Lesage of Quebec blocked quick parliamentary action to provide the $10 pension increase. And the MPs had been notoriously underpaid for years. But aggrieved oldsters and their families are not apt to be mollified by extenuating circumstances. And knowing this, some MPs didn't go home. They went on vacations — to Europe, to the seashore, to the cottage on the lake.

Aside from the pensioners' grievance, the main criticism of the MP's raise is that it was so much — from a total of $10,000 last year to a total of $18,000 this year.

Ten thousand dollars a year has long been recognized, in this column and elsewhere, as inadequate for the job and inadequate to pay an MP's normal living and "business" expenses. If we wanted to attract better candidates for the Commons we had to pay more money. If we wanted to remove the temptation for MPs in debt to accept money they shouldn't we had to pay more money.

I know a Liberal MP, now a cabinet minister, who was $20,000 in debt last February and who had decided not to run for re-election. Colleagues in the Commons dissuaded the MP from this intention. This case is unusual only in the amount of the indebtedness; many others are habitually several thousands in debt.

Is $18,000 a year too much?

For some MPs, yes. But the only way to get rid of these is to make politics more attractive, so that able men who can command high salaries in business will stand for Parliament.

For some MPs this increase is a mixed blessing. They can enjoy it for the life of this Parliament, but have a pretty good idea that $18,000 will bring out men who will beat them in the next election.

Actually the pay increase is not from $10,000 to $18,000, but from $8,000 to $12,000. Formerly MPs were allowed $2,000 a year for expenses; now they will get $6,000 for expenses.

Being an MP is like being in business for yourself. You have to keep your clients reasonably satisfied with your service, or you will lose them. The clients are the voters. And satisfying them costs money — for travel, personal appearances, contributions, election expenses, telephone and telegraph, and paid assistance.

A professional man I know well grossed $20,000 last year, but after business expenses he netted only $12,000 before taxes. The MP's $6,000 expense money is on all fours with the $8,000 the man in business spent to produce the kind of service that would net him $12,000.

Who is the vine. He loves and thrives in the new atmosphere of holiness and peace.

The nature of Jesus Christ is now dominating this new creature, quickening his mind and alerting his consciousness to the unseen and eternal forces that are at work in the universe and actively operating in him to condition him for everlasting life in a completely new environment.

The genius of the Christian gospel is this: Jesus came not "into the world to condemn the world but that the world through Him might be saved."

But even Jesus Christ cannot save the world unless the world will submit to the divine process and be reunited by Him as a hybrid rose is grafted into the old briar bush.

When Paul the apostle saw this truth and yielded to the transforming power of God he became a changed man.

He expressed succinctly what many of us have felt but could not explain when he wrote: "What things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. That I may win Christ and be found in Him. Phil. 3: 7-11.

The fiery little zealot who hated the followers of Christ was suddenly changed and given a new nature which filled him with love for and understanding of the "peculiar people" called Christians and directed his zeal into the paths of righteousness.

The process had begun which would condition the zealous crusader to live forever in the rarified spiritual atmosphere where the will of God is supreme.

That is where men will live together in harmony and perfect submission to Him. Only God can cut a new song in our mouths, new love in our hearts and give us new desires and tastes for the new order wherein dwelleth righteousness.

Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. (Mark 16:15) PRAYER: O God, our Father, who hast shown Thy great love for all mankind through the sacrifice of Thy Son, our Lord; grant that the gospel may be received by all the families of the earth. Especially do we pray that the children of all lands may come to know as their Savior the Christ who has taught us to pray, "Our Father who art in heaven . . . Amen."

When touring the Soviet Union look out for the unexpected

By ALAN HARVEY
TASHKENT, Soviet Union (CP)—For $35 a day try anything tourists can pick up pointers on Marxism-Leninism while lounging on still-like wooden platforms built along a river bank in sweltering central Asia.

Or you can take the golden road to Samarkand, celebrated in James Elroy Flecker's poem, and visit mosques and mausoleums from emperor Tamerlane's time; listen to the sizzle of shashlik in a sort of Communist Coney Island in Tashkent; or see enough historic buildings in Leningrad to last a lifetime.

Whatever you do, watch for the unexpected. Tourism in the Soviet Union is young, raw and full of surprises. Don't boggle at beetles on bathroom floors, and don't fuss about frills.

Maybe that $35-a-day tariff for deluxe tourists sounds high, but it includes hotel, bath, guide and a car three hours daily.

The system is probably unique. To prevent you from drowning in the murky alphabet soup of a Russian language that turns familiar symbols on their heads, guides meet you at airport or station and steer you safely through the formalities.

TEA ON RIVER BANK
Don't panic if English or French leaves the porter cold. The big hotels have "service bureaus" staffed with multilingual experts. Long before your visit ends, you learn to lean heavily on the interpreters, though they're sometimes tucked away out of sight.

For one traveller, a memorable moment came in dialectical discussion with a dedicated young Marxist-trained guide, a dark-skinned Uzbek named Bacht Zufarov.

The setting was idyllic. With weeping willows forming a shield against the Asian sun, we reclined in slumped ease on a verandah-style platform jutting into the Bozsu River near the Chalkal mountains.

These river-bank sanctuaries are called chahana, meaning "place for tea." They are cool, cosy and altogether delightful.

Flicking back slick black hair over Oriental features and pouring strong green tea into porcelain mugs, Zufarov spoke passionately of the future Soviet paradise ("free transportation for all by 1970"), the unassailability of Marxist logic and what he called American "domination" of Canada.

LIKES PAUL ANKA
Fellow tourist C. Paul Sandifur of Spokane, Wash., a finance company executive, replied that he personally would like to see Canada and the U.S. merged as one nation, bearing the name Canada if that would appeal to a Canadian sensitivity. He defended American policies but Zufarov wouldn't yield an inch.

His responses seemed as spontaneous as studio laughter at a television show. "Either you mean this, or you mean that," he would say. "If you mean this, cite one specific case to prove it."

His only good word for the West—he "loves" to listen to Ottawa singer Paul Anka. His favorite record: You are my Destiny.

A basic difference was exposed when this slender, vibrant young man, so engagingly positive in all his ideas, asked why President Kennedy doesn't simply "shoot" anybody who mistreats Negroes.

We said the West works slowly and peacefully where possible, preferring compromise and gradualism to violence and arbitrary solutions.

"Not good enough," shot back Zufarov toughly. "Negroes are suffering here and now. Gradualism won't do any good. It is just an excuse for doing nothing."

BEACHES PACKED
Argument continued at lunch in an open-air Oriental tea garden atop a tiny artificial island in the middle of a lake carved out of flat dusty land by Communist youth volunteers. Hundreds of happy youngsters thronged the abbreviated beaches, as tightly packed as any Sunday crowd at Coney Island.

"So long, fellows," said Zufarov after the last helping of fried lamb. "See you at the Top of the Mark."

"Top of the Mark" was an allusion to our evening rendezvous at the Tashkent hotel, with its view over the city. Zufarov was happy to show that though he had never been to the U.S. he knew about San Francisco's Mark Hopkins hotel.

Next day we saw a nursery school, the first in a new experimental group thrusting up in a city fast emerging from feudalism. These schools are key establishments in the Soviet system. They take infants from the age of three months to three years. Kindergartens take over from three to seven.

MOTHERS WORK
This frees mothers for full-time jobs, facilitating sexual equality. Nursery schools constitute a vital socio-economic difference between East and West. One possible objection is that removing the child from the home may make for a kind of institutional uniformity.

Efforts had been made to brighten the nursery but Sandifur, though generally approving, thought a high-powered interior decorator could have transformed the place.

With an Armenian engineer as guide, we went through a factory making prefabricated parts for new apartment buildings springing up all round the city. Sandifur, an expert on construction, said the plant seemed behind in "job know-how" but that might come with experience.

A visit to a new apartment building showed defects that would raise a holler among tenants in Toronto or Montreal, but may seem less catastrophic here. Indeed, older persons used to living in Uzbek mud huts are reluctant to move into the new dwellings.

SPEED IS ESSENCE
In some flats, door fittings were broken. Parapets on outdoor balconies stopped short of the exterior wall, leaving space for a child to fall through. Faced with such criticisms, the Soviets say they are deliberately building in breakneck style, regardless of minor flaws.

In Samarkand, one of the most ancient cities in the world awaits the roving eye. Here Alexander the Great passed in 328 BC, and here Tamerlane built his famous empire in the 14th century.

Myths mingle with reality. My guide Boris recalled the story of a famous mosque built for Tamerlane's chief wife. The young architect took his time about finishing it because he had fallen in love with the wife.

She tired of his blandishments and told him to stop fretting, all women are the same. For instance, she said, if you have 40 eggs they may look different but they taste alike. Not so, said the architect: a glass of water is indistinguishable from a glass of vodka but they're not the same at all.

EXPLAINS RUINS
So the builder got his kiss, of such raging intensity that it left a stain on the wife's cheek. Noting the mark on return, Tamerlane started dismantling the mosque—an elaborate explanation for one of the many ruins in a city of blue-tiled domes and minarets.

An unexpected dividend in Russian tourism, in short, is the personality of the guides, whether manic Marxists, gifted story-tellers or sweet things.

One young woman, having quietly demolished all the pillars of capitalism, produced a rare flash of humor over a single glass of Georgian wine: "You know, I appreciate American men in spite of Wall Street—they are tall and handsome and so kind."

"Oops! — sounds as though I've had too much to drink. What do you suppose the party will say?"
Monday: A visit with a Russian woman born in Canada.

Questions readers ask

Q—Isn't it true that whole-wheat bread supplies more nutrition for my children than enriched white bread?
A—Although whole-wheat breads are good foods and add variety and flavor to a meal, they are not nutritionally superior to enriched white bread in ordinary diets. Nutritionists in the U.S. Department of Agriculture point out that bakers in his country have, for the past 20 years, been enriching white bread with thiamine, niacin, riboflavin, and iron. So you can choose the bread to suit your taste—enriched white bread or whole-wheat breads. Both have excellent nutritive value.

Polly's pointers

by Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — So many things we buy today come in plastic bags. I find that after ironing my pillow slips they can easily be kept in pairs by inserting them in some of these bags. At the same time they are saved from discoloring in my linen closet. This also holds true with sheets. — E. F. R.

GIRLS — This might be too much of a good thing for those with big families, where the bed linens scarcely have time to cool on the shelves. It would certainly be wonderful for company-best linens. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — To add another opinion, my pet peeves are guests who INSIST on CLEARING dishes from the table despite my firm request they desist. Instead of pleasantly enjoying my guests, I find myself up to my elbows in the sink trying to prepare the dishes for the washer, trying to find room on the counter space or the soiled dishes to be stacked. My insistent guests crowd me and the counter space and I wonder what to do with the still unwashed pots and pans. Believe me, it is a hectic aftermath to a relaxing dinner party to be suddenly thrust into a whirlwind of activity by two to six female guests, all working AGAINST the hostess.

If the guests insist on "helping with the dishes" and the hostess demurs, why do they not conform to good manners and remain "invited guests?" — B. F.

GIRLS — Three cheers from Polly.

DEAR POLLY — I have a problem that I hope someone can solve. I bought a new play suit of heavy cotton. When I wore the black and white printed blouse, there was a strong perspiration odor. I use a good deodorant every day. I asked among my friends and found some of them had the same problem with black things. Is there anything I can wash or rinse this garment in to get rid of the odor? — MRS. M. W.

GIRLS — And Mrs. M. W. — Did you ask at the shop where the suit was purchased to see if they had a suggestion or anyone else had complained of the

For and about Women

Morrow-Daigneault

BROMPTON — The marriage of Miss Marilyn Bertha Daigneault, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Oscar Daigneault, of Greenlay, to Mr. Garth Rennie Morrow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernie Matthew Morrow, of Richmond, took place on July 20, 1963, at 3 o'clock in Christ Church, Brompton. Canon Charles Bown officiating at the double ring ceremony. Miss Doreen Robinson was the organist. Baskets of blue delphiniums, mums, roses, shasta, daisies and Hawaiian antirrhinums, were used to decorate the church and the pews were marked with satin bows, fern and white baby mums.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of silk organza over taffeta, with re-embroidered Alencon lace ornamenting the portrait neckline and cascading down the skirt, the fitted bodice having short sleeves. Her shoulder length veil was held in place by a headdress of silk organza, fashioned into roses and stephanotis and ornamented with seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of red Victorian coronado roses, stephanotis and salol.

Mrs. Dwight Daigneault, as matron of honor, wore a pale aqua silk ballerina length, organza over taffeta dress, the skirt being bell-shaped with a floating front panel, edged with roses, the fitted bodice having a scoop neckline and short sleeves. She wore a rose-shaped organza hat, with short veil and carried a cascade bouquet of Victorian coronado red roses, salol, and stephanotis.

Miss Dianne Daigneault, as flower girl was dressed in an apricot organza over silk dress, appliqued with tiny rose-buds and bows, having a wide cummerbund ending in a long sash, the Peter Pan collar. She carried a basket of yellow roses and white shasta daisies.

Mr. and Mrs. Garth Rennie Morrow and Attendants

The ring bearer was David Daigneault, brother of the bride.
Mr. Brian Morrow, brother of the groom, acted as best man and the ushers were Messrs. Stephen Daigneault, brother of the bride and Kenneth Johnson.

The bride's mother was attired in a green and white silk jersey sheath, with matching bolero and white accessories.
The groom's mother wore a sheath dress of Dior blue brocade, with matching bolero and white accessories.
Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the Christ Church Hall, where red roses, stephanotis and carnations were used to decorate.

Later the couple left for a trip to Maine, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, the bride wearing for travelling, an aqua double knit suit, with white accessories.

Miss Marion Robinson was in charge of the guest book, guests attending from Rochester and Ossining, N.Y., Massachusetts, Toronto, Montreal, Sherbrooke, Richmond, Melbourne, Windsor, Manitoba, Winnipeg and Brookline.
The couple will reside in Toronto.

Marriages Killen-Thomas

KILLEN-THOMAS
BEDFORD — The marriage of Mrs. Lilly R. Thomas, daughter of Mrs. L. Poulston, of London, England to Mr. George H. Killen, son of the late George F. Killen, formerly of Dunham and Mrs. Mary E. Mayotte, of Richford, Vt., took place recently in the Bedford Wesley United Church. Rev. T. F. Duncan, officiated at the wedding ceremony. The wedding music was played by Mr. Ronnie Martin.

The bride who was given in marriage by Mr. George Helps, was in a gown of blue organza and lace over taffeta, fashioned with a fitted bodice of lace and lace bolero, with three-quarter length sleeves and an A line skirt. She wore a white wedding ring circlet and a small veil held by a white satin rose and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

Mrs. Robert A. Killen as matron of honor, was in a frock of white linen and pink lace, featuring a bolero of pink lace over white. She wore a white circlet hat and small veil and carried a nosegay of pink and white carnations.
Mr. Robert A. Killen, brother of the bridegroom acted as best man, while Mr. Earl Proctor was the usher.

Mrs. G. Martin, sister of the bride, was in a gown of pink lace over taffeta fashioned with a large bow at the back. She wore a white hat and a corsage of white carnations.
Mrs. Mayotte, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of green and white flowered jersey, with a white hat and accessories. Her corsage was of yellow roses.

Following the wedding ceremony, a reception was held at the Riverview Hotel, where yellow and white chrysanthemums and greenery were used as decorations. The three-tier wedding cake was made by Mrs. William Best of Frelighsburg, sister of the bridegroom.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Killen left on their wedding trip, through Vermont and to Niagara Falls, Ont., the bride travelling in an ensemble of pink and white knit jersey, with which she wore a white hat and accessories.
On their return Mr. and Mrs. Killen will reside in Montreal.

Guests were present from Hartford, Conn., Kingston, Ont., St. Johns, Boucherville, Knowlton and Bedford and included relatives and immediate friends.

Mayette-Mailhot

ST. FELIX DE KINGSEY — The marriage of Miss Dolores Mailhot, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Mailhot of St. Felix de Kingsey, to Mr. Maurice Mayette, son of Mr. and Mrs. Achille Mayette of Danville, took place on July 27, 1963, in the church at St. Felix de Kingsey.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Brunswick Hotel, Richmond. Later the couple left for a trip to Lake St. John and Baie Comeau, and upon their return they will reside in Danville.

Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. George J. Vivian of Kitchener, Ontario, formerly of Stanstead, wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Dorothy Joan to Mr. Bruce Lucas of Kitchener, Ontario, son of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Lucas of Don Mills, Ontario.

The wedding will take place on Saturday, September 14, 1963 at 1.00 p.m. at Zion Wesley United Church, Scarborough, Ontario.

What's at stake today? ... Why just that

What's at stake today? Why just that?
Does anything taste quite so good and is so easy to cook as a broiled steak? However, meat costs money so it's wise to cook it properly.

Most beef eaters have their favorite cuts but broiled porterhouse, T-bone, club house, sirloin or tenderloin filets can be served with an easy conscience if you balance the budget by using the economy cuts for other days or use meat substitutes such as macaroni, noodles, rice or beans and even vegetable plates that can be so good at this time of year.

A STEAK DINNER

Have steak cut at least one inch thick for broiling. Slash the edges of fat in several places to prevent them from curling during broiling. Place meat on a rack so the surface of the meat is approximately two to three inches from source of heat for one inch thickness. Thicker cuts require longer cooking time and should be placed farther from source of heat so they will be done inside before becoming over-browned outside.

To turn the meat use tongs rather than a fork which might pierce the meat and allow juices to escape.

To test steaks or chops cut a gash close to the bone and note color of meat. Season and serve.

For a 1½ inch steak allow about nine minutes each side for rare.

You may broil a chuck steak if all surfaces are sprinkled with seasoned or unseasoned meat tenderizer. Do not salt. Choose two steaks, one one pound and 1 inch thick each to serve four. At one inch intervals pierce with a kitchen fork deeply on both sides. Allow meat to stand for one hour at room temperature after sprinkling with the tenderizer. Broil steaks five minutes on each side for rare and broil longer for desired taste. Season lightly with salt and pepper.

To serve cut steaks in thin diagonal slices across grain at a 30 degree angle. Always serve steaks on a hot platter and heated plates too.

To accompany the steaks, halve tomatoes, sprinkle with a little sugar and sweet basil and a generous coating of finely minced onion. Sprinkle with a few soft bread crumbs then dot with butter and broil along with the steaks.

To complete the menu add buttered corn and packaged shoe string potatoes with blueberry turnovers for dessert. And I'll have ice cream with my serving.

TIPS ON STEAKS

- Salt and pepper each side after, not before broiling.
- Spread steak with a little butter just before serving if you like it rich tasting.
- For a change give steak a new seasoning. For instance marinate a steak in French dressing for several hours or even overnight before broiling.
- An even more elaborate seasoning trick is to spread a broiled steak with Roquefort type cheese. Simply mash the Roquefort within a little cream and a few drops Worcestershire or tabasco sauce and when meat is almost done spread steak with the mixture and return to broil until cheese melts.

Bride-to-be honored

Miss Annabelle Waters was the guest of honor on Wednesday evening, August 7, at a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Robert Cilles.

Upon arrival the guest of honor was presented with a gladioli corsage by Miss Nancy Jean Cilles.

After the guests had assembled, the Misses Nancy-Jean and Deborah Cilles, presented the bride-to-be with a miniature turquoise and yellow house, which was bursting to the red brick chimneyed roof with a wide variety of gifts.

Miss Waters expressed her appreciation to everyone for their thoughtfulness.

Mrs. J. Waters, mother of the bride, presided at the attractive tea table, which was arranged with a hand-made white lace cloth, over pale yellow linen, centred with a rose bowl of Talisman roses, with matching tapers.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, Miss Nancy Jean Cilles, assisted by Mrs. Robert Cilles, Miss Deborah Cilles and Mrs. E. Conley.

Guests were present from, Cookshire, Sawyerville, Birchton, Eaton, Montreal, Little Lake, Lennoxville, and Sherbrooke.

KEITH EDMUND, 6 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Crawford and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Kerr, Island Brook and the late Mr. and Mrs. James Crawford of Lennoxville.

MUSIC ON RECORDS

By HUGH DOHERTY

CHOPIN: The Complete Mazurkas, Vol. 2, Nos. 23-38; Alexander Brailowsky, pianist; Columbia (stereo 6164): The incomparable Brailowsky, in his interpretation of these 16 mazurkas, not only does credit to Chopin's composing skill but shows that his understanding of the composer's works has not dulled over the years. What Mr. Brailowsky has lost in dexterity he has gained in depth. It is unfortunate, however, that the quality of the recording does not match that of the artist.

BEETHOVEN: Sonatas for Violin and Piano; No. 3 in E Flat, No. 4 in A Minor and No. 5 in F Major ("Spring"); Zino Francoscatti, violinist, and Robert Casadesu, pianist: The evolution of 40 the Romantic period in Beethoven's creative life can be traced to these sonatas rendered in this glittering performance by Mr. Francoscatti and Mr. Casadesu. Especially delightful is the middle sonata on this recording, No. 4 in A Minor, Op. 23, in which the artists seem to dip into the deep emotional wells of feeling which Beethoven himself drew upon.

The coin

mother, f.r.n.s.

Coin collectors in North America who were unable to obtain any of the gold coins issued earlier this year by Tonga, may now be able to get replicas of them in stamp form.

Tonga has issued a set of 13 round, embossed gold foil stamps featuring the coins which Canadians and Americans found difficult to acquire.

There has been dissatisfaction over the handling of the coins by the Crown Agents in London, and it is thought there may be an official investigation into their distribution.

Only one Canadian is known to have received a complete set of the coins from the Crown Agents, and that is Harold Don Allen, the Montreal collector and banknote authority.

Collector, Alexander Munro, treasurer of the Toronto Coin Club, received a quarter koula (smaller than a Canadian quarter but larger than a British sovereign) from Seaby's of London.

The coins were produced by the Royal Mint in London, and are beautifully struck.

But since even the largest dealers in Canada and the U.S. were unable to buy these coins, collectors are naturally interested in the new stamps.

The stamps range in size from an inch and five-eighths to three and eighth in diameter. Each has a replica of a coin in the centre with a colored border and a legend in gold which reads:

Tonga, The Friendly Island Commemorating The First Gold Coinage of Polynesia.

The smaller denominations have a copy of either the obverse or reverse of the koula coin, one side portrays Queen Salote, the other the arms of the kingdom.

Larger denominations have reproductions of the half koula coin with the standing figure of the queen, or the arms on the reverse, and the largest correspond to the one koula, which also has the standing figure of Queen Salote.

Funny but cruel reunion of girls' school grads

MISS BANNISTER'S GIRLS by Louise Tanner, Farrar, Straus and Cudahy, 239 p.p., $5.75.

To judge from her portrait on the dust cover, Louise Tanner, author of Miss Bannister's Girls, is a most attractive woman with just that touch of sophisticated wit to make possible the tales she tells, sixteen stories about graduates from an establishment for girls whose parents can afford — though sometimes only by dint of sacrificing everything but the essentials — the niceties of an education in deportment with a smattering of this and that to prepare their daughters for anything but earning their bread and butter or for living happy, fruitful lives.

The discerning reader may discover that Miss Bannister's Girls is more tragic than funny under the patina of ridiculous humor.

For most of us, time like death destroys or at least dissolves into the merest shadows the memory of unpleasant school-day quarrels and rivalries because we are too busy with the present to dwell on 20-year-old events with rancor; not so — Miss Bannister's Girls, very few of whom mature beyond their adolescent characteristics — and this makes their stories, as told by Nancy Young, tartly amusing, is, as already indicated, also tragic.

A reunion of Old Girls starts Nancy on her venture: her father was an ill-paid professor and she wore her cousin's hand-me-downs and so was never really "in" with the daughters of wealthier parents, though her lot was better than that of one or two others who had either too little or too much money.

Miss Bannister was a school where it was difficult to be on the winning side. Among the 16 girls turned women are Ann Wickersham Adams, nicknamed Wicked Wicky, and later much married; Cecily Cogswell, who could never remember the punch-line to a joke but wrote a punch-line to her life; Belinda Taylor, who finds her moment of truth in a mental hospital; Angelica Laidlaw-Plunkett whose future was to split up "the Hope Diamond with Evelyn Walsh McLean and Peggy Hopkins Joyce," but who was actually nominated Mother of the Year by the Catholic Conference for the Restoration of Family Life.

Diversified, lively, caustic, Miss Bannister's Girls is good entertainment.

Edited by GLADYS TAYLOR

A trip to Bohemia and back again

TEXTURES OF LIFE by Hortense Calisher; Little, Brown; 248 pp., $5.75.

"To the happy couple" is the book's opening. "The bride was the thin girl with stork neck and messily naiad hair, her dress no more than a shift in which they all slouched about these days. Beside her the stolid boy wore his unmatched jacket and trousers with the same arrogance."

And so Elizabeth and David Pagan scorned the middle-class wedding they had tolerated to please Elizabeth's plump, attractive, dotting mother and David's frail, kindly, understanding father, a fashionable California photographer.

Of beatnik leanings, though washed, and with some talent as sculptress and photographer, respectively, they are what could be classified as later-day bohemians.

Nineteen-year-old Elizabeth, only child and centre of her widowed mother's affection, is in revolt against the smothering materialism of a middle-class New York family.

In their barren loft, they set up housekeeping. Their nuptial bed on the floor and the wedding feast a bag of stale grapes, sausage and bread. The lack of consistent water supply drives them to another loft, over a onetime granite works and piano factory in the warehouse district. Here they become Artists, life pared to the necessities; conversation goes on in abrupt, unfinished sentences and philosophical rambles which tend to drag in places. There are rather detailed passages of their lovemaking which add little to a good story.

The first disturbance in their cool, idyllic existence is a phone call from California from Elizabeth's mother to say she and David's father are married.

The second is Elizabeth's pregnancy which leads to the installation of nursery furnishings in the loft of stark walls and no chairs.

When the child May suffers near fatal attacks of asthma, David realizes that the life of square citizens is catching up with them.

The author deftly presents her unlovely Elizabeth and the less vehemently non-conformist David in appropriate surroundings and the events which lead to their return to the middle class from which they came is not contrived.

In fact so convincing is her characterization of Elizabeth, it could make mothers turning to the practice of dropping baby girls at birth out of sheer self-protection for their own middle years.

Don't throw it away!

HIDDEN TREASURE by Jeanne Horn, Ambassador Books, 234 pp., $6.95.

Though you may never find any of the treasures mentioned in Miss Horn's extremely comprehensive study of this subject, you will still enjoy reading about them. And you will undoubtedly go about with a more perceptive eye if not finding it increasingly difficult to consign anything "old or unusual" to the garbage container.

As a matter of fact, after my son had read this book I had a hard time sneaking anything past him for the local rummage sale.

Although Miss Horn has a repetitious and somewhat monotonous style of writing — nearly every page contains such phrases as "if you find it" or "if you are lucky enough to find it" — despite the paucity of her vocabulary, there is no paucity in the number of lost articles she has, in the six years of research she did on this book, discovered to be missing.

If you have an Easter egg by Faberge, Buiton Gwinnett's autograph, a wooden Indian, a grandfather clock or any other of the thousands of things which, according to Miss Horn, have been mislaid over the years, don't throw them away. Make straight for the nearest expert.

You may have a "hidden treasure" on your hands.

Sheer delight

General and co-ed shake up quiet life of church campus

THE GENERAL AND THE CO-ED by Bob Duncan, Doubleday, 309 pp., $3.95.

Every so often a reviewer comes across a book that is sheer delight from beginning to end: The General and the Co-ed by Bob Duncan is such a one, a fast-moving drama written with a light touch and dark undercurrents and peopled with entirely believable characters.

The story is set in a west-coast church college, a small school with a reasonably good scholastic record — but no poets, no literary geniuses, no great political figures on its roll of honor — a commendable degree of trust between faculty and students and a fine camaraderie among the members of the staff — underpaid, devoted and reliable.

Into this atmosphere of casual good will descend the general and the co-ed, from opposite directions and with quite opposite intentions.

The general, a tough old bird with personal and general — no pun intended — reasons for considering the younger generation soft, sets about turning the college into a miniature army barracks and the buildings and terrain sparkle with white paint and clapped laws while the staff and students bristle with submerged as well as with sometimes exploding animosity.

The co-ed, a plain, not to say mousy, girl, is a mare of another colour. "It was just possible that Stacey Dove was a basically innocent girl who had been emotionally unbalanced by that shattering experience in the hills, rejected by a father who could not communicate with her, and was therefore overly anxious to prove herself." or "on the other hand Stacey could be as Carl described her, a cunning, conniving girl prompted by some unknown urge to ruin people for the sheer sport of it."

So thinks Sam Evans, dean of students, the co-relating figure in this novel about what can happen when two ruthless people (one overtly so and one covertly so, either by design or through weakness) turn their various talents loose in a once-peaceful community, raising an inferno and disclosing unexpected weaknesses and equally unexpected virtue in fairly average men and women.

A truly fine and exciting story.

THE ST. LOUIS BELLE WHO LED THE LORETTO NUNS

ONLY ONE HEART by Sister Patricia Jean, Doubleday, 308 pp., $5.00.

"To the end, she had only one heart and that was His," Sister Patricia Jean uses the above as the final sentence of her remarkable book. There are always books about the beginnings and the progress of religious orders, but this one is unusual and interesting.

Apart from the facility of the author's pen, I think it due to the fact that the book deals mainly with the life story of a remarkable and fascinating woman. We meet her first as a very young lady in Ireland, and follow her immigration to St. Louis, Missouri, where she grows up, a gay and spirited girl in the midst of a warm and loving family.

At the age of 20, this Susan Carty pulls back her wayward curls, puts aside her frilled petticoats and, at Loreto, Kentucky, in 1874 joins the Order of the Sisters of Loreto at the Foot of the Cross.

So begins a remarkable career. Little could she have dreamt as she groaned over the ice water in her wash basin, as she prayed on her way to morning chapel "Dear Lord, I wish I were warm in bed," or as she rebelled against the tedium of scrubbing the long corridors that, as Mother Praxedes, she was to travel a lone and turbulent path through New Mexico, Colorado, Missouri, Rome and Texas, charming, persuading, rebelling and battling until, at the age of 42, she had become Mother General of the Sisters of Loreto.

She was truly a woman to admire. No meek or submissive nun here, but a fighter; educated, courageous, unshakable in her own convictions and armed eternally with rich gifts of humor and charm. She travelled personally to Rome in 1903 to plead before Pope Pius X for the right of self-government for her order, away from the dominance of the Bishop of Louisville and his representatives who, until that time, held the final authority over every decision made in the congregation.

Mother Praxedes died in 1933 in El Paso, Texas. The book is written simply and with a faint trace of humor in the background. Sister Patricia Jean is herself a graduate of Webster College, Missouri, which was established by Mother Praxedes. She has constructed her book on information from letters and documents in the Loreto Archives, from relatives and associates of the central figure, and with an extensive knowledge of the geographical and historical background of the early frontiers of America.

It is rather interesting to note that Time magazine recently paid tribute to Sister Jacqueline Grennan as a Joan of Arc of education. She is the only woman and Though I would not willingly take on the role of censor — in fact like most people closely concerned with the composing and publishing of the written word, I am, as a general rule and on general principles, opposed to censorship, the fact remains that in a newspaper intended for family consumption, there are times when one must inevitably become a censor.

I am happy to say that the need for book page censorship, or in other words the need to withhold a book review on moral grounds, does not often arise — in my four years experience with this page, it has only happened twice before — but arise it does occasionally and this week happens to be one of those times.

Because the book which bears the rather dubious distinction of being the third book to have its review withheld on the grounds of being socially questionable, is a prize-winning novel I feel that perhaps an explanation is in order.

The novel in question is THE AGE OF MALAISE by Dacia Maraini (published in Canada by McCLELLAND & STEWART), and it is the winner of the $10,000 Formentor Prize.

THREE COURSES

There are three courses open to the editor who receives a book review which is unfit to print in a family paper. Return the review to the reviewer and ask for a watered-down version, ignore the book — or write an explanation of its deletion such as I am now doing.

At first glance it would appear that the easiest thing to do would be to ask for the watered-down review.

Certainly it would be quite simple for the reviewer to revise his review into something that would pass muster for publication — but this wouldn't change the book. In other words if the book was so morally questionable that even its review was questionable, cleaning up the review isn't going to help!

BROTHER'S KEEPER

What it amounts to then is where does responsibility end and censorship begin? Or, is the reviewer (or the book page editor) the keeper of his brother's reading?

Since the censorship question has been long and hotly debated before, I do not plan to add more to it with my remarks on THE AGE OF MALAISE. Actually all I am concerned with doing at the moment is pointing out why I have concluded that it could serve little purpose to review this book on this page.

However, although I can't in good conscience review this book, I must, in order to protect the inalienable right of all men to freedom in their choice of reading, point out that the book is available. And I should perhaps add that:

It is 203 pages long; it costs $4.95; it is, as I have already mentioned, a prize-winner.

Collecting

in the Townships

One of the main problems to beginning stamp collectors is understanding the various technical terms used by philatelists and many would-be stamp collectors lack the knowledge needed to collect intelligently.

With these facts in mind the Washington Press has published a pamphlet called "This Hobby Called Stamp Collecting." This pamphlet was made available to the general public several months ago, and was mentioned in this column at the time. The response to the free offer was so great that supplies were depleted in a short time and a second printing was ordered.

The new edition is now ready for distribution. It is intended as a brief introduction to the hobby. It attempts to answer most of the more frequently asked questions about philately, to explain some of the ways people can go about collecting stamps. Though designed primarily for the beginner, it has interest for advanced collectors too.

The terms used are explained and illustrations are used. Parents will find the booklet useful for their children who show interest in this world-wide hobby, and it is written in language that any non-collector can understand, and therefore gives the uninitiated considerable insight into philately.

The Washington Press will send "This Hobby Called Stamp Collecting" free of charge to anyone interested. A postal card request to the firm at Maplewood, New Jersey, is all that is needed.

The collecting of stamps that feature space vehicles and depict man's conquest of outer space has become the current fad.

These stamps are fascinating and some of the older sets are becoming quite scarce. A collection of space stamps formed during the past few years will today bring a good return on the money invested. This is not meant to convey any suggestion that you stop collecting your present topic, nor does it mean that you should invest money for the sole purpose of gaining a profit, but it does show that a popular subject does create a demand.

The problem that will face anyone starting a space collection will be the souvenir sheets that many of the countries behind the iron curtain have issued, and those issued in the free world. These sheets are in many instances very scarce but the large size has enabled the authorities to print more detail of the subject around the sheets.

The sheets from Nigeria which were issued recently are good examples of the attractiveness of such efforts.

The new Holmes British North America Catalogue has been issued by The Ryerson Press and this indispensable guide to Canadian and B.N.A. stamps is available from your favorite dealer for $9.

The catalogue has been brought up to date by the well-known Toronto dealer and auctioneer, J. N. Sissons. The use of this catalogue in the fields of early postmarks and postal markings is recognized throughout the stamp world. Every stamp club should have one for the use of its members.

There are many times when an ordinary cover may be worth money simply because of the number of rings in the cancellation mark, or because of the colored ink by the postmaster. This catalogue will not become obsolete. The information may be up-dated in new issues to come, but the older ones are always guides. The philatelic library of all serious collectors of B.N.A. material should contain one.

A doctor in a sailboat and his wacky patients

SUMMER DOCTOR by Charles H. Knickerbocker, Doubleday, 303 pp., $4.95.

Has your doctor ordered you to find some new and interesting acquaintances to take your mind off yourself, but you simply do not know how to go about finding them? Has he suggested you "get away from it all," take a long, exciting vacation you feel you cannot possibly afford? Charles H. Knickerbocker can provide the whole thing for the small sum of $4.95, inclusive: a long vacation with Dr. Dan DeVine (in case you take ill) and the simply amazing, delightful and fascinating people he ministers to among the fishermen, and the summer people, and the strange breed of misfits who are on but not of Juniper Island.

There is, of course, Dr. Dan himself, fresh home from Korea and looking for a place where he can be the old-fashioned kind of doctor who treats his patients as people and not as charts and analyses. He swaps his brand-new Thunderbird convertible for an old fishing boat and a tumble-down house with which he immediately falls in love, and settles down on Juniper Island.

Among his patients you will meet the manic-depressive Willie Hargswell, who fears a cure will affect his talent to paint; Josiah Brown, who does his lobster fishing wearing a clerical suit and collar because though he has lost his faith in preaching he wants to remind himself that he is still a minister searching for some truth that has avoided him; and there is the anthropologist Drinkwater, a lonely and frustrated man, father of Marthas, aged twelve, who falls madly in love with the young doctor and advises him on everything from what he should eat and how to cook it to whom he should and should not marry and why.

And there is Slob, the mongrel dog who becomes the doctor's receptionist; plus a much-married millionaire and his current, show-girl wife; the unethical Cyrus Lunt; the sturdy, independent fisherman; and towering above them all, the enormous, ageless midwife Widow Gideon, A Wabanaki Indian with a penchant for young white men.

There are girls, too — lovely Jane with her career in New York, and Betty Winkle, not so young, but with certain attractions, including beautiful legs and a fine mind.

Certainly anyone who travels with Summer Doctor on Juniper Island will return to the mundane affairs of everyday life completely refreshed in mind and relaxed in body, which is all anyone can ask of a vacation.

Anthropologists study beginnings of Indians

VICTORIA — Anthropologists are taking the first steps this summer in a long range program aimed at discovering the origins of the unique West Coast Indian culture with its totem poles and dugout boats.

First stage of the survey, which is expected to take two summers, is a search for pre-historic Indian settlements. Sites will be assessed and catalogued for future investigation by archeologists.

Wilson Duff, curator of anthropology at the British Columbia museum here, says one object of the study is to discover whether coastal peoples like the Haida, Salish and Kwakiutl were inland tribes who came west and adapted their ways to match the new environment or migrants from Asia or Alaska who brought their culture with them to the British Columbia coast.

Asbestos golf course different

By MYER SHIMELMAN
(Record staff reporter)

The Asbestos Golf and Country Club in Asbestos differs from others in the E.T. in two ways.

First, because of the ground on which it is built. The ground is quite sandy and is soft underfoot. Even in the hot dry periods of summer the fairways never give much roll and the greens are soft and hold well. This means putt cautiously.

Second the professional.

Connie Dion, is one of the keenest pros in the area, and under his supervision the course has made many improvements, such as the planting of new trees, and the digging of some new traps.

The Asbestos course is a par nine, 36, layout spread over 3163 yards. Because of the lack of roll, however, it plays even longer than its 3163 yards.

The hardest hole on this course is the second—a par three, 238 yard effort.

The green is slightly to the left of the tee and the terrain slopes down to the right into heavy rough and woods. To make matters more difficult there is usually a prevailing wind coming into the tee.

There are traps left and right of the huge green and so all in all this is not an easy par three by any means.

The greens on the whole are quite large and rolling and the tees and rough are well kept.

Analysis: Interesting course with an interesting pro—a good combination.

Alouettes tangle with St. Johns

The Sherbrooke Als have two games on tap this weekend, both on Sunday.

Sunday afternoon the Als travel to St. Johns where Andre Bessette will be the starting pitcher for the local team and on Sunday evening both teams return to the local ball park for the second game.

Game time is 8:30 and the starting hurler for the Als will be Gilles Bernier.

Playing in both of these games will be Frank Kurty.

Kurty played second base last season and compiled a respectable .290 batting average.

Both his bat and his glove should give the Als a lift as the schedule runs out.

After Sunday's games are completed, one week remains in the schedule and so the teams go down to the wire each game is important.

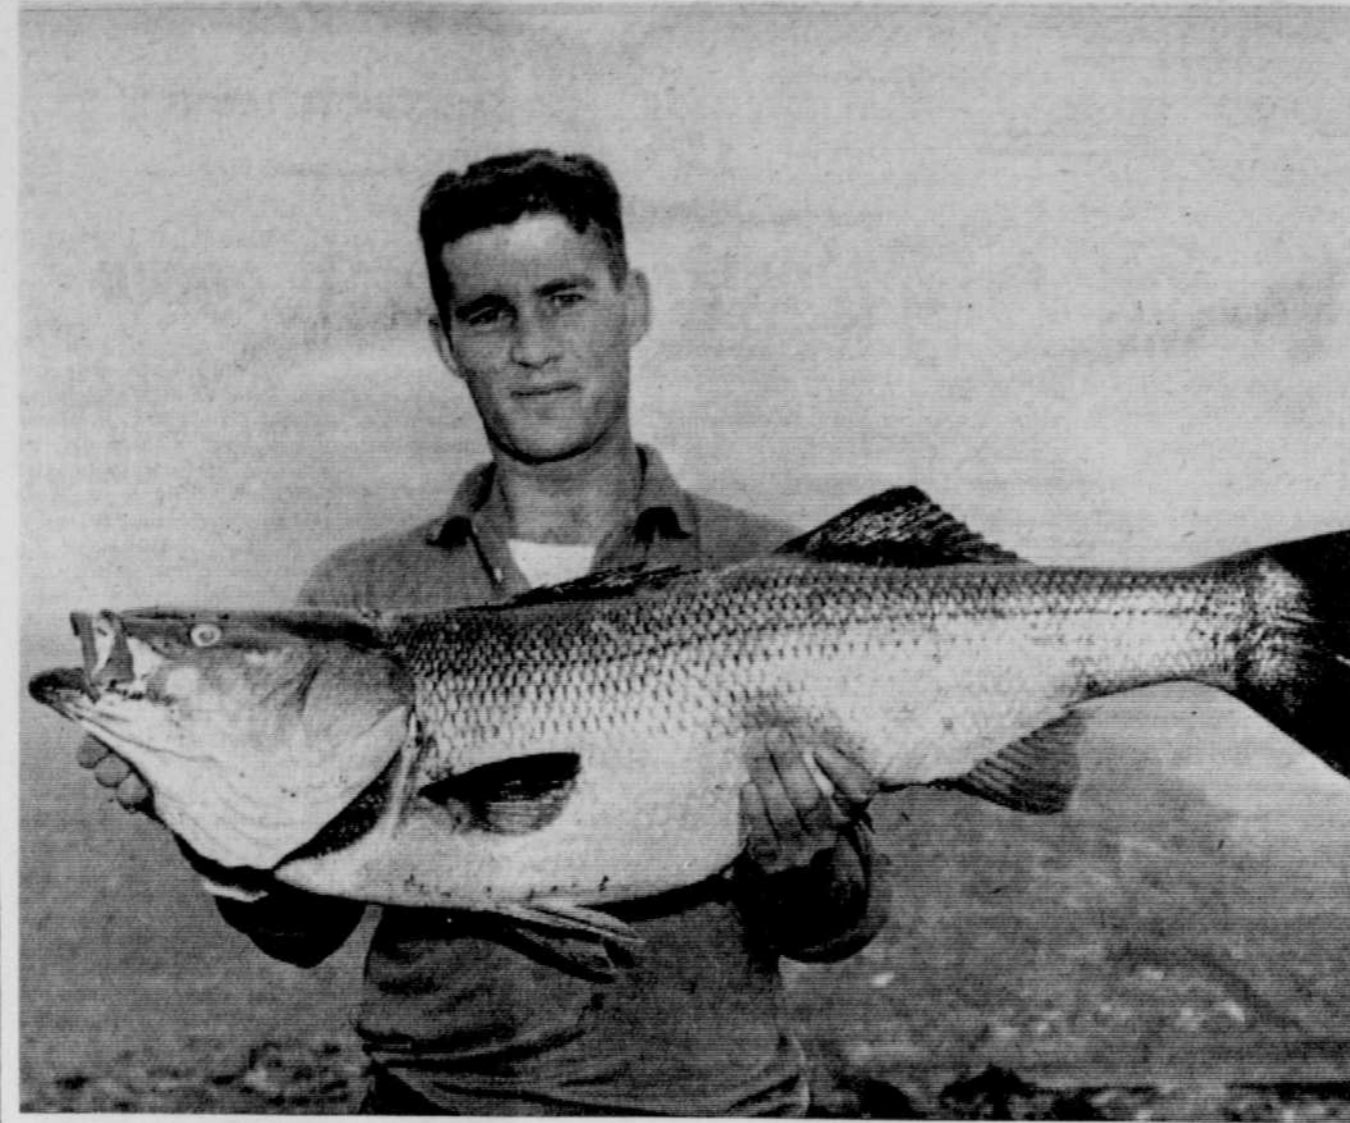

At present the Als are tied for third place in the standings with their weekend rivals the St. Johns Pirates three and one half games back of Acton Vale.

Granby is in second place, three games off the pace.

Coaticook is in fifth place one half game back of Sherbrooke and St. Johns.

Thus the middle four teams are separated by only one game and only three of these teams can collect the playoff money.

In other action around the league this weekend the league-leading Acton Vale Beavers will have a home-and-home series with the last place Drummondville Royals and the second place Granby Knights will play a doubleheader with the Coaticook Canadians.

TORONTO (CP) — Jackie Parker struggled through a condensed training camp under fire Friday night, then turned his thoughts to opening the Eastern Football Conference season.

Parker, who looked extremely ordinary in the first three quarters of the EFC opener, tossed a fourth-quarter touchdown pass to give Toronto Argonauts an 8-to-5 win over Ottawa Rough Riders.

The two other eastern club Montreal Alouettes and the defending champion Hamilton Tiger-Cats, open their season in a clash tonight at Hamilton.

Parker, obtained from Edmonton Eskimos for five players and $15,000 cash in the off season, bore little resemblance to the upper quarterback of the past. The 27,557 Toronto fans at Exhibition Stadium even thought it fitting to give Parker the raspberry early in the game.

Coach Nobby Winkowski, however, a former quarterback himself, reminded a group of listeners after the game that Parker, who injured a knee and ankle in the intra-squad game, had played only three plays in four exhibition games.

"He's gotta get the feel of the ball and the feel of the team," said Winkowski. "With no training camp work, he had to do it in a league game."

"I could very easily have taken him out—but the next game it would have been the same thing. He needed the work."

Actually, Parker had a lot of help in pulling the game out of the fire.

Argos regained the ball on their own 50-yard line late in the game after kicker Dave Mann had been roughed by Ottawa rookie Bill Quinter. That started the touchdown march and Dick Shatto's 25-yard run put them in position.

Shatto took Parker's third-down pass from the Ottawa six and stumbled into the end zone for the touchdown.

MISSED FIELD GOAL

Big Jerry Wilson scored the other Toronto points on a convert and a single from a missed field goal attempt.

Moe Racine booted a 25-yard field goal for Ottawa and a single on another field goal attempt that went awry. Ottawa's other point was on a single by rookie punter Rick Black from Mount Allison University at Sackville, N.B.

Ottawa coach Frank Clair moaned about the key penalty after the game and Quinter complained "it was a bad call—I just nicked Mann's foot while trying to avoid him."

Mann suffered a freak injury on the touchdown play and was taken to hospital after the game.

"I was turning to see if Shatto caught the ball and my left knee just locked," he said. "Now I can't straighten my leg."

An Argo doctor said tests would determine if the fleet halfback would require surgery. "We don't know what it is," he said. "He may even be practising again Sunday."

OUTDOOR CANADA

Photography is a natural hobby to combine with your outdoors activities. Just think of the wonderful subjects that come your way while you are hunting or fishing.

Even black and white snapshots taken with a little box camera look great when they are pasted up in an album.

I'm a sucker for a good photo album, even those family jobs where all the kids are shown stark naked on a bear skin rug. But when I get the chance to dig into one filled with fishing and hunting pictures, I'm really at home.

I've had bad luck with getting records of some of the high lights of my travels. I sure wish I had some shots on a giant Mako shark I played for 8 hours one.

This monster spent most of that time jumping, great vicious leaps 10 or more feet in the air, and my pal wouldn't use my camera — he was afraid of breaking them.

And since I lost that fighting brute of a shark at the boat side, I don't even have a picture of it hanging from the weight gallows.

LOST CHANCE

Another experience happened when I was in convoy during the war and our attack ships blew a U-Boat to the surface. I stood at the rail almost sick because, while I had a whole camera outfit aboard, it was stuck in the purser's safe — for security reasons.

In these days of automation, it's easy to take pictures. You can lay out the cash for a still camera fitted with a built-in exposure meter. But even a $5 box camera is sufficient when you are on a fishing trip and your young hope hopeful latches on to his first big fish.

The little box cameras are

By JOHN BENNETT

not good enough for great enlargements, but they can make a nice shot for your wallet.

Pictures like this are great to pull out when the other men are boasting about their kids.

For the outdoorsman who wants to progress past this simple snapshot stage, there are a dozen or more reasonable priced cameras that will do almost anything the expensive models can do.

My idea of a good camera for the semi-skilled is the twin lens reflex that focuses, has a decent shutter speed (say up to 1/300th of a second) and costs about $40. I bought one for my teenage son, and he has taken some surprisingly good pictures with it.

Using one of these moderate priced cameras, the beginner can quickly learn how to take good general pictures on 120 or 127 sized rolls that give 12 pictures in either black and white or color.

MANY CHOICES

For the more advances, there is a whole range costing up to thousands of dollars, with the 35 mm as a fine choice.

To take expert color slide shots of birds and animals, you will need a long or telephoto lens, and because of the precision build of the 35 mm group, this is a job they do better than most other cameras.

For the starter in 35 mm, I'd suggest something costing around $100 with a standard sized lens. You can get quite a choice piece of merchandise for this figure and can add lenses and extra accessories as you go along.

The telephoto lens is pretty important in all wildlife photography, as it is vital to fill the whole of your negative area with the chosen subject. An

The unexpected can happen to give you a good action shot on your fishing trip. This Wahoo was gaffed and swung aboard when its tail slammed the side and it lunged at the skipper, raking its vicious teeth across his chest. In cramped conditions, the shot was made with a 35 mm wide-angle lens.

eagle shot in a tree 300 yards away with a normal sized lens will finish up pinhole size on the negative and is almost impossible to see on a color slide.

Bird pictures need something in the nature of a 400mm lens. These, unfortunately, are expensive and have to be used from a tripod if you want pictures free of fuzzy movements.

But if you want to put nature on film, there's no need to just hope for good equipment. Some of the best color slides of birds I ever saw were taken by a housewife from her kitchen window. She's positioned a feeding box right in close and shot away from behind the drapes.

FAMILY FUN

And of all the pictures that can give you pleasure, there's nothing to touch the wonderful little 8 mm movie camera: You can buy one for a little as $50 and with it you can bring nature home from a trip and present it on a screen during winter.

This is real fun in which the whole family can join. But don't waste that lovely color film on people walking into camera and waving. Turn it on Mother Nature.

It's nice to have footage on the kids growing up, but get them while fishing and boating. Take your films and pictures while they are playing a fish or drinking in the perfume of the first spring flowers. (TNS)

Bouton comes through with victory over the Los Angeles Angels Friday

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Oh, how Ralph Houk suffers. First Mickey Mantle gets mangled, then Whitey Ford gets mauled. And the New York Yankees play catch-me-if-you-can with the rest of the American League.

Since Ford was bombed out at Washington and became Houk's latest problem, Stan Williams has pitched a one-hitter. Al Downing a three-hitter. Ralph Terry a six-hitter and Jim Bouton a five-hitter. The opposition has scored two runs — one earned.

It's enough to turn Houk's gray hairs brown.

Bouton came through in a 1-0 victory over Los Angeles Angels Friday night, recording his 15th triumph and fourth shutout while increasing the Yankees edge to 8½ games over the second-place Chicago White Sox.

The White Sox won the opener of a two-night doubleheader with Detroit 2-1 on Camilo Carreon's tie-breaking single, but the Tigers stumbled to a 3-1, 10-inning night-cap victory despite having two runners thrown out at the plate and another cut down at third during the winning rally.

LOSE 7 STRAIGHT

Jim Perry's four-hit pitching and a three-homer barrage gave third-place Minnesota Twins a 5-3 decision over Boston and dropped the Red Sox into sixth place with their seventh consecutive defeat. Russ Snyder drove in three runs in Baltimore's 7-1 victory over Washington Senators and Kansas City Athletics defeated Cleveland Indians 5-1 behind

Little League OOP

by TED ANDERSON

The Sher-Lenn All Stars met the same fate this season as they have met in the past seasons when they ran up against Valleyfield All Stars.

Valleyfield seems to have the Indian sign on the Sher-Lenn boys as they always seem to get the breaks if there's any going.

The Sher-Lenn team this year was a good one and did exceptionally well against St. Lambert. It was noticeable how much the players chosen had improved and blended as a team, in Amedee Roy as Coach of the All Stars the league could not have chosen a better man.

Coach Roy worked wonders with the team and we are sure that the league executive are more than pleased with the splendid showing the boys made under his coaching.

Valleyfield were a little scared of what might have happened last Saturday figuring the law of averages might show its face. What a thrill we are going to have one of these years when we take Valleyfield for a ride.

Playoff games in regional play this weekend are Moncton All Stars vs Valleyfield All Stars and Kivani North meet Dorval. Both games are at Valleyfield today.

This corner's guess is that Dorval will take it all.

Play-offs in the Sher-Lenn Little League get underway on Monday evening at the Parade Grounds. Tigers go against the Red Sox and Senators tangle with the Indians. The series will be two out of three.

How will the semi-finals go? Well it could be Tigers and Indians in the final.

Quite a few people travelled to Valleyfield with the team last Saturday and noticed old friend Gerry Mathieu, Milton and Gerry Lary. Wonder if they enjoyed the P.A. system as well as we did?

Playoffs in the Border Peant league are now in progress and we notice that in the first game of the semi-final that Derby Line defeated Rock Island 4-2. Beebe and Stanstead meet in the other semi. If you are down the Border way why not take in one of the games and give the youngsters a boost.

Starring this week were Carriere and Daignault of the Indians and Bondurant of the Twins.

Waterloo ladies' tourney results

On Thursday, a Day Field for the ladies of the Eastern Townships district of the G. L. G. U. was held at the new Waterloo Golf Course with 66 ladies from 10 clubs participating.

Prizes were presented at the close of play by the Chairman, Mrs. H. M. Brown, assisted by Tournament Chairman, Mrs. A. Remillard.

The winners are as follows:

The consolation prize went to Mrs. P. Damon, of East Angus.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Pitching—Juan Marichal, Giants, recorded his 18th victory, moving into a tie for high in the majors, and fourth shutout by checking Philadelphia on seven hits in 4-0 triumph.

Batting—Jim Hickman, Mets, hit grand slam homer on 3-2 pitch with two out in last of ninth for 7-3 victory over Chicago Cubs that ended Roger Craig's consecutive game losing streak at 18.

SEA GIGS RICHES

Between 1962 and 1963 an American company sucked up $1,500,000 worth of diamonds from the ocean floor of South West Africa.

Craig ends his 18 game losing streak as Mets defeat Chicago by 7-2 win

A combination of knitting, hitting and hexing did the job for Roger Craig.

Roger's wife tended to her knitting, Jim Hickman tended to the hitting and manager Casey Stengel tended to the hexing. The end result was enough to have Craig chortling: "It's over. Oh, man, it's over."

That was the veteran right-hander's grateful comment Friday night after New York Mets had pulled out a 7-3 victory over Chicago Cubs in the last of the ninth, snapping Craig's personal 18-game losing streak that stretched back to April 29. The streak equaled the National League record and was within one of the major league mark of 19.

To escape that dubious record, Craig traded his regular uniform No. 38, for No. 13.

His biggest assist came from Hickman, who hit a grand slam homer on a 3-2 pitch with the score tied and two men out in the bottom of the ninth.

CROSSES FINGERS

Casey got his hand in, too. When Cub relief pitcher Lindy McDaniel was winding up for the climactic 3-2 pitch, Ol' Case gestured wildly in the Mud dug-out, waving his crossed fingers at the pitcher in the classic baseball sign of "putting on the hex."

And while it was all going on, Mrs. Craig sat in the stands, nervously knitting away at a furious rate.

"I knew I couldn't sit still," she said. "I had to have something to occupy me. So I brought my knitting along."

Elsewhere, Cincinnati Reds chased in five unearned runs and beat the first-place Los Angeles Dodgers 8-4 while second-place San Francisco Giants blanked Philadelphia Phillies 4-0, cutting the Dodger margin to 4½ games. Milwaukee Braves beat St. Louis Cardinals 6-3 and Pittsburgh Pirates and Houston Colts split a doubleheader that lasted more than 7½ hours. The Pirates won the second game, 7-6 in 11 innings after Houston had won 7-6 in 15.
