US TROOPS FALL BACK TO NEW POSITION

World News In Brief

Ottawa, July 11.—(CP)—Two persons were drowned and three others were rescued when an outboard motor boat overturned in the Rideau river about 10 miles south of Ottawa last night.

Drowned were Winnifred Strutt, 18, and her 23-year-old brother John, both of Ottawa.

Hong Kong, July 11.—(AP)—The Chinese nationalist navy released the 7,000-ton British steamship Kefalonia July 7 near Formosa, a radio-gram from the ship's captain said today.

The Kefalonia now is on her way to the communist-held port of Dairen in Manchuria.

London, July 11.—(Reuters)—British export and import figures for June were both records, Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced last night.

The provisional value of exports in June, a month of 25 working days, was $492,520,000. Adjusting to a standard month of 26 working days it would be $512,120,000 against the record may total of $511,280,000, he said.

Imports were valued at $668,080,000 compared with $640,640,000 in May.

Durban, South Africa, July 11.—(Reuters)—A family of four was killed in an air crash last night. Pilot G. Osense and his two children burned to death and his wife died later of burns when their plane crashed at Richards Bay landing field, about 100 miles northeast of Durban.

Brunswick, Germany, July 11.—(AP)—The Russians are preparing to open a new uranium mine near Halberstadt, in the Harz mountains of the Soviet zone of Germany, 23 fleeing east German miners reported today. The miners said they fled because they feared that they would be impressed into working in the mines.

York, England, July 11.—(AP)—The United States and Britain should jointly make a "direct approach" to Russia to gain agreement on outlawing the hydrogen and atomic bombs, the Archbishop of York, Dr. Cyril F. Garbett, said today.

Hong Kong, July 11.—(AP)—Independent newspapers in Hong Kong claimed today that Gen. Lin Piao's Chinese communist troops are moving to Manchuria at Russian direction to support the North Koreans.

The newspaper Sing Tao Jih Pao said 10,000 of Lin's fourth army, now stationed in south China, are headed north. Other Hong Kong papers said part of Lin's fourth is being sent to the border of French Indo-China.

Ottawa, July 11.—(AP)—Prime Minister Robert Menzies of Australia will spend three days in Ottawa—Aug. 7 to 9—when he visits Canada next month, a spokesman for the external affairs department said today. Mr. Menzies left Sydney by air Sunday on a trip that will take him to the United Kingdom, United States, Canada and New Zealand.

North Korean Tank Assaults And Infiltration Tactics Have Forced A Withdrawal

U.K. Makes Overture To Russia

London, July 11.—(AP)—The Daily Express today reports a new British overture for Russian aid in ending the Korean fighting was in the making. There was no immediate official comment on the report.

The Express says Britain's ambassador in Moscow, Sir David Kelly, in a future interview with Soviet deputy foreign minister Andrei A. Gromyko "may put forward detailed proposals by which Russia could co-operate in ending the fighting in Korea."

The Kremlin last week declined to take action on a British request relayed verbally by Sir David that Russia intercede to halt the Korean fighting.

The Express says the British Cabinet is consulting with the United States, France and other governments about proposals to be made to the Russians. The newspaper adds that any proposals made to Russia would stress:

"That any action must be taken through the United Nations."
 "That North Korean forces must withdraw to the 38th parallel!"—the pre-fighting boundary between North and South Korea.

Moscow, July 11.—(AP)—Trud, organ of the Soviet trade unions, charged today the United States started the war in Korea to ward off a depression through war spending, and to try to frighten millions of "peace partisans."

It said that millions of Soviet citizens who have signed the Stockholm peace petition are demanding an end "to the criminal ventures of the American war mongers in Korea."

The so-called peace petition, an appeal to outlaw the atomic bomb, was drawn up at a meeting of the communist-led partisans of peace at Stockholm last spring.

Trud said the United States would use the Korean war as an excuse to introduce fascist labor laws in the U.S.

Prime Minister Pelted By Storm

Calgary, July 11.—(AP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent was hailed last night—both by thousands of Stamped visitors, and by the heavens—as he officially opened the annual western show. Just as he began his address, hail began to pelt him on the stage, and then a cloudburst swept over the exhibition grounds.

However, the Prime Minister gamely finished his address. Mayor Don MacKay tried to keep the show going by leading a damp sing-song. The replica of the big cake sent from Edmonton for Calgary's 75th birthday party was whipped off the infield before it got too soggy.

As the crowd of 26,000 pushed its way out of the enclosure, threats of panic appeared as people gasped for air in the dense throng, and small children were crushed.

Americans Take Up New Defence Positions At Approaches To Taejon, South Korea's Provisional Capital.

Tokyo, July 11.—(AP)—United States troops in South Korea, harried by communist tanks and cunning infiltration tactics, have fallen back to new defence positions at the approaches of Taejon, provisional capital and U. S. headquarters.

A communique from Gen. MacArthur's headquarters said the Americans were "continuing their action to stabilize the situation by stopping the North Korean offensive north of the Kum river," the last natural defence barrier to Taejon.

At the same time reports direct from the scene of action told of successful North Korean tank actions and of the invaders' skill in slipping through American lines.

One U. S. army spokesman at field headquarters, reporting withdrawals under North Korean pressure "all along our front line," said the communist infiltration tactics were "as good as I have ever seen. They infiltrate by dressing in civilian clothes and move behind our lines at night."

A Reuters' dispatch from the field said American tanks were "mauled" in their first brush with Korean armor.

It said crew members of two tanks which rolled into a rear area said five tanks of their original column were left "twisted and torn" as a result of superior North Korean striking power.

(An Associated Press dispatch from Washington said today that the defence department had reported ten American tanks destroyed and two disabled in Korean fighting.)

The survivors said that American armor ran into withering fire from opposing communist tanks. One American tank was knocked out by a direct hit. The others were forced into rice fields where they bogged down and were destroyed by the enemy after their ammunition was exhausted.

The battle took place on the main sector of the West Korean front where American troops continued their withdrawal to prepared positions.

Reuters said it is estimated that communist strength in this sector totals 75,000 men, mainly concentrated along the main highway leading to Taejon. They are believed to have at least 80 tanks in support.

MacArthur's communique said that communist activity on the East Korean front also increased "although it still remains on a relatively small scale."

Enemy strength is reported to be increasing near Uchun, an east coast port about 125 miles north of Pusan.

Light bombers and fighters are maintaining their attacks on highways, bridges, railroads and concentrations of ground troops, the communique said.

The Kum river mentioned in the communique is the last major defence line the Americans have to stem the Red offensive heading toward Taejon, the South Korean provisional capital.

The communique said American forces were able to halt one enemy drive at a point eight miles north of Cochiwon on the south bank of the Miho river, a tributary of the Kum.

This drive has succeeded in penetrating south of Chonui, approximately 25 miles northwest of Taejon.

The communique said "the remainder of this front" was "relatively stable near Chongnan," which the communists reached yesterday.

However, additional troops and armor are being concentrated in this sector.

The Reds were reported to be active in the Umsong-Chongju area.

A field headquarters spokesman said four communist twin-engine bombers hit Pohang on the east coast today. Pohang is on Yongli bay about 60 miles north of Pusan, main south coast Korean port.

This is the second time in the war that twin-engine North Korean planes have been seen.

The spokesman said the North Koreans now jump out of tanks and other vehicles whenever they see American planes coming.

"They jump in holes or climb trees," the spokesman said, adding "I don't get this climbing trees but that's the word we get."

South Korean forces were reported still holding firm on their front. The spokesman added, however, they had lost some ground today which they had won in fighting last night and this morning.

Atrocities Continuing In Korea

By WILLIAM R. MOORE
 Near the Front in Korea, July 11.—(AP)—I saw two dead American soldiers Monday who had been shot through the head. Their hands were tied behind them.

The two soldiers lay just off a main road which carried traffic supplying front-line fighters. They had been there since Monday morning, I was told later by infantry officers.

These officers said three Americans had been tied and shot in the head but I saw only two bodies.

(Yesterday American Lieut. D. C. Gates reported that seven American soldiers, their hands tied behind, had been shot to death by North Koreans. There was no indication whether the three reported today were some of those, or additional atrocities.)

I found no one who witnessed these slayings. Based on what was known of the fighting at this point early Monday, the belief was held generally that the soldiers, riding in a jeep in the morning mist, suddenly found themselves only 20 yards or so from a North Korean tank.

With the tank guns raised upon them, they jumped out and surrendered.

Their bodies showed what happened afterward.

Chapleau, Ont., July 11.—(CP)—Seven moose were killed in nine hours here yesterday. The animals were struck by trains.

Provincial Police Hold-Up Squad Chief Faces Charges

Montreal, July 11.—(AP)—The ace anti-robbery officer of the Quebec Provincial Police and his assistant appear in court tomorrow on charges of conspiring to commit and to have others commit armed robberies.

Detective Lieut. Marcel Patenaude, head of the hold-up squad, and Sgt. Gaston Archambault were ordered suspended last night by Deputy-Director Hilaire Beaugard pending outcome of their trials.

A third man, Paul Hervieux, who recently was suspended from the force for failing to carry out his duties, also has been arrested on the conspiracy counts. He and Sgt. Archambault will be arraigned today.

Short, bespectacled Patenaude is a former private detective who joined the provincial force seven years ago. Of 17 bank robberies in Montreal during 1949, the squad chief was credited with solving 14 and nine hold-ups in the district this year, seven have been solved.

Patenaude pleaded innocent and chose trial by judge. He was released on two $950 bonds.

When Patenaude handed his service revolver and badge to Beaugard before his arraignment,

Two American Correspondents Become First Press Victims Of Korean War

Tokyo, July 11.—(AP)—Two American correspondents were killed on the Korean warfront Monday.

A regimental adjutant reported their deaths to field headquarters. Presumably they were Ray Richards, correspondent for the Hearst newspapers, and Cpl. Ernie Peeler of the Tokyo Stars and Stripes, a United States armed forces newspaper.

International News Service here was informed that the report came from a regimental adjutant.

He reported that the bodies were not recovered because fighting still raged around the outpost where the reporters were killed.

Richards and Peeler had been reported missing since Sunday night, when they went forward to observe results of the first American around-the-clock bombings.

London, July 11.—(AP)—A Canadian Woman Salvation Army Officer, Ada Irwin, probably was among the last white women to leave South Korea after the invading communist forces crossed the 38th parallel.

Salvation Army international officers said today Miss Irwin "elected to watch developments" and stayed in Seoul, South Korea, until June 28. She flew to Tokyo just before Seoul fell.

Miss Irwin is in her 50s, it was stated here, and comes from Victoria, B. C. She served at Salvation Army training offices in Toronto during the war.

The information was received from Commissioner Herbert Lord, 60-year-old British Salvation Army officer believed to be still in Seoul.

Toronto, July 11.—(AP)—Canada's communist chief has presented his party's hands-off Korea proposals to Prime Minister St. Laurent.

Tim Buck made public today a letter urging Mr. St. Laurent to lead Canada in helping prevent the Korean war from developing into a world-wide conflict.

He criticized the "hasty" dispatch of Canadian destroyers "for action in Korean waters," denied that Russia is involved, and said the war is a United States military action against Korea, not a United Nations police action.

U.K. Tax Limit Not Yet Reached

London, July 11.—(AP)—Britons groaning under the world's highest taxes, were told last night they can pay more—and may have to.

The warning was given by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Stafford Cripps, in reply to House of Commons suggestions from Conservatives that tax gathering has reached its limit.

Britons now pay 40 per cent of their national income in taxes.

Sir Stafford agreed he has reached "near the limit of direct taxation on incomes."

"But that does not mean," he added, "that we have reached the limit of taxability. There are indirect taxation, death duties, and many other ways by which taxes can be raised."

"If it were the question of an emergency the situation would be quite different."

Egypt Backs West's Stand On Korea

Cairo, Egypt, July 11.—(AP)—Egypt today announced her support of the west in the world struggle against communism. She called North Korea's attack on South Korea an act of aggression and said she approved the United Nations decision denouncing it.

But a carefully-worded statement by Foreign Minister Mohamed Salah Eddin Bey maintained the Nile kingdom's refusal to support the U.N. Security Council's decision to use action in Korea.

Salah Eddin outlined the new Egyptian position at a press conference. Observers considered his statement a careful retreat from Egypt's previous "plague-on-both-your-houses" attitude toward Korea.

The other six Arab states earlier broke away from Egyptian leadership to give qualified support to U. N. Korean policies. Egypt had been criticized throughout the western world for her abstention from the council decision.

Soviet papers praised her stand.

Salah Eddin repudiated Russian support in a two-fold attack on communism, saying: "I hope our western powers succeed in their efforts to stop the communist menace." Asked if that included Korea, he said: "Everywhere."

Salah Eddin then reiterated the reasons Egypt abstained from supporting the U.N. action in Korea. By implication he stated these were retaliatory.

Without mentioning Palestine, he charged the U.N. has "an easy-going attitude and even takes decisions helping aggressors" in the Middle East.

The big "imperialistic" powers take the same attitude, he said, but declined to clarify the relation between these two points and the Korean issue.

U.S. Armed Forces Will Be Strengthened By 100,000

Washington, July 11.—(AP)—Informed senators said today they expect a 100,000-man increase in the United States armed forces—as the first step in the build-up toward a decisive victory in Korea.

Present strength is about 1,370,000. The 100,000 figure was reported to have been given to Senate armed services committee members in advance of an appearance before the group today of top military leaders headed by Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff.

Bradley and the heads of the services are expected to explain to the Senators why it has taken so long to get heavy equipment and sufficient men into the fighting to stem the southward advance of communist columns.

Draft machinery to produce the 20,000 recruits asked for by the army was in motion, while military leaders sought ships to carry trained troops to back the defence of Southern Korea against invading communists.

The defence department said yesterday's call for 20,000 was issued to meet the manpower ceiling approved by President Truman last week. The exact figures that are in the ceiling are still a secret.

In another move indicating urgency, Gen. Lawton Collins, army chief of staff, and Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, air chief of staff, left last night to confer in Tokyo with Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Gen. Collins took with him the blue and white flag of the United Nations, which the U.N. presented for MacArthur's use "as commander-in-chief of the unified forces in Korea."

Church Body Will Discuss Korean War

By CHARLES MERCER
 Toronto, July 11.—(AP)—The central committee of the World Council of Churches today tackles preparation of a statement on the political issues in the Korean situation.

The 90-member policy-making committee of the world council, which embraces about 160,000,000 church members in 44 countries of all major Christian confessions except Roman Catholicism, meets in closed session on the Korean question.

The privately-expressed views will be heard by a sub-committee which will draft the statement. The statement then will go to the full committee for open debate, probably Thursday.

The central committee, holding its annual meeting here, ends its sessions Saturday. The eventual statement will be the most significant Christian viewpoint on the Korean situation which possibly could be expressed, apart from that of the Roman Catholic church, because the council is the largest international body of Protestant and orthodox faiths.

The central committee last night was asked to issue a statement by the commission of the churches of international affairs, an agency of the World Council and the international missionary council.

Today's closed session was agreed upon because some committee members felt that their views should not be reported for security or other reasons, delegates indicated.

Membership of the central committee and the World Council penetrates Iron-Curtain countries.

The central committee yesterday unanimously elected Bishop Elvind Berggrav of Oslo, 66, Primate of the Lutheran Church of Norway, as one of the six presidents of the World Council.

Bishop Berggrav, who led Christian resistance in his country during the German occupation, succeeds the former Lutheran Archbishop, Erling Eidem of Uppsala, Sweden. Archbishop Eidem resigned last week because of advanced age.

French Assembly Elects Pleven

Paris, July 11.—(Reuters)—Rene Pleven, former French defence minister, today was elected Premier by the National Assembly.

The vote by unofficial count was 365 to 187.

Pleven, appearing before the Assembly to ask for the vote of confirmation, urged Frenchmen to unite behind a strong government at this time of international crisis.

He urged the "third force majority"—Radicals, Socialists and Movement Populaire Republican, who have made up most French governments since 1946—to come together again.

They have been divided by disagreement over a national wage policy, and the Socialists were not included in the last two governments. This time the Socialist national council gave its leaders a free hand to decide whether to join a cabinet headed by the 49-year-old former defence minister.

Canada Could Mobilize Her Forces Quickly, Smoothly

By JOHN LEBLANC
 Canadian Press Staff Writer
 Ottawa, July 11.—(AP)—Should Canada become plunged into a full-dress war over Korea, mobilization of her manpower would be fast and smooth compared with that of the second world war.

Five years after the war's end, much of the framework of the machinery used for directing manpower into military and civilian channels is still in existence. Many of the key men who directed the job are still in government service.

In the last war, everything had to be built up from scratch. But by the end of hostilities Canada had one of the best manpower-mobilization organizations among the allies.

Key agency in the last war was National Selective Service, which after the opening stages of the war centralized manpower controls under the department of labor.

Much of the organization of this agency is still in existence in the form of National Employment Service, which has a network of 300 regional offices across the country.

The wartime director of N.E.S.S., Arthur MacNamara, now is deputy minister of labor.

National Employment Service developed from the selective service organization, and still uses many of the facilities and personnel of the wartime body. Officials say the transition back to a wartime basis could be made easily.

Facilities for the placement of technical workers in war industries are in being, while training programs are being operated by the provinces and could be switched back to federal control in the event of emergency.

Labor-management production committees, a wartime development, are in operation on a scale greater than the wartime basis.

In readiness also is the machinery for the Dominion taking over control of industrial relations in all industries, as was done during the war and the early post-war years.

Jurisdiction is most of the industries was moved back to the provinces in 1948, with the federal government retaining authority in railroads, communications and certain other interprovincial undertakings. This is another field in which control could be quickly returned to the central government.

SEAFARING STERLING HAYDEN HAS WANDERLUST UNDER CONTROL

Hollywood — There is an effete yachting crowd in Hollywood which goes down to the sea in white flannels and brass buttons and steps aboard varnished cruisers and gleaming white hulled sail boats.

While skippers, deck hands and stewards snap to attentiveness, the Hollywood men and their ladies, in Esquire and Vogue attire, collapse on foam rubber cushions.

Then there's Sterling Hayden and the "Oscar Tybring," a match for each other in ruggedness.

"Oscar" is a 38-ton, 45-foot Norwegian double ender, built in 1895, on which Hayden goes to sea in faded, patched dungarees as a combination skipper, deck hand and steward for his wife and two infant sons.

The sails of "Oscar" are far from snowy white. She has no polished chrome or sparkling varnish. There are black stains on her topside. She's slow and bulky — no match for the sleek ingenues of the Hollywood yachtsmen who worry only about speed.

"Oscar" was built to be seaworthy, not to impress anyone.

For 55 years she's conquered wind, sea and tides on 'round the world cruises and as a rescue ship for Norwegian fishing fleets with a record of saving 350 boats in distress and 3000 lives.

Sterling loves her with a love only real seafaring men can know for fine designing and craftsmanship.

Shipbuilder's Art

His eyes lit up as I stood beside him at the helm:

"She's a monument to wooden ship building," he said. "She's the kind of a ship a skipper doesn't have to worry about—she'll take care of the skipper."

There isn't even an auxiliary motor.

"I've got a fetish about motors on sail boats," Sterling says. "Sailboats were meant to sail."

But sometimes when there's no wind and an appointment to be kept in Hollywood he promises

Waterloo Featured A Colorful And Well Organized Parade And Sports Events To Celebrate Dominion Day

Waterloo, July 11 — A colorful and picturesque procession marked the grand opening of the Dominion Day Festivities at Waterloo. The weather favored the activities and a huge crowd gathered all along the long line of the procession.

At nine forty-five a. m., the Waterloo Concert Band, under the careful guidance of their leader, Mr. George Young, left the Town Hall and paraded down Main Street toward the Granby Road, where they met and welcomed the guest band from Acton, Val. From this point the parade started taking them down the length of Main Street, around Foster Square and back down to the starting point.

The parade was led by Jay Irwin and his thorough bred Arabian stallion. Following the police leaders and Mr. Irwin came the Canadian Legion and Boy Scout standard bearers, who also acted as leaders for the visiting band. Immediately following the Acton Vale band, smartly dressed and producing excellent martial music, was the Waterloo Automobile Registered Co., with Mr. Thomas Wilkinson, the proprietor, driving his station wagon loaded to capacity with happy and carefree children. The International Harvesters Farmerettes, high school girls, were the next. The tractor owned by The Waterloo Automobile Registered as a driver Miss Ruth Adam, and the girls were gaily dressed in jeans, bright plaid shirts, straw hats with corn cob pipes. This float produced great response from the appreciative crowd.

Mr. Albert Nolin was present in his 1911 model Ford, with him was Mr. J. Marcure, who was a former owner of this truly valuable relic. Along with the Slack Bros. float, was one, depicting a lawn scene, put out by Mr. Marcién Plante, representing his manufactured products.

The School of Ballet had a truly spectacular float, representing a scene from their recent and successful concert. Mama and her baby carriage was, by far, the most amusing spectacle with Mr. Frank Scrimgeour, as the active youngster in the carriage being pushed by his mother, Mr. Art Blenner-Hassett.

Beautifully decorated bicycles followed, and the entire procession was preceded by the Waterloo Band.

manche, Waterloo Bicycle Shop and the Waterloo Bowling.

The final item on the program was the sack race which was won by D. Chapman, with C. Mitchell second and Fred Gibson third.

During the afternoon special music was provided by both bands, with some excellent massed band work being done by members of both organizations.

Mr. George Young and his committee deserve much credit for the day's festivities, as it was a complete work of the band and its members.

The crowd turned out in good numbers to support the large undertaking, and the support was excellent. The program ran off very smoothly due to considerable preparation by the committee and the entries were full in each event and there was no hitch during the entire day. The activities were a just credit to Waterloo.

"I'm getting one," Sterling grinned.

Mrs. Hayden tossed him as "I bet you never will" look.

No, Sterling Hayden isn't a Sunday sailor.

He went to sea at 15, was a Gloucester fisherman for two winters, navigated the famous "Gertrude L. Thebaud" against the Blue Nose in the 1938 International Fisherman's Race, captained another schooner to Tahiti and mastered two of his own sailing ships in the West Indies.

Then he became a movie star and now he plays the starring role of Dix in John Huston's crime thriller, "The Asphalt Jungle." But to Sterling Hayden it's more than just a movie, more than just the best role of his career.

It's the turning point in his life. You may remember the pre-war Sterling Hayden, who left the sea to star in two films at Paramount and then rushed back to the sea to emerge as a war hero with the Marines and the O.S.S.

If you don't remember—skip it. Hayden wants to forget it. He says, "It's all a blank. I've settled down."

Has Acting Fever

There's now an ambition to act, a permanent Hayden address in Westwood and the sea is for week-ends and vacations only.

He brushes off the pre-war Hayden-the-actor with:

"I was scared to death. I couldn't wait to get back to something I knew."

There was no acting fever then. Just sea-fever.

Pre-war Hollywood to him was a means to his private and secret goal—another boat. He had just lost his own in a storm off Cape Hatteras. His favorite words were in the poem "Sea Fever." An English trade paper of sailing ship news, "Sea Breezes," not Variety was his Bible.

Now things are different. A long war service, a happy marriage, a home, two sons, another visit from the stork logged for mid-August, and an acting performance no one can sneer at have all the wanderlust out of Sterling Hayden.

The sea fever is still there but it's under control.

Every time the "Oscar Tybring" leans seaward into a stiff blow in the blue water off the San Pedro harbor breakwater, Sterling turns to his wife and grins:

"At this point I always wonder—Why go back?"

Mrs. Hayden smiles and nods and, as usual, says nothing.

Sterling smiles and, as usual, says nothing.

He confided:

"I know and she knows we will be back."

All in all it was truly the most spectacular and well-organized parade seen in the town of Waterloo for many years. The band, under its leader, attended to all detail, and carried on the activities with a sports day held in the afternoon on the Exhibition Grounds.

Three heats were run off by some local horses, and a very close contest was witnessed, with horses owned by Charlie Harrington, Bill Hackwell and Winston Taylor taking part.

In some places it was so deep it had to be swept away from houses and beach-side kiosks.

A FAIR PILE OF MONEY

The Russians have allocated the sum of twenty billion dollars for defence this year. The English-speaking world—the United States, Britain and Canada—has budgeted for something in excess of sixteen billion dollars for the same purpose. Added together, the defence expenditures of the two camps totals thirty-six billion United States dollars. Commenting on this, Industry, published by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, says:

Even in this day and age, when millions are tossed around like bubble gum nickels, and President Truman talks optimistically of a trillion-dollar economy in the year 2000, a figure like 36 billion is terrifying.

Possibly the cold war, like the income tax, is here to stay. Thus, in the event that it will only cost thirty-six billion a year to retain the doubtful privilege of making faces and rude sounds at each other for years to come, it may be considered cheap.

But supposing that thirty-six billion were turned towards peaceful pursuits. Pure economic theory tells us that if those who are now making and using non-productive goods—big tanks, powerful guns, warplanes that exceed the speed of sound—would instead make and use productive goods, that is produce goods and services which the world wants in greater quantity, they would obviously improve the world's standard of living. There would, in short, be more for everybody—more food, more houses, better health, more security.

Strangely enough, the very people who blab about the face of the globe that it is only Communism which seeks to raise the workers' living standards and only Communism which has peaceful intentions towards all, are the ones who are allocating more money for armaments than the western democracies and thus contributing more towards lowering their own and the rest of the world's living standards.

The Muscovite top brass preaches one way for sucker consumption, but they certainly act more like warmongers than the people they accuse of warmongering. It just doesn't add up.

OPPOSITION TO SALES TAX

One of the most interesting controversies to come out of the report of the Parliamentary Committee on Social Security is that over the proposals for financing the suggested old age pensions. The Committee report hinted that the sales tax might be the logical method, but like so many other recommendations the details were decidedly indefinite. It did not say where the tax should be levied, whether at the manufacturers, wholesale or retail levels. And by this evasiveness, it left wide open a field for extensive argument.

The supporters of the theory that somehow or other, such costs can be met without any contributions from the recipients are complacently loudly that a sales tax means that the burden is placed upon those least able to pay, that the cost of living is bound to go up as a result of this sales tax. From the general tenor of their arguments they expect the tax to be imposed on retail purchases and realize that the allowances will not seem so much like a gift from heaven when a substantial portion is returned to the government in sales tax.

Opponents of the tax, assuming it to be a manufacturers' levy, declare that a sales tax to support social security would mean the government and the legislators are afraid to let the people know the cost of the burden they are assuming. It would be a piece of unadorned evasion of unpalatable facts, they maintain.

This grim fact remains: If this country wants a system of pensions for every citizen at seventy whether he is in need or not, the individual citizen should be told what the cost to him is going to be. That cost should be expressed in terms of dollars and cents out of his weekly income or his annual earnings. It should not be hidden in his grocery bill or in the clothes his family wears.

The Parliamentary Committee report talked vaguely of the probable overall cost, but sought to hide the real estimate by references to present payments, hinting that somehow or other the sharp actual increase might not be felt by the individual. But even when it did mention the real estimate, it failed to show the cost to the individual taxpayer, leaving it to each observer to work out his own arithmetic.

VIOLATING LAW'S SPIRIT

When the railroad firemen struck on four big United States rail lines a while ago, many observers noted that the railroad unions had developed a consistent habit of rejecting the recommendations of presidential fact-finding boards.

The recent walkout of the switchmen's union against five western and midwestern roads emphasizes this tendency.

The switchmen have not violated the letter of the Railway Labor Act. But in flatly turning down a presidential board's wage recommendations, they have failed to observe the spirit of the law.

Testimony is ample that one great aim of this law is to prevent stoppages on the nation's rail lines, because of their vital role in the economy. With persistent union refusals to abide by fact-finding board proposals, the act is proving virtually useless on that score.

It should either be honored in the spirit or scrapped for something better.

TRYGVE LIE GIVES ENEMIES GROUND FOR ATTACK

Trygve Lie's recent activities have brought the charge from some quarters that he is a communist. For this there is no apparent ground. He has advocated a course that would be pleasing to the Soviet, but so have many well-meaning people in the United States and Britain who have nothing to do with communism.

Asked at a U.N. press conference if the charge was true, Mr. Lie protested with some heat against the bringing of his press conferences "down to that level." Then he referred his questioner to various Norwegian statesmen, none of whom was present. Finally, asked why he did not answer for himself, he said angrily: "By God, there should be some respect for my integrity." That silenced his questioners.

It will not silence his enemies. It would have been simpler and better to have answered simply "No." The question was not an improper one. It was put by a representative of the Chicago Tribune, one of his critics, but it might well have been put by one of his supporters. It gave him an opportunity to deny a charge which his opponents will now say he has not denied.

It is not to be taken that he considers it would be disgraceful to be a communist—as secretary-general of a body that contains communist states he could not take that position. He is angry presumably at the suggestion that he would be a communist without making the fact known.

His anger was too hasty. He is living in a world in which suspicion is rife, and the question put to him might be put to anyone in similar circumstances. In similar circumstances anyone should be prepared to answer it quietly, or to declare it unworthy of answer. To answer it by reference to absent statesmen was unwise.

LUMBER FAMINE THREAT TO PUBLIC

Unless some action is taken and fast, all home and other building in Windsor will be tied up soon by a shortage of lumber. Because of high prices prevailing across the border, and the diversion of lumber to that market, Windsor dealers are unable to buy, borrow or buy it.

Windsor is hit first by this shortage. But the prospects are other districts soon will be in the same situation unless something is done.

This means people badly in need of homes, and who are building them, will be delayed in getting them completed. It means that contractors cannot give firm bids for new contracts. They do not know when they will be able to get lumber, or at what price if they do get it. It will interfere with building not just for the next few weeks, but for many months.

It is all very well to say that if dealers pay a high enough price they will get lumber. This is no answer. Many who now are building or wish to build cannot afford higher prices; cannot afford the higher down payment that will be necessary.

The situation demands action, and only quick action will suffice to head off serious trouble. If lumber operators will not supply Canadian needs, government intervention is required. That government is in Ottawa. If members of the government and of Parliament are sufficiently alert to the crisis, there is still time for them to act.

They can get in touch with the timber operators and tell them bluntly to supply sufficient lumber to the Canadian market. And tell them if they will not do so, they will be compelled to do it. Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe knows these gentlemen, and he knows how to talk to them in language they understand. He did it during the war. With the backing of the Cabinet he can do it again.

COUNTERING PROPAGANDA

Ottawa's refusal of Canadian visas to Russians seeking to attend a Slav congress in Toronto is all to the good. Why should we make it easy for the Kremlin's trained seals to play their propaganda tune on the Canadian stage?

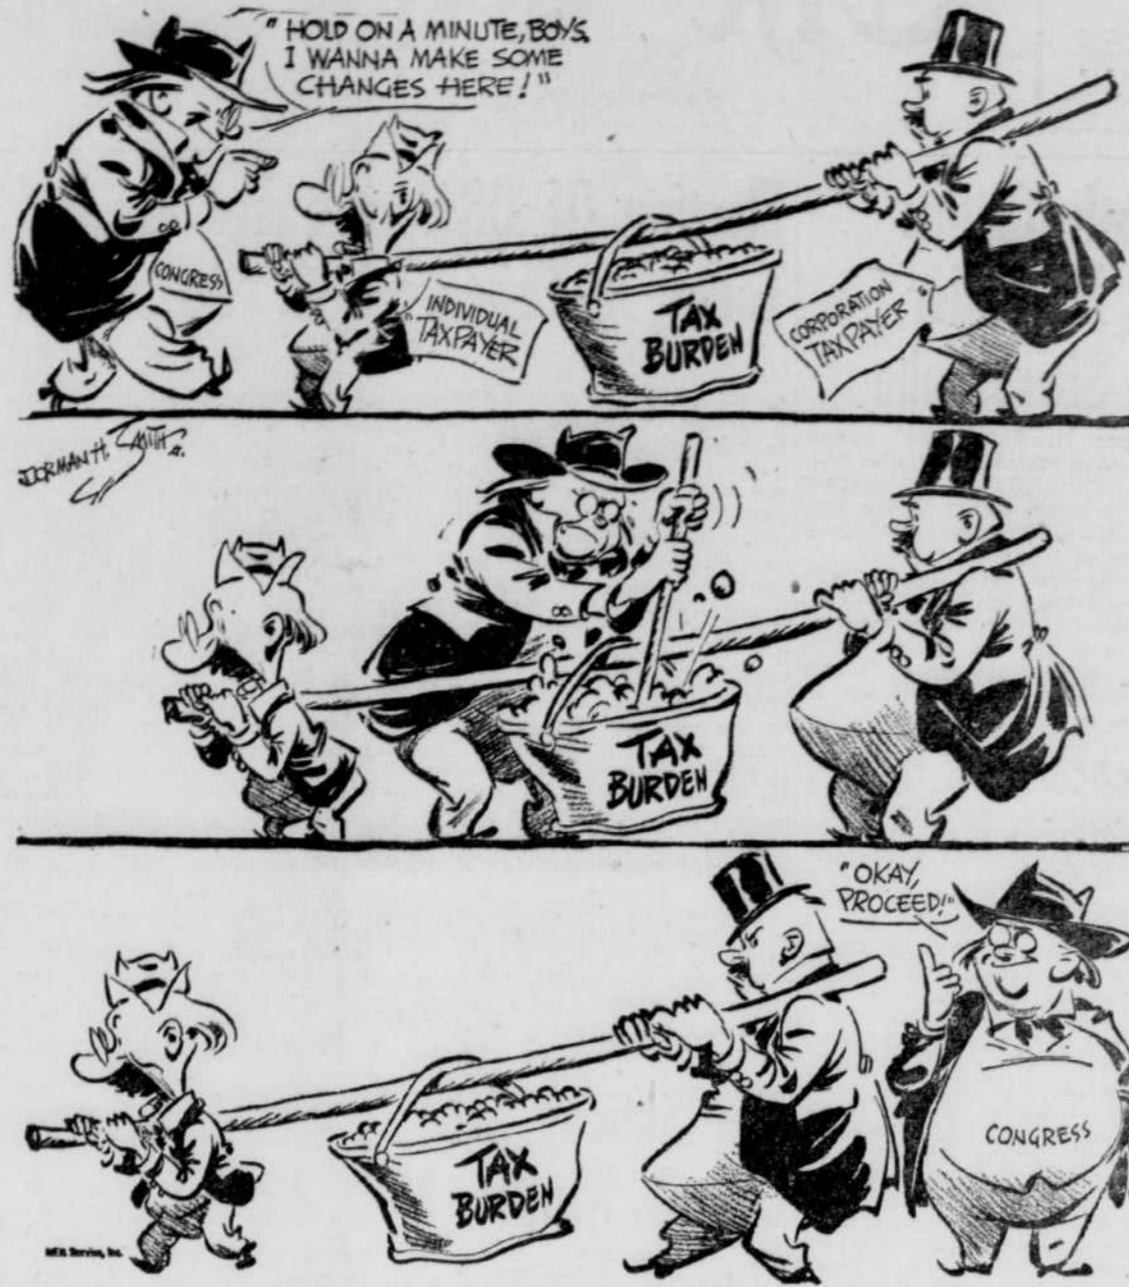

A few days ago the Toronto communist paper, The Tribune, announced that a Russian delegation of "writers, poets, etc.," would attend the Slav meeting. Just what cultural classification Lt. Gen. Alexander Gurdorov falls into we do not know, but we do know he is one of Russia's first-string propagandists and chairman of the All-Slav Conference held in Moscow in 1941. He was one of those seeking entry and Ottawa has quite properly barred him. You don't see the Soviet opening its doors to Canadians who might want to tell the Russian people how much better things are here than behind the Iron Curtain.

While Ottawa was refusing entrance visas to these intending Russian visitors a demand was being made in Parliament for the refusal of passports to some Canadians wishing to travel abroad. This presents some difficulties, but it would be useful if the government could devise some means of protecting the country against those few citizens who take advantage of its freedom to engage in subversive activities.

The reference here, of course, is to known communists. Tim Buck, titular leader of the Canadian communists, recently returned to Canada after a visit to Europe, during which he carried a Canadian passport. He visited Russia, doubtless to report on the activities of Canadian communists to his masters in the Kremlin, and perhaps to receive fresh instructions for carrying on the communist party's subversive work.

If Mr. Buck is a Canadian we have yet to see him act like one. In the circumstances it is a moot point whether we should facilitate his subversive work by allowing him to enjoy the facilities of Canadian citizenship. In the past he and his communist friends have treated Canadian freedom with the utmost scorn, using it to further a cause which, if it does not reach, practices the denial of freedom.

First Bombs Of 2nd World War Fell On London 10 Years Ago

By ERNEST AGNEW
London, July 11—(AP)—Just 10 years ago the air raid sirens were wailing over Britain.

The first of 50,000 bombs, not counting incendiaries, which German bombers dumped on London in 13 months fell on the clear moonlight night of July 11, 1940. It hit an open space, caused no damage, but that was only the beginning.

The war lasted five years and eight months. For 47 of those 68 months London was more or less under attack from the air.

From the dramatic moment at 11:30 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 3, 1939, when the first false alarm sent Londoners scurrying to air raid shelters, until March 28, 1945—when the sirens sounded for the last time—there were 1,227 air raid alerts in central London. When the war ended, 145,000 houses in metropolitan London alone had been demolished or made uninhabitable.

Thousands of houses have been rebuilt, so have numbers of damaged buildings, but completion of an ambitious plan for full reconstruction of the capital will not come for at least 15 years, perhaps more. The country can't afford it.

Serious discussions about the rebuilding of the city started in 1942. By 1943, two plans had been drawn up by Professor Patrick Abercrombie, 65-year-old professor of town and country planning at the University of London.

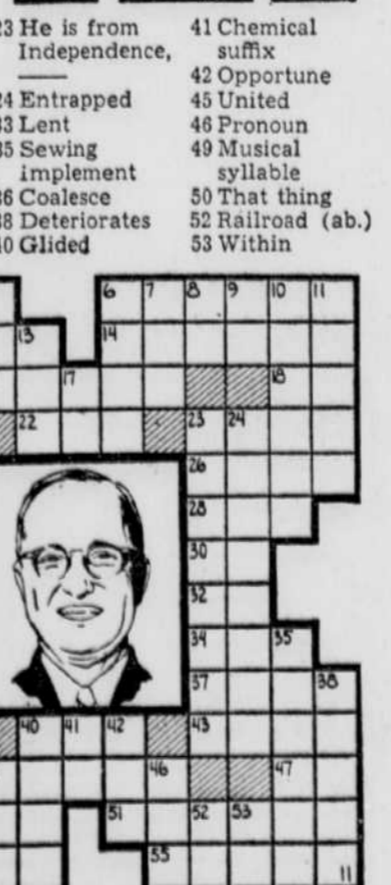

They covered:
1. The rebuilding of greater London—the whole mass of built-up streets, including the outer suburbs.
2. Metropolitan London, or the administrative county of London, the inner area.
3. The City proper, the square mile that encloses the Bank of England, the financial district and the Lord Mayor's headquarters.

HARD LUCK TRACED TO BAD SACRIFICE BID

"That was the unluckiest hand I've seen in a year," said Hard Luck Joe. "The dummy was absolutely useless to me!"

I suppose you think you're useful to me," North replied bitterly. "I'd be glad to trade you in for a used stick of chewing gum."

"Now, now," said East cheerfully. "Nice children don't fight. If Joe says he is unlucky, I'm willing to believe him."

It was all very well for East to be so cheerful. He had just collected a penalty of 900 points from Joe, and he was perfectly willing to humor him.

The play had been very simple. West opened the six of spades, and East won with the king. East returned a low trump, hoping to make it possible to lead spades later on by getting rid of dummy's trump. Joe, playing the South hand, won a trump finesse with the queen.

Joe might have done better if he had then left the trumps alone, but instead he hopefully laid down the ace of trumps. This assured East two trump tricks eventually.

The rest of the hand was a nightmare for Joe. He led the king of clubs and got out with a spade. Joe ruffed and led his other club, but East took the ace and returned a heart. Joe lost a heart finesse and ruffed the spade return.

He next led a trump, hoping for some sort of lucky break in hearts or clubs, but there was no luck about the hand. East took his two trumps and exited with a spade. Joe therefore had to lead the hearts from his own hand, giving another trick to West.

In all, South lost seven tricks. He was therefore down five, for a loss of 900 points.

Joe was quite wrong, of course, when he said that the hand was unlucky. As usual, he had brought misfortune on his own head. He should have let the opponents play the hand at four spades instead of trying to fight them singlehanded. Sacrifices bid are very fine, provided that you use them with a great deal of discretion. In the first place, it is wise to be sure

The Record Short Story
He Was So Thoughtful
By OLGA A. ROSMANITZ

Persy's mother drove her out from Los Angeles to Grandma's place in a small desert settlement on the way to Twenty-Nine Palms. Persy—her mother diagnosed—was run down from overwork getting her college degree. Before going on to drama school and dancing and fencing and riding lessons, she ought to recuperate her strength. Where could she do it better than back of beyond with Grandma with all this sunshine and pure dry desert air?

Persy wanted to drive the car because her mother's driving scared her. No luck. It was a borrowed car—from one of Margaret Wilburn's Hollywood friends—and it had to go back in one piece before Margaret flew back to New York. "My, she's grown a beauty. Prettier than you were. Almost. And redder hair. So she's going on the stage too? Well, she shouldn't have any trouble. Chesscake's okay. Well, Persy, I'm proud of you."

Persy submitted to an unexpectedly highly perfumed embrace. "It's a lovely place you have here, Grandma," said Margaret. "She can drive," said Margaret. "It will be okay to let her use your car."

Grandma dissented. "I can't spare it, Maggie. But she'll have no trouble getting lifts. With that red hair and all. Plenty of that kind of help around here."

Persy's mother opened her voluminous bag and produced her check book. She made out a generous check. "Pay this in the local bank, Persy, and get yourself a used car. You can sell it when you come home. Don't drive it home. Fly. And look, Grandma, I count on you; don't let her get mixed up with a local yokel! I didn't invest all that money in her education for such a fate."

Grandma winked at Persy. "Guess she's as smart as Ma as well as prettier. Maybe smarter." "I should hope so." The famous actress, already aored with the brooding silent atmosphere, got back in the big car, announced she had a dinner engagement in Hollywood and would have to step on it going back. Both Grandma and Persy knew better than try to make her change her plans. They watched her gather speed on the straight empty track. Persy said a silent prayer for her safe arrival.

Grandma glanced at her wrist watch. "Bank's still open. Let's go over and get this money paid in. I know a place you can get a used car." She added kindly—"this is a bit of change from your mother's way of life. Don't want you to get bored around here."

Weaving in among the erratic California traffic, as if she were knitting, knit one, purl one, drop one—Margaret drove with one hand and gesticulated with a long cigarette holder in the other. She filled Persy with instructions. "Sunbathe—get brown all over—use oil—a sort of honey color tan—looks good with white. Don't read so much. It makes your eyes look tired. Don't break your nails in Grandma's jalousy. Don't let your hair get sun-bleached. Don't put on any weight. And for the love of Mike don't get mixed up with some local yokel!"

An outgating driver, unmoved by Margaret's sudden decision to change lanes as he was about to pass, yelled something about women drivers and the death rate. Margaret was calm. "The rudest people in the country drive out here and most of them wouldn't be missed."

"According to the map," said Persy, "here we turn off." The lane was a hard narrow track through the desert land ringed with sapphire blue mountain ranges and pink, yellow, mauve, purple, white, blue orange and scarlet with blossoming spring flowers. It led to a small community of charming adobe houses grouped round an oasis at a spring of desert water.

"You ought to be safe here," said Persy's mother. "Look, there's Grandma." Persy stood aside, accustomed to her mother's dramatic greetings. Grandma was no grandmother, but had once been the landlady of a theatrical boarding house in Denver, Colo., where Persy had then kept and taken care of Persy when her mother went back on the road for the next three years, and had earned the title. Apparently that mother had got a part on Broadway and stayed there ever since—a bright, particular star.

The sunburned leathery old woman was in a youthful white dress, white sandals and had a blue bannanna tied on her short white hair. She emerged from Margaret's embrace and looked at Persy. "I want to be bored," said Persy passionately. "Mother came out to make a picture. And stayed on for vacation. Parties every night. I never worked so hard in my life." "Well, we aren't all made the same," said Grandma gratefully. "Here's the Palm Tree service station, and that's the car for sale."

A genial old gnome in stained white overalls and horn-rimmed glasses took Grandma's word for it that Persy's check was good. The car was a four-year-old sport coupe. Persy bought it and drove Grandma away in it. She was used to driving and being driven in smart new cars of superior makes, but this was the first car of her very own. A wave of something uncommonly like maternal love went out to it.

It became her only companion. Persy explored the desert by herself. She christened the car Alfie because she had thoughts and impressions with it. She was a perfectly normal girl in her liking for congenial male company, but a few Hollywood dates had temporarily soured her on the weaker sex.

The car was dependable. Until it stalled in the middle of a long stretch of empty desert road. She got out to look at a flowering cactus and when she went back it wouldn't start. Not the faintest whirr, not even a dying moan when she touched the starter. Alfie betrayed her.

Finally a passing traveller gave her a lift to the nearest gas station, where she could telephone to Palm Tree service station and report her plight and whereabouts. After an hour's wait the scariest breakdown truck appeared to pick her up and go on to where her car waited in solitary obstinacy. The friend in need was not old Mr. Chapel, but a sunburned young man in oil-stained overalls, "Miss Milburn? Jump in," he said.

Persy jumped in. "The battery's dead," she said accusingly. "What a place to have it do me!" "Impossible," he said right back. "I fixed that car up myself and she's a new one."

She watched him while he checked, delighted when the started failed to respond to him, annoyed to think the nicest personality of the male sex she'd met out West was a hired hand at a gas station.

"You see?" she said. He found the loose wire under the instrument panel. "That's my fault," he admitted. "There'll be no charge. But a man would have found it."

"Only a man who's learned the works," she said pleasantly. "I could do that too. I'd like to. Could I take a few lessons at your service station?"

He gave her a thoughtful interested look. "It might be arranged—if it's all right with old Chapel."

"Persy's a strange name for a girl," Martin surmised. "Short for Persephone—a part my mother was playing. But it's strange all right." "That was the day the telegram came telling her to sell her car, pack up and fly home. Persy looked at the golden desert, the blue mountains and then at the smudged brown face of her instructor and her heart cracked. These things added up to the one word—"home."

"Maybe the next time I see you will be in a movie," Martin said sadly. "Never! Nor on the stage. I hate it. I'll get a job in a garage somewhere." "Martin dropped the wrench he was holding and came over. 'If I'd have a job here—the first of a chain. I'm a partner—and so would you be.'" He hurried on—"I'm a college graduate—a your mother—I mean I like this kind of a life—my family—well, what'll you say to her?"

When Persy got her breath back she went to the telephone and dictated a message to Western Union. "Sorry, Mother, got a part to play out here, leading lady to a local yokel."

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Bliss Were Feted On Their 35th Wedding Anniversary

Rock Island, July 11—The "500" Club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Lyons, on Friday evening, June 30, for the usual game. At refreshment time Mr. and Mrs. Bliss were much surprised at being presented with a bouquet of roses and a boutonniere. To strains of the "Wedding March," played by Mrs. A. Farrow, a three tier wedding cake complete with a pert little miniature bride and groom, was brought in and placed in front of the couple.

Mr. George Danneau, on behalf of the Club presented Mr. and Mrs. Bliss with a gorgeous lace table cloth.

Little Nancy Abbott, whose birthday falls on June 30, was also surprised, in an effort to create a more cheerful atmosphere for the child, after her sad experience.

A beautiful birthday cake was brought in while "Happy Birthday" was played by Mrs. Farrow and sung by sister June.

A prettily decorated basket, filled with gifts was then presented to Nancy. Little Penny Carbonneau helped to open the parcels and was agreeably surprised to find her name on one of them.

The wedding cake was made by Mrs. Bryon Jenkins and decorated by her daughter, Mrs. Richard Reynolds. The birthday cake was made and decorated by Mrs. Charles Bliss. The basket was prettily decorated by Mrs. Hattie Lowell.

A RECITAL

A recital by the pupils of Miss Muriel Clare Heath was presented on Wednesday evening, June 21st, at the Village Hall, in Derby Line, and was well attended by the parents of the pupils and their friends.

The listeners were thrilled by this well-balanced program, which offered a fine variety of selections for piano and violin. Each number was presented in a very creditable manner, by the younger students as well as by those of more advanced standing.

Perhaps the highlights of the evening was the finale, a violin trio, in which Miss Heath and two of her advanced pupils took part. The applause testified to the fine rendition of this number.

Especially pleasing to those who have attended previous recitals, was the evidence of marked progress being made from year to year. The beginner of a few years ago is now showing promise of the professional. There is evidence of much real talent among these pupils, from the Three Villages and Newport, and the extent to which it has been developed reflects great credit on the teacher. These communities are indeed fortunate in having Miss Heath devote her time to this work; being graduated in both piano and violin, and capable of teaching

Cubs Smash 4 Homers To Down Baltimore 6-2

Don't say "home run!" to Baltimore's Irv Medlinger. It might scare him to death.

The Oriole righthander had enough of baseball's "big hit" last night. Springfield gave him the full treatment — four homers in four innings—while winning 6-2.

Jack Hollis rather inconsiderately lost Medlinger's first toss with a shot over the left-field wall. Things quieted down until the fourth.

But when the fourth frame smoke cleared, Springfield had a 5-2 bulge, 4,646 Baltimore fans were disconsolate and Medlinger was taking a shower.

Ransom Jackson nicked him for No. 2, and no sooner had "Handsome Ransom" crossed the plate, than big Jack Wallasa crashed No. 3.

After Les Peden doubled, Bob Thurman lit the big firecracker—a 420-foot blast over the centrefield wall—and Specs Klemm was rushed in. Play was halted in the seventh because of rain.

Bill Moisan held the Orioles to five hits to pick up his fifth victory. The loss was Medlinger's seventh, compared to six triumphs. It also dropped the Orioles three full games behind the league-leading Rochester Red Wings, who were idle.

Buffalo and Toronto split a doubleheader. Buffalo, behind Charlie Harris' four-hitter, captured the second game 7-1 after Toronto took the seven-inning opener 3-2. Johnny Mayo's long fly with the bases full in the seventh inning scored the winning run in the opener.

Syracuse had its game at Jersey City postponed due to rain.

Montreal and Rochester were idle.

By IZAAK HUNTER
SING A SONG OF MUSKIES

Out in Lake of Two Mountains the muskies have really started to hit. Denis Daoust has taken the top fish of the year to date in these waters, a 30-pounder which runs his string to three for the season. Jean Charles Wilson, who is really the proprietor of those muskies off Ile Bizard, having been brought up with them, also has three to his credit. And the season was officially ushered in out there when, on Wednesday evening, Zotique Rivard took a 20 1/2-pounder. In addition to that Zotique lost another of about the same size.

He has started slowly, but Denis and the other boys will be watching him out of the corners of their eyes now that he has broken the ice. Pierre Delage lost a nice fish Saturday evening.

Most of the excitement took place Wednesday afternoon and evening. That was the day I was out at Three Rivers and Denis Daoust called the office that afternoon with a view to taking me out to see Yvette, Bertrand and Lucie and do a spot of fishing. That was the night he got the 30-pounder. Dog gone the luck, anyway—that might have been my fish.

Lou Shapiro And Jacques Jeanneau To Hurl Tonight's Games; First Tilt Scheduled To Commence At 6.45

Lou Shapiro and Jacques Jeanneau have drawn the mound assignments for this evening's doubleheader when the Athletics tangle with St. Johns at the local park.

The first game, which will be a seven-inning fixture, will commence at 6:45 and will be followed by the nine-inning battle after a slight delay of fifteen minutes.

St. Johns is at present holding down third position in Albert Molini's circuit, two and a half games behind the Athletics. The locals must definitely cop tonight's fixture if they wish to remain within striking distance of Drummondville. The Cubs meet Granby this evening, and Stan Brandy's squad should come through with a victory against the last place aggregation especially since the game will be played on the Cubs' home grounds.

Manager Gladu in nominating Shapiro is sending his top hurler to the mound since the lanky right hander has a record of nine wins against two setbacks to lead the local staff with an average of .818.

In Jeanneau Manager Gladu has a very promising young prospect, but so far the youngster has won only one game and lost three.

The locals will no doubt be out to try and make up for their setbacks, received over the weekend at the hands of the Cubs, and they stand a fair chance of overtaking them if they cop both tilts. Steve Mizerek's squad will be battling to try and close the small gap between them and the A's and should give a good account of themselves.

Following tonight's games the locals travel to St. John tomorrow evening and then return home to be hosts to the up-and-coming Saints Thursday night at 8:30.

N. L. Manager Burt Shotton On Hot Seat Today As All-Star Game Is Unreled Before 49,000 Fans

Chicago, July 11.—(AP)—Yankee Vic Raschi and the Phils' $25,000 bonus baby, Robin Roberts, clash today in the 17th renewal of the All-Star baseball game at its Comiskey Park birthplace.

Although the fans' dream has become a manager's nightmare, a sellout crowd of 49,000 is due at the Chicago White Sox ball park by game time. The first ball is to be pitched at 1:30 p.m. CDT.

The National League, trailing 12-4 in games, is a 9 to 5 underdog. It may sound like 49,000 to 1 when Manager Burt Shotton's name bounces off the public address system horns.

Shotton, Brooklyn manager, is on the hot seat with Chicago fans because he tried to keep the Cubs' Hank Sauer out of the starting line-up. The fans, who voted Sauer into third place among the outfielders with more than 700,000 ballots, won out in the end when Commissioner A. B. Chandler reversed an earlier ruling.

Sauer, normally a left-fielder not noted for his defensive skill, will be in centre.

Sauer, the innocent bystander in the "hubarb," said: "I'll play any place they want me to. I'm not mad at anybody. I'm only a little fish in the big show."

Steps are being taken to ease the headache of the All-Star pilots in future. This probably will be the last time the game will be played under conditions that have existed since naming of the players was returned to the fans in 1947.

The fans in future will be asked to specify outfield positions, naming a left-fielder, centre-fielder and right-fielder.

Another likely change will be naming of one pitcher from each club in the league by the acting manager. As it is now, the pilot would name all eight from the same club if he chose.

Manager Casey Stengel of the American League stars, after naming Raschi to pitch the first three innings, was ague concerning his further pitching alignment.

It was felt, however, that Casey would use Detroit's Ted Gray in the middle three innings and finish with Chicago's Ray Scarborough.

Like Stengel, Shotton was reluctant to name the hurlers who will follow Philadelphia's Robin Roberts on the mound for the Nationals.

Except for Yankees Joe DiMaggio and Yogi Berra, all players are in good physical shape. DiMaggio, who pulled a leg muscle in Sunday's game, and Berra, who aggravated an old leg injury in the same game, are not seriously injured and are expected to play.

Trotters Chalk Up Fast Miles At Saratoga Meet

Saratoga Springs, N.Y., July 11.—(AP)—The two fastest trotting miles of the Saratoga Raceway season were turned in last night in the featured $3,750 divided Island Park trot as the Grand Circuit opened a two-week stand.

Redchuck, owned by W. H. Norman and C. D. England of Coshocton, Ohio, and driven by Curley Smart, won the fifth race, first half of the feature in 2:05 2/5, lowering the season's trotting standard here by 4/5ths of a second. Then in the seventh, Hayes Fair Acres' Scotch Pal went the distance in 2:03 3/5 to win by nearly three lengths.

Redchuck returned $3.50, $3.00 and $2.50 while Scotch Pal, paid $3.30, $2.50 and $2.30.

63-Inch Muskie—28 Pounds

Denis had warmed up with a 19-pound fish on Tuesday and had given Izak a shot at his aquarium. That same Wednesday evening Mr. Rivard took his 20 1/2-pounder and before going in he hooked and played another for about ten minutes before it broke free.

On Monday Jean Charles Wilson took three fish, one of 28 pounds, one of 13 1/2 and one of nine. The big one measured 53 inches in length which should have made his about a 25-pounder, but the fish was built like a snake with a huge head and mouth.

Fishing wasn't good on Saturday and on Sunday it was so hot that very few people went out. On his way home Saturday evening Pierre Delage was casting with his motor running, just hoping against hope, as fishermen are prone to do. Bang! He got a solid strike that nearly jerked the rod out of his hand. He had a sizeable fish on a light casting rod and there was a hectic moment as he got his motor shut off and got organized. The fish didn't want to be managed and Denis and his brother-in-law, also on their way in, went to the rescue. It was a lively muskie which jumped clear of the water three or four times. The rescue party couldn't do much about it and after ten minutes or so the muskie broke away.

An Idea Of Where We Stand

Some idea of where Montreal waters stand as muskie producers is afforded in Nick Nichols' column "Afield" in the Peterborough Examiner of June 17th. Nick observed: "Lake St. Clair muskie tournament being currently run by the Board of Commerce, Mount Clemens, Mich., has already produced ten top 'lunge' averaging 30.6 pounds each. This is a better showing than Kawartha waters make, but we catch a lot more of 'em."

To me this would indicate that muskie fishing in the Kawartha Lakes is a lot better now than it was thirty years ago when I first visited the region. Ten fish averaging better than 30 pounds would indicate a very considerable volume of muskie being caught and this Ontario area certainly was not as good as that in the early 20's when Able Vineberg and I used to fish out of Viamede on Stony Lake.

Seasoned Provincial Golfers To Represent N.B.-P.E.I. In Play For Willingdon Cup At Saskatoon

Moncton, N.B., July 11.—(AP)— Golfers experienced in provincial play comprise the New Brunswick-Prince Edward Island Willingdon Cup team.

Inter-provincial team matches for the cup open in Saskatoon July 15th.

On the team: Kelly, former National Hockey League hockey star, who had held the Provincial title three times — 1937-38-39. Now physical instructor at the University of New Brunswick, he is a native of Prince Edward Island.

Les Beattie, Woodstock, N.B., school teacher, started competitive play three years ago and represented the N.B.-P.E.I. Association at Hamilton in 1948.

R. H. Harley, also a native of Woodstock, is employed by the Department of Transport in Moncton and has held both the Nova Scotia and N.B.-P.E.I. championships. He played on three previous Willingdon Cup teams.

W. M. Beer, Charlottetown, Has Placed Near The Top In Every Provincial Competition In Recent Years

W. M. Beer, Charlottetown, has placed near the top in every provincial competition in recent years. He was picked for the 1949 Willingdon Cup team but was unable to make the trip. He represented the two provinces at Edmonton some years ago.

An oddity of this year's cup squad is that none of its members won champion position in the two-province tournament that ended here last Wednesday.

In that contest, B. W. Inson, of the Moncton Golf and Country Club, edged Maurice (Mouste) Dowling, of Charlottetown, in a three-hole playoff for the amateur title. The same two played off for the Maritime title last year, with Inson winning. Each finished 54 holes, with a 229 total Wednesday.

Kelly, who led at the end of the first day of play, finished with a 234, tied with Beer. Beatty finished up in third place with 230 and Harley in fourth with 232.

Major Leagues Turn Rowland's Bid Aside

Chicago, July 11.—(AP)—Clarence (Pete) Rowland, president of the Pacific Coast Baseball League, has been rebuffed for the sixth time in his crusade to get his circuit major league status.

"No" means nothing to this indomitable baseball pioneer who was born 62 years ago at Platteville, Wis., the son of a railroad-father.

He presented his request to the major league officials yesterday and got the inevitable answer, "It'll be back again next year," said the sparkling-eyed veteran. "We don't intend to continue as a kindergarten for the major leagues. We'll gain major league ranking eventually, and I think I may live to see it."

Rowland described his session with baseball's hierarchy as a meeting with business men — not baseball men.

"They haven't the foresight — or perhaps it's just selfishness — for starting a third major league," Rowland declared.

Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler professed that he has nothing against a third big league. "But the Pacific Coast simply cannot handle it financially," he said. "It would take something like $80,000,000 over a 10-year period to build the coast league into a major league circuit. The parks aren't big enough and attendance just wouldn't support a major league operation."

Prelims For Big Fight Tomorrow Top Secret

New York, July 11.—(AP)—It's no secret that Jake LaMotta of the Bronx will meet Tiberio Mitri of Italy in a 15-round bout tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden for the world middleweight title.

But what the customers will get for a supporting card is confidential stuff.

"We do not intend to sabotage our card by naming our prelim fighters," said a spokesman for the International Boxing Club.

The I.B.C. and the boxing managers guild are feuding over television revenue. The spokesman said that if the names were announced, the managers might attempt to persuade the boxers to withdraw.

The preliminary bouts will be announced Wednesday when the principals weigh in at noon.

Machinery Downs Railroaders 14-6 While Bruck Ekes Out 12-9 Decision Over Fairbanks In Softball Loop

Two games were played last night at the Parade Grounds in the Sherbrooke Industrial Softball League. Machinery defeated Railroaders 14-6 and Bruck defeated Fairbanks by a 12-9 score.

Machinery led all the way in their game with Railroaders, scoring in every inning but the second. Railroaders got their runs in the first three innings, and were held off the score sheet in the last four innings. C. Clark, R. Pepin and Bud Allanson hit homers for Bill Cochrane's team.

Bruck-Fairbanks was close all the way, Bruck just edging out on the long end of a 12-9 victory. Errors were costly again to Fairbanks as no less than four miscues were made by Bas McCormick's men.
