ALDERMEN RETURN AND SCORE FIRST VICTORY Hon. Justice Hackett Honored At Townships Banquet

To Investigate Collection Of Business Tax

Amendment by W. C. Good, Progressive Member for Brant, to Motion to Go into Committee of Supply, Providing that Methods by Which Business Profits Taxes are Assessed and Collected Shall Be Investigated by Public Accounts Committee, Was Carried by Vote of Eighty-nine to Twenty-six—Premier King Intimated that Government Was Willing to Accept Amendment.

(Associated Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Ont., June 17.—Methods by which business profits and income taxes are assessed and collected are to be investigated by the Public Accounts Committee of the House of Commons, and thus prorogation seems still a little further away. W. C. Good, Progressive member for Brant, who raised the question of tax collections earlier in the session, brought it up again yesterday and, as an amendment to a motion to go into supply, moved that the Public Accounts Committee be given authority to investigate.

Premier King intimated that the Government was willing to accept the amendment. It carried by a vote of 89 to 26, Liberals and Progressives generally voting in favor and Conservatives against.

Adoption of the Good amendment gave rise to a curious situation. Usually an amendment to a supply motion is regarded as equivalent to a straight motion of non-confidence; and, immediately the result was announced, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Opposition leader, rose.

"Now that the Government has succeeded in defeating itself," Mr. Meighen questioned, "may I ask when it is going to resign and consult the country?"

Premier King sharply replied that as the Government had accepted the amendment before the vote, it could not be interpreted as a vote of non-confidence.

LEADER OF OPPOSITION OBJECTED TO MOVE

Then, the amendment having been declared carried, the Prime Minister again submitted the motion to go into supply. Mr. Meighen objected that the Government having already been defeated on its motion to go into supply, could not on the same day present the same motion again. Speaker Lemieux, however, did not sustain this view, and the House went into supply.

In the vote on the Good amendment, Messrs. Sulthand and Arthurs were the only two Conservatives to support it. The only Liberals to vote against it were Messrs. Finn, Duff and Forester; and the only Progressives: Messrs. MacDonald (Timiskaming), Woods and Pritchard. A. W. Neill, Independent, of Comox-Alberni, also voted against the amendment.

There was Conservative cheering as Hon. G. P. Graham, Minister of Railways, cast his vote in favor of the amendment. In the debate, Mr. Graham argued that to make business details public would be a serious injury to business, which was already in a sensitive condition.

SEVERAL BILLS WERE GIVEN FIRST READING

An amendment to the Northwest Territories Act placing a tax on export furs, was given first reading. A bill respecting Indian reserve lands was given first reading. An amendment to the Railways Guarantee Act was given first reading. Estimates of the Department of Marine and Fisheries were considered.

A motion by Robert Forke, Progressive leader, that the Church Union Bill be given precedence over all other business on Wednesday next, was objected to, and, as it required unanimous consent, the Deputy Speaker ruled that it must stand over until Wednesday.

The Senate did not sit yesterday.

CHURCH BILL TO BE TAKEN UP TONIGHT

Today, estimates of the Department of Indian Affairs, Trade and Commerce and Public Works will be considered in the House of Commons. The Church Union Bill will probably be taken up in the evening.

(Associated Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, June 17.—"The Government has gone just as far as it is possible for it to go in the matter, and if there is to be any further change in salaries, they will have to be made by Parliament itself," said Premier King in answer to a question in the House of postal workers' salaries yesterday.

The Government was aided by Liberal votes, and the bill, thus restored to its original condition, will go back to the House of Lords, which may either persist in the amendments or accept the decision of the Commons.

A Motion Calling For Resignation Of Mr B. A. Dugal Carried—Mayor Brault Claimed That Aldermen Were Acting Too Hastily

Move Was Sponsored by Aldermen Bourque and Labrecque and Supported by Aldermen Lacombe, Crepeau and Fortier—Vote Was Five to Two—Aldermen Skinner and Houlihan and Mayor Brault Spoke in Opposition to Motion—Alderman Fortier Referred to Return of the Aldermen Who Had Resigned, Stating Reasons for Their Return.

THE first regular Council meeting that has been held for over two months took place in the City Hall last night. This meeting was of great interest to the citizens, because it marked the reappearance of the five aldermen, Messrs. Bourque, Lacombe, Labrecque, Fortier and Crepeau, who had resigned as a result of delegations, had agreed to reconsider their resignation and return to their seats. The meeting was presided over by His Worship Mayor Wm. Brault. There was a large number of interested citizens present, and all seemed anxious to see how the return of these aldermen would affect the proceedings.

Following the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, by Secretary-Treasurer Mr. Gatten, the outstanding correspondence was dealt with.

Mr. Dugal's Resignation asked For.

The chief business of the meeting resulted from a motion made by Alderman Bourque, seconded by Alderman Labrecque, supported by Aldermen Lacombe, Crepeau and Fortier, that the resignation of Mr. Dugal be asked for. A strong protest to this motion was made by Alderman Skinner. He felt that it was a mistake to put this motion to the house, and should it be passed he was of the opinion that in the future it would be regretted, when it would be too late to remedy the situation.

Alderman Houlihan said that he felt the same towards the motion as did Alderman Skinner. Alderman Houlihan agreed that perhaps the auditors' reports regarding the city's books were not as good as they should have been, on the other hand there was the man to consider. Mr. Dugal had given sixteen years of service to the city, and he thought that consideration should be given to this matter. "Perhaps there have been mistakes," Alderman Houlihan said, "but to make mistakes is only human, and we make them every day." Alderman Houlihan reminded the meeting that in two weeks a report would be received from Mr. Dugal. If no improvement was shown on this report, then he would gladly agree with the motion, but until then he felt that justice and the man were being sacrificed and therefore he could not agree to the motion.

In a few words Mayor Brault spoke on the motion which was before the Council. He definitely stated that he thought the aldermen were acting altogether too quickly. He warned them that to every action there is a reaction, and said that he was sure there would be one in this case.

"Under the circumstances you are not justified in taking your present stand. However, if you insist I will put the motion to the house and you will bear its consequence," concluded Mayor Brault.

The motion was put and carried by a vote of five to two, Alderman Langis and Tremblay being absent at the voting time.

States Why Resignations Were Reconsidered.

Alderman Fortier referred to the return of the aldermen who had resigned, and stated why they had seen fit to return. They were returning because they had all been visited

A Distinguished Career—His Lordship's Eloquent Reply—Memories of the Past—Granby His Old Home—Stands the Scene of His Activities as Lawyer and Politician—A Plea for Tolerance—Judges, Members of Bar and Citizens Representing Wide Area Attend Function.

(Special to The Record.)

GRANBY, June 17.—The city of Granby was the scene, last evening, of one of the most notable functions held in the Eastern Townships in recent times, when judges, lawyers and citizens generally assembled at the festive board to do honor to His Lordship, Mr. Justice M. F. Hackett, presiding judge of the Superior Court in the District of Bedford. The occasion was the 50th anniversary of his admission to the bar. The banquet was held at the Granby Hotel and was attended by more than two hundred persons, including several judges, many lawyers and court officials, members of Parliament and of the Legislature and representative business men from many parts of the Eastern Townships. A Granby orchestra supplied music throughout the dinner and the dining hall was made very attractive by decorations of which green was the predominant color, arranged by ladies of Granby.

Hon. George H. Boivin, K.C., M.P., Batonnier of the Bedford Bar, presided. At his right was the guest of the evening, and at his left, acting Chief Justice Martin, of Montreal. Declares Germany Must Prove Her Faith Before Experts' Report Put Into Effect

New French President Laid Stress on Statement that France Could Not Renounce Her Own Force or Control Which Treaties Give Her the Right to Exercise Over Germany.

(Associated Press Despatch.)

PARIS, June 17.—Gaston Doumergue, France's new President, in his first message to Parliament today declared Germany, before the reparations experts' report was put into effect, must prove her good faith. Such proof, he insisted, must come "from facts and not from mere engagements without previous assurance of fulfillment."

"France's conciliatory spirit," he continued, "cannot go as far as to lull her vigilance and make her forget the lessons of the past."

The President laid stress on the statement that France could not renounce her own force nor the control which the treaties give her the right to exercise over Germany.

HON. G. H. BOIVIN, Batonnier of Bedford Bar, who presided at the Hackett banquet.

These were from Lt.-Governor Perreault, Chief Justice F. X. Lemieux, Justice Archibald, Justice P. Demers, Justice W. A. Wier, Justice Guerin, Justice Greenfield, Justice Globensky, Justice White, Hon. C. J. Doherty, Chief Justice Latchford (Ontario), Senator Foster, Hon. Jacob Nicol, Judge Mulvena, Hon. Dr. Beland and many others.

"Our Guest."

The chief toast of the evening was honored with great enthusiasm. "Our Guest," was proposed by the chairman, Mr. Boivin referred to the fact that Mr. Hackett was a Granby boy. It was, therefore, fitting, that this tribute to him should be given in Granby. He was glad to notice among those present many who had come over from Stantead, the community where Justice Hackett so long exercised his profession. The guest of the evening was not only a Granby boy but he was the first member of the bar from Granby, and the son of the first Mayor of Granby. For fifty years he had been a distinguished member of the legal profession and was still young, hale and hearty. He hoped it would yet be possible to celebrate the diamond jubilee. The tribute tonight was not from Granby alone but from the whole Eastern Townships to a distinguished Eastern Townships son. The chairman referred to Justice Hackett's distinguished career at the bar and to his political activities during that period. He had been a good winner and a good loser. He had served the Province as Provincial Secretary. As Judge of the Superior Court of the district he had won the respect and esteem of all.

Before calling the toast, Mr. Boivin, on behalf of the members of the bar, presented Justice Hackett with a gold-headed cane as a souvenir of the occasion.

The toast was right royally honored.

Judge Hackett's Reply.

Mr. Justice Hackett was greeted with great applause on rising to respond. His Lordship said: "Is it an old and trite saying that 'speech may be silver but silence is golden,' and mayhaps the greatest tribute I could pay to the magnificence of this evening would be the golden eloquence of silence. Not Sir that I do not appreciate at its full value and in the fullest sense of the word the great tribute you are paying me this evening, but I am free to confess to you that my right hand has forgotten its cunning—my lute is music if any it ever possessed. No words of mine can adequately express the feelings which actuate me, at this moment, no words of mine can convey to you, the deep debt of gratitude under which I labor, and again I repeat that the only fitting reply I could make to one and all would be 'the golden eloquence of silence.'"

"But, I cannot forget I am on my native heath, in the home of my birth and amid the scenes of my boyhood and childhood, the dear little village of Granby, now a city, and then as now one of the sweetest and most picturesque spots in Canada, where I spent the most pleasant and happiest days of my life."

"Nor can I forget Sir, that in the little 'God's acre' over yonder repose the earthly remains of my father and mother, sisters and brothers."

Memories of Old Times.
The memory of old times and old scenes haunt me, the presence of this large and distinguished audience, these beautiful decorations, one and all appeal to the higher and nobler passions and under their benign influence the heart goes out in the fullness of its enthusiasm and friendship and joy and mute would be the lips and paled the tongue that did not have some word of praise to (Continued on Page Ten)

Constant Headaches and Dizziness

It is hard to struggle along with a head that aches and pains all the time, and in nine cases out of ten the persistent headaches are due to some derangement of the stomach, liver or bowels.

Undoubtedly the cause must be removed before permanent relief may be had.

Burdock Blood-Bitters removes the cause of the headaches, as it acts on every organ of the body and strengthens, purifies and regulates the whole system.

Mrs. Peter Curran, 27 Morrison St., Sydney, N.S., writes:—"I have been troubled for the last five years with constant headaches and dizziness. After trying several remedies, which I found to be of no avail, Burdock Blood-Bitters was recommended to me.

B.B.B. did me a world of good, and I cannot praise this remedy enough."

PUTS HEALTH AND VIM INTO WOMEN

So Says Mrs. MacPherson of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Brantford, Ont.—"I was always tired and the least exertion would put me out for a day or two. I had a pressing pain on the top of my head, pain in the nape of my neck, and when I stooped over I could not get up without help, because of pain in my back. I did not sleep well and was nervous at the least noise. I kept house, but I was such a wreck that I could not sweep the floor nor wash the dishes without lying down afterwards. A friend living near me told me what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for her so I began to take it. With the first bottle I felt brighter and got so I could wash dishes and sweep without having to lie down. Later I became regular again in my monthly all told. I am now ten bottles all told and I have taken ten bottles. I can truly say that your wonderful medicine cannot be beaten for putting health and vim into a woman."

Finds Kellogg's Bran "Easy way to avoid constipation" after suffering for years

Constipation is a dangerous disease. It can lead to many others. Twenty years' suffering with constipation undetermined this man's health. Kellogg's Bran restored it—as it has done for thousands. This is what he says:

"Dear Sirs:

After eating Kellogg's Bran twice a day for one month I find it not only an "Easy Way to Avoid Constipation," but an easy and most pleasant way to cure it. I have been troubled with constipation for more than twenty years. After adopting the milk and bran diet I find my stomach greatly improved, and find it a specific for constipation. I deem it only just that you should know what your product has done for me, and what it is capable of doing for others."

(Name and Address on request.)

Kellogg's Bran relieves mild and chronic constipation because it is ALL bran. It brings sure results. It sweeps, cleans and purifies the intestine in nature's own way. Don't experiment. Only ALL bran can be 100 per cent effective.

If eaten regularly, Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is guaranteed to bring permanent relief—or your grocer returns your money. You should eat two tablespoons daily—in chronic cases, with every meal.

The flavor is delicious—nut-like—cooked and krumbled. Enjoy it with milk or cream, sprinkled on other cereals, cooked with hot cereals, or in the delightful recipes on every package. Made in Toronto, Canada. Sold by grocers everywhere.

PRIZES WERE AWARDED AT MISS VAN VLIET'S SCHOOL

Closing Exercises Were Attended by Parents of the Children—Miss Eva White Addressed Pupils.

At this season of the year all the schools and colleges—the great educational institutions of the country—are holding their closing exercises, with due ceremony and with a dignity and solemnity befitting the occasion. Great universities confer degrees upon famous personages and upon humble students alike, and medals and prizes are awarded for outstanding intellectual ability. Their closing ceremonies are reviewed in every newspaper in the country.

Holding a smaller place in the daily affairs of the nation, but one which is at the same time very important, are the smaller schools, the kindergartens, the private class rooms where the very young children receive the first rudiments of that education which may in later years place them in the forefront of the ranks of the nation's great men. It is in these little groups that the first steps are taken to mould the brains of children, to bring to their minds the first tiny streams of learning which may grow to illuminate oceans of knowledge.

Such an institution as this is the private school conducted by Miss Laura Van Vliet, which recently held its closing exercises. A "Mothers' Day" was held in the attractive class room, which was gaily decorated with apple blossoms and tulips. The parents inspected the work of the children and following this the prizes were presented to those who were successful in special branches during the year.

An interesting part of the programme was the opening of the Red Cross box by Miss Eva White, president of the Sherbrooke Red Cross. In this box the children had dropped their spare pennies during the year, and through their own individual sacrifices, the sum of eighteen dollars was raised for charitable purposes. Every pupil of the school is a member of the Junior Branch of the Red Cross. Miss White, upon opening the box, addressed the pupils, telling them of the many helpful things which were accomplished by the little boys and girls through the saving of their pennies to help others less fortunate than they.

At the distribution of prizes the following pupils received special awards:

Prize for general proficiency, donated by Mrs. H. Bruce Fletcher, won by Cornelia Wedd.

Prize for general proficiency, donated by Mrs. Philip Robins, won by Henry Rugg.

Prize for conduct, donated by Mrs. H. Bruce Fletcher, won by Marjorie Bayne and Margaret Red Cross.

Prize for arithmetic, donated by Mrs. J. S. Mitchell, won by Madeline Baldwin.

Prize for drawing, donated by Mrs. J. S. Mitchell, won by Madeline Baldwin and James Mitchell.

THE NEW SQUARE NECKLINE Combined with cross-over front gives this tulle frock distinction which is even further enhanced by the charming fall of lace that finishes the front opening and so picturesquely decorates the long tight sleeves. Navy blue is the color of the frock with cream lace. French ivory makes the buttons.

THIS COAT IS AN EXCELLENT EXAMPLE

Of the new slim but full silhouette that supplants the very close, Egyptian-like perpendicular lines of yesterday. The fabric is black Gerona cloth with corded tucks of self material and generous trimmings of caracul. The coat is lined with gray crepe de chine.

THE LITTLE TIED-ON APRON Makes an up-to-the-minute silhouette for this otherwise simply cut frock of brown velvet. The fur trimmings—delicately tinted fusch fur—give a properly festive air that affluates the frock with the "party" feeling of the wardrobe. Sash is finished with beaded tassels.

CHAPTER IV

Peter Disguised

"Limejuice Peter! It did not surprise Peter Newhall that Bill should take him for an Englishman. He was a pure Anglo-Saxon to start with, his features had suggested those of the better class of Britishers, but mostly Bill got the idea from his southern accent—an accent with which the crew of the Dolly Bettis was entirely unfamiliar but which, because it was nothing else they knew, became English by the process of elimination.

Only the crew of the Dolly Bettis knew that there was a survivor from the disaster of the reefs. In order that the whole world should be made to believe that Peter Newhall, alias Peter Neville, had gone down on the Jupiter he must tell his shipmates that he, Limejuice Peter, had been aboard and was a survivor of the auxiliary schooner that had sunk among the reefs, the ship that the unfortunate Jupiter had gone forth to save. No one living, so far as he knew, could contradict his story. Thus the world would believe that every one aboard the Jupiter was lost, Peter Newhall of course among them.

He resolved to get up as soon as possible, take his place in the crew of the ship, and get what companionship he could from his shipmates. He would not pay for his passage; in the first place it might arouse suspicion of him—men of the class he was supposed to be did not pay for steamboat tickets when they can work their way—and in the second the hard work on the deck might fill up the long days and give him some shadow of happiness. He would not take to the whisky bottle again at once. That wild half-mad dream was ended.

Ten days thereafter he was well enough to begin his first light tasks aboard ship; and the captain signed him up. This proceeding was not without an element of humor; the southern gentleman signed the name "Peter Limejuice" with a flourish. The captain grinned widely then as he touched with gray before the disaster; the last months of distress and disipation had shot it full of silver. Finally his voice was completely changed in tone since the fracture of his jaw; it was still rich and full, and the differences were such as could not be narrated in words, yet the ear would never recognize it as Peter Newhall's voice.

Before that long cruise was done he found a certain simple pleasure in the sailor's life, in holding his place as a man among men. The hardest tasks on the boat did not appall him now. His hands were like iron, his muscles untiring. He liked the regular hours, the plain, abundant food, the hours of easy speech with his shipmates on watch. He did not, however, intend to follow the seafarer's life, for the simple reason that he knew it would sooner or later carry him into danger. When he returned to Alaska he would get some kind of an outdoor job at one of the canneries where he would be mostly out of touch with civilization and the law.

The boat touched at Unalaska on the return trip, but because the ends of the earth foregathered here—because it was the meeting place for the wayfarers that came and passed through this empty, far-off edge of the East—he wisely decided to stay on board. But he would not continue on down to San Francisco, and thus into the tolls of the law. The captain had agreed to put him off at one of the native villages, farther down the Peninsula.

Two days' sail from Unalaska a broken part forced the Dolly Bettis into a little settlement in the Shumagin Islands; and when the ship had fastened to the dock for repairs Pete found, to his consternation, that he was in Squaw Harbor, instantly remembered as the home port of the Jupiter. For the moment he was shaken with fear. Although his old stamping ground was on the other side of the Peninsula, the fame of the Remittance Man had carried down this far; and likely there were men here who would recognize him as Peter Neville. His first instinct was to duck below and remain in hiding.

But already that chance was gone. As he turned, he ran squarely upon two men who had just encircled the pilot house, one of them was his captain, and the other Aleck Bradford, the superintendent of the cannery, and the last man on earth whom he wanted to see now. Bradford had once offered him the hospitality of the little bachelors' lodge he had built at the edge of the sea. It seemed inconceivable that the latter should pass him without recognition. Peter's heart leaped as the man walked by without a glance.

But he was not safe yet. The captain was immediately behind Bradford, and he stopped Pete with an outstretched hand.

There had been few more terrifying seconds in Pete's life.

He halted, breathless and deathly pale under his brown wind-tan and burn. The officer's eyes were friendly; indeed he seemed less aloof, more companionable than ever before. "Come here, Aleck," he said signed him a shift on the paint detail that is always busy on shipboard.

His wounds healed, his jaw and bone of his nose were sound again, and now the blond hair had begun to lengthen and mat about his lips and jaws. Because it was gradual, he did not at first realize the tremendous, incredible change in his appearance since the night of the wreck. In the first place health and decent habits had mostly eradicated the revolting signs of dissipation. His eyes were clear, no longer bloodshot and thin; the flesh of his face was firm rather than swollen and soft; he was a deep, good brown instead of pasty white, and the network of red lines at his cheek bones was no longer manifest. But this was only the beginning. His burly form had stripped down until he weighed but one hundred and sixty pounds, and now he had started to gain slowly as his muscles hardened to iron.

But these changes were all minor ones compared to the complete transformation of his face. Bill's surgical work had been a huge success as far as repairing his disfigurement, but in so doing he had completely concealed the man's identity. He was as changed as if he wore a mask.

Before he had had a rather full, extremely youthful face. Now it was lean, the cheek bones showed, the chin was prominent, the eyes looked larger, more dunnish and clear, and much more sober. New lines had come in his brow, his nose was irregular, no longer finely chiseled; his mouth no longer looked small and rather pursed but large and humorous. He was no longer handsome, not from any pronounced disfigurement, but simply because of the new set of his features and, perhaps the presence of a few telltale scars. His hair had only been faintly anxiously to the man in front. Bradford turned with no look other than friendly interest. "Meet Peter, Limejuice Pete to his friends. This is Mr. Bradford, of the cannery," Bradford's smile and handclasp were cordial. "Pete, Mr. Bradford has the biggest run of Reds he ever had in his life in a new trap he was crafty enough to find, and he's in need of some good labor. You were going to get off up here a ways anyhow—why don't you ask for a job here with Mr. Bradford?"

Until this moment Peter had never realized how completely his appearance had been changed. Now, as Bradford gazed straight at him without even a hint of recognition, with no sign that this bearded sailor even recalled any one he had met, the fugitive's self-confidence mounted like a flame. "I'd be mighty glad to work here," he said quietly, "if Mr. Bradford can use me."

"I can use you, all right. I'll put you on the web-craw at the usual wages. I've never quite caught up with myself since I lost so many of my best men in the Jupiter disaster. By the way, Cap'n, you were standing by when that happened."

"Yes. We'd gone to help the Vigten—same as your boat, I guess. Pete, here, was on the Vigten—the single survivor. Of course, we put out a boat and cruised around until there was no hope of finding any one else alive—then went on without waiting for the dead to drift ashore. We picked up Pete more or less alive on the shore, and how he got through those reefs was a miracle. We saw, just dimly in the dawn, the Jupiter break up, but she was too far away for us to help. How many men did you lose on the Jupiter when she went down?"

Boy Scout News.

The Scout parade on Sunday evening to St. George's Church was quite successful, a large number from the Second and Fourth Troops of Sherbrooke and the First Lennoxville Troop, as well as the Cubs being in the procession. The parade formed at the High School and proceeded in very creditable formation along Main street, headed by the Scoutmasters and the Scout Band to the Church, where Rev. Canon R. W. E. Wright preached a very earnest and appropriate sermon to the boys.

To encourage the Scout Camp project, the ladies' committee is planning to sell ice cream at the regular concert of the Lennoxville Band on Wednesday evening. As this is the first open air concert of the season and the Band is in good condition after its winter practice, it is expected that the evening will be an enjoyable one.

A MOTION CALLING FOR

resigned were back, all would unite their efforts for the welfare of the city, and that co-operation would be the chief consideration of the Council in future.

Question of Business Discussed

Several questions of business were brought up for consideration. Alderman Crepeau asked what had been done about securing an auditor from Quebec, who was to examine the city's affairs. The Mayor replied that recently he visited Quebec, but the Deputy Minister of Affairs was absent at the time, and, therefore, nothing had been done as yet. The matter, however, was to receive immediate attention.

Owing to this present financial condition of the city, Alderman Crepeau thought that it would be as well not to secure the services of this auditor. "It is really not necessary, and the city cannot afford it," he declared.

Alderman Skinner Referred to Paying.

Alderman Skinner called the attention of the meeting to certain questions about paying. He asked if the intention to do any paying was.

ing this year. If so the Water Works Department should be notified so as to have the underground work ready. Petitions have been received asking to have paving done on certain streets of the city during 1925. "Personally I would like to see paving continued for at least a year, and then again have it abandoned for a year," Alderman Skinner said. This matter was left over for future consideration.

St. Antoine Street Brought up by Alderman Labrecque.

Alderman Labrecque complained about the condition of St. Antoine Street. He said that its present condition was disgraceful. Property owners were suffering from its condition in that they could not rent their property. Should there be a fire on the street it would be impossible for the fire teams to use the street in its present state.

Two motions were made by Alderman Houlihan. One was that work be started on the construction of the cement platform which is to be placed in front of the new fire station on Marquette Street, and the second regarding the transfer of prisoners. He thought that in future when prisoners were to be conveyed to prisons in other cities or reform schools they should be transferred by the city authorities. Recently the Council had been obliged to pay a large bill to government officials for the transferring of prisoners. Both these motions were passed.

Mr. Crepeau was appointed to act on the committee of which Alderman Newton is a member in the event of the latter's absence. This motion was proposed by Alderman Fortier and seconded by Alderman LaCombe. It was also moved and seconded that all departments again be under Mr. Gatten as they had been before 1921.

Financial Report

Several important items were included in the Financial Committee report. Among other things it was decided to take money from the sinking funds and also money which had been set aside for work which had not yet been done, and to buy Canadian National Railway bonds with this money. These bonds are guaranteed by the Federal Government. The Mayor and secretary-treasurer were authorized to sign cheques for the transaction of this business. It was also decided to pay the account of $917.84, to the Sherbrooke Construction Company, which was due them as a result of work they had done on the City Hall. The committee also requested the Council to authorize the Mayor to represent Sherbrooke at Quebec, in order that he might join the other delegates who are making a request to the Government that the Sherbrooke-Levis road, passing Ascot, be completed.

The committee also recommended that the Council authorize the superintendent to proceed with repairing the bank on Frontenac Street, this work to be done by the day, and by the city employees.

CLEANING UP.

A commendable effort is being made by the civic police department to close up questionable resorts. This has been too long delayed, but the credit that belongs to those who are now engaged in this movement is not lessened on this account.

The great danger is that the effect will be only temporary. Such is the usual experience in cities. Deportation of those who have come to the community from other places, if it can be accomplished, is the only means of permanently ridding a community of undesirables who are not natives of the place.

Sherbrooke is paying the penalty of police indifference during some years past and the task now before the department is rendered doubly difficult on this account.

THE TOLL OF THE HIGHWAYS.

The week-end seldom fails to take its toll in motor accidents and with the mishaps on other days the 1924 record seems likely to exceed those of former years.

Many things contribute to motor accidents and the margin between safety and disaster is often very narrow. Speeding, carelessness and inexperience are outstanding causes of accidents on the road and breakages or defects aside from these contributory causes frequently throw cars from the road.

Motor accidents will never be eliminated. The toll of modern highway traffic must be paid. This, however, will be greatly lessened if the person at the wheel comes to realize the responsibility that rests upon him.

JURY TRIALS.

The hesitancy of the modern jury to render a verdict which involves the death penalty or life sentence has been the subject of frequent comment. This reluctance is probably due to more than one cause. There have been cases where sentences of extreme severity have followed verdicts with recommendations for clemency attached. In districts where such have occurred, for some years following the juries have frequently taken the matter of clemency into their own hands.

There is the other reason, namely, the growing aversion to capital punishment in any case.

The bandit case now on trial in Montreal and the disagreement of the first jury have called forth comment within the court. Mr. R. L. Calder, Crown prosecutor, for instance stated: "If we cannot make it clear that in this city swift justice will be meted out to the innocent and the guilty alike, then the only weapon which will be left in our hands will be lynch law."

The Montreal Gazette commenting upon this says:

"These are strong words, and if used by a newspaper or a political speaker they would speedily be denounced by a contemporary or an opponent as a veiled encouragement to what they purported to deprecate, and as an incitement to the mob spirit and to collective murder. But they were spoken in a Montreal courtroom by the Crown prosecutor discharging his solemn duty in the course of a murder trial spoken with all the sense of gravity and responsibility attaching to the occasion and to his office, and spoken but a few hours before the Prime Minister of the province, in a public address at St. Jerome, uttered a warning only a little less explicit and momentous regarding the same subject—the attitude on the part of a considerable section of the public which is tending to make the jury system an inadequate means of serving the ends of justice in Montreal, and to a lesser degree throughout the province.

"Mr. Calder's prediction is not to be lightly dismissed as far-fetched and intended only for forensic effect."

"Despite the eloquent defence of the jury system so recently made by Sir Allen Aylesworth, one of the Dominion's most eminent and experienced jurists, there are not a few observers of court procedure who have had occasion to doubt the invariable efficacy of this means of determining the innocence or guilt of an accused individual. Some of them incline to the belief that a guilty offender has a better chance of escaping justice at the hands of a jury than if tried by a judge only, while, on the other hand, an innocent man is in less jeopardy if the decision is left to the Bench alone. A few cynics may even be found to suggest that the toss of a coin would give as fair and equitable a verdict as that returned by the average jury."

The jury system is a time honored institution. It has worked for many centuries. Though cases of its failure and grounds for criticism occur, it is doubtful if a satisfactory substitute can be found.

PRESS COMMENT

ALWAYS NEEDED.

(Kingston Standard)

Peace patriotism is more important, in reality, than war patriotism—because it is needed oftener and longer.

THE AIM IS IMPORTANT.

(Vancouver Sun)

Sir Charles Parsons, inventor, says he spent twenty years and $100,000 trying to make diamonds artificially—and failed.

Good material here for a new Esop fable. Hard work and "keeping everlastingly at it" do not necessarily bring success.

Failure is often caused by doing the wrong kind of work, fighting for the wrong goal.

RAIN-MAKING.

(Edmonton Journal)

Hatfield, the rainmaker, who took quite a bit of money out of the farmers near Medicine Hat some years ago on the strength of his reputed ability to produce the moisture of which they were in very serious need, is out of luck at present in California. He has been operating in one section of the San Joaquin Valley. The rest of the valley recently had the heaviest rainfall in many months, but there was hardly a sprinkle within the area for which he has a contract.

FORESTS AND POPULATION.

(Victoria Times)

A good many Canadians have erroneously identified population and immigration with farm lands exclusively. An examination of occupations and sources of income shows the falsity of this view. The productive forest is the only lure to population that eighty per cent. of the area of Canada can ever have, for no crop except forests can grow thereon. The timber stock of present-day Canada is almost wholly growing on non-arable lands, so that when a careless smoker or camper wipes out a township of timber the area remains useless and tenantless for upwards of half a century.

SCOTS WHA HAE.

(New York Sun)

Dr. Johnson long ago told the world the average Englishman's opinion of the Scots and it was not meant to be complimentary. But actually it was extremely so, for it was the outcome of fear. Wherever the Scot goes he carries a handful of his countrymen with him; there is nothing he likes better than to put a Scot in the place where he found an alien. Scotland is always where Scots are. A great race, a tough race, bonny philosophers, bonny fighters and bonny beneficiaries of other people's fighting, the Scots should have some rule. It will be good rule without a doubt, and it will have the supreme merit of forcing Scotsmen to criticize themselves, a thing they have been loth to do from Samuel Johnson's day to this.

PLEASURES OF READING.

(Toronto Globe)

In an address before the Royal Society of Literature in London Lord Grey of Fallodon pointed out how modern conditions were putting the pleasure of reading more and more in jeopardy. Railways had altered people's habits by making them move about much more, but they had the compensating advantage that a long railway journey was a great opportunity for reading. The motor car was altogether unfavorable for reading. The telephone was a deadly disappointment. It minced time into fragments and frayed one's spirit. Wireless was now being added to divert people's attention from reading. The cinematograph was another influence in the same direction, and flying was becoming more and more common. A further disadvantage of reading was the great development of the picture papers, which were diverting people not only from reading but from thought.

There are many people in the world who would never read at all and they are in no danger from modern conditions, but there are many others who, though they find it increasingly difficult, have the inclination and capacity to derive pleasure from reading, and Lord Grey thought that for this experience people should acquire the habit of reading when young.

UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM.

(Christian Science Monitor)

Wisdom obviously has a solution of the world-wide problem of unemployment. The primary need is a recognition that the root of the trouble is disregard of the Golden Rule. So long as individuals, groups, or nations, think of trade in terms of money or of making profits for themselves, the true law of supply and demand cannot operate. Selfishness produces confusion and dislocation in business as in every other walk of life. But as soon as people begin to think about trade in terms of serving their neighbor's needs and recognize that they can only expect prosperity themselves if they seek to bring it to others also, the adjustment of supply to demand begins to become easier and the maladjustment which seems to be inherent in the present system will commence to disappear.

Fortunately, more and more individuals are coming to see that Christianity affords the only solution of business problems, including that of the unemployed. And perhaps the most needed application of it at the moment is the creation of something like an economic league of nations. This would not be for the purpose of controlling international trade, but in order to collect information about industry in all countries, to collate it, and then give authoritative news to everybody as to how the world should be developed so as to avoid over-production or shortage or shortage. Thus would a blow be struck at the biggest single cause of unemployment.

A NEW SCHOOL WILL BE BUILT AT SCOTSTOWN

Expected to Cost $45,000—Commissioners to Meet on Wednesday to Consider Tenders.

SCOTSTOWN, June 17.—The Protestant School Commission recently decided to go ahead with the building of the new schoolhouse. The Commissioners recently received assurance from the Government at Quebec that it would assist to the amount of $15,000. It is estimated that the building will cost $45,000. This will necessitate the borrowing of $30,000.

A meeting has been called for Wednesday evening of the School Commissioners to consider the letting of tenders, because the season is so far advanced now that the work will have to be rushed to the utmost capacity. It is not expected that the school can be ready for the first of September, but it is thought that some hall can be secured to teach some of the classes in until the new schoolhouse is completed.

The town is putting in a new cement culvert, and had taken out the old stones, which they are going to use as filling, and had placed them alongside the road. Mr. Donlan failed to see the danger signs which had been placed beside the pile of stones. His car ran into them and turned over, and when he was taken out it was found that he was dead.

The Tie that Binds East & West Together

How Forest Conservation is Practised in the Building and Maintenance of Railroads.

Canadians generally, are beginning to realize that there are really no such things as unlimited natural resources, and that if the Dominion is to preserve to posterity the riches which are hers the resources of the country must be conserved, and exploited without waste, and that where one thing is taken from the soil it must be replaced. It is only of comparatively recent years that the nation has become awake to the fact that fire, waste and careless cutting were rapidly and seriously depleting her "unlimited" supply of timber. Experts have stated that Canada's available lumber supply will be exhausted in from ten to fifteen years. Whether this is an alarmist point of view or not is unimportant. The fact remains that forest fire and waste are depleting the forests and that every effort is being made to eradicate these two evils.

The former rests almost entirely with those who come into personal contact with the woods, but the eradication of waste depends not only on the lumberman who cuts the timber, but on every person using it. The railway companies are giving great consideration to the subject of the conservation of forest products used by them and it is interesting to note that the Canadian Pacific has done exceptionally fine and exemplary work along these lines, and with its plan of creosoting ties hopes to save the forest to the extent of at least four million ties every year, in addition to hundreds of thousands of feet of switch timber, poles and posts.

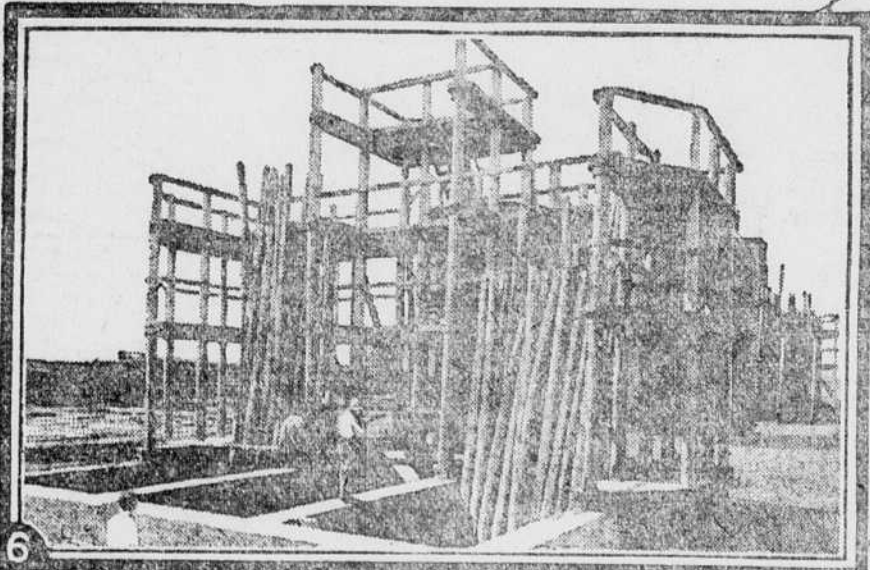

When the railways were first constructed, particularly in eastern Canada, practically the whole of the ties used were of cedar. Where the road bed was well ballasted and otherwise cared for, the life of a cedar tie was much longer than that of any other, ranging from fifteen to thirty years according to the conditions under which it was used, and its destruction was due rather to mechanical wear than to natural causes. Cedar, however, is now unobtainable, the supply in eastern Canada being practically exhausted, and the railways are compelled to use almost any other kind of wood, soft or hard. The average life of a soft-wood tie is ten years; that of a hard-wood tie, five or six years at the end of which time it must be replaced. By antiseptically treating them however, and by boring holes for rail spikes, the Canadian Pacific expects to more than double the life of all ties used. Heretofore this company has used approximately six million ties annually in the maintenance of its lines and last year over two million of the renewals were made with the treated product. This year considerably more will be used and it is expected that at the end of twenty years every tie on the Canadian Pacific right of way will have been chemically treated. Although a chemically treated tie, if not abused, is expected to last twice as long as one untreated, its cost is more than twice that of the untreated product, and it is interesting to know that if the company directly profits financially through the operation it is but to an infinitesimally small extent, and only in labor saved in renewing. The chief and very great saving is, or will be as the creosoting plants have only been in operation for three years at the most, in the standing timber.

In Canada, the Canadian Pacific Railway may be said to be the first company to seriously consider the treatment of timber to any extent, but the artificial preservation of wood is a very old practice. The ancient Egyptians employed various aromatics for that built upon charred piles, but it was only after the birth and growth of the antiseptic treatment of wood may be said to have received its most important development. The stone blocks and other solid supports at first used for the permanent way of railways were found to be too rigid and had to be replaced by a more elastic material. The wooden sleepers which were substituted decayed so rapidly that some method of prolonging life began to be considered as an engineering necessity.

In 1836, the first mention was made of the use of the product of gas tar distillation for impregnating timber, when Frans Moll took out a patent for injecting wood in closed iron vessels with the oil of coal tar, first in a state of vapour and next with heated oils in the ordinary liquid state. He recommended both the use of oils lighter than water and oils heavier purpose and the Romans are said to have steeped wood in oil of cedar to protect it from decay. Carbonizing or charring the outer surface of wood is, perhaps, one of the oldest methods of preserving it and it is believed that charred stakes found in the bed of the Thames near Weybridge were used to oppose the invading Romans. The city of Venice it is claimed, was than water, calling the former Euphon and the latter Kreosot. This was introduced practically, two years after, and in other countries, where timber was not so cheap as in Canada, Creosote became largely used. In 1912 there were eighty-four pressure treatment plants in operation in North America, and since that time the number of plants has almost doubled.

In Canada, the Canadian Pacific has plants at Sudbury, Ont., Trenton, Ont., Winnipeg, Man., Edmonton, Alta., New Glasgow, N.S., and New Castle, N.B. At these plants the ties are treated by what is known as the Lowry process. The ties are first incised to facilitate the penetration of the oil and then they are bored to receive the rail spikes. This prevents the tie from splitting when the rail is spiked to it and ensures penetration of the creosote at all places which could possibly be exposed to rot. "Bundles" of ties are then placed on tram cars and placed within the treating cylinder. The cylinder is then closed and creosote oil at a temperature of 200 degrees is forced by pressure pumps into it until the timber has taken oil to the point of refusal or a predetermined amount, when the surplus is drawn off and a vacuum created which recovers that portion of free oil in the timber above the specified amount. One tie consumes about two gallons of oil. Notwithstanding the many millions of dollars spent on reforestation, the creosoting industry is accomplishing more in the way of timber conservation than any other agency. Eastern Canada has standing today one of the largest bodies of hardwood timber on the continent consisting principally of Birch, Beech and Maple, all of which are subject to quick decay if used in an untreated state. All these woods, when properly seasoned and creosoted however, are very long lived, and will be much more freely used, not only for truck purposes, but for all engineering works in the very near future.

NEW SOURCES OF WEALTH IN WASTED FORCES OF NATURE

By S. W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift

It is interesting to note the many experiments now being made by scientists to utilize the forces of nature that have for centuries been wasted. The successful outcome of these efforts will effect important economic changes in the future. They involve gigantic problems in thrift, for, just as a successful business concern is constantly seeking to eliminate unnecessary expense, so these efforts represent the endeavors of mankind to live more efficiently and economically.

Eighteen years ago an Italian manufacturer, noting the steady column of volcanic steam coming from the ground in an Italian mountain valley, conceived the idea that this steam could be made to drive an engine. He set up the necessary equipment and soon was running the machinery in his plant with power which nature had been wasting. This experiment in the utilization of volcanic steam has been successfully followed in many parts of the world. In Bolivia the government has granted a concession through which steam from Mt. Tatío will be made use of in generating electrical energy for Bolivian railroads. Engineers state that our own country, particularly Yellowstone Park, possesses untold sources of wealth of this description.

Mechanical engineers are becoming more and more interested in the problem of utilizing the tides of the sea for generating electric power. English engineers have stated that it is only a matter of time until the tidal activities in the harbors of Southern England will be made use of, while engineers in the United States and Canada are interested in studies being made of the problem of making use of the tides in the Bay of Fundy.

The development of hydro-electric power, which in recent years has reached large proportions, is, in the opinion of many experts, only in its infancy.

Scientists are experimenting with apparent hopes of success, in utilizing the sun's rays and the wind as sources of power.

The development of these projects not only provides an interesting study as to what the next 50 or 100 years will bring in the daily lives of the people, but it illustrates the great fundamental truth that thrift, conservation and efficiency are among the impelling factors in all human progress.

Two Celebrities Meet

Maria Jeritza, one of the brightest stars in the opera world of today, paid her first professional visit to Canada recently when she appeared at the St. Denis Theatre, Montreal. At Montreal, Jeritza and her husband, Baron Popper were entertained by Colonel George Ham of the Canadian Pacific, with whom the famous soprano is here seen at Windsor Station.

Five Thousand Miles Alone

This seven weeks old baby travelled from Alberta to Liverpool under the care of the Canadian Pacific, during which time she put on ten ounces in weight. She was photographed with the ship's nurse at Liverpool upon the arrival of the Montclare.

"The way of the transgressor is hard," commented the country justice as he fined the motorist for exceeding the speed limit. "Not around here it isn't," retorted the motorist. "I never saw such mushy roads in my life."

"Ten dollars extra for contempt!" shouted the justice. "Why, I haven't made any remarks about you, judge." "Yes, you have," was the reply. "I'm road commissioner here as well as justice of the peace."

THE SPRINGS OF LITERARY STYLE ARE MYSTERIOUS

Literary Style Is Composed Largely of Hidden Harmonies Established in Speech and Writing Between Sound of Words and Sense They Are Intended to Convey.

The ultimate mystery of style, as best a shadowy thing, may never be fully drawn forth into the sunlight of a clear definition. We have heard without much enlightenment that style is the expression in words, not only of a writer's thought, but of his essential and innermost personality, that it is the garment of his thought, that it is the man himself. These attempts at definition are really little more than metaphors, telling us scarcely anything of the materials out of which the fabric of style is woven or of the way they are put together.

Of this much, however, we may be fairly sure—that literary style is composed very largely of those hidden harmonies which are somewhat established in all artistic speech and writing between the sounds of the words employed and the sense which they convey. These correspondences between our human thought and the intricate chiming and clash of vowels and consonants are subtle and diverse—so subtle and deeply sunk in the very structure of consciousness that they are discoverable by the swift and more searching processes of intuition alone. For the master of style is less a marker of new things than he is a finder of things old and long laid away among the dusty treasures of oblivion. No rules of logic or tradition direct his search. He gropes in the half-light of fancy after rhythms and cadences which we have forgotten, but which he knows are there, as the musical improvisator rummages up and down the gamut for the chords that are asleep in his instrument and waiting for his hand.

And there, no doubt, we come upon the reason why style cannot be taught, but must be achieved by each man for himself. The devices of rhetoric, syntax, and grammar, whereby thought is tied to thought to make the web of intelligible discourse, have been reduced to rules which anyone may learn, for these are matters of analysis and logic; but the writer who is determined to go beyond these and to win that mysterious something which we call style, must leave the textbooks, the professors of rhetoric, even the great masters of speech, behind him, plunging into himself and working deeply there in the dark among the dim survivals of race memory. In some degree he must rehearse within himself the age-long processes of language making. It is best if in his dealing with words he seems to get back to the aboriginal time of naming, so as to use our worn and battered phrases freshly, as though they came new from his mint. He must blow the dust of ages away from this shining word or that so as to see it once more in its earliest lustre. To do this is to find for oneself a style and to give one's words the concrete status of things. And what is the value of style, once it is gained? The question may be answered by considering that the total sense of Milton's "Paradise Lost" might be expressed in a thousand words of bald prose statement.... which no one would ever care to read. All the rest, all that goes to make that poem one of the major glories of the world's literature, is style, pure style, and nothing but style. The value of this quality can be stated, then, by saying that it alone can raise even the noblest thought into literature and make it worthy of lasting remembrance.

Although the seeker after style must work largely in himself, there are some other reservoirs from which he must draw. The childhood experiences of our English words have left upon most of them ineradicable marks which no careful writer can afford to neglect. A master of the resources of English varies at will, according to the demands of his subject, from the Saxon to the Latin vocabulary, and then again to Greek, as an organizer changes from "swell" to "great," and one who is ignorant of the tongues out of which our speech has grown will find many topics which he cannot adequately treat. But more important by far than knowledge of ancient languages is a knowledge of human life. The true scholar, says Emerson, is trained not alone by books but by action, and the same must be said of the man who masters style. It was Thoreau who saw this fact most clearly and who best illustrated its truth in his own work. He said of the "Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers" that he hoped it would smell less of the lamp than of the pine tree and would seem to his readers a "roofless book." And so it does, his words have been shaped by action, his phrases are acquainted with the sun and rain, he dips his sentences out of the current of daily life. He earned his manly, gaunt, New England style quite as much by use of the ax as by his use of the pen.

Not an easy task, then, this winning of style. No one who has paid the price has ever said that style might be cheaply bought. The English language, we know, is the most elaborate instrument of speech ever made, and one who is to touch its "tender stops of various quills" with authority must know their values as though he had made the instrument with his own hands. The remark is often made that if a writer has really something to say he will find a way to say it. Yes, and probably a very poor way, if he has no other equipment than an idea. Hamlet once made certain remarks which may be wrenched to the purpose: "Will you play upon this pipe?" "My lord, I cannot." "I do beseech you." "I know no touch of it, my lord."

DEATHS REPORTED

MISS ELLEN S. I. CHAPMAN, MARLBOROUGH, (Special to the Record)

MARLBOROUGH, June 17.—A well known and highly respected resident of this district passed away early this morning in the person of Miss Ellen S. I. Chapman, second daughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. T. S. Chapman.

Miss Chapman, who was sixty-two years of age, had only been ill for two weeks, and the announcement of her death came as a great shock to her many friends.

The funeral will be held on Thursday morning at ten o'clock (standard time).

ASBESTOS

A surprise party was given Miss Bella Livingstone in the form of a miscellaneous shower upon her approaching marriage which takes place shortly, at the home of Miss E. Church. Upwards of fifty were at the house when Miss Livingstone arrived and she was taken completely by surprise. After the gifts had been opened and duly admired, Miss Livingstone in a few words expressed her complete surprise and thanked the guests for their kindness. Delicious refreshments were then served. Miss Elizabeth and Miss Nellie Church acting as hostesses, assisted by Misses Hope and Adelaide Pearson, C. Elliott, L. Campbell, Mrs. Fuller, Misses Margaret Clark and Phyllis Clark. The rooms were very prettily decorated with green leaves and white and gold streamers hung from the archway under which the tables, laden with very beautiful and

DUNHAM LADIES' SCHOOL PRIZES ARE PRESENTED

Influence to Check Lack of Chivalry Counseled by Rector to Young Women.

Dunham, Que., June 17. — Despite inclement weather, the closing exercises of St. Helen's (Ladies) School enjoyed complete success on Friday, and a large gathering of parents and relatives attended the function. In the unavoidable absence of the Bishop of Montreal, the prizes were presented to the recipients by the Rev. A. C. Muller, rector of St. Anne de Bellevue, who also conducted Divine service in the morning.

In the afternoon the scholars exhibited the fruits of their instruction by entertaining the visitors to a musical programme. A high standard of merit was patent in all the numbers, from part songs rendered by the whole school to the individual solos. Miss Berenice Sheppard delighted her auditors with a dainty piano composition, "Farewell to the Fairies," and the robust "Balladen" of Poldini, was finely executed by Miss Roma Todd. Miss Margaret Turnbull displayed a delicacy of technique and a well-balanced appreciation of tone-value in the difficult "Humoresque" of Berringer, while the "Etude Mi-gnonne" of Schuette received a tender interpretation at the hands of Miss Margaret Bourne. Miss Margaret Grant gave an efficient presentation of Roff's "La Filleuse."

A vocal rendering of the Spring-time of Life," by Miss Frances Hearle was sung with sweetness of tone. Miss Isabel Cameron provided a violin selection, "Berceuse" in an acceptable manner, while a charming poemlet was declaimed by Wilfreda Lawson, a "junior," with self-possession. An amusing interlude was furnished by the Misses Bourne and Grant in the form of a French dialogue that gave occasion for some clever punning.

The following prizes were presented: Bishop's Art Prize, Irene Tomkins; St. Helen's School, Art Prize, Dorothy Fisher; Wray Cup (all round), Margaret Bourne; Cameron Cup (exemplary conduct), Mina Tweedie; Mrs. Hibbard Music Prize, Roma Todd; Fisher Music Prize, Marjorie Wray.

Other prize winners were: Misses Hope Barrington, Frances Hearle, Edna Stern, Charlotte Gear, Grace Moore, Margaret Grant, Marjorie Golden, Ellen Montgomery, Louise McLean, Kathleen Macartney, Marian Johnson, Margaret Lawson, Wilfreda Lawson, Berenice Sheppard, Edna Bennett, Mary Cross, Mae Falkner, Joyce Sheppard, Edith Scollie, Dorothy Brock, Yvonne Thomas, Irene Stone, Katherine Perram, Edith Strombert, Barbara Grant and N. Farrell.

Rev. Mr. Muller addressed the scholars and enjoined them to bring the sweet influence of Canadian womanhood into the lives of men folk and thus temper a tendency towards lack of chivalry and courtesy. He particularly urged them to avoid falling into slipshod habits of speech and even at the expense of being charged with pedantry to articulate their thoughts with that precision to which they had been accustomed at school.

Among the parents and relatives who attended were Mr. and Mrs. Fairall Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barrington, Mrs. F. W. Hearle, Mrs. W. S. Moore, Mrs. F. Stern, Mrs. B. W. Broch, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Lee, Mr. C. M. Cameron, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Tomkins, Mrs. C. W. Johnson, Mrs. C. George Macartney, Mrs. E. Hope McLean, Mrs. W. H. Newton, Mrs. George C. Sheppard, Mrs. F. A. Wray, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Todd, Mr. J. A. Strumbert, all of Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Turnbull and Miss Hope Turnbull of St. Lambert; Mrs. Lawson Grant of Lachine; Dr. E. Cross, of Three Rivers; Mrs. A. S. Lawson, of Father Point; Mrs. F. Keyzer, of St. Jerome; Mrs. F. W. Hubbard and Mrs. E. L. Baker, of Dunham.

Tigers Shut Out Boston, While Indians Nosed Out New York in Ninth Inning.

(Associated Press Despatch)
NEW YORK, June 17.—Alphonse and Gaston of comic supplement fame never were more deferential to each other than are the Yankees and the Red Sox. Because they refused to be so ungentlemanly as to beat Cleveland, while Detroit was trouncing Boston, New York today is still just clinging to the top rung of the American League ladder.

"Bullet Joe" Bush, who apparently does not believe in the "you first" code of etiquette, did his best for eight innings to help his road-weary teammates pull away to a two-game lead over their tenacious Fenway rivals by holding the Indians to three scattered hits, but in the ninth, with the assistance of Johnson's error, he handed a 2 to 1 victory to Speaker's tribe. Coveleski pitched a strong game for Cleveland. "Babe" Ruth was passed three times.

Detroit climbed to within a few points of second place by scoring a shutout over the slugging Red Sox by 3 to 0.

The Browns moved up to fifth place by pounding out a 10 to 2 win over the Athletics.

Landing on the long end of a 9 to 8 score in a see-saw battle with Washington, Chicago took a firmer hold on its first division berth.

Ruthlessly trampling on the hapless Cardinals to the tune of 7 to 2, while the Cubs dropped the opener to the lowly Phillies, the Giants widened the breach between themselves and the Windy City aggregation to a game and a half.

Unable to do anything with Jess Barnes' offerings, Pittsburgh lost a 9 to 4 decision to the Braves.

Brooklyn continued its winning ways with a 5 to 2 triumph over Cincinnati.

Canadian Guide Knows Secret Places

1) The Canadian Guide is able to turn out meals on the camp fire—also to dispose of them. (2) Up in the Rockies it is sometimes like this way. (3) Shows how he carries his pack from the Canadian Pacific bungalow camps, at French River, Nipigon or Lake of the Woods into the "bounteous interior."

The Canadian guide is one of the most interesting figures in the country. He is a veteran of trail and river. He knows the ways of the wilderness and of its denizens. He is an expert in many things—in tracking, shooting, finding a road by the stars or by Nature's guiding marks and usually in one or all of the accomplishments which enable him to follow his calling—canoeing, packing, hunting, fishing, mountaineering; while, though he does not always specialize in cookery, he is able, as a rule, to turn out meals on the camp fire which beat anything you ever tasted in London, Paris, Rome, Vienna and other centres of tiresome, noisy civilization.

He may be an Anglo-Saxon, a French-Canadian, an Indian, or even a Swiss. Up in the Rockies there is a village called Edelweiss which looks as if it had been picked up by some genie or other from the neighbourhood of Chamoni and dropped down in surroundings very far away but exactly similar. This is the home of the guides brought specially from Switzerland to conduct parties through the more ambitious flights of mountaineering. The Indian, the French-Canadian and the Anglo-Saxon are also there, to lead you via pony-trail up to little lost lakes in the clouds and down hidden valleys. The rest of Canada is also the stamping ground of the native-born. They take you to the best spots for moose and deer in the Eastern Provinces, the haunts of grizzly and crag-scaling mountain goat in British Columbia. They know the best pools and eddies in which to try for bass or trout, they know where to get you a record-breaking head or speckled beauty.

He belongs, the Canadian guide, to a bygone age. He is a survival of the days when one went through the forests at one's peril, when the coureurs-des-bois were lords of the wild, when the West was a blank space on the map. You feel that he once tumbled out of "Champlain's Voyages" or "The Last of the Mohicans" by mistake and that the book was accidentally and permanently—shut without replacing him. He fights in the rear-guard of the army of the heroic past, in slow retreat before the forces of colourless but invincible civilization. It is safe to say that, when you part from him to rejoin those forces after a glorious taste of the delights of life in the great outdoors, you will not easily forget this big brown chap of the strong ways who is Dame Nature's confidant, who knows all her most closely guarded secret places, who has read all that is written in the rapids and the dreaming lakes, the shadowed forest trails, the snow-peaks and the stars.

DISTINGUISHED GATHERING

utter, no matter how poorly expressed to acknowledge your kindness and courtesy to me, and permit me to say how proud and happy I am, to receive such a tribute in my native town, upon the 50th anniversary of my admission to the Bar. But, Sir, this is another thought which haunts me this evening. It is not the beauties of nature, it is not the magic panorama which this city presents, it is not your hills, your valleys, it is not the growth, prosperity of this city which causes my pulse to beat faster, and my heart's blood to leap along, there is another and greater something inexpressible and indescribable.

"It is the same spirit which animated Ireland's Bard, Tom Moore, when standing upon the juncture of the Rivers Avon and Avoca, in his native land and drinking in the beauties unparalleled of the scenery, he exclaimed:

It is not that nature had spread on the scene her brightest of verdure; Her purest of green;

It is not the soft music of fountain or rill;

Oh no, it is something more exquisite still.

"It is that the friends of my bosom are near, who make every scene of enchantment more dear, and who feel the best charms of nature improve when we see them reflected in looks that we love.

"Oh yes, Mr. Chairman, it is the presence and sympathy of our friends that make for happiness; without them life is a desert, with them one's troubles are forgotten, and life has every charm.

"To the members of this district who organized this banquet, permit me to tender my most sincere thanks, and assure them how much I appreciate it, after laboring with them for so many years, that I have assured their endorsement of my efforts and I appreciate it beyond expression.

"To the organizers of this banquet let me return my most sincere thanks. I assure you that I appreciate their delicacy in arranging it in the city of my birth, of which my father was the first mayor, and I can assure you that no compliment could be more graceful than a gathering of gentlemen among whom I have spent the busy days of my life.

"Sir that compliment is greatly enhanced by the selection of your Mouth Piece of him, though still a young man, to whom every finger points is a model of temper, style and method, and to whom every mouthpiece as a model in whose footsteps she would have her cherished son follow, the member for Sherbrooke, the Honorable George H. Boivin.

"As a spokesman he has said many things pleasant and agreeable, and something they are true, but I fear that a critic of cold fact might be somewhat awed at the abundance of his information and the inspiration of his muse.

"But this detracts nothing from the kindness of your sentiment. Hamlet did not want the players to be welcomed according to their deserts. The less we deserve the more is your bounty.

The Many Friends of Youth.

"Looking around this festive board, I recognize many friends of my youth, I recognize also sons of those who in past years were my best friends, I also recognize the familiar faces of some of my colleagues who in other days and other times I have met under other conditions and in another arena. I recognize also the familiar faces of many prominent men of this and the surrounding districts, including judges, members of the Bar from various parts of this province, and from the district where I resided for years, and Sir, more than this, I notice more particularly the presence of every member of the Bar of this district, the organizers of this banquet, over whom it has been my privilege to preside during the last ten years, and our relations have been so cordial and so intimate that they almost border on brotherhood.

Fifty Years a Long Time.

"Fifty years, Mr. Chairman, is a long long period, whether in the individual or in the nation, half a century, what progress what development, what changes. Fifty years ago Canada was in its infancy, in its early childhood.

"The Dominion of Canada was not then formed, as it is today, in 73 I believe it was, that Prince Edward Island became part of the Dominion of Canada, but it was not until 80 that all the British possessions on North America Continent were annexed to the Dominion.

"Fifty years, Sir, has made Canada a nation, fifty years ago she was hardly noticeable on the map of the world, but fifty years has changed all that, she has grown in wealth and population, the greatest railway in the world was founded and built during that period, which had for result the creation of a new world in the West, from Winnipeg to the Coast, and has in no small degree added to the name and fame of Canada. While the bravery and heroism of her sons during the great world war has given her a name and fame which can never die.

"And the Province of Quebec in the last fifty years has made a great step in wealth, in prosperity and education, and in every branch which tends to the improvement and progress of its people. Coming down again, Sir, to the Province of Quebec no country in the world has made greater progress and we have the stringent proof of it in your charming little city of Granby.

"Fifty years ago she was a little village of a few hundred inhabitants and today she stands as one of the ambitious and progressing cities of the province.

"It is well, Mr. Chairman, upon an occasion like this that we look back to those who preceded us and ascertain if their example is not worthy of emulation.

"You are making an event in my life, a something purely personal, an occasion to show your respect for and confidence in an institution of which for the moment I am the agent. Men have disagreed from the time of Abel and Cain and from that time the settlement of quarrels has occupied no small degree of time of a considerable portion of the human race.

Impartiality of Judges.

"The making of laws, the administration of laws and the impartiality of judges is the corner stone of the success of any country, confidence in the laws, and in their fair and honest administration is essential to the contentment and prosperity of the people.

"Men cannot wait to good advantage under arms, men must have confidence in their rights and know and feel that the law and the courts will protect them before they can give all their energy and thought to achievement.

"In no country have the Bench been more free from aspersion than in our own. Judges are not equally learned, nor are they all of the one standard in ability, but all stand equal in their desire and endeavor to do what is right, if there is one thing more than another of which Canada can feel proud, it is the high standing efficiency and uprightness of her judiciary.

Old Days in Bedford District.

"In this district confidence in the Bench rests upon facts that have passed into the role of tradition long before I was called to the office the duties of which I have discharged for some years. It is pleasing to reflect and the people of this district can look with pleasure and pride upon the list of judges who have administered justice with them during the past years.

"Gentlemen of sterling character of the greatest probity, earnest and devoted some of whom have reached the highest position in Judicial life in Canada.

"Mr. Justice McCord, who presided the first term in the district of Bedford, in February 1861 to 1865, a sound lawyer, a good judge, who served his country faithfully and well.

"From 1865 to 1870 Mr. Justice Johnson who later became Chief Justice of the Superior Court in Montreal, a striking personality, a highly cultured mind, noted for his eloquence and his wit.

"From 1870 to 1872 there was a sort of interregnum, Justice Johnson being sent away for some diplomatic mission and justice in this district was administered by Mr. Justice Ramsay, a great orator and noted criminalist.

"From 1872 to 1882, Mr. Justice Dunkin who was when at the Bar, principal counsel for the Seigneurs before the Seigneurial Court; also Provincial Treasurer in the Chateau Cabinet, Minister of Agriculture under Sir John A. Macdonald and he left us a legacy in the form of the Duncan Act.

"From 1882 to 1887, Mr. Justice Buchanan (son of the old Judge Buchanan) a noted jurist who also became one of the first agriculturists.

"From 1887 to 1889, Mr. Justice Tait, later Chief Justice Sir Melbourne Tait, took charge of the district a most charming personality and from 1889 to 1915, the lamented Mr. Justice Lynch presided over the affairs of this district. A well known man to you all, and beloved by all who knew him, a brilliant lawyer an honest man, and the leading figure of the good roads movement of this province.

"And, Sir, we must not forget that we had at the Bar at that date gentlemen of whom community must be proud, James O'Halloran, member for Missisquoi under the Union, a gentleman of noted professional attainments.

"George B. Baker, solicitor-general, in DeBoucherville Cabinet, and later senator, for years M.P. for Missisquoi, an able lawyer and hard fighter.

"Honorable Lucius Seth Huntington, Minister under the Union, and also since confederation a great debater, and the leader of the movement for decentralization and local representation, a forceful character. Ernest Racicot, perhaps one of the ablest lawyers this district ever had.

"Theophile Amyrault, a man of sterling character, largely interested in the militia of the country.

"The late Thomas Duffy, Minister of Public Works.

"And we have also those practicing at the Bar, the present Acting Chief Justice, John E. Martin, whose ability honesty has placed him as the Chief Justice of the Superior Court, an old boy of this country, whose presence was welcome here tonight.

"We have also J. C. McCorkill, Provincial Treasurer under Parent, Legislative Councillor, and then Judge of the Superior Court, in Quebec.

"Harry Baker, M.P., whose name is a household name in this province, and who made the great sacrifice in the last war.

"There were Charles Thibault and John F. Leonard, a good advocate and an honest man.

"We have the late Jno. P. Noyes, who recently died as Prothonotary of the Superior Court, for this district and whose memory is still fresh in the minds of the people.

"Nor can we forget, Sir, that at the Bar during that period we had gentlemen who shed honor and lustre on the profession and of whom this district may be justly proud. With an array such as this, the district of Bedford has every reason to feel proud of her representatives.

"I have tried to do my duty in every position in which it has been my fortune to hold, if have not always been successful I am pleased to know that my efforts have been appreciated.

A Plea for Tolerance.

"Before closing my remarks, Mr. Chairman there is one subject I would like to refer to, one of vital importance to our national future, and in which I have in all my mature life taken the deepest personal interest. I would like to speak to you of a special feature which distinguished this province and this district of the Eastern Townships where I have spent my life, from the other parts of the great Empire, to which we are so firmly attached. I refer to the fact that this community of ours is bilingual in speech and is built of two races.

"To no one more clearly than to the members of the profession of law does this fact come home.

"The whole system of law and of jurisprudence of this province is built by a skillful use of the best which has come down to us from the two countries from whose loins we have sprung. The law with which our Saxon forefathers guarded the rights and liberties of those accused of crime still protects the prisoner at the bar of criminal justice, while the pure logic, the systematic thought which has distinguished the code of French civil law and procedure is the basis of our jurisprudence in matters of property and civil rights.

"Thus, while it is customary to speak of the permissive use of either language in our courts, and carefully as this privilege is maintained for the citizen, whether plaintiff or defendant, accused of witness, the judge upon the bench and the advocate at the Bar must of very need be in mind as in tongue, neither French nor English, but both.

"Therefore, it is as one long steeped in the traditions of both races that I speak today. And I stand and say that the greatest folly of a Canadian citizen is to speak, be he French or English, as careless men sometimes do, and to suggest that this unique character of our civilization can be considered a disadvantage. For my part, it is a priceless privilege, an advantage denied others that there should be the dual culture. It offers the one impregnable obstacle to that process of standardization which afflicts so much of the modern world with a real blight. It is to our children and their children's children as assurance that the most precious rights of free thought, of free speech, and of free action within the law of our fathers will never be destroyed.

"In the great Republic to the south of us this process of standardization this attempt to force all men into one narrow mould of thought and action has gone to great extremes, apparently, and I speak with due respect for the amenities of international courtesy, repeating merely what is daily said by their own leaders of thought to the extreme point where the whole power of the republic is insufficient to enforce laws made in good faith, but for the purpose of unduly limiting personal freedom.

"I fear that the same condition is only too ready duplicated in portions of our own country, I know that it cannot come about amongst us. No narrow fanatic, no racial bigot, no politician appealing to prejudice for votes can dare to trifle with the fact that our very existence is predicated on respect for rights, and on mutual regard and tolerance.

"Thus, despite the fears of those who would teach us that the dual speech of our people limit and hamper us in commercial and industrial effort, I say two things. First, that I do not admit their charge. Second, that there are things far more important than trade and commerce, deliberately and that these things, permanence and solidity in affairs of state, breadth of mind and tolerance among individuals, in a word, the culture of a true civilization will flourish more luxuriantly in our freer atmosphere, than they will in one confined by too narrow a racial view.

I urge therefore upon you the consideration of this great subject, pride in this special quality of our community, respect for the price and sincere attempt to realize that true Canadianism in the broad sense requires jealous care of the rights and privileges of the two basic elements of Canada.

"In closing, although this is not, God willing, by valedictory, as I stand before you it cannot fail but come home to you that I am no longer a young man, but one closer to the latter than to the earlier term of his public service, and with your permission I shall terminate my address with a few lines written by that ornament of the English Bench, that model of wit, as well as of juristic wisdom, Mr. Justice Darling, on the occasion of his recent retirement to his well-earned rest:

"Long worn, now cast aside, red robe, lie there when the organs throbs the [have along,

"By chests of Kingly dust,"

"And Gothic, chancies old,"

COMMUNISTS IN SESSION AT MOSCOW TODAY

Plan to Devise Means of "Proletarizing and Communizing the World."

(Associated Press Despatch) MOSCOW, June, 17. — Sixty countries, including Canada and Great Britain, are represented in the fifth congress of the Third Internationale which opens today in the Grand Opera House here.

This year's convention of the organization founded by Lenin, Zinovieff and other Bolsheviks in 1919, when Communism was scarcely more than an experiment, has brought a thousand representatives from every habitable part of the globe.

In the congress almost every branch of the human race is represented. Every variety of face and costume is seen and a veritable babel of tongues is heard. The delegates have come from remote parts of the earth to devise ways and means of "proletarizing and Communizing the world."

Besides discussing the main object of the Third Internationale, which is to foster Communism throughout the world, such questions as the International economic situation, a campaign against Fascism and the emancipation of the minorities in colonial countries will be considered.

The position of the Communist party in Canada, the United States and South America will be discussed by special commissions and steps taken to extend the membership of the Third Internationale in those countries.

POSTAL CLERKS AWAIT ACTION OF GOVERNMENT

Branches All Over Dominion Vote in Favor of Strike if Salaries Not Revised.

(Associated Press Despatch) TORONTO, June, 17. — With returns from branches all over the Dominion favoring a strike unless the Federal Government takes some action to meet the demands of Canadian postal workers, officials of the Canadian Confederation of Postal Employees are marking time today. Last night the Dominion executive passed a resolution, calling on Parliament to amend the Civil Service Act so that the Government would have power to amend the salary schedule brought by the Civil Service Commission.

The resolution will be in the hands of Premier King and members of the Cabinet this morning. Final action will be taken by the Dominion executive of the federation at a meeting scheduled for tonight and unless the Government acts a strike of the 10,000 postal workers in Canada is freely predicted.

Representations have been made to the Government by municipal authorities, boards of trade and heads of large private enterprises urging that a conciliatory policy be adopted. Never before has there been a postal strike extending throughout the Dominion and a tieup would result in business demoralization all over the country.

Federation officials state that results of voting favor a strike and are beyond expectations. If the same percentage of those favoring a strike is maintained in the final rounds, the decision will be for a walkout.

Hon. Charles Murphy, Postmaster General, who has returned to Ottawa from the South, was not expected at his office today.
