

THE MILITIA OF CANADA.

By the Dominion Act, 31 Vict., cap. 40, the Militia of Canada consists of all male inhabitants between the ages of 18 and 60, not exempted or disqualified by law, British subjects by birth or naturalization. The male population so liable to serve is divided into four classes: 1. Those between the ages of 18 and 30, unmarried, or widowers without children; 2. Between 30 and 45, unmarried, or widowers with children; 3. Between 18 and 45, married, or widowers with children; 4. Over 45, but under 60.

The militia is divided into active and reserve. The Active militia consists of the Volunteer militia, the Regular militia, and the Marine militia. The Volunteer militia is composed of corps raised by voluntary enlistment. The Regular militia is composed of men who voluntarily enlist to serve in the same; or of men balloted to serve; or of men who voluntarily enlist to serve with the balloted men and of men balloted to serve. The Marine militia is composed of seamen, sailors, and persons whose usual occupation is upon any steam or sailing craft, navigating the waters of the Dominion.

The Reserve militia consists of the whole of the men who are not serving in the Active militia of the time being. The present strength of the Active militia, as fixed by statute, is 40,000 men. So far, this quota has been amply supplied by volunteers, but the law gives authority to fill up the number by draft from the Reserve militia, if necessary.

The following additional information respecting the organization and state of the militia is condensed from the last Report of the Adjutant General, Col. P. Robertson Ross:— For purposes of Militia command and administration, the Dominion of Canada is at present divided into nine Military districts and twenty-two Brigade divisions; these, again, are subdivided into one hundred and eighty-six Regimental divisions which are again subdivided into Company divisions. The Regimental divisions, at present with very few exceptions, are identical with the electoral divisions in the respective provinces.

Within the Province of Ontario there are four Military districts, numbered 1, 2, 3 and 4, forming eight Brigade and eighty-two Regimental divisions.

Military district No. 1 contains two Brigade divisions. The first Brigade division consists of the Regimental divisions of Essex, Kent, Bothwell, Lambton, West Riding of Middlesex, North Riding of Middlesex, East Riding of Middlesex, West Riding of Elgin, East Riding of Elgin, North Riding of Oxford, South Riding of Oxford, and the city of London.

The second Brigade division consists of the Regimental division of South Riding of Huron, North Riding of Huron, South Riding of Bruce, North Riding of Bruce, South Riding of Perth, North Riding of Perth, North Riding of Waterloo, South Riding of Waterloo, North Riding of Wellington, Centre Riding of Wellington, and South Riding of Wellington.

Military district No. 2 contains the third, fourth and fifth Brigade divisions.

The third Brigade division consists of the Regimental divisions of North Riding of Norfolk, South Riding of Norfolk, North Riding of Beant, South Riding of Beant, Haldimand, Monck, Welland, Lincoln, Niagara, North Riding of Wentworth, South Riding of Wentworth, Halton, and the city of Hamilton.

The fourth Brigade division consists of the Regimental divisions of Peel, Cardwell, North Riding of Grey, South Riding of Grey, Algoma, North Riding of Simcoe, South Riding of Simcoe, North Riding of York, West Riding of York, East Riding of York, North Riding of Ontario, South Riding of Ontario, and

The fifth Brigade division consists of the Regimental divisions of West Riding of the city of Toronto, and the East Riding of the city of Toronto.

Military district No. 3 contains the sixth and seventh Brigade divisions.

The sixth Brigade division consists of the Regimental divisions of the West Riding of Durham, East Riding of Durham, South Riding of Victoria, North Riding of Victoria, West Riding of Peterboro', East Riding of Peterboro', West Riding of Northumberland, East Riding of Northumberland.

The seventh Brigade division consists of the Regimental divisions of the West Riding of Hastings, North Riding of Hastings, East Riding of Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox, Addington, Frontenac, and the city of Kingston.

No. 4 Military district consists of the eighth Brigade division, which contains the Regimental divisions of the South Riding of Leeds, North Riding of Leeds and Grenville, Brockville, South Riding of Grenville, South Riding of Lanark, North Riding of Lanark, South Riding of Renfrew, North Riding of Renfrew, Carleton, the city of Ottawa, Dundas, Russell, Stormont, Cornwall, Prescott and Glengarry.

Within the Province of Quebec there are three Military districts, numbered five, six and seven; eight Brigade, and seventy Regimental divisions.

Military district No. 5 consists of three Brigade divisions. The first Brigade division of which consists of the Regimental divisions of Pontiac, Ottawa, Argenteuil, Montreal West, and second Montreal centre.

The second Brigade division consists of the Regimental divisions, Huntingdon, Napierville, second Chateauguay, St. Johns, Iberville, Missisquoi, Brome, and Shefford; and

The third Brigade division of the Regimental divisions of Richmond, Drummond, Stanstead, Sherbrooke, and Compton.

Military District No. 6 contains three Brigade divisions, numbered four, five, and six.

The fourth Brigade division consists of the Regimental divisions of Montreal east, first Montreal centre, Vaudreuil, Soulanges, Beauharnois, first Chateauguay, Laprairie, Two Mountains, Terrebonne, Hochelaga, Jacques Cartier, and Laval.

The fifth Brigade division consists of the Regimental divisions of L'Assomption, Montcalm, Joliette, Berthier, Maskinongé, Three Rivers, and St. Maurice.

The sixth Brigade division consists of the Regimental divisions of Nicolet, Arthabaska, Wolfe, Yamaska, Bagot, Richelieu, St. Hyacinthe, Rouville, Verchères, and Chambly.

Number seven Military district consists of two Brigade divisions, numbered seven and eight.

The seventh Brigade division consists of Lotbinière, Mégantic, Beauce, Dorchester, Lévis, Bellechase, Montmagny, L'Islet, Kamouraska, Temiscouata, Rimouski, Bonaventure, and Gaspé.

The eighth Brigade division consists of the Regimental divisions of Champlain, Portneuf, Quebec east, Quebec centre, Quebec west, county of Quebec, Montmorency, Charlevoix, Chicoutimi, and Saguenay.

The Province of New Brunswick forms one military district (the eighth) comprising three Brigade and fifteen Regimental divisions.

The Brigade divisions are numbered from one to three, and embrace the following Regimental divisions:

The first Brigade division contains the Regimental divisions of Victoria, Carleton, Charlotte, York, and Sunbury.

The second Brigade division consists of the Regimental divisions of Queen's, King's, first St. John, second St. John, and Albert.

The third Brigade division consists of the Regimental divisions of Restigouche, Gloucester, Northumberland, Kent and Westmorland.

The Province of Nova Scotia forms one Military district, termed Military district No. 9, containing three Brigade and nineteen Regimental divisions; the Brigade divisions are numbered from 1 to 3.

The first Brigade division consists of the Regimental divisions of the city of Halifax, and counties of Halifax, Hants, Colchester, Cumberland, Pictou, Antigonish, and Guysborough.

The second Brigade division consists of the Regimental divisions of King's, Annapolis, Digby, Yarmouth, Shelbourne, Queen's, and Lunenburg.

The third Brigade division consists of the Regimental divisions of Inverness, Victoria, Richmond, and Cape Breton.

The organization under the law is simple and effective, and the whole system works with ease and smoothness; the Minister of Militia and Defence is responsible to Parliament, and the country, for the administration of Militia affairs. The adjutant general is the chief executive officer, and is charged under the orders of Her Majesty, with the Military command and discipline of the Militia, and he is assisted by the deputy adjutant general at Head-quarters. To each Military district there is a deputy adjutant general, acting under the orders of the adjutant general, and who have the command of the Militia in their respective districts, and to each Brigade division there is a brigade major; one district paymaster is attached to each of the Military districts, and storekeepers, who act under the orders of the director of stores at Head-quarters, take charge of, and regulate the receipt and issue of the necessary military stores required by the whole Militia force of the Dominion.

It would be unreasonable to suppose that any country can be said to be properly prepared for its defence in war, without the existence during peace of—

1. Perfect unity in the Military administration.
2. The maintenance and preparation during peace of a permanent and an adequate staff.
3. A supply department capable of instant expansion to meet all the possible wants of an army in the field.
4. A perfect corps, brigade and divisional organization, both for the active and reserve forces, whereby every corps, battalion and battery may fall at once into their appointed place.

The success that attended Prussia during the war of 1866, from the observance during peace of such a system, and the disasters that attended the early efforts of the Northern States in the neighboring republic to subdue the South, from a total want of any such system, are fair illustrations of this truth.

The present Militia law of the Dominion provides for the necessary organization, and on its basis a very effective military system can be established, whereby, should the necessity ever arise, the whole military power of the country could, without difficulty, be developed for its defence.

The Militia, which is divided into two great classes of Active and Reserve militia, according to returns rendered up to 31st December, 1869, amount to a total of 656,008 men, of which the Active militia numbers 43,541 and the Reserve militia 612,467.

The numbers of the Reserve militia are in accordance with the returns furnished by the enrollment in 1869, but it is believed that the next enrollment will show a very considerable increase to the Reserve, for it must be borne in mind that all men in the Dominion, between the ages of 18 and 60, are liable by law to military service in defence of the country.

The following is the return of the Active militia of the Dominion of Canada, on the 31st of December, 1869, and is divided as follows—

PROVINCE OF ONTARIO.

Military district, No. 1, quota 5517:
52 corps, Cavalry, Artillery, and Rifles, nominal strength	4936
Military district, No. 2, quota 6089:
124 corps, Cavalry, Artillery, Infantry and Rifles, nominal strength	7152
Military district, No. 3, quota 3400:
76 corps, Cavalry, Artillery, Infantry and Rifles, nominal strength	4588
Military district, No. 4, quota 3064:
53 corps, Artillery, Infantry and Rifles, nominal strength	3154
	19,830
19 companies Grand Trunk Railway Brigade to be added	1126
354 corps.	20,956

NOTE.—The word "corps," according to the Militia Act, includes any field battery, brigade, or battery of artillery, troop of cavalry, or any company, battalion, or regiment.

PROVINCE OF QUEBEC.

Military district No. 5, quota 3628:
98 corps, Cavalry, Artillery, Infantry and Rifles, nominal strength	5824
Military district, No. 6, quota 5719:
53 corps of Infantry and Rifles, nominal strength	3228
Military district, No. 7, quota 5035:
84 corps, Cavalry, Artillery, Infantry and Rifles, nominal strength	5012
17 companies Grand Trunk Railway Brigade to be added	1003
252 corps.	15,066

PROVINCE OF NEW BRUNSWICK.

Military district, No. 8, quota 3264:
56 corps, Cavalry, Artillery, Infantry and Rifles, nominal strength	3327

PROVINCE OF NOVA SCOTIA.

Military district No. 9, quota 4284:
72 corps, Artillery, Infantry and Rifles, nominal strength	4192

RECAPITULATION.

Province of Ontario, 354 corps, nominal strength	20,956
Province of Quebec, 252 corps, nominal strength	15,066
Province of New Brunswick, 56 corps, nominal strength	3,327
Province of Nova Scotia, 72 corps, nominal strength	4,192
Total	43,541

Ontario, quota	18,070, nominal strength	20,956
Quebec " "	14,382 " "	15,066
New Brunswick " "	3,264 " "	3,327
Nova Scotia " "	4,284 " "	4,192
Total	40,000	43,541

The force consists of:—

Cavalry	1,500 officers and men
10 Field Batteries	750 " "	42 guns, 1441 horses.
Garrison Artillery	3,558 " "
4 Companies Engineers	232 " "
Naval brigade at Halifax	223 " "
73 Batt. of Rifles and Infantry	37,268 " "
Total	43,541 officers and men.

But, in addition to the above strength, there are now 25 corps who have enrolled and tendered their services within the provinces of Quebec and Nova Scotia, and they have been notified that their services will be accepted conditionally, but that the government is at present unable to supply them with the necessary arms and uniform.

The acceptance of these corps would raise the strength of the Active militia to a total of 45,040. In addition to this, however, so great has been the desire evinced to volunteer for the defence of the country, and raise additional corps, that it has been found necessary to decline such offers from those localities where the quota is already exceeded, until such time as vacancies for their enrolment may arise in the respective districts, by the expiration of the period of service of existing corps, who may not desire to re-enrol for another period. From these facts it may be safely affirmed that no difficulty will be experienced in keeping up the present strength (at least) of the Active force by voluntary enrolment and therefore, the necessity of having recourse to the ballot, is not likely to arise.

The Active militia consists of men who have all voluntarily enrolled to serve for three years, at the expiration of which period, should they not desire to re-enrol, they are free to claim their discharge when they fall back into the reserve, and are not again liable for military service until all the other men in the 1st, 2nd and 3rd classes of militiamen, (i. e., between the ages of 18 and 45) in the company divisions within which they reside have volunteered or been balloted to serve, and as it is an acknowledged principle that all the men belonging to any country should be held liable to military service for its defence in just proportion, the action of Parliament by the introduction of the present Militia act has removed those inequalities in the pressure of military service for the defence of the country, which, under the volunteer system, formerly existed, and of which the volunteers themselves with justice complained, that the pressure of military service then fell upon the willing few.

It is to be observed that it is a very important privilege which those men enjoy, who thus volunteer to serve for three years in the ranks of the Active militia, and as yet it appears to be hardly sufficiently understood by them, although it is a point of great importance and individual advantage. For, by the performance of a few days drill annually, for three years, by any young man in the country, he most probably will have fulfilled for the rest of his life, except in the event of war, any military demand that his country could of right claim from him. Moreover, the effect contemplated by the law, of a three years' enrolment by individuals who, after such term of service, return into the Reserve, their places being taken by others who either voluntarily enrol, or are drawn for such term of service, will result, after a certain number of years, in the great military advantage of a very large proportion of the men throughout the Dominion having undergone a certain amount of military training.

From the above statement, it is evident that in the event of war, sufficient numbers of men could always be obtained from the large Militia reserve, to swell the ranks of the active force to any strength likely to be required, for it is a fact that the population of the Dominion comprehends nearly as many men within the fighting ages as the Southern States in the neighboring Republic ever brought into the field, and the men of Canada, both morally and physically, are not only equal to any that the world can produce, but in point of hardihood, manliness of spirit and fitness for military service, are not to be surpassed.

The present condition of the Active militia is as follows:

CAVALRY.

The Cavalry, though only 1,500 in number,—a small proportion for so extensive a line of frontier—are generally fairly mounted, and composed almost entirely of young farmers, the greater proportion of whom own their own horses, ride well, and are armed with Spencer carbines and swords, and a large per centage have gone through the Cavalry school, which was established at Toronto, during the stay of the 13th Hussars; but, since the departure of that corps, no longer exists. The Adjutant general strongly recommends that they be trained to act more as mounted riflemen than as regular cavalry.

In a close and intersected country like Canada, abounding in woods, water, fences and obstacles of all kinds, opportunity for regular cavalry charging in line, sword in hand, is not likely to be afforded, but the services of mounted infantry or riflemen would be found invaluable. Acting as such during operations in the field they would be better suited to take outpost, picket, and escort duty, besides performing the ordinary duties of light cavalry in the field; in addition to which they would prove more really formidable in actual conflict by being better enabled to harass and act upon the communications, flanks and rear of an invading force. Moreover, by means of detached bodies of mounted riflemen, under enterprising leaders, great loss might be inflicted on an enemy by a system of counter attacks on his own frontier.

The experience of the last war in the neighboring Republic, as well as that gained in previous wars in America, proves uncontestedly the practical advantages of mounted riflemen, instead of regular cavalry, for the kind of warfare usually carried on in America, and for the nature of the country.

It is worthy of note, moreover, that at this moment, it is proposed to convert the whole of the yeomanry cavalry in England (which is also a close and intersected country) into mounted riflemen.

From personal experience, having in an early period of his military career, served in a corps of mounted riflemen four years at the Cape of Good Hope, a considerable portion of which was passed in the field during the Kaffir war, the Adjutant general bears testimony to the formidable character of a force of this description, to power of making forced marches, either for the relief, or rapid re-inforcement of posts, or in order to prevent or anticipate the occupation of advantageous positions by an enemy, and to the advantage to be derived in action by their co-operation as skirmishers with men on foot. As an instance of their power of destruction, he mentions that on one occasion, at the Cape of Good Hope (during the action at the Gwanga, in British Kaffraria, in 1846) a large body of the Kaffirs was attacked and routed, by one troop of British dragoons and a squadron of the Cape Mounted Riflemen. In a very short time, before the enemy could reach the nearest cover, several hundred of them were destroyed, with hardly any loss to the British, not one of the Kaffirs being killed by the swords of the Dragoons, but all by the fire of the mounted riflemen. He, therefore, proposes, in order to increase the power and usefulness of this important arm of the service, to introduce more generally the practice of firing from horse-back, and of acting as skirmishers, both mounted and on foot, which, in addition to the present drill, is all that is needed to effect the desired object.

FIELD BATTERIES.

With regard to the Field Batteries of Artillery, (ten in number) they are in a perfectly serviceable and effective condition, and this satisfactory result reflects great credit not only on the officers in command of these batteries, but on the individual officers and men composing them.

The guns, 42 in number, and 441 horses, (with the exception of the 6 pounder Armstrong battery at Halifax, which is not horsed) consist of muzzle loading, smooth bored 9 pounders, and twenty-four pounder howitzers, in the proportion of 3 nine pounder guns, and one 24 pounder howitzer to each battery. These are a good description of gun for field batteries. From the former, the projectiles fired are solid shot, shrapnell shell, and case, and from the latter, common and shrapnell shell, case-shot, and carcasses. The use and management of these guns are perfectly well understood by the men, who are not hampered by useless trappings. On all occasions, whenever called on, these batteries are fairly horsed, and the harness and tackle are nearly new; these batteries are kept always supplied with the usual amount of service ammunition, and they are in a fit condition at any moment to take the field. I may add, in connection with this arm, that Canada possesses great resources for the formation of field batteries of Artillery. The young men of the country are well accustomed to work with teams, and waggons, and being very intelligent, and handy at such work, are easily trained for the duties of field artillerymen, and there is, throughout the country, a large supply of hardy and useful draught horses.

At various reviews, which were held last summer, these batteries worked well in brigade, taking up positions in good style, and firing with ease and rapidity; and they only require, in addition to the periodical practice instruction in firing shot and shell, to be trained at the annual drills in brigade, in co-operation with cavalry and infantry, to acquire and maintain an adequate and reasonable degree of efficiency.

The power and value of field artillery is so well known, and the moral effect produced by it, during operations in the field, so great, that the maintenance of these batteries in a state of efficiency at all times is a matter of the greatest importance.

GARRISON ARTILLERY.

The Garrison Artillery numbers at present 3,558 officers and men, and is organised into 7 brigades, and 19 independent batteries; the larger portion of the latter being attached to the rural battalions of their different localities for administrative purposes.

The head-quarters of five of these brigades are at Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec, St. John, N.B., and Halifax, N.S., and the remaining two form a portion of the Grand Trunk brigade, which has a distinct organization, and is intended for the defence and security of that important line of railway.

For the practice and instruction of the men in gun drill, these artillery brigades have the use of heavy guns of position at their respective head-quarters, and as soon as additional guns of position can be obtained, it is proposed to distribute them to those independent batteries not already furnished with the necessary means of instruction.

The Garrison Artillery are clothed with the same description of uniform as the Royal Artillery; for small arms they are in possession of the long breech-loading Snider-Enfield rifle, and they have all been drilled as infantry.

For the purpose of instructing the officers of the Militia in artillery science, there is at present but one school of gunnery, formed by the Royal Artillery at Toronto, which has been largely attended, and has proved of great service; but, inasmuch as it is indispensable for the defence of the Dominion that a sufficient number of trained artillery officers should be forthcoming when required, the adjutant general recommends that schools of gunnery for the instruction of the militia artillery officers and cadets be formed wherever a portion of the Royal Artillery may be quartered, for a certain period, at least, in each year.

ENGINEERS

There are four companies of Engineers, numbering 232 officers and men. Three companies are stationed at Montreal (one of which belongs to the Grand Trunk Railway brigade), and the remaining company is at St. John, N.B. The men composing these corps are almost exclusively engineers and mechanics.

NAVAL BRIGADE.

There is a small Naval brigade, of four companies, numbering 233 officers and men at Halifax clothed in naval uniform, having eight 18 pounder guns, with stores for naval guns complete. They are also armed with Snider rifles and cutlasses. This brigade is composed exclusively of seafaring men and would be available for naval service on an emergency.

INFANTRY.

The Infantry consists of seventy-three battalions of Riflemen and Infantry, numbering 37,268 officers and men. They are all armed with Snider breech-loading rifles. The accoutrements in possession are not of the latest or best description, though quite serviceable.

There are few of these battalions without some officers or men who have previously served in the regular army, and many of them, at some time, actively in the field. The presence of these men in the ranks is of the utmost importance, and tends to impart a feeling of military strength and steadiness throughout the whole; for there are a very large number of men who have previously served as soldiers settled in the Dominion. The rural battalions are almost entirely composed of the agricultural population—the bone and sinew of the land—who have a stake in the country and in very many instances, are the proprietors and sons of proprietors of the land; and it is impossible to see a hardier race, or finer material for soldiers. In many instances their physique is most remarkable, and they all appear imbued with a spirit of the greatest loyalty and devotion to their Queen and country, and the same spirit and aptitude for military service is exhibited by the city battalions, who are composed mainly of intelligent and educated artisans and mechanics; considering, moreover, the short period of time allowed for the annual drill, the degree of advancement at which they have arrived is most creditable, and they are all now quite ready to go into brigade.

With regard to the drill and efficiency of these battalions, from the result of his own inspection, last summer, of as many corps as time would admit of, as well as from the annual reports of the deputy adjutants general, the adjutant general enabled to report that it is, in most cases, as satisfactory as could possibly be expected, and there are very few of them that are not sufficiently acquainted with battalion drill to fit them for all practical purposes to take their place alongside of the regular army in the defence of the country.

He would strongly recommend that in future the annual drill and training of the rural battalions be performed in each district at such places as may be found most convenient to form brigade camps, whereat a portion of cavalry and artillery may co-operate, and thus afford an opportunity to both officers and men to gain such practical military instruction in field duties and the application of the three arms in combined movements, as in the event of active service, would prove of the utmost importance.

Although future battles will probably be fought at the usual distances hitherto observed, the requirements of modern warfare, resulting from the use of rifles of long range and precision, do not involve the same character of drill, rigidity of movement, and closeness of formation, as was formerly necessary; but what is indispensable now, especially in Canada, is the practice of a judicious and intelligent system of skirmishing drill, suited to the character of the country, and in the taking up of positions, either for attack or defence, in connection with the other arms. From the extent of range, precision, and rapidity of fire, which can be developed by the arms now in use, it is evident that in all future wars, great bodies of men and armies must be more than ever posted, with a view to obtaining cover, and if time will admit, entrenched, and thus have to occupy longer stretches of ground, in order to obtain shelter from the effects of improved rifle fire, as well as mitraille and shell; it therefore follows that the main objects to aim at are the careful instruction of the men in a skilful use of the rifle, and of the officers in the knowledge how to direct most judiciously the efforts of their men, and to select the most advantageous positions, remembering that the essence and spirit of all warfare is to endeavour to apply the greatest injury to an enemy with the least loss to one's self.

MILITARY SCHOOL, MONTREAL.

The large building in Montreal, known as the Military School, recently purchased from the corporation of Montreal by the Militia department, is amply sufficient to fulfil all the purposes for which it is destined. Underneath its roof it contains an admirable drill hall, 304 feet in length, and 125 in breadth, wherein all the active militia force of Montreal might be assembled under arms when required, and there is plenty of space for a battalion to drill. There is also in the building room for the armouries of all the corps of active militia in Montreal, including the field battery and troop of cavalry, likewise accommodation for the military school, the staff officers' offices, and storage room for the military stores. By the acquisition of this building, great advantage will result from the concentration under one roof, of all the arms, stores, and military departments in Montreal, and any immediate expense will be compensated by the saving ultimately effected in the rent at present paid for very inferior and inadequate accommodation.

MILITARY SCHOOLS.

Military schools for the practical training of officers were originally established in the year 1864, after the apprehension of troubles arising out of the Trent affair. These schools were formed in connection with regiments of the regular army; the two first opened were at Toronto and Quebec, in March, 1864, and to encourage candidates to apply for admission to these schools, gratuities of $50 were granted, with both first and second class certificates (the gratuity for a first-class has since been discontinued); the call was responded to from all parts, and candidates became so numerous that, in the year 1865, four more schools were established, two in March, at Montreal and Kingston, and two at Hamilton and London, during the months of April and May respectively. The two schools last named, failing to draw a sufficiently numerous attendance of cadets, were both closed by the end of the year. The schools that have continued in operation since their first establishment, are those of Toronto and Kingston, in the province of Ontario; and of Montreal and Quebec, in the Province of Quebec. The number of cadets who have been granted certificates by the several commandants (officers of the regular army), who have had charge of these schools, now exceeds 5,000 of whom 24 per cent. have taken first-class certificates. The whole of these cadets are distributed throughout the two provinces of Quebec and Ontario, and so continuous have been the applications from these provinces, that the number of cadets in Quebec only exceeds that of those from Ontario by eighty-eight. Quebec has the advantage of first-class certificates, as during the period that gratuities were given for first-class certificates, two were taken in Quebec for every one in Ontario.

The relative strength of cadets of the two provinces on the 30th November, 1869, was as follows:—

	1st class.	2nd class.	Total cadets.
Quebec.....	713	1862	2575
Ontario.....	480	2017	2487
Total.....	1193	3879	5062

The result is, throughout the entire Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, no town, and but few villages of importance, are to be found, where the Military school cadet is unknown. A considerable number of these cadets have joined the Active militia, but far the greater part of them are at large, and will prove of great service to the commanding officers of the reserve militia battalions should their services ever be called for.

In addition to the schools above mentioned, when the Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia became part of the Dominion confederation, similar schools of military instruction in connection with the regular army were established at St. John, N.B., and Halifax, N.S., on the 20th January, and 1st February, 1869, respectively.

The number of cadets to whom certificates have been awarded, since the first opening of the schools in the respective provinces, are as follows:—

	1st class.	2nd class.	No of Cadets in School 1st Jan., 1870.
Ontario.....	477	2086	74
Quebec.....	715	1912	99
New Brunswick....	4	68	9
Nova Scotia.....	8	94	23
Total.....	1204	4160	205

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY BRIGADE.

The Grand Trunk Railway brigade is composed of the railway employes (military service being exacted from all men in the Company's employment), and it forms part of the quota of the Active militia of Canada, is subject to the Act of Militia and Defence, and to all regulations governing the Active militia force.

The brigade consists of two brigades garrison artillery, one company of engineers and three battalions of rifles, numbering 2,128 of all ranks.

There is in addition a Reserve of 200 men sworn in, but not gazetted.

The Grand Trunk Railway brigade district, extending from Rivière du Loup to Sarnia, from Buffalo to Goderich, from Richmond to the boundary line of Maine, &c., thereby running through the several military districts in the two provinces, was made a distinct organisation, and by general order, July 6, 1866, the brigade was removed from any then existing brigade district, and placed directly under the Militia department at Head-quarters.

The Grand Trunk Railway brigade is under the immediate command of Lieut.-colonel Brydges, by whom it was originally formed, and has been maintained in a high state of efficiency ever since; there are very many men in its ranks who have formerly served in the regular army, and the value of this organisation for the protection of its own line of railway, and in expediting, in time of trouble, the transport of men and material, will be very great.

TARGET PRACTICE AND RIFLE MATCHES.

From returns received at Head-quarters, to 1st January, 1870, it appears that 181 rifle matches took place during 1869. The arm chiefly used was the Government Snider-Enfield Rifle. There was an increase in 1869 of 64 matches over 117 reported for 1868.

In connection with this subject, which is one of great importance for the defence of the country, every effort should be made to extend and popularize the practice of rifle shooting, and it is not too much to affirm, that, if all the young men of the Dominion were skilled in the use of the rifle, an attack upon the country by any enemy would be a serious matter.

The effect produced by the formation of the Dominion Rifle association, and the many other rifle associations that have sprung therefrom, in introducing the practice of rifle shooting, and fostering a spirit of competition therein, has been attended with much good; but, as was naturally to be expected, the practical result from the Dominion association has been to train a few highly skilled individual marksmen, who have, from time to time, moved through the country attending these matches, taking the very handsome prizes offered for competition. The effect upon the Militia has been hitherto but slight.

By furnishing targets to every battalion and company at Head-quarters, and distributing prizes throughout the corps of the Active militia, the result desired (diffusion of a general knowledge of the use of arms) would, doubtless, ultimately be obtained. All that is necessary to enable a man to become a good practical shot is to teach him:

1. Position drill, which he can learn when being instructed in the manual and platoon exercises.
2. That he should be shown and learn how to align the back and front sights of his rifle, upon the object aimed at.
3. Not to wink or shut his eye, when he pulls the trigger.
4. Not to pull the trigger with a jerk, but with a steady pressure of the finger.

5. To hold the sight of the rifle perpendicularly, that is, inclining neither to the right, nor to the left.

Attention to these five simple rules, with some power of judging distance, and a knowledge of the influence of wind on the flight of a bullet, is all that is required.

The explosion of the charge has a tendency to throw the muzzle up, and bullet high; to counteract this, press centre of heel plate firmly to the shoulder. The sun shining from left, lights up right side of back notch, and left side of foresight; if these spots are aligned on the mark, the ball will go to the left, and vice versa.

On a careful consideration of the present Militia law, there can be no doubt but that it insures a just and equitable pressure of the burden of military service for the defence of the country on the people, and it will compare most favorably with the militia law of any other country, and certainly with the volunteer system at present prevailing in England which cannot be said to be as efficient in point of organisation. Under the existing act, the Militia of Canada is capable of being developed, whenever the country requires it, into a great and a powerful army, with the simplest, fairest, and best means of swelling the ranks of its active force from the very large reserve of enrolled men.

It is said that in Prussia, the war minister has but to ring his bell and an army of more than 300,000 men, fully equipped and complete in all appliances, and in all departments, with ample reserves to refill its ranks, would be instantly ready at the call, and the military system of that country is justly considered a triumph in organisation.

Although as yet the military system of Canada is in its infancy, it may be said at all events with equal truth, that if required for the defence of the country, the commander-in-chief has but to give the order, and in a very few hours more than 40,000 men of the Active militia, who are at least admirably armed, would stand forth to form the first line of defence, animated with as much courage and determination to defend their Queen and country, as has ever been exhibited by any nation, and their ranks might be hourly swelled by men from the Reserve Militia.

It may be interesting to note, in connection with the foregoing remarks of the Adjutant-General, the increase in the Volunteer force within seven years. On the 3rd May, 1862, the effective Volunteer force, for former Province of Canada, was 11,940. On the 9th February, 1863, it was 25,010. In May, 1869, the total for the Dominion was 37,170. Of this number 2,717 were for New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.
