COUNTY NEWS.

BROOKSBURY.—The Brooksbury Bury Farmers' Club are arranging to hold an exhibition of cattle, farm and dairy produce on the 5th of October, prizes list of which will be ready in a few days. A picnic will be held on the tenth of August under the auspices of the above club in the sugar grove of Mr. James Joyce at 10 o'clock a. m. to which the public are cordially invited.

East Hatley.

The Methodist Sabbath School have arranged to hold their annual picnic at Bacon's Bay, on Saturday, Aug. 5th. Other schools in the county or neighboring counties which have not yet had their outing are invited to "join in" on that day and have a general picnic. It would seem that as there is a county S. S. Organization that arrangements should be made early in the season for a Union Picnic. Perhaps this will be done next year. In the meantime lets do what we can in that direction with the limited time at our command.

Flodden

There is scarcely any news to write, most every one is so busy at their haying. The hay crop is excellent about here and the greatest part has been cut in good season. The weather for the last few days has been dull. Other crops are looking well, especially potatoes. Mr. A. Carruth is at home having. Mrs. A. Gilbert Nicholson, who has been ill so long, is somewhat better and went to stay at her sister's place at Richmond. We hope the change may do her good. The Orford Mountain Railway Co. is moving a lot of bark and lumber from Kingsbury and other parts along their line. Today it is quite cool.

Compton.

The past few days have been most unfavorable for haying; very few of the farmers have finished; they report an extra good crop. The "Oriental" is the name of the new hotel; we expect it will dazzle the eyes of all that behold it with Eastern splendor and magnificence. Mr. J. Furze is still confined to his bed. Will Craig has gone to the North West. Mr. S. Todd has bought the George Rea house. Mrs. and Miss Todd have gone to Lawrence. Miss S. Bliss is in Richmond, attending the County Convention of the W. C. T. U. A. L. Pomeroy is the mayor of the town; the members of the council are M. Blosson, D. Saulty, A. A. Pomeroy, W. Paige, A. Rea and N. Drolet.

Island Pond, Vt

The whistle at the canning factory was sounded for the first time last Friday and they commence operations this week. If beef shanks are worth eight cents per lb and clay pipes one cent apiece, how much would a fore quarter of hog be worth delivered at Island Pond less the freight? Perhaps Dixville could answer as that is quite a place for conundrums. Frank Norton and wife are home for a two weeks vacation from Hartford, Conn. J. H. Cade and wife formerly of Island Pond, are home on a visit. C. N. Remick of Barnston, was here for a short time last Friday on his way to Brunswick Springs. Mark Moulton of Island Pond in the employ of the Wild River Lumber Co., of Hastings, Me., had the misfortune to lose all of his fingers on his right hand one day last week by coming in contact with a small saw.

Waterville.

Miss Minnie Ball from Montreal, formerly of this place has been making a short visit amongst her many friends here. The Rev. Mr. Craik is expected home to preach in his (Congregational) Church next Sunday. Mr. F. Lewis, foreman at the Gale factory, has gone to England on business for the firm, going on the same steamer as Lord Derby. Our old neighbors Mr. and Mrs. W. Ladd have been for the past few days visiting their friends at Fitch Bay and Georgetown. Mr. D. McLean, our honest miller, with his family and some friends have gone to Perkins Point, on Lake Massawippi, for a two weeks camp out. The Trues and Parkers intend going to camp near North Hatley. Mrs. Somerville, the Misses McIntosh, Messrs H. Somerville, W. Roden, and W. Draper go to-day to Bacon's Bay for a fortnight's outing. The Rev. T. L. Ball, missionary of Nicolet and Louisville held morning service in St. Johns Church last Sunday, preaching from "Our Lord's parable of the marriage supper." (St. Luke 14th chap., 15th verse.) After the service was a celebration of the Holy Communion. Tuesday the 25th being St. James day, the Rev. E. A. W. King held morning service with Holy Communion. The services of the Church of England, Waterville Mission July 30th are at North Hatley 10 30 a. m.; at Waterville, Bible Class and Sunday School at 2.15, service at three; and at Eastia at 7 p. m.

Ulverton.

HUNTER PATON NUPTIALS.—A marriage was solemnized at Vancouver, B. C. on Wednesday evening, July 5th, by the Rev. Coverdale Watson, pastor of the Homer Street Methodist Church, assisted by Rev. J. W. Pedley, of the first Congregational Church, at the residence of the bride's brother-in-law, Mr. T. A. Fee, 914 Howe Street, between Mr. Samuel Hunter of the firm of Hunter Bros., and Miss Amanda Victoria Paton youngest daughter of the late Mr. Adam Paton of Ulverton, Quebec.

The wedding was a quiet one, only intimate friends of the bride and bridegroom being invited, but numerous and valuable presents testified to the esteem held for the young couple by their many friends. The bride looked charming in a dress of rich cream silk with roses in her hair, and carried a magnificent bridal bouquet, sent by the Rev. E. Robson, of Victoria, who was unable to be present. After the ceremony, about thirty guests sat down to a sumptuous supper and at 1 30 a. m. the happy couple took their departure amidst a shower of rice and well wishes. Mr. and Mrs. Hunter will continue to reside in the city at a 747 Hamilton Street.

Strange Death.

D. McIntyre, a clerk employed by Mr. John McFadden at Bishop's Crossing, went to Montreal last Wednesday, registering at the "London House" as D. McIntyre, Sherbrooke. McIntyre, who was a middle aged man and a hunchback, told the proprietor that he was going to the World's Fair, but that he would spend a day or two at Malone, N. Y. first. He went there and returned on Thursday night, saying that he would go to Chicago on Friday evening. He drank considerably on Friday and went to the station in time for the express. An hour later one of the employees of the London House found him sitting on the steps of a car asleep. He shook him, waking him, and asked what he was doing there. McIntyre replied: "I am waiting for the train to start." The hotel man explained that the Chicago train had gone, and took him back to the house. On Saturday McIntyre said he would leave on Sunday night, and did some drinking during the day. The bartender saw him with a suspicious looking character at the barn, in the rear of the hotel, and drove him away. McIntyre, in the presence of another witness, gave a twenty dollar gold piece to the clerk to take care of, and an hour or two later, in the presence of the same witness, the money was returned. The last seen of him alive by any of the hotel employees was on Sunday morning, when he left his room to go down stairs.

A traveller, who was stopping at the hotel, saw McIntyre sitting apparently asleep in a chair, in a room used only for washing purposes, about ten o'clock on Sunday morning. He noticed that the position was rather a peculiar one, but he thought it due to the man's deformity. At noon he saw him still in the same position, and at night also. The next morning he went on purpose to the room, and finding the man in the same position, notified the hotel authorities, who found that the man was dead. All the money he had left out of the twenty dollar gold piece was $2.10. He also had a draft for $40, payable in Chicago, and his watch and papers were safe.

Dr. Wyatt Johnson held an autopsy this morning and found that deceased had been suffering from congestion of the lungs. He had also taken narcotics but the doctor did not think in sufficient quantity to cause death. The nature of the narcotic could not be determined without an analysis, which requires the permission of the Attorney-General.

The inquest on the body was continued at the Notre Dame Hospital Thursday morning. McIntyre had paid his board at the London House, one dollar a day, and had not spent more than that amount each day at the bar. He had been drinking heavily while there but the clerk had not seen him insensibly drunk. He was found sitting in the corner of an "L" shaped room, where it was impossible to see him without going over to the spot.

Mr. J. McFadden, merchant, of Bishop's Crossing, testified that deceased had been employed by him as clerk for the last eleven years. He was about forty years of age, unmarried, and was of sober habits. He left with the intention of going to Chicago, and had about $150 in his possession at the time. The money included three twenty-dollar gold pieces and a British sovereign. Some of this money might be in the valise which had been forwarded to Chicago.

Coroner McMahon had obtained permission from the Attorney-General to have the contents of the stomach analyzed, but the analysis was not finished, so the inquest was adjourned until last evening.

Mr. McFadden was to bring the body home with him for interment.

District of St. Francis Medical Association.

According to a resolution carried at its last meeting, held at Sherbrooke, on Sept. 6th 1892, this association met at the Park House, Magog, P. Q., on the 27th ult.

F. J. Austin, M. D., the president, in the chair; meeting opened at 2.30 p. m. with the following attendance:

Dr. Thos. LaRue, Coaticook; G. A. Bowen, W. W. Chalmers, A. G. H. Beique, J. O. Goyette, Magog; J. D. A. McDonald, F. J. Austin, W. A. Farwell, C. J. Edgar, J. O. Camirand, Sherbrooke; H. R. Codd, Fitchburg, P. Q.

The minutes of the last meeting having been read and found correct the following members were put upon the roll of this association: J. D. A. McDonald M. D., Sherbrooke; G. A. Bowen M. D., J. O. Goyette M. D. and A. G. H. Beique M. D., Magog P. Q., all of whom were unanimously elected.

The secretary then read a very valuable and well written paper by Dr. W. D. Smith of Sherbrooke who was unavoidably absent. Dr. Smith's paper treated of "Nasal Catarrh" in all its different forms and touched upon all points of difficulty as to diagnosis, prognosis and treatment. The Dr. deserves great credit for this essay in which he has condensed all the important matter relating to this troublesome and rebellious disease, combining with concision great clearness and precision.

F. J. Austin, M. D., of Sherbrooke, on "Haemophilia" or the hereditary haemorrhagic diathesis, read a carefully written paper which is replete with information, much of which has been obtained from observations in the Dr.'s practice. The hereditary character of this disease is well shown by cases met with in practice by Dr. J. D. A. McDonald, Thos. LaRue, Edgar, Camirand, etc., though such cases are of rather rare occurrence in Canada.

Dr. J. A. M. Ellis, of Sherbrooke, having been called away at the last moment, the secretary was called upon to read his paper on "Acute Articular Rheumatism," in which he expounds his own theories and views, as well as his mode of treatment. This exhaustive essay goes thoroughly into the etiology, diagnosis and treatment of acute rheumatism, as well as the complications and sequelae, and was followed by a keen discussion in which Dr. Austin, LaRue, Edgar, Farwell, Chalmers, Beique and Camirand took an active part.

G. J. Edgar, M. D., of Sherbrooke, then favoured the meeting with some very interesting and highly useful remarks, his subject being "Dollars and Cents in Medicine." The Dr. points out that the medical man is supposed to do a great deal for charity which fall only upon his shoulders, but which should be participated in by the community at large. The medical man is taxed more than any other rate-payer and besides is almost forced by his position and profession, by the community, who look upon him as being the horn of plenty to the needy, to minister to the wants of paupers who should be cared for by the same community. Dr. Edgar concluded his remarks by saying that this state of things should not exist and invites his conferees to join hands in endeavouring to bring it to an end.

A hearty vote of thanks having been tendered the lecturers the meeting adjourned to the first week in September, the exact date of the meeting to be indicated by the Secretary.

J. O. CAMIRAND M. D. Sec.-Treas. D. of St. F. Medical Association.

Lacrosse.

"CAPITALS" VS. "SHAMROCKS"—CAPITALS TAKE SIX TO ONE.

Ottawa, July 22.—The Montreal Star correspondent says: "That was the fastest and greatest game of lacrosse I ever saw," was the expression of many who saw the Capitals and Shamrocks struggle here to-day, and all this for only 15 1/2 minutes' actual play. It was grand lacrosse and no mistake. The two teams had their full strength on and the men were carefully trained and in the pink of condition. An hour before the match it rained heavily, but when Sir Adolphe Caron faced the ball, the weather was grand and the grounds in good condition. The attendance was large and the excitement at fever heat. Nearly six thousand people were in attendance. From the start of the match the Capitals had much the best of the play. Every one of the twenty-four men on the field was dangerous. The strong Capital defence had the Shamrock home closely checked up. Devine played the game of his life on O'Meara and the famous Shamrock home player was rendered almost useless. The field in both sides also did little but that little they did well. Kelly worked like a horse, and he and Bissonette kept close watch on one another.

The weakness of the Shamrocks was in their defence. Fast and sturdy as they undoubtedly are, and in the very best condition, they were unable to cope with the phenomenal play of the Capital home. They never played like it before, and if they can again they can wipe the earth with anything in sight.

Every game was a rush, and almost every shot was a straight one and scored a goal. It seemed an impossibility to cover them, and hard as the Shamrocks played at stages of the game they were unable to get near a man. They played good aggressive lacrosse too, and there was not time for any man on the team to get tired which no doubt accounted for the extreme speed of the game. When a home man got the ball he worked for the flag, and he could rely on being well backed up. Ross MacKenzie, who is an accepted judge of the game, said he never saw anything so fast in his life. The Shamrock home is a grand one, too, but they were too closely checked to be dangerous. Their chances were few, and only once did they get their combination properly at work, then they did just as nice a piece of team play as was possible to see, and they got the only goal.

There was little or no fouling, certainly nothing serious. Referee Pollock was prepared to be strict, but it was only at the end of the game that he had to warn Dwyer. Duggan was not a success in the flags, he had not speed enough behind, and on one or two occasions stayed at home when his play was to rush out. The visitors at a late stage made changes in the defence, but it was unavailing.

When the teams lined up they were as follows:

"Shamrocks"	Position	"Capitals"	Position
Duggan	Goal	Carson	Crown
Murray	Point	Patterson	Point

Moore	Defence field	Devine	Defence field

CHAPTER XVII.

Having reaped and garnered, bring the plough. And draw new furrows 'neath the leaden sun. And plant the great Hereafter in this Now. Her soul was stirring gently as a bird Stirs in its nest, about to take its flight To brighter lands.

Matthew reached Harribee on the twenty-sixth; David not until the noon hour of the twenty-seventh. He was in his uniform, and Faith thought she had never seen a lordlier looking youth. Phemie watched him with speechless admiration. There was not a servant on the farm who had not a hearty pride in this revelation of military splendor and authority. It was the form of power which they had an instinctive admiration for, and yet were unfamiliar with.

In the moment of his arrival he understood that he had been summoned for some very important reason. Faith was white with emotion, her hands trembled, her voice was full of tears, as she led the young man to the best parlor, which had been opened and warmed for this interview. They sat down together at a table on which the family Bible was lying, Faith facing her nephews. After a moment's pause, she said:—"My dear lady, you have come to the gravest hour of your lives." Then, with a pathetic seriousness, she told them the long sad story of sin and remorse. At first she had not intended to compromise Lord Graeme, but as she spoke she forgot everything but the truth; and in the light of truth the man's condition and atonement seemed to her grand enough to cancel his fault.

At this point she faltered and broke down; and the young men drew close to her, and soothed her with gentle words and assurances, and more than all, with outspoken praises of the one who had wronged them. It was a sorrowful, shameful tale to tell, and Faith suffered almost as much as if she had been the wrongdoer. But when it was told, she looked straight into David's and Matthew's faces, and that look gave her an instant sense of sympathy and relief. "I hope you dinna think I have done wrong to you in keeping back the news."

"You have acted wisely and kindly, Aunt Faith," said David. "Even a year ago, I might have been tempted to decide as I would soon to decide now. As far as I am concerned, I will do as my brave-hearted father did—make my own living, and carve my own name. I have been among lords in Edinburgh and Stirling. I think little of them. What honor is there in the name of a dead man won? I will only have the title which I can win for myself."

Faith looked proudly at him, and then glanced at Matthew, who sat with eyes downcast upon the table. "Matthew," she said, "you are next heir to David. If David should die and leave no son, you would be lord of Graeme."

"I will not think of honor or increase that is to come by David's death. Those are, but few kind words, Matthew. You be to think of every sine of this question now; you canna alter your decision in after years. Are you quite willing to give up such prospects as are yours in this matter? If not then David will have no power to resign a position which cleaves your rights as well as his own."

pride, but for my gude repose in my late days." David rose at once. "I will go now. The sooner we can bury the subject for ever the better, dear aunt. And oh, how proud I am of your prudence, your kindness, and your wise love for me!" He put his handsome head down and kissed her fondly, and Matthew clasped her hands and said words just as loving and grateful.

Then Faith rose up with a bright face, and said, "To-day I feel very proud and well contented. Now I will go to my ain room. It is a sort of giving up my stewardship, and I canna be happy till I have also His 'Well done.'"

Then the young men went to the stables together. David would ride at once to Seaton Court, and Matthew followed him, full of a new idea which he could not well express for a moment or two. But as David was leaving the yard he stopped him and asked, "Have you both packages of papers with you?"

"Yes; I have both." "Let me keep the originals until you return. When you have had an interview with Lady Seaton, you will know better if it is wise to give her them. Remember, they are all we have to prove our father's honorable birth, and to defend our aunt against the insinuations or the open charges which defeated malice or ungenerous obligation may choose to make. Take my advice David."

"Very well, I will." Then he examined the papers, and gave Matthew the packet containing the original proofs.

At Seaton Court Lady Seaton was watching for his visit. She had contrived to send Lord Seaton to Graeme. She thought she was fully prepared for the very worst that could happen. When David was introduced to her presence, she met him with an air of painful interrogatory; and as soon as the servant had retired, she said, "Captain Graeme there is no necessity for us to exchange empty compliments. You understand, I know, that your claim clashes with the claim of my son?"

"It shall do so no longer, Lady Seaton. I have come to assure you of my unwillingness to disturb in any way the presumed succession. Not for all the lordships in Scotland would I have my Aunt Faith's name brought into public dispute, or her most pure motives misjudged. Nevertheless, my claim is a just one, as these papers will prove to you."

She took them eagerly, glanced at their captions, and then, turning rapidly round, flung them into the blazing fire. She was quite prepared to stand guard over their destruction if necessary, but David made not the slightest attempt to rescue them. Still she saw, when she faced him again, the wavering shadow of his contempt, and she answered it defiantly: "No one has injured your aunt's pure name. As for her pure motives, allow me to judge them as I please. Her influence over my brother was a sort of witchcraft. She could have made him write—or forge—any paper she wanted. Poor Tibbert! Ah! his death was a merciful one for himself!"

"Lady Seaton, I have one condition to make with you." "Sir, I will make no conditions with you," and she laughed mockingly, and looked at the filmy ash, which was all that remained of the burnt papers.

"Then will you consider my relinquish me; null and void. I can at least take you to make conditions with the law." "You should have kept your proofs, sir."

"I have kept them. The papers you burnt were only copies of the originals. You can have another set from Sandy Todd."

She started to her feet in a fury of passion, and David was compelled to hear silently her violent words. When she paused, he inquired again, "Will you listen to my conditions Lady Seaton?" "What have you got so say?" "I insist that you shall neither by word nor look insinuate or declare anything likely to annoy my aunt, Miss Harribee. If you do, then I will re-assess my right, and make your restitution of the most perfect kind. And though I may go far away from here, my brother stays in Harribee, and he will watch and listen as I would watch and listen. So then Lady Seaton, beware of your words, and even of your looks, for I vow that you hold Graeme for your son on your own good behavior."

and gave her the few delicate morsels she could eat. It was, perhaps, the proudest moment of Phemie's life, and she looked with an adoring affection on the hand some young soldier.

The Seaton's were put out of every one's thoughts. David had made himself familiar with the history of his famous regiment, and Faith and Matthew set listening with glowing faces to the story of its doings in modern times; how it had fought under Preston in the American war, where its unfortunate Major Andre so sadly perished; how Lord John Ephinstone had led it on the plains of Egypt; and the border gentleman, Maxwell, through the horrors of Corunna; and how in China it had won the dragon that adorned its colors.

"They are braw, braw lads!" cried Faith, proudly, "and I am weel pleased that my lad is one of them."

But it was a still prouder day when the little stone ark was finished, and the Rev. Matthew Harribee preached to a congregation of plain thoughtful shepherds and farmers his first sermon. The ecclesiastical spirit of his race had culminated in Matthew Harribee. He was a minister after these men's own hearts. The extreme doctrines of John Calvin were neither blinked nor clipped by him, and his flock were fed, as Faith wished they should be, with the strong meat of the Word. And Faith was a true woman. She liked a man whom she could honor and look up to, and in some measure obey; so Matthew after this first sermon was an indisputable authority to her.

Chance came with every year. First Phemie went peacefully away. Faith and Matthew sat with her through her last earthly night, and just before the great change came, Matthew asked, "How are you feeling now, Phemie?" "Weel, vera weel, Minister; just a bit confused wi' the flitting."

Then Matthew married a good bonnie girl with both land and siller, and a new wing was built to Harribee; and the minister's study and the pretty parlors and sleeping rooms were just a wonder to the simple shepherds.

But Faith did not grow to the changes that were as inevitable as the law of progress. As her old servants died she began to be aware that she was lonely, in spite of the new ties trying to clasp her on every side. She loved Matthew's boys and girls dearly, but not as she had loved Matthew himself, and his brother David. The tints of earth grew paler, its affections less potent. Spring was not so joyous, summer was not so brilliant, nor autumn so wealthy, nor winter so stimulating.

Still, if she had outgrown the vividness of her joys, she had also outlived the bitterness of every sorrow. Upon her lips prayer and supplication had insensibly turned to praise. But such changes, sharply defined by a few words were in reality hardly perceptible to those constantly around her. True, she went very seldom upon the fell. She had less color in her cheeks and more snow upon her hair; but these things were but natural symptoms of advancing age. Not even Matthew or his wife Jean, noticed them particularly. And she never spoke of that singular feeling in her own heart—that feeling which all true workers have welcomed when their task was nearly done; that sense of pleasant weariness when the last chapter of the book is finished, the last touch added to the painting, the last clear upon the farm; that fit of accomplishment on any true labor which always brings the secret of the Master's approval.

One morning, just at that time when Englishmen were clamoring for an Abyssinian war, David suddenly appeared at Harribee. He had brought his own news, not having time to write. The Camerunians were under orders for the mystical old African land, and he was full of military ardor. If Faith loved either of her boys better than the other, it was David Graeme. His visit was the highest grace life could now give her. They had some hours of sweetest communion; some short pilgrimages to all the spots upon the hills sacred to the memories of joys past over. And they drove as far as Graeme Castle and round by Seaton Court, and perhaps drew closer to each other, because they did not chatter away the emotions in their hearts. Indeed, their conversation referring to the past was of the most fragmentary character, but it was sufficient for their peace and confidence.

"You have not regretted, David?" and Faith looked from the grey old castle into the young soldier's face. "I have not had a moment's serious regret. Remember what I have seen; where I am now going; the life of honorable labor and change I have had. You know the contrast. I have the best lot."

"When I am dead let Lady Seaton have the papers." "If you wish it." "Who can injure the dead? And I forgive her."

"She might say evil of you." "I shall be far beyond her power." "It might annoy Matthew." "True! Then if Matthew is willing give her the papers with a kind word from me."

"We will do what you wish, dear aunt." When she bade David farewell, she felt it to be her final one. In spite of everybody's efforts, an irresponsible sadness pervaded the parting. Matthew thought it was in his brother. "I noticed a shadow on his face all the time, aunt. Does he regret what he resigned?" "Oh, no! It is not that. The lad is bearing a sorrow vera few hearts escape. He has been deceived by his first love—a bit silly lass left him for an earl said enough to so her father. But our David is one to cry long after a false love. He kens weel that our ain love is but a small part of life. There is the love of God and man. There is duty, and honor, and honest work, and the saving of honest siller. But my heart aches with his heart," she said softly; "it is sair pain to thole while it lasts."

One July morning she received a letter from David. It was a very exciting one, full of adventures strange and wonderful as an Arabian tale. Her cheeks flushed and her eyes sparkled to his enthusiasm. She sat musing about it hour after hour, once or twice surprising every one by singing softly a verse or two of some old border ballad. In the afternoon she walked far up the hills, even to the Preachers' Stone, and came home weary, and yet with a singular gaiety of spirits. The baby her own nameake, was sleeping in the cradle. She took her knitting and sat down beside it, and Matthew, passing through the room noticed the stillness and happiness of her countenance. He did not speak to her, for he thought in his heart, "She is praying."

Thus, while her work was in her hands, ere suffering or decay had touched her, a word was brought to her—the King himself desired her presence. She went instantaneously, with without any consciousness of pain or parting. It was as if death had gently hastened her, "the King's command being urgent," and she, with that alert obedience she loved, had answered, "Lord, here am I."

They buried her among the generations of her own people, in the kirkyard on the Fells. The great sycamores whisper about her grave, and the steadfast hills are around about it; but— Her soul, her body's guest, Is hence ascended, whither, neither Time, Nor Faith, nor Hope, but only Love can climb.

Question of the Day.

Asked.—Where can I find a home? Can I make a living? Where can I, with my family, find the necessities of life, assured that at the end of it I can leave behind a decent inheritance? To what I go and find good land on terms so liberal that I may get a portion of it without owing myself a cent, which I can pay off? Where can I find such land on these terms and safe from crop failure? allow me to devote myself to any branch of agriculture for which I may be fitted.

Wanted in a few words. Get a home in your State of Minnesota. It never crops failure—where land values are rising rapidly. HOW HANLAN TRAINS.

HIS INTERESTING ROUTINE AS RELATED BY HIMSELF.

Short Races Are Hard—Rules About Diet

—Position in the Shell—Machines of no Use in Learning—How Amateur Oarsmen are Injured.

About two months and a half before a great race I begin to roll tennins. Then I take in each hand a spin ball weighing 18 pounds and throw it over my head 600 or 700 times in 40 minutes, making about 10,000 or 12,000 pounds weight. In addition to this exercise I walk about 20 miles a day. I pursue this course of exercise about two months before the rowing exercise. I row from 15 to 20 miles a day, dividing the work between morning and afternoon. I row pretty strong and generally take off two or three pounds at the beginning of my work. I never have to take off more than 20 pounds. I have been training for about 17 years, and my constitution is as strong now as it ever was, and this I attribute to the good care I take of myself.

When I commence training, I go at it easy, every day gradually adding to my work, exercising a little harder each day up to near the day of the race, when I ease up on my work.

I have no particular rules about eating. I eat good wholesome food and drink a little Bass ale every day, taking it after each rowing exercise. Some men can do without a beverage, but I work hard and believe I should have something to sweat out; besides ale is strengthening. I drink tea three times a day. My theory about training is very simple: A man should have plenty to eat, plenty of sleep, and then he will be able to do plenty of work. A man should not stint himself in eating or sleeping.

I am asked what is the proper position in rowing. The answer is that a man should sit naturally in the boat—sit as he would at his dinner table. Sit with your legs not close together or spread out, but about 10 inches apart. When I reach forward with my arms in the return stroke, my knees come up under my armpits. By spreading your legs sufficiently apart you do not cramp your stomach. If you sit unnaturally with your legs too close together you squeeze your stomach. To reach too far out is not natural. The theory of rowing is to bring everything in line. Put the oar in the water naturally, but put it in hard with the idea that it must do some good.

I do not think rowing machines are of any use for professional scullers. They are good enough for the purpose of exercise. Rowing in a tank is much better, because there a man can actually sit in a boat and get the real motion of the water. But you cannot teach a man how to row on a rowing machine. When he gets into a boat after practicing on such a machine, he will know no more about actual rowing than before he started. To be a good oarsman you must practice in a boat on the water. There you will learn how to sit properly and how to balance your boat. It is not mere strength and pulling hard through the water that makes a good sculler; it is knowing how to take the oar out of the water and carry it forward to the next stroke.

My theory of rowing is very simple. I use a boat, we will say, that weighs from 26 to 30 pounds. I am sculling along at the rate of 28 to 35 strokes a minute. If I disturb the water in any way I have got to bring myself in agreement with my boat. In other words, the man must continually seek to master the boat; failing to do so he is not rowing properly; the man is so much heavier than the boat that the boat will not respond to you. If you come to a halt the boat will come to a halt. Lean a little on one side and she will go to one side. The boat being lighter than you are you have got to manage the boat; if the boat were heavier, you could turn summersaults and it would have no effect on the boat.

Suppose the boat is 31 feet long, 24 inches deep at the stern, 34 inches deep at the bow, and 6 inches at the center. She weighs 30 pounds; I weigh 160. In reaching forward for my stroke I once noticed, the stern of the boat go into the water, argued to myself that if the stern went down in the water the bow must come up. I came to the conclusion that I was not running the boat on the lines on which she was built. I practiced over seven months before I got the stern of the boat in the proper position. Once the stern was right the boat went perfectly straight. I always watched the stern. For eight years I was champion of the world, winning many races, but it is only of late years that people have understood my method of sculling.

There is very little difference in the style of rowing between Englishmen and Americans. Not long ago Bob Cook, the trainer of Yale college men, introduced a new stroke. I have not lately seen the Yale crew row, and therefore cannot give a decided opinion on this stroke, but from what I have heard about it, I think it is to be commended.

The stroke consists of a quick forward movement, a very slow recovery and a hard finish. Where speed is got out of this Yale stroke is not by throwing the body forward, but the arms and feet forward, the body being brought up slowly; in that way the body can keep up any stroke. But this method would not do for single-scull rowing, because the body motion forward is a little too slow. Nor would it be good for four-oared racing, but for eight-oared racing I think it is the best system we have.

People sometimes ask me how I feel at the end of a race and what effect the exercise has upon my heart. I simply feel tired and do not notice any effect on my heart. If a man is in good health and has been properly trained, his heart will not beat unusually quick. Doctors have examined me immediately before I have gone into a race and have found my heart pulsations to be 74, and at the finish, after rowing four or five miles as hard as I could, the rate would be 76.

I have rowed 850 races. When I am engaged in a contest I start off at the rate of about 30 or 40 strokes a minute. I will keep that rate for two or three miles, then slacken down to 34 or 33, and finish at 30.

Ripans Tablets are always ready

I make the greatest number of strokes at the beginning of the race. Oarsmen who are contesting always do their best at the first. Sometimes I have rowed as high as 75 strokes a minute, but I would not make any greater progress than if I made 30 or 34.

The sliding seat has been a great boon to oarsmen. Before that was invented men were apt to injure themselves for the reason that the upper portion of the body from the hip up, did all the exercise while the lower portion of the body was not doing anything. As a consequence many men suffered from heart troubles. Now the legs assist the upper portion of the body and the sculler pulls a long, steady pull. I have not heard of a good rower dying of heart disease for the last twenty years.

We have also improved in the matter of speed. Fifteen or sixteen years ago if a man could row three miles (one and a half and return) in 22 minutes and 30 seconds he was good enough to be a champion. At the present time a good oarsman can cover that distance in 19 minutes and 20 seconds. We may yet attain a still greater speed in the future. I do not think we have to-day any greater men. From a physical point of view the men of 20 years ago were as great as they are to-day, but our rowing appliances are very much better. First we had the stationary seat, then the sliding seat and now for the last ten years, the roller seat. The time gained in using the roller seat instead of a stationary seat is about a minute and a half or two minutes in three miles.

The fin is another useful contrivance. The fin is a piece of steel about six inches long by three inches deep. It is placed in the bottom of the boat and steadies it in the water. The fin bears the same relation to a row boat that a center-board does to a sail boat. The advantage gained in time by the use of this contrivance is about 15 seconds in three miles.

The use of the curved oars is also a great improvement, the advantage being in the catch rather than at the finish. The advantage in time over straight oars is about a minute in three miles or a distance of 200 yards.

The shortest races are the hardest ones to row because both men buckle right down to work at the outset and keep it in hammer and tongs fashion up to the finish. You have no time to get into any particular form or carry out any theories you have in regard to rowing. You must keep right at your work and get ahead as fast as possible. In a long race it doesn't make much difference whether you are half a length, or two lengths behind your opponent, because you will have a chance to make it up. I always row a quarter of a mile race at a quicker rate of speed than a five-mile race. I have won 50 five-mile races and they have been the easiest contests in which I have engaged.

I have been asked if I reserve my forces for the finish. You will not think about reserving force if you find the other man right alongside of you in a race. As I have already said the hardest work is nearly always done at the beginning of the race, and even when your opponent is alongside of you it is not always advisable to make an extra exertion to beat him, unless you are near the finish; for oftentimes you only exhaust your strength in the middle of the contest.

Of all exercises I think rowing is the best. It is good for women, but in practicing it they must not wear corsets; they should wear a loose dress. When people go to watering places it is surprising that they do not take advantage of the opportunities afforded for rowing. Instead of sitting around on the piazzas of the hotel they should get in a boat and row.

Though I think rowing is an excellent exercise for woman, I do not approve of their taking part in any racing contests. In fact, it would not be possible for a woman to train for such contests even if it were proper for them to engage in such competitions. Young men, amateur oarsmen, often hurt themselves in rowing in this way: They will row in an eight or four oared boat or a double scull. They have been used to a sedentary and inactive life all the winter. One man in the boat, however, is in much better condition; he has kept in practice all the winter. They generally make him the "stroke oar." Being well and strong he will compel the other men to overwork themselves, the result being that they may be laid up for months to come. There are many instances of young men being injured in that way. But a man is in very little danger of overdoing the exercise if he rows by himself; the work is so hard that he will not be likely to keep it up long.

EDWARD HANLAN.

Our City Gratified.

Inquisitive Stranger—Say, young fellow, what are you going to do with that sky rocket?

The Young Fellow (laconically)—Dig an artesian well.

A Celestial Celebration.

Hi, there!

Ah, there!

John is on a spree.

Merry?

Very.

Tanglefoot beats tea.

Hold him?

Scold him?

Hardly. 'Tis the day.

Melicans get gay.

So if John joins in.

His crackers to the din,

Drinks beer,

Makes cheer,

Lets his pigtail stream;

Dances,

Frances,

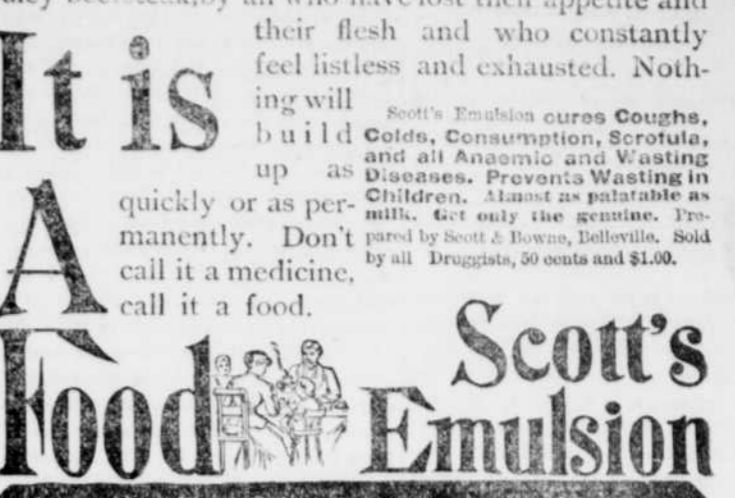

Hears the eagle scream;

Is jailed,

Then bailed.

He will only go through the annual experience of an innumerable caravan of white men who think the First of July was instituted specially for the benefit of bartenders and the distraction of a peace-loving public.

It should be taken as regularly and with as much relish as a well person would sit down to a juicy beefsteak, by all who have lost their appetite and their flesh and who constantly feel listless and exhausted. Nothing will build up as quickly or as permanently. Don't call it a medicine, call it a food.

READ WHAT MR. CRAWLEY SAYS:

GENTLEMEN,—I am happy to testify that I have used your Cough Syrup with the most effectual results. My daughter had the Measles, which left her with a frightful Cough. She had the best of doctors, but they said there was no cure for her, unless a voyage at sea would return her home. Accidentally at the church door I overheard two ladies praising Noyes' Cough Syrup, and asking how it had cured a certain person of consumption. I immediately procured a bottle and gave it to her as directed, and it perfectly cured her.

Yours respectfully, J. A. CRAWLEY.

THE FRENCH DEMANDS ON SIAM

This subject is just now the chief sensation in Europe and may lead to complications and difficulties of the most serious character. Siam, as most of our readers are aware, is a country of some commercial but very little political importance, situated in the South Eastern portion of Asia between the bay of Bengal and the China sea. France has certain territorial and trading rights in the country which have been regulated by treaty. Recently trouble has arisen between French subjects and the native Siamese resulting in acts of violence. The French Government has assumed a hostile and threatening attitude and has sent an ultimatum demanding that the Siamese evacuate a certain portion of territory to which France has no established claim, that a guarantee be given by the Siamese Government for the faithful performance of its treaty obligations, and that indemnity be paid for the outrages perpetrated by the Siamese upon the French. The Siamese Government has announced its willingness to accede to all the demands of the French Government, except the surrender of territory. The military power of Siam is extremely weak, the entire strength of its army being about 20,000 men, the greater part of whom could not be relied on for effective service, and if left to its own resources its conquest and absorption by France, who appears to be re-enacting the fable of the wolf and the lamb, would be a very simple affair. It is not very likely, however, that this will be allowed. England has a direct interest in preserving the independence of Siam, and China is supposed to be willing to offer her protection to her weaker neighbor. On the other hand Russia is said to have expressed her readiness to back up France's demands. There is a possibility of a terrible embargo, but we must hope that this war cloud, like many which have preceded it, may pass away.

CHEAP MONEY.

There is a large class of persons who appear to think that every ill under the sun can be cured by legislation. No greater ill exists than impecuniosity, and time and again the legislature has been invoked to get rid of this incubus by the creation of cheap money. We have had the irredeemable currency fad, the free silver fad, and most absurd of all the fad which attempts by legislation to restrict the rate of interest to be paid for the use of money. And now we have the "Patrons of Industry" endeavoring to work the legislative machine with a view to putting money into the pockets of those who have none. At a meeting of that organization recently held, the following resolution was adopted:

"That the welfare of Canada requires such a readjustment of her monetary system as shall insure to her varied industries a working currency at rates of interest not exceeding in the case of loans secured by real estate 3 1/2%, and by note or personal security 5 per cent. per annum.
 That her general interests, as well as the safety of her banks, require prompt action at the present time imperative to bring about increased production and sales to other countries, recognizing, as she must, the well known principle in political economy that when production is hindered by the cornering of money and high rates of interest, as in Canada, such system of banking as that of Canada can be operated with safety only under the shadow of a high protective tariff, hence the necessity of a large volume of currency per capita and lower rates of interest being assured to Canadian industries preparatory to safe entry on free trade lines.
 That it is the duty of the people of Canada to force upon the attention of Governments, Parliaments, and parties of the Dominion the necessity of carrying out their views; and to withhold or withdraw confidence from such as may appear, from want of will or ability, to be incapable of so adjusting her monetary system as to assure to all legitimate enterprise the use of money at such rates of interest as shall in no case exceed rates, for like purposes, in England, Belgium, Germany, or France, asserting here as a principle that the resources of a country associated with industry, thrift, and stability of government constitute the essential basis for a country's working currency. In this analysis Canada ought to have a medium of exchange greater in volume per capita and at lower rates of interest than the nations already named, while her volume per capita may be said to be less, and her rates of interest higher, by one hundred per cent.; that this unfortunate condition of affairs is the result of class legislation and monopoly laws for which our Provincial and Federal Parliaments are responsible.
 That partisan politicians are hereby directed to search amongst the doings of usury and extortion for the most direct causes of Canada's sparse population and paralyzed industries; and that any political party or statesman who assumes to deal with and remedy the evils of Canadian administration and laws, without special reference to her terrible monetary abuses, is unworthy of confidence."
 It is a pity that the framers of the foregoing resolution did not, whilst they were about it, go on to say that "Governments, Parliaments, &c." should reduce the price of beef to a cent a pound, flour to a dollar a barrel, and so forth. Such a reduction in price would be a great boon to the whole community with the trifling exception of those who had these commodities to sell, and the proposition is just as sensible and just as feasible as the attempt to fix a standard low rate of interest. When will people learn that commercial transactions are governed always and everywhere by the laws of supply and demand. Money in the old country can be borrowed at 3 1/2 per cent. or even lower because there is a superabundance of capital seeking employment. Here it is worth 5, 6, or 7 per cent. according to circumstances, simply because there is not enough of it in the country and capitalists if they are unable to get these rates on loans can and will employ their funds to better advantage elsewhere. The "Patrons" would like to have it made illegal for a mortgagee to take more than 3 1/2 per cent. for the use of money but they will hardly go the length of attempting to compel men who have money, to lend it at these rates, and unless they can do this their legislation would fail of the desired effect.

LAI D TO REST.

MGR. RACINE'S OBSEQUIES.
 On Monday afternoon at four o'clock the body of the late Bishop Racine was transferred from the private chapel in the Bishop's Palace to St. Michael's Cathedral. A long procession was formed of clergy and laity and the body was borne into the church with appropriate ceremonies. Bishop O'Reilly of New York delivered an oration taking for his text "The same yesterday to-day and forever," and proceeded to speak of the life and character of the late prelate. He also alluded to the accident to Bishop Racine whereby he was thrown from a carriage into a ditch, and sustained a great shock to his nervous system. The church was full of people.

THE BURIAL.

Tuesday forenoon, a little before nine o'clock the impressive funeral service began, being conducted by Archbishop Fabre, of Montreal, assisted by Rev. Messrs Plamondon and Martin. Prominent among the hundreds of clergy present to assist on the mournful occasion were Archbishop Duhamel of Ottawa, Bishops Lafliche, Morau, Gravel, Labrecque, Blais, Emard, Begin, Decolles, O'Reilly, Paquet, Lorrain, and l'abbé Chalifoux administrator of the diocese of Sherbrooke.

The large church was filled to the door by a sympathetic audience of all classes and ranks of the population of Sherbrooke, Catholic and Protestant. The ceremony occupied over an hour's time, when Rev. l'abbé Proulx of the Laval University, Montreal, an intimate friend of the dead bishop delivered an eloquent oration over the grave of his friend alluding to his many virtues and his deeds of love and charity.

The oration over, the last sad rites were performed, and amid the muffled roll of the organ and the deep toned clang of the bells of the city churches, and the bowed heads of the great congregation, all that was mortal of the first bishop of Sherbrooke was lowered into the vault beneath the choir of the church wherein he had so often performed, the service and where he had requested that his body be deposited, and all was over. The audience dispersed, and the large number of priests and visitors from Quebec and St. Hyacinthe, Montreal and adjacent points returned to their homes. The City Council attended in a body also the St. Joseph Society. The stores were generally closed throughout the city during the funeral, besides some of the factories.

The musical part of the service, which was very fine, was under the direction of Dr. J. O. Camrand, with a well trained choir of the Union Musicale of this city, and Mr. Edward Codere also of Sherbrooke ably presided at the organ.

The walls and galleries of the church were most tastefully and appropriately draped while appropriate mottoes were lettered on the sides.

The City Council of Sherbrooke at its last meeting adapted the following resolutions:

"That this Council has heard with the deepest sorrow and emotion of the sudden death of His Lordship Bishop Racine, of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Sherbrooke.

Not the members of this Council only, but every citizen of this city of every shade of religious thought, will mourn the death of a man so eminent for his charity and his personal piety.

It was impossible to know him, however slightly, without appreciating to the full his amiable character and genial qualities. That the members of this Council respectfully tender their heartfelt condolence to the bereaved relatives of the late Bishop as well as to the clergy by whom he was surrounded in this city who have aided him in his good work of maintaining a spirit of harmony amongst a population divided in religious views, and especially to the Grand Vicar, the Rev. Mr. Chalifoux, who so warmly and faithfully entered into the views of the deceased prelate.

That this Council attend in a body the funeral obsequies in view that they may thereby testify publicly their feelings of sympathy."

At a meeting of Branch Number 118 of the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association held at their Hall in the city of Sherbrooke on the nineteenth of July inst. the following resolutions were passed:

"That the members of this Branch have heard with deep regret of the death of His Lordship Monsignor Racine, First Bishop of Sherbrooke; whose great piety, charity and love for his flock, as well as his great zeal in the prosecution of good works have justly won for him the esteem of all who knew him.

That by the death of the worthy and venerable Bishop the Church loses one of her most distinguished sons and the causes of colonization and education an active and zealous worker.
 That the members of the Branch condole and sympathize with the clergy of this Diocese and the relatives of the illustrious and regretted bishop in their grief.
 That as a mark of respect for the memory of the illustrious and much regretted deceased bishop the members of this Branch will go into mourning for one month.

That copies of the present resolutions be sent to the Administrator of the Diocese and to the newspapers of the city for publication.

CITY ITEMS.

The weather since Saturday has been wet and cold.

The City are erecting a morgue in rear of No 3 Fire Station, King Street.

McDonald Bros. store was entered by some one recently from the rear and some fruit taken.

Mr. J. O. Duncan is making up the police suits which look very neat and are of excellent material, a blue black serge.

Burglar entered Mr. A. H. Camirand's Grain Store near the Paton Mills Saturday night and rifled the till of some $7 in change.

The police ran in four tramps Monday morning who were found in a freight car at the C.P.R. yards by Mr. McCarthy, the agent.

Gordon W. Lillie, Esq., "Pawnee Bill" was in town yesterday with his historical wild west show of Indians, Cowboys, Scouts, Hunters, etc.

On Sunday next at the Baptist Church the pastor, Rev. C. W. Townsend, will preach, the subjects being: morning, "A Glimpse of Glory;" evening, "A Night to be Remembered."

An old Sherbrooker writes from Quebec: "Crust of Society" is being played here this week. Everybody ought to attend it two or three times. The play is grand, and every member of the company is an artist.

A band of gypsies passed through town a few days ago and one of the horses appeared to be suffering from a very sore breast. Is there no authority for the police to detain persons who inflict wanton cruelty upon animals in this way.

A fire occurred at Theford Mines last week, some sheds belonging to the Bell Asbestos Co. being destroyed; the loss was some $4,000, partly covered by insurance. Mr. W. S. Dresser was down and adjusted the loss.

A resident of London street complained to the police this morning of a mean act perpetrated at his premises last night; the door of the outbuilding was forced open and several pet rabbits belonging to his children were killed.

We have received a copy of the prize list of the Montreal exhibition which takes place in that city Sept. 4th to 9th inclusive. The list of premiums offered is large in every department and will doubtless attract numerous local exhibitors. Copies of the list can be obtained on application to S. C. Stevenson, Manager and Secretary, Montreal.

Pawnee Bill's street parade was not very extensive yesterday but showed some good ponies. The exhibition gave a very vivid description of the Wild West mode of life, its habits and customs and drew good audiences both afternoon and evening. The riding and tumbling was exceptionally good.

The "Crust of Society," interpreted by Mr. John Stetson's admirable company will be the next attraction at the Rink Opera House, Monday and Tuesday. Wherever it has been presented the production has met with that same general praise with which it was received when it was first presented at the Globe Theatre, Boston, a few months ago. The theme has proven an interesting one and the adventure has been a most successful one, both from an artistic and financial point of view, to Mr. Stetson.

The great interest and importance of the work in which Miss Sugden is engaged should secure a large attendance. Children are specially invited.

Eastern Townships Fair.

By present appearances Sherbrooke's Exhibition for 1893 is likely to be more prosperous and successful than ever. The Secretary reports that many applications for space in Main Building have already come in, and the old Exhibitors are one by one being heard from, stating their intention of being on hand. The advertising matter is now all completed and Mr. Jewell will be on the road with his assistants and advertising wagons in a day or two.

As it is probable that some localities may be overlooked in advertising, the Secretary, Mr. Fraser would be glad to be notified in such cases as it is the intention of the Association to reach everyone within any reasonable distance.

Special Race Circulars are being prepared and may be had on application to the Secretary. The Races and Attractions are much more extensive than in former years. A full advertisement will appear in our next issue.

FACTS, FIGURES and FICTION.

"Hot!" "Well, I should rejoice to abhor."

Dr. Low's Worm Syrup removes worms of all kinds in children or adults.

Victoria Carbolic Salve cures cuts, burns, sores, bruises, wounds, chapped hands and cold sores.

Minard's Liniment is the Best.

Harsh Coughs, heavy colds, hoarseness, asthma and bronchitis cured by Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

Minard's Liniment is the Hair Restorer.

Milburn's Beef, Iron and Wine is recommended by physicians as the best.

She—"I wonder why they call these angel sleeves?" He—"What else could they be called when you wear them?"

Have You Headache?

Headache, which is usually a symptom of stomach trouble, constipation or liver complaint can be entirely cured by B. B. B. (Burdock Blood Bitters) because this medicine acts upon and regulates the stomach, liver, bowels and blood.

She—"I don't see why Miss Gobble should seem so attractive to all the gentlemen." He—"The doctor has forbidden her ever eating ice cream."

A Child Saved.

My little boy was taken very bad with diarrhea, he was very delicate and got so low we had no hope of his life, but a lady friend recommended Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and although he could only bear a few drops at a time he got well. It saved my child. Mrs. Wm. Stewart, Campbellville, Ont.

What made you think the collection was taken up to get the minister a new suit?" "Because so many of the congregation put in buttons."

It Saved His Life.

Gentlemen—I can recommend Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, for it saved my life when I was about six months old. We have used it in our family when required ever since, and it never fails to cure all summer complaints. I am now fourteen years of age. Francis Walsh, Dalkeith, Ont.

This is the time of year when we get out our trunks and don our last year's flannel suits—that is if we can get them on.

Another Record Made.

For nearly forty years Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been the leading and surest cure for cholera, colic, diarrhea, dysentery, and all summer complaints. It is a record to be proud of.

Not Likely—"Look here, now, when are you going to pay me the hundred marks I lent you six weeks ago?" "How can I tell? Do you take me for a prophet?"

Local Option.

This term should be applied to the choice every intelligent person has between Burdock Blood Bitters, the natural and certain remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation, headache and bad blood, and the various imitations offered by unscrupulous parties as being "just as good." There is nothing else as good as B. B. B. It is an honest medicine.

Kate—"I don't believe this fountain was designed by a woman, do you?" "Why?" "Well, I think it would have been for ice cream soda instead of water."

Editor—"Always write your jokes on the thinnest paper you can get."

Young Humorist—"Why?" "So I can see through them."

"I didn't know he was a story writer."

"Oh yes. Why, people who read his stories nearly go wild!"

"You don't say. How's that?"

"They always wind up with an advertisement."

To The Dead.

A person cured of Deafness and noises in the head of 23 years' standing by a Simple Remedy, will send a description of it free to any person who applies to Nicholson, 177, MacDougal St. New York.

No Voice in the Matter.—Editor—"The style of this article is too severe and stilted."

Young Scribble—"But it's a translation from the great Victor Hugo."

Editor—"That's nothing; just change it. He'll never know the difference; he's dead."

Minard's Liniment cures La Grippe.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: "I had been in a distressed condition for three years from Nervousness, Weakness of the Stomach, Dyspepsia and Indigestion until my health was gone. I had been doctoring constantly with no relief. I bought one bottle of South American Nerve, which done me more good than any $50 worth of doctoring I ever did in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy. A trial bottle will convince you. Warranted by T. J. Tuck.

Polite.—Reader—"I thought Jokeleigh was a humorist. He didn't say anything funny last night at the club dinner."

Rownder—"He probably didn't want to talk shop."

The Girl I Used to Know.

When in a reverie I stray with willing feet To the time when I was young and green

There comes to me a memory Of the days of long ago And the pretty, sun-browned face I see Of that girl I used to know.

We "went together" moons and moons; Together we rode and strolled; Together we spent our afternoons And romanced in moonlight coils, Till all the love had set it down On the cards as a certain "go" Between myself and that maiden brown—that girl I used to know.

There are surprises in the years, That girl and I apart, I met her once—without tears Or damage of the heart, I met her once—the other day— With another girl in tow, "My daughter, sir," I heard her say—that girl I used to know.

And so I wonder, as I see Those gleams of yesterday, If yet it may come to me, In Time's uncertain ways, That all the love I fall to love As in the long ago, But this time with the daughter of That girl I used to know!

The Greenland newboys, who cry "Ere's yer Arrangag'iotio Natinginnavik Syarannas Sivik," have well developed lungs.

Edward Linle, of St. Peter's, C. B., says—"That his horse was badly torn by a pitchfork. One bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT cured him."

Livery Stable men all over the Dominion tell our agents that they would not be without MINARD'S LINIMENT for twice the cost.

Handicapped.—Funnyboy—"Did you ever notice the advantage the funny book has over the funny paper?"

Joe Editor—"In what way?"

Funnyboy—"Why, it is 'bound' to please."

Managing Editor to New Man—"I see that you are turning out an immense amount of work from your department. Don't you need an assistant?"

New Man—"All I need is a good scissors-grinder and I can keep this gait up year in and year out."

The Sparham Case

Kempville, July 24.—Much interest is felt by residents of this place in the case of Mr. W. F. Sparham, of Ottawa, to whom reference was made in an Ottawa despatch a few days ago, as a sufferer delivered from kidney disease by the use of Dodd's kidney pills. Mr. Sparham was born and brought up here, and is well known and universally popular. His friends here had heard of his illness and his failure to obtain relief from all the medicines he tried before taking the pills. Their wonderful effect in his case will make the remedy more popular in this vicinity, for all now are fully aware of its good properties.

RELATIVE IMPORTANCE.

Here is an exact comparison of the amount of space devoted to public events by the great daily newspapers:

DON'T LOSE THE BABY.—Every mother knows how critical a time the second summer is, and how many little ones die during that period from Summer Complaint, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, and Cholera Morbus; and how anxiously she watches day by day, lest the dread disease snatch away the loved ones! There is no disease that comes so suddenly, or is so frequently so quickly fatal, as these Bowel Complaints, and in a large majority of cases doctors and medicines seem to be of no avail. There is, however, one remedy, which in forty years of trial has never been known to fail when taken according to printed directions, and this is PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER. It is so safe and sure that no mother is justified in being without it. A bottle in the house ready for sudden sickness will often save a life. You can get the new Big Bottle for 25c.

Mr. South—"I'll buy some of those new scarfs you so much admire if you refer me to somebody to tie the knot." Miss North—"Why don't you see our pastor?"

Scribble—"I say, Van, you'll be there the night they produce my play?" Van Trump—"Can't promise, old man. But if I'm not, my grandchildren will be."

GRAND MASTER GIBSON.

THE CAREER OF THE HEAD OF THE MASONIC ORDER IN CANADA.

He is Better Known, However, in His Capacity of Provincial Governor in the Ontario Cabinet—His Work as an Administrator and as a Public Man.

Right Worthy Brother the Hon. John M. Gibson, Q. C., Hamilton, Ont., whose picture is herewith given was elected at the recent meeting of the Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of Canada to succeed Most Worthy Brother John Ross Robertson in the Grand Master's chair.

Mr. Gibson has not been a merely ornamental Lodge. He was initiated in Strict Observance Lodge No. 27, G. R. C., on November 19, 1867, and five years later occupied the position of Worthy Master.

He became a member of St. John's R. A. Chapter No. 6 in 1870 and in 1874 organized Temple Lodge No. 324. He subsequently filled the position of Grand Superintendent of the Hamilton District for one year; and was D. D. G. M. for the Hamilton District in 1883-4. He is a very prominent member of the Scottish Rite of Masonry—an order which he joined about 22 years ago. He has filled the position of M. W. Sovereign of Hamilton Chapter, Rose Croix; and Commander in Chief of Moore Sovereign Consistory for three years.

He became an Honorary Inspector General, 33d degree, 1884, and was on October 1, 1886, created an active Grand Inspector General, 33d degree, of the Supreme Council of Canada. He is also the representative near the Grand Lodge of Canada of the Grand Lodge of Ontario, and representative of the Grand Chapter of Kansas near the Grand Chapter of Canada.

Born in York County, Ont., of Scottish parentage in 1842, Mr. Gibson's schooling began at Hamilton Central School and was finished at University College in 1863 with the degree of B. A., he carrying off the Prince of Wales prize of that year together with the silver medals in classics and modern languages and the prize in Oriental languages. He was called to the bar in 1867. A subsequent course at the University of Toronto secured him the degree of LL. B., and the gold medal. In 1879 he was appointed a Queen's Counsel for Ontario. His interest in educational matters led to his election as chairman of the Hamilton Board of Education, a member of the Senate of his alma mater and president of the Hamilton Art School.

Lieut.-Col. Gibson is an enthusiastic soldier, having command of the 13th Battalion of Hamilton, one of the crack militia organizations of Canada. He is also president of the Canadian Military Institute and the Dominion Rifle League. He was a member of the Canadian Wimbledon Teams in 1874, '75 and '79, winning prizes on all those occasions. In the latter year he won the Prince of Wales prize (a badge and £100). In 1881 he commanded the Canadian Wimbledon team which defeated the British team in the rifle contest for the Rajah of Kolapore's cup. He was also a member of the Canadian long range teams at Creedmore in 1876 and 1880.

To the Canadian public generally the Grand Master is better known, as a matter of course, in his capacity as a member of the Provincial Government, than in any other. He first entered the Ontario Legislature in 1879, and has represented Hamilton at every session since that date. As chairman of the Private Bills Committee of the House, a position which he has held almost since his first entrance to the Legislature, he has been largely instrumental in shaping the laws which have gone upon the statute book during the past 12 or 13 years. It was in 1880 that he was called to take the portfolio of Provincial Secretary in the Ontario Cabinet. Since that time his views have been crystallized into law by public act, dealing with the regulation of liquor traffic, the controlling of life insurance corporations and benevolent societies and the protection of the fish and game of the Province. In the work of administration he has control of several sub-departments, including among others that having the oversight of the prisons, asylums and charitable institutions of the Province.

Three First of July Thoughts.

The only security for all is a free press. We owe gratitude to England, justice to all other countries, good will to all, subservience to none.

The execution of the laws is more important than the making of them.

The Boy of It.

Billie—I say, Tommy, let's go off behind the barn with these crackers and burn our fingers.

Tommy—Whatcher wantn burn y' fingers for?

Billie—Mommie told me not to.

High Prate.

Agent—Well, madam, another glorious First sees me here again. How did your husband like the keg of powder I sold him last year?

Lady of the House—He was completely carried away by it.

Life in the open air is the theme of Harper's Magazine for July. The opening article describes some historic gardens of Italy, and its fourteen illustrations, six of them full page engravings, are from photographs made for the article. The scene of meadows and the breezes of English uplands fill the chapters of William Black's "The Handsome Humes," which are contained in this number, while in "Three English Race Meetings," by Richard Harding Davis, the reader catches refreshing glimpses of a famous trio of national outdoor festivals. "Side Lights on the German Soldier," by Poulteney Bigelow, illustrated from nineteenth drawings by Frederic Remington, is a graphic description of the life of German officers and privates in barracks and in the field. Henry Loomis Nelson discusses in an entertaining fashion the immigration of the French Canadian into New England and his qualities as an American citizen. The fiction of the Number includes chapters of "Horace Chase," a story of the French and Indian War, called "Silence," and Will Carleton contributes a "Vestal Virgin," a humorous sketch. In the "Editor's Study" Charles Dudley Warner discusses the recent naval and other timely topics. The "Editor's Drawer" includes a short story by Thomas Nelson P. G., called "How Andrew Carried the Precious," and a full-page drawing by George du Maurier.

The summer number of Night and Day, edited by Dr. Barnardo, has a larger number of illustrations than is usual. The number is chiefly devoted to an illustrated précis of proceedings at the 27th Annual Meeting, the principal speeches being given verbatim, among them being the address by Dr. Sinclair, the Archdeacon of London, and that of the Rev. Dr. Pierpont. The personal testimony of the High Commissioner for the Canadian Dominion, Sir Charles Topper, to the proved value of the Emigration work conducted by Dr. Barnardo's Homes will prove of great general importance. The address which Lord Brassey delivered as the President for the year is perhaps the most valuable contribution which the magazine contains to the important and wide spread character and beneficence of the work which has been carried on for 27 years by Dr. Barnardo.

To Preserve

The richness, color, and beauty of the hair, the greatest care is necessary, much harm being done by the use of worthless dressings. To be sure of having a first-class article, ask your druggist or perfumer for Ayer's Hair Vigor. It is absolutely superior to any other preparation of the kind. It restores the original color and fullness to hair which has become thin, faded, or gray. It keeps the scalp cool, moist, and free from dandruff. It heals itching humors, prevents baldness, and imparts to a silken texture and lasting fragrance. No toilet can be considered complete without this most popular and elegant of all hair-dressings.

HE LOVED good bread, pie, and pastry, but his stomach was delicate.

SHE LOVED to cook, but was tired and sick of the taste and smell of lard.

THEY LOVED more than ever, because she made better food, and he could eat it without any unpleasant after effect. Now THEY ARE HAPPY in having found the BEST, and most healthful shortening ever made—COTTOLENE.

Life in the open air is the theme of Harper's Magazine for July. The opening article describes some historic gardens of Italy, and its fourteen illustrations, six of them full page engravings, are from photographs made for the article. The scene of meadows and the breezes of English uplands fill the chapters of William Black's "The Handsome Humes," which are contained in this number, while in "Three English Race Meetings," by Richard Harding Davis, the reader catches refreshing glimpses of a famous trio of national outdoor festivals. "Side Lights on the German Soldier," by Poulteney Bigelow, illustrated from nineteenth drawings by Frederic Remington, is a graphic description of the life of German officers and privates in barracks and in the field. Henry Loomis Nelson discusses in an entertaining fashion the immigration of the French Canadian into New England and his qualities as an American citizen. The fiction of the Number includes chapters of "Horace Chase," a story of the French and Indian War, called "Silence," and Will Carleton contributes a "Vestal Virgin," a humorous sketch. In the "Editor's Study" Charles Dudley Warner discusses the recent naval and other timely topics. The "Editor's Drawer" includes a short story by Thomas Nelson P. G., called "How Andrew Carried the Precious," and a full-page drawing by George du Maurier.

A Greeting
 I.
 How beautiful thou art, oh love of mine!
 The sparkle of thine eye shines in the streams;
 The fragrance of thy breath wafts from the pine;
 The beauty of thy smile is in the beams.
 Of morning sunlight, as it glints and gleams.
 The vesture is the viceroy that thrones
 In new life in the leaf, the spray, the blade,
 And lies like emerald velvet on the hills,
 And on the bosom of the bush-grown glade—
 Brilliant in an insight—glorious in the shade.

II.
 Once more I seek thee in thy bowers, my sweet—
 A tired soldier from the city's mart
 Once more I seek thee by the brooklet's side,
 To still with tones of thine the fret and smart,
 And slow the throbbing of the fevered heart,
 And, lo! I find thy welcome is as free
 To day as in the old time, long ago,
 When, as a child, I wandered forth to thee;
 Thy smile is deeper, dearer, and I know
 My own responsive love hath warmer glow.

III.
 Oh, as of old, first love of mine! I infuse
 The vigor of thy youth in nerve and vein;
 Cast out the aching thoughts; the soul intense
 With nobler instincts, and in art and brain
 Breed high desires that bring no after-pain.
 Point with thy luminous finger to the soul,
 Where blossoms grow and tall and stately spin,
 But rest their being beauties in thy God;
 Content to be—far from the city's din,
 In Woodland depths, devoid of care or sin!
 —Outing.

Jane's Holiday.
 Far into the night Jane patched and contrived, with that new, wonderful hope guiding her fingers. She even produced one or two faded ribbons, relics of wedding finery, and sighed as she pinned them on, thinking how faded, too, was the face above them.
 The day was hot, and they left their home early, "so's to git our money's wuth," said Jim. The children huddled around their mother, almost stupefied with admiration at the street parade.
 "Jes' wait!" inuinated Jim.
 From the summit of the great pavilion to a point within a few feet of the ground a rope was stretched, and a wonderfully spangled female began to descend the perilous causeway. Jane watched with painful absorption.
 "I'm glad it's over," she said.
 But Jim had disappeared.
 "Pap's gone to git us in," said one of the children.
 There was a crash of music inside the tent; the crowd began to stream inward; the field was deserted, save for a group of men gathered around a table, hitherto concealed from Jane's bewildered eyes. She saw her husband.
 "Go tell pap it's time for us to go in," she said, and breathless watched the child speed on his errand. He returned alone.
 "Pap's treatin' the crowd," said the boy, his words drowned in a vociferous burst of applause from the tent.
 "Stay here," commanded Jane, and went towards the hilarious group.
 "Come, Jim," she said, coaxingly, "an' take us into the show."
 "I'll be along—plenty o' time," answered her husband, with benignant good humor.
 But he was deaf to her repeated entreaties. She stood, silent, watching him till the last dime was spent. Then she went back to the children. Something in her face awed them, and they only whispered among themselves.
 "Your pap's drunk, and the money's all gone," said Jane, with an air of indifference, and sat down on the grass again.
 The people were streaming out of the tent; the crowd was dispersing. One of the animal vans drew near. Jane crept to the driver.
 "Mister," she said in trembling tones, "won't you let the children take a peep? They never saw nuthin' in their lives."
 "Boss wouldn't let me," answered the man, yet not unkindly.
 A white monkey thrust its paw through the slats of the cage.
 The children were in ecstasies of delight. The driver started his horses.
 "Come children, let's go home," said Jane.
 It was dark when they reached the cabin. A whippoorwill sang from the thicket, and its wail was to Jane Sheilas the k-r-ell of hope—Valerie Hays Berry, in August Lippincott's.

Don't
 let that cold of yours run on. You think it is a light thing. But it may run into catarrh. Or into pneumonia. Or consumption.
 Catarrh is disgusting. Pneumonia is dangerous. Consumption is death itself.
 The breathing apparatus must be kept healthy and clear of all obstructions and offensive matter. Otherwise there is trouble ahead.
 All the diseases of these parts, head, nose, throat, bronchial tubes and lungs, can be delightfully and entirely cured by the use of Boscho's German Syrup. If you don't know this already, thousands and thousands of people can tell you. They have been cured by it, and "know how it is, themselves." Bottle only 75 cents. Ask any druggist. 11-6

The August Century will be, as usual, the Midsummer Holiday Number. Its chief feature will be "Phillips Brooks's Letters to Children," which will include a great number of delightful letters written from abroad by the late Bishop Brooks to the children of his brothers' families. They present a little known and most interesting side of the life and character of the great preacher.
 One of the leading articles of the August St. Nicholas will be "The Boyhood of E. Lison," with an account of the great inventor's juvenile experiments, including his attempt to hatch eggs by sitting on the nest as he had seen the hen do. A portrait of E. Lison when a boy forms the frontispiece of the number.
 A prominent feature of Outing for July is a sweetly pathetic story, "P. stelle," by C. A. Sprague Ross. The characters are portrayed with masterly power by a pen so sympathetic, that it refines and sweetens humdrum life and incidents of the backwoods and draws the hapless little heroine very near to the reader's heart. Such pure, wholesome reading is infinitely preferable to the poisoned rubbish, too freely placed before our young people under the cover of holiday literature. The number is strong throughout in text and illustration; other notable articles being the history of "Champion Pacers," "How we Towed Our Way," an account of a trip by Canal boat through the Empire State, "Practical Lessons in Swimming," "Salmon-fishing on the Newfoundland Coast," "The Frog for Pan and Pastime," and "Black-bass fishing in Maine."

The complete novel in the July number of Lippincott's is "The Troublesome Lady," by Paience Stapleton, who is already well known to our readers. It is a lively and interesting tale of ranch life in the West, and is fully illustrated. The fifth in the series of Lippincott's N. Stable Stories, also illustrated, is "The R. priev of Capitalist Clyve," by Osen Winter. Other illustrated articles are "Oa the Way," by Julian Hawthorne, which deals with Washington as a starting-point whence to visit the Exposition. Morgan S. E. Innards describes "A Wild Night on the Anz n," and Giovanni P. Morosini tells "What the United States owes to Italy." Gilbert Parker, the author of the novel in the June issue, supplies an account of "The New Poetry and Mr W. E. Henley," M. Crofton, in "Men of the Day," handles Alexander Damas and Secretary Hcke Smith.

How a marriage proposal is made and how it is worded always arouses the interest of girls, and to them the charming revelation made in "The Story of Five Proposals," which is told with delightful frankness by a Western society girl, in the July Ladies Home Journal, will have an unusual attractiveness. A full page, very well done, is that of various ways of "Entertaining in the Country." Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox asks and answers "Can a Woman Reform a Man?" A most beautiful page of periodical illustrations is Nancy Mann Waddle's article on the cultivation of the orchid—"A Flower of the Air." Mr. Bok, the editor, discourses with forcible directness, upon the perplexing question of corporal punishment for children, writing from the boy's point of view. Mr. Howells' story, "The Coast of Bohemia," grows in interest and charm as it proceeds. A page of illustrations from original designs, entitled "Dressing Without the Corset," by May R. ot Kern, will be read with profit. Palmer Cox has his inimitable "Brownies" this month climbing the pyramids of Egypt. The editors all have something bright to say in this July number, which, with its attractive summer cover, and its admirable table of contents, is worth many times its price of Ten Cents. Published by The Curtis Publishing Company, of Philadelphia, for One Dollar per year.

The New York Press proposes to send to the World's Fair as its guests fifty Union veterans, members of regular Grand Army posts, who are to be selected by the readers of The Sunday Press. This proposition is made as an evidence of the esteem and gratitude in which The Press holds the men who imperiled their own lives to save this nation.
 Each of the chosen veterans will be the guest of The Press from the moment the train leaves New York until its return, and the journey will be timed to include a full week's sojourn in Chicago, with all expenses paid, including daily entrance to the grounds of the Exposition.
 All G. A. R. veterans in good standing are eligible. They may come from any town, city, State or Territory over which the Stars and Stripes proclaims its government.
 The selection of the fifty favorites will be made on the ground of popularity, their popularity to be voted by ballots printed in every issue of The Sunday Press.

QUEEN VICTORIA PARK.
A FEW BEAUTY SPOTS ON OUR SIDE OF THE FALLS.

Around the Whirlpool—An Invasion of Sequestered Nooks by a Trolley Road—Beautiful Views on Our Side—Strong Hints for Popularity.

The natural beauties of the Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park have been greatly enhanced by the recent work of the commissioners and of Supt. Wilson, to whose taste and executive ability every visitor at Niagara Falls owes a debt of gratitude. From Chippawa, above the upper rapids, to Lake Ontario, the Canada side of Niagara is full of beauty. The work of constructing a trolley road along the river's edge has robbed some lovely retreats of their wildness and quiet which all these years have so greatly added to their charm. The big iron bridges which span the group of islands above the Horseshoe, and the high trestle over the deep gully running northwesterly from the Whirlpool, are instances of this new invasion of Nature's domain. The latter structure gives the tourist access to a point heretofore reached by few visitors and the whole road makes a new route, thickly strung with points of lively interest. It is a route which the tourist public is likely to appreciate, however much the lover of nature may lament the changes and disfigurements consequent upon its construction. The Niagara of the future is morally certain to have more and more of the work of man. The public is to be congratulated that the changes in the vicinity of the falls are no longer left to the caprice of private money-makers, but are in the hands of Government.

On both sides of Niagara there is a chronic lack of funds with which to make the improvements which are recommended from time to time by the commissioners and superintendents. The construction of the Niagara Falls & River Railroad—as the new Canada trolley-line is called—is an effort on the part of the Canadian Commissioners to make the Queen Victoria Park pay. At least so it appears on the face. If it proves merely an entering wedge for the Canadian Pacific Railway or other great corporation—as some who observe its substantial build, standard gauge and heavy bridges declare—then time will show it. In last year's annual report to the legislative assembly the Commissioners stated that the main objects they had in view in promoting the electric railway scheme were to obtain revenue for the Park maintenance and to assist in the payment of interest on the debentures issued to acquire and improve the property; to increase the number of visitors, primarily for revenue purposes, but also to bring into greater prominence the Canadian Park and its historic environment on the banks of Niagara River by connecting it with all the great railway lines of the continent; and to overcome the antagonism of the cabmen, who have persistently opposed the interests of the Canadian Park ever since it was founded. The road is now in operation from the Falls to Queenston, a distance of seven miles; and the commissioners hope that when it is running through to Chippawa—as it soon will be—to connect with a boat line to Buffalo, that they will succeed in diverting to their side a considerable portion of the tourist and picnic travel.

The leading men in the railway enterprise are Edmund B. Oeler and H. C. Hammond, wealthy men of Toronto, William Hendrie, the Hamilton contractor, and Richard B. Angus of Montreal.
 One of the most interesting of our pictures shows the beautiful bronze statue of Sir Cassimir Gzowski, chairman of the Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Commission, which was erected near Table Rock point by the Government of Ontario in 1891. He is a K. C. M. G., Aide-de-Camp to the Queen and one of the most distinguished of civil engineers.
 One of the prettiest bits in the Park is the old house now occupied by one of the employes on the grounds. It is said to be over a hundred years old; at any rate it is ancient, as structures hereabouts go, and was probably the picturesque home of a miller in the early days when Street's mill stood at the edge of the rapids. The old raceway of this historic mill may still be seen, as the visitor strolls up-stream through this pleasant demesne. In old books of early travels in this region are to be found interesting allusions to Street's mill. Grist from many miles around was brought here.

"August Flower"

Mrs. Sarah M. Black of Seneca, Mo., during the past two years has been afflicted with Neuralgia of the Head, Stomach and Womb, and writes: "My food did not seem to strengthen me at all and my appetite was very variable. My face was yellow, my head dull, and I had such pains in my left side. In the morning when I got up I would have a flow of mucus in the mouth, and a bad, bitter taste. Sometimes my breath became short, and I had such queer, tumbling, palpitating sensations around the heart. I ached all day under the shoulder blades, in the left side, and down the back of my limbs. It seemed to be worse in the wet, cold weather of Winter and Spring; and whenever the spells came on, my feet and hands would turn cold, and I could get no sleep at all. I tried everywhere, and got no relief before using August Flower. Then the change came. It has done me a wonderful deal of good during the time I have taken it and is working a complete cure."
