Power sale hearings underway

MONTREAL (CP) — National Energy Board hearings opened Tuesday on Hydro-Quebec's proposal to export 800 megawatts of hydroelectric power to New York state, with farmers, environmentalists and even Ontario Hydro and the Ontario energy ministry serving notice of opposition to the plan as it now stands.

Written briefs submitted by farm and environmental groups centred on the social and ecological effects of the project, while Ontario Hydro said it may want to buy some of Quebec's power itself, rather than see it go to American customers.

Ontario Hydro and the Ontario energy ministry both said they are not opposed in principle to power exports, but they want certain safeguards written into the contract.

Energy board commissioners W. A. Scotland, J. Farmer and R. A. Stead spent most of the day ironing out procedural difficulties with lawyers for the interested parties. The hearings are expected to take up to two weeks.

Hydro-Quebec is asking approval for a contract signed March 29 with the Power Authority of the State of New York (PASNY).

The agreement, establishing a 20-year "mutual assistance plan" between the two networks, would involve construction of a 765 kilo-volt line between Chateaugay station just southeast of Montreal and the United States border.

CONTRASTING NEEDS
The Hydro-Quebec submission to the board says the contract was made possible by the contrasting peak load seasons in the two areas—Quebec's peak load is in winter, New York's in summer.

The agreement, if approved, would be valid as of June 1, 1977, or such time as the interconnection is finished.

The 800 megawatts would be made available to PASNY during the summer months. Hydro-Quebec says this is only a fraction of the power it has available at this time of year, but the contract nevertheless permits recall of power at any time if domestic needs should require it.

In the first five years of the contract—1977 to 1981—sales to PASNY would bring Hydro-Quebec a total of $123 million.

The utility says it can fill the conditions of the contract without expanding current production.

Ontario Hydro's submission agrees that the addition of the proposed 38-mile interconnection between Hydro-Quebec and PASNY would be a "beneficial addition to the existing North American interconnected grid."

But the statement adds: "Situations could arise during the period material to this application wherein Ontario Hydro may be unable to meet the increasing requirements of its customers."

The Ontario utility—like Hydro-Quebec provincially-owned—said it has reason to fear eventual interruptions of U.S. coal and natural gas supplies upon which it currently relies for thermal power.

PRIORITY SOUGHT
Ontario Hydro therefore says that should the need arise it should have priority over PASNY at equivalent prices. It has asked the energy board to make this a condition of the contract.

It also requests that the power which Hydro-Quebec proposes to export to PASNY first be made available to Canadian power systems on terms, including price, to be approved by the board.

Brink's holdup solved

MONTREAL (CP) — Rene Daigneault, director of the Montreal Urban Community (MUC) police department, announced Tuesday, "the Brink's case is solved" after at least eight persons were arrested, including a 60-year-old woman and her family.

But within hours, two of those arrested in connection with the March 30, $2.8 million robbery were released, said lawyer Frank Shoofey, who said he is representing six of the suspects.

Police said the suspects, including the mother, her three sons and two daughters, were taken during a series of raids by MUC police both in the city and the northern Laurentians area. More than $100,000, believed to be part of the $2.8-million Brink's haul, was also seized.

"We know it was the money that came from the Brink's hold-up because of the serial numbers and the way they were wrapped," said Mr. Daigneault.

A number of weapons and police radio monitoring equipment were also seized during the raids.

REPORTS CONFLICT
Mr. Shoofey said early today that two suspects, both men, were released by police. But Lieut. Larry Lewis, police public relations officer, would neither confirm nor deny the releases.

Mr. Shoofey said the woman, her two daughters and a 30-year-old son, were arrested at the mother's home in the east end of the city.

Two other sons, aged 42 and 25, were arrested in a summer cottage at Ste. Anne des Lacs, 130 miles north of Montreal.

Inspector Jean-Claude Rondou, in charge of the squad which made the arrests, said police believe some money has already been spent on a car and a summer cottage in the Laurentians.

"I guess quite a lot of money was spent. We now are trying to gather evidence to prove this," he said.

The inspector said one or two suspects may have been missed in the raids, "but we'll get them in the long run."

Mr. Daigneault said as many as 12 arrests might be forthcoming.

The arrests came exactly nine weeks after the robbery, the biggest in North American history, in which a Brink's security truck was commandeered from outside a bank in the heart of Montreal's financial district.

MACHINE-GUN USED
A 50-calibre Browning M-2 machine-gun was used to threaten the driver of the truck, but no shots were fired and police later said tests on the gun proved it was inoperative.

The robbery resulted in an all-out battle between a special police unit and a west-end gang on which the unit was concentrating their investigation.

One alleged gang member, John Slawey, was killed by police May 15 during a five-man police raid headed by Det. Sgt. Andre Savard.

During one week in early April, policemen were attacked four times while investigating the robbery.

Scare unfounded

OTTAWA (CP) — Last summer's chocolate milkshake scare raised by Consumers' Association of Canada (CAC) was unfounded, a federal health researcher told a food conference here Tuesday.

"We believe there is a need for improvement in house-keeping in some of the restaurants," Ursula Purvis told delegates at the Canadian Institute of Food Science and Technology conference.

She said the more extensive testing done by the government—involving 3,300 analyses taken in Vancouver, Winnipeg, Toronto and Montreal—turned up only five milkshakes with E. coli levels above the federal limit of 10 per gram.

Expects new jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald told the Commons Tuesday the government expects to create enough jobs next year to handle all newcomers to the labor force.

Mr. Macdonald, replying to Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, said better performance in the export of metals, paper and manufacturing of such products as automobiles should help provide more work.

He estimated in last week's budget that about 250,000 jobs will be created over the next year. The unemployment rate now stands at 7.4 per cent, the highest in 15 years, and 760,000 persons now are out of work.

Guards slashed

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Two guards at the British Columbia penitentiary were slashed with a knife Tuesday during an incident in which six prisoners took another prisoner hostage.

A penitentiary spokesman said both guards escaped with minor cuts when a prisoner in the punishment area produced a knife and attempted to take them hostage at 11:25 a.m.

Names of the guards and the prisoners involved have not been released.

The spokesman said the armed prisoner apparently took keys to the segregation cells from one of the guards and then released five other prisoners.

The six then opened another cell and took the prisoner as a hostage.

Ministers snub income plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial welfare ministers have temporarily blocked federal hopes for agreement to provide guaranteed incomes to those who cannot work or who have jobs that pay less than that needed to cover basic living costs.

Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde was told by a number of provinces Tuesday that any decision to go ahead with the estimated $350-million shared-cost program must be made by their premiers when they meet Prime Minister Trudeau here June 14-15.

Discussion of the guaranteed income program was not scheduled until the final session of the two-day conference today, when the ministers wrap up three years of intermittent talks on social security reform.

But many of the welfare ministers—including Ontario and the four western provinces—made it clear in advance they have no authority to commit their governments to the long-discussed plan.

The ministers also held back final approval on proposals to revamp social services laws which provide aid to the handicapped, old people, jobless and distressed communities.

While they agreed in principle with the idea of replacing the increasingly-cumbersome Canada Assistance Plan with new, more compact social service legislation, many provinces argued that such a plan must first be approved at the leaders conference in June.

UNDERSTANDS PROBLEM
When the closed meeting broke Tuesday, Mr. Lalonde said he understood provincial reluctance to introduce new programs during the current period of economic restraint. But he was confident governments would proceed eventually with the plans.

Even if agreement was reached to implement the guaranteed income and social service plans, it would still be months before the suggestions could be put into legislative form, he said.

Legislation to replace the Canada Assistance Plan—which governs federal-provincial costsharing for social services—would not be introduced until 1977.

And new guaranteed income laws could not be implemented until at least 1978 when federally-imposed economic controls are lifted.

Planning miss caused street mess

SHERBROOKE (RM) — The unsightly mess left behind by Festival des Cantons revellers last weekend was a result of inadequate clean-up preparations, the spring carnival's president said yesterday.

"Nobody expected so many people," Marc Bureau said, explaining that plans for picking up refuse from the Festival sites—including the court house lawn—had not been prepared with such a crowd anticipated.

Last weekend, some 300,000 to 400,000 persons came to enjoy the third annual Festival, and more persons than ever walked the "Rues des Fleurs." Well-ton Street North, despite its being open to traffic.

However, Mr. Bureau said, an improved clean-up system will be implemented for this coming weekend, when as many if not more people are expected.

At a press conference, Mr. Bureau also noted that drinking by youths on the downtown streets—a blemish on last year's Festival—is not evident this year.

Organizers are continuing a policy of referring underage drinkers to police and, in turn, to parents. This stand was established last year after numerous reports on the problem.

One feature of the crowds attending this year's Festival is that more and more people are coming from outside the city and region.

Most of these are from Montreal.

Mr. Bureau said that, after talking with the people on the street, "99 percent" are delighted with the Festival.

The appearance of nationally-known figures, such as opposition leader Joe Clark last Saturday, may be in some cases political, but it does testify to the influence and importance of the Festival, said public relations director Michel Chamberland.

Organizers are also pleased with the announcement last week of a $100,000 grant from the provincial government for next year's edition.

Velodrome unsafe

MONTREAL (CP) — Safety approval of the roof material used in the Olympic velodrome has been withheld by the Quebec labor department following National Research Council tests indicating the material is a fire hazard.

Roger Trudeau, director general of the Olympic installations board, told a news conference Tuesday night that the labor department has asked the board to install a 2½-inch water line on the gangway around the base of the roof.

There will be outlets every 100 feet, with 50-foot hoses attached along the line, he said.

After the Olympics, the labor department will consider permanent measures to ensure the safety in the velodrome.

However, Mr. Trudeau said he was confident that the velodrome roof did not constitute a fire hazard.

He said Montreal fire director Rene Plaisance had prepared a fire-prevention plan for the velodrome, the swimming hall and the main Olympic stadium.

The plan included stationing a fire truck and 50 firemen at the velodrome during competitions. Mr. Trudeau said Mr. Plaisance was satisfied that these measures were adequate.

Olympic bicycling and judo events are slated to take place in the structure, which has capacity for 7,000 spectators.

Jolt delivered at AIC hearings

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal attempts to justify its anti-inflation controls received a jolt in the Supreme Court of Canada Tuesday when British Columbia's qualified support appeared less than had been expected.

The Anti-Inflation Act, which last fall placed the country under a three-year program of wage and price controls, is valid only if inflation constituted a national emergency, said D. H. Vickers, counsel for the B.C. government.

"But on the evidence before this court, I do not conclude there was an emergency."

B.C. feels there was an emergency but this had not been proven before the high court during two days of arguments, he said later in an interview.

Quebec also offered qualified support, but like B.C. left the court to decide whether a national emergency existed.

The nine-judge court must decide whether the act contravenes the British North America Act, the country's constitution that outlines federal and provincial powers.

OVERSTEPS POWERS
The anti-inflation measures overstep provincial powers, but the BNA Act permits this in emergency situations involving peace, order and good government.

Legal experts say the constitutional issue is the most important to arise in 50 years. The court's decision will establish a precedent that will more clearly define the separate powers of the federal and provincial governments. Also, if the law is found to be unconstitutional, the entire anti-inflation program will be thrown into question.

Lawyers said Tuesday afternoon that the B.C. statement might have weakened the federal case. But Ottawa received unqualified support from Ontario which sent Attorney-General Roy McMurtry to plead its case.

Without the federal action, inflation might have worsened and damaged the economy and society, Mr. McMurtry said.

Why had the provinces and Ottawa not been able to practise co-operative federalism and attack the problem together, asked Mr. Justice Brian Dickson.

Mr. McMurtry replied that the problem had become too urgent to be solved through that "time-consuming process." There was no time to waste in view of the difficulties Ottawa and the provinces have had in reaching consensus on other economic problems such as oil pricing.

SUPPORTS SOLIDLY
Mr. McMurtry stood solidly behind the arguments of J. J. Robinette, the prominent Toronto lawyer hired to present Ottawa's case, who said Monday that inflation had become an evil of national proportions.

Hockey star shot

QUEBEC (CP) — Five persons, including a professional hockey player, were wounded late Tuesday night when two masked men walked into a tavern here and opened fire with a sub-machine-gun on the patrons.

Police identified the hockey player as Andre Deschamps of Hershey Bears of the American Hockey League, who once played junior hockey here for Quebec Remparts.

Originally police said Jacques Richard, a right winger with Buffalo Sabres of the National Hockey League, had also been wounded, but a bullet just went through his pant leg.

City police took all the remaining patrons to their downtown headquarters for questioning about the shooting, which occurred shortly before midnight.

The tavern is located close to the Quebec Coliseum, the home rink for the Remparts and Quebec Nordiques of the World Hockey Association.

Prompted by higher oil prices

Electric home heating gains popularity

The rapidly rising cost of heating residences with oil and gas is resulting in home owners and builders searching for more efficient methods to keep Canadians warm during the long winter months.

The method that is gaining in popularity, particularly among builders, is electric heating.

The oil crisis and the increases over the past few years in the cost of oil and gas are finally getting a message through to many house buyers who are increasingly interested in homes heated by electricity, according to John Hurlburt, former President, Toronto Home Builders Association.

"The trend in most new residential construction in many areas of the country is towards electric heating," according to Robert Lane, Marketing Manager, GESCAN Electrical Distributors, a Department of Canadian General Electric and a major distributor of electric heating products to contractors doing residential jobs.

"In Quebec over 70 per cent of housing starts use electric heating and in Manitoba, the Maritimes and in the interior of British Columbia well over 50 per cent of the new residences incorporate electric heat. Even in Ontario, where the figure is about 28 per cent, we can see increasing interest in the use of electric heating," Mr. Lane said.

According to specialists in the energy management field the growing interest in electric heating is in step with the trend away from using fossil fuels - oil, gas, coal - to generate energy.

Says George Vaughan, Manager - Construction Market Development, Canadian General Electric: "Electricity in Canada has never really been involved in the so-called energy crisis. Indeed, supplies of electrical energy in this country have been more than adequate."

The reason for this, stressed Mr. Vaughan, is that in most countries electricity is generated by plants that consume oil, gas or coal. However, in Canada over 60 per cent of the electric power from Hydro stations is generated by falling water. And another 8 to 10 per cent of the electricity comes from nuclear power stations.

The Science Council of Canada also sees a bright future for electric heating. In a report recently, it indicated that within the next 25 to 30 years it expects that electricity will take the place of oil and gas as the dominant form of energy used in Canada.

Impressive as these facts may be, one of the basic reasons that people are looking towards electricity is that it is becoming more economical to heat the average home.

According to Ontario Hydro by 1979 energy prices are expected to increase, compared to 1973 prices, along the following lines: Oil to rise by 250 per cent. Natural Gas to rise by 175 per cent. Coal to rise by 125 per cent. Uranium to increase by 25 per cent.

By generating electricity with nuclear energy the cost to heat a home will be substantially lower than with oil, gas or coal in the years ahead. Uranium is an extremely efficient source of energy. A typical uranium fuel bundle supplied to the Pickering Nuclear Plant in Ontario weighs 50 lbs. and produces the equivalent B.T.U. or heating output that would be provided by 500 tons of top-grade coal.

Home builders, particularly those heavily into multidwelling units are uncertain about oil and gas prices and are increasingly switching to electric heating.

"Whatever new forms of energy are utilized, apart from oil and gas, to heat homes it is likely it will be distributed by electricity," points out one major builder in a metropolitan centre.

J. Proulx, President, Habitat Prefab Ltée., Quebec City, is a firm believer in the value and advantages of electric heating for homes. Over 98 per cent of the homes he sells have electric heating.

"Oil will soon become as obsolete as coal became 15-20 years ago because in today's economy the home owner or buyer is more selective about a heating system," he points out.

The advantages of electric heating are so predominant that even if the cost for an installation was higher the home buyer would probably choose it because of its balanced comfort and better insulation requirements. Not only does the home owner have the capability of adjusting the temperature in each room, but the extra

"Mr. Manfred Wolf, President of Manco Pulp & Paper Fabricators Limited, Ste. Therese, Quebec, is pleased to announce the appointment of Mr. James T. Coley as Operations Manager of its manufacturing division, Metafo Inc., Sherbrooke, Quebec. Both companies are stainless steel and carbon fabricators and cater to the pulp and paper, petrochemical and heavy machinery industries."

insulation required by construction standards contributes to better heating in winter and a cooler house in summer, he indicated.

Consumers seem to like the cleanliness, proper humidity and noise free qualities of electric heating, according to a spokesman for Schnickendanz Bros. Ltd., a major Ontario based builder.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) - Concern over rising interest rates pushed stock market prices lower Tuesday in the slowest trading in nearly five months.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks slipped 2.10 to 973.13.

Declines held a slight edge on advances in the daily tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

NYSE volume came to only 13.88 million shares, the lightest total since a 10.30 million-share day on Jan. 2. Volume last Friday, before the extended Memorial Day weekend, had been 16.86 million shares.

	Tues. Fri.
Advances	655 961
Declines	739 432

Turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, amounted to 16.15 million shares.

Standard and Poor's 500-stock index declined .33 to 99.85, and the NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks posted a .15 loss to 53.16.

Texaco was the day's most active issue, holding steady on turnover of slightly more than 175,000 shares.

U.S. Shoe, also active, fell some 3 points. The company blamed a sell recommendation in a financial newsletter.

Gold stocks advanced as bullion prices rose in world markets. Analysts said some investors seemed to be buying the stocks in the hope that the metal's price might rally after an impending bullion auction by the International Monetary Fund.

ASA, Homestake and Rosario Resources all scored gains of a point or more.

Gerber Products also picked up a point. The company reported considerably higher quarterly earnings.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index lost .25 to 102.91.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market dropped .23 to 87.81.

Among Canadian issues on the NYSE, Dome Mines was up 1/2 to $44 1/4, Campbell Red Lake 1 to $24 3/4, Massey Ferguson 1 to $28, and Alcan 3/4 to $27.

Hudson Bay dropped 1/2 to $20.

(Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs)
FALSE ADVERTISING. During the program "Consummateurs avertis", aired the 7th of April 1976, Simon Durivage declared: "It's not a new trick, merchants have for a long time attracted us to their stores by promising us bargains. And we have for a long time fallen for it; the thickness of the Wednesday's newspaper are eloquent testimony to this fact."

Except that for a while now there have been abuses. Certain merchants advertised bargains which they had not stocked in sufficient quantity. Some merchants even had the nerve to entice us with miracle prices that were no longer miraculous at all once you got into the store.

Well all this is now illegal throughout Canada and if ever you are told in the store that the superbargain advertised the day before in the newspaper or on television is no longer available, the merchant is obliged to give you a coupon by which he agrees to furnish you with the advertised bargain the next time you come in, and this at the advertised price and not at the regular price.

In virtue of article 37 (3) of Bill C-2, the merchant must furnish the article and stock a sufficient quantity of it in order to live up to his advertisement. If he does not have a sufficient quantity, the law provides that he must furnish a rain check and offer the merchandise, the bargain in question, within a reasonable time. One month is considered to be reasonable. If the merchant still refuses, the consumer's best possible defense is to present his case in the store in the presence of a witness. In certain cases the infraction should be reported to the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

Civil Damages. Until passage of Bill C-2 the act did not give persons the right to recover damages when they had been incurred as a result of a violation by others. Now, anyone who has suffered loss or damage because of a violation of the act or failure to comply with an order of the commission, may sue for and be awarded damages equal to the actual loss incurred plus full cost of his investigation and court proceedings. The provision is expected to be of particular value to small businessmen as well as consumers.

DO YOU KNOW? ...

The Québec Government is offering extremely attractive salary scales to teachers working for school boards and colleges.

A teacher who on June 30 1975 was receiving $11 860 (including the indexed cost-of-living allowance) will be getting $16 610 on July 1 1977, an increase of $4 750, or more than 40%.

In 1974/1975 a teacher's average salary was $10 800. In 1977/1978 it will be more than $17 300, an increase of $6 500, or more than 60%.

On top of these salaries the teacher gets a full range of social benefits: life insurance, salary insurance, pension, sick leave, annual vacation, etc.

It all adds up to an excellent set of working conditions.

Have you got as much?
Would you refuse such an offer?

...City beat...

By STEVE BELL
(Record Reporter)

SHERBROOKE — The city's technical services department has released plans for the recently cleared corner lot at the King-Papineau Street fork in the East Ward.

According to Frank Mascolo, Director of the technical services department, the reorganization of the intersection at the King-Papineau fork has been done in conjunction with a private commercial interest, aiming to construct a selfservice gas station there.

The reorganization of the intersection which will be undertaken by the public works department during summer, includes the reduction of the corner to permit easier access to Papineau Street from King. A traffic island will be constructed at the head of Murray Street, segregating traffic flow on King Street. The head of Murray Street will be closed off, permitting access only to traffic moving west, up King Street. All traffic exiting by Murray on to King, will, following construction, have to use Chartier Street. The service station will be constructed on the corner on the land remaining following the reorganization of the intersection.

But sources within the technical services department have estimated the cost of the reorganization project, planned for the intersection, at some where around $85,000.

Changes to the intersection are part of one of the city's long term plans for the area. The city has plans to connect the King-Papineau-Murray Street intersection with the Terrill Bridge. The connecting artery would run from Papineau Street, west of the No. 4 fire station, across Mont-Plaisant and Vincent Streets and along the south side of the ETAA land to the Terrill Bridge. According to city sources, the city attempted a similar plan, five or six years ago, which at that time called for the demolition of the No. 4 fire station. But according to Both director Boudreau and Frank Mascolo, the fire station has been spared this time.

While the construction on the intersection itself is scheduled to finish this summer, the construction of the connecting artery between King-Papineau-Murray Street intersection and the Terrill Bridge is part of the city's 10 year project for that sector of the city. There have been no dates released for the start of the project.

Death termed accidental

SHERBROOKE (TT) — Another eyewitness, Mr. Robert Neil, said he had heard an explosion at King George street and as he rushed to the scene, he saw the fire which destroyed an apartment building on King George street.

Mr. Jacques Ravary, chemist at the police scientific institute, testified that it was difficult for him to establish a possible cause of the fire which took the lives of Mr. Odias Morin, Miss Rose-Alma Morin, Mr. Wilbrod Morin, and Mrs. Elaine Codere-Poirier, all of whom were between the aged of 58 and 64.

Mr. Ravary said that after a three-day enquiry, he found no indication that the fire resulted from gas leakage.

An eyewitness, Mr. Marc Francis Thompson, testified earlier that he smelled gas near the building soon before fire broke out.

WHEN THE TEMPERATURE RISES and there isn't a beach in sight, what does one do? Turn to a city water fountain that's what, as this young fellow did yesterday afternoon, while visiting the downtown area. Much to his dislike, he was restrained by big sister.

To aid flood victims

EASTERN TOWNSHIPS (TT-GA) — Victims of this spring's flooding in as Rock Island and Stanstead are entitled to receive government aid to help cover losses, it was announced in a joint communique from the offices of Gerald Deziel, Liberal MLA, and Georges Vaillancourt, deputy agricultural minister.

Both communiques quote Fernand Lalonde, Quebec's Solicitor General as saying that the government will absorb all cost and damages to those who suffered financial losses as a result of the spring flooding.

The government has appointed a board designated as "Financial Aid Bureau - 1976 Flooding" with the responsibility of making a study of the flood damage in those areas and making recommendations on the financial extent of the damage and authorize payments to the flood victims accordingly.

Awarded scholarships

OTTAWA (TT) — Two University of Sherbrooke students are among 43 winners of the Canadian National Research Council (CNRC) 1967 science scholarships for 1976-77.

R. Grondin of Sherbrooke, electrical engineering student, and Y. Boulanger of Ste-Cecile-de-Frontenac, chemistry student, were among recipients of $7,000 a year for a three-year period with a possible renewal for a fourth year, to work on their doctorate degrees, a release from CNRC office stated.

The awards, first made in 1967, will mark the 50th anniversary of CNRC scholarships program and the centennial of Canadian confederation.

Craft show planned

MAGOG — The Comite Atistique and cultural of Magog-Orford and Magog merchants invite Magog and area craftsmen or groups to take part in a craft show and sale to be held in the Park des Braves, Main Street, Magog on the following dates: July 2, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.; July 3, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and July 4, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Tables will be furnished. Each craftsman or group is responsible for having the table covered to the floor and for providing chairs and other special accessories needed.

The fees for the three days will be $5.00 which must be received before the entry deadline of June 20.

All articles must be handmade and Pentex articles will not be accepted.

(Record Correspondent)
SHERBROOKE — The annual Sessions of Independent Order of Odd Fellows was held at LeBaron Hotel, Friday and Saturday, bringing together many of the fraternity learned from across the United States, Quebec and Ontario.

Friday evening a banquet took place in the ballroom. It was with regrets that the fraternity learned of the accident of Sister Flora McIntyre who was to be the Chairlady of the evening. She was ably replaced by Bro. Leon Bennett as chairman.

Grace was spoken by Bro. M. Starke who that afternoon had been elected the Grand Patriarch of the Grand Lodge of Quebec. A turkey dinner was served by the management to some 300 attending.

Mr. Bennett spoke the address of welcome responded to by Bro. Harold West, P.G.R. from Maine. Mr. Bennett introduced the head table: Sister Gloria Mundt, from Indiana; Sister Irene Williams, R.A. President; Bro. and Sister Richard Middleton, Co. A. Judd and Lady Judd; Sister Viola Noble; Bro. Omer Clement, Grand Patriarch of the Grand Lodge of Quebec; Bro. Gordon Clarke and Sister Clarke; Bro. C. L.

Vidite, Gr. Master of the Grand Lodge of Quebec.

Sister Mundt, Chaplain of the International Association of Rebekah Assemblies, from Fort Wayne, Indiana, representing the World President, Sister Hazel Lou Wallace of Shreveport, Louisiana, who was in Europe with Mr. Wallace, was the speaker of the evening.

Sister Mundt brought greetings of the IARA and from the World President Sister Wallace. Her address was one of challenge to every she said Odd Fellowship has its heritage of close to 150 years and Rebekah nearly 125 years.

She noted the accomplishments of the Order to assist mankind: the Eye Bank; education loan funds; Homes for the Aged; construction of high rise apartments for Senior Citizens; an eye screening program; youth pilgrimages and program; support of the Kindney Foundation; wheel chairs and home care items on loan.

Sister Mundt was introduced and thanked for her address by Sister Irene Williams.

Several distinguished guests were introduced among those were Grand Patriarchs, Grand Master and Rebekah Assembly graternity from the States of Massachusetts, Maine, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Vermont, Ontario and Indiana.

This gathering was the 96th anniversary of the Grand Lodge of Quebec and was convened on May 29 by Bro. Charles Vidite, Grand Master, assisted by Bro. John Morrison, Grand Representative from Montreal and Scotstown presiding. Bro. Vidite, Grand Patriarch in 1951, is one of the three oldest living GP. The elections held elected Edward Hyatt of Stanstead as the Grand Master for the coming year.

The 69th session of the Grand Encampment of Quebec was held on May 28 with Bro. Omer Clement, Grand Patriarch presiding. The elected officers for their year are Murray Starke, Grand Patriarch; Alvin Smith, G.H.P.; Stewart Bullock, G.W.S.W.; Raymond Curtis, G.J.W.; Percy Burnham, G. Scribe; Stanley Taylor, G. Treas.; Lawrence Dewey, G. Representative; Leon Bennett, G. Marshall; Robert Cavers, G.I.S.; Herbert Pratt, G.O.S.

One of the highlights at the Grand Lodge session on May 29 was the presentation of a charter for a Junior Lodge in District No. 10.

At the Friday evening banquet Rorie Tryhorn and Bryan Quilliams were introduced. Rorie is the Chief Ruler and voiced appreciation to the Odd Fellows for promotion of the Junior fraternity. They were later extended congratulations on their achievements and wished every success.

Friday and Saturday was the 79th session of the Rebekah Assembly of Quebec conducted by Sister Irene Williams of Cowansville. Their days, like those of the Grand Lodge and Grand Encampment were filled with the presentation of reports on the many worthwhile projects of the Quebec Lodges: Planning Boards; Wheel Chairs and equipment; United Nations Pilgrimage; the Edith Kathan Home in Bromo County; the necrology report and memorial observances.

Friday afternoon the Rebekah held Open Session with visitors non members of the Order present.

The opening floor work was presented by a team of page and officers from Prosperity Rebekah Lodge (See Sessions on Page 10)

Richmond historical society meets

RICHMOND — The annual meeting of the Richmond County Historical Society was held in the St. Francis Elementary School on May 18. About 50 people were present and Dr. V. Ignatieff was in the chair. Miss Jeanne Daigneault was a guest.

The minutes of the general meeting held last October in Windsor were read by Miss Bernice McAdams. As well Miss McAdams read a report prepared by Dr. Ignatieff on the operation of the museum last summer. A copy of this report has been forwarded to Mr. Langevin.

The treasurer, Mr. Creighton, reported a satisfactory bank balance.

Mrs. F. Converse, Housekeeper, stated that the Museum had been open 58 days, from June 25 to August 30, that Miss Cormier who was hired on a part-time basis had helped with the French tagging of articles, that a demonstration of rug making and a display of heirloom quilts had been put on and that the spring cleaning and fall storing away of articles had been done.

Mrs. Converse then read Dr. Ignatieff's translation and summary of the report made by Mr. de Gagne after he visited and evaluated the museum last spring. It was apparent that Mr. de Gagne was pleased with the way the museum is set up to show a typical home of a middle class family of the last century.

He felt that very few changes should be made but suggested that the third bedroom might be made into a child's toy and play area or an office of a 19th century doctor or notary.

Mr. McKeage, Building and Grounds Committee, reported that the clapboards on the front of the museum will be cleaned and painted and the grass mowed as far as the river bank.

Mrs. McNaughton stated that the volunteers' for Sunday staffing had carried out their duties and she asked members to sign up for the coming season.

Mrs. Wintle reported that the House Tour of September 27 had been most successful both financially and culturally. Another tour is being planned.

In the absence of Mckenzie Paige, who is convalescing, Mrs. S. Husk gave an interesting chronicle's report touching on local events of interest.

Dr. Ignatieff outlined briefly a proposal by Mr. Langevin, Director of Private Museums for Quebec province, to produce a bilingual brochure on the Museum. It would be prepared at the expense of the Department of Cultural Affairs, using their facilities and personnel, would be prefaced by a history of the Richmond area, and would contain photos of the interior of the Museum.

The Richmond Society would pay the cost of printing which need not be done at once. In addition, by late August the Ministry should be presented with a list of repairs to the building so

Canadian aid to the Third World

Last year, Canada surpassed the United Nations target of 1 per cent of the gross national product in total resource flows to developing countries. The exact figure was 1.18 per cent compared to .93 per cent in 1973. To reach this target, which was originally proposed by the late Lester Pearson, is no mean achievement, only half a dozen countries having managed to do so.

Canadian official development assistance increases at about 20 per cent a year and in 1976 is expected to go over $1 billion. Having travelled to many of the desperate parts of the world where much of this aid is directed, the need for our impressive generosity is unquestionable.

However, it is terribly disturbing that our aid is being offered with virtually no reference whatsoever to the political, social and economic order that makes possible our remarkable prosperity. Rather than bearing our gift with pride, not an unreasonable expectation for $1 billion, we seem to be singularly defensive, even apologetic.

It is impossible to separate the level of subsistence of a given society from that society's social system or culture. In other words, natural resources, or climate or the vagaries of the genetic pool are not the most important determinants of a nation's wealth.

For example, Sweden, with comparatively few natural resources and a harsh climate, has the highest standard of living in the world. While Burma and Sri Lanka, blessed with a veritably therapeutic climate and lush vegetation, have stagnating, if not deteriorating, economies.

If we turn to Western civilization for clues as to what these determinants might be, we find an unshakable respect for individual freedom and initiative and a long tradition of political stability. These two variables are essential for achieving economic prosperity and, in turn, it is prosperity which permits the pragmatic humanitarianism that giving $1 billion is.

Daniel Moynihan, the American ambassador to the UN, recently wrote in Commentary: "It is time we asserted that inequalities in the world may be not so much a matter of condition as of performance." It is wise to view with considerable alarm the pious posturing of many Third World countries and their often abusive and vindictive rhetoric which would have us believe that we, the prosperous nations, are somehow responsible for their economic woes, if not all their other woes, and that the West's economic and political system is doomed to utter failure in the face of their enlightened socialism.

Of course, they choose to ignore that their ideological brethren, that is, "Second World" socialist countries, are far less forthcoming with aid than capitalist countries. In 1973, the "Second World" provided developing countries with $1.4 billion in aid compared with the "First World's" $11.9 billion. Amnd the hope that Arab dinars would flow abundantly and freely has not been fulfilled. But however heavy a tune the Arabs call there are many willing participants, as is repeatedly evidenced in the UN when Third World countries dutifully line up to vote on a variety of anti-Israeli measures.

While supporting the call for a New World Economic Order, there are grave doubts that much can be accomplished unless we begin to oppose the vengeful rhetoric and tactics of Third World countries motivated by lingering memories of colonial times and the desire for Arab blessings. Equally important, we must openly discuss how best to achieve growth in developing countries. One does not hear enough of the fact that countries like Brazil, Taiwan, Singapore, South Korea, Israel and Nigeria have achieved remarkable rates of growth principally, it is felt, because foreign aid was concentrated in the private sectors of their economies.

This is not a popular view to espouse to countries passionately committed to socialism. And Canada, if we are to believe the pronouncements of Paul Gerin-Lajoie, president of the Canadian International Development Agency, agrees with this majority.

This policy of appeasement undermines the very political and economic system which makes possible the generosity on which developing areas depend, and could reach the point where all the compassion in the world won't be worth a nickel.

Perhaps it is time for us as well to make a few declarations - like we are a great nation and we have much more to give than money.

Habitat conference

Says rich must aid poor or face violence

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mexican President Luis Echeverria warned the world's wealthy countries Monday they will have to make concessions to the poor countries or face a violent future.

He told the UN Habitat conference that efforts by the rich countries to "manipulate the agony of peoples in order to finance the economic recovery of countries that have for so long lived in abundance shows a lack of foresight that can only lead to the gravest consequences."

He was critical of the developed world's unsympathetic response to proposals by Third World countries on creating a common fund to finance buffer stocks across a range of commodities to help needy countries.

Chances of setting up a new international economic order have apparently become "dangerously remote" in discussions at the UN Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) in Nairobi, Kenya, the Mexican president said.

External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen has expressed reservations about the commonfund plan because of the difficulty of administering it.

Mr. Echeverria concentrated on dealings between countries, saying urban problems in developed countries are vastly different from those in poorer countries.

"The truth is . . . that it is internal colonialism and unfair international economic relations that condemn these peoples to unemployment and marginalization," he said.

Decisions should be made cooperatively in the world and the rich must give up their wasteful style of life, but recently the industrial states seemed to care more about "questions of profit and loss" than about the plight of the poor, he said.

Mr. Echeverria held a brief meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau following a luncheon for heads of delegations sponsored by Governor-General Jules Leger.

A Trudeau aide said the meeting lasted about 15 minutes, during which the two men reviewed progress made on a cultural agreement and one covering double taxation made when the prime minister visited Mexico early this year.

Officials of the two countries soon will start working out the double taxation agreement which covers Mexican nationals living in Canada and Canadians in Mexico, and will start work on the cultural agreement in the fall.

The aide said the two also discussed the Canadian response to a request by Mr. Echeverria that Canada join the Organization of American States (OAS).

Mr. Trudeau restated his position that Canada does not wish to join. Canada believes it has more independence of action in Latin America by not being a member.

Words of love not enough

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mother Teresa, known throughout the world for her work with the poor in the slums of Calcutta, said Monday that Prime Minister Trudeau's words of love are not enough.

She was referring to the prime minister's remarks made earlier in the day at the opening session of Habitat, the United Nations conference on human settlements.

Mr. Trudeau told official delegations that man must learn to live in a passionate way. He said it is clear that if man hopes to survive, he must learn to socialize more and learn to live with one another.

"We will thus have not only to tolerate one another, but to love one another in a way which will require of us an unprecedented desire to change ourselves," the prime minister said in his address.

Later at a Habitat Forum news conference, Mother Teresa said: "Love with words is not enough."

"That's not the answer," she suggested the prime minister turn his words of love into actions of love, by sharing some of his material wealth with somebody who has none.

"I think this is what is really love in action," she said. "And I think if he and those people who are involved in this desire of improving and changing . . . begin with themselves, then it will be a definite change."

Mother Teresa was at Habitat Forum on Monday to deliver a lecture on working for the most disadvantaged.

Habitat Forum is an unofficial parallel meeting to the official UN conference and is being held at a remodelled air force base about four miles from the downtown core.

Mother Teresa said the one point she would like the UN conference to concentrate on is understanding love.

"I really hope that they will take just one point (understanding love) and make it a life. We take too many resolutions and as a rule we don't fulfil one."

Commenting on her tour of Canada and the United States, she said one thing she has noticed is "the terrible loneliness of the people, of the unknown poor, so to say."

She said people in North America who have been hurt by their exclusion from society take that hurt and attempt to hurt others.

"I think this is something that as a rule you don't find in places where people have material poverty."

Mother Teresa suggested Canadians should come to know their own poor.

"Here in this country and other countries, the rich countries, I think we bypass the reality of knowing our own poor in our home."

Mother Teresa is the founder of the Missionaries of Charity whose sisters devote their lives to helping the poor in Calcutta slums. She also is involved in the rehabilitation of lepers.

A place for people

Ed. Note: The following is an article by Doris Anderson, editor of Chatelaine magazine, written concerning the present Habitat conference in Vancouver.

Ideally people should all live in aesthetically pleasing surroundings and convenience so that the things we need — space, air, food, household necessities as well as entertainment and recreation — are within reach with a minimum of strain. We need privacy to be alone to read, to study, to dream, to renew the soul. As well we need to feel part of a friendly, safe community.

The way we live in many parts of North America tends to exactly negate these goals.

By far the majority of people live in isolation and inconvenience in large, ugly city sprawls. We live in isolated apartment cells or cramped, high priced, high density houses. Few of us are isolated enough not to be aware of the glare of our neighbor's television. Yet within our individual housing units there's little privacy. Our neighbors are often complete strangers — or even potential enemies.

Parkland and park space grows more and more scarce. Yet live concerts and theatre which should be a bonus of big city living is prohibitively expensive and inaccessible for most people. We could use our electronic technology to bring art, music and theatre to people in neighborhood cultural centres equipped with high fidelity sound. But instead little TV boxes in individual homes through a multitude of channels pump pap into our homes by the hour, measured off by clusters of commercials — rarely even original let alone uplifting and the effect is to increase our sense of isolation.

Our cities are not designed for humans. They are designed for the convenience of cars. To do almost anything — shop, visit friends, even go to a movie, we first have to enter a car — often over-sized and energy-consuming.

Yet a young mother with small children in a high rise is as isolated as if she lived in a concrete cave many stories high in the air. In centuries gone by she would be surrounded by relatives and friends to help her with the children and communal work. Today the struggle of even getting her children out for a walk is difficult (few buildings have nurseries) and shopping is her main recreation. She scarcely knows her neighbors and adult conversation and useful community work is cut off from her.

We've been enticed on by a siren song of futuristic cities with moving sidewalks, totally electronically equipped, and a world brought together by even bigger and faster cars and mammoth airplanes. This plastic bubble burst with the realization that our civilization is running out of gas as well as coal and electrical power.

So when we begin to re-think about the way we want to live let's build cities for human and community needs, not for unlimited consumption and cars.

Yester Years

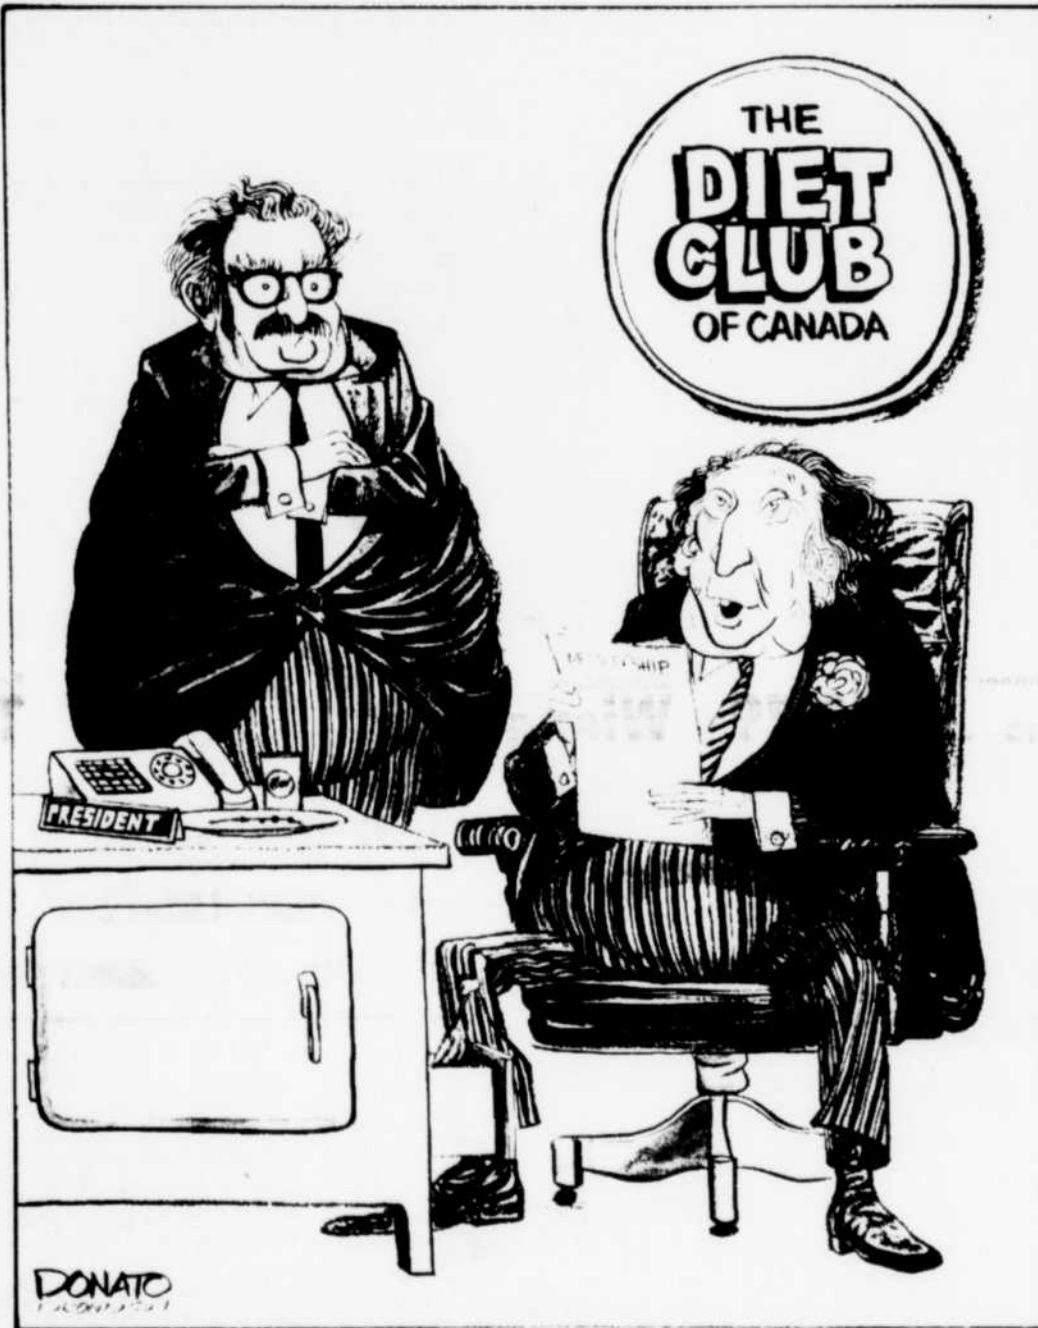

20 years ago

LENNOXVILLE — Jean Marie Gagnon, proprietor of the Depot Street lunch stand, was closing up shop on Thursday when two men tried to force their way in. Mr. Gagnon was counting his days receipts at the time and would not let them in. He claims one man held something that resembled a pistol.

While the men were trying to get in, a Lennoxville police car came by and frightened them away. The patrol car gave chase to Sherbrooke but lost track of the car when entering the city.

60 years ago

HATLEY — A lively runaway occurred here Tuesday evening when Mr. Ben Giroux's horse with buggy attached, started from Maplewood Farm about two miles south of the village and running by a circuitous route finally brought up on Mr. Glidden's lawn, near the Methodist Church. A small crowd was attracted who made frantic but fruitless efforts to capture the frightened animal. Dashing back through the village and driving on-lookers out of his path, the horse made for home, the only resultant damage, being a couple of broken spokes.

"AFTER ALL JEAN LUC...IT'S YOUR JOB TO KEEP THESE PEOPLE IN LINE...THEY'LL JUST HAVE TO LEARN A LITTLE RESTRAINT!"

Spirit of Plans, Georgia

WASHINGTON — The stately, white Baptist church blends naturally into the peaceful rural setting of Plains, Ga. Its traditional steeple and stained-glass windows are indistinguishable from thousands of other small-town churches throughout the South.

But this particular little church has a parishioner who may become President: Jimmy Carter.

Our roving reporter, Hal Bernton, joined the Carter family for Sunday services. He sat next to the candidate's mother, Lillian Carter, but moved away after she whispered politely: "Jimmy usually sits here."

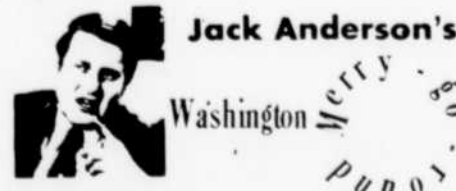

A smiling Carter, accompanied by his Secret Service guards, arrived in time to teach his Sunday school class. He embraced a parishioner, turned to wave to a photographer and then entered through a side door.

He was the ideal Sunday school teacher, with his easiness of manner, his engaging sincerity, the way his whole personality smiled every time he grinned. He had a gift, too, for expressing himself movingly and for reducing great issues to simple moral principles.

Other members of the congregation still talk about how he stood up for those principles during the turmoil over civil rights in 1964. As a church deacon, he missed the critical meeting when the other 11 deacons and the pastor voted unanimously to ban blacks from the congregation.

The next Sunday, Carter stood before the congregation and urged them to reverse the decision of the deacons. The congregation disregarded his appeal and voted to segregate their church. The Carters cast five of the six dissenting votes.

Carter's spirited sister, Gloria Spann, resigned from the church in protest. But Jimmy Carter stayed on. Racial segregation in churches had become a largely forgotten political issue in the 1970s. But Detroit's black mayor, Coleman Young, speaking in Carter's behalf, accused his presidential rival, Morris Udall, of belonging to a church that discriminates against blacks. Carter refused to repudiate the statement.

In fact, Udall's church welcomes blacks to its services. Carter's church, despite his objections, does not. His sister told Bernton that the only blacks she can recall attending the church were a Secret Service man and a Georgia state trooper who were there to protect Carter.

Bernton also visited Koinonia, a small, closed religious community six miles down the road from Plains. Koinonia is a mixed community of blacks and whites, who practice a simple communal Christianity.

During the passions of the late 1960s, many of the more traditional residents of the area viewed Koinonia as a hotbed of radical and dangerous philosophies. The brotherhood taught there was regarded by some as outright Communism.

Koinonia's produce market was bombed, and snipers periodically fired random shots at the community's small houses. The people of Plains even organized a boycott against Koinonia's products. Most merchants and farmers refused to do business with the community. Those who dared to deal with Koinonia found their own products boycotted.

Florence Jordan, widow of Koinonia's founder, told Bernton: "We are Southerners, so we understood . . . I can count on the fingers of my right hand the number of people who stood behind us during those difficult times, and Jimmy Carter was not one."

But the candidate's mother told Bernton that in those troubled times her son offered to buy the farm's produce if there was no one else who would buy it.

Bernton concluded after spending almost a week visiting with Carter's neighbors that the Democratic front runner is a decent man, with granite in his character but a limit to his vision.

Hays Hotline: Wayne Hays, the Ohio Democrat in trouble for allegedly keeping a mistress on the congressional payroll, may have tipped his hand two years ago.

When Secretary of State Henry Kissinger called him early one morning, Hays answered the phone with a bright, "Hello, honey."

Ford Flick: Two weeks before the world premiere last April of the Watergate movie, "All The President's Men," Robert Redford rejected a White House request to give Gerald Ford a private advance showing.

Co-star Redford told White House officials politely but firmly that Ford could have free tickets to the premiere at Washington's Kennedy Center where he could see the film "just like everyone else."

Ford didn't show up for the premiere, and at this writing neither he nor his wife has seen the movie.

In one scene, Ford is shown announcing Richard Nixon's nomination in 1972. Actually, a second Ford scene was considered as the film's finale. It would have shown Ford bidding goodbye to the disgraced Nixon as he flew from the White House in a helicopter.

Redford told us he vetoed the scene for artistic, not political, reasons. Copyright, 1976, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

ENGAGED — The engagement is announced of Norma Jane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Rick, of Danville, Que., to Mr. Brian E. Lockwood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest P. Lockwood, of Danville, Que. Miss Rick is in the graduating class of physical education of the University of New Brunswick. Mr. Lockwood is a graduate of Carleton University and is a chartered accountant. The wedding has been arranged to take place on July 3rd in St. Augustine's Church, Danville.

Ann Landers says: Hardest but most rewarding job

Dear Ann Landers: Why is it that these days kids blame everything on their parents? I am sick of reading articles telling parents how to get along with their teens. What we need is some articles for teens telling them how to get along with their parents.

I grew up during the Depression and we were really poor. My folks weren't perfect but they did the best they could. I grew up with bad teeth and went without glasses for too many years because there was no money for "luxuries" such as eye doctors and orthodontists. We didn't have the social service agencies in those days. I never heard of kids going to a psychiatrist when I was growing up but somehow they made it and most of them did a lot better than the "privileged" kids we see all around us who are getting "help."

I hope the teenagers who read your column will stop and think of what is involved raising kids these days. It's the hardest job there is, and they never seem to appreciate what their parents go through until they have kids of their own. — We Know

Dear W.K.: How true! Raising kids IS the hardest job there is. But it's also the most rewarding, if the kids turn out right. Thank you for a provocative letter.

Dear Ann Landers: This might not sound like much of a problem to you, but it bothers me a lot. Maybe getting it off my chest will help.

My husband and I have been married since 1965. Three years ago we were sitting and talking and suddenly he looked at me and said, "You are NOT a beautiful woman, that's all there is to it. You just aren't." I was stunned.

He must have noticed the hurt look on my face because he quickly added, "Don't get me wrong. You look all right."

I never had any illusions about myself, Ann. While I'm no beauty, I always hoped my husband thought I was pretty, though he never said so.

Now whenever he makes a complimentary remark about some woman's looks, I remember what he said to me that night and I feel hurt all over again. Am I being silly? When I ask him if he really loves me, he says, "I'm still here, ain't I?"

What do you think? Am I BEING — Too Vain?

Dear T.V.: Face it, doll. It's like pulling teeth to get a compliment out of some men and you are married to one.

When you recognize that the problem is his and not yours, you'll feel better. Apparently your husband comes from a long line of icebergs and he just can't thaw out and express his feelings.

Dear Ann Landers: The letter signed "Right Next Door" brought back some hilarious memories.

Fifty years ago, when I was a young man in my 20s, I roomed in one of those old houses that stood in a row with several other identical houses, twelve feet apart. Opposite my bedroom window was the bedroom window of the house next door.

One night while sitting in the dark listening to my radio, I became aware that a light was on over there. I looked out and saw two attractive, shapely girls parading back and forth as they took off their clothes. It was as if they were practicing to become strip-teasers. I realized the girls were putting on a show especially for me.

After ten minutes I turned my light ON and they turned their light OFF. Not wishing to seem unappreciative I took off every stitch of clothing and put on my pajamas. I could hear them giggling. I turned off my light and went to bed.

That was 30 years before we had TV in living color and it never did me any harm. Funny thing, Ann, I never met either of those girls face to face. — Wish I Were Seventy Again

Dear Wish: Never did you any harm? Probably not. If you never met either of the girls face to face, I'd say it never did you any good, either. Have a nice day, Gramps, and thanks for sharing.

Spring theme at Christian club

SHERBROOKE — There was a lovely feeling of Spring at the eighth meeting of Sherbrooke Christian Women's Club, on Wednesday, May 12th. The emphasis was on flowers as Paul McKenna gave a delightful demonstration, producing three beautiful arrangements. Many were the queries as to plant care and the advice most enlightening.

Soloist Carol Jones added to the brightness of the occasion with her sweet singing, and the whole was topped off by Laverne Lewycky's humorous and witty address. There was no lack of attention during this luncheon, the program was excellent and concluded with a tremendous challenge.

This club is a part of an international organization, with headquarters in Kansas City, Missouri and Toronto, Ontario. It is inter-church and non-sectarian, having some 1,500 groups across Canada, the United States and around the world. There are no membership or dues.

Special feature for next month will be "Refurbishing of Antiques" by Ken Herring of Linger Longer Reg'd in Lennoxville. The Paulette Family Quartet will present the special music and Martha Wilkinson of Montreal will be the guest speaker. The luncheon is to be held on Wednesday, June 9th, at Auberge des Gouverneurs, 3131 King West, from 12:30 - 2:30 p.m.

You are invited to make reservations for nursery and luncheon, with Janette Haggarty at 565-1951.

Yogurt claimed health cure

OTTAWA (CP) — A Guelph food science professor prescribes a daily dose of yogurt as a cure for such intestinal problems as gas, constipation and diarrhea and suggests it may even inhibit cancers.

Dr. C. L. Dutschaveer told a food conference here Monday that studies have shown the lactobacillus, one of the two bacteria strains in yogurt, helps to balance the microbial system in the intestines.

"And a study done at the University of Nebraska indicates yogurt may inhibit the formation of cancers in mice—but much more research needs to be done on this before conclusions can be drawn," he said.

Dr. Dutschaveer told the 19th annual conference of the Canadian Institute of Food Science and Technology that yogurt is exceptionally nutritional "and more easily digestible than the milk it is made from."

The same lactobacillus helps suppress a dangerous strain of intestinal bacteria—e. coli serotypes—which Dr. Dutschaveer says have been linked with crib deaths in bottle-fed infants.

And it's been used for treatment of infant diarrhea that does not respond to antibiotics.

Polly's Pointers

Wooden mixing spoon should not be soaked

By Polly Cramer

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I do hope you or some reader can tell me how to properly care for wooden mixing spoons. So much has been said about cutting boards and utensils and the bacteria and germs that can lurk on them. I use my wooden spoons so much, but I hate to soak them as they get soft. Is it advisable to use bleach when washing them? —HELEN

DEAR HELEN — Never put such spoons in your dishwasher. They usually only need to be wiped off or rinsed with cold water and thoroughly dried. Keep away from the heat and use as little water as possible. They might be kept wrapped in foil or plastic wrap between use, if afraid of germs. Any cleaning should be done immediately after use so the wood does not absorb odors from whatever it has been in contact with. If a scrubbing is needed use soap and lukewarm water and then rinse with cold water. Drying is always important and never leave such spoons to soak in water. —POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My husband installed a window shade behind my built-in stove. I always pull it down before doing any frying. Now my wall covering is just like new and only needs an occasional wiping off. All my friends thought this such a good idea that I should share it with others. —MRS H.E.D.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns little children, mothers with babies and the aged who all tire quickly and easily when shopping. I wonder why stores, shopping centers and super-markets do not have good hardwood chairs or seats scattered about, so that people can get a little weight off their feet and then do a better and more intelligent job of shopping. —G.K.B.

DEAR POLLY — My idea is for anyone having an unused small suitcase or attache case. I keep all my packaged or folded gift wrapping paper in the pocket in the top of such a case. The bottom holds ribbon, cards, tape and a small pair of scissors. Everything is in one place and this case takes up very little space laid flat on a closet shelf with storage space on top of it. —G.H.

DEAR POLLY — My son and I work a lot of jigsaw puzzles, so eventually the boxes become so ragged that the seams tear open and pieces are lost. Now I save my one and two pound coffee cans to hold the different sizes of puzzles. These cans are covered with adhesive backed paper and labeled as to what the picture is. If there is a picture on the box that can be cut out and put on the new container, I do that. —MARIE.

DEAR POLLY — Washing picture windows in the winter is a cold job. Here in Minnesota it is so cold the window cleaner freezes on the window before one can wipe it off. Our solution for this is to use windshield washer fluid as it does not freeze. Hope this will help others with the same problem. — MRS. W.J.

DEAR POLLY — I had several pounds of hamburger meat to be made into patties and my husband was helping me. He spread the meat out on waxed paper, patted it down and used a plastic margarine tub lid to cut out the patties just as if he were cutting out cookies. This worked fine and the job went much faster. —MRS R.L.B.

Paris designers reflect changing moods

SOFT BLOUSES ease the man-tailoring in suits for women this season. A Pierre Balmain design is gray pink woolen tartan with pink crepe de chine blouse.

FOR EVENING Guy Laroche creates a symphony of lilac, mauve and parma violet for a long silk muslin printed dress. Added touch is cluster of South African ostrich feathers.

WHITE predominated in the Paris showings and this flannel pants suit from the Givenchy collection highlights its use. Accents are black shirt, felt cap and patent shoes.

PIERRE CARDIN revives the hobble skirt idea in a blue and white printed muslin dress for daytime wear. White, broadbrimmed straw hat and off-shoulder effect complete ensemble.

ACW meeting

AYER'S CLIFF — The regular meeting of the Anglican Church Women was held at the Parish Hall, May 6, with ten members answering the roll call.

Mrs. Imogene Browning, president, opened the meeting by reading prayers from the Living Message and all repeated the Guild Prayers.

Mrs. Muriel Martin, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting, also several thank you notes.

The Treasurer, Mrs. Connie Ashworth, gave the financial statement showing that the proceeds from the sugaring-off party were very gratifying. We express thanks to all the people who attended.

Mrs. Browning reported on the Biennial meeting held in Sherbrooke May 3rd and 4th.

It was announced that Bishop Cyril Wickremehinghi of Ceylon would be speaking in Ayer's Cliff at St. George's Church, Sunday, May 9th, at 7:30 p.m. Plans were made to serve cookies, tea and coffee afterwards in the parish hall.

Final plans for the rummage sale were made and workers for Friday night and Saturday, May 7 & 8 mornings, were solicited.

There being no further business, the meeting was adjourned, after which Mrs. Barbara Wintle, hostess for the month served dainty refreshments.

Golden Age Club

KNOWLTON — The Knowlton Golden Age Club meeting on Tuesday afternoon, May 25 was attended by 55 members with 13 tables of "500" played and one table of "crazy 8's".

The Five Hundred top scorers were Ladies: (1st) Mrs. Elvia Johnson; (2nd) Mrs. Bonita Whitehead. Gents: (1st) Nelson Langevin; (2nd) Grayson Cousins. Mrs. Lyndall Dudley won the door prize.

Members were asked for names of those planning on going on the bus trip to Ausable Chasm on June 22. A social time and refreshments brought the meeting to a close.

Habitat: No need for agency

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shin Kanemaru, head of the Japanese delegation to the United Nations Habitat conference, told the conference's plenary session Tuesday his country does not see any great need for a permanent UN Habitat agency.

Conference organizers said earlier a restructuring of existing UN divisions to establish a UN Human Settlement agency was a major goal of the world meeting.

In a speech outlining his country's position on human settlement problems, Mr. Kanemaru said arrangements should be made "to assure efficient operation of the whole United Nations system and to avoid institutional proliferation."

He said settlement problems are basically national in nature and he hoped such organizations as the World Bank, the UN development program and other international assistance agencies would step up their activities.

Meanwhile, security arrangements became much more obvious at Tuesday's second day of the conference.

Subsidies cut hit by Drummond

QUEBEC (CP) — Agriculture Minister Kevin Drummond has criticized the federal government for reducing feed grain subsidies without first informing Quebec.

"My deputy-minister was in Ottawa Monday and he got no collaboration from the federal government," Mr. Drummond said in the national assembly Tuesday.

"We have made several representations before the federal government on this issue and the minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board agreed to collaborate with Quebec before announcing any measures," he explained.

The board announced in Ottawa Monday that the federal government would virtually eliminate feed freight assistance rates to western Quebec. Rates in eastern parts of the province will remain unchanged due to a heavier reliance by producers on outside supplies.

Lucien Lessard (PQ-Saguenay) said it was the second time in the last few weeks that Ottawa has taken measures with adverse repercussions for Quebec farmers.

He said milk quotas announced recently by Ottawa were insufficient and would cost Quebec producers several million dollars.

He said many aspects of native life are particularly relevant to Habitat. He cited a strong attachment to the land and its resources, the sharing of community wealth, and a strong sense of community life.

He avoided detailed reference to proposals to extend government control over land use.

The statement by the Soviet Union to the plenary session said resources for decent housing exist in the overwhelming majority of countries but are unjustly distributed.

The Soviet statement has repeatedly urged disarmament programs so national resources could be spent more productively in areas such as housing and human settlements.

A statement read by Ingvar Carlsson, housing minister for Sweden, said the construction of human settlements should be directed by human needs, not profit-making.

Mr. Carlsson said the basic principle underlying the Swedish housing policy has long been that housing is a social right and not a commercial commodity.

Delegates were told by External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen the Canadian government is "terribly concerned with the urban despoliation of some of Canada's best farmland."

He also indicated Canada endorses two of Habitat's key goals—the establishment of a human settlement policy by each national government, and the establishment of a full-time UN Habitat agency.

UNDERLINE NEEDS

Mr. MacEachen said the special needs, aspirations and rights of Canada's native population should be underlined.

Catholic Women's League

MAGOG — On Tuesday evening, May 11th, the Magog Council of the Catholic Women's League held their annual monthly meeting. This took place at the home of Mrs. P. Boileau, President, Mrs. A. Buzzell presided.

The meeting opened with prayer, and a reading of the Scripture.

Welfare Convenor, Mrs. C. Turgeon reported that the sum of $21.73 was spent on footwear for two children.

Six League members spent nine hours canvassing for the Canadian Red Cross, and collected the sum of $296.95.

The "White Elephant Sales", are so popular and profitable that it was decided to conduct another sale in October.

Mrs. Buzzell, appointed the following ladies for convenorships, Mrs. F. Rolland, Christian Family; Mrs. L. Buck, Resolutions; Mrs. P. Boisseau, Cultural Life; Mrs. R. Ethier, Monthly Teas; Mrs. G. Noiseux, Mrs. M. Chayer, and Mrs. S. Latulippe, Entertainment Convenors.

During the evening, a collection was taken for an impoverished Indian family.

At the close of the business meeting, a social evening was enjoyed, during which the hostess served refreshments.

Sessions

No. 32 Cowansville, the home lodge of the Rebekah Assembly president. It was a beautiful ceremony as they opened a large gold heart in the floor center under which the dignitaries were introduced, then escorted to the front presented with a gift and seated.

Among those to be presented were the International officers; the Rebekah Assembly officers; District Deputy Presidents; and large number of Past Assembly presidents, all welcomed with the reading of a beautiful and suitable poem by Sister Williams.

The Courtesy committee introduced guests from several jurisdictions of the United States and Canada. The Canadian Flag was presented by Sister Elizabeth Goyette, P.N.G., the American, by Sister Nora Densmore, Warden, R.A. of New Hampshire, and the Rebekah Flag by Sister Rhoda Stanley, P.N.G. as each was presented Sister Williams read a lovely poem of dedication and after the flags were in place the National Anthems were sung.

Sister Beulah Whitecher, P.P. spoke the address of welcome to the visiting fraternity and this was responded to by Sister Evelyn Teel, P.N.G. Copies of the I.A.R.A. were distributed to delegates by Sister Isabelle Cruickshank, P.P. who was representative.

At the Saturday morning Rebekah Assembly, Sister Mundt spoke the address in the absence of Sister Wallace.

The officers elected for the Rebekah Assembly for the year of the IOOF, Grand Lodge of Quebec were: Edward Hyatt, Grand Master; Ralph Bernard, Deputy Grand Master; Fred Currier, G. Secretary; Bruce Adams, G. Warden; Roy Murnahan, G. Treas.; Freeman Grant, G. Marshall; Lyle Brooks, G. Conductor; Hugh M. Patton, G. Chaplain; Carl Findlay, G. Guardian; Wm. Taylor, G. Color Bearer; Richard J. Middleton, G. Musician; Edward Hyatt, G. Representative.

What did you forget to do yesterday?

If you forgot to complete your Census of Canada Questionnaire yesterday, didn't know how to, or didn't receive a questionnaire in the official language of your choice, it's not too late to do something about it. We still need the information only you can give us.

What if you forgot?

No problem. Just pick up a pencil and fill in your questionnaire. If a pre-paid, self-addressed envelope is enclosed with your census package, mail back the completed questionnaire in this envelope. If a self-addressed envelope is not enclosed, keep the questionnaire in a safe place. The census representative will pick it up before June 18.

What if you didn't know how?

Please refer to the Instruction Booklet provided. If you've lost the booklet or there is something you still don't understand, call the Telephone Assistance Service at the number printed on your questionnaire and we'll take it from there.

What if you didn't receive a questionnaire?

If we missed you, or if you didn't receive a questionnaire in the official language of your choice, simply pick up a phone, call the long distance operator and ask for ZENITH 0-1976. The call is free and the operator will put you in touch with your nearest Telephone Assistance Service.

It wouldn't be right without you.

Census Day is so important to the future of Canada that there is a law requiring you to count yourself in. But most Canadians participate willingly, because they know it helps their country and their community. So please help us make the Census of Canada a complete success.

It's not too late to count yourself in.

Richmond

that Mr. Langevin can arrange for funds to help pay for them.

The president's report followed. Dr. Ignatieff stated that keeping the Museum open five days a week had been a step forward. This summer it will be staffed by paid personnel on Mondays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays.

Dr. Ignatieff suggested that an air conditioner be installed in the third floor so that displays and demonstrations can be set up there. Both he and Mr. de Gagne feel that these activities stimulate attendance.

Dr. Ignatieff said that the greatest accomplishment had been the establishing of harmonious relations with the Ministry of Cultural Affairs and with Mr. Langevin. In closing, Dr. Ignatieff thanked the executive for supporting and participating in the programs he had planned. He foresees a bright future for the Society.

Mrs. R. Johnson spoke briefly about the proposed Eastern Townships History Foundation and Miss McAdams stated that information had been sent to the executive. Mrs. Sutherland pointed out that copies of our documents would be made for storage at Bishop's and that the University of Sherbrooke has been given permission to make copies of them.

The nominating committee presented the slate of officers: Honorary President, Miss Elizabeth Dunn; Hon. 1st Vice-pres., Mrs. R. Harris; Hon. 2nd Vice-pres., Mr. Fred Wintle; Hon. 3rd Vice-pres., Mr. Stafford Husk; Past-Pres., Dr. V. Teri York could finish in top-three Teri York is only 20 but she has been engaged in competitive diving almost half her life. Which is one reason why she may give up the sport after the Montreal Olympics.

It will depend on how well she does, however, because she would prefer to go out a winner.

"I'd be more inclined to stop competing if the results are good than if they're bad."

The Vancouver diver, who prefers the 10-metre platform to the three-metre springboard although she will compete in both in Montreal, is Canada's only Acard diver under the Game Plan assistance program.

That's because she reached the finals in both the springboard and tower events at the world championships last summer.

Her coach, Irene Macdonald, the last Canadian to win an Olympic diving medal, in the three-metre in 1956, rates Miss York as the diver with the best hope of finishing in the top three in Montreal.

Teri is an important reason why Canada has moved up rapidly in international diving in recent years.

WOMEN IMPROVING

The fact is, however, that most of the improvement has been among the women.

"It's difficult to explain why. Most of us have at one time or another won top international events during the last four years. We've always had Bev Boys but now we have the depth. I really can't explain why the men haven't progressed at the same rate. But, then, our women divers were always there."

At the Canada Cup international competition in the Toronto suburb of Etobicoke in April, Teri was asked about Canada's Olympic chances.

"We're facing the best in the world here. We're doing great here, so I don't know why we shouldn't be in the medals at Montreal. It will be pretty much against the same divers."

Her devotion to the sport is reflected in the fact that she regularly competes in pain. She has been plagued by an assortment of injuries in recent years and suffers from tenosynovitis in her left shoulder.

"You know, it gets so painful at times that I can't get my arms above my shoulders. I'm always having therapy on it. But you can't let it interfere with your diving. You just try to blank it from your mind and concentrate on what's ahead."

TWO YEARS TO GO

Miss York has completed her third year of studies in geography at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, B.C., and has two more years until she obtains her teaching certificate.

If she does give up diving after the Olympics, she will not go into coaching immediately, she says.

"When I quit, I quit. I'd like some day to put back into diving what I got out of it but I need to get away from the sport completely for a while."

Some divers go out of their way to avoid watching others, mainly because it interferes with their concentration. But Teri doesn't mind being a spectator at the right time.

"The thing I like most is to see a difficult dive performed and realize that it's not really that hard. When you see other people doing it, you know you can do the same thing. It's just a matter of doing it."

Anne Jardin turns in top performance in Canadian Olympic swimming trials

TORONTO (CP) — Anne Jardin, calling herself "slim, trim and ready to move," highlighted a day of record-breaking performances Tuesday in the opening events of the Canadian Olympic swimming trials.

Miss Jardin, who said she had lost 25 pounds since February, won the women's 100-metre freestyle final with a Commonwealth and Canadian record time of 57.48 seconds, beating former Canadian record-holder Gail Amundrud of Vancouver.

The 16-year-old Pointe Claire, Que., swimmer then went out and gained a tie for third spot in the women's 200-metre butterfly only to announce she may not swim that event at Montreal.

Cheryl Gibson of Vancouver, after setting a Commonwealth and Canadian record of 2:15.37 in the 200 butterfly heats, went on to win the final in 2:15.41.

George Nagy of Vancouver broke the Canadian record with a 2:04.10 clocking in the men's 200 butterfly heats before winning the final in 2:04.46.

MISSEN OWN MARK

The only event of the day that didn't produce a record was the men's 100-metre backstroke where Stephen Pickell took the gold medal with a time of 57.82.

Miss Jardin said she had trimmed down to 140 pounds from 165 at the winter nationals in Brantford, Ont., where she failed to impress.

"In Brantford I just wasn't ready," said Miss Jardin. "But here I feel slim, trim and ready to move."

Her 57.48 in the 100-metre freestyle was her second record of the day. Earlier, she was clocked in 58.12 in the heats, breaking the previous Commonwealth mark of 58.20 held by Sonya Gray of Australia and Miss Amundrud's previous Canadian record of 58.63.

Barbara Clark of Calgary took third place in the 100 freestyle with a 58.37 clocking, well under the Olympic standard of 1:00.1 needed to qualify three swimmers for Montreal.

In the women's 200 butterfly, Miss Gibson's 2:15.37 in the heats eclipsed the former Commonwealth record of 2:16.55 by Australian Michelle Ford and the former Canadian mark of 2:17.07 held by Wendy Quick of Pointe Claire.

Becky Smith of Thunder Bay, Ont., a former teammate of Miss Gibson's at Edmonton before both girls moved last year, claimed second in the 200 butterfly with a 2:16.09 clocking.

Miss Jardin and Miss Quirk tied for third in 2:16.69, both well under the Olympic standard for three entries of 2:22.3.

That appeared to present the team selection committee with a problem but Miss Jardin said later she would likely drop out of the butterfly, leaving Miss Quirk to take that qualifying spot.

"I looked at the Olympic schedule and the 100 freestyle and the butterfly are too close together," said Miss Jardin. "I think it would be just too hard on me."

Orr Sweepstakes open

Several clubs are interested

The bidding sweepstakes is on for Bobby Orr, the sought-after but injury-plagued defenceman who, along with more than 70 of his National Hockey League associates, became a free agent Tuesday.

Any club willing to meet the decorated defenceman's demands of a five-year contract worth $3 million could enter the battle for hockey's answer to Jim (Catfish) Hunter, and lawyer Alan Eagleson has been quoted as saying that 10 to 12 teams from both the NHL and World Hockey Association already have made clear their intentions.

Those teams include Los Angeles, Montreal, Philadelphia, Chicago and St. Louis of the NHL and Calgary, Edmonton, Cincinnati and New England of the WHA, says Eagleson, who was in Bermuda with Orr and the rest of the NHL Players' Association heads who are meeting there.

Eagleson said in a published report that Orr would "absolutely not return" to Boston Bruins, for whom he has played since he broke into the league in 1966-67. That left the door open to the clubs willing to take a chance on a pair of gimpy knees which have undergone five operations.

While Orr and Eagleson waited for the big-money offers to roll in, most of the other names on the free-agent list waited for any offer at all from a club seeking their services. But economics have changed the game's pay structure, and a number of team officials reached by The Associated Press have indicated that many of the players on the list may have a tough time finding a job.

Pollock not going to chase Bruins' Orr

MONTREAL (CP) — Don't look for Sam Pollock of Montreal Canadiens to go chasing after defenceman Bobby Orr to add to his National Hockey League club.

"Of course we're interested in Orr," Pollock said Tuesday. "You'd have to be foolish to say you weren't. But let's face it, obviously he doesn't fit into our scheme of things."

Alan Eagleson, lawyer for the former Boston Bruins star who became a free agent Tuesday, said Montreal was among 10 or 12 teams interested in Orr.

"Certainly some of these fellows haven't proven themselves," said John Ferguson, coach and general manager of New York Rangers. "There are definitely some fellows on this list who are going to have to consider taking a cut in salary, and some who are going to have to go to training camp to win their jobs."

"There are only a few I'd go after."

But "a few" leaves many of the free agents free, and there's no guarantee they won't remain that way.

The list, which was wired to each member team from NHL headquarters in Montreal at 9 a.m. Tuesday, is a guarded secret, although The AP has collected most of the names from a number of sources. Among the players whose contracts expired or whose option years have elapsed are goalies Denis

Herron of Kansas City and Ken Lockett of Vancouver; defencemen Dallas Smith of Boston and Rod Seiling of Toronto; forwards Denis Ververgaert of Vancouver, Rene Robert of Buffalo, Andre Savard of Boston, Dale Tallon of Chicago, Glen Sather of Minnesota and Mike Corrigan of Los Angeles.

Any of the free agents may sign with another team, but the team that acquires the player must compensate the player's former club—and that includes Orr, says NHL vice-president Don Ruck.

The compensation works as follows: the teams meet in an attempt to settle an agreement for the free agent with compensation of cash, players or draft choices. If they cannot agree, each makes one offer to Superior Court Judge Edward W. Houston of Toronto, who will choose one team's proposal.

Cards belt Expos, Pirates edge Mets

MONTREAL (CP) — St. Louis Cardinals continued their recent good play and Montreal Expos solidified their hold on last place in the East Division of baseball's National League by dropping a 6-2 decision Tuesday night to the Cardinals.

The Cardinals, who got off to a slow start this year, won their fourth in a row and their third in as many meetings with Montreal. The Expos' loss was their fifth straight since taking two games from the Pirates in Pittsburgh early last week.

The Cardinals took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Bake McBride, one of the St. Louis players hurt early in the year, singled to left to score Lou Brock. Brock reached first on the first of three errors by Montreal's Pepe Frias and then stole second and third, marking the first time this season he has had two steals in one game.

CARDINAL EJECTED

Frias' hit led to the ejection of Cardinals first baseman Reggie Smith, who was tossed out by umpire Jim Quick after complaining from the dugout that Tyson's throw had beaten Frias to the bag. It was the only thing that went wrong for St. Louis all night.

Ted Simmons had a two-run homer in the third inning and a ninth-inning single and Ken Rudolph drove in two runs with a double in the seventh to wrap up the Cardinals win.

Left-hander Pete Falcone scattered five Montreal hits to record his third win in seven decisions while Dan Warthen, 1-5, was charged with the loss.

LA LOSES AGAIN

In Tuesday's other National League games, Atlanta Braves walloped San Diego Padres 9-1, Philadelphia Phillies stopped Chicago Cubs 6-1 in a six-inning, rain-shortened game, St. Louis Cardinals turned back Montreal Expos 6-2, Houston Astros nipped Cincinnati Reds 2-1 and San Francisco Giants blanked Los Angeles Dodgers 6-0.

Tuesday's victory was Candelaria's fourth in seven decisions, but only his first since May 7.

The Pirates expected more out of him this season after an impressive showing at the end of last year that included a strong, if losing, performance against Cincinnati Reds in the National League playoffs.

Bob Robertson, with a two-run homer in the fourth inning, provided Candelaria with a 2-1 lead. The Pirates then scored their eventual winning run on a double by Bill Robinson and a single by Richie Zisk in the sixth inning.

BRAVES SNAP STRING

Earl Williams hit a three-run homer in the first inning and Roger Moret hurled a six-hitter after a shaky start as Atlanta snapped a four-game losing streak by beating San Diego.

Ron Reed, making his first start of the season after 14 relief appearances, pitched a four-hitter and Greg Luzinski hit a two-run homer as Philadelphia beat Chicago in a game stopped by torrential rains in the bottom of the sixth.

Reed, 4-1, struck out seven and walked none as the red-hot Phillies won their 18th game in 22.

Ted Simmons socked a two-run homer in the third inning and Ken Rudolph drove in two runs with a double in the seventh as St. Louis beat Montreal.

three errors committed by Montreal shortstop Pepe Frias.

Rookie Joaquin Andujar fired a two-hitter and Cesar Cedeño drove home the winning run with a sixth-inning single as Houston edged Cincinnati.

Ed Halicki fired a two-hitter for his first shutout of the season and Gary Matthews had three hits, leading San Francisco over Los Angeles.

Brief

TAKE LEAD

LONDON (Reuter) — The touring West Indian cricketers, with a first-inning lead of 54 over MCC, were 73 for two in their second innings at the close of the second day of their three-day match at Lord's Monday. The scores were West Indians 251 for nine declared and 73 for two; MCC 197.

Debbie Brill wins berth on squad

QUEBEC (CP) — Debbie Brill learned a lesson last year that cost her dearly at the time but it could be of long-range benefit as she takes measure of the women's world high jumping standard.

The 23-year-old Haney, B.C., native, who turned her back on the sport three years ago, ensured her berth on the Canadian Olympic track and field team Sunday by winning the event with a leap of 1.89 metres.

It was just shy of her Canadian standard of 1.90 set earlier this month at a track meet in California where she's been training since January.

"I got a bladder infection last year when we went to Europe (where she first reached 1.89 in late June)," Debbie recalled Sunday.

"I started getting very tired and I wasn't in contact with my body. I just passed it off as fatigue—usually I'm very high—and ignored it for about two months."

IGNORANCE COSTLY

Her ignorance of the ailment was costly. Debbie claims she never was right for the rest of the year and, while she will not admit it, probably cost her a medal at the Pan-American Games in October.

She felt the same symptoms coming on just before her Canadian record-setting performance in California.

"I let it go for two or three weeks before telling myself 'If you don't want to go through that again, you'd better get it cleared up.'"

"I've been taking medication for about two weeks now. It upset my training schedule a bit, but not that much where it's going to affect my performances."

Best individual performance of the two-day trials here was turned in by Vancouver sprinter Patty Loverock who won the women's 100 metres Saturday (10.2 seconds) and the 200 Sunday in the Canadian record time of 22.6 seconds.

She lopped almost a full second of her previous best performance in the 200 and both she and Joanne McTaggart of Saskatoon (22.8) surpassed the old standard of 23.1 held by Marjorie Bailey of Vancouver.

EQUAL RECORD

Both Loverock and Bailey equalled the 100-metre record of 11.1, set last week by Bailey in California, while winning their semi-final heats Saturday.

Other double winners on the weekend were pentathlon star Diane Jones of Saskatoon who won her specialty (4,507 points) and the long jump (6.31 metres) and Ottawa sprinter Hugh Fraser, winner of the men's 100 Saturday and the 200 Sunday.

Loverock, Jones and Fraser joined Brill on the Canadian Olympic track team.

Also making the team, by both winning here and either making the Olympic standard at this event or in a previous meet, were:

Brian Saunders, Toronto, 400 metres; Chris McCubbins, Winnipeg, 10,000 metres; Richard Rock, Toronto, long jump; Ken Wenman, Surrey, B.C., pole vault; Boris Chambul, Toronto, discuss; Grant McLaren, London, 5,000 metres; Daniel Tailon, Montreal, 110-metre hurdles; Robert Forget, Montreal, high jump; Bishop Dolgiewicz, Montreal, shot put; Margaret Stride, Waterford, Ont., 400 metres,

Supplies, prices of farm inputs forecast by Ottawa

OTTAWA — Agriculture Canada's Economics Branch has updated its 1976 outlook for supplies and prices of farm inputs from the forecast presented at the December Agricultural Outlook Conference.

The Branch's report includes the following farm inputs: petroleum products, seed, fertilizers, agricultural chemicals, manpower, machinery, farm financing and other farm supplies.

Petroleum products: Prices will be higher, but no problems are anticipated for supplies of petroleum products in the coming year. The current federal-provincial pricing agreement on crude oil and natural gas expires in June. The federal government announced last week the well-head price of crude oil will increase $1.05 per barrel on July 1, 1976, with a further increase of 70 cents on January 1, 1977. But the effects of the price increases will not be felt at the retail level until 60 days after these dates.

A one-dollar increase in the well-head price of crude oil means a four to five cent per gallon increase in gasoline, diesel and fuel oil prices. Natural gas is currently valued at 85 per cent of the energy equivalent value of crude oil, so natural gas prices will increase as well.

The main impact of higher natural gas prices will be felt on fertilizer prices and by greenhouse growers.

Seed: Seed supplies of all classes, with the exception of soybeans, are adequate to abundant, but supplies of certain seed varieties could be tight. Seed prices for grasses, legumes, cereals and oilseeds will show moderate declines in the first half of 1976. Seed prices for turf grasses are down because of large inventories in producing countries and economic factors affecting the demand for turf grasses.

Fertilizers: Supplies at manufacturing plants for the 1976-77 crop year are generally adequate, with the exception of dry nitrogen fertilizers (urea and ammonium nitrate). Dry nitrogen supplies are tight in Eastern Canada and, in the West, spot shortages are occurring also.

Although manufacturing facilities are operating at full capacity, with the exception of one plant in Western Canada, they have been unable to keep up with the strong demand which has developed since seeding began.

There are indications too, that because of favorable crop-fertilizer price relationships, nitrogen application rates may be somewhat higher than was anticipated earlier. The current fertilizer shortages are attributable also to the very slow movement of supplies during the winter. Lack of deliveries to farmers up to the end of March resulted in the shutdown of some manufacturing operations for varying lengths of time so as to reduce inventories. Phosphate and potash fertilizers are in good supply across Canada. However, it is conceivable that transportation bottlenecks could result in some delays in making deliveries to farmers.

Prices have been easing generally throughout the 1975-76 season from their spring 1975 levels. In Eastern Canada, there have been price declines of 10 to 13 per cent from year-earlier levels for mixed fertilizers, and declines of 20 to 30 per cent for materials, except potash. In Western Canada, prices, except for potash, are 10 to 15 per cent higher than a year earlier. But imports of lower-priced phosphatic fertilizers from the United States have been creating downward price pressures in the West.

Fertilizer demand is stronger in the West than in Eastern Canada. Statistics Canada's March 15 crop planting intentions survey reported that farmers in the Prairie Provinces planned to use seven per cent more fertilizer in 1976 than in 1975. The increase in demand for British Columbia is about 16 per cent.

The increase in demand for British Columbia is about 16 per cent.

Agricultural chemicals: Supplies are generally good and prices are expected to show little or no change from last year. Total consumption is expected to increase forecast this year.

A United States Department of Agriculture survey of 25 basic U.S. pesticide producers in early 1976 indicated supplies are likely to increase by 10 to 15 per cent this year. About 80 per cent of the agricultural chemicals used in Canada are imported from the U.S.

Manpower: Experienced farm labor for full-time employment is expected to remain in short supply in most areas. Employment has increased in British Columbia and the Atlantic Provinces, but has declined in Quebec, Ontario and the Prairie Provinces.

The shortage of seasonal farm labor is expected to be less severe this year than in 1975. An increasing number of farm operators and workers are registering with the Canada Farm Labor Pools. Caribbean and Mexican farm workers will continue to be available, but these workers will cost more than local labor, partly because of the return air fare payable by the farmer.

Hired farm wage rates in early 1976 were about 15 per cent higher than a year earlier. Farm wage rates are expected to continue to rise and be about 10 per cent higher at mid-year than at the beginning of the year.

Machinery: Prices continued to rise faster than most other farm input prices, except fertilizers, in 1975. But the rate of price increases in machinery is expected to slacken throughout 1976.

Farm machinery sales in the early months of 1976 were almost 40 per cent higher than in the same year-earlier period. Sales of tractors of 40 horsepower and over were up 46 per cent. Manufacturers' inventories of farm machinery are expected to return to normal levels in 1976 and, with the possible exception of large tractors (80 h.p. and over), supply shortages will not be a problem. The current strikes in the U.S. tire industry are not expected to affect farm implement tire supplies in Canada. However, short-term shortages of large-size tractor tires are likely to continue because of production constraints and strong demand for these sizes.

McINTOSH APPLES — The parent tree of the McIntosh apple variety is seen above in the location where it was transplanted by John McIntosh in 1811 on his Dundela, Ontario farm.

Canada's national apple had its start in Ontario

OTTAWA — The McIntosh apple was more than once rated 'best in the British Empire' earlier this century.

During two World Wars, it was the most popular fruit sent from Canada. Today, the famed McIntosh is Canada's national apple.

The original McIntosh came from a small community named Dundela, Ont., near Prescott on the St. Lawrence River.

The apple's history began by chance in 1811. John McIntosh, the son of a United Empire Loyalist from New York State, was clearing brush on his new farm at Dundela.

He noticed a few apple seedlings, and carefully transplanted them in a fenced plot close to his house. Only a few of the trees survived. But one of these was exceptional — it was to become the parent of the McIntosh Red variety that now is one of the world's renowned apples.

Shortly after his son Allan's birth on the Dundas County farm in 1815, John set to work to develop his orchard. Five years later, he had a thriving nursery business.

But none of the trees in John's orchard could equal the one he had found in the brush. It had already become an attraction for area farmers, acclaimed for its excellent apples, big yields and hardiness.

John's biggest problem was propagation. He wanted to expand the variety and make it available to other farmers. But he didn't know how.

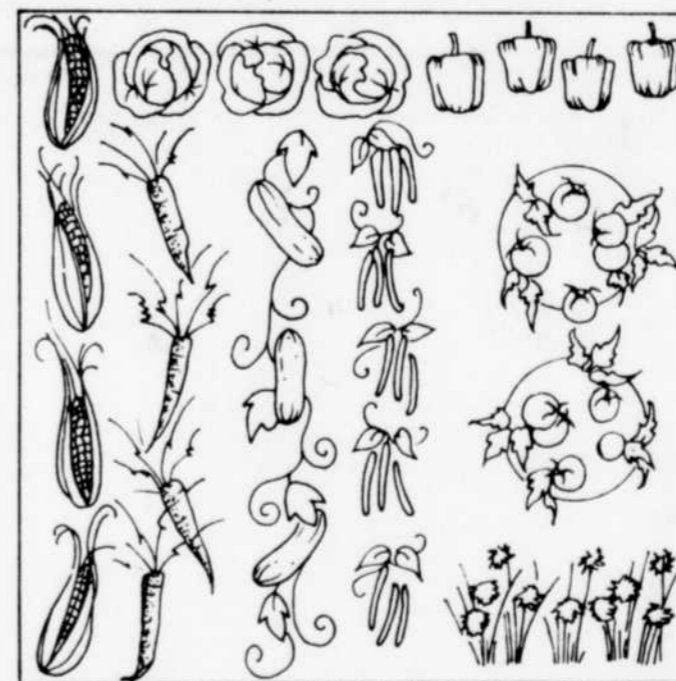

He knew grafting was required, but no one in the district had the expertise to do it. The problem was solved in 1835 when the McIntoshes hired an itinerant worker from the United States to work on the farm. Luck was with them — the worker knew how to graft apple trees.

By the time he quit the McIntosh farm later that year he had taught Allan how to perform the operation. Allan travelled throughout the district, selling seedlings and teaching farmers the art of grafting.

The renown of the McIntosh apple began to spread and by 1900 it had become well-established in Eastern Canada. It went on to become one of the leading varieties in North America.

The original tree outlived both father and son. But in 1893 it was badly damaged by a fire that levelled the house only 15 feet away. However, the most distant branches continued to bear fruit until 1908 when the old tree finally expired.

Short season vegetables

By Allan and Sheila Swenson
NEA Garden Columnists

Judging from our mail from readers all across America, another problem has cropped up. Many thousands of new gardeners, and some veterans as well, found themselves pressed for growing time last year.

In many areas, there was a long, wet spring. Some parts of the country had late frosts. On top of that, some regions experienced early frosts that further squeezed growing time for vegetables and flowers.

We polled gardening friends and experts to help find a list of varieties that would sprout well, grow fast and produce yields even in short seasons. There are other varieties that do produce abundantly in short seasons. You can check local sources for these.

But, to guide you to more blooming success so you can enjoy the fruits of your gardening fun, here is a brief list of good varieties. From experience of many they do well, although we haven't personally grown all of those listed.

BEANS: Greensnap — Contender, Provider, Top Crop, Wax — Eastern Butterwax, Kinghorn Wax, Pole — Dade, Blue Lake Strains.

BEETS: Early — Crosby Green Top, Early Wonders, Summer and fall — Ruby Queen, Detroit Dark Red Strains.

BROCCOLI: Early — Sun-up, Stonehead, Golden Acre Strains, Midseason — Market Prize, Market Topper Late — Spanish Ballhead Strains.

CARROT: Early — Snowball Strains, Midseason and late — Snowball Imperial.

CORN: Extra Early — Sweet: Polar Vee, Early — Gold Mine, Seneca Explorer, Sugar and Gold, Spring Gold, Midseason — Butter and Sugar, Buttercorn, Seneca Golden.

CUCUMBERS: Slicing — Gemini, Spartan Valor, Pickling — Wisconsin SMR 12, Wisconsin SMR 18.

LETTUCE: Butterhead or bibb-type — Buttercrunch, Summer Bibb, Butterhead — Dark Green Boston, Crisphead — Great Lakes 659 Leaf — Grand Rapids, Ruby, Salad Bowl.

MUSKMELON: Early — Mainerock Hybrid, Midseason — Harper Hybrid, Burpee Hybrid.

PEAS: Early — Progress Types, Sparkle and Frosty, Summer — Wando.

SPINACH: American, Bloomsdale Long Standing.

SQUASH: Summer, Yellow — Early Prolific Straitneck or Prolific Hybrid Green — Zucchini Hybrid, or Greyzini, Winter — Buttercup, Hercules, Baby Butternut, Table Queen, Blue Hubbard, Golden Hubbard, Gold Nugget.

TOMATOES: Early — Springset, New Yorker, Midseason — Moreton Hybrid, Heinz 1350, Late — Cardinal Hybrid, Glamour, Small Fruited — Pixie, Small Fry.

WATERMELON: New Hampshire Midget, Sugar Baby are quick growing types for short seasons.

Agronomes back dairy producers

SHERBROOKE — Several weeks ago, the Federal Department of Agriculture presented publicly the dairy policy for 1976-77.

This dairy policy decreases increases in the prices of powdered milk and butter for the Canadian consumers. At the same time it requires the producers to restrain the volume of their milk production to about 12 to 18 per cent and to increase the holdback for exportation, 70 cents for each 100 pounds of milk produced. It is not normal that the agricultural class is a victim in 1976 of a dairy policy which brings about a lowering of the net revenue of 15-20 per cent, a press release from the Order of Agronomes of the Eastern Townships states.

Have you seen groups of workers accepting cuts in their salaries in 1976? Even the anti-inflation law allows an increase, taking into account the cost of living.

Moreover, milk producers who planned the development of their farms have made long term investments and contracted obligations based on constant if not increased revenues, the agronomes continue.

How would each one of us react if we had contracted a loan with reimbursements in three years and the year following the employer decided to restrain the revenue when we have absolute need of an equal revenue the following year to meet these obligations?

Another consequence of this policy resides in the possible lowering of the number of farmers as well as lowering future dairy production and the value of the livestock.

Consumers should remember agricultural production will be sufficient and of high quality only when farmers are treated with justice.

Besides, the Eastern Townships region is really effected by this policy since more than 85 per cent of industrial milk producers are here. Possibilities of producing something else are very low due to the soils and the proximity of the market.

We recognize that the federal government has the responsibility of controlling production but in the context of long term planning.

We perhaps could accept this adjustment only by compensating the lowering of production in a way to allow the farmer a net revenue at least equal to that of last year. This way the producers could continue a normal development of their farms.

While waiting for better days it is necessary that farmers minimize their losses by using their surplus of production in the best manner possible.

Plants and kids

By Janet Tara

Here are a few quick and easy growing projects that will hold a child's attention and put to good use their desire to "help their plant along" by watering it every day.

Windowsill Orchard: It's easy to grow a miniature orchard right on your window sill. Just put some seeds from a favorite fruit, such as apple, orange, grapefruit or pear, between two layers of paper towels. Keep the towels wet for three or four weeks and the seeds will begin to sprout. Then, plant them in a coffee can filled with soil. Place your miniature orchard in a sunny window and water it regularly. Transplant into small individual pots when the plants reach three or four inches in height.

Tiny Forest: Surprising things happen when you place lentil beans in water. Spread a single layer of the beans in a saucer and then add just enough water to make them wet, but not to float them. Keep them in a light place with this much moisture for about 10 days and they will begin to sprout. Your saucer will soon look like a tiny green forest.

GROUNDHOGS have their place, but their burrows cause considerable damage to Canadian crops and machinery.

Possible ways to control groundhogs

OTTAWA — It has the questionable distinction of being the only Canadian farm pest that has a day set aside each year in its honor.

Even before they reach school age, children in rural areas know about the groundhog. On February 2 they survey fields, searching for its small brown head peering from a burrow. Actually, groundhogs don't emerge until at least a month later in Canada.

But a legend goes that if it emerges from its burrow on a sunny day and sees its shadow, it will return underground to wait out six more weeks of winter after February 2. If it is a cloudy day, the winter is supposed to last another three weeks.

But farmers are not as taken with the rodent as their children.

Groundhogs prefer sandy or gravelly soil, possibly because of the ease of digging burrows.

Groundhogs and their burrows cause considerable damage to crops and machinery, but Agriculture Canada has not been able to assess the dollar value of damage, says C.D. McKeen, the plant pathology research coordinator in Agriculture Canada's Research Branch here.

"Mowing and harvesting machinery probably suffer the most damage in areas where groundhogs are prevalent. With a mower, the wheel may drop into a burrow and the mound of accompanying soil may damage the knives of the cutting bar," Dr. McKeen says.

If mowers are adjusted to high-level cutting to avoid holes, harvest losses result.

In orchards, the rodents often burrow under trees and expose the root system to drying conditions. The holes are a hazard to pickers and tractors and other mobile equipment.

Favorite foods of the groundhog are tender vegetables, grass, clover, alfalfa and a large variety of wild plants.

Groundhogs are born in March and April. The usual litter is four. The young are weaned in June, so control measures before this time are most effective.

Agriculture Canada suggests a number of control measures:

— Spring plowing may block up burrows for a time, but it is not likely to drive a colony out of a field.

— Gas bombs registered for commercial use can be placed in burrows. They emit poisonous fumes.

— Partly as a sport many farmers shoot groundhogs. Although time-consuming, it is an effective control method.

— Running a hose from a tractor or car exhaust down a burrow to asphyxiate the groundhogs is effective.

Tomatoes a top rated treat

No garden treat surpasses your own home-grown tomatoes. Tomato transplants are the most popular vegetable plants grown for the home garden. They are available in your area at the proper time for planting.

These tomato transplants will be labeled for your convenience. Most home gardeners want large, red, slightly acid, slicing tomatoes. They should look for the fine hybrid tomatoes, which produce numerous fruits of uniform size on healthy, disease-resistant plants. Some of the old garden tomato varieties are also still available. Others have disappeared from the garden scene because of susceptibility to disease.

Often gardeners choose one or two plants of specialty or novelty tomatoes to complete their tomato gardens. The thick-walled Italian canner or tomato paste varieties, the small, round red or yellow cherry tomatoes, the large yellow-fruited slicing tomatoes, and the newer cocktail tomato varieties are some examples of desirable kinds to plant.

For container gardening try the attractive, thick-leaved, dwarf kinds of tomato plants bearing numerous medium-sized red cocktail tomatoes. They can be staked for upright growth or allowed to trail over the edge of hanging containers. Some garden supply stores also offer tomato plants growing in large pots with flowers and fruits already in evidence at the time of purchase.

Tomato plants should be planted no sooner than two to three weeks before the last average frost date for your locality, and you should be prepared to cover them if frost is predicted. These plants grow best in warm weather, so you may not gain much time trying to grow them before the frost date.

Miss Judy Lockwood from Ottawa spent a week with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Bert Lockwood. Then returned to Ottawa where she has a position for summer.

Several hours of sunlight each day are essential for all varieties.

Set your tomato plants in well-prepared soil containing vegetable fertilizer formulation. Drive in support stakes a few inches from the north side of the plants. Training and tying plants should begin when the plants are about 12 inches high. Because tomato plants require a good supply of moisture throughout the growing season, be ready to add water to the garden soil in the absence of adequate natural rainfall.

Monty Python

A dose of pitch black humor

New York, whose own Big Top never ceases to awe and appall, will host another flying circus, this one from England and infinitely more enjoyable.

Monty Python, the six-headed serpent that has struck a scathing but humorous chord with the nation's more sensitive elements, and struck the rest speechless, is coming to New York's City Center for a three week appearance.

"We'd love to tour all of America," explained Graham Chapman, the tall, tow-headed member of the Python hydra. "It would be very lucrative. But the six of us have so many individual projects going on that it's quite difficult for us to travel together." he pauses to relight his briarwood for the third time in two minutes.

"We're anxious to appear in New York because America reacts so well to us. They like us a lot more than we deserve."

He complained that an obstacle in Mother Britain is a very stodgy BBC censorship policy, necessitating bowdlerized versions of their weekly banquet of pitch black humor and calculated outrage. "BBC censors will allow us to use a naughty word once," he puffs, a miasma of tobacco smoke and contempt spewing forth. "but if we repeat it later in the show, they'll cut it. That's absurd! It's no less outrageous the second time you call someone 'a silly ass' than the first."

There are specific vignettes that elicited international condemnation however. "We did a skit three years ago that even had the studio audience in an ugly mood," he recalls. "It was about a man who brings his mother into a mortician's shop and she's not quite dead so he asks what to do with her. The mortician tells him he can dump her in the river, bury her or eat her. That brought a very strong negative reaction. Still," he says, "we chose to air it in America, including shots of the audience complaining about our bad taste."

Chapman is usually distinguished by Python chroniclers as the one who opted out of Cambridge medical school to hatch Monty Python with the intellectual Cleese and literature major Eric Idle, also attending Cambridge. "John has written a very successful situation comedy, 'Saul's Towers,' with his wife for the BBC. Chapman adds dourly, "It doesn't say anything about the social situation in Britain and John is possibly one of the most capable people in Britain today to do that. I am a little disappointed about that. But the show is bloody funny."

Eric is producing, directing and starring in a comedy he writes completely by himself. It has some bright spots but it's hard to turn out clever stuff every week when you're doing everything. Michael (Palin) and Terry Jones are also working together on a comedy show, 'Ripping Yarn' and I've sold a pilot for a revue-type show, 'Ask the Trees.'

"I suppose the reason Monty Python has lasted eight years is because we do have our independent projects. It keeps us from getting on each other's nerves."

Chapman revealed that the comedy ensemble will begin shooting another movie, its third, in October. "I'm not allowed to say what it's about since we're not sure ourselves but it looks like it may be 'The Life of Jesus Christ.'"

Despite grueling schedules

Makarova fetes freedom in dance

By Murray Olderman

SAN FRANCISCO — (NEA) — "Is crazy house," said Mikhail Baryshnikov, who opened the garage door instead of the front door, with an apologetic smile. He yelled up the stairs, "Natasha!" A string of Russian followed, then he darted off in his jeans and scuffed ballet slippers.

A minor crisis had enveloped the house at 323 Marina, which overlooks the Bay and Alcatraz, Angel Island and the Golden Gate Bridge. Baryshnikov's standard bred poodle, Gulu, had vanished.

"Madame Makarova is much sorry she wait you," said Eugen Schneider, who was barefoot and also wore blue jeans. "You want drink?"

Suzie, a white-haired middle-aged woman in a black-and-white maid's costume, brought out cups of tea and announced she was going to jump in the Bay. She was born in China; her parents were Ukrainian.

"Young people," she clucked. "Much energy."

After about half an hour, Natasha — who is Natalia Makarova, also Mrs. Edward Karker — swept into the ornate living room, padded with Persian rugs and hung with tapestries. "Where," she asked, "we go?" We went to a restaurant on Union Street. "Make sure she eat," said Schneider, who teaches the ballet classes that Natasha attends between performances. Outside, on the Marina Green, Baryshnikov was telling a TV reporter all about Gulu.

Another day had started in the lives of the world's most prominent dancers.

Makarova is perhaps the primest of all prima ballerinas. Baryshnikov rates with Rudolf Nureyev as the most spectacular male star. All three are defectors from the Soviet Union. Nureyev was the first, but Makarova (accent on the second syllable) points out, "I first woman."

She is a thin slip of a woman who weighs between 90 and 95 pounds, and on this day she was wearing a brown spun wool outfit that clung tightly to her hips and swirled below her knees. Her hat was cocked to one side and her hair was pulled back in a severe bun.

She is striking, and there is no mistaking the Slavic origins in her small features.

Half a dozen years ago, while dining with friends in London where she was appearing with the Kirov Ballet troupe from Leningrad, Makarova had decided she no longer wanted to live in Russia.

"It was spontaneous," she insists in English that is quite lucid. "We called the police. Two policemen drove up to the house. We went to the police station and I spent the night there. I smoked five packs of cigarettes."

The next day she was taken to Scotland Yard, which spirited her away to another family, who hid her for two weeks while the Kirov Ballet officials searched the city for her.

Now Makarova is virtually a citizen of the world. She has a London apartment and a San Francisco husband (with dances 12 months of the year. Her lifestyle has changed.

She has discovered lobster — "is none in Soviet" — and green salads, which aren't available during the long winters in her native Leningrad. She has a silver Mercedes sports car and credit cards (also unknown in the USSR). She smokes low-tar cigarettes machine-gun fashion. Most of all, she has a free spirit.

NATALIA MAKAROVA: perhaps the primest of all prima ballerinas.

"I am now convinced more than ever that what I did was right," she says. "Spiritually."

There was a price. Her mother is still in Leningrad. So is her stepfather, a musician, her stepbrother and her grandmother. They have tried to get out to visit her but have been denied permission. She telephones them twice a month. She has no idea what it costs.

"I send the bills," she says, "to my agent."

Her life is literally absorbed by ballet. Seldom does she escape the routine. Even on vacations she practices; to abandon it for even a few days would affect her muscle tone.

Makarova, now 35, is at her peak as a performer and is aware of her position as one of the world's great dancers, a superstar. She has been called temperamental. "The word different here than in Russia," she says. "In Russia is good to be temperamental. There is challenge and excitement for me every time I dance. You make little changes, you always improve. There is pressure to do your elegant, classical Leningrad school of ballet as opposed to the vigorous, physical Moscow style of the Bolshoi troupe. Her repertoire emphasizes the more classical roles.

In that respect she has been frustrated because she initially felt dancing in the West would give her a chance to experiment more. But now new vistas are opening up. Jerome Robbins has created a dance specifically for her which she will perform for the first time at a New York gala in June. Kenneth MacMillan has created a ballet specifically for her — the ego fulfillment of every ballerina — which will debut in November. And MacMillan is putting together another Makarova ballet for next year.

Since she defected, she has also staged a ballet, La Bayadere. But she is loathe to get too involved in that career tangent because, she points out, it means three months of planning and another month of working with the company. She can't afford that much time away from her own dancing.

The life can be grueling. She broke both her wrists acting out the mad scene in a rehearsal for Giselle. She has thrown her shoulder out in a fall. Her knee is sometimes gimpy. She has pulled muscles in her legs. Her toes sometimes ache. In fact, on this day she is getting a toe treatment in the afternoon after dancing four nights in a row.

"But dance," she says coquettishly, "is not all. I still have husband to please." She was married recently to Edward Karker, an electronics tycoon, in a big, orthodox wedding and laments that she has had no time yet for a honeymoon.

She is still thwarted in one area of dance. "I can not rock-and-roll," she admits. "I try but I am not very good."

Dancing in the Western world, there is also freedom. "I can try things," she says.

"In Russia, I could not. I am also my own woman. I have to take care of everything myself. There they took care of you like you were a doll. Here I am responsible."

"After appearing in London recently, I went to Italy, to Rome, for four days, just to visit museums and art galleries. That, too, is freedom. I could not do that in Russia."

Film PIRATES ON THE LOOSE

Avast there, matey! That's my movie

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of developer. The film pirates are on the loose.

It's no laughing matter to the Motion Picture Association, which represents all the leading movie producers. Film piracy probably rips the big studios off to the tune of more than $100 million a year.

"It's hard to arrive at a definite figure," says William J. Nolan, "because we're talking about revenue that has been lost."

Nolan is one of two ex-FBI agents — the other is Ewing G. Layhew — who have been hired by the MPAA to set up a Film Security Office to deal with the pirates. In the year that the F.S.O. has been in existence, it seems to be working, to some extent.

"In this past year," Nolan says, "we've had in excess of 20 convictions. In prior years, the total was zero."

Film pirates are people who somehow get hold of a print of a movie. They then make copies of them and sell them, either to private collectors or to exhibitors — usually overseas — who get films without having to pay the legitimate producers a dime.

Nolan says one of the biggest market places for pirated films is South Africa. The trade of selling illicit movies to South Africa had gotten so big, he says, that some of the smaller producers lost their South African market totally.

Tom Dunnahoo is an admitted ex-pirate who has now gone legitimate.

"I used to be a pretty good-sized film pirate," says the red-bearded Dunnahoo.

He got into the business through a side door. He was a newsreel cameraman by trade. He would chase ambulances and fire engines to the scene of a newsworthy tragedy, film it and then peddle his footage to local TV stations for $25 an event.

"I decided," he says, "I'd be better off printing my own stuff and selling it to more than one station. So I bought a printing machine."

Then I met a film dealer. He asked me to make a print of a feature film for him. I did that and pretty soon I found myself making a lot of prints."

He "acquired" a mailing list and began peddling his own films, some legitimate (meaning they were old films whose copyrights had expired) and some pirated films.

"It built up in eight years," he says, "into a six-figure business. I saw a need and I filled it."

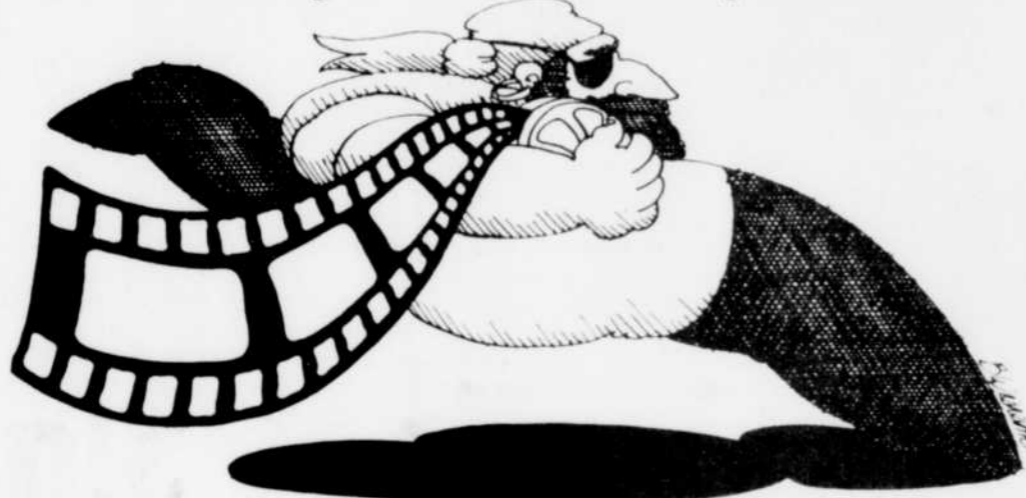

He says that during his piratical days, he did not feel as though he was doing anything wrong.

"I wasn't hurting anybody," he says. "I'd only sell to collectors and they don't charge admission. Collectors just keep the film for themselves and show it to their friends."

He was doing all right until he was sued by several of the big studios.

"We settled out of court," he says. "I don't sell their copyrighted films any more. And they don't hassle me any more."

Now his firm — Thunderbird Films — is a thriving and completely legitimate operation. It sells films to collectors. And all the films he has are either in the public domain — films on which the copyrights have expired — or films he has acquired the rights to.

Dunnahoo feels that film pirates sometimes perform a useful function. "If it weren't for the pirates," he says, "lots of good films would have been lost. They may steal them, but they preserve them."

Piracy still exists, of course. Some time before "Earthquake" was to be released, an answer print disappeared from the studio. It showed up again, three days later. That's all it takes to make some illegal copies — and prints of "Earthquake" are being offered on the pirate market.

Some of the pirates operate in a big way. Nolan, the head of the Film Security Office, says one bold pirate is currently sending his brochures to a mailing list of 6,000 collectors.

But Dunnahoo finds he can operate legitimately, with a nice profit and fewer worries than when he was a pirate.

He currently takes delight in outwitting the studios. He enjoys it when he finds — and he's done so often — that they have neglected to renew their copyrights on films and hence the movies are now in public domain.

"The studios become forgetful," he says. "And some very important pictures have slipped into P.D. Two Capra pictures — Meet John Doe and It's a Wonderful Life — weren't renewed. I have the original 'A Star Is Born,' Errol Flynn's 'Santa Fe Trail,' 'They Made Me A Criminal' with John Garfield, and the first major MGM musical, 'Til the Clouds Roll By.'"

Not long ago, he began listing a Shirley Temple film, "The Little Princess," in his catalogue Twentieth Century-Fox screamed piracy. They said it was still under copyright.

"I proved to them it was P.D.," he says. "They were very upset — they'd just forgotten to renew the copyright. It had slipped by them, but it hadn't slipped by me."

Some of the studios are now attempting to bypass the pirates by selling their own films directly to collectors — but in Super-8mm, not in exhibition 16 mm. size. That way, they feel their films will not wind up in some African theater, or on some small TV station.

It's still a big problem for the movie industry. When the MPAA set up its Film Security Office, Jack Valenti, the Association president, said,

"The illegal pirating of prints in this country and around the world is a cancer in the heart of the film industry, and we aim to cut the cancer out." The treatment seems to be working — but there's still a long way to go.

Please remember our Fall Tea which is scheduled for Thursday November 4th.

Wilhelmina Rebekah Lodge

SAWYERVILLE — A regular meeting of Wilhelmina Rebekah Lodge No. 23 was held in the Lodge room with 13 attending.

Lodge opened in ritual form by the N.G. Sis. E. Watt.

Minutes were read and adopted.

Sis. Watt welcomed Sis. V. Lowell who had been away all winter.

Correspondence was read and final plans made about sending our representative, Sis. Mary McCallum to the Assembly Sessions. Sis. Mabel Mackay D.D.P. will also attend.

A donation was given to the piano fund at the school.

Sis. Mabel Mackay gave an outline of the meeting in East Angus when they celebrated their 60th Anniversary. Eight Sisters and one Brother attended from our Lodge.

At the close of the meeting all sat in a circle and Sis. Montgomery showed us how to cover coat hangers. We are to bring them back, all completed, to the next meeting, to be judged.

Delicious refreshments were served by Sis. Marjorie Hurley, to bring the pleasant evening to a close.

LOBA meets

SAWYERVILLE — A meeting of Maple Leaf L.O.B.A. was held on May 25th with a good attendance and Sister Theda Lowry, W.M. in her chair. Lodge opened in ritual form.

Several letters of correspondence were read and dealt with. A donation was given to the piano fund at the school and to help with the picnic for the children at Rosemere Home to which members were invited to attend on June 26th.

A report was given on the Prov. Grand Lodge meetings held at Kinnear's Mills. It was announced an Open House was to be held in the Hall for Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Taylor of Scotland who are visiting relatives here for three weeks.

Several members had attended a meeting in Sherbrooke on May 24th. Bro. Roland Lowry and Sis. Lowry were appointed to act on the committee from our Lodge to make plans for the Church Parade.

Lodge closed in regular form and lunch enjoyed.

Dr. Lamb

What causes hot flash?

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Will you explain what is happening to a woman's body when she has a "hot flash"? Is there anything that can be done to help prevent them besides taking some kind of medicine, such as a vitamin or some special food?

DEAR READER — In middle-aged women the most common cause of hot flashes is decreased production of estrogen along with the menopause. When hot flashes are really part of the menopause related to low hormone levels, the one thing that will relieve them is giving the woman some replacement female hormone. It is one of the few symptoms of the menopause that responds immediately and dramatically to hormone replacement. Of course, if a hot flash is from some other cause or the woman has normal hormone levels, then giving more hormones will not help.

Taking vitamins or special foods won't help at all. There is a widespread cult that erroneously believes all maladies can be cured by vitamins. They can't, and such an attitude often prevents a person from being treated properly, sometimes for serious life-threatening diseases. That is the biggest harm of all caused by the misinformation available about vitamins.

The hot flash is caused by improper function of your body thermostat. You have a center in the brain that controls all your body heat and cooling mechanisms. When it gets the signal that your body needs to be cooled, it sets off reflex actions to open up all your small capillaries in your skin, this is the flush you see. You can also see the flush when a person gets too hot from any cause. The hot blood is brought to the surface of the skin to be cooled and returns to cool your body. At the same time reflex mechanisms set off your sweating mechanism. The evaporation of sweat induces evaporative cooling at the skin.

When the body temperature falls to normal the small blood vessels close down, the flush disappears and the sweating is stopped. If you get too cool the center will set off shivering. The mechanical action of shivering generates heat.

Your body thermostat can be affected by hot, spicy foods. You may know some people who will sweat when they eat such foods and that is the reason. The center is also near the master hormone gland for the body. Its functions are affected by the decreased function of the ovaries. In some way this causes the thermostat to function erratically during this phase of a woman's life. Usually the phase doesn't last too long, and eventually a woman's system will readjust.

Whether you should have female hormones depends on many factors. Those interested in these problems should send in 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 5-12, Menopause. Just write to me in care of this newspaper, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing.

There is a lot more to managing the menopause period than just taking hormones. A woman needs to take special care to avoid obesity. Lifestyles and eating habits are more important here. A lot of women tend to lose muscle mass about this phase in life and that in turn means getting fat, even though you are still eating the same amount as always. Muscle mass and physical activity (including the type) are just as important as your diet in preventing obesity.

Noted Maritime cartoonist "a reasonably good second-rater"

HALIFAX (CP) — The rookie photographer clutched the bulky Speed Graphic and pulled the trigger as the stretcher bearing Dr. D. E. Robertson was carried out of the darkness of the Moose River, N.S., gold mine. The flash exploded in the night but the shutter remained immobile.

Nervous preparation had worn out the battery operating the camera's motor mechanism and the chance to photograph the dramatic 1936 rescue of two men from the mine after being entombed for 11 days was lost.

Salvation Army workers at the scene broke into Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow and Robert (Bob) Chambers of The Chronicle cried.

Nearby, his competitor in Halifax Herald, perched on a makeshift platform, was too far from the scene and also missed the shot.

"It was the worst moment of my life, recalled the grey-haired, goateed little artist, slumped on a sofa in the spacious living room of his sixth-floor Halifax apartment.

"I was never much of a photographer but that helped to turn me off it altogether."

STUCK TO CARTOONING

Forty years later, on May 22, he retired as the dean of Canadian cartoonists—a career of gently lampooning the politicians of three generations and chronicling the topsy-turvy world of the Maritimer in the pages of The Chronicle-Herald and Mail-Star.

In a sense, the 71-year-old artist epitomizes his creation—that bespectacled Little Man who over the years observed the vagaries of his governments, dutifully donning a barrel when times were tough and patriotically wearing a poppy in his lapel in a Remembrance Day parade.

Like his character, Mr. Chambers is modest about his achievements and largely satisfied in his environment, although he sometimes reflects on what he might have achieved had he left the Maritimes.

"I'm a reasonably good second-rater," he said. "But I don't cut any ice nationally. I've never considered myself beside Macpherson, Aislin or Norris."

But as Mr. Chambers retired, Robert LaPalme, curator of the International Pavilion of Humor in Montreal, was preparing to honor him and his work this summer in the editorial cartoon category.

In 1974 the Pavilion focused on the cartoons of Nil Melander of Sweden and last year it honored Walter Berndt of the United States.

CARTOONS HONORED

The 53 years since his first cartoon appeared in Halifax Chronicle—depicting Nova Scotia seceding from the rest of Canada—brought him two National Newspaper Awards and honorary degrees from St. Francis Xavier and Dalhousie Universities. Dalhousie has been collecting his work since the mid-1950s.

There has also been the odd memorable jibe, as when Robertson Davies, then editor of Peterborough Examiner, wrote Miller Services, which syndicated Chambers' cartoons, that he was dropping the service because Chambers was a "politically lazy mischief-maker."

Another time, a letter to the editor of The Chronicle-Herald urged the paper to "bury your dead, starting with Chambers."

He doubted that he ever offended a politician because he couldn't "go for the jugular," but former prime minister John Diefenbaker is reported to have been somewhat miffed by two cartoons that won Chambers a National Newspaper Award in 1966.

CHIEF SILENT

They showed the prime minister sitting far out on the limb of a tree while Dalton Camp and Gerda Munsinger sawed the branch near the trunk. The next day the branch was severed but Mr. Diefenbaker, stubborn as ever, remained seated in midair with his arms folded.

Several years later, Mr.

Diefenbaker was being driven to address a dinner in the Annapolis Valley and the cartoonist joined him in the car and was introduced as Dr. Chambers. Mr. Diefenbaker took his companion for a medical doctor until Mr. Chambers identified himself. Suddenly the Chief was silent.

Mr. Chambers considered Robert Stanfield as his best subject but he said he could never be too harsh with the former Nova Scotia premier.

"I knew Stanfield and walked to work with him occasionally and that sort of slows you down. It would be pretty tough to face him with a bad cartoon in the morning paper."

SHINNED LONG NEEDLE

Cartoonist Duncan Macpherson of Toronto Star recalled that Mr. Stanfield paid tribute to Mr. Chambers when he retired as federal leader of the Progressive Conservative party, saying the Halifax artist worked the way cartoonists should work, "with a fine sense of humor instead of with the long needle."

When he left Wolfville, N.S., and went to New York in 1924 to join movie animator Paul Terry of Terrytoons, the 19-year-old artist thought drawing for movie cartoons was a bubble which soon would burst. Today he jokes about the string of Rolls Royces he could have acquired by staying with the movies.

He was called back to Halifax during the 1933 election campaign to draw cartoons for Angus L. Macdonald and the Liberals in The Chronicle.

For the first two weeks the party paid him $30 a week. Then its funds ran out and he was on The Chronicle's payroll.

The day after the Liberals won, Premier Macdonald gave him $100. After paying his $60 hotel bill he had a net profit of $40.

GIVEN COMMENT

Hoping that "the same magic would work" in reverse, The Herald hired him in 1937 but the Conservatives "took an awful shellacking."

Mr. Chambers was then hired by The Chronicle and given a five-year contract at the "colossal" salary of $75 a week.

During the war years all cartooning was war-oriented and he was kept busy drawing maps for the newspaper.

The newspaper management thought all battles were fought along rigid fronts, and when there were none he was told to draw them anyway.

"There has to be a line," they insisted. I'm afraid anyone following my drawings was badly led astray."

Only once did he seriously think of leaving the newspaper, and that was in 1949—the year The Chronicle and The Herald amalgamated. He was offered a job in Montreal illustrating Gregory Clark's stories in Montreal Standard.

Mr. Chambers handed in his resignation and "all hell broke loose."

He was given a hefty raise and stayed.

He says he had been winding down for a number of years although his production remained constant and now thinks his departure came none too soon.

"You reach a point where you haven't got anything left," he said.

Now he is painting landscapes and watercolors on his own time, away from the interminable deadlines.

"You adjust to deadlines and if you're blank you draw something anyway. . . . and everybody knows it."

While holidaying at the Murray home, Dale and Debbie Wood, with their sons, Garett, Jason and Blair, accompanied by their hostess, visited their aunt, Mrs. Reta Darling in Sawyerville. Mrs. A.W. Murray of Scotstown and Mr. Stanley Murray of Montreal, joined the folk at dinner.

With their leader, Mrs. Nick Turchyn, the Cookshire-Birchton Youth spent Saturday, May 22, getting better acquainted with their Metropolitan, Montreal. To economize on transportation, they very readily accepted Les Picard's economy transportation in his van.

The Group, with Heather and Les, visited the forty-fifth floor of the Bank of Commerce, had a ride on the Metro, the first for many of them, browsed around and made some purchases at the Canadian Bible Store; saw the Mary Queen of the World Church (Cathedral), did some underground touring to get to Place Ville Marie where they did some looking and shopping. It was an enjoyable and broadening day.

Miss Catherine Todd of Toronto, Ont., spent the long weekend with her mother, Mrs. W.O. Todd.

On May 26, the Prescotts entertained their son Sidney at a birthday supper, with Mrs. Prescott and Ian of Bulwer.

On May 17, little Colleen Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Martin, celebrated her first birthday, with grandparents present being Mr. Rene Beard of Sawyerville, and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Martin of Waterville. The little lady had two birthday cakes on which she tried to blow out the single candles. . . one cake made by mother, the other by her maternal aunt Miss Marilyn Bedard of Sawyerville, who also joined the gathering.

Things have been very active with the Second Mile Ministry and there are more upcoming. Perhaps you'll jot the dates down on your calendar.

On the evening of June 3, Thursday, at 8 p.m., there will be a service in the Birchton United Church, with the Briarcrest Gospel Team, from Caronport, Sask.

On the evening of Saturday, June 26, there is to be Gospel Music and Testimony at the Lennoxville Elementary School in Lennoxville. Donations are solicited. Music will be by local talent.

And more Outreach as planned that on Saturday, July 3, a Drop-in Coffee House in the basement of Connaught Inn will open, same time every week, 8-11 p.m. with free coffee and live entertainment. Watch for more information via the different media.

There is to be the beginning of a junior softball team on Wednesday, June 9, at 5:30 p.m. behind the Cookshire Elementary School, for ages six to 12 years inclusive, boys and girls. For more details and transportation, contact Les Picard at 875-5103.

W.H. and F.M. Society

BEEBE — The May 19th meeting of the W.H. and F.M. Society was held at the home of Mrs. Dorothy Humphrey with a small attendance and one guest.

President, Mrs. E. Woodard opened the meeting, and Mrs. Humphrey, assisted by Mrs. Ruth Ashman, conducted the devotional period.

Roll call was answered by each member naming a favorite spring flower.

The Prayer Call was slightly different than in the past, each member offered a prayer for guidance and protection for the missionaries on foreign fields or at home, some will soon be returning to their fields of duty.

Routine reports were read and approved.

A former member, now residing in New Brunswick, is to receive a lovely crib quilt for a new son and a card signed by the members expressing congratulations on the birthday of the first born to Mr. and Mrs. Don Wrigley (nee Penny Middleton).

The June meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Ruth Ashman. Articles for the sale table in July should be handed in.

Following adjournment, delicious refreshments of stuffed rolls, pickles, ice cream, cookies and tea were served by Mrs. Humphrey, assisted by Mrs. Middleton and the guest, Mrs. Mildred O'Leary.

A pleasant time of fellowship was enjoyed.

Weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Standish were Mr. and Mrs. Allan Lee, of Montreal.

A Casserole Supper was held in the Canon Gustin Hall on Saturday, May 22, sponsored by the A.C.W. of Fitch Bay, and Tomifobia. There was a large attendance of people from far and near enjoying the supper. Proceeds were satisfactory.

Mrs. Eva Sheldon has returned home from the La Providence Hospital, Magog, and feeling some what better. We all wish her the best of luck.

Weekend visitors at the home of Mrs. Eva Sheldon were her daughter and three children, of Ayer's Cliff. Mrs. Gary Bryan, also another daughter and family, Mrs. Harriette Lyonnais and family of Stanstead.

Mrs. Pearl Webster received a telephone call of congratulations on her birthday from her niece, Miss Bernard Enright of Stanbridge East; also from another niece, Mrs. Aline Bonneville of Bedford. Both calls were much appreciated.

CLEVELAND

Mrs. Percy Tozer

Mrs. Ralph Fowler and Mrs. Steve Perkins were called to the Asbestos Hospital by the death of their father, Mr. Isaac Morrill of Asbestos. Those who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Fowler and family, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Perkins and sons Douglas, Clifford and Ray and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Pease. Deepest sympathy is extended to the family.

Mr. Gordon Healy is a patient in Hotel Dieu Hospital in Sherbrooke. His many friends wish him a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. George Messenger of Ripley, Ont., called at Mr. and Mrs. Steve Perkins and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Fowler.

Mr. Elmer Healy of Montreal was called here by the sickness of his father, Mr. Gordon Healy and spent some time with his mother, Mrs. Healy, while Mr. Healy was a patient in Hotel-Dieu Hospital. Those who called were Mrs. Gordon Healy, Mr. Elmer Healy and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Fowler.

Mr. Ronald Morrill of Jacksonville, Fla., and Mr. Merrick Morrill of Ashcroft, B.C., who were here to attend the funeral of their father the late Mr. Isaac Morrill in Danville were guests of their sisters, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Fowler and family and Mr. and Mrs. Steve Perkins and sons.

Mr. Emile Amotte spent several days with his mother, Mrs. Alex Amotte and brother Henry Amotte. Miss Elaine Fowler and Mr. Peter Davidson of Brome were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Fowler and family and attended the funeral of the former's grandfather, the late Isaac Morrill in Danville.

Mrs. Lilian Johnston and family have left to make their home in Brockville, Ont. Their many friends wish them well in their new home.

East chucked his last heart and West the jack of diamonds. The moment of decision had arrived. East and West were known to hold five clubs between them. The sixth card was the eight of diamonds. Both East and West had discarded in a manner to make it impossible for South to know where the eight of diamonds was. They also had given no clues as to the location of the really important club queen. You readers can all see that queen of clubs in the East hand. As for poor South, he went wrong and played West for the queen of clubs.

ASKING JACOBY

A Toronto reader asks us what we think of the law of symmetry.

This law has no basis in play. It was invented by Ely Culbertson some 45 years ago when he needed something to write about. There is nothing to it. If your side holds nine spades the other four will divide 2-2 exactly 40.7 per cent of the time irrespective of how your hearts, diamonds and clubs are divided.

Dr. Lamb

Fatigue can be a problem

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — How long do you have to rest before you regain your strength after exercise? After I have done some exercise I seem to need to rest quite a long time before I can resume exercising. I'm trying to get in shape but want to do it the right way.

DEAR READER — Fatigue is difficult to measure and quantify. Sometimes it is related to psychological factors and other times to metabolic factors.

Laboratory studies of measuring muscle strength have shown that if you fatigue a muscle it will take about 45 minutes for it to recover its strength completely.

Under ideal circumstances, though, the muscle will regain about 70 per cent of its strength within 30 seconds and will be recovered enough to contract to 85 per cent of normal within seven and a half minutes.

Work studies have shown that it is better not to work to exhaustion and then rest. You will be able to do more work by stopping and resting a few minutes before you are excessively fatigued. The rest period to recover is much shorter when you use this method.

Anyone interested in exercise should understand how the muscles work. I am sending you an issue of The Health Letter number 1-9, Exercise, Muscles, which will give you basic information about muscles and how they work. Others who want this issue can forward 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What would you do if a child's mother had been given DES while carrying her baby?

My daughter was home on vacation and she has been depressed after learning, and hearing about effects on a girl born to a mother on this drug. My daughter's girl is now 13, and she is sure she was given DES when she was pregnant.

I talked to our family doctor about it after she left. His advice was to ignore it. He said, if she had been given the drug what could you do about it?

That is the reason I asked you the question. Would you please give me an answer?

DEAR READER — With all due respect to your doctor if he really told you to forget about it I can't agree with him. This is certainly a real danger and your daughter is right to be concerned. What should she do? She should take her daughter to her gynecologist right now and have a check-up. Then her daughter should be followed carefully for any early sign of any malignancy. I hope she never develops one but the truth is that daughters of mothers who took diethylstilbestrol (DES) to maintain a pregnancy now face the possibility that the daughter might develop cancer of the vagina. It is a rare but very dangerous cancer. The best safeguard is the earliest possible detection, and if it should occur, immediate treatment. A delay could be fatal.

Incidentally there is now evidence that male babies may also have some abnormalities as a result of DES being given to the mother. Fortunately the changes that are suspect do not include cancer.
