

AIKEN BROS. TO RECEIVE LIFE IMPRISONMENT

Justice Wilson Defends Courts of Canada Whilst Americans Criticize it

Francis Aiken, 20 years of age, and Charles Aiken, his brother of 18, were brought into the dock. The boys were tried for the murder of George Benton, at St. Bernard de Lacolle last May, and were found guilty of manslaughter two weeks ago.

Mr. Justice Wilson began his sentence by reviewing the case. It was a pre-arranged holdup, he said, similar in many details to the Bank of Hochelaga affair, the mail robbery and the Verdun murder. He had listened to pleas of clemency on the grounds that the boys were young. Birth certificates had been produced in this case but on examination he found that they were made out in the family name of Aiken only and that the given names of the boys had been inserted with pencil.

"Your appearance shows you to be fully developed," continued the Court. "Other holdups have been committed by boys your age and even younger than you and society finds it necessary to deal with your kind as grown men. The court has not the prerogative to show clemency in such cases."

The jury found you guilty of manslaughter and the verdict was right. They could have held you for murder because that was the charge.

Defends Canadian Courts.

Some critics in the United States where you come from, say that Canadian justice is not impartial and is prejudiced against Americans. They quote the Muir case as an example. I want to deny this allegation here and now and point out to you that you had a fair trial.

Tomorrow two French Canadian youths who killed a man with a weapon not as dangerous as a shotgun, which you used, will pay the penalty for their crime on the scaffold in Sorel. They were tried and found guilty by twelve of their peers, all French Canadians too. Canadian justice is impartial and your trial was fair. You are guilty and you must be placed somewhere that will make society safe from your attacks. I sentence you to life in prison."

NESS AYRSHIRE LEADS THE 365 DAY TEST

Quebec Ayrshires Take Top Place in List of Recently Qualified

Few Ontario cows are near the top among the 38 Ayrshires reported in the R.O.P. during the month of May. Quebec entries take most of the high placings. Burnside Pearlina 3rd, owned by R. H. Ness & Sons, Howick, Que., is the leader in the 365-day division, with 15,368 pounds of milk and 663 pounds of fat. Antoinette, owned by Uric Durocher, Clairvaux de Bagot, Que., and Lady Nancy's Lily, Edwin A. Wells, Sardis, B. C., are tied for second place in fat, with 482 pounds each, but the former leads on milk production. A Wells heifer, Evergreen Maid Hill 2nd, has the creditable two-year-old record of 10,825 pounds of milk, 467 pounds of fat.

Ten-Month Test.

In the 305-day test, the lead in the mature class goes to one of Gilbert McMillan's cows, Springburn Lucky Girl, with 11,105 pounds of milk, 464 pounds of fat. The highest 4-year-old is Archibald Snowsper, William McGrand, Arundel, Que., with 10,827 pounds of milk, 424 fat, and the leading 3-year-old Henriette de St. Antoine, W. Skinner, Sennelive, Que., with 7,562 milk, 363 fat. All these records are beaten by the 2-year-old Primrose of Carbrooke, owned by Raymond W. Jette, Waterloo, which gave 10,834 lbs. milk, 491 fat. Midway of Inglewood, W. McPherson & Sons, St. Ann's, is second in this class, with 8,973 milk, 371 fat.

725 PITCHERS IN MRS. DOWNER'S COLLECTION

Over 500 Other Curios Help To Make up the Collection VALUABLE COLLECTION

Collector is 73 Years of Age and is Still Adding to her Prized Hobby

In every community, no matter how large or how small, some one is sure to be found who is making a hobby of some unusual things but perhaps Mrs. Downer of Kensington has chosen the most unexpected for a hobby, "Pitchers". Mrs. Downer is of Welsh origin, born at Everton 73 years ago, and proud of the fact, and doubly proud that she is a true Britisher to the backbone. In Mrs. Downer's collection will be found many curios and emblems bringing out the fact that the powers of Great Britain have a soft spot in her heart. Whilst a girl she spent four years on the Island of Malta in the Mediterranean and 14 years in the West Indies.

Pitcher Hobby Commenced in 1875

The pitcher hobby commenced away back in 1875 when her aunt attended an exhibition on the Isle of Wight and before leaving the exhibition she purchased two small pitchers for which she paid 2d each. These pitchers were given to the niece, known to us as Mrs. Edith Downer, who from that day to the end of time will cherish these two small pitchers. From this little nest egg costing in our money but four cents, Mrs. Downer has accumulated a collection of 725 pitchers and over 500 other souvenir curiosities, such as china plates, wood carvings, pictures, shells, coins, etc., etc. Whilst on the old sod she collected a number of her present collection and carried them with her to the various lands in which she has lived. In 1881 she and her husband came to Canada and located in the Township of Elgin. Today she takes great pleasure in showing her collection of pitchers, telling where they came from and who the donors were. Many of the jugs came from England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland. She has received as gifts pitchers from all the Provinces in Canada and the various States that make up the Union to our South. Possibly one of the pitchers most prized by Mrs. Downer is one that she received lately that was made in Czechoslovakia, and an earthenware jug made in England which she secured for two shillings. The two most precious jugs are the lustrous jugs, one being yellow and gold and the second blue and gold in color. The many Wedgwood pitchers and one styled after the Chinese Dragon are kept very much in prominence.

The Souvenirs and Plates

Apart from the pitchers are to be seen in this large collection many beautiful plates in all colors and in the various grades of china. The most valuable plate is one that to many would be thought of little or no value. This plate is a Belzoni, the colorings in it being green and red whilst the background is brown as though the plate had seen the oven on many occasions. We are given to believe that a plate fancier in Massachusetts searched the state but was unable to secure a plate of this type. Mrs. Downer cherishes this plate on this account and refuses to accept an offer for it as she says "If it is of money value to others, I am proud to own it."

A souvenir fan that came from Jamaica holds a prominent spot in the glass cabinet, it being a Lace Palm, trimmed with milk weed.

Of the wood carvings she cherishes a Jewel Box which is 61 years old, carved by hand in a Chinese design. In the Jewel Box is found a collection of silver coins.

Mr. Jones also has the second cow in the mature class, Korydyke Colantha Abbecker, which gave 20,922 pounds of milk, 810 pounds of fat, in the 365 days. Brown, Stamford, is fourth with 19,408 pounds of milk and 699 pounds of fat.

Brockville Herd Leads.

The herd of Dr. H. A. Clark of Brockville provides the leaders in the four and three year old classes. Englewood Beauty Pontiac, in the former class, has 19,867 pounds of milk and 701 pounds of fat to her credit, while Englewood Pontiac Echo, in the latter, has 16,973 pounds of milk and 622 lbs. of fat. A Munroe entry, Muriel Keyes, is second four-year-old, with 20,720 lbs. of milk and 682 pounds of fat. May Segis Fobes, estate of John Oughton, Stonewall, Man., leads the two-year-olds with 17,628 pounds of milk and 638 lbs. of fat, followed by Springbank Bell Korydyke, T. H. Dent & Sons, Woodstock, with 15,381 pounds of milk and 582 pounds of fat. In the two-year-old subdivisions, DeKol Segis Pride, Geo. W. Irvine, St. Catharines, with 16,526 pounds of milk and 513 pounds of fat, and Mattie Molly Tempest, W. E. Lawson, Hayfield, Man., with 15,095 lbs. of milk and 491 pounds of fat, have the lead.

305-Day Division.

In the ten-month division, the Queen Alexandra Sanatorium, London, leads with Artis Payne Calamity, which gave 16,861 pounds of milk and 561 pounds of fat. Charles Venning, Mosley, is a close second with Laura Aaggie Heagerveld, 15,782 pounds of milk and 558 pounds of fat. A University of Alberta four-year-old, Pontiac Hulda Wayne, heads her class with 14,874 pounds of fat. The best showing in the twice-a-day subdivision is made by Lady Hejke Walker, Wilson Bros., Hillbank, N. C., with 16,074 pounds of milk and 531 pounds of fat. The general average in the shorter test is excellent.

ZION CHURCH SOCIAL LARGELY ATTENDED

Entertainment Was of High Order and Greatly Appreciated. Receipts Totalled $110

A most successful social was held at Zion Church on Thursday evening, June 18, under the auspices of the United Church.

Although the evening was rather cool, the attendance was large, and a most sociable time was spent. After supper was served the gathering was called to order by the chairman, Rev. Mr. Tanner, and a most enjoyable programme was heard.

Mrs. Diamond of Fort Covington, gave two readings, which were both heartily enjoyed. Mr. David Brown of Kensington sang a couple of Scotch songs in a manner that pleased the highland audience very much, he also was encored after each. Miss Blanch Tryon sang a sacred solo very sweetly, while Miss Charlotte Millar of Westville whistled an accompaniment.

The only address on the programme was given by Rev. Mr. Mowatt of Kensington and was much appreciated.

Not only was the social a success socially, but financially also the sum of $110, being cleared; much credit should be given to the men in charge under their leaders, Messrs. Wesley Thompson and Robt. Steven.

Many thanks are also due those who donated money, among whom were Hon. Jas. Robb, the sum of $5.00, Mr. Jos. McGibbon, $5.00. Smaller contributions were also received from others connected with the church. The Farley Orchestra supplied good music during the evening.

Dominion Day.

On Wednesday next we celebrate the 58th. anniversary of the uniting of Canada. In 1867 the British North America Act came into force and the national development of Canada may be said to have started that day. As the years roll by the number of men and women who can remember the first Dominion Day grows smaller, but the benefits of the Confederation grow larger.

The development of Canada has been so often told that we weary of it as a commonplace, but it should never be so thought of. In our own little district 1867 found us still in the frontier stage. If a trip to Montreal were contemplated it meant a long and weary stage journey. Now, the trip can be made in two hours in comfort. In like degree has the general life of Canada changed.

There are those who criticize the leaders of the past as being narrow and sectional. The critics apply present day standards to judge our grandfathers. Instead, they should remember the background of then and now. In 1867 practically every village was self-dependent. It had to be for there were few factories selling products to all the Dominion. The wool had to be spun; the hides tanned and made into shoes. The wheelwright at his bench made the wagons and sleds that passed over the so-called roads. That stage of Canadian existence has passed. No village is dependent on itself alone now. Neither is any province unaffected by the progress or lack of progress of another. To have success in Canada, all must be prospering. To get the most out of the future; to continue the development and importance of Canada, we must all seek for the common good of all.

The smiling valley of the Chateauguay is a rich land. It is our homeland. In it are to be found contentedness, comfort and happiness. That that spirit may continue and pass on to the future generation it is necessary that we remember the heritage that we hold in trust, have faith in ourselves, tolerance towards others and above all pride in Canada—its Present, Past and Future.

Honesty in Politics.

Canadians believe the old saying "elections are not won by prayers," and they view their politicians in the same light. They see members of parliament going on trips abroad, frequenting luxurious hotels, entertaining lavishly, and forever getting on the front pages of the newspapers, and decide that they must be making a lot of money. It is only on rare occasions that the other side is seen. Last week for instance, the House of Commons discussed a subject on which all are really experts—the election laws. The members were candid in their expressions of opinion and looked at the sections dealing with contributions, etc. purely from a business standpoint. Yet, on the table before them lay a recommendation that the Right Hon. W. S. Fielding be granted an annuity of $10,000 for life. Mr. Fielding entered politics in 1882, and was Premier of Nova Scotia two years later. During the years of the greatest development of Canada he was most closely identified with its public business. It would have been an easy matter for him to have acquired a comfortable competence for his old age, without violating any moral code. Instead he devoted all his energies and gifts to the public service, and retires a poorer man than when he entered the arena of public life.

Mr. Fielding is an outstanding example but there are many hundreds of men who find themselves in the same position as he is in. They have given their life to the public service, and in their old age must give place to younger men. All have more than average ability and had they devoted the same attention, study and labor to a private business, they would be well-to-do men. To moralize is easy, but we should be thankful that there are men who are willing to face criticism and uncertainty in order that Canada may be served.

A Year of Prosperity.

The first half of the year 1925 finds Canada in a favourable position. East and West the crops are reported to be flourishing. There has been an abundant growth and the farmers are anticipating a large and bountiful crop. In the factories the wheels are turning that the demands of the people be served, and in general everyone is in an optimistic mood. The success of the year is not assured until the food crops are harvested and sold, but everything now points to our exports being larger, and with good prices in sight the movement to the seaboard should be steady and certain. This in turn will mean more work for our railways and lift a burden off the shoulders of the Canadian people. 1925 is not a year for pessimism in Canada.

The North Pole Area.

In these hot days of summer attention has been focused on the North Pole. After being given up for lost, the Norwegian explorer, Amundsen, has returned to civilization. His attempt to reach the Pole by aeroplane was not successful, but it was a new way to travel, and afforded him a far wider opportunity of viewing the great iceland than any other traveller into the unknown had before.

Amundsen has made no statement as to the conclusions he has formed, but with the United States and Canada carrying on an academic discussion as to whom belongs the northern areas, his opinions are waited for. There are flying men who think that the great continents of the world will be bound together, in the not distant future, by air routes which pass over the apex of the world. It may be only a dream, but in this age of changing conditions, new inventions and daring minds, anything can happen.

Parliamentary News

Specially Written for the Huntingdon Gleaner

The final drive of the session saw a mass of legislation come before the House of Commons and disappear into the maw of the Senate, some to pass and some to fall by the wayside. In the House the most important measure was the Bill to settle the freight rate question. In introducing it the Hon. Geo. P. Graham, Minister of Railways declared: "In 1897, what is known as the Crownsnest pass agreement was made by the Dominion of Canada with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. Under this agreement the Canadian Pacific Railway Company agreed to build a line of railway through what is known as the Crownsnest pass to Nelson, B.C. They were given as a subsidy $11,000 a mile, or, in all, $3,404,720. In return under this agreement it was provided that the Canadian Pacific railway should give a freight rate on grain and flour from points west of Fort William to Fort William and any point east of Fort William three cents per hundred pounds lower than the then existing rate, and certain reductions were to be made on named articles and commodities shipped from the east westward. I might name some of the commodities as part of the history:

Commodity	Reduction per cent
All green and fresh fruit	33.1-3
Coal oil	20
Cordage and binder twine	10
Agricultural implements of all kinds, set up or in parts	10
Iron, including bar, band, Canada galvanized sheets, pipe, pipe-fittings, pipes, nails, spikes and horse-shoes	10
All kinds of wire	10
Window glass	10
Paper for building and roofing purposes	10
Roofing felt, box and packing	10
Paints of all kinds and oils	10
Livestock	10
Woolen ware	10
Household furniture	10

"I think that this in a broad way, covers the terms of this agreement. This agreement was in force prior to 1918. In 1918, I remember correctly, under the War Measures Act an order in council was passed giving the board of Railway Commissioners power to override the Crownsnest pass agreement temporarily. In 1919, with the lapse of wartime orders in council, the suspension of the Crownsnest agreement was provided for in the general Railway Act then under review, and that suspension was definitely limited to a period of three years from July 7, 1919. In July, 1922 the Crownsnest pass agreement, so far as grain and flour were concerned, again became operative, the agreement as respecting west-bound rates being extended for a further period of one year, with power under the act for the Governor in Council to extend those provisions for one year further. On July 6, 1924, no legislation having intervened, the Crownsnest pass agreement in its entirety came automatically into force. Except for the period of four years referred to the rate under the Crownsnest pass agreement on grain and flour has been in existence since 1898 when the act came into force. The Crownsnest pass agreement having, as I have said, come automatically into force on July 6, 1924, tariffs were filed with the Board of Railway Commissioners in accordance with the terms of the agreement, with this exception, that the Canadian Pacific Railway restricted the application of those rates to points which were on that system of railway in the year 1897 when the Crownsnest pass agreement was decided upon and the act passed. This of course created considerable confusion. An appeal was made both to the Board of Railway Commissioners and the board gave a ruling to the effect that the general act of 1903, under which the Board of Railway Commissioners was constituted, over-ruled the special act embodying the Crownsnest pass agreement and the board ordered the withdrawal of the restricted tariffs. An appeal was taken both to the board and to the Governor in Council. The board remitted the appeal to the Supreme court on certain questions of law while so far as the Governor in Council was concerned, the board was directed to restore the Crownsnest rates as applied by the railways pending judgment of the Supreme Court. I am speaking in the terms of a layman—was to the effect that the Board of Railway Commissioners has been mistaken in the finding that the act of 1903 superseded the agreement of 1897; the Crownsnest pass agreement, it was held, had really the force of a statute and could not be over-ruled by the act of 1903. On the other question, as to the limited territory to which the Crownsnest pass agreement applied, the court found that the terms of the agreement applied, so far as that railway was concerned, only to those points that were in existence at the time of the making of the agreement in 1897. "One can readily see, that with these conflicting findings there would be an indescribably chaotic condition in the country in the matter of freight rates. Under the judgment Crownsnest rates were legally applicable only at points that were in existence on the Canadian Pacific in 1897, while adjacent towns were obliged to pay the higher rates. And this condition as to discrimination was true of the west as well as the east. For example, we found Edmonton on a different basis altogether from Calgary. This situation, of course, could not be tolerated, and the legislation we have now before the House is intended to provide some means for the removal of this discrimination and to give the Board of Railway Commissioners a free hand in the equalizing of rates throughout Canada in order that all parts of the country may be equally situated with others."

The Bill was supported in general terms by both the Liberals and the Conservatives, but the Western Progressives staged a filibuster and held up the measure for several hours longer than had been expected. The feeling of the Chamber was against them, and there is no doubt but that had the Government wished to retaliate it would have had a strong enough majority to blanket the favors which had been included for the West.

The Home Bank Case
The debate on the Home Bank Bill in the House of Commons was brief. Mr. Robb, when introducing the measure provided that the sum of $5,450,000 should be divided among the depositors of the Bank. This meant that each would receive about 35% of the amount due them, in addition to whatever was salvaged from the wrecked bank. In the House the Minister supported the measure on the grounds that the Commission which had investigated the affairs of the Bank had found some moral grounds for relief. The Banking and Commerce committee had gone further, hence the Bill. He was careful to point out that the present bill could not be taken as establishing a precedent for the affairs of the Home Bank, in its relation to the Government, originated during the War.

There had been considerable discussion before the introduction of the Bill, as to its fate in the Senate. Some believed the Senate would kill it, others expected that it would pass. The expectation that it would pass was heightened when it passed the Commons without a formal alignment of the members of a division. The first night it was before the Senate it appeared to be progressing favourably, but the next day there was a general spirit of criticism and by evening two amendments were before the chamber. One was to wipe the Bill out, while the other was to delay the division of the money for several years. It was finally decided to call the Liquidator of the Bank from Toronto to give evidence. As a result of these sittings the Bill was drafted so that the total sum should be around $3,000,000. The idea of the Senate was to provide that those with accounts up to $500 should receive 35%, and those with accounts over $500, should only get a dividend if they could prove that they needed the money.

The number of divorces and annulments of marriage granted by Parliament in the last ten years is as follows:

1917	17
1918	15
1919	55
1920	100
1921	111
1922	102
1923	117
1924	130
1925	135

The number of divorces granted during 1924, by provinces, (Table 1) was 136 in British Columbia, 118 in Alberta, 114 in Ontario, 77 in Manitoba, 42 in Nova Scotia, 25 in Saskatchewan, 15 in New Brunswick, 13 in Quebec, and none in Prince Edward Island, where, indeed, only one divorce has been granted since Confederation.

Divorces Granted in United States to Persons Married in Canada
A fact which throws considerable new light on the divorce situation in Canada is found in the Marriage and Divorce Bulletin of the United States Bureau of the Census. The statistics of this publication indicate the surprisingly large extent to which divorces are granted in that country to persons married in Canada. Thus, in 1922, no fewer than 1,368 divorce decrees were granted to couples married in Canada, a number more than 2½ times as large as the total number granted in Canada in the same year. This number also formed 36.2 per cent of the number of divorces granted in United States during the year to couples married in foreign countries, while, at the same time, the percentage of the Canadian-born population to the total foreign-born amounted to only 8.1 per cent.

Comparing these figures with those of other countries the report states:

The percentages of divorces to marriages, taking place in the same year, as here given, is seen in the case of England and Wales to have increased during eight years from 9.35 per cent to 9.91 per cent; in Australia from 1.55 per cent to 2.81 per cent; in New Zealand from 2.41 per cent to 5.20 per cent, and in Canada from 0.3 per cent to 0.8 per cent. Similar figures for the United States, where, of course, the total number of divorces is unusually large owing to the comparative ease with which they may be obtained, show increases from 27,919 in 1887 to 42,937 in 1896, 72,062 in 1906, 112,936 in 1916 and 148,815 in 1922. The percentage of divorces increased from 10.8 to 13.2 during the years 1916 to 1922, divorces alone during this period increasing by 33 per cent.

The Dominion Elections
With whispers of an election in the air, it was but natural that the members should get in full dress committee debates on the various sections of the Election Act. The whole list of possibilities were re-voiced and amendments galore were moved. Mr. Neil of British Columbia was successful in getting election afternoon made a half holiday in the Dominion, and for good measure this brought the amendment into line for a half holiday in the schools.

A long discussion took place over the contributions of corporations, and the Progressives viewed the Canadian Manufacturers' Association with considerable alarm, while Mr. Brown, who is a former clergyman, candidly admitted that in his election in Manitoba that: "I have no objection to the Manufacturers' Association contributing money for political purposes if they see fit to do it, and they do it, and all the other organizations do it, and I do not see how it is possible for us to provide an act that will stop it. As regards the farmers' organization they were put to a great deal of trouble and difficulty and had to devise ways and means of getting over the act. We simply incorporated for political purposes only, in order to comply with the law, but it put us to a great deal of trouble and unnecessary expense. As far as the money spent in our constituencies is concerned, I know it does not all appear in the statements that are made to the electoral officers.

Sir Henry Drayton took the floor and suggested that the members be advised with what the neighbors thought they were worth—but he did not press the suggestion—and contented himself with throwing it out as a side issue. Dealing in particular with the present Election Act he declared: "Is there any hon. member in this House so foolish as to think that contributions are not made to election funds? Why, of course contributions are made. Is there a single hon. member in this House for example who has not heard the things that were said in regard to what happened in the last election, and who was helped many grocers and butchers continue to supply them by calling up out-of-town prospects in a circle of 30, 40, or 50 miles on an appointed day and hour, and getting their orders.

When customers go to the country

Grocers say they can well afford to do so on weekly orders. Deliveries are made by truck or express.

Visitors renting cottages at nearby points readily respond to offers to supply them, and this is usually profitable business.

We would be glad to help you work out a plan for reaching this trade.

On Thursday the 18th inst., at the Johnston school, No. 2 Hinchbrook, a very interesting event took place in the form of a flag raising. Miss Aggie Rennie has been teacher of this school for the past two years. After the flag, a fine new Union Jack, with all due ceremony had been raised to the top of the pole, the members of the school together with parents and friends entered the school house, and Mr. Alfred Farquhar, chairman of the board of school commissioners, took the chair and conducted a most pleasant programme which was much enjoyed by all. In choruses, drills, recitations and an essay, all of a patriotic nature, the pupils showed good ability and revealed the results of wise and careful training. Short addresses were given by the Rev. Mr. McCord of Rockburn, Rev. J. B. Maclean and Rev. J. L. Hughes. At the close of the programme the ladies served ice cream and cake bringing to a close a most delightful afternoon.

FIVE RING CIRCUS

REALIZED AT LAST

At last the five-ring circus! For years reporters have used this figure of speech to describe the bigness of the Greatest Show on Earth. Now, for the first time in history patrons will actually find five rings when the great Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey circus of 1925 comes to Montreal, June 29 and 30.

With the addition last winter of enough performing horses to bring the Big Show's total to three hundred and fifty the problem presented to the Ringling Brothers was, "How handle five troupes of them in a single display?" The limits of the show grounds in many cities forbade lengthening the main-tent. None of the stages could be spared. All were needed for the big collective groups of human actors. Then somebody suggested that though the "big-top" paraphernalia could not be cut down nor yet "spread out," there was no reason why it should not be "built higher." That suggestion was worked out and now, in addition to the three dirt-floored rings, two additional rings have been constructed to fit over the tops of the steel structured stages.

This is the greatest innovation since the Ringling Brothers started their super-circus policy by combining their own with the Barnum & Bailey circus. It has opened the way not only for trained horse numbers in sets of five but for other big, new displays. Though there are more than eight hundred men and women arctic stars on the mammoth program of 1925 only a few of the most brilliant are presented singly. Instead they are presented in imposing ensemble. These groups extend over the entire length of the huge main-tent—seven, nine, as many as eleven troupes in action at one time. In keeping with this plan of giving the spectators at the ends of the tent just as much "show" as is enjoyed by those nearer the center, five herds of elephants are now presented instead of three. A hundred clowns distribute their caperings in all parts of the "big-top."

The hippodrome track is utilized more than ever before. At one time it is completely circled by one hundred and fifty trained horses, each ridden by an expert, in an amazing ballet and "Fete of the Garlands." Again it is filled with glittering pageants, with splendid high-school horses or remarkable thoroughbreds that give thrilling exhibitions of lofty hurdling and hazardous high-jumps.

Town of Huntingdon. At an adjourned session of the Municipal Council of the town of Huntingdon, held at the usual place and hour of meeting, on Tuesday, the twenty-third day of June, nineteen hundred and twenty-five, in accordance with the provisions of the Cities and Towns' Act, 1922, were present Messrs. D. J. O'Connor, Mayor and Aldermen Daniel Faubert, John A. Hunter, Walter S. Brown and James D. Bicknell, forming a quorum of the Council under the presidency of the Mayor.

WHEREAS it has become necessary to construct a new pumping station to replace the one existing and which is in a very bad condition and impossible of repair.

WHEREAS it has been demonstrated by different analyses made at different times by officers of the Board of Health of the Province of Quebec that the water furnished by the aqueduct is unhealthy, polluted and dangerous to the public health, and that it is absolutely necessary for the protection of the health of the people of this town to install a filtration plant in order to give them pure and potable water; and that the provincial board of health have ordered it to be done, by granting the 80th of October 1924, ordering a delay up to the 1st of January, 1926 only, to do it.

60. In order to provide for the payment of annuities and interests, it is hereby ordered to set aside annually out of the general revenues of this corporation, a sum sufficient for the payment of the half yearly interests of the said bonds as well as the said bonds each year when matured.

In The Early Days.

In the winter of '85 when the Oddfellows of Montreal gave a concert in Huntingdon on March 4th.

On their way back the train was snow-bound at Howick. Judge Macleannan, who has just died, with Mr. William Patterson and a Mr. John Cunningham, the latter a good singer, had to get to Montreal and they induced Mr. John Cunningham of Howick Station to drive them to Beauharnois from which point they expected to make Point Claire thence to Montreal by train.

In the party was Mr. Alex. Murphy, a brother of John, the Dry Goods Merchant. He had the keys of the safe with him and had to get to Montreal so he borrowed a pair of snowshoes from Mr. Gebbie Sr., and started down the track for Laprairie where he expected to make some sort of connection for Montreal.

The train arrived at Howick about 9 o'clock Friday morning, March 5th, and was stalled until Sunday afternoon when the train (and what was left of the party) went back to Huntingdon. The road was cleared by a gang of snowshoes from Montreal by Sunday evening and the train went through Monday morning.

ORMSTOWN

Ten or twelve of our local people attended the Caledonia Games in Montreal on Saturday. Some of them took part in the quoiting competition but failed to get in the prize list.

Saturday four rinks of bowlers journeyed to Montreal by auto to play with Montreal West and Westmount in the Gazette Trophy Competition. The two rinks to Montreal West played their game and won by 28 shots, thus giving Ormstown 27 of a majority on the home and home games with this Club. The team to Westmount did not get playing on account of rain.

At a meeting of the Parish School Commissioners held on Monday, Comm. Jas. Simpson was appointed Chairman of election of School Commissioners to be held Monday, July 6th to replace Messrs. Geo. Hooker and John McTae whose term of office will have expired. Dr. M. A. Cooper and Norman McClennan are the retiring Commissioners in the Village School municipality. The Secretary has been appointed Chairman of election.

On Monday morning fire was discovered in a shed belonging to Mrs. Bazin. On the alarm being given it was quickly extinguished by the abundance of help that soon arrived. The fire was caused by ashes being put in a wood container on Saturday and had evidently been smouldering since then. It was fortunate the fire did not start in the night time.

Baseball game with the Beavers on Saturday was cancelled on account of rain. The Special Prize given by Chas. Colburn & Son at Ormstown Show, for best two year old and under grade Holstein heifer was won by H. H. Craig, Howick. (This was omitted in last week's issue of the prize list).

On Tuesday the Montreal Presbytery sustained the call of Rev. D. N. Coburn to Granby, Que. Mr. Coburn will preach his last sermon in Ormstown as Pastor of the congregation, on the first Sunday in July. Many in the congregation are very sorry that Mr. and Mrs. Coburn are leaving Ormstown.

Mr. J. W. Chambers of Montreal spent the week end at home. Mr. White of Inglewood, Calif. is the guest of friends in this vicinity.

Mrs. Henry Winter is visiting her mother at Vankleek Hill, Ont. Miss Lois Gray of Hemmingford is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. A. Osmond.

Mr. Russel McClellan, Montreal was the week end guest of his grandmother, Mrs. J. Marlin. Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Scott spent Sunday in Huntingdon.

Mrs. G. G. Winter and daughters spent a few days last week in Huntingdon with her mother, Mrs. Doreen of Huntingdon.

Mr. Donald Finlayson and family are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Finlayson.

Miss Joyce McClellan of Montreal who has been the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Geo. Bustard for some time returned home Monday.

Mrs. John Winter, Sr. and Mrs. Ed. Sproule are the guests of the latter's sister, Mrs. A. McClatchie at Morrisburg, Ont. for a few days. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wilson and Mrs. Finley Wilson spent last Wednesday in Montreal.

GLENELM

Mr. Alphonse Dekardins has returned from Bourget College, Rigaud, having successfully passed and received his Diploma with "Distinction" also $5 in gold, Special prize for Poemanship, together with several other prizes.

An old and respected citizen in the person of Mr. John Moore, passed away on the 17th inst. The deceased, enjoyed a large circle of friends, who mourn his death, and who sympathize with the relations in their loss.

After a long and patiently borne illness Miss Claire O'Reill, passed to the Great Beyond on the 16th inst. Her parents, brothers, and sisters who loved her, did all in their power to prolong life, but in spite of all, a family circle is broken. Miss Claire was a particularly bright and cheerful girl, and to her family we can only offer our sincere sympathy.

The women of rural communities are urged to take advantage of this offer of the demonstrators' services and to do their utmost to extend the work of the institutes, by their organization in their own localities and by sending to the demonstrators the names and addresses of women of other districts who would be interested in promoting such work.

IVORY INDUSTRY IS FLOURISHING ONE

The ivory industry is quite a large and flourishing one. Not only is the material used for making billiard balls, but also in the manufacture of piano keys, cutlery handles, chessmen, toilet articles, and a host of small fancy articles as well.

Giant elephants of Central Africa provide us with best quality ivory. So rapidly have sportsmen and hunters killed off the animals in late years, however, that doubts have been expressed as to whether the race of elephants can survive for much longer, writes a contributor to the London Daily Mail.

For immense quantities of fossil ivory—tusks of mammoths that died thousands of years ago—lie beneath frozen mud plains in Northern Siberia.

From the Indian elephant an inferior quality is obtained which is more malleable and less transparent than the African variety. The wild boar, hippopotamus, walrus, and sperm whale also produce a kind of ivory, but it is of much less value than the genuine material.

Only about 500 tons of ivory are imported into England each year, but even this amount requires between 15,000 and 20,000 elephants to supply it.

For making billiard balls highest quality ivory is required. A task is cut up very carefully into sections, and from one of these sections a sphere about two inches in diameter is turned upon the lathe. The partly shaped ball is left to season for five years, when it again receives the attention of the lathe. Finish-in touches are added and a perfectly smooth, true surface obtained before the ball leaves the workshop.

Not a scrap of ivory is ever wasted. Rings left after the manufacture of billiard balls are collected and made up into bangles, small models, and decorative objects. Enormous quantities of these are exported and sold in India. In addition, cuttings and shavings are used for inlaying, polishing, and making Indian ink.

Anything up to 150 per cwt. will be paid for best quality ivory. As however, no preparation from crude materials is necessary before manufacture, working expenses are considerably reduced.

"Hidden Creek"

BY Katharine Newlin Burt

AUTHOR OF "THE BRANDING IRON" and "THE RED LADY"

"There's Poppa now," she said at last. "Say, Poppa, you two sit in the back, will you? Sheila and I are having a fine time. But, Poppa, you old tin-horn, what did you mean by saying in your wire that she was a husky girl? Why, she's got the build of a sage-brush mosquito! Look-a-here, Sheila." Babe by a miracle got her plump hand in and out of a pocket and handed a telegram to her new friend. "Read that and learn to know Poppa!"

Sylvester laughed rather sheepishly as Sheila read:

"Am bringing home artist's A1 picture for The Aura and artist's A1 daughter. Husky girl. Will help Momma."

"Well," said Sylvester apologetically, "she's one of the wily kind, aren't you, Miss Sheila?"

Sheila was struggling with an attack of hysterical mirth. She nodded and put her muf before her mouth to hide an uncontrollable quivering of her lips.

"Momma" had not spoken. Her face was all one even tone of red, her nostrils opened and shut, her lips were tight. Sylvester, however, was in a genial humor. He leaned forward with his arms folded along the back of the front seat and pointed out the beauties of Millings. He showed Sheila the Garage, the Post-Office, and the Trading Company, and suddenly pressing her shoulder with his hand, he cracked out sharply:

"There's The Aura, girl!"

His eyes were again those of the artist and the visionary. They gleamed.

Sheila turned her head. They were passing the double door of the saloon and went slowly along the front of the hotel.

It stood on that corner where the main business street intersects with the Best Residence Street. Its main entrance opened into the flattened corner of the building where the roof rose to a fantastic facade. For the rest, the hotel was of yellowish-brick, half-surrounded by a wooden porch where in milder seasons of the year in deep wicker chairs men and women were always rocking with the air of people engaged in serious and not unimportant work. At such friendlier seasons, too, by the curb was always a weary-looking Ford car from which grotesquely arrayed "travelers" from near by towns and cities were descending covered with alkali dust—faces, chignon veils, spotted silk dresses, high white kid boots, dangling purses and all their men dust-powdered to a wrinkled sameness of aspect. At this time of the year the porch was deserted, and the only car in sight was Hudson's own, which wriggled and slipped its way cautiously along the rutted, dirty snow.

Around the corner next to the hotel stood Hudson's home. It was a large house of tortured architecture, cupolas and twisted supports and strange, overlapping scallops of wood, painted way green, pinking red and yellow. Its windows were of every size and shape and appeared in unreasonable, impossible places—opening enormous mouths on the balconies with twisted posts and scalloped railings, like embroidery patterns, one on top of the other up to a final absurdity of a bird cage which found room for itself between two cupolas under the roof.

Up the steps of the porch Mrs. Hudson mounted grimly, followed by Babe. Sylvester stayed to tinker with the car, and Sheila, after a doubtful, tremulous moment, went slowly up the icy path after the two women.

She stumbled a little on the lowest step and, in recovering herself, she happened to turn her head. And so, between two slender aspen trees that grew side by side like white, captive nymphs in Hudson's yard, she saw a mountain-top. The sun had set. There was a crystal, turquoise translucency behind the exquisite snowy peak, which seemed to stand there behind God, forgetful of the world, behind it, remote and reverent and most serene in the light of His glory. And just above where the turquoise faded to pure pale green, a big white star trembled. Sheila's heart stopped in her breast. She stood on the step and drew breath, throwing back her veil. A flush crept up into her face. She felt that she had been traveling all her life toward her meeting with this mountain and this star. She felt radiant and comforted.

"How beautiful!" she whispered. Sylvester had joined her.

"Finest city in the world!" he said.

lips were sensitive and undecided, his nose unformed his hair soft and easily ruffled. There were hard blue marks under the long-lashed eyes, an unhealthy pallor to his cheeks, a slight unsteadiness of his fingers.

Dickie held a position of minor importance in the hotel, and his pale, innocent face was almost as familiar to its patrons as to those of the saloon next door—more familiar to both than it was to Hudson's "residence." It was sometimes for weeks Dickie did not strain the scant welcome of his "folks." Tonight, however, he was resolved to tempt it. After listening to the record, he strolled over to the saloon.

Dickie was curious. He shared Millings' interest in the "young lady from Noo York." Shyness fought with a sense of adventure, until, to-night, a night fully ten nights after Sheila's arrival, the courage he imbued at the bar of The Aura gave him the necessary impetus. He pulled himself up from his elbow, removed his foot from the rail, straightened his spotted tie, and pushed through the swinging door out into the night.

It was a moonlight night, as still and pure as an angel of annunciation—a night that carried tall, silver lilies in its hands. Above the small, sleepy town were lifted the circling rim of mountains and the web of blazing stars. Sylvester's son, after a few crunching steps along the icy pavement, stopped with his hand against the wall, and stood, not quite steadily, his face lifted. The whiteness sank through his tanned body and brain to the undelled child-soft. The stars hazed awfully for Dickie, and the mountains were awfully white and high, and the air shattered against his spirit like a crystal sword. He stood for an instant as though on a single point of solid earth and looked riddly beyond earthly barriers.

His lips began to move. He was trying to put that mystery, that emotion, into words. "It's white," he murmured, "and sharp—burning like—fire"—his fancy tumbled—like the inside of a cold flame. He shook his head. That the clatter of Babe's, the marvelous quality of the night. And yet—if the world had gone up to heaven in a single, streaming point of icy fire and a fellow stood in it, frozen, swept up out of a fellow's body. Again he shook his head and his eyes were possessed by the wistful, apologetic smile. He wished he were not tormented by this queer need of describing his sensations. He remembered very vividly one of the many occasions when it had roused his father's anger. Dickie, standing with his hand against the cold bricks of The Aura, smiled with his lips, not happily, but with a certain amusement, thinking of how Sylvester's hand had cracked against his cheek and sent all his thoughts flying like broken china.

He had been apologizing for his slowness over an errand—something about leaves, it had been—on the many occasions when in the yard—he had told his father that they had been little green flames—he had stopped to look at them. "You damn fool!" Sylvester had said as he struck. "You damn fool!" Once, when a stranger asked five year old Dickie his name, he had answered innocently, "Dickie-damn fool!"

They'll probably put it on my tombstone," Dickie concluded, and, stung by the cold, he shrank into his coat and stumbled round the corner of the street. The rick of spirits trailed behind him through the purity like a soiled rag.

Number 18 Cottonwood Avenue was brilliantly lighted. Girlie was playing the piano. Babe's voice, "sassing Poppa," was audible from one end to the other of the empty street. Her laughter slapped the air. Dickie hesitated. He was afraid of them all—of Sylvester's pensive, small, brown eyes and hard, long hands, of Babe's bodily vigor, of Girlie's mild contemptuous look, of his mother's gloomy, furtive tenderness. Dickie felt a sort of aching and compassionate dread of the rough, awkward caress of her big red hand against his cheek. As he hesitated, the door opened—a blaze of light, yellow as old gold, streamed into the blue brilliance of the moon. It was blotted out, and a tains, the pressure of the starry sky. Far off already across the flat, that small, dark figure moved. She had left the road, which ran parallel with the mountain range, and figure came quickly down the steps. It had an air of hurry and escape. A small, slim figure, it came along the path and through the gate; then, after just an instant of hesitation, it turned away from Dickie and sped up the wide street.

Dickie named it at once. "That's her girl," he said; and possessed by his curiosity and by the sense of adventure which whiskey had fortified, he began to walk rapidly in the same direction. Out there, where the short street ended, began the steep side of a mesa. The snow on the road that was graded along its front was packed by the runners of freighting sleighs, but it was rough. He could not believe the girl meant to go for a walk alone. And yet, would she be out visiting already, she, a stranger? At the end of the street the small, determined figure did not stop; it went on, a little more slowly, but as decidedly as ever, up the slope. On the hard, frozen crust, her feet made hardly a sound. Above the level top of the white hill, the peak that looked remote from Hudson's yard became immediate. It seemed to peer—to lean forward, bright as a silver helmet against the purple sky. Dickie could see that "the girl" walked with her head tilted back as though she were looking at the sky. Perhaps it was the sheer beauty of the winter night that had brought her out. Following slowly up the hill, he felt a sense of nearness, of warmth; it's aching, lifelong loneliness was remotely comforted because a girl, skimming ahead of him, had tilted her chin up so that she could see the stars. She, each side of the top of the mesa several minutes before he did and disappeared. She was now, he knew, on the edge of a great plateau, in summer covered with the greenish silver of sagebrush, now an unbroken, glittering expanse. He stood still to get his breath and listen to the very light crunch of her steps. He could hear a coyote wailing off there in the foothills, and the rushing noise of the small mountain river that hurled itself down upon Millings, ran through it at frenzied speed, and made for the canon on the other side of the valley. Below him Millings twinkled with a few sparse lights, and he could, even from here, distinguish the clatter of Babe's, the marvelous quality of the night. And yet—if the world had gone up to heaven in a single, streaming point of icy fire and a fellow stood in it, frozen, swept up out of a fellow's body. Again he shook his head and his eyes were possessed by the wistful, apologetic smile. He wished he were not tormented by this queer need of describing his sensations. He remembered very vividly one of the many occasions when it had roused his father's anger. Dickie, standing with his hand against the cold bricks of The Aura, smiled with his lips, not happily, but with a certain amusement, thinking of how Sylvester's hand had cracked against his cheek and sent all his thoughts flying like broken china.

He was, besides, possessed by a fateful feeling that it was intended that out here in the brilliant night he should meet her and talk to her. The adventurous heart of Dickie was aflame.

When the hurrying figure stopped and turned quickly, he did not pause, but rather hastened his steps. He saw her lit her muf up to her heart, saw her waver, then move resolutely toward him. She came thus two or three steps, when a treacherous pitfall in the snow opened under her frightened feet and she went down almost shoulder deep. Dickie ran forward.

Bending over her, he saw her white, heart-shaped face, and its red mouth as startling as a June about it, couldn't you?"

Sheila laughed. "What a funny boy you are! Not like the others. You don't even look like them. How old are you? When I first saw you I thought you were quite grown up. But you can't be much more than nineteen."

"Just that," he said, "but I'll be twenty next month."

"You've always lived in Millings?"

"Yes, ma'am. Do you like it? I mean, do you like Millings? I hope you do."

Sheila pressed her muf against her mouth and looked at him over it. Her eyes were shining as though the moonlight had got into their misty grayness. She shook her head; then, as his face fell, she began to apologize.

"Your father has been so awfully kind to me. I am so grateful. And the girls are awfully good to me. But Millings, you know—I wouldn't have told you," she said half-angrily, "if I hadn't been sure you hated it."

They had come to the edge of the mesa, and there below shone the small, scattered lights of the town. The graphophone was playing in the saloon. Its music—some raucous, comic song—insulted the night.

"Why, no," said Dickie, "I don't hate Millings. I never thought about it that way. It's not such a bad place. Honest, it isn't. There's lots of fine folks in it. Have you met Jim Greely?"

"Why, no, but I've seen him. Isn't that Girlie's 'fellow'?"

Dickie made round, respectful eyes. He was evidently very much impressed.

"Say!" he ejaculated. "Is that the truth? Girlie's aiming kind of high."

The annual meeting of the Bible Society was held in the United Church on June 17th, by Rev. Geo. MacLennan. After Bible reading and prayer Mr. MacLennan expressed his deep regret over the serious illness of our pastor, Rev. Oscar Bunt who had been taken to the hospital that day. Several appropriate selections were rendered by the choir after which the business part of the meeting took place. All the officers were re-elected. Mrs. Johnston reported that the collectors had received $28. Mr. MacLennan gave an address on some of our first missionaries to Africa, referring in particular to David Livingstone. This address he illustrated with lantern slides which made it very interesting and instructive. He showed some of the difficulties and hardships they had to endure while there and how our free-will offering helped carry on the work there and often brought great results. Before closing Rev. Mr. Johnston in a few well-chosen words expressed his appreciation of the lecture and moved a vote of thanks which was seconded by Mr. Henry Blair.

CHAPTER IV
Moonshine

Dickie Hudson pushed from him to the full length of his arm the ledger of The Aura Hotel, tilted his chair, back from the desk, and leaning far over to one side, set the needle on a phonograph record, pressed the starter, and absorbed himself in rolling and lighting a cigarette. This accomplished, he put his hands behind his head and, wreathed in aromatic, bluish smoke, gave himself up to complete enjoyment of the music.

It was a song from some popular light opera. A very high soprano and a musical tenor duet, sentimental humoresque:

"There, there your eyes,
I sympathize
Just as a mother would—
Give me your hand,
I understand, we're off to slumber land
Like a father, like a mother, like a sister, like a brother."

Listening to this melody, Dickie Hudson's face under the gaslight expressed a rapt, spiritual delight, tender, romantic, melancholy. He was a slight, under-sized youth, very pale, very fair, with the face of a delicate boy. He had large, near-sighted blue eyes in which lurked a wistful, deprecatory smile, a small chin running from side cheek-bones to a point. His

The Quebec Roads Department have assumed the responsibility of maintaining the following roads in Godmanchester Township: Smellie Side Road, Carr Side Road, White Side Road, Fortin Side Road, the Plank Road, Seignory Line "South section" and Ridge Road "North section." We understand the Quebec Road Department has engaged the firm of O'Connor Bros. to do the graveling of these roads. The work commenced yesterday on the White sideroad and the Plank road.

The Huntingdon Board of Trade have reason to congratulate themselves for had they not given more stimulation to the municipalities and the County Council the St. Barbe section of the Plank road would not likely have been built and had that section not been started Godmanchester would not have assumed any expenditure on their section this year. When the road is completed much travel will be seen on this road both by people coming to Huntingdon to trade and by Huntingdon people seeking pleasure outings on the shore of beautiful Lake St. Francis.

The Baumert Co. Limited are now busily engaged in the manufacture of a new cream and pimiento loaf cheese. The cheese is a most palatable cheese and a great demand is being made for this new cheese in Montreal, Toronto and at their various distributing points. A number of cities at distant points are also calling for products of the Baumert Co. Limited. The cheese is attractively gotten up in three pound boxes, which not only bear the name of the Baumert Co. Limited but also that it is made in Huntingdon, Que., and that the milk comes from Inspected Herds of Cattle. To assist in the manufacture of this popular cheese Mr. John Brehm has had his son from Antwerp join the Huntingdon staff.

Mr. Freeman who is in charge of the party of five who are seeking the "Gypsy Moth" report that they have not located any of the insects in this community. The moth has created great havoc in many places east of this section, so much so that the U.S. has put an embargo on the shipping of Xmas Trees to the States. Although the shipping of Xmas Trees from this section of the county is not practised it brings considerable revenue to our neighbors in the Hemmingford area.

Rowdiness was apparently the order of the night on Saturday last when a number started creating quite a disturbance in the back part of the town. Possibly liquor was largely accountable for the disturbance but our city fathers succeeded in restoring peace. On Monday arrests were made of three parties who were accountable for part of the disturbance and we believe more arrests are to follow. On Tuesday George Lalonde and Chas. Lalonde were brought before Justice of the Peace Stearns and they pled guilty to the charge and were fined $10 each and costs amounting to $8.75. Alex. Patenaude was also charged with disturbing the peace and was fined $10 and $8.50 for costs. A second charge was made against him for cruelty to his horse for which he was fined $5.00 and costs amounting to $10.

Wednesday morning shortly after 6 o'clock a fire broke out in the dwelling of Eli Ricard. The fire started in the kitchen roof which was completely destroyed. A bucket brigade extinguished the fire before much other damage was done.

The Y's met at the home of Mr. Chas. Hyde on Monday evening. About thirty-five were present. Miss Bertha Barrington read a report of the Convention which was held at Riverfield on June 4th. After being President of the Y Society for a number of years and being elected to the office for another year, Miss Frances Turner was presented with a fountain pen and a bouquet of flowers as a token of appreciation from the members. Games and music were indulged in. Lunch was served and a hearty vote of thanks tendered Mr. and Mrs. Hyde and family for an enjoyable evening.

PARLIAMENTARY NEWS

(Continued from Page 3) by it and who was hurt by it? Everybody knows it. There is no secret about it. Everybody also knows that this country has yet to find one single prosecution. The law is a dead letter. It is just one of those dead things which bring the law into disrepute. When a government passes a law which it cannot enforce it is to blame, and I frankly admit that I am just as responsible for it as anybody else when we put on the statute book a law we could not enforce. It has not been enforced, and there is no intention of enforcing it to-day. The Minister of Justice, charged as he is with the enforcement of the laws of the country, has not made a move or a gesture in the way of enforcing it. He could not; it was absolutely impossible for him to do it. This is just simply an amendment which is recognizing conditions as they actually are. After all we want people to take an interest in public business. We want them to have an honest interest in public affairs. If we can get them to do it, I am not sure that the old way which was adopted in England many years ago was not the best way, namely where the people themselves in each constituency fixed the salary of their representative and the country at large paid nothing at all.

Mr. Forke: Oh, Sir Henry Drayton: The hon. member says "oh", but at least there was a live interest taken in each member. He had to look after his business. He had to get his pay cheque that was O.K'd whether he did his work or not. The people in the constituency were looking after him, and unless he was doing what his constituency wanted and looked after his business properly—well if he was anxious about his money he did not get it. However, that is many years ago. We need not go as far back as that to-day. But we really honest when we say that we want people to take a proper interest in public affairs? After all is not the most immediate interest in public affairs for people believing in some principle, and believing in some policy, to put their hands in their pockets and put up some money, so as to help to put that policy into effect? That is the whole thing we are considering. It is no good talking about this interest or that interest. I am firmly of the view, Mr. Chairman, that in the best interests of the largest portion of our people, namely our workers, the amendment moved by the hon. member for East Caigary is absolutely right. Why? Because it is the way in which they will take the most immediate interest in public affairs. It is in the manner in which they will follow public affairs and the only manner in which they will get to know something about public affairs. The man who puts up his money follows public affairs. I am in favour of the sub-amendment.

A little later on a long discussion took place over the length of time for an election. Mr. Copp, who was in charge of the bill was moving that the period be reduced from three months to a possible forty-five days. In support of this Mr. Lapointe said: "I cannot understand my right hon. friend when he says that forty-five days is too short a time. I have been fighting elections as a candidate since 1904, and I was fighting for others before that. That is quite a length of time, and I think any candidate who cannot fight his battles in forty-five days is not qualified to be a candidate. Then there is the expense of the election to be considered. I think that forty-five days in which to bear the expense of an election is enough for some of us at any rate. I cannot understand why there should be any objection to a delay of forty-five days, or why there should be any demand that it should be longer. There is no provincial election that I remember in which the delay has not been shorter than that."

On the other hand Mr. Kellner quoted the time-table for his constituency as:

"In the constituency of East Edmonton which I have the honour to represent in this House, leaving the city of Edmonton and going north to the extreme point of the constituency, would take twenty-two days to make the return trip; I might not have that schedule down exactly right, but it is approximately correct. Then going out to the eastern border of the constituency would probably take about six days more, so that it would take about 28 days to make the round trip to the extreme ends of the constituency without any allowance for stop-offs whatever."

The section finally passed on division, the section providing that the Secretary of State have power to select returning officers early, and thus avoid confusion by deputy returning officers refusing to act at the last moment.

Mr. Denis took a crack at the present regulation which prohibits the hiring of vehicles to take people to the polls. He claimed that as the ladies now had a vote it was harder than ever to get them out, and that no one ever expected that vehicles were provided free of charge to run back and forth all day. His suggestion was that a candidate be permitted to spend up to 5c for each elector. Dr. Manion never lived in a French town in Quebec for he asked, "Where does my friend come from? The rate he mentions seems very low?"

Mr. Caldwell of New Brunswick took objection and explained how his riding was organized: "Any individual who saw fit to contribute to my election expenses was free to do so, and I want to say right here that my expenses were largely paid by my constituents in both elections. One of the conditions I made when I accepted the nomination in 1919, when this act was not in force, was that every man's name should be taken who gave even ten cents, that a record should be kept of every contribution, a receipt taken for every expenditure made, and that when the election was over the accounts should be audited and published in the local papers, which was done, and I think it was the first time it had been done in Canada, because it was not required to be done under the act at that time. I went further and said that if I found one cent had been spent for anything except the legitimate expenses of my election I would resign my seat, that while I would consider it the highest honour in the gift of the people of any constituency to elect me to parliament I would disdain to sit in a seat that cost a dollar illegitimately spent to put me here."

Mr. Denis said his amendment lost so the good people of Joliette will have to walk next election. "Being a woman myself, when I look at another woman I either admire, envy or smile superciliously at her clothes. But they do not annoy me—unless I happen to want them myself. A man clothes however, can be intensely annoying." Princess Kropotkin.

Canada possesses minimum water-power resources of over 18,000,000 twenty-four hour horse-power distributed from coast to coast at advantageous sites near the centres of industry and in the East and West enormous reserves of coal and other fuel.

That she is making use of her great power resources is shown by the facts that during the past ten years the developed water-power has increased from 1,936,000 horse-power to 3,570,000 horse-power or nearly 85 per cent, and the water-power developed per 1,000 of the population from 252 horse-power to 387 horse-power.

During these past ten years, while the population increased 20 per cent the use of power per head of the population increased nearly 54 per cent.

Ninety-five per cent of Canada's wheat crop in 1924 has proved to be of merchantable quality according to figures compiled by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Of the total estimated crop of last year, viz., 262,097,000 bushels, 250,096,000 bushels came up to the standard as compared with 454,804,000 bushels or 96 per cent of the 1923 crop of 474,199,000 bushels.

SOIL ON TURBULENT WATERS

It is surprising to learn how very little oil is required to smooth the tossing ocean billows and insure the safety of a mighty vessel. The British admiralty issues instructions as to the application of oil in storms, and points out that a very small quantity is effective in modifying the action of waves and breaking seas. A vessel going at ten knots an hour during a storm can surround itself by comparatively still waters, covered with an oily film, extending a safe distance on all sides, by allowing oil to drip on the water at the rate of a little more than a pint an hour. And the effect is greatest on waves in deep water.
