'It's an impossible situation'

Ottawa after power grab: PQ

By Norman Delisle

QUEBEC (CP) — The federal government has stepped up moves to concentrate powers in Ottawa over the last nine months, says Quebec Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Louise Beaudoin.

The moves toward an increasingly unitary state leave Quebec with no future within Canadian federalism, the Parti Québécois minister said in a recent interview.

The feisty Beaudoin has tangled several times with federal Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Marcel Masse and is expected to play a leading role in the Quebec referendum on sovereignty planned for next fall.

Watered-down question wins favor

Quebecers more likely to vote Yes if assured of association

By Bob Cox

OTTAWA (CP) — The more assurances Quebecers got about future association with Canada, the more likely they would have been to vote for sovereignty, a federal poll has suggested.

A survey done at the end of March and the start of April for the federal government found solid opposition to separation and solid support for sovereignty with political and economic association.

It also found a majority of respondents felt the referendum would need more than a 50 per cent vote in favor of separation to start the process towards independence.

The poll, obtained by The Canadian Press, supports the strategy of the new alliance of Quebec sovereigntists.

They intend to ask Quebecers to vote Yes to a question that would offer a year of negotiations on association with the rest of Canada before Quebec would separate unilaterally.

Among findings from the CROP-EXPRESS poll:

— 32 per cent said they would have voted Yes to a referendum question proposing an independent Quebec separated from Canada; 58 per cent said they would have voted No.

— 39 per cent said they would have voted Yes to a question proposing a mandate to negotiate separation; 51 per cent said they would have voted No.

— 48 per cent said they would have voted Yes to a question proposing a sovereign Quebec associated with Canada; 38 per cent said they would have voted No.

— 54 per cent said they favored sovereignty association, with a politically sovereign Quebec in a union with the rest of the country; 38 per cent were opposed.

— 63 per cent were in favor of renewed federalism, with Quebec remaining part of Canada; 29 per cent were opposed.

A total of 1,474 people were interviewed for the poll, making it representative of the province's population to within 2.5 percentage points, 95 per cent of the time.

Rechners get Father's Day gift

Serbs release last Canadian hostages

By Greg Joyce

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vincent Rechner got perhaps his best Father's Day gift ever — his hostage son's release in the former Yugoslavia.

Capt. Patrick Rechner was among the last 26 hostages held by Bosnian Serbs.

They left Pale on Sunday, bound for Belgrade and freedom after being exchanged for four Serb soldiers captured by the United Nations.

The Bosnian Serbs had been holding 11 Canadian soldiers and 15 UN military observers — including Rechner.

"It is a great relief for me and you know, today is Father's Day, so everybody's telling me how happy I am, so I am happy," said Vincent who lives with his wife in the suburb of Coquitlam.

Vincent and Patrick's brother Dominic received the news from UN headquarters in Zagreb about 7 a.m. PDT.

"I was still in bed and I was a little bit reluctant to accept it," said Vincent.

Both Vincent and Dominic, who lives in Vancouver, were barely able to contain their joy during telephone conversations with a reporter.

"I think I will play some Dixieland right now. That's my favorite," said Vincent.

He said his favorite was It's a long way to Tipperary.

"I have it with Jimmy Dorsey. I've changed the words to it's a long, long way from Sarajevo."

Dominic said he got the call from the UN in Zagreb then saw pictures of Patrick boarding the bus to Belgrade.

"We've been through the whole 3½ weeks," he said.

'It wasn't him who was with me during the killing' Police coerced me to perjure myself: Witness

MONTREAL (CP)—Quebec provincial police — already under fire for allegedly planting evidence and beating confessions out of suspects — coerced a witness to lie in his testimony at a murder trial, the witness said in a statement shortly before he died.

In the statement, obtained by the Montreal Gazette, Andre (Bull) Desbiens, one of two star witnesses at the triple-murder trial of Yves Plamondon in April 1986, admits that he perjured himself at the request of police.

"Evidence, it's quite certain they (the police) were fabricating it," said Desbiens in the January statement, given about two months before he died of lung cancer, aged 58.

"If I had to tell the truth in that box... well, Plamondon would never have been found guilty."

Desbiens says on tape that police told him to pretend he had direct knowledge of Plamondon's guilt in the killings.

Contents of Desbiens's statement paint a devastating picture of police tactics at a time when the force is already under scrutiny for the secrecy of its investigations and the results they've achieved in a number of high-profile cases.

On Thursday, a judge ruled the police fabricated evidence in a drug-smuggling case against seven members of the so-called West End gang. The judge ordered a stay of proceedings in the case.

Two weeks ago, a former provincial police officer named Gaetan Rivest appeared on television and talked about how he and three colleagues beat a murder confession out of a man in 1988.

Now, Desbiens's taped statement raises doubts about the credibility of testimony being given in court by witnesses handled by the force.

The statement, recorded by Quebec City lawyer Jacques Normandeau and a witness and transcribed by a court stenographer, claims Plamondon was definitely not involved in one of the three killings — that of Claude Simard in Beauport on Aug. 13, 1985.

Desbiens had also been charged with killing Simard, but was given a deal by authorities in exchange for his testimony against Plamondon.

"Plamondon, it wasn't him who was with me during the killing of Simard," Desbiens says on the tape, claiming he was with another, unidentified man.

As for the two other slayings — of Denis Ouellet in 1985 and Armand Sanschagrin in 1983 — Desbiens said he heard through third parties that Plamondon might have been involved. At the trial, however, he testified that Plamondon had killed Sanschagrin and Ouellet.

The two victims were described in court as drug-dealers who had failed to cover debts.

Plamondon is serving a life sentence without possibility of parole for at least 25 years.

Deliberations to begin today in Barnabé case

MONTREAL (CP) — A jury begins deliberations today in the trial of five Montreal police officers charged with beating taxi driver Richard Barnabé into a coma a year and a half ago.

After six weeks, 39 witnesses and 800 pages of testimony it must decide if Pierre Bergeron, Andre Lapointe, Michel Vadeboncoeur, Louis Samson and Manon Cadotte are each guilty of assault causing bodily harm and aggravated assault.

A maximum sentence on the latter charge could mean a 14-year prison sentence.

The taxi-driver was arrested in suburban Laval after he broke a window in a church rectory, then led police on a high-speed chase through north-end streets.

Separate rural municipality not possible

Chevrette gives Ascot three months for truce

By Rita Legault

LENNOXVILLE — After studying the results of the consultative referendum on the future of Ascot and public hearings held this spring, Municipal Affairs Minister Guy Chevrette wants Ascot residents to come up with their own solution to the divisions between urban and rural residents.

In a letter to council on Friday, Chevrette said he's giving Ascot residents three months to get together with council and try to work out a compromise solution that could lead to a "global and harmonious" resolution.

"I believe it's up to elected officials and the population of Ascot, and not just the minister, to make a choice concerning the future of the municipality and the communities that it encompasses," the minister wrote.

However, Chevrette makes it clear the the formation of a new municipality is "absolutely out of the question" because the province already has too many municipalities — about 1,400 for seven million citizens.

INEFFICIENT

"As well as being a source of inequity, the fragmentation of municipalities is costly and inefficient for the citizens of Quebec," he states in his letter.

Chevrette said he is inviting citizens to come up with various scenarios, including proposals to regroup the territory with the help of one or many neighboring municipalities. The proposals will then be studied by bureaucrats in his department.

In his letter, Chevrette points out that while 55 per cent of residents voted for the status quo in the May 7 referendum, 80 per cent of rural residents are demanding major changes to the municipal structure. He said residents of Moulton Hill have unanimously indicated their desire to secede.

Futhermore, he points out, the small turnout of urban voters indicates they have a certain lack of interest for questions of territorial organization.

Chevrette said the referendum results confirm the diverse opinions presented at public hearings in April by Chevrette's parliamentary assistant André Pelletier, the MNA for Abitibi-Est.

Mayor Robert Pouliot said

Friday he plans to act quickly on Chevrette's requests and will set up a consultative committee with members of council as well as urban and rural residents.

"It will be done as openly and as transparently as possible," he promised, adding that such a mechanism would permit a valuable exchange of information.

Despite years of dead-end discussions between urban and rural residents, Pouliot said he's optimistic that a solution can be found.

Lennoxville considers other sectors

Moulton Hill transfer is still on LENNOXVILLE — Whatever the outcome of talks on the future of Ascot, the Moulton Hill sector will eventually become part of Lennoxville, says Mayor David Price.

"Everyone is in agreement," he said. "We can't go against that."

Price said Lennoxville would also be interested in annexing other urban areas of Ascot, such as Viewpoint, the Experimental Farm and Alexander Galt sectors which the town is already providing with services.

"But we're not making any waves out there until Ascot gets it together," Price added.

Lennoxville is, however, not interested in annexing other rural areas that could eventually end up in conflict with the town.

"I don't want to create two levels of taxpayers," Price said.

The mayor told the Record Friday that Lennoxville could not service those areas any differently than Ascot and that, if there's a split, they would be better off joining with other rural municipalities more in tune with their needs.

Price repeated that Lennoxville would not be interested in Ascot's urban sector, either.

Price said there is one final step in the annexation of Moulton Hill: to set up negotiations for the transition. "There's a couple of street lights involved, and not much else," said Price, adding that he expects Lennoxville will take over administration of the area at the beginning of next year.

Bob Pouliot and David Price were all smiles after news of Chevrette's decision in the referendum matter was made public.

SPA constable to rein in irresponsible dog owners

SHERBROOKE (RL) — Owners of dogs running loose and defecating in Sherbrooke parks beware.

Starting this week a patrolman hired by a local animal shelter will be on the lookout for irresponsible pet owners who either aren't keeping their animals on a leash, or failing to scoop up after them, or both.

The Société protectrice des animaux de l'Estrie (SPA) has reached a deal with the city of Sherbrooke for the pilot project, a first in Quebec, according to Philippe Labonté, director of Sherbrooke shelter.

A patrolman, recently graduated from police technology courses at the Collège de Sherbrooke, has been hired to patrol the city's parks all summer.

The pet policeman will spent eight hours a day in local parks handing out pamphlets warning dog owners to keep their pets on a leash. They will also hand out plastic baggies so that animal lovers can pick up and dispose of pet excrement in specially marked garbage cans.

According to Labonté, the idea is to sensitize pet owners to their responsibilities and to improve the quality of life in local parks.

"We're conscious that there is a problem with animals in certain parks in the city," Labonté said. "But we prefer that the city acts this way rather than to forbid access to all animals as was done recently in the Montreal region."

Labonté said the pet constable, who will be wearing a police type uniform with SPA colors, has been instructed not to become overly zealous writing up tickets.

'It's the most beautiful in the province'

Grand Forks leg of area bike path opens officially

By Rita Legault

LENNOXVILLE — After three years of planning and construction, the "Grandes Fourches" bike path was officially inaugurated on Friday by a number of local dignitaries and bicycle enthusiasts.

Two new stretches of path, spreading over a total of 18 kilometres, now join an existing bike path network in Sherbrooke to offer cyclists about 30 kilometres of riding and hiking trails.

"It's the most beautiful cycle path in the province," said green corridor president Sylvie Lapointe, underlining the efforts of the many who worked to pave the way for the path.

The cycle path network, developed by the Société de développement des corridors verts, now allows local residents and tourists to discover the area from the Old North Ward of Sherbrooke, along three local rivers all the way to the old Capelton Mine and over two historic covered bridges.

Starting this weekend, cyclists can start at Blanchard Park in Sherbrooke, go through Quatre-Pins, Jacques Cartier, Champ de Mars, Saint-François and Atto Beaver parks and end up at a 100-year-old stand of trees on Bishop's University campus.

From there, they can meet up with the Lennoxville, Ascot-to-Hatley Township stretch of the path, which leads people through the old Lennoxville golf course and down toward the Capelton area.

Soon a new stretch will be added to the network with the "Summit" stretch linking the paths to Hatley Township and Rock Forest to meet up with the Magog River in Rock Forest and Sherbrooke.

A total of 50 kilometres of bike paths covering five municipalities will be accessible by mid-July.

In all 6,356 metric tons of gravel and some 8,275 tons of gravel dust were used to construct the network.

On Friday, two teams of safety patrols were also inaugurated.

The first, Vélo Sécur, is a pilot project of police science students at the Collège de Sherbrooke who will be policing the paths over the summer.

Patrol director Yannick Dion said the path patrol is a first in Quebec.

Along with help from the federal government's summer career program, seven student patrolmen have received 45 hours of training on everything from bicycle safety and repairs to first-aid.

Also patrolling the network of paths throughout the summer will be 34 volunteers from St John's Ambulance who have received first-aid training and are equipped to deal with minor emergencies.

SODECOV along with the City of Sherbrooke and the tourism branch of the regional economic development agency is completing a map for the path network which it plans to launch when the network is completed in July.

Hundreds of people turned out for an inaugural bike rally for the new «Big Forks» cycle path.

Man tumbles, calls trail unsafe

LENNOXVILLE — At least one cycling buff is not overly enthused with the new bike path.

Lennoxville resident Tom Robertson called the Record

Tom Robertson... bike path needs warnings.

this weekend to complain that the path is badly designed and unsafe in many areas.

Robertson, a 40-year-old triathlete, said he injured himself Sunday while cycling along the path with his seven-year-old son.

The accident occurred when he was going down a hill in front of Bishop's College School.

After pausing at a rest stop at the top of the hill, Robertson began to descend slowly, but gained speed on the uneven surface and collided with a post erected to keep motorized vehicles off the path.

"I just rolled down the hill in the shale. There's no control," he said. "I have the post imprinted on my left chest."

The incident left Robertson scraped and bruised, and bent his bicycle out of shape. But he worries about what would have happened had he or someone else descended the hill at full speed.

A little further along the path, on the wooden bridge that fords the Massawippi River in front of Bishop's University, is a sharp turn that Robertson described an accident waiting to happen.

"There's a blind turn and if you meet someone going quickly you either go into the river or run smack into them," he said.

Robertson added that there are no signs along the path to warn of these dangers, and that some hills near Bishop's and the golf course are very steep and difficult to climb.

Robertson reported his accident to police and intends to call town hall on Monday to make an official complaint.

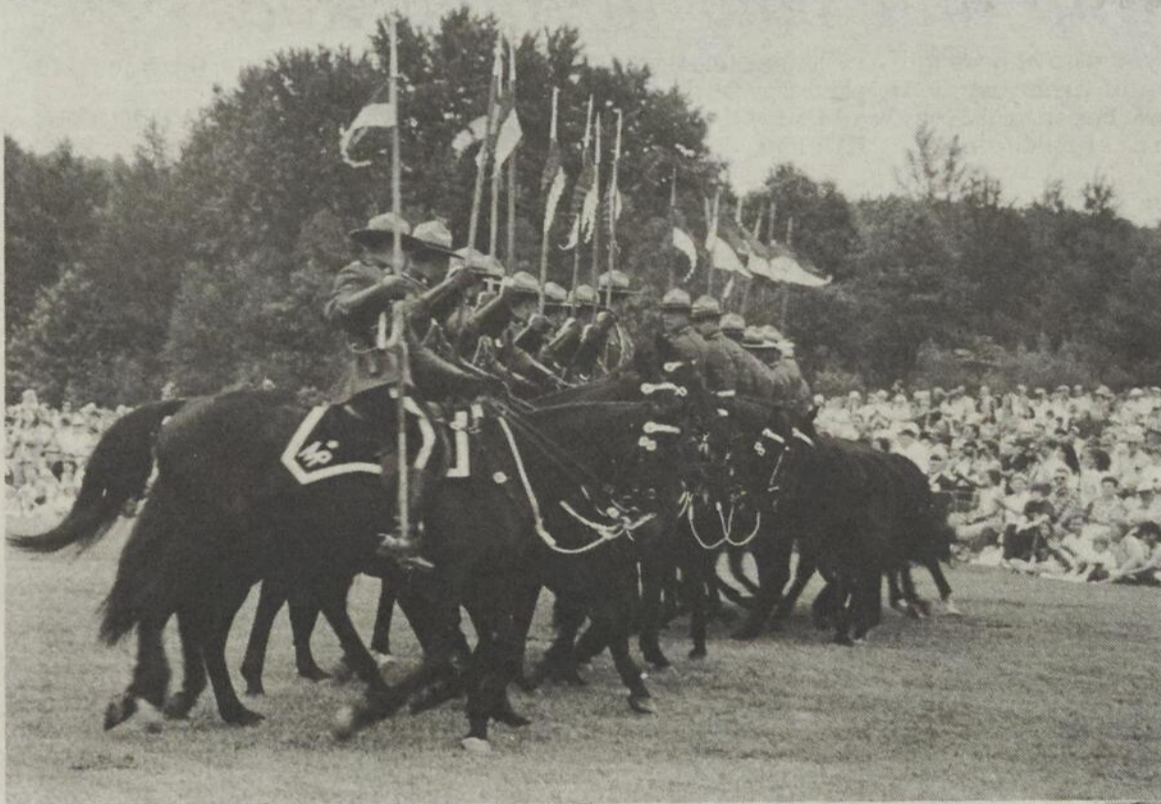

Lennoxville resident Tom Robertson says parts of the bicycle path is unsafe at any speed.

Friends for the day

Thousands of Townshippers converged upon Lennoxville Saturday for the annual Friendship Day festivities. Festivities began downtown with the traditional parade around 11:00. Grey clouds threatened to rain on the parade but held off until shortly later. However the rain didn't last as festivities moved over the Atto Beaver park on the other side of the river where residents and guests enjoyed a number of event including the famous Royal Canadian Mounted Police Musical Ride.

Reason to be proud

Of the myriad of graduation ceremonies being held this time of year, none is more impressive or significant than the adult education graduation.

While any achievement is to be lauded, rising up to conquer the bear that bit you is particularly noteworthy — especially when society seems to make it relatively easy to stay down or run away.

Adults returning to school have to overcome tremendous obstacles to return to the classroom, and in many cases, accept responsibility for bad experiences during their initial stab at high school. Many adult students admit they dropped out of school because they were unable to conform to the rules. Others suffered from low self-esteem, family problems, or negative influences. Their return to the classroom demonstrates maturity, and respect for others, as well as a willingness to learn.

Adult students have the additional burden of adult responsibilities. Some have children and homes to care for. They have to pay the rent and the hydro, find babysitters for the children, or perhaps hold down a part-time job.

Writing essays and studying high school math is often at odds with the lifestyle of adults. It takes tremendous will and determination to marry the demands of school with the expectations of family and friends, but many do it, not only for themselves but for their children.

One mother said she returned to school to break the welfare cycle which has plagued her family for generations. She wanted more for her children, and was prepared to make the sacrifice. Others realized they deserved more than a life of menial work or welfare. They recognized that education is the ticket to a better job, better things, and a better life. Still others simply wanted to complete something they had started a long time ago.

All of the adults who received high school leaving certificates this week have reason to be proud. They have taken a bold and courageous step towards a better future for themselves, their children, and for society. They deserve a tip of the hat from all of us.

The silence of nature

As I am not the kind of person who can stand up at town meetings and express myself, I am expressing my sentiments in this letter.

St. Elie d'Orford is a beautiful place to live. I am most fortunate to live in front of the gravel pit. Fortunate by the means of nature. There are deer, ducks, fox and many other species of wildlife in the pit. I personally know the owners of the pit and have permission to walk on their property and take in the beauty of the surroundings.

The municipality sends out our newsletter every month and I glance through it. They have from time to time brought up the fact that the speed on Route 220 should be dropped from 90 km/hr to 70 km/hr or less. I agreed and still do agree, but until now have not had the motivation to speak out.

On June 1, 1995 around 8:30 p.m., I was sitting in my living room enjoying the view from the window. I happened to notice something move in the grass across the road. To my surprise it was a duck. Not only a duck but also a stream of ducklings following. The mother was coming towards the road. That's when my husband sprung into action. Across the road he went with myself and son closely behind.

The duck decided to head back into the ditch and was heading back to a small stream which runs through the pit. What a sight it was to see her and the seemingly endless train of babies. We returned to the house with a feeling of accomplishment that we had headed her off the road to safety.

Commentary

For some unknown reason I returned to the window at 8:45 to see if I could see her with the binoculars. What I saw I do not hope to see again. There she was a dark mass in the road and ducklings running all around. I screamed and we stormed out of the house with a cardboard box in hand for any survivors. There were cars coming from both directions unable to avoid the already dead mother duck. There she was with four of her little lifeless babies. We removed them from the road and began our search for survivors. We found a total of eight still living. Unsure if any were previously hit we took them home.

The next day a good friend of ours took to building a special place and house at his pond. Today there are three living.

My story does not end there. On June 13, 1995 around 9:15 p.m., a once beautiful deer lost its life being hit by as many as three vehicles.

These incidents are not the only ones to happen on our road and it is not the only tragic highway for these mishaps, however, nature is silent in many ways and I would like to speak out on behalf of nature.

I know animals are unpredictable and are fast to jump out from anywhere, but with a little less speed couldn't they have a better chance of survival?

Until you live where I live, you will not understand the speeds that exceed the 90 km/hr. These people have no respect for their lives let alone nature's.

By letting the speed drop to at least 70 km/hr or less and posting deer crossing signs, perhaps it would save at least one animal.

You would not believe how slow the vehicles travelled this morning to catch a glimpse of last night's latest victim. Is this what it takes to slow us down?

I do not know if this letter will appear in the Record or if it has any purpose in being published. I do know that I feel better for writing down my feelings and I plan to send a copy of this letter to the town council.

Fur trade future on the agenda

Chrétien, Kohl taking a northern vacation

By Lisa Gregoire

CAPE-DORSET, N.W.T. (CP) — Oqituq Laisa says she preferred Jean Chrétien's two-handed handshake to Helmut Kohl's beefy grip.

"The prime minister held my hand and then covered it with the other," said Laisa, 18, demonstrating.

"But the other guy — he really squeezed."

Laisa was one of many Cape Dorset residents who welcomed Chrétien and German Chancellor Helmut Kohl to their community of 1,000 on Sunday morning. An army of local people surrounded the statesmen from start to finish during an two-hour walkabout tour.

Cape Dorset is one of three stops that Chrétien and Kohl will make during a three-day vacation in Canada's Arctic following the Group of Seven summit in Halifax.

Chrétien, at ease with the throng of Inuit children who clustered at his feet, shook hands, signed autographs and posed often for the crowd of amateur and professional photographers.

Kohl, however, was visibly uncomfortable, as were his staff, and often separated himself from the crowd by walking ahead and then waiting for Chrétien to catch up.

But the chancellor did make at least one stop along the way. While passing a dog team tied up on a hill, Chrétien stopped to explain to his guest how Inuit hunt with dog teams. Kohl was curious and approached the dogs.

One of Chrétien's staff first coaxed a dog to come near, the Chancellor reached down to pet it, the crowd applauded and the phalanx of photographers got their photo op.

The entourage later wound its way down to the West Baffin Eskimo Co-op so the two high profile tourists could survey the local art work. The crowd was asked to wait outside as the shopping excursion was a closed event.

The break gave people a chance to exchange "I met the prime minister" stories.

"I wished him a Happy Fathers Day," said Salomonie Pootoogook.

"I wanted to ask him, what's your job like?" said Stephanie Patrick.

For Ansgar and Ulrike Walk of Bielefeld Germany, it was the chancellor they wanted to meet. The Walks, silver-haired and dressed in matching gortex, said they found out only days before they arrived in Cape Dorset that Kohl would be in town.

Kohl emerged from the shop smiling with a large sculpture that an aide loaded into a waiting municipal truck.

Local Liberal MP Jack Anawak praised Chrétien for stressing the importance of the fur trade to the local economy in his remarks to Kohl.

Moments later, the prime minister underscored those comments by steering the entourage into a yard where a polar bear skin was stretched and drying on a frame.

Chrétien went up to congratulate the hunter but Kohl kept his distance, shying away from the European and Canadian television crews.

How the European Parliament will vote on the proposed European ban on Canadian fur imports was a topic of conversation among visiting journalists. But when questioned, Chrétien was evasive on his government's strategy.

Several Inuit leaders were planning to attend a dinner for Kohl and Chrétien Sunday night to lobby the German chancellor. They also planned to prove their point by sporting traditional skin clothing.

Chrétien and Kohl plan to continue their tour Monday morning when they visit the south Baffin hamlet of Pangnirtung.

Gulf vets say government ignoring their illness

By Paul Mooney

MONTREAL (CP) — Lieut. Louise Richard is the picture of ill-health — her hair is falling out and she has several medical ailments including blurred vision, frequent headaches and gynecological problems.

The 34-year-old navy nurse is convinced she knows the reason why — her duty in Saudi Arabia during the Persian Gulf War in 1991.

Richard says massive doses of immunization drugs, anti-nerve gas pills and perhaps even Iraqi Scud missiles that landed near 1 Canadian Field Hospital in Al Quasumah all contributed to her current condition.

The thick, noxious smoke from the massive fires created when Iraqi troops ignited Kuwaiti oil fields was also a major problem.

"I remember a day when the sky was suddenly black with clouds of smoke — and it just started raining oil on us," Richard, who has been off work for months, said from her Ottawa home.

"We put on our gas masks — but it was a little futile at that point."

Richard is one of about 140 members of the Association of Canadian Gulf War Veterans, which is seeking compensation from the Canadian Forces.

But the military hasn't established a link between Gulf War service and the health problems. Until it does, Richard and the others won't be eligible for disability pensions.

Cmdr. Barry Frewer, a Forces spokesman, said the military has begun a major study to determine whether any link exists. The Forces co-operate closely with the Department of Veterans Affairs on the matter and NATO allies are sharing information on the subject, he said.

"It's a very active program," Frewer said.

Richard, however, is increasingly frustrated by the government's inaction.

"I think to myself: Where is this going to lead me in five years? Will I be bald, suffering from cancer, dead?"

Daredevil collapses after Niagara Falls plunge

By Cindy Kavanaugh

Niagara Falls Review

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Daredevil Steven Trotter climbed from an airtight barrel, made the sign of the cross and collapsed onto a stretcher Sunday morning after plunging over Niagara Falls with a female friend.

A crew of about a dozen people launched the high-tech capsule containing Trotter, 32, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Lori Martin, also 32, of Atlanta, from the Canadian side of the Horseshoe Falls at about 9:15 a.m.

Seconds later, the barrel landed at the base of the falls and became wedged in an alcove on rocks.

"This is the first time a man and a woman have gone over together," said the man who funded the stunt.

The two thrill seekers were each charged with trespassing, performing a stunt without a permit, engaging in a prohibited act and mischief. It's not the first time Trotter, a bartender, has faced some of those charges.

He accomplished the stunt by himself in a plastic barrel on August 18, 1985 and was fined for violating a safety zone above the falls.

Firefighters and Niagara Parks Police set out through heavy mist and fast moving water to reach the barrel which was trapped behind slippery moss-covered rocks.

Double amputee survives

One-armed farmer has leg sliced off

BURLEYDAM, England (Reuter) — A one-armed British farm worker had a leg sliced off by a grass mower then drove his tractor to the farmhouse to call for help, newspapers reported today.

Geoff Williams, 53, who lost his left arm in a farming accident 25 years ago, got caught by the mower as he tried to adjust the blades in fields at the farm in Burleydam, northern England.

In agony, he climbed into his tractor with his leg hanging on by a thread and drove 1.5 kilometres to call an ambulance, which took him to a hospital. It was too late to save the leg. It was amputated below the knee.

"He was in immense pain," an ambulance worker told the Star. "It was an incredible show of bravery."

His condition was stable.

Tonga gets new territory

Volcano creates new island

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — An undersea volcanic eruption in the Pacific Ocean has presented Tonga with a baby island that is getting bigger every day.

The eruption began about two weeks ago, at first sending a plume of smoke and steam more than 2,600 metres into the air above Tonga's Ha'apai group of islands, which lie on a volcanic fault line.

Days later, when some of the smoke cleared, an island had appeared.

"It's quite a sizeable island — it must be a couple of acres and between 40 to 50 feet above sea level at its highest point," said Inoke Faletau, deputy secretary in the Tongan prime minister's department.

"Reports say it is growing larger every day. It keeps erupting every so often, throwing debris all over the place. There's this whole fireworks display going on."

Tonga has about 150 islands, but whether the newcomer sticks around to be the 151st remains to be seen.

The latest eruption is centred on the submerged Metis shoal, where volcanic activity in 1969 created another island, which later sunk or was washed away.

"There's quite a heavy formation of rock already," Faletau said. "There's no discernible (volcanic) cone, just one big large black land mass."

Flight to grow for next 20 years

Air travel industry flying high on Boeing's outlook

By Allan Swift

MONTREAL (CP)— Air travel in Canada is going to grow this year and at least for 20 years, giant airplane manufacturer Boeing says in its annual market outlook.

The forecast is good news for the country's airlines as well as the aerospace industry.

The document, released Friday, predicts air travel in this country will grow steadily from now until at least 2014.

World air passenger traffic will grow at 5.1 per cent a year for the next 20 years. North America will lag behind the world average at 3.8 per cent, with Asia setting the pace for the fastest increase at 7.1 per cent.

Boeing spokesman Russ Young said Friday the optimistic scenario is based on "continued economic growth," a prediction not shared by all economists who see a recession looming again in North America.

Young added that the market outlook can't foresee certain events, such as three previous hits on world air travel caused by two oil crises and the 1991 Gulf War.

"It's impossible to forecast events like that," Young said in a telephone interview from Seattle where the giant aircraft manufacturer is based.

Boeing's optimism is tempered by a feeling in the aviation industry that the cyclical air travel industry has reached a peak.

Al Becker, spokesman for American Airlines, largest airline on the continent, said Friday "we're approaching the crest of the economic cycle."

But Becker added, "we don't know how long the crest will last."

Boeing sets air travel in Canada this year at 13.86 billion revenue passenger miles — the number of passengers multiplied by the number of miles they fly.

This is equal to the traffic figure set in 1992 before worldwide air travel dropped for the first time in history, but is higher than 1993 and 1994.

The figures refer to domestic air travel — flights within Canada's borders.

As though to affirm Boeing's bullish outlook, Canadian aerospace firms at the Paris Air Show said Friday they have achieved $600 million worth of sales, double the previous show in 1993.

Also on Friday, Air Canada took delivery of the first of eight large Airbus A340s Friday at the air show.

Labatt management is seeking television assets

TORONTO (CP)— A consortium led by management at Labatt Communications Inc. has made a takeover bid for the company's broadcasting assets, the Financial Post reports.

The group has until Monday to secure financing for a deal that may be worth $630 million.

LCI is the entertainment arm of John Labatt Inc. and its assets include The Sports Network, the Discovery Channel and 25 per cent of Viewer's Choice Canada.

The Financial Post said LCI chairman Gordon Craig and partners have been given until Monday to finance the bid.

Labatt's board last week accepted a $2.7-billion takeover bid for the parent company by Belgium's Interbrew S.A., which has said it wants to sell the company's non-brewing interests.

The Post says Craig's partners in the bid include: Richard Peddie, LCI's chief operation officer; Jim Thompson, TSN president; John McCaw, majority owner of the Vancouver Grizzlies and the Canucks; sports channel ESPN; and Stephen Bronfman, son of Charles Bronfman, who owns Claridge Inc. of Montreal.

Other potential bidders for the broadcasting assets include Baton Broadcasting of Toronto and CanWest Global Communications of Winnipeg.

Moody credit downgrade won't have effect soon

QUEBEC (CP)— The move by Moody's Investors Service to downgrade Quebec's credit rating isn't expected to have immediate financial consequences for the province.

Moody's, one of two influential New York credit-rating agencies for corporate and government borrowers, dropped its rating on long-term bonds issued by the governement of Quebec, Hydro-Quebec and the Montreal Urban Community to A2 from A1.

That probably won't immediately raise the cost of borrowing for Quebec, said Robert Palombi, senior analyst with MMS International financial and economic consultants.

Palombi said this is because Moody's rating now matches those already established by two Canadian credit-rating agencies, Montreal's Canadian Bond Rating Service and Dominion Bond Rating Service, based in Toronto.

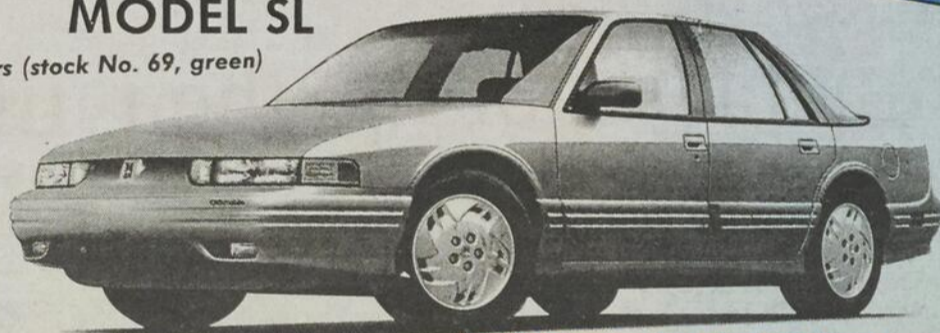

The rating places Quebec sixth among Canada's provinces, below the A1 ratings enjoyed by New Brunswick and Saskatchewan, the AA3 rating of Ontario, the AA2 rating of Alberta and the AA1 rating of British Columbia, the most creditworthy province in the country. The highest possible rating is AAA1.

Wolfman spins tales of the glory days of rock 'n' roll

By Ken Becker

TORONTO (CP) — The world's most famous disc jockey looks like an over-the-hill biker crashing the party of the suits stopping for afternoon cocktails and muted conversation in the lobby bar of the downtown Crown Plaza hotel.

Dressed in black, a grizzled beard and hair pulled back in a ponytail, he drops his wide frame into a chair, drags on an unfiltered Camel and orders an espresso with an ice-water chaser.

"Just call me Wolf, man" he says, unleashing the unmistakable voice before downing the bitter coffee. "I've been Wolfman Jack for 35 years now. I've evolved into the Wolfman. Bob Smith don't exist — that's just a name on a birth certificate."

The evolution of Robert Weston Smith is chronicled in his autobiography — Have Mercy: Confessions of the Original Rock 'n' Roll Animal (Warner, $26.95) — from his days booming tunes and banter from a transmitter in the Mexican desert into the car radios of kids cruising the Sunset Strip, through his hitch on Canadian TV.

There are remembrances of Elvis — "he had a phenomenal appetite for beautiful women" — and John Lennon: "One of the most intense, amazing cats I've ever met."

There are descriptions of drug-fueled orgies and shady characters buzzing around the music industry.

But it also captures a time when rock 'n' roll streamed into the back seats of '57 Chevys, melodies of young love — before it screamed out of gang-banger muscle cars, amplifying the sounds of young hate, providing a musical score for drive-by shootings.

The Wolfman's voice on the radio recalls a time of innocence, when anything was possible.

"I just love listening to Wolfman," teenybopper Carol (Mackenzie Phillips) says while cruising the main drag of a small California town in American Graffiti. "You know he broadcasts from a plane that just flies around in circles all the time. Do you believe that's true?"

Near the end of that 1973 movie, directed by young upstart George Lucas with a cast of unknowns that included Harrison Ford, teenager Curt Henderson (Richard Dreyfuss) goes to the transmitter outside town to ask the Wolfman (played by himself) to broadcast a message to his dream girl.

"Are you the Wolfman?"
"No, man, I'm not the Wolfman," replies the Wolfman.

"Where is he now?"
"Man, the Wolfman is everywhere."

It is part of the myth of Bob by Smith.

Born in New York in 1938, the second child in an upper-middle-class family, he began his career as a 10-year-old punching the numbers on a 78-rpm Wurlitzer jukebox for his older sister's dance parties in the garage of their Long Island home.

As a teen, he skipped school to hang out with the DJs at a blues station and worked weekends as a gofer at live rock 'n' roll shows at the Brooklyn Paramount theatre.

He later went to the National Academy of Broadcasting in Washington and landed a job in 1960 as a $60-a-week DJ — he called himself Daddy Jules — at WYOU in Newport News, Va., playing mostly blues for primarily black listeners.

From there, it was on to KCIJ, "a 250-watt peanut whistle," in Shreveport, La., where he was Big Smith with the Records — country hillbilly.

In 1963, The Wolfman Jack

Show was born on XERF, with the world's most powerful transmitter — 250,000 watts — broadcasting from the Mexican border town of Ciudad Acuna.

(His name sprang from when he was about 20, pretending to be the wolfman for his nephews. He added Jack because it was the way hipsters ended a sentence: "Dig it, Jack.")

Students of the knitting course model their glamorous outfits

By Helen Fitzgerald

Following a tradition established a few years ago by the knitting course at Champlain College, the students again celebrated the end of their semester in May with a gala party and fashion show, featuring attractive creations and styles in various items of knitwear.

It was pretty much the same as previous seasons, featuring a vast array of pullovers, cardigans, full-length coats, bulky sport sweaters, accented with colourful bold patterns and delicate lacy tops. And of course, there were some very unusual and cleverly executed items from the Design group in which the students had achieved the expertise to work out their own pattern according to some personal preference. Also, because of the new program introduced a year ago which adds the distinctive touch of embroidery on wool, there were several beautiful garments with this extra stitchery intricately worked out.

This festive affair was held at St. Andrew's Church Hall and before the ladies assembled for the buffet supper, Rev. Blake Walker, Pastor, addresssed a warm word of welcome to everyone and offered the blessing before the meal.

Mrs. Sallenave thanked him for putting this spacious room at her disposal and the guests then gathered around the buffet table. This year called for a special celebration as it was the 10th anniversary of the inauguration of the Knitting Course and consequently, several members of the 'alumni' were on hand to mingle with their fellow-knitters and exchange news about their favorite craft.

After the 'Fashion Show' Margarita drew the winning numbers for the door prizes which were donated by the following suppliers: Vaudry Flower Shop; Tri-U's; Green's Bakery; Patisserie Lorraine; and Scottish Woolens in Lennoxville; Restaurant La Deviniere, Bouclair, Fabreville, Pharmaprix Place Belvedere, Boutique Alexandra; Boutique La Trouvaille; Magasin Eaton, Pingouin, Entrepôt d'artisanat St. Elie, Tissus Mode and Les Filles d'Eve in Sherbrooke.

Representatives from the group of students then came forward and presented Mrs. Sallenave with gifts in appreciation of her ever-ready assistance throughout the past year.

Nancy, daughter of Jane and Cyril Crandall was married to Daniel Rivet of Ahuntsic. The wedding took place on May 9 in Laval. Mrs. Jane Crandall spent a few days at their new home while the happy couple were away on a honeymoon trip. Dr. and Mrs. Cameron Short and family of Ottawa spent a recent weekend with Mrs. Rhea Short.

Mrs. Gula Abbott of Surrey, B.C. is spending two weeks with Mrs. Violet Cook. Mrs. Goldie Grenier of Farnham and Marguerite Miller were luncheon guests of Violet Cook and her sister Gula, on Wednesday, May 31.

Mr. James Miller spent a few days at his home here and returned to Prince Edward Island on June 1st.

Four S.E.W.I. members attended the Quebec Women's Institute Convention at Macdonald College on May 17-18. Mary Boomhower, Margaret Cummings, Dianne and Thelma Rhicard enjoyed the business and pleasure of the event. For 81 years QWI has been connected with Macdonald.

Jo-Ann and Arvid Rafaelsen flew to Fort Lauderdale, Florida where they rented a car and drove to several places, enjoying a ten day vacation.

Nine Girl Guides of the 1st Stanbridge East Unit and their two leaders, Donna Realffe and Joan Kemp spent a pleasant few hours at the Bird Sanctuary in Philipsburg on a nature hike and picnic.

Fourteen people from our town attended the courses on composting and purchased the Earth Machine Composter. Many are using the recycling depot at the Medical Center parking lot in Bedford.

The 20th Spring Horse Show was a huge success as the weather was splendid and more horses than ever were present. Appreciation goes out to the organizers, Ron Hayes, Vera Gendreau and Raymond Wescott. The profits go to the S.E. Sports Assoc. The UCW realized over $200.00 at their Food Sale that morning.

The Embellishment Committee has established flower beds in front of the Post Office and have plans to do so in various other places.

The May 27th S.E.S.A. auction raised over $700.00 for the cause. A big thank-you to all who donated and bought and to Charlie Bockus who was the auctioneer for the event.

The P.Q. Bird Society held a field trip at the Philipsburg Sanctuary and exactly 100 species were identified. It's a great place to observe.

Gordie and Gloria Taylor who own a cottage down by the river, were in the Netherlands to participate in the Liberation of Holland celebrations. Gord is a veteran of World War Two, and was impressed by the honour shown to him and the others by the Dutch people.

Friends of Donald Blinn are sorry to hear that he is a patient in the BMP Hospital as the result of a stroke. Best wishes go out to him.

Pastor Brett is now Reverend Brett Adrian Anningson as he was ordained at Sackville, N.B. at the Maritime Conference of the United Church of Canada. At the joint Pentecost Service on June 6, at S.E. folks were invited to stay for refreshments following the observance to congratulate him and socialize.

Linda Fry's Café Chez Moi is now open from Wednesday to Sunday for breakfast, light lunch and afternoon tea.

Gilberte Quintin is at a nursing home in Marieville and having therapy for the hip she broke in a fall at her home. I hear that she is comfortable and friends wish her a speedy recovery.

At the Massey-Vanier Sports Awards, Wes Gage presented the Barry Gage Memorial Trophy (for the 20th time) to the outstanding player on the hockey team.

The Memorial Hall Co. held a Dedication Service and unveiled a plaque in memory of our World War II veterans. Some of the folks who came from a distance for the important event were: Esther Brown, Margaret Cheek, Stanley Realffe, Rita and Elmer Simpson (Ottawa), Harold Smith (Guelph), Stanley Westover (Trenton), Getrude Kidd (Prescott), Geraldine Westover (Kemptville), Cedric Moreau (East Farnham), Amy Hodge and family, Joe Dussault, Normand Lavoie (Montreal), Irene Phelps (Greenfield Park), Earl and Mildred Blinn (Richmond). Following the ceremony, refreshments and a social time were enjoyed.

In celebration of National Museum Day and in conjunction with Volunteer Day many people were invited to the official opening of the Missisquoi Museum on May 28 and enjoyed viewing the new displays with the theme, "In Praise of the Needle".

Bob and Joyce Blakeslee with Carol and Stanley Soule on their planned White Star Tour spent a most pleasurable week along with others, seeing the Canadian Rockies, Banff Park, Glaciers and other points of interest.

The Coffee House held another entertaining evening. Along with the regular performers was Gilles Plante from Montreal who sang and played the guitar. The last evening for the summer will be on June 25 and hamburgers and hot dogs will be served around 4 p.m. If you plan to attend and would like to bring a salad or dessert, it would be appreciated.

Carol Dussault's Seeing Eye Dog has not changed colours! She now has a Black Lab named "Nordet". Regretfully the other dog was not suitable.

Jeanne Corey and sister-in-law, Esther and family members flew to Norway, England and Scotland where they visited relatives, vacationed for 18 days and had a great time.

Thelma Rhicard rode with Don Healy and Ross Ladd to Valleyfield to attend the Testimonial Dinner in honour of Maurice King who is retiring as president of CVESPA. Many dignitaries, friends and his daughter spoke of his accomplishments in so many areas.

Happy Father's Day to all the Dads out there!

Out with mildew, in with freshness

By Anne B. Adams and Nancy Nash-Cummings

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I have a problem with mildew in my dresser drawers. Is there a remedy for this? — MARINA, Uniontown, Pa.

DEAR MARINA: Mildew grows where it is damp, dark and warm(ish): The best way to prevent mildew is to change your dresser's "environment," but first you have to banish the existing mildew growth!

On a sunny day, empty your dresser drawers, take them outside and wipe them down, both inside and out, with a weak bleach solution. Let them dry in the sunlight.

There are a variety of mildew-preventive sprays on the market that are guaranteed to keep mildew away for up to three months, but as a reader from Florida pointed out, mildew takes that long to re-establish itself anyway, so the claim is a little bogus.

If you can't move your dresser to a drier area of your house, you can cut down on the dampness by placing packets of silica gel (available in most hardware stores) in the drawers or, less expensively, buy a bag of either scented or unscented cat litter and make absorbent "sachets" by placing the litter in tied-off 6- to 8-inch lengths of discarded pairs of stockings.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I have a great pickle recipe that calls for cassia buds. I can no longer find them so I use cinnamon bark. Do you know of a place where I can purchase them? — GINA A. SWENSON, Bandon, Ore.

DEAR GINA: We called our many spice sources around the country and the answer was the same: Cassia buds (which incidentally are the buds of the Chinese cinnamon tree) have been unavailable for months, and no one knows why. However, don't despair.

The owner of Penzey's Ltd. Spice House (P.O. Box 1448, Waukesha, WI 53187; 414-574-0277) will be taking a trip to Vietnam later this summer and hopes to establish a source for the importation of both Vietnamese cinnamon and cassia buds.

Vietnamese cinnamon is the best in the world as its bark contains 7 percent oil as opposed to the 4 percent oil of Chinese cinnamon bark or the normal 2 to 3 percent of cinnamon bark from other countries. Anne and Nan and Penzey's will keep you posted.

STUMPED: Arlene Chisholm of Palatine, Ill., wants to buy her granddaughter a mood ring for her birthday but doesn't know where to find one. Neither do we. Readers?

FEEDBACK: Many, many thanks to all the generous Anne and Nan readers who sent seeds of both the double and old-fashioned single balsam "touch-me-not" plants from their gardens to forward on to Nancy Lee of Bartlett, Ill. Postal costs being what they are these days, a special thanks to those readers who included stamped envelopes in which to send the seed.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: Over the years, can sizes and quantities have changed. They used to be pretty well standardized (for instance, a #303 can held 16 ounces or 2 cups). Within the past few years, food processors have added new sizes and quantities have changed. Can you give me an updated can size/quantity/cup measure list? — WILLIAM E. NORTH, Arcadia, Calif.

DEAR WILLIAM: As you have noted, can sizes and quantities have changed and so has the labeling process. Now, thanks to the Food and Drug Administration, you know exactly how much of a product you are getting in a can but knowing EXACTLY has made life more complicated.

For instance, if a can holds liquid, the fluid ounce measurement will be written on the label: If the can holds 16 ounces, you know that this is the equivalent of 2 cups.

If the can holds a solid food product, such as baked beans, you'll read on the label that it holds (for instance) six 1/2 cup servings which means that the can holds three cups.

If a can holds, for instance, whole peaches, the label will tell you approximately how many peaches there are. So, as you can gather, with "truth in labeling," can sizes no longer dictate how much they contain: the label does.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: Do you or any of your readers have directions for making either knitted or crocheted dishcloths? I had the directions, a friend borrowed them and now says she can't find them. The directions were for a knitted dishcloth but any other will do. — MRS. E. BRINKER, Chalfont, Pa.

DEAR MRS. BRINKER: Here are directions for a knitted dishcloth: Anne makes these quick, simple and useful little items for stocking stuffers around Christmas time. Using a 4-ply cotton worsted and No. 9 needles, cast on four stitches. Row 1: Knit 2, yo (yarn over), K2. Row 2: K2, yo, knit to end. Repeat Row 2 until there are 40 stitches on the needle.

Now decrease: K1, K2 together, knit to end. Repeat this row until four stitches remain on the needle. Bind off remaining stitches. This makes a 7-inch square dishcloth, but you can make it any size you wish: Simply keep on increasing until the piece measures 7 inches or whatever size you desire and then start to decrease.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I was wondering if you can help me find a recipe for applesauce muffins. I had the recipe but lost it when I moved. I know it had 3/4 cup of applesauce and wheat flour, but that's all I remember. If you or your readers have the recipe, I would appreciate it. — MARY PREVOST, Raleigh, N.C.

DEAR MARY: We couldn't find a wheat flour/applesauce muffin recipe, but as you probably know, unsweetened applesauce can be substituted on a 1:1 ratio for oil or butter in quick breads, sweet breads and muffins.

So here's our favorite Basic Whole Wheat Muffin recipe from the King Arthur Flour 200th Anniversary Cookbook (Countryman Press, Woodstock, Vt., 1994). For the required 4 tablespoons oil or butter, just substitute 4 tablespoons of unsweetened applesauce.

WHOLE WHEAT MUFFINS
(makes about 1 dozen)

2 cups whole wheat flour (King Arthur Whole Wheat Stone Ground, if you can find it in your neck of the woods)

- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 1/2 to 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup milk
- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 4 tablespoons (1/2 stick) butter or vegetable oil (or applesauce, if you prefer)

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Combine flour, baking powder and salt in a mixing bowl.

In a separate bowl, beat the eggs. Add the milk, brown sugar and butter, oil or applesauce and beat thoroughly. Pour the liquid ingredients into the dry and blend with a spoon or wire whisk for 20 seconds and no more.

Fill the cups of a greased muffin tin 2/3 full. Bake for 20-25 minutes or until the top surface of the muffins spring back when pressed with your fingertips.

Variation: You can substitute orange juice for the milk, honey for the brown sugar and add two tablespoons of grated orange rind.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I am trying to locate a source for 4711 Glycerine Soap, a wonderful hand and bath soap. — M.A. VICK, Baton Rouge, La.

DEAR M.A.: We're sorry to tell you that the White Rose 4711 glycerine soap is no longer being imported into this country. Would you settle for White Rose 4711 Cream Soap? The difference is that, unlike the glycerine soap, it is opaque and foams and lathers.

A box of three 3-ounce cakes costs $10.50, plus shipping and handling. You can order it directly from the 4711 products importers by calling 1-800-854-7650 or writing to: Customer Service, Richard Barrie Fragrances, 15 Executive Blvd., Orange, CT 06477.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: Over 20 years ago I purchased a lace tablecloth at an estate sale. Later I found this piece was handmade and the kind of lace was Battenberg. It is still beautiful and I am curious about its origin. Is Battenberg a German lace? I feel it is very old and I would appreciate it if you could give me some background on its history. I think a woven tape is placed on a pattern and then sewn together by thread into rounds, etc. — MRS. R. GORDON, Monterey Park, Calif.

DEAR MRS. GORDON: Knowing absolutely nothing about Battenberg lace, we called on the expertise of our extremely knowledgeable friend on all matters pertaining to lace and needlework who, coincidentally, owns a store in Edmonds, Wash., called "The Lacemaker." She told us that the Battenberg lacemaking process was "invented" by Queen Victoria's daughter Beatrice, who married the German prince, Henry of Battenberg.

As a response to severe unemployment among the ranks of lacemakers due to the advent of lacemaking machines in the 1850s, Beatrice sponsored a new lacemaking process that would use both machine and lacemaker to turn out a new product. Machines turned out a "tape" that was then laid on a pattern and hand-sewn or "cobbled" together by trained lacemakers: As a result the lace could legitimately be sold as handmade

Helping Circle meets

STANSTEAD (IH) — Stanstead South Helping Circle Unit members met at the Zodiac restaurant here the morning of June 6 for breakfast.

Thelma Dustin, president, conducted a business meeting. Madelyn Curtis, devotional secretary, read "A prayer for energy", a poem written by Marjory Holmes. All recited the Lord's Prayer. After the meeting adjourned Madelyn read another humorous poem.

Dorothy Nutbrown, secretary, gave her report and read the communication. The roll call was responded to by 14 members.

The treasurer's report was presented by Ruth Putney.

The business was to finalize the "New 'tu You sale" on June 10 and the serving of refreshments on June 11 after the worship service.

Thelma asked all to save Campbell soup labels for a benevolent service.

The next general meeting will be on September 19 and tentative plans are to motor to the Balsams in New Hampshire for a luncheon.

Card party

WATERVILLE — On Friday, June 9, ACW of St. John's Church sponsored their last 500 card party of the spring season with six tables in play.

Prizes for the highest score went to Isabel Nelson, 7040; Josephine Harrison, 6580; Ellen Ride, 5600; Audrey Millar, 5600 and Alison Watson, 5540. Lowest score, Eunice Donnachie, 2460.

Dot McCourt had the secret score. Beulah Walker held 4 of a kind in her hand twice.

Door prizes: Archie Moulton, Garth Carson, Archie Nelson, Gertrude Watson, Barbara Wing, Winnie Paterson, Everett Vachon, Esther Côté, Hazel Carson and Bud Wing.

Gertrude Watson held the marked plate and Tracy Chute won the drawing.

After extending birthday wishes to our faithful helper, Esther Côté, we thanked the players for their continued support and generous donations of prizes.

Hope to see you back in the fall after a pleasant summer.

Thelma wished everyone a pleasant summer.

Mrs. R. Nicholson

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Moulant flew to Vancouver earlier and enjoyed a visit with his brother Glenn Moulant in Merritt, B.C., also visited with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Murray and Pierre in Sardis, B.C. At a later date they visited Wayne's cousins Linda Bristow and Tracy, Dorothy Blizard and family, and Donald MacArthur in Whitby, Ont. In Tweed they spent a night with Mr. and Mrs. Kelly MacKenzie, on to Petawawa to be with their son Donald and wife Celia. In Ottawa they visited their brother Brian Moulant and family and sister Judy Kerr and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Moulant entertained their parents Mr. and Mrs. Grenier and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Beattie on Mother's Day at a restaurant in Sherbrooke.

Mother's Day weekend guests of Ruth Nicholson were Mr. and Mrs. Dale Farrell and son Sean of Lennoxville and Wesley Nicholson of Montreal. On Sunday Carol and Linda Nicholson, Roxanne and Frederick came for the day also Joyce Rankin and Paul Lortitch of Sherbrooke.

Word has been received of the death of Mrs. Edward Nicholson of Sherwood Park, Alberta. Mr. Robert Nicholson, Scotstown, left to attend the funeral and spend some time with his brother and nephew Bob. Sympathy is extended to them.

Mr. and Wayne Moulant have been in Sherbrooke on business a couple of different days recently.

A few relatives and friends gathered at the Dell Cemetery on May 24 for the Committal Service of the ashes of the late Mr. Henry Moulant with Mr. Robert Sandford officiating. Henry passed away on February 3 at the Sherbrooke Hospital. Afterward a lovely lunch was served at the Moulant home. Those present from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moulant, sons Coley and Peter, Mrs. Isabell Beattie, Mrs. Jean Ross and Mrs. Jean MacIver of Sherbrooke, Mr. Robert Sandford, Canterbury, Duncan McLeod and John D. MacDonald of Scotstown.

Obituary

RAYMOND LAWRENCE WOODS
of Kingsbury, Que.
1926-1995

Raymond Woods left for his eternal home on May 25, 1995. He was born in Melbourne, Quebec on June 23, 1926, the son of Lydia Vaillancourt and Albert Woods. He was predeceased by his sister Albertine and brothers Edward, Ernest and Gerald. He is survived by sisters Iona, Doris, Kathleen and brothers Armand and Stuart. Also left to mourn are his beloved wife Elsie, sons Brian, Larry, Randy and daughters Donna and Kimberley. Ray will also be dearly missed by his grandchildren Alyssa, Tom, Chad and by his numerous relatives and friends.

Ray went to school at Gore, Upper Melbourne and at St. Francis where he finished his grade twelve after a year of military service. On April 26, 1947 he married Elsie Booth of Melbourne Ridge and they took up residence in "Waterloo, Quebec. Ray worked at Macdonald's Metals and Plastics, then joined the C.P.R. and in 1949 started working at Jeffrey Mine in Asbestos. In 1960 he was promoted to the position of industrial engineer which he held until he took his disability retirement in 1985.

Ray and Elsie moved into their family home in 1954 and with all of the family's assistance over the years have made it into a beautiful country homestead of which Ray was also proud of.

Upon his retirement Ray became well-known for his expertise on church, cemetery and family histories. He continued to be active with his local church and spent many moments with Elsie and friends on Bingo nights. Especially close to his heart were the friends and activities of the St. Francis Fifty Plus Club.

The funeral service was held on Saturday, May 27 at the Melbourne Ridge United Church with the Rev. Patricia Lissen and Pastor Eric Clayton officiating. Pall bearers included Ralph Pike, Roderick Morrison, Georges Champigny, Allan Mountain, Edwin Fowler and Ernest Wilkins. Cremation followed with interment of the remains on May 31 in Melbourne Ridge Cemetery.

Ray loved life and lived each day to its fullest, despite hardships and challenges. His family, relatives and friends will remember the many special moments we shared together, and will cherish these memories forever.

Legion Brome Branch No. 23 holds meeting

The monthly meeting was held on Wednesday, April 19 at 7:30 p.m. The meeting was opened in ritual form along with the introduction of guests Heather Davis and Pierre Desourdy.

Prior to the business meeting, certificates of appreciation were made to Pierre Desourdy, Paul Meunier, Drew and Marcia MacRae, Redmond Brouillette, F.W. Edwards and Jimmy Beau regard. Regrettably only Pierre Desourdy was present. The balance would be delivered to the recipients.

The minutes of the March meeting were read and accepted. The minutes of the executive meeting were read and approved. Cards of thanks were read from Gladys Willey and the MacKay Center, as well as a letter from Provincial Command of upcoming events for V.E. Day.

Treasurer Comrade Margaret Pille presented the financial statements for the branch, including the auditor's report, current account and the Poppy Fund.

A sympathy card was sent to the Leggatt family, a fruit basket to Gladys Willey and a Get-well card to Albert Smith.

A letter from Provincial Command asking that Legion Branches have churches and town authorities involve in ringing of bells, sirens, etc. on May 8 from 12 noon to 12:05 p.m.

There being no further business the meeting was adjourned.

The Happy Gang finished the season with a sugaring off at Mr. and Mrs. Justin Lowry's on June 6.

DAVIS — I would be amiss not to express my grateful thanks and appreciation to many special people who cared for me when I suffered a severe heart attack in February. To the Stanstead Ambulance, Hank Stremmelaar and Larry Reynolds who were so kind and efficient. Words fail me to properly thank all the doctors and nurses of the emergency department, intensive care unit and 2nd floor of Sherbrooke Hospital for their excellent care and compassion. Also to all my room-mates for their kindness to me the several weeks I was there. My sincere thanks to Hotel Dieu and CHU Hospitals and Sherbrooke Ambulance and attendants for their kindness when I was taken for tests. My grateful appreciation to Sister Groleau, Rev. Canon Curtis Patterson and Rev. Christine McLeod for their visits and inspiration. We, in the Three Villages, have a wonderful team of workers for home care. My humble thanks to Dr. Bonin, nurse Joanne Britton, CLSC, Argus Alarm System, R.H. Rediker Volunteer Service, Meals on Wheels and many others who have so kindly cared for me. Heartfelt thanks to my loving family for all their kindness and encouragement. Sincere gratitude for all the visitors, cards, flowers, fruit and telephone calls. Everything is very much appreciated and may God bless each and everyone of you.

MRS. VIVIAN DEAN DAVIS

Anemia linked to genetic deficiency

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My mother, her mother and aunt were all diagnosed with pernicious anemia. Now my doctor says my B12 level is very low and I'll have to have injections once a month for life. She also says there's a test I can take to determine whether or not I have pernicious anemia. Should I take the test or just have the shots? Please tell me something about this condition and its prognosis.

DEAR READER: Some people are born with an inherited deficiency of "intrinsic factor," a protein that allows absorption of vitamin B12 from the diet. In the absence of adequate B12, pernicious anemia will develop. The disorder is marked by anemia, tingling of the extremities, mental changes (including confusion and dementia), and ill health.

You appear to be the recipient of a serious genetic deficiency. Without B12, you will become sick.

Fortunately, the antidote is both safe and inexpensive: monthly B12 injections. When given in this manner, B12 enters your body and can be used, without intrinsic factor even being a factor. Thus, with the shots, you'll never develop pernicious anemia.

Although all doctors like to make an open-and-shut, air-tight diagnosis, I don't believe that you will suffer by not having the definitive examination, called a Schilling test, which is expensive.

If your doctor is willing to treat you on the basis of your family history and low B12 level, go for it. With this therapy, your prognosis is excellent.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Fads I: Vitamins and Minerals." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from Paget's disease. Is there any treatment or a possible cure?

DEAR READER: Paget's disease causes areas of rapid bone turnover: islands of bone that degenerate and regenerate too quickly to permit adequate calcification. The end result is weak and brittle bone that fractures easily.

If the areas of Paget's disease are in the skull, such fractures don't occur; but if the diseased areas form in weight-bearing bones, fractures are common. The diagnosis is made by blood tests, X-rays and, in some instances, biopsy.

There are several drugs to treat Paget's disease, chiefly calcitonin and etidronate. When given in proper doses, these prescription medications retard the rate of bone turnover and allow calcification to take place.

Patients with Paget's disease should, in my opinion, be under the care of endocrinologists or orthopedic surgeons.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Do you have information on shingles?

DEAR READER: Shingles (herpes zoster) is a virus infection of the nerves in the skin, usually involving one or the other side of the body in a band or swath.

The herpes infection begins as painful blisters that eventually coalesce, break and crust over, often causing a large area of raw, denuded skin that heals slowly.

All cases of shingles are uncomfortable and unsightly during the acute phase. However, most eventually heal without causing serious health problems. Nonetheless, in about 10 percent of patients, an unpredictable and dreaded complication develops: post-herpetic neuralgia. Marked by a virtually permanent form of chronic pain that is often severe, this neuralgia is exceedingly difficult to treat.

This is the reason that most physicians aggressively treat shingles with anti-virus drugs (Zovirax or Famvir) or prednisone. The earlier in the disease the treatment is administered, the less likely for neuralgia to develop.

Herpes zoster is related to the chicken pox virus; all adults with shingles have had the childhood disease, which apparently becomes re-activated due to reasons that are poorly understood. However, immune malfunction clearly plays a role.

For example, shingles may be the earliest manifestation of a hidden malignancy. In some patients, testing is appropriate to investigate the possibility of an unsuspected cancer. What tests to get and how far to go depend on the patient's age and general health, as well as the physician's preferences.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Viruses and Cancer." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please discuss thumb and finger tremors. Are they the beginning of Parkinson's disease?

DEAR READER: Tremors (rhythmic shaking or twitching) are, in general, classified as voluntary (intentional) or involuntary (resting).

Voluntary tremors are most noticeable during the performance of motor acts, such as eating or writing. They may be caused by a variety of neurological disorders, such as multiple sclerosis, or they may simply be inherited as "benign essential tremor." Tremulousness is often caused by stimulants, such as caffeine, and can reflect nervousness or anxiety.

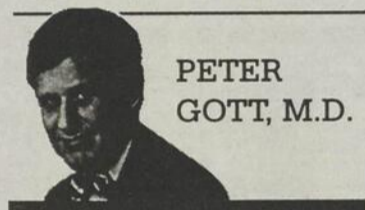

In contrast, involuntary tremors appear at rest only; they disappear on movement. Parkinson's disease is the most common cause of such tremors.

Therefore, before answering your question, I'd have to know the circumstances associated with your tremors. In the event that you have a resting tremor, Parkinson's disease is a possibility and should be treated with drugs, such as Sinemet.

You should see a neurologist for diagnosis. Ask your family physician to refer you.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I worked at a nursing home for nine years and we had a unique way of healing bed sores, which are so common among the infirm. We cleansed them with peroxide, filled the ulcers with sugar and placed the affected part under a heat lamp for 10 minutes, without the lamp being too close. Many people experienced relief this way and it may help some of your readers.

Mason Dixon's unusual names can be a lot of fun

Dear Ann Landers: Regarding Mrs. Dixon who wrote because her husband wanted to name their child Mason: Why not? My maiden name was Rose Rose. My mother's name is Rose Rose (hers by marriage, mine by birth). In fact, I attribute my sense of humor to the fact that I had such an unusual name.

As a high school cheerleader, I once was introduced at a football game. The announcer said, "... and here is the daughter of Ted Rose and Rose Rose, Rose Rose." The audience roared with laughter. I was not the least bit embarrassed. I had been Rose Rose all my life.

I went to school with Scott Scott. I once met a Mary Christmas. I even seriously thought about keeping my maiden name when I got married because I didn't want to lose the fun of being Rose Rose. If you ask most of us with unusual names, you might find that we like them just fine.

What would I say to the parents-to-be? Do the two of you have a good sense of humor? If so, chances are that your child will have one, too. He might have to put up with school yard teasing, but it won't take him long to learn to accept it with good humor - R.R.W., CHARLESTON, W. VA.

DEAR ROSE: Thanks for the great testimonial. Read on for more:

Dear Ann Landers: I must respond to "Fort Worth," whose husband wanted to name their child Mason. Their last name was Dixon.

My name really is Mason Dickson. Actually, it is Donn Mason Dickson, but I have always gone by Mason. When my mother became unexpectedly pregnant 37 years ago, my parents decided to name me Donn after an uncle, but they didn't have a middle name picked out.

Ann Landers

One night, my father was playing cards with some of his friends and jokingly said, "We are going to name the baby Mason Dickson because this is where we draw the line on having any more kids."

The joke caught on, much to my mother's surprise, and they did indeed name me Donn Mason Dickson, thinking nobody would ever call me Mason. Ironically, Mason stuck, and no one has ever called me Donn.

My advice to Fort Worth is: Go for it. I've had a lot of fun with this name, and people always remember me. — D. MASON DICKSON IN CALIF.

DEAR M.D.: You and many others. Keep reading:

Dear Ann Landers: When my husband was a young radio announcer in Knoxville, Tenn., the station manager called him in and told him they were having trouble with his first name, "Staton." People were calling in for "Satan," or "Station," or "Slayton." It was suggested he change his name to "Mason."

For 45 years in radio, my husband had a daily program called "The Mason Dixon Line." The only time he used his original name was for government papers. I don't believe anyone ever ridiculed his name. They were too busy remembering all the worthwhile causes to which he gave his support. He died in 1990, but I'll always be proud to carry his name. — MRS. MASON DIXON

Dear Ann Landers: My name was Janice Mason Dixon, and of course, I was the butt of a great many jokes -- about where I "drew the line."

When I divorced Mr. Dixon, I was happy to be rid of the name. Guess what. I fell in love with Howard Jarr. So now my name is Janice Mason Jarr. No great improvement. — SOUTHERN BELLE Easy or difficult?

By Phillip Alder

Friedrich Nietzsche, the German philosopher, claimed that "a few hours of mountain climbing turn a rascal and a saint into two pretty similar creatures. Fatigue is the shortest way to Equality and Fraternity — and, in the end, Liberty will surrender to Sleep."

Even though the French are not known as a nation of mountain climbers, that is a clever working of the country's motto. In today's deal, you have a choice between a meander in the meadow — the easy line — and a hike over the hill — the wrong route.

Playing in six no-trump against a club lead, how do you proceed?

South's sequence, a strong, artificial and forcing two clubs followed by a rebid of two no-trump, shows a balanced 23-24 points.

The declarer saw that he had to work on the diamond suit. So, he won the first trick in the dummy and immediately played a diamond to his king, which held. After leading a spade to dummy's ace, declarer played a second diamond. However, East wasn't asleep. He won with his ace and returned a spade. This removed dummy's final entry before the diamond queen could be unblocked. South lost a spade to East's jack at trick 13: one down.

South's line looks logical, but it is wrong. South should win the first trick in hand, play a spade to the dummy and lead a diamond. Suppose East ducks his ace. Declarer wins with his king, crosses back to dummy with another spade and plays a second diamond. The club queen is the guaranteed dummy entry, safe from attack.

Your Birthday

Monday, June 19, 1995

Material conditions, in general, could noticeably improve for you in the year ahead. In fact, you may now start to get breaks you were previously denied.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You will probably have more luck achieving objectives early in the day than you will as time ticks on. Annoying obstacles might pop up towards evening. Major changes are ahead for Gemini in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today you might be a trifle more impatient than usual. In your urgency to get things done, you might create unnecessary problems for yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Although you're in a good achievement cycle, involving people in your affairs who have no real contribution to make could impede your own progress today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not attempt to do things with someone else today if he/she isn't in total accord with your aims and purposes. Uninspired allies are a detriment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your industriousness might be short-lived today, so get whatever needs doing done as early as possible while you have a full head of steam.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Just because a gamble turned out well for someone you know, it doesn't necessarily mean you'll reap the same rewards if you take a similar risk today.

ASTRO-GRAPH

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You will work most productively today without too much supervision. If someone looks over your shoulder, you will probably resent it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Show extra patience with subordinates today, especially if they have trouble following your instructions. Try using fewer commands and more examples.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You occasionally surprise others by the clever ways you manage your resources, but today, you won't get very high grades if you take foolish risks.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Do not let it be said of you that you're only a nice guy when everyone is doing things your way. Today, even when opposed, be tolerant and understanding.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Friends will want to help you today if you do not make unreasonable demands. Let them determine the ways and the extent to which they're prepared to assist you.

Will allow Samaranch to seek fourth term Olympic Committee raises retirement age limit

BUDAPEST (AP) — The International Olympic Committee changed its age-limit rule Sunday, clearing the way for Juan Antonio Samaranch to seek another term as president in 1997.

Three days after rejecting a proposal to abolish the age limit altogether, IOC members approved a compromise solution that raises the mandatory retirement age to 80 from 75.

Samaranch, who has been president since 1980, turns 75 next month. Under the previous rules, he would have been obliged to step down at the end of his third term in 1997.

Sunday's decision means Samaranch now will be eligible to run for another four-year term that would keep him in office until the year 2001, when he will be 81.

The change was approved on the final day of the IOC session by a show of hands, with 74 votes in favor, 10 against and two abstentions. The vote came after the option of holding a secret ballot was rejected, with only 12 members in favor.

Samaranch said he hasn't decided whether he will run again but will make his announcement by the end of 1996 — seven months before the next election. He said his health will be the principal factor in his decision.

"I know my age," he said. "I have to be cautious about my health."

"I enjoy very much what I am doing. If I have the confidence of the IOC members, why not (run again)?"

In the end, it took six ballots to get the age-rule changed.

On Thursday, the IOC members voted in favor of making a change but couldn't agree on how to do it. They voted four times to consider three separate options: scrapping the limit completely, raising it to 78 or exempting a president in office.

They settled on the most radical one: abolishing the limit. But that proposal failed to gain the necessary two-thirds majority needed to amend the Olympic Charter.

A group of Samaranch's key allies, led by IAAF president Primo Nebiolo of Italy, Mexican media magnate Mario Vazquez Rana and Congo's Jean-Claude Ganga, banded together to gather signatures for the 80-year limit.

The new proposal was presented by Samaranch to the executive board Sunday morning and then submitted to the full session.

Among the 10 who voted against the resolution was executive board member Dick Pound of Montreal, a potential successor to Samaranch.

"My thought was that 75 is a perfectly good age limit," he said Sunday. "But I don't think this makes a big difference."

"It's not the end of the world."

Also Sunday, Samaranch appointed 11 new IOC members, bringing the total membership to 106.

Samaranch named three international federation presidents as members: Yuri Titov of Russia (gymnastics), Mustapha Larfaoui of Algeria (swimming) and Rene Fasel of Switzerland (ice hockey).

Also appointed Sunday were French ski great Jean-Claude Killy, winner of three Olympic gold medals in 1968; and Sam Ramsamy, head of the South African national Olympic Committee.

On Friday, the IOC selected Salt Lake City as the host for the 2002 Winter Games. The Utah city beat Quebec, Oster-sund, Sweden, and Sion, Switzerland.

Dick Pound... Voted against change.

Phillies add Andy Van Slyke

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies, looking for outfield help with Lenny Dykstra and Gregg Jefferies injured, acquired Andy Van Slyke from the Baltimore Orioles on Sunday for right-handed pitcher Gene Harris.

Van Slyke, who came off the disabled list Friday, was hitting .159 with three home runs and eight runs batted in. He had gone on the disabled list June 2 with a strained left forearm.

Dykstra is on the disabled list with a bad back. Jefferies, the left-fielder, is listed as day-to-day with inflamed tendon in his right wrist.

Manager Jim Fregosi said Van Slyke, who spent most of his career in the National League with St. Louis and Pittsburgh, will play centre field while Dykstra is out.

"I just think it's a necessity, with Lenny out, and now Jefferies, and a couple of our outfielders with leg problems," said Fregosi, who expects to have Van Slyke when the Phils open a four-game series in New York today.

Pavin finally hits paydirt, wins U.S. Open

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Corey Pavin will never hear

Corey Pavin... only golfer to finish even.

the question again. Greg Norman will never escape it.

Pavin, with a masterful closing round of 68 over the punishing Shinnecock Hills layout, won the U.S. Open on Sunday and will no longer have to explain why he is the best player around never to win a major championship.

Norman, with an unsteady 73 that was shakiest on the crucial closing holes, finished second in a major championship for the seventh time. His 282 was two strokes behind Pavin's even-par 280.

"I had faith that it would happen," Pavin said about finally winning a major. "I got tired of hearing the question. It wears on you."

Congratulating Pavin on the 18th green, Norman patted him on the back and said, "Good job. Welcome to the club," a reference to having won a major championship. Norman has won two British Opens but has never won a major in the United States.

"People simply will say I let things slip away," Norman said. "That's not necessarily the case. It's just as hard to put yourself in there with a chance to win as it is to win."

Pavin, playing the last 10 holes 3-under-par and the last 15 without a bogey, finished three strokes ahead of Tom Lehman, who lost his last chance when he double bogeyed No. 16.

Davis Love, Phil Mickelson, Bill Glasson, Jeff Maggert, Jay Haas and Neal Lancaster were four strokes back at 4-over par 284. Lancaster tied the course record with a final-round 65, including a 29 on the back nine.

Next to the last in the Open field in driving distance, Pavin won with steady, accurate play over the rolling fairways of Shinnecock, avoiding the penalizing rough that claimed so many others.

He also made huge putts, perhaps none bigger than a 6-foot par save on No. 17.

He closed it out with a bold 4-wood to the closely guarded 18th green. Pavin broke into a jog as the ball bounded onto the green and rolled toward to flag.

"I was very anxious to see that one," Pavin said. "I knew when I hit it was going to be pretty close."

He missed the birdie putt that would have wrapped it up, then waited for Norman to finish.

"It probably was the most pressure I've ever felt," Pavin said of his shot to 18.

Norman for the second straight day sprayed the ball all over the place but wasn't able to pull off the miracle par saves he made on Saturday. He lost his last chance on No. 17 when he hit the sand trap on the par-3, blasted short and missed the putt for par to fall two behind.

It was Pavin's first victory in a major championship after finishing second once in the PGA, third in the Masters and fourth in the British Open. His previous best in the U.S. Open was eighth in 1991.

With 12 victories on the PGA Tour, the 35-year-old Californian had the most wins of anyone currently on tour without a major championship. He will wear that label no longer.

All Blacks in rugby final New Zealand crushes England

CAPE TOWN (AP) — Big Jonah Lomu ran over, around and through England's defenders for four tries Sunday, leading New Zealand to a 45-29 victory in their Rugby World Cup semifinal.

The emphatic triumph, which included tries by Josh Kronfeld and Graeme Bachop and No. 8 Zinzan Brooke's first test drop goal, affirmed the All Blacks as favorites to win their second World Cup championship in next Saturday's showdown with South Africa at Ellis Park in Johannesburg.

England, the Five Nations champion, looked slow against the more athletic All Blacks but managed four tries, two by captain Will Carling and Rory Underwood's 10th and 11th in three World Cups, making him the all-time leading try scorer in World Cup history.

The English will play France, 19-15 losers to South Africa in the other semifinal, for third place on Thursday.

Lomu's four tries — two in each half — were backed by three conversions, a penalty and a drop goal from flyhalf Andrew Mehrtens.

The New Zealanders raged uncontrollably from the kick off, playing searing running rugby with the giant Lomu a constant menace. They had the match won by halftime with a 25-3 lead, then dropped their intensity to allow England its four tries.

Lomu's was a performance of awesome power and maturity for a 20-year-old playing in only his sixth test. The Auckland youngster of Tongan descent now has seven tries in four World Cup matches.

No player had previously scored more than two tries in a World Cup semifinal.

"He loved it out there," said New Zealand captain Sean Fitzpatrick. "I definitely would not like to try and tackle him."

Carling said Lomu's power proved crucial.

"We did not quite come up with a solution (to him) today," Carling said. "He's awesome. He's a freak. The sooner he goes away the better."

New Zealand, which won the World Cup on home territory in 1987, became the first team to twice qualify for the final. It has won 14 of its 18 matches against England in a rivalry that stretches back 90 years.

No team has managed to get within 16 points of the All Blacks so far in the tournament.

The crushing defeat ended a run of 10 straight wins for Five Nations champion England, which was beaten by Australia in the 1991 final. England, which defeated defending champion Australia 25-22 in the quarter-final, was unable to reproduce that form.

A capacity crowd of more than 50,000 at Newlands sang lustily before and during the match, many waving English flags with faces painted red and white while a smaller but equally loud contingent cheered the All Blacks.

Grizzlies will name coach

VANCOUVER (CP) — Assistant coach Brian Winters of the Atlanta Hawks will become the first coach of the NBA expansion Vancouver Grizzlies, the Vancouver Province reported Sunday.

The Grizzlies have scheduled a news conference for Monday.

"We'd hate to see him leave our organization but he certainly deserves a chance to be a head coach in this league," Atlanta general manager Pete Babcock said when told by the newspaper that the Grizzlies had approached Winters.

"Brian is a very capable individual."

Winters, 43, has spent nine seasons under Lenny Wilkens, the NBA career wins leader. He coached in Atlanta for two years after seven seasons with Wilkens in Cleveland.

Norwegians win women's World Cup

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Norway scored two first-half goals within three minutes and held off European soccer champion Germany 2-0 Sunday to win the final of the women's World Cup.

Hege Riise and Marianne Pettersen scored for Norway, which finished second to the United States in the inaugural world championship four years ago in China.

Norway played without captain Heidi Store, who was ejected after receiving two yellow cards in the semifinals against the United States. But the Norwegians didn't miss her much in midfield, outplaying the Germans throughout the first half.

Riise, who had missed three earlier chances, scored the opening goal in the 36th minute with a low shot near the post after a fine solo run. It was her fifth goal in the tournament, one behind scoring leader and teammate Ann-Kristin Aarones.

Pettersen made it 2-0 in the 39th, knocking a rebound over goalie Manuela Goller from close range. Goller made the initial save on midfielder Lina Medalen's shot from the left, but she couldn't hold on to the ball.

The final was played in a downpour which made the field slippery.

Norway was the only team to finish the preliminaries with a perfect 3-0 record, blanking Nigeria 8-0, England 2-0 and Canada 7-0. Norway then gave up its only goal in the championships in a 3-1 victory over Denmark in the quarterfinals before edging the U.S. 1-0 in the semifinals.

The Americans, who edged Norway 2-1 in the 1991 final, blanked China 2-0 in Saturday's bronze-medal game at Gavle, central Sweden.

The final drew 17,158 fans at Rasunda Stadium, site of the 1958 men's World Cup championship.

Defensive-minded Devils have upper hand

Rotten Wings hope to play better in Game 2

By Neil Stevens

DETROIT (CP) — It is not a taste they're used to and it is not a taste they like.

The Detroit Red Wings could have gone through a case of mouthwash Sunday as they analysed their 2-1 loss to the New Jersey Devils in Game 1 of the Stanley Cup final.

"I wasn't skating — my legs felt like cement," defenceman Paul Coffey, sitting in his dressing room stall after practice, said of his previous night's non-performance. "If you're going to take anything positive out of the whole thing it's that all 20 of us were rotten."

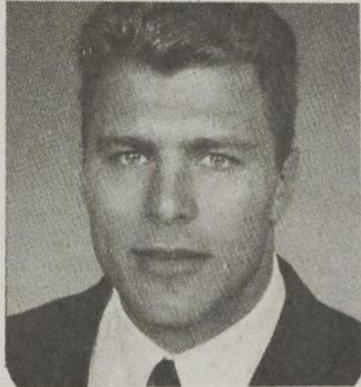

"It's not like we had 15 guys going and five guys who were rotten. We were all rotten. All of us know we can play better. Whether we play better and win the next game (Tuesday night), who knows. I just know we can play better."

It was Detroit's first loss in nine home playoff games this spring.

The Devils set an NHL record for most road wins in one playoff year — nine.

New Jersey's Stephane

Scott Stevens... 'We play as a team.'

Richer and Detroit's Dino Ciccarelli each scored in the second period and Claude Lemieux slapped in the winning shot at 3:17 of the third period. It was his 12th post-season goal. He scored only six during the 48-game schedule.

The Devils checked the Red Wings into the ice. When the Red Wings did have the puck in New Jersey's zone, the Devils kept them along the boards and reduced scoring chances from in front of the net to a bare minimum.

Detroit's shots-on-goal total of 17 was its lowest of the year in any game.

The Red Wings ran out of gas, head coach Scott Bowman said. Part of the reason was that they lost big centre Keith Primeau in the second period when he wrenched his lower back. Bowman had to compensate by increasing the workloads of centres Steve Yzerman and Sergei Fedorov, while New Jersey coach Jacques Lemaire continued to pour four lines over the boards.

Primeau might not be able to play Tuesday.

Bowman said the clutch-and-grab Devils should be penalized more for impeding the Red Wings by latching onto his players' sticks. New Jersey defenceman Ken Daneyko scoffed at the complaint.

"I'm sick of hearing that," he said. "It's ridiculous."

"We've got a lot of skilled players who play concerned defence."

"We held them to 17 shots. That's just good defensive hockey."

It's boring, but effective.

"We deserve some credit," Devils defenceman Scott Stevens said. "We have 20 guys playing as a team."

"Some people might despise us for our style. I keep hearing the word trap but I'm not sure what a trap is. We play smart hockey and make the other team make mistakes."

The pressure now is all on the Red Wings, the No. 1 team overall during the regular season and 12-2 in the playoffs before the final started. Maybe they had it too easy in earlier rounds, dispatching Dallas in five games, San Jose in four and Chicago in five.

"There's no sense of panic," insists goaltender Mike Vernon. "We didn't have the jump we normally have and I think that has to do with all the time off after the Chicago series."

Back injury may keep Primeau out of Game 2

By Neil Stevens

DETROIT (CP) — Big centre Keith Primeau might not be available to the Detroit Red Wings for Game 2 of the Stanley Cup final and even if he is, his effectiveness will be lessened by a back injury.

Primeau wrenched his lower back during the second period of New Jersey's 2-1 win Saturday night and watched the remainder of the game on a TV in the hyperbolic chamber parked in a corridor near the team's dressing room.

The chamber provides pure oxygen for the blood, supposedly speeding the healing process.

"It's like going up in an airplane," Primeau said Sunday. "Your ears pop after you go in and then you're kind of like Darth Vader for an hour" creating nasal sounds breathing in the oxygen.

Primeau said he wrenched his back taking a faceoff. New Jersey defenceman Scott Stevens said after the game he thought he'd injured Primeau by checking him across the back, but Primeau said Sunday that the injury occurred at the faceoff before the hit.

"To go through the entire season and the earlier rounds of the playoffs and be uncathed to this point and then to have something like this happen..." Primeau lamented. "But I'm planning on playing Game 2."

"If not I'll be back before the series is over. That's for sure."

His absence would be a serious blow. The six-foot-four, 210-pound Torontonian has played some of the best hockey of his career this spring.

"That could affect them but they've got so much depth over there that we're still going to have our hands full in Game 2," New Jersey defenceman Ken Daneyko said.

Coach Scott Bowman said "we'll know more in a day or two."

"They haven't given us a definite no" on Primeau's availability.

Primeau said he couldn't get to sleep until 4 a.m. Sunday and was up at 6:30 a.m.

"It hurt to turn over in bed."

Primeau has been centring a line with Shawn Burr and Dino Ciccarelli.

"If Keith's out a couple of games we've got other guys to pick up the slack," Ciccarelli suggested.

Devils believe in own destiny

DETROIT (CP) — The New Jersey Devils are exchanging knowing glances.

After beating the Detroit Red Wings 2-1 in the opening game of the NHL's championship series Saturday night, the Devils feel destiny has decreed they will win the Stanley Cup.

"I know no one believes we're going to win but when we look each other in the eyes we believe we're going to win," right-winger Stephane Richer said.

The Devils have set a trap for the Red Wings — a neutral-zone trap. It's a defensive system that sends one forechecker into the opposition zone to direct the flow of play towards the boards then relies on four men forming a box in the neutral zone to cut off passes.

"We play a style of hockey we know is going to be successful for us," says New Jersey defenceman Bruce Driver. "People call it boring but we call it smart hockey."

Red Wings captain Steve Yzerman suggests more speed will get his club around the trap. "They are going to clog the middle of the ice so you can't force the puck up the middle," Yzerman says. "You've got to go hard wide. If that means dumping it in and going after it, then that's what we'll do."

"We just have to use more speed."

Detroit defenceman Paul Coffey thinks there's a danger in worrying too much about what type of defence is being used by New Jersey.

Keith Primeau... Injury could hurt Wings' chances.

Perez roughed up in worst start Reds get revenge against Montreal rookie CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds settled a score with Carlos Perez.

The Reds knocked the animated rookie out of the game in the second inning Sunday, sat back and let a big lead slip away, then rallied to beat the Montreal Expos 10-7.

Mark Lewis had four hits, including a two-run homer that put the Reds ahead to stay in the sixth and an RBI single that gave them a cushion. Best of all, as far as the Reds were concerned, Perez was humbled.

"In the clubhouse before the game, we were talked about various things that I'd rather not talk about," said Reggie Sanders, who hit a two-run homer into the upper deck off Perez.

The Reds were angered by Perez's fist-pumping celebrations of strikeouts when he beat them May 16 in Montreal. They pounded him for five runs in 1 2-3 innings Sunday, by far his worst major-league outing. And they gave him nothing to celebrate — no one struck out.

"That's how he pitches," Sanders said. "All it does is boost the hitters up."

Cincinnati also got in the rookie's face — starter Kevin Jarvis glared at Perez after getting hit by a pitch in the second and later stopped to say something face-to-face after he crossed home plate on a wild pitch.

"He said something, but I didn't pay attention," a subdued Perez said. "I was not trying to hit that man in that situation."

"I had a bad day today. There's nothing you can say about it."

Jarvis also declined to talk about it.

"If it was meant to be public, they'd have a microphone at home plate," Jarvis said.

Whatever Jarvis said, he couldn't back it up. Montreal sent 11 batters to the plate and piled up a season-high seven hits for five runs in the fifth, taking a 6-5 lead.

That's when Lewis, a backup third baseman acquired from Cleveland, saved the Reds from embarrassment. Eric Anthony singled in the sixth inning and Lewis hit his second homer off Gabe White (1-1).

Lewis added a run-scoring single in the seventh and Damon Berryhill followed with a homer off Tim Scott. Lewis is 13-for-16 in his last six games.

Mike Jackson (1-0) pitched out of a two-on, two-out jam in the sixth for his first win since May 29, 1994. Jeff Brantley pitched the ninth for his ninth save.

Perez's earned-run average jumped nearly a full point, from 1.88 to 2.72, in his shortest major-league start. The left-hander hadn't allowed more than two runs in any of his nine previous starts.

Sanders hit a two-run homer, his 11th, into the upper deck to put the Reds ahead in the bottom of the first. It was the 17th upper-deck homer in Riverfront Stadium's 25-year history.

But Jarvis failed to make it through the fifth, forcing the Reds to come from behind after blowing a lead for the second straight day.

The fifth inning opened with four consecutive hits, including RBI singles by Tim Laker and pinch-hitter Curtis Pride. David Segui's two-run single tied it with only one out, and Moises Alou's single off Xavier Hernandez put the Expos ahead.

But the Expos' bullpen failed for the second straight game, letting the Reds pull away with five runs in their final three innings.

Toronto's Guzman gets first win in 10 months

By Kevin McGran

TORONTO (CP) — Juan Guzman sounds like the same guy who went 40-11 in his first three seasons with the Blue Jays.

It's only lately that he's begun to pitch like him.

Guzman won his first game in 10 months, lasting five innings in the Toronto Blue Jays' 7-2 win Sunday over the Texas Rangers.

"It's been a while, but I'm glad to get my first win out of the way," said Guzman (1-2), bothered the last year and a half by shoulder problems. "My shoulder is OK now."

"I'm not a 100 per cent, but my fastball is good enough that I can throw it by hitters and I'm working inside with my slider."

Guzman has looked better in his three starts since coming off the disabled list June 5. He gave up two runs on six hits and three walks while striking out two to win for the first time since last Aug. 5.

"I've never been worried about losing," said Guzman. "I was only concerned about my shoulder getting better. With my shoulder healthy, I get my pitches back, I can keep the team in the game."

He owes much thanks to Robbie Alomar's four-RBI performance and a big catch behind second that ended Texas's third inning in which the Rangers scored two runs and sent eight men to the plate.

Alomar added to his American League record of consecutive errorless games at second, now at 91. The major-league record is 123, held by Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs (1989-90).

"What can you say about Robbie," said Toronto manager Cito Gaston. "He comes up with the big plays and the big hits."

Alomar's big blast was a bases-loaded triple in Toronto's six-run fourth inning which helped the Blue Jays take two out of three games this weekend. Toronto won 4-3 Saturday and lost 7-3 Friday.

"It was a big win for Juan and a big win for us," said Gaston. "Maybe it's a sign we're turning things around."

The breaks certainly went Toronto's way, especially in the fourth.

With none out, the bases loaded and the count full, Domingo Cedeño drew a walk that scored Ed Sprague to tie the game 2-2. The pitch was close to being the third strike.

"I was looking for a forkball and he threw a fastball," said Cedeño. "The umpire saved me. But I agree with him. It was low."

Pavlik didn't like the call and started yelling. A brouha-ha erupted, ending with Texas manager Johnny Oates getting ejected.

Pavlik stayed in and struck out Devon White but walked Paul Molitor, which scored Shawn Green. Hector Fajardo relieved to face Alomar, who tripled off the wall in right-centre. Alomar then scored on a wild pitch for a 7-2 lead.

"Pavlik had struggled all day with his control," said Oates. "He just couldn't make the pitches he had to make."

Gaston has been saying those kinds of things about Guzman all year.

Woody Williams, Mike Timlin and Darren Hall provided shutout relief over the final four innings for Toronto.

1-million flock to Jays

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Blue Jays became the first American League baseball club to surpass one million fans in home attendance.

Sunday's crowd at the SkyDome was announced at 40,215, pushing the Blue Jays to 1,008,217 fans so far this season.

Though the Blue Jays lead in overall attendance, they still trail the Baltimore Orioles in average attendance.

The Orioles, who've played four fewer home games, have averaged 39,413 in 22 home dates; the Blue Jays 38,778 in 26 home dates.

The National League's Colorado Rockies were the first team in the major's to surpass one-million fans and also lead in average attendance at more than 45,000.

St. Patrick's Parish Catholic Women's League Membership Gathering

Catholic Women's League held the annual membership gathering on May 17th. The event opened with a mass celebrated by Father Pierre Doyon pastor of St. Patrick's Parish. The singing was provided by Mr. Bernard Galipeau with Mr. Brendon McCoy at the organ. This was followed by a pot luck supper in the parish hall. At the head table were: Father Pierre Doyon, Mrs. Phyllis Courtemanche, president, Mr. Bernard Galipeau, Mrs. Ownie McKeon, and our guest speaker Mrs. Eileen Curran. Twenty four members helped to celebrate this occasion; considering the weather, and certain members sick, it was a good turnout. The council was happy to welcome a new member Mrs. Patricia Pellerin. After supper Mrs. Eileen Curran gave a presentation. She is the English Liaison of the Anglo Day care Center at the Foyer St-Joseph which is in operation since November '94. It's a therapeutic and preventive Out Patient Program for home support and maintenance for seniors over 65 in Sherbrooke and suburbs. The services are intended for the one who wishes to maintain it's independence. Here are the main outlines:

- Objectives:
- provide programs so the senior can still enjoy it's independence

- provide a social setting where they can meet.
- provide access to health care professionnals
- provide a link to other partners in health services and community groups.
- Programs:
- are designed to provide exercise, relaxation, health and information according to the activities of the senior.
- Health care professionnals:
- nurses assess the overall health at home
- occupational therapist who will assess kthe ability of the senior to manage their daily activities
- rehabilitation therapist who will assess the senior and provide treatments techniques, that will reduce pain and provide mobility
- counselling and supporting therapy who will provide for seniors who are experiencing such difficulties as bereavement, anxiety, emotional distress.
- General Information:
- transportation is according to needs
- noon meals can also be arranged.
- the program is now offered in 8 week sessions.

— a walking program is in the planning stage.

Mrs. Eileen Curran encouraged those present to spread the word and those interested in more informations should call Eileen at 564-6655 ext. 19.

Mrs. Arlene Hand thanked our speaker for sharing her time with us, saying that her message about the Day Care Center is interesting and informing. Mrs. Priscilla Noonan presented her guest with a beautiful bouquet of flowers. Mrs. Phyllis Courtemanche, the president, wishes us all a nice and restful summer. Next meeting in September, our 75th anniversary celebrations. A committee of 5 people, Mrs. Phyllis Courtemanche, Mrs. Betty Patry, Mrs. Helen Fitzgerald, Mrs. Donna Caron and Teresa Quénec'hdu was formed to overlook and take care of the preparations. Hope to see many of our members September 16th.

Resvy it will gresd to hur.
