Simple elegance at L'Aubergine

Local ingredients are essential part of delicious cuisine

SPECIAL TO THE RECORD

DAVID ANDERSON/SPECIAL

Chef Didier welcomes all visitors to the small restaurant.

If you were on your way from Boston to Montreal by boat in the 1800s, you would probably cut the journey short at a popular stagecoach stop close to the banks of Lac Memphremagog.

Today, 173 years after it was built, the heritage house at Knowlton Landing, Mansonville, continues its long tradition of providing shelter for visitors and is still being used as a guest house for tourists.

For the past 20 years it has been called L'Aubergine and was owned and operated by Pierre and Michèle Geoffrion whose reputation for excellence had made it a popular spot in this little out-of-the-way village.

Earlier this year, chef Didier and Annie Perrault purchased the large, red brick inn from the Geoffrions and are committed to preserving what has taken so many years to build.

The Perraults took over in August and, apart from keeping the name of the establishment, have also kept the same decor in the dining room and the guest rooms. Deciding not to tamper with what is clearly working is smart. The small, 30-seat dining room is elegant in its simplicity, with brick and stucco walls and only seven tables.

Best of all considering its size, this is a non-smoking establishment.

The limited menu featuring three table d'hôtes was written on a blackboard perched on a buffet at one wall of the dining room.

Perrault explained that serving local produce is important to them and their menu is often filled with dishes featuring ingredients from the area.

Two choices of appetizer were offered the evening my companion and I dined: escargot with a sauce of blue cheese from the Saint-Benoit-du-Lac Abbey or homemade foie gras. The former was eight plump, juicy escargots served with a melon blue cheese sauce in a light, flaky pastry. A helping of raddichio, sprouts and pine nuts also adorned the plate.

DAVID ANDERSON/SPECIAL

The small, 30-seat dining room is elegant in its simplicity, with brick and stucco walls and only seven tables.

Very well done.

The foie gras was smooth as silk and simply melted in the mouth. It was served with toast and sprouts with a few pine nuts on top. It was also extremely good.

The three main dishes offered were salmon with a grainy mustard sauce; veal Marsala; and duck with a rosemary sauce. We were not told by the friendly Perrault that they had run out of the veal until we ordered it. Thus, we took the salmon and the duck.

The salmon, from the Sutton fish shop, was a thick, perfectly cooked fillet served with a subtle sauce featuring mustard seeds that did not distract from the fish.

It was served with rice topped with a thick red pepper sauce, also very subtle, glazed carrots, green beans, zucchini and tomatoes, all perfectly done.

The duck was served in tender slices with a mild sauce with only a hint of rosemary. On the side was a round of fresh fettuccine pasta with an excellent pesto.

Fresh parmesan cheese was brought to the table. The vegetables were carrots, tomatoes, zucchini and snow peas. Also a terrific dish.

The 'pause verdure' was a fine leaf lettuce salad with a light vinaigrette.

The only dessert offered was sabayon, a rich custard. This was a refreshing sabayon with kahlua flavour served with a scoop of vanilla ice-cream.

The dinner for two, not including wine or gratuity, was $64.

Didier, who moved to Quebec from France 10 years ago, and Magog-born Perrault are maintaining an elegant atmosphere and fine dining in their red brick inn at Knowlton Landing that should not be missed.

Jackman's charm wins over co-stars

By Jamie Portman
SOUTHAM NEWS

Everybody who works with Hugh Jackman wants to tell the world what a great guy he is.

John Travolta said it after filming Swordfish with the rugged Australian. Ashley Judd, his co-star in Someone Like You, was rhapsodizing about his charm earlier this year, and the movie's producer, Linda Obst, said she fell madly in love with him as soon as he walked into her office.

Meg Ryan, who stars with Jackman in the current Kate & Leopold, is singing the same refrain, and it is being echoed by audiences who are enraptured with Jackman's portrayal of a courtly and immensely likable 19th-century nobleman who is transplanted into modern Manhattan.

So is Jackman in danger of getting a swelled head? Not at all. That's because his actress wife, Deborra-Lee Furness, is around to ensure he keeps his feet on the ground. "I have my moments - so I don't rank a 10 out of 10," he says cheerfully. "I think my wife might give me a six. Sometimes, she yells at me: 'Come on Hugh, put the bloody toilet seat down!' Furthermore, I still drink from the can. Leopold would drink from the glass."

After seeing Jackman's work in thrillers such as the recent Swordfish and X-Men, some critics are predicting he has what it takes to succeed the screen's current James Bond, Pierce Brosnan, and become the next 007. Others are comparing him with legendary swashbuckler Errol Flynn, to which Jackman replies: "Well, he's another Aussie." In fact, when he was discussing the character of Leopold with James Mangold, the film's director, Mangold kept telling him to think of Flynn when doing his scenes.

"After all, this is a fairy tale and I think Errol Flynn sort of embodied that," Jackman says. Like Flynn, he also knows how to wear fancy dress with style - an important requirement in the current movie, where Leopold strides about Manhattan in a regally ornate coat with tails. Jackman decided he'd achieve better rapport with the character if he wore his costume all the time instead of just donning it before doing a scene.

"I also decided to do a lot of yoga for this role because I have observed that people who are into yoga tend to have that aristocratic poise which seems unforced and relaxed. I think that helped me a lot." But Jackman upset some of his colleagues by wandering the streets of New York in costume - even when he wasn't shooting a scene.

"What I'd do every morning was to come straight in, do my makeup, put on my costume, go to my dialogue coach for half an hour. Then somebody would say: 'We'll drive you to the set. We don't want you walking the streets.' And I would say: 'Are you kidding?' "Then he'd walk to the set. "It was fantastic. People would be honking at me, yelling at me."

On those days, Jackman was attracting attention because of his outfit. But he's also starting to be recognized for himself - and this isn't only because of his three movies this year but because of his recent acclaimed hosting of Saturday Night Live. He's been caught by paparazzi photographers on his way to the gym and also when he leaves his house. "But so far I haven't been caught picking my nose, which is good."

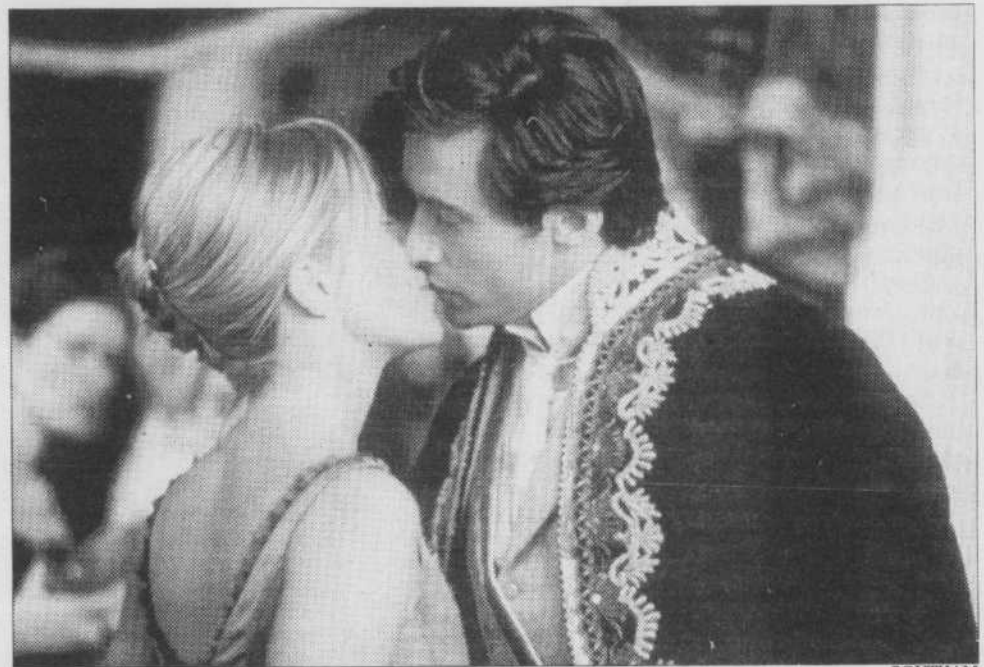

Furthermore, he'll never forget the day he was passing through Canadian customs in Toronto and an officer created pandemonium when he realized the person he was processing was in line for the role of Wolverine in X-Men. "This man's going to play Wolverine!" the excited customs man called to his colleagues in the hall. Jackman felt he was receiving an unexpected red carpet treatment.

He'll be back in Canada in late April to start work on the X-Men sequel. "I hear we'll be filming in Vancouver, but I hear Toronto as well."

If there were more months on the calendar, he would also be finding time next year to appear on Broadway when Britain's Royal National Theatre brings in its celebrated production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's Oklahoma! Jackman, who has a superb baritone voice, played the hero, Curly, in the original London production and would have reprised it here had it not been for his X-Men commitment.

So has the last year been hectic, even a little crazy? "I do pinch myself," Jackman says, laughing. "There's no way I could have dreamed what would happen to me. I've just had four months off, and it gave me a chance to reflect on what had happened. I'm pretty darn lucky the position I'm in. I certainly didn't expect it. I have to say that I think this country is incredibly generous, because I can't think of any other country which would allow so many foreigners the chance to do what I've been able to do."

But this doesn't mean he'll follow in the footsteps of Canada's Jim Carrey and become an American citizen. "My son's an American, of course, because he was born here. But I don't know if I will... I have to tell you my heart is in Australia. That's where my heart is and it would be very hard to give that up."

New Sinise film Imposter is the real thing

By Jamie Portman
SOUTHAM NEWS

Three years ago, Gary Sinise made a 40-minute futuristic thriller called Imposter in which he played a government scientist whose life is turned upside down when he's accused of being an alien spy.

That Miramax movie was never released. It had been conceived as one part of a science fiction trilogy. Although the second short film - directed by Scotland's Danny Boyle - was completed, the third was never made. So the over-all project ended up in limbo.

Flash forward a couple of years. Sinise, co-stars Madeleine Stowe and Vincent D'Onofrio are back before the cameras with director Gary Fleder.

They're now in the process of fleshing out Imposter - adding further scenes to the original in order to turn it into a full-length film thriller.

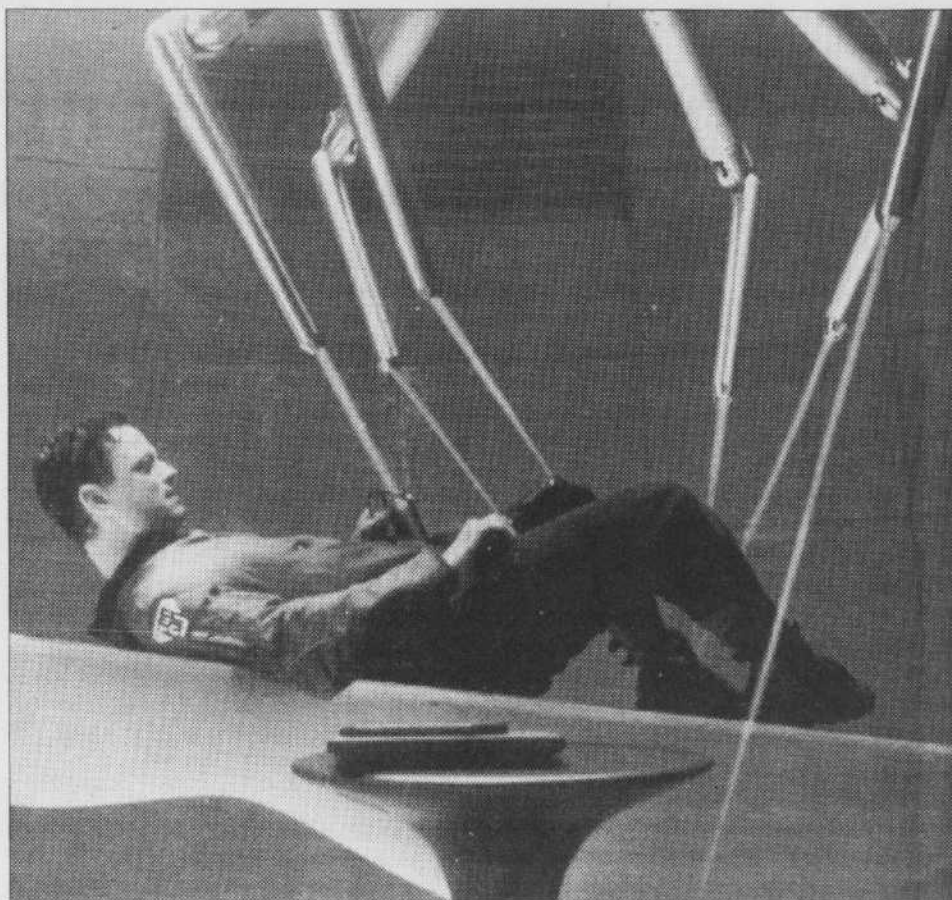

Sinise laughingly admits that this is an unusual way to make a feature movie, but he says that in the case of Imposter, the process was justified.

And he thinks the transformation has been seamless.

"It was originally to be part of something called Alien Love Triangle - something like that. They had made one other film that I never saw, and then they made ours... and they liked the way our short looked quite a bit, and they felt there was more we could do with it, so they asked us to explore that."

Sinise himself says he would have hated for Imposter to have remained unseen. From the beginning he's been struck by the subject matter and the underlying social and political commentary. "This movie is a bit like The Fugitive. It's set in the future. My guy is trying to prove his innocence and his whole mode of operation, his whole agenda, is to try to get them to believe in him, to do whatever it takes to get them to believe in him, and to get back to his wife."

Sinise, an award-winning stage and film actor who recently completed a critically acclaimed Broadway run in One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest, isn't that interested in science fiction. When he has done sci-fi in the past - Mission To Mars, the TV version of Stephen King's The Stand - he's been very much an actor for hire. "I will say that every time a Star Trek movie comes out, I'll go just because I kind of enjoy those fantasies. But I'm not a huge science fiction fan - although if something like Blade Runner comes around, I appreciate it."

Funny that Sinise should be mentioning Blade Runner. That seminal futuristic thriller was written by Philip K. Dick, the science fiction master who was also the inspiration for Total Recall, the upcoming Stephen Spielberg thriller, Minority Report, and Imposter.

The movie, opening Jan. 4, is based on Dick's 1952 short story of the same name. Sinise is delighted that a story written half a century ago still holds up so well today.

"I think it's kind of cool. Philip K. Dick - he had a mind, a vision." At the very start of the film, a note is flashed on the screen about the origins of the movie. "I liked that. It allows you to understand that we just didn't just cook this up over the last couple of months. This was something that was written years ago."

Imposter is set in the year 2079, and the Earth has been at war with an alien force for more than a decade. Sinise's government scientist character has completed researches that could save the planet - but then he finds himself the target of an intense manhunt, the target of secret police zealots who are convinced that an alien agent has taken over his identity.

Both Sinise and director Fleder saw great potential in a psychological thriller about a decent human who is suddenly told that he's not who he thinks he is, who has no way of proving his pursuers wrong, and who becomes obsessed with the terrifying thought that they may be right.

After Miramax decided to expand Imposter into a full feature, Sinise became involved as a producer. "I believed in the project and I wanted to become a collaborator," he says now. "It was maybe a year before they decided to expand it, but it wasn't that hard. I knew what we were going to try to do with it." It was a matter of building a new and longer film around existing material which everyone agreed was superlative. "I was in the meetings about the expanded story. I knew the direction they were going when I jumped in there. Luckily none of us had gained any weight or lost any hair!"

Sinise makes clear that he doesn't consider himself a futurist. He has no idea what the Earth will be like at the end of the century. "Who knows? But some of this movie is not that far-fetched, and what I like about good science fiction is that there are elements within the fantasy that you can relate to, that you can actually identify with. And in the world we live in now - with high tension, terrorist threats and all that - you can identify with some of this movie. Do I think that's the world we're going to live in in 2079? I hope not."

The quietly intense actor's big concern in playing his embattled hero was to emphasize the human dimension - his emotions on becoming a fugitive, his relationship with his wife played by Madeleine Stowe.

"It was more the human elements of the story that attracted me rather than the science fiction world or the futuristic elements or anything like that. This guy is going to work one day. He's a patriotic member of the government serving a very specific function which is to help save the world from invasion. And all of a sudden he's accused of treason and thrown in the slammer."

POPULAR MUSIC

A year in music, a day in the life - here are some albums that make the world a better place.

1. Manu Chao, Proxima Estacion... Esperanza, Virgin. No, he didn't forge onto bold new musical territory. Spanish-Parisian imp Manu Chao simply delved further into his sweeping, festive, multi-lingual dreamscapes.

2. Missy Elliott, Miss E... So Addictive, Elektra/Warner. Yes, Jay-Z rules hip-hop, but Missy twists it into contortional positions we never knew existed, while dazzling us with her mesmerizing lyrical flow. She mixes attitude, creativity and charisma like nobody's business.

3. Basement Jaxx, Rooty, XL/Beggars Banquet. A twisted, celebrational, wildly eclectic and truly original dance record, where every song is an anthem of its own design.

4. Radiohead, Amnesiac, Parlophone/EMI. A beautiful, epic rock album which made even more sense after Radiohead gave the concert of the year at Parc Jean Drapeau.

5. Mara Tremblay, Papillons, Audio-gram. If you're going to buy one French album this year, this is it. Tremblay milks traditional Quebec folk for all its emotive honesty, then shakes it up with ample portions of twangy rock, and soul-baring grit.

6. Jill Scott, Experience: Jill Scott (826+), Hidden Beach/Sony. Yes, you should have also picked up Alicia Keys by now, but for a submersive soul Experience, and one that can only fully emerge in the live setting, treat yourself to this. We're still waiting for the Montreal performance.

7. Rufus Wainwright, Poses, Dream-works/Universal. Try not to sing along with Montreal's pursed-lip sass-boy after a few times through this relaxed, refined and whimsically poetic sophomore fling.

8. Adam Chaki, No One Knows Where the Hell We Are, Audiogram. You may have heard his cheeky, trash-talking Sonofabitch on the radio, but dread-locked Mile-End songsmith Chaki has more up his sleeve - wry, evocative world-blues-rock that will warm you in the winter months.

9. De La Soul, AOI: Bionix, Tommy Boy. Who'da thunk that the goofy, fun-loving jokers of 1989's 3 Feet High and Rising would become the humble champions of a mature hip-hop sound. Thoughtful, moving and still funny as heck; a class act through and through.

10. Richie Hawtin, DE9 - Closer to the Edit, Minus/Mute/Fusion III. Windsor, Ontario's techno genius gets down to the nitty gritty and creates an obsessively intricate, intuitive and ever-evolving minimal beatscape.

-Daniel Feist

CLASSICAL

1. Cecilia Bartoli, Gluck Italian Arias, Decca. Astonishingly vivid interpretations of some lesser-known arias by Christoph Willibald von Gluck (1714-87), a composer whose better-known arias are not so well known.

2. Alfred Brendel, Mozart: Piano Concertos No. 22 and No. 27, Philips. The standard repertoire will never die as long as it is enlivened by musicians like this veteran Austrian pianist. The Scottish Chamber Orchestra sounds inspired under Sir Charles Mackerras.

3. Christopher Maltman, baritone and Graham Johnson, piano, Schumann: Dichterliebe and other Heine settings, Hyperion. This young Englishman sounds rather like the best of today's Fischer-Dieskau wannabes in this Schumann recital. Your purchase

4. Trio Fibonacci, Jonathan Harvey Chamber Works, ATMA. These evocative pieces by the British composer Jonathan Harvey include many premiere recordings. Quite an honour for Montreal's Trio Fibonacci. Truly contemporary music that is truly worth hearing.

5. The Halle Orchestra, Mark Elder, conductor, Holst: The Planets, Colin Matthews: Pluto, Hyperion. Colin Matthews's Pluto - a quixotic extension of Holst's famous orchestral suite - will outlast its first recording. The Orchestre Metropolitain performs it in February.

6. Marc-Andre Hamelin, piano, Alkan Piano Works, Hyperion. Playing of this virtuosity and flair makes the music of Charles-Valentin Alkan, 1813-1888, sound ready for prime time. One of Hamelin's best releases.

7. Ludwig Semerjian, Mozart Piano Sonatas K. 282, K. 330 and K. 333, ATMA. Mozart performed on a Beethoven-era piano? It works for this Montreal pianist, and it works for me. Spirited music-making throughout.

8. Jascha Heifetz, works by Mozart, Vieuxtemps and Bruch, Dutton. This was the centennial year of the great Jascha Heifetz. Dutton, a British label, has done a wonderful job of remastering these commercial recordings from 1946 and 1947, which capture the violinist at his peak of tonal intensity.

9. Fazil Say, Stravinsky: The Rite of Spring, Teldec. Call it cheating, but this Turkish pianist creates an extraordinary effect with his multi-tracking and string-plucking.

10. Josef Suk, violin and Julius Katchen, piano, Brahms Violin Sonatas, Decca. Another blast from the past. The fiery yet burnished tone of Josef Suk (grandson of his namesake composer and great-grandson of Dvorak) and the noble accompaniment of the late American pianist Julius Katchen stand up well after 33 years.

-Arthur Kaptainis

FOLK

1. Lucinda Williams, Essence, Lost Highway/Universal. Emotionally raw and unblinkingly intimate, Essence builds from a quiet start to full-bore Southern Gothic horror. Pour me a double.

2. Be Good Tanyas, Blue Horse, Festival. Three West Coast gals give breezy new life to old-time country. The Tanyas' plinky-plunky debut offers sweet harmonies, back-porch playing and a fine mix of originals and classics.

3. India.Arie, Acoustic Soul, Motown. Dot-com name, old-school sound. A soul sistah armed with an acoustic guitar, India.Arie is an antidote to brain-dead booty music.

4. John Hammond, Wicked Grin, Point Blank/Virgin/EMI. The pairing is inspired. Hammond, a blues jack-of-all-trades, offers his take on the Tom Waits songbook. Waits handled production. Dark, paranoid, busted-down blues with a hint of redemption on the closing I Know I Been Changed.

5. Bob Dylan, Love and Theft, Columbia. The old Dylan reappeared when we needed him most.

6. Anne Sofie Von Otter and Elvis Costello, Von Otter Meets Costello: For the Stars, Deutsche Grammophon/Universal. Costello continues his collaborative ways with Swedish mezzo-soprano Von Otter. She takes on tunes by the Beatles, Beach Boys, Waits and others and puts her gorgeous stamp on them. His fingerprints are everywhere.

Warming up to winter sounds and exhibits

Here are some cultural highlights and delights you won't want to miss to start off the New Year!

MUSIC AND ARTS IN AT LE P'TIT BONHEUR IN SAINT-CAMILLE

Saturday Jan. 19 is the chosen date for Le P'tit Bonheur's fifth African drum and percussion workshop, in the company of master El Hadji Diouf and our own 'djembé' drummer and artisan Michel Ouellet.

This workshop is open to beginners and experienced artists alike. It goes from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

On Saturday, Jan. 26, versatile singer, songwriter and musician Karen Young will be in Saint-Camille for a show based on francophone jazz songs. She has created music and rhythms based on chosen texts penned by Vigneault, Monette, Montpetit, Courtemanche and herself.

See her on this intimate stage with her chosen musicians: Norman Lachapelle on bass, Sylvain Provost on guitar, Pierre Tanguay on drums and Charles Papasoff on clarinet, flute and saxophone. It all starts at 8:30 p.m.

In the realm of visual arts at Le P'tit Bonheur's Hortense gallery, Annie J. Charest presents her 'Journal Intime'. She paints with pastels, ink, watercolors and much more with a fresh approach. Her exhibit is shown until Jan. 27.

Where culture collides with community interests: 'Le chant du citoyen' has prepared an interesting evening of tales, songs, legends and other creative expressions on popular themes. Everyone is invited on Wednesday Jan. 16, starting at 7:30 p.m.

Don't forget that Le P'tit Bonheur de Saint-Camille has a website where you can admire a virtual art gallery among other things.

Here's the address: <http://pages.globetrotter.net/pbonheur/hortense.html>.

For more information on all that's going on at Le P'tit Bonheur, call them at 819-828-2664.

MORE MUSIC IN RICHMOND

Rebellious tango, thoroughly modern even though based on tradition, is the first love of Alejandro Venegas, guitarist-singer, Simon Claude, violinist, Pascal Bujold, guitarist, and Frédéric Darveau, guitarist and bassist.

Together they form the group IN-TAKTO. Dancers Carol Horowitz and Bobby Thompson inject their virtuosity and passion in the mix. Something to see and hear at Centre d'art de Richmond on Saturday, Jan. 26 at 8:00 p.m.

Call 819-826-2488 for reservations.

CENTENNIAL THEATRE

Famous Québécois jazz musician Alain Caron presents selections from his fourth solo album on Saturday Feb. 9, at the Centennial Theatre in Lennoxville.

The album, Call me Al, is full of earthy sounds and smooth grooves for the bass (Caron's main instrument) which promise to warm you up for the winter nights.

Call the Centennial Theater at 819-822-9692 for tickets and information.

ALBUMS:

7. Sade, Lover's Rock, Epic/Sony. A sumptuous studio return for the original Smooth Operator.

8. Alicia Keyes, Songs in A Minor, J Records/BMG. The 21-year-old Keyes stood out in a year when female R&B singers were all the rage. A triple threat singer, songwriter and classically trained pianist, she's poised and full of potential, even if her reach occasionally exceeds her grasp.

9. Susannah McCorkle, Most Requested Songs, Concord. A farewell from a most stylish supper-club singer. McCorkle's took her own life in May, weeks before this elegant career retrospective hit the racks.

10. La Bottine Souriante, Cordial, Mille Pattes/EMI. Quebec's beloved party band goes global, stirring spicy salsa, calypso rhythms and Balkan soul into their foot-stomping gigue and reels. That punchy horn section adds an exclamation point to every song. Party on!

-Mary Lamey

JAZZ

1. Billy Bang, Vietnam - The Aftermath, Justin Time. Violinist Billy Bang and five other Vietnam war vets provide evocative melodies and chilling, often thrilling, musical statements that juxtapose Vietnamese tones and harmonies with those of contemporary jazz.

2. Enrico Pieranunzi, Racconti Mediterranei, EGEA. The prodigiously talented pianist Enrico Pieranunzi reaches deep and wide on 11 cuts and maintains an elevated and glorious tone. Bassist Marc Johnson and clarinetist Gabriele Mirabassi are full partners.

3. Chris Potter, Gratitude, Verve. Saxophonist Chris Potter propels himself into the front ranks of horn players as he pays tribute to trailblazers from Coltrane to Rollins. This session cooks, with Brian Blade on drums and Scott Colley on bass.

4. Shirley Horn, You're My Thrill, Verve. Veteran vocalist Shirley Horne brings nuance, polish and impeccable timing to gems from the American songbook.

5. Brad Mehldau, Art of Trio Vol 5: Progression, Warner Bros.

The creative fires smolder in the relentless pianism of Brad Mehldau, who uses standards to craft original statements. Interplay with bassist Larry Grenadier and drummer Jorge Rossy is uncannily intuitive.

6. Paquito D'Riviera, Chucho Valdes, Chico O'Farrill et al, Calle 54, EMI. This double CD soundtrack, sumptuously recorded at Sony studios in New York City, is a glorious testimonial to the music that links American jazz forms and Spanish and Cuban sensibility.

7. Randy Brecker, Seamus Blake, Bobby Watson, et al, The Essential Mingus Big Band, Dreyfus. The tempestuous Charles Mingus was unforgettable, and his music, reinterpreted by great musicians and captured by superior technology, has never sounded better. Nine memorable cuts here are culled from five CDs.

8. Jean Derome, Pierre Tanguay, Pierre Cartier, Evidence, Ambiances Magnetiques. The oblique lines and ethereal quality of Thelonious Monk's music is a natural for these avant-garde leaders - saxophonist Jean Derome, drummer Pierre Tanguay and bassist Pierre Cartier.

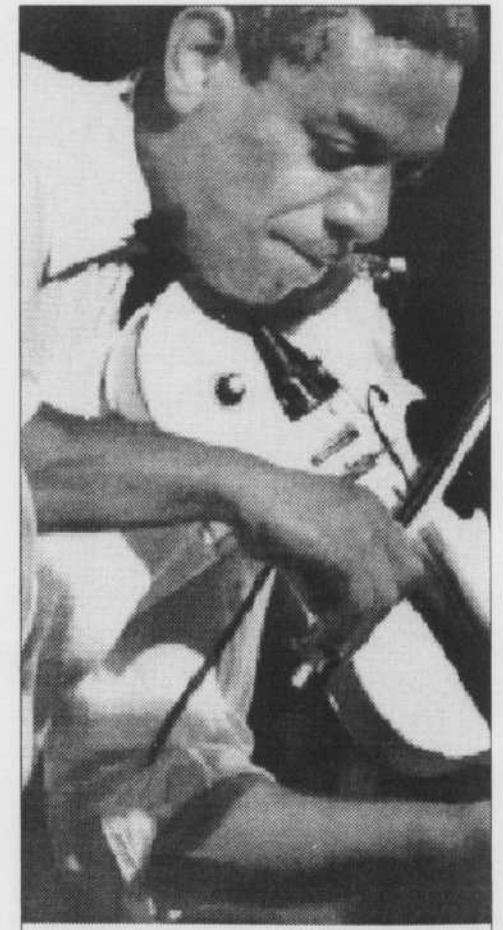

They plow the rich soil of Monk's works and produce some brilliant flowers.

9. Chucho Valdes, Solo - Live in New York, Blue Note. Cuban piano master Chucho Valdes shows off as he blends Latin, Afro-Cuban and jazz in an energetic, passionate display. He dazzles, but the art triumphs.

WORLD

1. Damian 'Jr. Gon' Marley, Halfway Tree, Motown. Doing Dad proud, here's the best son of a Bob CD so far. Superbly produced by brother Stephen, Damian's Halfway Tree begins to fulfill the promise of a Marley legacy, not as an old style reggae statement, but as a hardcore expression of Rasta reggae today.

Happy New Year from Marina-Nancy Guthrie-Drew

Each year, The Record rings in the new year with babies born in the previous year. The name of one baby is drawn at random as our 'baby of the year'. This year's winner is Lennoxville's Marina-Nancy Guthrie-Drew, who will be three-months-old today. Marina is the happy winner of the $100 gift certificate provided by Sears for the Record's Baby of the Year contest. Daughter of Barbara Guthrie and Terry Drew, and sister of Ethan who's almost 3, Marina-Nancy will probably spend her winnings on a brand new red wagon, says Mom.

Other baby winners drawn from names submitted were:

2nd prize: Bryan Grapes, a Diaper Genie from Valerie Courchesne

3- Arianna Ward, - a 3-month Record subscription

4- Kailee Massenzlo, - a 3-month Record subscription

5- Joey-Rejeanne Alvarez, - a 3-month Record subscription

Singing the praises of yoga

By Marta Gold
SOUTHAM NEWSPAPERS

When Chris Erdmann-Boyko got seriously into yoga more than a decade ago, people looked at her a little strangely. "I think they associated it with levitating or something," she says with a laugh.

Now, she and her partner run a studio devoted almost exclusively to yoga, an exercise that's enjoying huge popularity in Edmonton and across the continent.

"People are beginning to recognize that it works well with anything you do. Any kind of sport, the yoga compliments," says Erdmann-Boyko, who runs Yoga For Today in Sherwood Park.

A growing list of celebrities are singing yoga's praises and adding to its cachet—people so famous, they only have one name. Oprah, Rosie, Sting, Madonna.

Classes are offered at most fitness clubs, and their popularity shows no sign of fading.

"They can hardly keep up with the demand," says Debbie Spence, executive director of the Yoga Association of Alberta. "I get people calling from different fitness centres saying they're desperate for a teacher."

The association estimates there are about 300 certified yoga teachers in Alberta, about 60 or 70 of them in Edmonton. They also estimate each of those instructors has at least 140 students a year, which would mean about 42,000 people in the province are practising yoga.

Paid membership in the association has grown almost fivefold in the past decade, from about 300 to 1,400, says Spence.

Fitness professionals say the demand for classes that work the mind as well as the body is definitely on the rise. "Mind-body is huge," says Brigitte Cormier, general manager at Sports Connection. The club's

Yoga Guide

Here's a quick guide to some of the yoga classes available:

- Hatha yoga – traditional yoga that incorporates physical poses or asanas, breathing exercises and relaxation techniques
- Astanga or power yoga—continuous movement and breathing, much more cardiovascular, continuous flow of postures
- Kripalu yoga – much like Hatha yoga, helps with strength and flexibility, moves away from pushing or forcing; teaches self-awareness and compassion for body, encourages self-acceptance
- Family yoga – for parents and kids
- Moms and babies yoga
- Pre- and post-natal yoga
- Yoga therapy – done at a slower pace, explore body's innate power to heal
- Hot yoga – done in a super-hot room; through heat, muscles become more limber, more flexible so participants get a deeper stretch
- 55-plus yoga
- Yoga for teens

yoga class is its most popular, and members have demanded another class be added in the new year.

Cormier says non-aerobic, relaxation classes like Pilates, yoga and deep stretching are the hottest choices for fitness buffs these days. "We're finding as our members age they're really looking for the less intense, less high-impact classes. They're finding that they have limitations with what they can do. I'm also finding a lot of our members are discovering injuries and this is great for them for rehab."

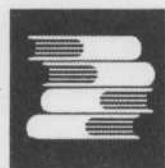

Yoga classes are attracting a whole new group of clients to the Kinsmen Sports Centre, says program co-ordinator Dot Laing. She's noticed the growing popularity of yoga over the past few years, and thinks it's here to stay. Unlike some exercises, yoga is good for a wide range of people at all fitness levels, and can be as gentle or difficult as participants want, she says.

While traditional yoga doesn't offer much of a cardiovascular workout, it's a great compliment for toning and increasing flexibility, she adds.

It also offers relief to many people with chronic ailments like back pain, headaches and even multiple sclerosis, says Spence of the yoga association. The Multiple Sclerosis Society offers a yoga class for MS sufferers in the Edmonton area.

Many people become involved in meditation after trying yoga, she adds. "Everybody's looking for something to help control the mind, because the mind is like a racing horse."

Yoga is also becoming more popular among men, who make up about 10 per cent of the association's membership. While that doesn't sound like a lot, it's a significant increase over past years, she says.

books

From novels and biographies to cookbooks and beyond, there's nothing like a good read

Small-town dynamics well worth savouring

Five Quarters of the Orange by Joanne Harris; William Morrow; 307 pages; $37.95.

By Carolyn Heiman

Food can be an engaging subject for books. How else can one explain the popularity of food magazines or the pile of cookbooks on my night table? There is no correlation between time spent reading about food and actual time spent at the stove top. The former is personal fantasy playing itself out; the latter more likely a speedy effort to get mouths fed before soccer practice.

Recognizing the innate appeal of food in literature, author Joanne Harris is building her own genre around the subject matter. First came Chocolat. We all remember that sumptuous book and if you didn't read it, you could be carried along its romantic plot in the movie version by the same name. Then came Blackberry Wine, a book written from the perspective of a bottle of wine.

Harris's most recent book, Five Quarters of the Orange, is a gripping tale that melds culinary metaphor with a psychological drama surrounding a widow and her children.

Unpredictably, oranges do not play a delectable happy role in the story line, as the food substances do in earlier novels. Rather, oranges are the object of torment to Mirabelle Dartigen who believes she smells oranges before the onset of an immobilizing migraine, a fact that is used manipulatively by her daughter.

The story is told through the eyes of Framboise (the name means raspberry) Dartigen, a 64-year-old recluse, who has returned to her childhood farmhouse and builds a reputation as a magnificent cook when she establishes a small creperie. But she does it all under an assumed name, wanting no one to make the connection between her and her mother Mirabelle, who left the village in a cloud of scandal decades ago.

It is this mystery the reader has to slowly unravel, as Framboise recounts her growing up with a half-mad and often horribly cruel mother, an older brother, Cassis (French for black current), and sister, Reine-Claude.

What has caused so much shame that Framboise prefers to go completely unrecognized and goes to great lengths to avoid having her culinary talents publicized too broadly? Even her relationships with her own children and her siblings are marred by the history.

As Framboise recounts events that occurred in the small Loire-area village during the German occupation, she is also meticulously going through an album bequeathed to her from her mother. It is one of the few things given to the younger child by the mother who gave the farm to her son and a valuable wine collection to the other daughter. Framboise seems to have been cheated from an equal share in the inheritance.

But as the book plays itself out we discover that perhaps Framboise is the only one who has been given something that ultimately is her salvation.

In the album Framboise discovers pieces to a puzzle that ultimately lead to her mother being held responsible for a terrible tragedy in the village. She also discovers how her own devious childhood manipulations may have played a role in the tragedy.

The plot is not a complex one, but in exploring events as they might possibly be seen by other individuals, Harris weaves an intriguing web and we understand motivation bit by bit, section by section. While Framboise spends most of her energy trying to shed the past, we find that she cannot even be happy in the present until the other issue is resolved.

Unlike Blackberry Wine, which stretched plausibility, Five Quarters reads like a gripping personal drama. Harris's observation about small town dynamics, family relationships and the nature of childhood itself are incisive and truthful. It is a book worth savouring.

Sunday

Golden Harvest

TVDATA

Sam Shepard offers a powerful performance in After the Harvest, a TV movie based on author Martha Ostenso's classic 1920s Canadian novel Wild Geese. It airs Sunday on CTV. It is set on a vast, menacing landscape. It is populated by bleak, disturbed people who carry the depths of winter in their souls. And it revolves around a dark, destructive moral secret. Shepard is a subtle and seductive actor, slowly fitting the pieces of his characters into place. This makes for a riveting, hypnotic performance.

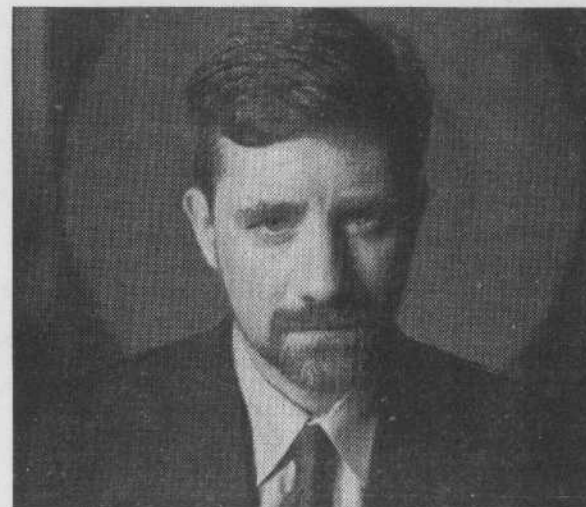

Mae-ke 'Em Laugh

TVDATA

Mae West is one of the comedy legends remembered in It's Burlesque, a two-hour special airing Sunday, March 4, on A&E Network. The show includes classic clips from West, Abbott and Costello, Jackie Gleason, and other larger-than-life comics who got their start in this unique subgenre of vaudeville.

Endearing Spinoff

TVDATA

Bruce Harwood stars as one of the three conspiracy theorists in the new X-Files spinoff The Lone Gunmen, Sunday on Fox. The three main characters, John Fitzgerald Byers, Melvin Frohike and Richard "Ringo" Langly (Harwood, Tom Braidwood, Dean Haglund), are spun off from The X-Files, where they play computer hackers who help FBI Special Agents. The title refers to the weekly newspaper the three publish. They encounter dangerous villains while ferreting out the truth, armed with high-tech gizmos and more bravery than sense.

Christmas turkey dinner with your best friend

While correspondents' editor Jamie Zachary and his girlfriend Jodie vacationed back home in Calgary, their cats Monroe and Coffee dined on a Christmas feast of turkey and giblets. However, before they were allowed to dine reporter Rita Legault forced them to wear silly Christmas hats.
