VOL. XXXVI, No. 109 MONTREAL, SATURDAY, MAY 7, 1904. PRICE ONE CENT.

THE REVISION OF THE AUDIT ACT

Mr. Houghton Lennox Talks of His Proposal for Reform.

AUDITOR-GENERAL'S POWERS

Should Be Extended and the Treasury Board Replaced as Court of Appeal.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 7.—Mr. Haughton Lennox, of West Simcoe, in an interview regarding his motion for the appointment of a committee to consider the propriety of amending the Audit Act, spoke as follows:—"As to what I expect to accomplish by the motion, stated broadly, it amounts to no more than this, that I hope to have the best efforts of eleven members of the House devoted to the improvement of an act which has to some extent fallen behind its expected usefulness and which by experience has been found to be defective in some important particulars. Of course, I do not propose to even outline to the committee what defects exist or the remedies to be adopted. A bill was prepared, I think, in 1899, containing a number of valuable suggestions, and I have read this carefully. I have also during the last two or three sessions carefully studied the difficulties that have arisen between the Auditor-General and some of the departments and the result of the reference of these difficulties to the Treasury Board (alias a committee of ministers) for final decision.

THE TREASURY BOARD.

This brings us to one of the matters in which I think a great deal of improvement can be made. The decision of the reference by a minister whose act is complained of is often likely to be unsatisfactory and the fact that his colleagues are associated with him in deciding the matter in dispute, does not improve the condition of things. To remedy this state of things there should be an independent appeal, a tribunal of some kind in the case of differences between the Auditor-General and the departments, say an Exchequer Court judge, to whom the matter would be referred in the first instance or carried by way of appeal. I have not investigated the matter sufficiently to say whether recent Liberal decisions have been better or worse than under the former Conservative administration. This is not the point. My point is that there cannot be a certainty of a satisfactory result under present conditions."

THE LOSS OF TIME.

Again machinery can be provided by which disputed cases can be adjusted with less loss of time than heretofore. The vexed question of what public works are to be let by tender should be put upon a more definite basis. Whether the Government will consider that this comes within the scope of my motion, is not certain, but I am of the opinion that the question will properly come under a consideration of section 33 of present act. I aim also at having the provisions in reference to the publication of the Auditor-General's report, so altered that the Auditor-General's report will hereafter be issued in sections from time to time as soon as printed, each section embracing one Government department. At present the whole is issued at one time in two bulky volumes after Parliament assembles, and it is impossible for the members to become familiar with their contents during the session.

"I also believe that complete publicity should be given to the points from time to time at issue between the Auditor-General and the heads of departments. There is a provision for having the matter published in the Auditor-General's report and so submitted to the judgment of the House, but the people should be the ultimate judges and should have the facts as soon as possible.

POWERS SHOULD BE EXTENDED.

"This is peculiarly the time for a revision of the Audit Act, the country is now committing itself to enormous expenditure. I am not questioning at present the propriety of this expenditure, but it suggests a reason for even more rigid supervision of the public funds than hitherto and for even greater safeguards than have existed in the past. I am not prepared to say whether the Auditor-General's powers in reference to expenditure in connection with the transcontinental railway will be as broad and effective as in reference to public works generally. Very grave questions in this regard are suggested by the perusal of sections 18 and 23 of the Transcontinental Railway Act of last session. It will be generally admitted that any change should be in the direction of giving the Auditor-General more effective means of dealing with the legality and propriety of contemplated payments before the moneys are parted with. Mr. McDougall is the Dominion auditor, but he is or at least ought to be more. In England the corresponding official is designated Controller and Auditor-General, and our official was intended to be a controller as well as auditor, and has been in fact to a great extent. If, however, the object which Hon. Alex. MacKenzie had in view when he created the office, is to be fully accomplished the powers of the Auditor-General must be extended rather than narrowed."

EASTERN CANADIAN HANGED IN WASHINGTON.

He Killed Lottie Brace, a Theatrical Performer, at Seattle.

Walla Walla, Wash., May 7.—James Champoux was hanged here yesterday for the murder of Lottie Brace, at Seattle.

Champoux killed Lottie Brace, a variety theatre performer at a theatre at Seattle in November, 1902. He had met the woman in Alaska and became infatuated with her. After he had spent most of his money on her, she threw him aside. Champoux went to the theatre, where she was employed, with the intention of killing her. He stabbed her in the head with a hunting knife as she was leaving the theatre, and she died the next day from the wound.

Champoux's first trial was dramatic. He feigned insanity, fought his gaolers, and acted in every way like a madman, but a jury declared him sane. His case was appealed to every possible court, but the convicted man's attorney at last gave up hope of staying the execution. Champoux stated before leaving for the State prison that he wished to die, and cursed his attorney for trying to save his neck. Champoux's wealthy relatives in Eastern Canada, however, made a hard fight to save him from the scaffold.

TWO OTHER CREDIT COMPANIES IN COURT

Actions Against Le Credit Universal and Le Credit Cooperatif.

JOS. GARNEAU PROSECUTES

False Pretences Alleged—Warrants Against Directors Issued—Companies' Papers in Court.

Two other credit companies have been called to answer complaints in the Police Court. Mr. Jos. Gareau, 276 Delorimier avenue, has lodged a complaint against the Universal Credit Society, 61 St. Gabriel street, for obtaining $164 under alleged false pretences, and against the Co-operative Credit Society, 1598 Notre Dame street, for obtaining $510, under alleged false pretences.

Mr. Gareau had placed money with the two companies, or, to use their own words, had taken out contracts with these companies. In view of the light thrown upon the matter by the investigation into the affairs of the Credit du Canada, Mr. Gareau studied the promises which had been made to him, and came to the conclusion that fraud had been intended. He called at the offices of the companies, and asked for his money. They refused to grant his request and he finally offered to accept fifty per cent. of the amount, which he had deposited. But he could get nothing. He then consulted his lawyers, with the result that the matter was placed in the hands of the authorities, and warrants were issued by Judge Lafontaine. All the papers of the companies were taken to court in two waggons and are there held. The enquete will take place on Wednesday next.

The Credit Universal obtained a Federal charter in January last. The letters-patent set forth that it was authorized to carry on trade in jewels, clothing and other useful articles.

Will Go to Bedford.

The Rev. Sydney S. Orpwood, from the University of Oxford, whose services have been appreciated at Trinity Church during the last two months, will leave for Bedford to-day by the 4.30 train. The rev. gentleman will take duty at Bedford Parish Church during the summer months, as the rector, the Rev. Canon Nye, has been ordered a long rest.

New C. P. R. Tourist Cars.

The first eight of an order for 25 of a new type of tourist cars have been placed by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, on the runs between Boston, Montreal, Toronto, and Vancouver. A noticeable improvement over similar cars which have been previously turned out is the arrangement of the seats, which are so constructed as to leave ample room beneath them for hand baggage.

CANADIAN FORESTERS. — Court Hochelaga, No. 284, C.O.F., had a very enjoyable social evening on the occasion of their first meeting in the new quarters in the Ligue building, St. Catherine street. Among the visitors were: Bros. D. R. Kennedy, high registrar; A. D. Carroll of the High Court executive; W. H. Chapman, organizer, and Max Herger, legal representative for the Province of Quebec, who came down from Toronto on purpose to be present.

A Marvel of Goodness.

One pound of wire woven the Hercules way is as strong and more resilient than five pounds of the same wire woven the old way. It is impossible for other makes of spring beds to be so good value.

The guarantee on Hercules Spring Beds No. 0 and No. 1 is very emphatic. The buyer has 30 days in which to determine if he likes the spring, and if satisfactory at the end of that time the makers guarantee that it shall be just as good after five years of use, and, inasmuch as the spring beds will last 50 years, it makes their cost come absurdly cheap per year of use, and it is almost folly for any one to be without them. 109 2aw tf

SAFER THAN BANKING.

One thing is as sure as can be—that is, if you get your money's value in goods first, and pay the money afterwards, you can't possibly lose. You can't lose your money as you might if you had to save it up first. And you don't lose one single day's use of the goods you need by having to wait until you have saved. In other words—our pioneer popular plan trusting the people enables you to buy your goods as soon as you need them. And when you've put up a small amount of money and received goods of use every day and every hour, you actually receive credit and get the benefits of the full amount of your final deposit. Yes, buying goods here on credit is positively safer and more profitable to you than banking.

Books of the Week Reviewed; "He That Eateth With Me": Other New Books.

By George Murray, B. A., Oxon., F. R. S. C.

He That Eateth With Me. By H. A. Mitchell Keays. (New York: McClure and Co.)

The lady who has written this very unpleasant novel is, we believe, a British-Canadian, the widow of a clergyman. The text to which the title of her book seems to refer may be found in St. John's Gospel, xiii. 18: "He that eateth bread with me hath lifted up his heel against Me," and emphasizes the fact that "the devil-driven hero" of the story is a Judas Iscariot. Clifford Mackemer, the principal male character of the improbable fiction, is a cowardly and contemptible scamp, and had he followed the example of Judas to the bitter end, no one but his soft-hearted and silly-brained first wife, Katharine, would have shed a single tear for his self-inflicted death. The Christian doctrine on the subject of divorce is recorded in St. Matthew xix. 9: There was no need for Mrs. Keays to attempt to add to or subtract from this decisive statement; but, as she is now living in the United States, she, for reasons best known to herself, felt bound to protest, in a volume of 350 pages, against the laxity of the divorce laws, the result of which, as a New York clergyman lately declared, is "consecutive polygamy." The plot of the tale is so slight that there can be no harm in revealing its chief incidents, more especially as they have already been used in one of M. Edouard Rod's fictions. A husband with no ground for complaint against his wife (except that his fancy has strayed elsewhere), obtains his freedom through the divorce court and marries the other woman. The fact that he is a father as well as a husband does not alter his determination, and in each novel, French and English, almost as soon as he is bound to the other woman, he begins almost to repent, and finally suffers a tedious martyrdom. In the first chapter Katharine breaks her delicate reserve, and timidly says: "Clifford, Clifford, don't you love me?" We continue the narrative of Mrs. Keays: "'Love you!' he echoed. 'No, before God, I don't, Katharine, and I'm sorry for it, but I don't, and there's no use lying.'" The moment from which he had shrunk for months had come: it was already in its shroud. An instant buoyancy expanded his heart: from golden stores of emotion his brain ripened thoughts hitherto under ban faster than his lagging sense could harvest them, for from every beacon of the future there flared to him now the signal, 'Isabel, Isabel!'" This is a fair specimen of the novelist's mixed metaphorical style of language, and we dare not praise it. The chief faults of the book, however, are the improbability of many of its incidents, and the crude drawing of characters. Clifford, of course, leaves his wife, and poor, weak-minded woman leaves her home for a time, in order to let him get a divorce from her on the plea of her desertion of him. In a short time Isabel Durance, the enchantress, also "obtained freedom from her husband in some God-forsaken fever-hole in Arkansas." The new marriage promptly took place, and at p. 90 we read: "'Oh, beautiful, beautiful!' he murmured, 'Darling, you are new to me every day.' She lifted her face to him again, like a flower seeking the sun, and again he kissed her, on her white, drooping eyelids, her hair, and last, a touch of his lips to her fair shoulder." The absurdities of the story are too numerous to be counted. After having assisted Clifford in securing a divorce from herself, Katharine moans and groans persistently after this fashion: "I deny that divorce. Clifford is still my husband. No law can alter that fact. Law cannot one day make him mine until death, and the next day give what is mine to another until death." All this she goes and tells to Isabel, adding that she freely forgives her, and cherishes no ill-feeling against her. Whitney Mackemer, the son, becomes very ill, and Katharine writes to Clifford, who at once visits his old home, clandestinely. His love for his former wife seems to return, and even the immaculate Katharine, when he has again left her, writes, asking him to return. Finally, Katharine falls ill, and her life is despaired of, and Isabel goes to see her, and meets Clifford and Katharine together. Next, because Mrs. Keays wishes to reunite the prodigal Clifford and the easily forgiving Katharine, she is obliged to "kill-off" the fascinating Isabel, and allows her to be knocked down by a train and die of her severe injuries. The conversation of the boy Whitney, and the inconsequent never-ending chatter of Airlie Casler, a young female cousin who comes on a visit to Katharine, are on a par as regards absurdity, and have no ring of true human nature about them. The book, considered simply as a work of fiction, can scarcely be called literature, and is to be pardoned only because it is evidently written, as a certain critic notes, with a deep conviction of the terrible nature of the evil with which it deals.

Talks to Boys and Girls. By Rev. Sydney Strong. (Toronto: Fleming H. Revell Co.)

Though the author's name is Strong, that must not prevent us from printing our deliberate opinion that his book is full of strong common-sense. There are three sections to the volume. The first is entitled "Kite Talks," and consist of eight short papers, each one of which is to the point, and carefully worked out. "Random Talks," the second section, are full of sound advice, well expressed. The third and final section, "The Life I Ought to Live," is written in a higher mood, and cannot fail to benefit the heart and soul of every boy and girl who may be fortunate enough to meet with the "Talks."

The Literature of the Celts. By Magnus. (Blackie, London, 50 Old Bailey.)

Things have moved rapidly since the time when Dr. Samuel Johnson, with his rough contempt for all things Scottish, declared there was not in the world a Gaelic manuscript a hundred years old. We now know that centuries before Christ the Celts dominated Central Europe, and were well known to the Greeks and Romans, while they had a literature of their own in several languages. The study of that literature has grown apace, and its wealth of story has inspired many poets and writers of our day, to whom the Greek and Roman legends of our school days were growing stale. Among these writers we cannot forbear to mention Mr. W. B. Yeats, who, in his Treasury of Irish Poetry" writes as follows: "The Irish legends in popular tradition and in old Gaelic literature are numerous and beautiful, and alone among great European legends have the beauty and wonder of altogether new things. May one not say then, without saying anything improbable, that they will have a predominant influence in the coming centuries, and that their influence will pass through many countries?" We think it quite likely that they will, and we notice with pleasure that Miss C. L. Thomson, well known for her selections from the Greek myths and the Morte d'Arthur has recently edited for her youthful readers "The Celtic Wonder World, Irish, Welsh, and Breton Stories," in which she has laid under contribution writers of the highest repute such as Sir Samuel Fergusson, Jubainville, Standish O'Grady, Crofton Croker, and Lady Charlotte Guest. Dr. Maclean's handsome volume, which embodies the substance of two series of lectures given at Glasgow University, is a valuable survey of the whole field, showing the various Celtic races that inhabited Great Britain and Ireland, and the Continent of Europe, and telling in charming fashion the story of the legacy of romance that they have bequeathed to us. The lectures in this new form have been prepared and issued with a view to meeting the demands not only of the genral, but also of the private student in quest of a guide to the original sources, the authorities and books on the subject.

Tussock Land. By Arthur H. Adams. (London: T. Fisher Unwin.)

Tussock-grass is a large grass, native of the Falkland Isles, remarkable for forming great tufts. It is, we believe, of the same genus as the Cock's Footgrass, which is abundant in Britain, and furnishes an important part of both natural and artificial pastures. In the novel before us, which deals with the south of New Zealand, frequent mention is made of great solitudes of tussock land. This its said to be the author's first novel, and it certainly reaches a high standard of promise, as Mr. Adams has a pleasant gift of story-teilling. As the book is brightly written, it can be recommended without fear of disappointment.

The Doukhobors. By Joseph Elkinton. (Philadelphia: Ferris and Leach.)

This handsome volume, which is illustrated with about 50 photographs of the Doukhobors and their surroundings, besides some special portraits and maps, comprises the history of these strange people in Russia, and their migration to Canada. As the proceeds from the sale of the book will be devoted to the support of a school among these Russian Quakers in Canada, we trust that all who read it will urge their friends to do the same, and thus contribute to the desired fund. Mr. Elkinton's work contains an authoritative account of the settlement in Canada of these interesting immigrants who have been assisted to the amount of over $100,000 by the members of the Philadelphia and London Yearly Meeting of Friends. Exaggerated accounts in the sensational press of the outbreak of fanaticism among some of the members of the Doukhobor colonies have done much injury for a time to their cause, but the great majority have not been affected by this accidental wave of frenzy, and in this book Mr. Joseph Elkinton has attempted to make public the grounds for an accurate popular knowledge of these European Puritans. He traces their early history, and the conditions out of which they have come, and, in short, makes it possible to understand them. The book is divided into three parts, "The Doukhobors in Canada"; "The Exodus from Russia"; and "The Doukhobors in Russia." We can conscientiously say that the writer's labours have not been in vain, and he has produced a work which is not only of considerable present interest, but will be re-read with increased interest as the people become better known, and it is to be hoped, prove useful colonists.

Municipal Public Works. By S. Whinery. (Macmillan: New York. G. N. Morang: Toronto.)

The Macmillan Company published some time ago a valuable work entitled "Municipal Administration," by Dr. John A. Fairlie, of the University of Michigan. The work was scholarly and thoughtful, and met with a hearty welcome not only from students in the field of political economy, but also from the public at large. The present work by a well-known Civil Engineer of New York deals with the inception, construction, and management of municipal public works, and is mainly intended to arouse an active interest in those who have not previously given much attention to the subject, as well as to stimulate further interest and inquiry among those already familiar with it. Such being the purpose of the work, Mr. Whinery has avoided a too technical treatment of the subjects, and has introduced statistics and details only where they seemed necessary to illustrate or enforce the general statements. It therefore occupies a sort of middle position between the scientific engineering manual, and a general discussion of municipal affairs. The fact that it was written chiefly with an eye to the city of New York will not prevent its being a very useful hand-book for the business men of Montreal. Its main endeavour is to give certain criteria by which good can be distinguished from bad work; sound directions by which municipal accounts can be analysed, and general principle applied to municipal works so that their value can be correctly estimated. The ordinary reader who takes any interest in the municipal public works of his city will find nothing dull in the fifteen chapters that compose the volume, and should particularly study the 6th and 7th chapters entitled "The Contract" and "The Contractors." In the latter chapter Mr. Whinery refers to the unfavourable reputation that municipal contractors too frequently "enjoy," but holds rightly that contracting is not necessarily demoralizing, and that contractors, as a class, are not so bad as they are represented. He divides municipal contractors into three classes, viz., the honest and responsible contractor—the irresponsible and unreliable contractor—and, finally, the "boodler." The book is sure to stimulate discussion of the subjects to which it refers, and ought to be in the hands of all our municipal councillors. We regret that we can find no space for the quotations of several important passages that we had marked for that purpose.

Nami-Ko. By Kenjiro Tokutomi. (Boston: H. B. Turner and Co.)

The original title of this Japanese novel was "Hototogisu," and was published in 1900. "Nami-Ko" is the title chosen, especially by the author for the English version of his most popular work of fiction. Its popularity is not only on account of its undoubted merit, but is due to the fact that it stands unparalleled in the history of modern Japanese literature, inasmuch as it embodies the spirit of knighthood in Japan. The China-Japan war of 1894-95 was not merely an historical event in which the two nations came into conflict, but it was the first case in which the national consciousness of its existence and possibilities as an independent nation asserted itself in Japan. The nation saw its ethical ideal in the resuscitation of the old Samurai spirit wedded to the broad principles of humanity, and "Namo-ko" is dear to the Japanese people, owing to the patriotic spirit of two of its characters—Takeo, and the General. The translators of the novel—Sakae Shioya, and E. F. Edgett—acknowledge that their task has been a very difficult one, as they could not attempt literal accuracy owing to the very nature of the two widely different languages; but they have made a special endeavour to reproduce the spirit of the original story, and they hope that as full justice as possible has been done to the author. We will not spoil the intending reader's interest in the tale by analyzing the plot. It must suffice to say that the interest turns upon the case of a wife divorced from her husband by her mother-in-law. It seems that this proceeding, monstrous as it appears to the Occidental mind, is strictly legal in Japan, and that the mother-in-law may exercise her right, not only without consulting her son-in-law, but even in his absence: so that he who goes forth on a journey, as a sober married man, may return to find himself transformed into a gay young bachelor or a sorrowing widower, according to the state of his mind. The treatment of this theme at the hands of a Japanese writer, learned in "The Wisdom for Women," is so unlike that which a Western writer would bestow upon it that we find it quite as astonishing as the theme itself.

The Bride of Glendearg. By Allan McIvor. (W. J. Ritchie: New York.)

We notice in a New York literary paper that guesses are being made as to the identity of "Allan McIvor," whose name appears as the author of "The Bride of Glendearg." Two surmises are offered by book-dealers, viz., Sir Gilbert Parker and Ralph O'Connor. After reading the book, we shall be much surprised to find that "The Bride of Glendearg" was written by either of these carefully trained authors.

The Tu-Tze's Tower. By Louisa B. Edwards. (Philadelphia: H. T. Coates and Co.)

This is a kind of international Asiatic novel, and the scenes of the story are laid in China, with three main currents uniting in a tower on the edge of Thibet. The object of the book seems to be the answering of the question whether a white woman can fall in love with a savage chief? We can see that she can—in these pages. There is a carefully studied setting of Chinese life in the novel, true possibly in detail, but unconvincing in general effect. Though it would never be known from the present book, Miss Edwards is a Philadelphian, a Quaker by long descent, an ex-kindergartener, and a present newspaper woman. Her first story, "Step-Brothers to Dives," was published in 1894 in Harper's Monthly Magazine, and dealt with the problem of the extravagance of the poor. Since then, she has contributed steadily to leading newspapers and magazines—"A Woman for Nothing," a novelette, having appeared in Lippincott's Magazine, and "A Friend of Cara's," in the Smart Set. These attracted much favourable attention, both in America and in England, and the chances are that Miss Edwards will distinguish herself hereafter in her chosen realm of fiction. "The Tu-Tze's Tower" is a story of adventure, and a child of imagination purely. The heroine is of a new type, the hero is an oddity in clever characterization, and the situation is, at least, novel, when it comes to a cultured American woman, of decided and fascinating personality, falling in love (as we said before) with a semi-barbarian, the Tu-Tze of a province in Thibet. We will not further meddle with the details of an interesting story, but may add that the style of composition is superior to that generally employed by a journalist or magazine writer. It shows a smoothness of finish, which raises it above most of the ordinary works of fiction.

To Correspondents.

To secure attention in this department, every communication hereafter must be signed with the full name and address of the inquirer, as a guarantee of good faith, though not necessarily for publication. Questions of too trivial a nature will not be heeded, and the editor reserves the right of deciding whether or not any question or answer is of sufficient interest to be published. Queries will be answered in the order of their receipt, and as the number received weekly is very large, and the pressure upon our columns is always very great, inquirers must be prepared to await their turn.

Edinburgh After Flodden.

(Concluded from the Star of April 30th.)

So he ended. And the others cared not any answer then;
Sitting silent, dumb with sorrow, sitting anguish—struck, like men
Who have seen the roaring torrent sweep their happy homes away,
And yet linger on the margin, staring wildly on the spray.
But without, the maddening tumult waxes ever more and more,
And the crowd of wailing women gather round the Council door.
Every dusky spire is ringing with a dull and hollow knell,
And the Miserere's singing to the tolling of the bell.
Through the streets the burghers hurry, spreading terror as they go;
And the rampart's thronged with watchers for the coming of the foe
From each mountain-top a pillar streams into the tepid air,
Bearing token from the Border that the English host is there.
All without is flight and terror, all within is woe and fear—
God protect thee, Maiden City, for thy latest hour is near!
No! not yet, thoug high Dunedin! shall thou totter to thy fall;
Though thy bravest and thy strongest are not there to man the wall.
No! not yet! The ancient spirit of our fathers hath not gone.
Take it to thee as a buckler better far than steel or stone.
Oh! remember those who perished for thy birthright at the time,
Where to be a Scot was treason, and to side with Wallace crime!
Have they not a voice among us, whilst their hallowed dust is here?
Hear ye not a summons sounding from each buried warrior's bier?
"Up!" they say, "and keep the freedom which we won you long ago;
Up and keep our graves unsullied from the insults of the foe!
Up! and if ye cannot save them, comes to us in blood and fire:
Midst the crash of falling turrets let the last of Scots expire."
Still the bells are tolling fiercely, and the cry comes louder in;
Mothers wailing for their children, sisters for their slaughtered kin.
All is terror and disorder; till the Provost rises up,
Calm, as though he had not tasted of the fell and bitter cup.
All so stately from his sorrow, rose the old undaunted chief,
That you had not deemed, to see him, his was more than common grief.
"Rouse, ye, Sirs;" he said; "we may not longer mourn for what is done;
If our King is taken from us, we are left to guard his son.
We have sworn to keep the city from the foe, whate'er they be,
And the oath that we have taken shall be never broke by me.
Death is nearer to us, brethren, than it seemed to those who died,
Fighting yesterday at Flodden, by their Lord and master's side.
Let us meet it then in patience, not in terror or in fear;
Though our hearts are bleeding yonder, let our souls be steadfast here.
Up and rouse ye! Time is fleeting, and we yet have much to do;
Up! and haste ye through the city; stir the bughers, stout and true.
Gather all our scattered people, fling the banner out once more,
Randolph Murray! do thou bear it, as it erst was borne before!
Never Scottish heart will leave it, when they see their monarch's gore.
Let them cease that dismal kneiling—it is time enough to ring
When the fortress-strength of Scotland stoops to ruin, like its King.
Let the bells be kept for warning, not for terror or alarm;
When they next are heard to thunder let each man and stripling arm.
Bid the women leave their wailing—do they think that woeful strain,
From the bloody heaps of Flodden can redeem their dearest stain?
Bid them cease—or rather hasten to the churches, every one;
There to pray to Mary Mother and to her anointed Son,
That the thunderbolt above us may not fall in ruin yet;
That in fire and blood and rapine Scotland's glory may not set.
Let them pray—for never women stood in need of such a prayer!
England's yeomen shall not find them clinging to the altars there.
No! If we are doomed to perish, man and maiden, let us fall,
And a common gulf of ruin open wide to women us all!
Never shall the ruthless spoiler lay his hot insulting hand
On the sisters of our heroes, whilst we bear a torch or brand!
Up! and rouse ye, then, my brothers—but when next ye hear the bell
Sounding forth the sullen summons that may be our funeral knell,
Once more let us meet together, once more see each other's face;
Then, like men that need not tremble, go to our appointed place.
God, our Father, will not fail us, in that last tremendous hour—
If all other bulwarks crumble, He will be our strength and tower;
Though the ramparts rock beneath us, and the walls go crashing down,
Though the roar of conflagration bellow o'er the sinking town;
There is yet one place of shelter, where the foemen cannot come,
Where the summons never sounded of the trumpet or the drum.
There again we'll meet our children, who, on Flodden trampled sod,
For their King and for their country rendered up their souls to God.
There we shall find rest and refuge, with our dear departed brave,
And the ashes of the city be our universal grave!"

A Singularly Spelled Word.

J. L. (Union Avenue), sends me an extract from the old "Spectator," which contains the following passage: "I am engaged in this Speculation by a Sight which I lately saw at the Opera. As I was standing in the hinder Part of the Box, I took notice of a little Cluster of Women sitting together in the prettiest coloured Hoods that I ever saw. One of them was Blue, another Yellow, and another Philomot; the fourth was of a Pink Colour, and the fifth of a pale Green. I looked with as much Pleasure upon this little parti-coloured Assembly, as upon a Bed of Tulips." My correspondent wishes to know what colour the third, called "Philomot," is, and from what source the word is derived:

I have taken some trouble to trace the paper in the "Spectator," and find that it is No. 265, written by Addison and published on January 3, 1712. The adjective, as Addison prints it, is a very corrupt form now entirely out of use, and it is no wonder that it puzzled J. L. If he will consult a good French dictionary he will find that "feuille-morte" is a genuine adjective that literally means "of the colour of a dead leaf," i.e., russet or dark yellow. It is, of course, derived from the Latin "folium mortuum," dead leaf, and we should therefore have expected an English derivative "foliomort," rather than Addison's corrupt "philomot," which gives no clue to the origin of the word. Folimort" would have been more intelligible, and, many possibly occur somewhere in English literature. I shall be glad to obtain from student of language some additional light on this awkward adjective.

Editor of "Notes and Queries."

"Who" and "Whom."

When will speakers and writers learn the difference between the nominative case and the objective of the personal relative pronoun? Scarcely a day passes without my noticing in some book other instances of the grammatical error. At p. 210 of "Tussock Land," a well-written book that I reviewed last week, I find: "King had seen her on the ferry more than once before, but did not know whom she was." Why should Mr. Arthur H. Adams use "whom" for "who," excepting under the erroneous notion that the pronoun is in the objective case governed by the verb "know?" Is it possible that he thought the English of the translators of King James's Bible infallible? In St. Matthew xvi., 13, we read: "Jesus asked his disciples, saying, 'Whom do men say that I the Son of Man am?'" and again in the 15th verse of the same chapter: "He said unto them, 'But whom say ye that I am?'" So also in St. Mark, viii., 27, "Jesus asked his disciples, saying unto them, 'Whom do men say that I am?'" and again in the 29th verse, "And he saith unto them, 'But whom say ye that I am?'"

From the translators of the New Testament to the late Albert Smith, "it is a far cry cry," as the Scotch say. The author of "Vanity Fair" was often importuned to insert his autograph in ladies' albums—a request with which he was seldom willing to comply. Mr. Hodder in his "Recollections of Thackeray" relates the following anecdote: "On one occasion the possessor of an album was fortunate. It belonged to a young lady acquaintance, and I pleaded her cause so warmly that Thackeray opened the book, and I pointed out to him the names of certain contributors with whom I thought he might not object to be thus associated. He assented, and took the book home to his hotel, in order that he might have time to scan its contents. Among these he soon discovered the subjoined lines:

MONT BLANC IS THE MONARCH OF MOUNTAINS.

They crowned him long ago;
But who they got to put it on Nobody seems to know.
—Albert Smith.

Under these lines Mr. Thackeray speedily wrote the following:

A Humble Suggestion.

I know that Albert wrote in hurry:
To criticize, I scarce presume;
But yet methinks that Lindley Murray,
Instead of 'who' had written 'whom.'"

Albert Smith charged half-a-crown for a ticket to his lecture on the ascent of Mont Blanc. Someone observed to Douglas Jerroid that it was Lord Byron who had "crowned Mont Blanc as the Monarch of Mountains." "Yes," said Jerroid, "as long afterwards Albert Smith half-crowned him."

Wanted—A Poem—"How We Beat the Favourite."

Editor of Notes and Queries.—Having exhausted all the sources of information at my command in the endeavour to find a poem entitled "How We Beat the Favourite," I now turn to your valuable paper, in the hope that you will be kind enough to publish it on your pages in the near future.

I am sorry to say that I do not know the author's name, but the first few lines of the poem are:

"Aye, Squire," said Stephen,
They back him at even.
The race is all over but the shouting, they say,
The "Clown" ought to beat her!
Dick Nevell is sweeter than ever—
They swear he can win all the way."

That is all I know about the verses, but knowing your capabilities, and the kindness with which you treat all your subscribers, I feel no compunction whatever in asking this favour.

Sursum Corda.

The wind on the fields,
The breath of God over the face of the ground
Whispers a word.
The tribes of his leafy dominion rejoice, having heard.

Crimson of Indian willow
Orange of maple plume,
As a web of endless pattern,
Falls from a soundless loom.

The wide green marvel of summer
Breaks from catkin and sheath,
So silently only a spirit
Could guess at the spirit beneath.

For these are the moveless people,
Who only abide and endure,
Yet no less feel their hearts beat
To the lift of the wild spring ire.

These are the keepers of silence,
Who only adore and are dumb,
With faith's own look of expecting
The bidding they know will come.

The revel of leaves is beginning,
The riot of sap is astir;
Dogwood and peach and magnolia,
Have wands they will not defer.

In the long, sweet breath of the rain winds,
In the warm, sweet hours of sun,
They arise at the Sursum Corda,
A thousand uplifted as one.

Boys and Athletics.

Article No. 1.

The Advantages of Physical Training.

(By George L. Meylan, M.D., Physical Director Columbia University, N. Y.

Copyright, 1904 and published in the Montreal Star by special arrangement.

I was talking with a famous athlete a short time ago and he told me that he would not care to have a boy who would not be anxious to be stronger, to run faster and to jump farther than any other boy.

This man knew that it is necessary for a boy to have ambition and to try hard, if he expects to accomplish anything. Every boy spends the first fifteen or twenty years of his life in preparing himself for the rest of his life.

An important part of this training is obtained in school: this has to do with the mind. But that is not all: a boy must first be strong and healthy.

The training of the body is obtained from gymnastics, athletics and play.

Every boy knows that if he wishes to raise a nice plant he must have good seed, good soil and plenty of sunshine and water.

He also knows that if he wants to raise a fine dog he must get a good puppy, feed him good food keep him in a clean place and let him out where he can run and play.

The same is true of the body of every boy; if he wants to grow big and strong, to be able to run fast and to jump far, he must have a lot of good physical training.

It is harder for a boy who lives in the city to get all the exercise he needs than for the boy who lives in the country. But there are plenty of opportunities for the city boy who is ambitious to develop and train himself.

The training I mean is not the kind of training that prize fighters go through before their fights or the training that college football players have for their big games.

This training is intended to get the athlete in the best condition possible for the day of the contest; after that he usually becomes lazy, eats and drinks too much, takes no exercise and gets in very poor condition.

The training that a boy wants is simply to go through some good exercise every day, to get so that he can run, jump, play ball and keep his body in good health.

Some boys who go to the gymnasium want to spend all their time in doing "stunts," or in trying to get a big muscle. These are not the most important things.

Let me tell you what you should work for and try to accomplish in the gymnasium: First, to stand straight, carry your head and chest high; second, to develop your chest and strengthen your back; and third, to learn to handle your body on your legs and with your arms.

Look at the men on the street the next time you go out and see how many of them stoop over like old men; see how awkward they are in getting on or off car; and if they were caught in a fire many of them could not even hang on a rope and go down hand over hand, much less climb a rope or vault a fence.

The trouble with most of these men is that they did not learn to do these things while they were boys.

No boy of ten or twelve should be satisfied until he can stand straight all the time, chin himself five times, jump as far as he can step in two strides, jump as high as the top of his pantaloons, vault as high as his breast bone, climb a rope three times as high as himself and leap frog over a street hydrant.

Some boys may think that it is necessary to have a fine gymnasium, a regular athletic field and an instructor to learn these things; but they are not necessary; nearly all these things can be practised in the school yard, in the street, on some vacant lot, or better, in some regular playground.

I know of a boy who made up his mind when he was twelve years old that he would become a good athlete.

He got a twelve-pound stone and practiced shot-putting in his back yard every morning and evening, so that later when he went to college he was the best shotputter there, and not only won all the contests in his own college but also in the intercollegiate championship.

Every boy is not built for shot-putting, and every boy will not go to college, but it ought to be the ambition of every one to make the most of himself by improving what opportunities he has for physical development. It is well to remember that we are not all alike, and that some boys can do much more than others.

No amount of practice will make it possible for every boy to run one hundred yards in ten seconds, or to become a National League baseball player, or to put up a one hundred pound dumbbell; but every boy can achieve a certain degree of success, and he ought not to be satisfied unless he accomplishes that much.

Of course there is also danger of overdoing. The boy of ten should not try to do things that a boy of fifteen does; he should take exercise suited to boys of his age, and not continue after he gets very tired.

Exercise is not the only thing necessary to develop the boy into a strong man. Plain food, eaten slowly; very little pie, cake and candy; no tea, coffee, beer or tobacco; plenty of sleep in well-ventilated rooms—all these are necessary to the proper growth and development of every boy.

The boy who does all these things will not only have better chances of growing up to be a big, strong, healthy man, but he will have a good time, have lots of fun and be happy, as long as he carries out the above suggestions.

SOME FAMOUS HYMNS—HOW THEY WERE WRITTEN.

And with the morn those angel faces smile,
Which I have loved long since and lost awhile.

From the first, deservedly popular with people of various creeds, "Lead Kindly Light" has seemed in this country to be fastened to public favour by hooks of steel. It has become the funeral hymn par excellence, used in at least three out of five services.

The outcome of a period of unrest for John Henry Newman, shortly before he entered the Roman Catholic Church, it voiced with exquisite pathos his own longing for light to lead him on. Returning to England from Italy, the ship on which he sailed was becalmed in the Mediterranean after days of violent weather. It was then that he wrote the hymn, not dreaming that it would carry his name down to posterity oblivious of his churchly achievements.

In reviewing hymns of all ages it is interesting to note that a majority of great religious songs have been written in deep depression or glad exultation. That most pathetic outpouring, "Abide With Me," was written by the Rev. Henry Lyte, a lonely curate on the Devonshire coast, while ill with consumption and sinking under the care of his parish. After a touching farewell service with his people, he sought his room, and in a few hours penned the lines beginning:

Abide with me, fast falls the eventide,
The darkness deepens, Lord, with me abide.

Mad, melancholy Cowper, oft distracted with religious fear and doubt, once decided to seek a certain spot and die. But his driver mistook his direction, and failed to find the appointed place. So he returned repentant and dashed off at fever heat:

God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform.

"Dies Irae," most fearsome of all hymns in all languages, was written by Thomas of Celano in a fit of despondency, which enveloped him in apprehension indicated by his opening words: "Day of wrath! Oh, day of mourning!" The "Te Deum," reverting to the other extreme, came suddenly to St. Ambrose as he stood before a Christian altar in Milan with the lately converted St. Augustine. The list might be long continued, but enough has been cited to show that the makers of great religious songs must be fused with the "fire celestial."

M. Dubois, in a paper before the Academy of Sciences, Paris, shows that it is possible, by means of the Roentgen rays, to examine the living oyster without in any way injuring it, and to ascertain whether or not it contains a pearl. If it contains only a tiny pearl the oyster is returned, and is allowed to live until the disease has developed a large pearl.

CURRENT ART NOTES

An exhibition of unusual interest to art students will be held shortly in the new studio of the Woman's Art Association, "Our Handicrafts Shop," 2456 St. Catherine street.

The Art Studens' League, of New York, will send a representative collection of their best work this year, as soon as their own exhibit is over, which takes place on the 12th, 13th and 14th May. The art students of Montreal will no doubt welcome this chance of seeeing the work of an art school of such reputation.

While New York is often the Mecca of the art student, who is not able to go to Paris odirect, it is possible to make the mistake of going too soon. There are now sufficient advantages in Montreal art schools for the student to advance to a certain stage as well here as elsewhere. The recent advice of Mr. Albert Visetti to the music student and to the student of languages, applies just as well in the world of art. Study hard at home, make good use of the best advantages that lie around you, and when you have really mastered something, seek larger fields.

The new home of the W.A.A. is far superior to the old, in point of accommodation, light and appearance every way. An unobtrusive green will be the general tone throughout the two large rooms. One of the latest additions to the Handicrafts department is a velours portiere of a soft shade of blue, with a design upon it in stencil. This comes from a member of the W.A.A. now living in Dauphin, the design being suggested by a water weed growing in the lake there.

The special Paris correspondent of the New York Evening Post devotes more than a column to his impressions of the 14th annual exhibition of the "New Salon." First impression—That painting has become a purely sumptuary art; second—That technical cleverness is increasing; third—That the New Salon of 1904 discloses a full-fledged Cottet school (Charles Cottet, painter of Brittany and the Bretons).

The 37th exhibition of the American Water Colour Society is now going on at the American Art Galleries, New York, and will be open for a fortnight. Mr. Cooper's beautiful sketch of the Basilica square in Quebec is mentioned "as notable for good colour and atmosphere as for interesting architectural detail." The Metropolitan Museum of Art will be open again to the public next week.

The ventenary exhibition of the Royal Society of Painters in Water Colours was recently opened in London.

Paul Adam, the French sculptor, has been commissioned by the Minister of Public Instruction to come to America and study the French influence on American art.

The Empress Eugenie, in compliance with a request addressed to her, has consented to present to the city of Paris, the cradle of the Prince Imperial. This historic souvenir, which the city of Paris gave to the sovereign on the occasion of the birth of her son, is about to find a place in the collection at the carnavalet museum. The cradle of the Prince Imperial is considered a masterpiece of decorative art. It was designed by Baltard, and is in the form of a boat, on the stern of which is an allegorical figure of the city of Paris holding, with uplifted arms, an Imperial crown, which supports the curtains. Four medallions were designed by Hippolyte Flandrin, the chased work is by Froment-Meurice, and the carving by Simart.

The harp of Mary, Queen of Scots, has been bought by the Society of Antiquarians of Scotland for $4,500.

D. W. Stevenson, a well known sculptor, recently died at Edinburgh. Mr. Stevensons' work was largely of a popular character. He did "Highland Mary," for Dunoon, the statue of Tannahill, for Paisley, two colossal statues of Burns—one for Toronto, the other for Leith. He also assisted in the sculptural decoration of the Scottish National Portrait Gallery.

The Illustrated News says, in "Art Notes": The housing of art treasures has always been a problem, and if England has not settled it yet to its satisfaction, America also continues to be on the lookout for new and good ideas. In view of the rebuilding of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, two American architects have come to Europe to take notes. South Kensington will, of course, be visited, and it will be interesting to both friends and critics of our national arrangements to see what designs will finally be adopted by the pilgrims who, in search of plans, will exhaust the resources of St. Petersburg and Florence, Copenhagen and Paris, London and Rome. Climate, of course, comes in as a complication; but in this respect Old and New England can join hands.

The Fall of the Grizzly.

Another distinct type of a zoo rogue is the beast that goes wrong owing to accidental temptation—like "Shaggy," an exceedingly intelligent, tractable Rocky Mountain grizzly, who reverted to savagery and turned man-killer in a twinkling, owing to the unfortunate misstep and fall of his trainer. Shaggy was a big, handsome, gray old fellow, with a jungle-thick coat and a lumbering, awkward gait, and a funny twinkle that made him particularly adaptable for his part of clown in a remarkably trained group of fourteen bears. He had come under the hands of his teacher, when but a helpless cub, had never lost his liking for caresses, and, although the mightiest beast in the collection, was least suspected of being dangerous. Once, when a striped hyena hung to the ankle of his friend, he had run to the rescue, had cut loose right and left with his ponderous forepaws, and had bitten and torn and mangled the ugly beast to death before he could be beaten off. Among his accomplishments were that of turning admirably grotesque somersaults, and the more difficult feat of balancing himself on his hind legs on a three-foot wooden sphere. Not a scratch or a scar had his trainer to show for the years of work he had put in with the bear. And yet, without an instant's warning, this same beast attacked and injured his master so that, when rescued he was semi-demented, and so dreadfully cut and lacerated that the surgeons decided it useless to try to save his life.—McClure's for May.

The Latest and Best Book on Japan.

A Handbook of Modern Japan.

By ERNEST W. CLEMENT.

"One of the most valued, besides fruitful, members of the Asiatic Society of Japan, and with the advantage of over fifteen years' residence in the provinces and capital of the Mikado's Empire, Professor Clement is probably the best fitted to give us not only a handbook of Japan, but THE Handbook. His twenty-one chapters, with appendix and index, abundant bibliography, rich discussion of varied topics, make this the best book-picture of the Japan of 1904. Besides readableness, one has the sense, while enjoying it, to know that it is perfectly trustworthy. A laborious and conscientious student has patiently sifted and tested his facts, and with judicial mind presented them. No subject of importance concerning the Japanese and their country is left without treatment. This is the book for the library and the busy man."—The Outlook, New York.

Special Cable from Our London Correspondent.

London, May 7.—Mr. Chamberlain's presence is perceptibly quickening English politics. When first he returned, his postponement until the autumn of many political speeches caused it to be bruited abroad that he was really a broken man, disheartened by the difficulties of displacing free trade, and physically unable to bear the strain of political campaigning. "Chamberlain is as good as dead," was the comment of his enemies, and even his friends felt depressed. But it has been evident enough this week that Chamberlain is very much alive and that Mr. Chamberlain himself is as peevishly active as ever, though for tactical reasons he leaves the front of the stage clear for Mr. Balfour.

REASON FOR THE HOLIDAY.

Indeed it is safe to say that politics far more than health was the reason of Mr. Chamberlain's two months' absolute divorce from public life. He needed a holiday, certainly, after nine years in harness, but even more did he desire to remove from the political arena that one element, namely, himself, which split Unionism asunder, and placed the Ministry of his ally, Mr. Balfour, and his son, Austin, in daily peril of dissolution. Hence the holiday. With Mr. Chamberlain absent, other problems, such as the Chinese labour question, education, the budget, and even Home Rule supplanted the fiscal question in the public thought, and brought the great body of Ministerialists into line again.

ITS RESULTS.

Yesterday, Mr. Balfour, in addressing the Primrose League, was able to laugh complacently over recent dissolution fears. Mr. Chamberlain's holiday saved the Ministry. Now that he has come back he means business. Already three-fourths of the Minsterialists are Chamberlainites, who are supporting Mr. Balfour as a temporary periment, as, indeed, does Mr. Chamberlain himself. The hesitating one-fourth will receive no quarter. Free Traders, Mr. Chamberlain knows, Radicals he knows, but he tells his friends that he will neither know nor make terms with free food unionists.

He and his powerful electoral organization will fight them unsparingly. In his own words, he has set out to purge the Unionist party, that is to rid it of its Winston Churchills, its Hugh Cecils, its Ritchies, and even its Devonshires. It is a big undertaking, but one in which Mr. Balfour will, when the time comes, co-operate, and if the result be success Mr. Balfour and not Mr. Chamberlain, will be Prime Minister, that is quite settled.

J. J. HILL GIVES $1,500,000 TO CATHOLIC CHURCH.

It Will Go Towards the Construction of An Immense Cathedral in St. Paul.

Special to the Montreal Star.

St. Paul, May 7.—President James J. Hill, of the Great Northern Railway, will supplement his many gifts to the Roman Catholic Church by a donation of $1,500,000 given jointly by himself and Mrs. Hill toward the erection of a new $3,000,000 Cathedral in which two of the wealthiest of St. Paul's parishes will join. This announcement was made yesterday by members of the clergy. The remaining $1,500,000 will be subscribed by wealthy citizens. The cathedral will be the most costly edifice in the West and will crown the height on St. Anthony hill, in the centre of the aristocratic residence district. It will be only a few hundred yards from President Hill's immense palace. Its construction will begin this summer.

GREAT GROWTH OF CANADA'S WEST

Mr. William Whyte Tells of His Recent Inspection Tour.

WONDERFUL WINNIPEG

It Will Be the Largest City of Canada—Immigration Booming—Farmers Seeding.

"I may not live to see it, but within the next quarter of a century Winnipeg will be one of the largest cities in the Dominion, possibly larger than Montreal."

This remark was made this morning at the Windsor Hotel by Mr. William Whyte, the second vice-president of the C.P.R. Mr. Whyte has just returned from a very extensive trip throughout the North-West Territories and British Columbia, during the course of which he visited almost every section of the country touched by the company's system. He is therefore naturally in a good position to speak of the present conditions and future prospects.

"My reasons for this belief," continued Mr. Whyte, "are that Winnipeg occupies a position on the very threshold of what is destined to be the greatest wheat bearing country in the world. Already the centre of wheat growing is moving rapidly north and west; and within the time I have indicated, the United States, which now exports annually hundreds of millions of bushels of wheat, will not have a single bushel for export. When that time comes, Canada will be found to have a surplus sufficient to provide the entire British Empire with wheat.

"Naturally that condition will have its reflection in the prosperity of the chief city of the district. Winnipeg will occupy the same position in its relation to the Canadian West that Chicago now occupies as regards the American West. Its chief drawback at the present time, notwithstanding the fact that within the past few years it has made remarkable strides, is in the comparative absence of manufacturing industries. Power is now very expensive. An improvement in this regard, however, will be noted within the next few years. Already much has been done toward providing the city with cheap water power from the Winnipeg river. This has to be brought sixty miles, but, when fully developed, it will supply the city with all the power requisite, and at the same time cut the rates by one-half."

Mr. Whyte says that the lumber industry in British Columbia is dull at present, chiefly owing to the fact that the Americans, not being able to find a sufficient market on their side of the line, are now exporting largely into the Canadian West. Some of the mills on this side of the line have, as a consequence, been forced to close down their doors. On the contrary, the mining industry is in better condition than it has been for some years. Mr. Whyte visited the St. Eugene mine, at Moyie, which he describes as a particularly fine white lead mine.

At the conclusion of last week, Mr. Whyte affirms, the farmers had seeded twenty per cent. of their land, and to-day he thought fully fifty per cent. of the seeding should be accomplished. If no untoward climatic conditions intervened, he thought the prospects for a crop quite in keeping with recent years should be anticipated.

Mr. Whyte is delighted with the manner in which the immigration business has been stimulated this spring. Not alone are the immigrants coming in thousands from Europe, but every day large numbers cross the line from the United States. "These latter," he remarked, "have all got money, and along with them they are bringing hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of cattle."

Prior to returning to Winnipeg, Mr. Whyte will award the contract for the work upon the terminals at Winnipeg. Those for the station, hotel, subway and freight shed. The subway under Main street, he says, is urgently needed, and must be constructed at once.

Th C. P. R. has rebuilt over eighty miles of its track in the vicinity of Moose Jaw, in an endeavour to reduce the grades, which object has been satisfactorily accomplished. The grade has been reduced from one per cent. to four tenths of one per cent. The work of construction on the branch lines is progressing satisfactorily.

FENG WANG CHENG HAS BEEN TAKEN

Despatch From Seoul Indicates a Japanese Success.

WORD FROM PORT ARTHUR

The Russians are Called Upon to Display Vigilance and Great Caution.

Seoul, May 7.—Fighting has been reported near Feng Wang Cheng, but neither Japanese nor Russian advices have announced a decisive engagement there. It is unlikely, therefore, that the rumour current at Antung that the Japanese have captured the place is correct.

FROM PORT ARTHUR.

Port Arthur, May 6.—(Delayed in transmission)—Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel has issued an order to the troops of his command as follows:—

"On April 30 and May 1, the enemy crossed the Yalu river in great force and our troops fell back to positions which had been previously selected."

"Yesterday the enemy effected an important landing on the Liao Tung peninsula, south of Pitsewo, and in the vicinity of King Chow Bay. Now our work is beginning. Naturally, the enemy will destroy railway communication and endeavour to drive our troops back to Port Arthur, and besiege this fortress, Russia's bulwark in the Far East. We will defend it until the arrival of the troops which are coming to relieve us.

"I consider it my duty to call upon you to display unceasing vigilance and caution, and you must be ready at all times to demean yourselves towards your general with the dignity and order beseeming the glorious troops of Russia. No matter what happens, you must not lose your heads, but remember that everything is possible in war and that we shall be able with God's help to cope with the arduous task imposed upon us."

MORNING FIRE IN TENEMENT

Many Families Rush Into the Street in Night Attire.

SEVERAL NARROW ESCAPES

Building Almost Entirely Consumed—Entire City Fire Force Engaged in Fighting Flames.

Members of eight or ten families were rudely awakened from their sleep, at 4 o'clock this morning, by the cry of fire, and in a few moments they were rushing pell mell into the street.

The fire originated in the rear of 604 Sanguinet street. This is part of a brick and wooden tenement building, which consists of about eight houses in all. It was of such material inside that, once the fire got a fair start it went from end to end in almost less time than it takes to write the story.

The fire was discovered by a passer-by, who smashed in a door and shouted that the place was on fire. The cry was heard; and, from house to house and room to room, men and women ran, in their wild endeavour to waken those who had not heard the first call.

When the eastern section of the brigade arrived, it was seen that there was little or no chance for the building; and attention was given to saving the lives of the inmates. Narrow escapes were many; but, so far, no casualties of any kind have been reported. The greatest trouble was in getting the smaller children from the houses.

When they were awakened, the smoke was dense, and they were unable to find their way to the exits. The elderly people were, however in little danger, and the little ones were carried to safety.

Many of the firemen were hit by falling glass, but, with the exception of small cuts, they were not hurt.

The fire started in the house occupied by Joseph Lanthier, and it is supposed to have originated from hot ashes having been placed too near the wooden portion of the house.

All the families lost part of their belongings and there is not much personal insurance, though the building is said to be fully covered. The loss will be in the neighbourhood of $5,000; but this does not by any means tell of the distress and suffering which will face those who, a few hours ago had comfortable homes and who, but for the kindness of neighbours, are now without a place to shelter them.

A quaint old advertisement of the year 1754 reads as follows: "March 19, 1754, died in Glamorganshire, of mere old age and a gradual decay of nature, at seventeen years and two months, Hopkins Hopkins, the little Welshman, lately shown in London. He never weighed more than seventeen pounds, but for three years past no more than twelve. The parents have still six children left, all of whom no way differ from other children, except one girl of twelve years of age, who weighs only eighteen pounds, and bears upon her most of the marks of old age, and in all respects resembles her brother when at that age."

A case interesting to all theatregoers was decided the other day at Paris. The Marquis de Pothuan sued the management of the Porte St. Martin Theatre for the value of a fur-lined coat he left in the theatre cloak room in February, which had mysteriously disappeared when he went to claim it after the performance. The court held the theatre responsible and awarded the Marquis de Pothuan $60.

FRAE AULD SCOTIA

Public Bodies Discuss the Sanctity o' the Sabbath.

TWA NEW SCOTTISH BOOKS

A Romantic Waddin'—A Relic o' Coachin' Days—Money in the Rocks.

(Frae oor ain Correspondent.)

Glasgow, April 27. — There has been a fair spate o' Sabbatarianism this week, an' I hardly ken where to begin speakin' o' it. But suppose I begin nearest hame. Glasga Town Council had afore them the usual half-yearly motion—a motion canna come up mair than aince a half year—on the question o' openin' the museums an' art galleries on Sunday. This motion is aye lost, but them responsible for it trot it oot again as soon as they can. They deserve to gain, as they will gain some day. In the meantime oor auld freend, the thin edge of the wedge, or the way to a Continental Sunday, blocks the path o' progress (wha said I coulda write English ?), an the motion this week was lost by 32 votes to 9. The queer thing is that this was in a body that runs Sunday cars—for profit—an' that pretends to be farther advanced than maist corporations, while a' the time maist ither corporations hae their art galleries an' museums open on seven days o' the week. Even Edinburg isna so far back as we are in this respect.

Then, to look a bit farther afield, Dundee has made a law that naebody may look at the stars on Sunday through a municipal telescope which the Town Council keep for the amusement an' edification o' the citizens. The Aberdeen folk are considerin' the question o' openin' their Public Library on Sunday, but they are to think a lot afore they commit themsel's. The Synod o' Stirling an' Perth hae had a report presented to them wi' the headin' "Doubt, Drink and the Devil," an' ane o' the items is a grievous story frae Breadalbane o' the way croquet an' tennis are played on Sunday. An', as if al this wasna plenty. Somebody has written to the Archbishop o' Canterbury askin' what he thinks o' the Prime Minister playin' golf—maistly at North Berwick—on Sundays. The Archbishop made things still waur by the sensible answer that this was a thing ilka man should be left to settle for himsel'; for noo the Sabbatarians are doon on him for no comin' doon heavy on the Prime Minister. It's a queer warl', this, an' nae mistake.

A man wha kens I tak an interest in ships has made me a present o' a new book that to me reads like a first-class story. It's a life o' Robert Napier, the famous Clyde engineer an' shipbuilder, the man wha, mair than any ither man, fitted the steam engine for use in ships, an' showed the warl' that the Clyde was the place that could turn oot the best o' ships. He had his ain troubles in these early days, what wi' the want o' faith on the part o' shipowners in his new ideas, the difficulty o' makin' a profit on boats o 'a kind ne'er built afore, an' the dourness o' the Government in the idea that naethin' good could come frae north o' the Tweed, an' that therefore they should get their warships built in England. But he got ower his troubles an' lived to see his ships on ilka ocean, an' in nearly ilka navy. Robert Napier began buildin' ships in 1823, an' finished in 1876, an' in a' he turned oot 400 separate jobs, either ships an' engines, or engines alone, beginnin' wi' auld-fashioned wooden ships an' windin' up wi' first class steel steamers an' warships. Nae wonder his name is an object o' reverence amang Clyde shipbuilders even to this day.

Anither new book, but o' a different kind cam oot last week. This is a second lot o' "Wee Macgreegor," the laddie wha made sic a name for himsel, a year or twa syne. The second lot are done up in the same way as the first—in a wee book handy for the pocket—an' though the stories are a' new the men an' women an' bairns in them are maistly the same. Only, Wee Macgreegor himsel' has grown a bit bigger an' he is mair inquisitive than ever, an' wants to ken "whit way ever so many things are as they are. Wee Macgreegor is supposed to be the real Glasgow street laddie, though I've ne'er met ane sae clever, but whether or no the book is ane for a'body what likes to read Glasgow Scots, the Scots o' the Gallowgate an' the Saltmarket; an' to hae touches o' human nature put into the words o' bairns an' the lives o' common workin' folk.

There are still wee bits o' romance left, in spite o' books an' trains an' telegraphs, an' the idea that to get on in the warl' is the chief end o' man. Lady Constance Mackenzie has been an' gone an' got married on a day's notice, an' withoot as muckle as lettin' her freens get time to come an' help in the ceremony. She had the cries in at the Parish Kirk o' Kilmuir on Sunday week, an' on Tuesday she was married in the Episcopal Kirk o' Tain to Sir Edward Austin Stewart Richardson, Bart., o' Pitfour, Perthshire. Lady Constance is a sister o' the Countess o' Cromartie—the only countess in Auld Scotia, that hasna the title frae her man—an' a niece o' the Duke o' Sutherland. She has aye been a bit cheery, an' careless o' what society thocht o' her, so that her way o' gettin' married isna muckle o' a surprise. She is only 23, but she drives motors an' horses, rides like a cowboy, plays the pipes, wears a kilt o' Mackenzie tartan, has medals for swimmin', plays polo, shoots, fishes, has toured a' roond the world, explored so far in Somaliland that the military authorities wadna let her farther, an' she was in India at the Delhi Durbar as the guest o' Lord an' Lady Curzon. It's a wonder she did sic a commonplace thing as get married.

The new Licensin' Courts has done awa' wi' ane o' the relics o' the auld coachin' days, that but few rent was still in existence. Lots o' the public-houses in Perthshire were entitled, when there were not trains, an' the coaches started early frae the villages on their way frae Edinburgh to Inverness, to open their doors at six or seven in the mornin'. When the trains cam naebody thocht o' daein' awa' wi' this special regulation, an' so the thirsty bodies o' Amulree, Kenmore, Fortingall, Kinloch—Rannoch, Whitebridge, an' Weem, hae aye been able to quench their thirst twa 'oors earlier than the rest o' the country. Noo the Licensin' Courts hae discovered an' done awa' wi' this remnant o' a far back past, an' the villages will hae to be content wi' an eight o'clock openin' like ither places.

Perth taks itsel' ower seriously. Its Lord Provost was at the Convention o' Burghs, an' the Lord Provost o' Edinburgh, wha was in the chair asked the Provost o' Hamilton to keep order for him while he went awa' for an 'oor or so on ither business. This, says Perth, was an insult to it, as its Lord Provost ranks next to the Lord Provost o' Edinburgh. It demanded an apology frae the Convention, but the Convention said it could elevt ony chairman it liked. So Perth will just hae to swallow its dignity the best way it can. Onyway the chairmanship o' the Convention o' Burghs isna muckle o' an honour. The Convention meets ilka year an' passes lots o' resolutions on public questions, but its o' nae public importance. It may hae been important aince, but like the early drinken' 'oors at Hielan' public-hooses, its day o' usefullness is past.

A big new steamer was launched at at Govan last week for the carryin' o' fruit, maistly bananas, frae Jamaica, an' there was a lot o' talk aboot the linkin' o' the West Indies to the hame country in the bonds o' trade. At the same time, it was admitted that as yet the fruit trade wi' Jamaica isna payin' its way. The Elder-Dempster line, o' Liverpool, bargained wi' Mr. Chamberlain when he was Colonial Secretary, to put on five boats, an' they wad get so much frae the Government. But they took the job ower cheap, thinkin' the trade wad grow so fast that they wad soon be makin' a profit. Instead o' that, although they hae proved that fruit frae Jamaica can be put fresh on the markets o' London an' a' the toons in the country, they see noo that a "direct line" o' steamers to Jamaica needs mair than fruit to mak it pay. Its only hope is in the revival o' the sugar industry, that was killed by the bad bounty system that has noo been done awa' wi'. What Jamaica wants, said the speakers at the launch, is men wi' capital to put into its sugar trade.

Edinburgh isna showin' muckle enthusiasm as yet ower the idea o' gettin' up a big exhibition in the West Meadows an' Bruntsfield Links. Instead o' that the Town Council are gettin' petitions askin' them no to gie the Meadows an' Links for any sic purpose. The petitioners say that the Meadows is the only park in reach o' the bulk o' city cricketers, an' if there's an exhibition in it, there winna be cricket for years, an' the clubs will hae to be broken up. At Bruntsfield Links there's a golf course, that wad be spoiled, an' why should the parks be torn up for years an' the cricketers an' golfers stopped frae playin', simply to mak room for a big show. These are the petitioners' sentiments. What are the sentiments o' the Town Council, we'll likely hear at their next meetin'.

The Auld Kirk reports that its income in 1903 was £517,537, which is less by £1,053 than that o' 1902. The biggest item in the income was £88,823 frae the Presbytery o' Glasgow, an' the next £76,882 frae the Presbytery o' Edinburgh. So, in spite o' a' the competition amang the Kirks, the Auld original kirk manages to haud its ain. For £1,053 isna muckle o' a doon come,

Lord Lieutenant's Golf Caddy Gets in Trouble at St. Andrew's.

WORKING OF THE LAND ACT

Purchase of Holdings Not Proceeding as Smoothly as Could Be Wished.

From the Special Correspondent in Dublin of the Montreal Star.

The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, who has lately returned from enjoying a week's golfing in Scotland, seems to have got Andrew Kirkaldy, the well known professional into trouble at St. Andrew's Kirkaldy, was summoned before the St. Andrew's bench of magistrates to answer a charge of having acted as "caddie" to Lord Dudley, without wearing a badge or holding a licence, which is a contravention of the by-laws of St. Andrew's Links. Kirkaldy pleaded not guilty, and as it could not be proved that for accompanying the Viceroy and carrying his clubs he had received any money payment, the case was dismissed. Perhaps it was all just an advertisemnt for the case was dismissed. Perhaps it was all just an advertisement for Kirkaldy, who, however, should hardly require one.

The purchase of holdings under the Land Act is not working smoothly everywhere. On the estates of Colonel Longfield, at Middleton, Co. Cork, the sub-sheriff, assisted by a large force of police made seizures of a number of cattle, etc., belonging to tenants of the farms. The tenants would not agree to the landlord's terms, and he, in turn refused the abatement of rent demanded by them. Col. Longfield—who is an officer in the Life Guards—obtained a judgment against the tenants, and it is in accordance with this that the seizures were made. Amongst the tenants, whose goods were seized, was Captain Donelan, member for East Cork, and whip for the Irish party.

The Irish contingent for the St. Louis Exhibition left Queenstown for New York, in the Cunard R. M. steamer Etruria on Sunday. The contingent consisted of all sorts and conditions of men and women. All the Irish industries such as carpet weaving, lace making, etc., etc., were represented, as well as a large party of singers, dancers and musicians. "Ireland's Own" reed band, some forty strong, formed part of the contingent. The Irish Pavilion, which was so much admired at the late Glasgow exhibition in being reproduced at the St. Louis Exhibition, and the sales section of the Irish exhibits will be located therein. Altogether old Ireland should have a real good show at St. Louis.

The drama of "The Last Irish King," which has lately been played in Dublin, has raised a discussion as to who was the last sovereign of Erin. The author of the drama, Mr. T. O. Russell, lays down certain facts known to be historically correct, on which he lays his grounds for claiming the proud title for Art MacMurrough. He says that Richard II. brought armies to Ireland in 1394 and in 1396-97. MacMurrough took New Ross in 1394, and it was then, with the exception of Dublin, the most important and most strongly fortified town in the country. Roger Mortimer, King Richard's heir, was defeated and killed at the battle of Kenlis, in the Co. Kilkenny, in 1398, and John of Lancaster, son of Henry IV., was defeated and wounded at the battle of Kilmainham, near Dublin, in 1405. Art MacMurrough lived in New Ross until his death, in 1417, holding his title of King of Ireland to the last.

The Dublin Postal Telegraph staff are up in arms against the arrangements which are being made by the Department to bring over a staff of English telegraphists to deal with the special work in connection with the approaching visit of the King to Ireland. A meeting has been held protesting against such action as a slight to Irish telegraphists, who hold that they are quite competent to handle any extra work, if paid for it. All the same there are many people who think it is wise to bring over extra hands as it has before been proved that when the real press of work came on the Irish staff was not able to cope with it, the reason being that while there are plenty of "good men and true," there are also a number of "inefficients" and these are found to break down hopelessly when the crush comes. The dual-working system has been a complete failure in Ireland.

At the Limerick Quarter Sessions last week Judge Adams took a very commonsense view of a case, in which a farmer had the grazing of Anglesborough mountain for sheep, and the sporting tenant sued him for damaging his sport by burning the heather. This is an old cause of strife between farmers interested in the grazing and those interested in the game. It has never been clearly defined where the burning should begin and end, although the time for carrying it on has been definitely set down. The plaintiff held that the work was not skilfully done, whereas the defendant said it was done in the interests of good husbandry, and with a view to improving the grazing for the sheep. Judge Adams, after hearing the evidence, took the latter view, holding that the defendant was bound to respect the game rights within reasonable limits, but on the other hand the land had been let to him as a sheep farm, and he was justified in doing anything to it that was in line with good husbandry, so he dismissed the action.

A great deal of agitation is at present being made over the decline of flax cultivation in Ireland, and all sorts of projects are being put forward with a view to reviving what was once a most profitable Irish industry. But the main question is: Is flax growing profitable? It would appear that Ireland is not the only part of the world where farmers are questioning the wisdom of extensively cultivating this crop. A Chicago agricultural paper lately had an article headed, "Flax Raising Unprofitable," which runs as follows: "North Western farmers who have been giving a larger acreage to flax are greatly dissatisfied with the returns, as well they may be, for prices have ruled 50 per cent. or more lower than a few years ago. The latest reports from the North-West are that farmers are selling their seed flax and have decided to greatly reduce their flax acreage next spring. The reduction, it is said, will be fully 75 per cent. This state of things has been very largely brought about by the vast increase in the products of flax in Argentina in recent years, and late estimates of the Argentine flax crop for 1903 centred round 40,000,000 bushels, compared with 30,000,000 in 1902, 14,000,000 in 1901, and 9,000,000 in 1899."

The Spring Show of the Royal Dublin Society, which has been going on this week, has been a most successful one in every way, the weather being favourable, and the show of cattle one of the finest ever seen in Dublin. The Shorthorns, in particular, were exceptionally good, and some well-known exhibitors were heard to declare that a better lot could not be seen at any of the English Shows. His Majesty the King was an exhibitor and carried off first honours for a nice heifer in the yearling Shorthorn class, but only got second in the two-year-old heifer class (Shorthorns). The Saxon invaders were very strong, and carried off a lot of prizes. No fewer than seven of the nine firsts offered for Shorthorns got across the channel. To show how much is thought of the Dublin Spring Show, one prominent English breeder gave 600 guineas for a beast in England and brought him over here to "sweep the board," as it turned out, he had a good deal of difficulty to secure a third, so it can be understood the excellence of the competitors. The chief honours in the cattle section went to Scotland, as Mr. Robert Taylor, of Pitlivie Farm, Carnonstic, N.B., not only took in his class, but also secured the Chaloner Plate of £155 as best Shorthorn bull in the Show, and the Leinster Cup of £50 as heading a group of Shorthorn cows and heifers. Mr. Leon, of Betchley Park, Buckingham, England, was the most successful English exhibitor, and Mr. B. F. Barton the most successful Irish exhibitor. The show of implements and machinery was a magnificent one, the great English and Scotch firms going to immense expense in fitting up stands, etc., showing that Ireland is evidently expected to do a great deal agriculturally, under the new Land Act.

The Duke of Connaught greatly to the regret of every one, will take his final departure from Dublin on the evening of Saturday, April 30th, after the King and Queen leave for Kilkenny. The Duke goes straight to London, and will take up his duties at the War Office on the 2nd May. Lord Grenfell coming here to replace him. The Duchess and the Princesses Margaret and Patricia, do not leave Ireland with the Duke, as they go down to Kilkenny Castle, as the guests of Lord and Lady Ormande, and then on to Lismore Castle, as the guests of the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, at both of which places the King and Queen will pay visits.

Admiral O'Dwyer, an Irishman, has lately been mentioned as having been in command of the Russian fleet in 1780. Another Irishman, Daniel O'Cooney, a native of Clare, was commander of the Spanish navy, at Ferrol. There is at present in use in the parish Church of Liscannor, Co. Clare, a silver chalice presented to his native parish by this brilliant naval commander, whose name is given as Lord Daniel O'Kuoney, with the date 1752, and he himself was appointed commandant-general of this chief naval centre of Spain. Irishmen have had distinguished careers in continental armies, but it is not generally known that they have distinguished themselves as sailors, too.

The Great Southern and Western Railway, of Ireland, has made a new departure in striking special rates for the conveyance of new potatoes for distant parts of the country to Dublin and Liverpool markets. It is thought that these new rates will encourage farmers to send on their potatoes, and that in a short time a big trade will spring up in this way. The potatoes must be packed in barrels, casks, or hampers, and the charges levied will be much below what has heretofore been imposed. To the Department of Agriculture must be given the credit of having brought about this much-needed reform.

Though Ireland gets the name of being a very "drunken" country, the returns in connection with spirit and beer duties show that far more intoxicating liquors must be consumed in Great Britain. During the year ending 30th September last, the spirit duties for the three kingdoms were as follows: England, £852,178; Scotland, £117,173; Ireland, £95,870. Beer duties were: England, £353,881; Scotland, £48,548; Ireland, £39,721.

Canadians at St. Louis.

Mr. Felix S. S. Johnston, U. S. Commercial Agent at Stanbridge, Quebec, has just received a letter from Mr. David R. Francis, president of the St. Louis Exposition, thanking him for his efforts to arouse the interest of the people of Quebec and pointing out that a visit of Canadian manufacturers and farmers as well as of the province of Quebec Press Association during the world's press week will be specially appreciated and arranged for.

There are 296 tramway undertakings in the United Kingdom, which have cost $200,000,000. Of this number 142 are owned by municipalities and 154 by private companies. The municipal undertakings have more mileage and cost about $120,000,000. the private over $80,000,000. The total length of both is over 1,700 miles. Some of the municipal tramways make handsome profits. During the current year, it is estimated, Nottingham will clear $90,000 from this source, Liverpool $123,000, Leeds, $300,000, and Manchester $250,000.—Consular Report.

THE POOR DYSPEPTIC.

Is the Most Miserable of Mortals—Only Similar Sufferers Can Understand His Hours of Agony.

There is no mortal more miserable than the poor dyspeptic. He is never healthy, never happy—always ailing, always out of sorts. Every mouthful of food brings hours of distress—every moment of the day is spoiled and soured.

If you are a dyspeptic, you know the signs, the coated tongue, the dull headaches, the heartburn, the biliousness, the persistent torment after meals, the hopeless despondency. Any one of these signs points to indigestion. The one sure cure for indigestion is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make new blood—that's the whole secret. Through the blood they will brace up your strength, waken your liver and set your stomach right. If you ask your neighbors you will find proof of this right at your own home. Mr. Charles Wood, Mars, Ont., one of the thousands of dyspeptics cured by the use of these pills, says:—"For upwards of twelve years I was a great sufferer from indigestion and nervousness. Everything I ate tortured me. I doctored almost continuously, and used almost everything recommended for this trouble, but never got more than temporary relief until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Words cannot express the good these pills have done me. I am in better health than I have enjoyed in years before, and I have proved that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure when other medicines fail."

Bad blood is the mother of fifty diseases, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure them all, because they convert bad blood into good, rich, red blood, without which there can be neither health nor strength. Don't be persuaded to try something else—take nothing but the genuine Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent post paid at 50c. a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

OUR LONDON LETTER

Football Brings Its Tens of Thousands to Cup Matches in London.

SIR CHAS. HIBBERT TUPPER

His Address Before the Canada Club on Primrose Day—The Fiscal Discussion.

From the Special Correspondent Resident in London.

London, April 23. — The more one lives in London the more one realises what a wonderful and delightful place it is. Take this morning as an illustration. It opened heavily so far as the weather is concerned. After a fortnight of bright spring weather such as makes England a land of beauty, we were yesterday deluged with rain until the streets seemed like tributaries of the Thames, and this morning there seemed only one class of beings who revelled in the weather and those were the thrushes and blackbirds in search of early worms. But coming down to the city from the suburbs one soon realised that dull skies were really no obstacle whatever to a full London life. Alighting at my London station it at once became clear that something was astir. There were unusual groups of young fellows strolling along, most of them well set up, and nearly every one of them wearing some special kind of favour. "Play up Trotter" seemed the favourite legend upon the breasts of these youths. I had not the remotest notion who the "Trotters" were and how they were to play up," but walking on towards the heart of the city I met bus load after bus load of youths of the same type. They also had their legends and each bus load had its special designation. "Mr. Musgrove's party," and so on. It was really time to make inquiries, and I soon found that these young fellows had come up in their thousands from all parts of Lancashire and the Midlands and that the special object of their visit was to see the Association Football Cup tie played out at the Crystal Palace this afternoon, between the Manchester City and Bolton clubs, and the Bolton men were the "Trotters." They had for the most part travelled all night, yet here they were under the dull London sky as bright and cheerful as the heart of the greatest optimist could desire. London in truth was full of them. All along the Embankment, that magnificent Thames boulevard with its splendid blocks of new buildings on the one side of the Thames and its reminiscences of dear and dirty old London on the other side, was literally crowded with them and when I reached the House of Commons and Westminster Abbey there they were also in large bevies. A few women were there also and their favours were even more pronounced than those of the men. They were crowding into Westminster Abbey for the morning service — pretty good evidence this that these football fighters of the north also have their serious side or at all events their interest in the historical aspects of the metropolis of the Empire. Taken altogether it was a pleasant sight, so pleasing that even King Sun himself found it irresistible. By eleven o'clock out he came in all his glory and everybody set himself and herself to spend a happy day.

SIR HIBBERT TUPPER.

Sir Hibbert Tupper made an excellent impression at this week's gathering of the Canada Club. It was an ordinary meeting of the club, graced as usual by a dinner such as is not to be enjoyed in the whole of London outside the Mansion House, except at these monthly meetings of the premier Anglo-Canadian Association. The Hon. J. H. Turner, the venerable looking Agent-General of British Columbia, was in the chair, and among the guests, besides Sir Hibbert Tupper, was the Bishop of Quebec. Of course, Mr. Turner as a good British Columbian had much to say in his speeches from the chair about the tremendous resources and possibilities of his Pacific province, and he paid Sir Hibbert Tupper a pretty compliment upon his discernment in himself taking his talents to the Western end of Canada for their full employment. It was the evening of April 19th, and April 19th as all the world ought by this time to know, is Primrose Day. Now, whatever we may think of Lord Beaconsfield's services to the British Empire the primrose is beyond all doubt a beautiful flower. Did not Wordsworth long ago sing its praises? And even if we do not love the memory of Lord Beaconsfield, and even though we may have grave doubts whether he cared a cent about the primrose, except as a seasoning for his salads, we can all love the primrose and take April 19th as a convenient day on which to do honour to this king of spring flowers. The Canada Club was forcibly reminded of this day by the fact that Sir Hibbert Tupper was himself wearing a bunch of primroses in his buttonhole.

A TALE FROM THE WEST.

Sir Hibbert spoke well and had a good reception. He had nothing too good, he said, to tell of the province of British Columbia, of which Mr. Turner was so justly proud, but being himself a Nova Scotian he also felt a sense of pride in his province when he looked to the right of him and looked to the left of him and everywhere found that Nova Scotians were to the fore in assisting in the development of the vast resources of the Dominion. But he was glad to say that Britishers in all parts of Canada were mingling freely, with one common object, with one common aim—the consolidation of British interests throughout the British Empire. With regard to the fact that they were meeting on Primrose Day, he reminded his hearers that so far back as 1879 Disraeli had recognized the great potentialities of the British Empire, and in a speech at Aylesbury he had referred to the wheat growing capabilities of North-West Canada. There were few, he added, who realized the potentialities of the Dominion so far as Canada was concerned. The wheat growing area was enormous, and there was no doubt that the future in store for them would be one of unexampled prosperity. "Our men are of the best breed, 6,000,000 only though we be. Yet they have a greater trade in their hands than any other 6,000,000 in the history of the world. Though we have in times past suffered from the neglect of the Home Government, we have never faltered in the idea of promoting British interests in that splendid part of the North American Continent."

THE FISCAL FIGHT.

Of course Sir Hibbert Tupper could not be expected to sit down without some reference to the fiscal problem, about which half England is contending with the other half. "We can make all the money we wish and develop our lands," he said, "whatever policy prevails in the Mother Country. The keen interest in Canada is this. We have no doubt for a moment that under any circumstances the 6,000,000 people of the Dominion will stand or fall with you. Prosperity cannot be kept from us. We must have a large number of settlers in the next few years. Our chief anxiety is that we should have something to control the millions that are to come to us from foreign lands. Sentiment binds us to the Mother Land with the strongest possible ties, but we want something to tell these millions from foreign lands that we have commercial as well as sentimental advantages. Our hope is that some scheme will be devised by British statesmen that will induce the outpouring of this country to go to our land, and convince them that in this continent there will be greater advantages than in any other land." This was as far as the ex-Canadian Minister was inclined to go, though in private conversation, and for the matter of that in his conversation with journalists, he does not attempt to hide his strong conviction that Mr. Chamberlain is the only British statesman who has yet gripped the great Imperial problem. Taken altogether, it was one of the many pleasant and profitable evenings which the Canada Club is in the habit of providing.

Speculation as to what Charles M. Schwab intends to do with his palatial mansion at Seventy-fourth street and Riverside drive after it is finished is increased by the intimation conveyed in a letter from Paris that he intends to have a grand "opening," just like the "opening" of a public hall, with the difference that champagne will be supplied from silver buckets instead of from bottles. The nearer the massive pile approaches completion the more marvellous its possibilities for entertainment appear. The Venetian courtyard with its white marble coping, is almost ready for the gardener, and it is quite likely that by June the flower scheme will be under way. There is a vast amount of work yet to be done, however, before the interior decorations can be begun. When the house is ready for occupancy it will be the most gorgeous in architecture on the American continent.

To show what is the actual cost of cooking with gas, the bills of 262 customers have been taken from the books of one of the Gas Companies in New York. The cases were widely scattered, mostly in apartments renting from $35 to $50 per month. The average cost of fuel for cooking was only $1.96 per month. These figures tell their own story of economy, to say nothing of comfort and convenience.

Life along the Water Front

There are practically only two seasons in the year for a large proportion of the people who inhabit the city of Montreal. One is the season when the ships swing up from the sea and all is busy along the water front; the other is that of the long drear winter when old St. Lawrence is manacled with icy chains with her broad bosom covered:

"With a coat of mail that need not fear,
The glittering point of many a spear."

Winter has its attractions.

When King Frost covers the land and water with his chill hand his sovereignty is supreme. But to the man who loves the mighty river that made Montreal famous there is no question of choice between the two. When the ships of the seven seas cast anchor in her roads, when the merchandize of the world litters her wharves, when her sheds are filled with all sorts and conditions of freight, and the laden teams wind in and out of the dusty piers, then old Ville Marie lifts her head proud in her conscious strength and says to the rest of the world ports, "Here I am. The head of ocean navigation of the Dominion of Canada, standing without a peer."

There is probably no port in the world that can show such startling contrasts within the space of two weeks. Yesterday the ice, to-day the ships; a few days ago the river roads, to-day the broad channel sheer to the sea. Yet a little while and the wharves will be crowded with shipping and the memory of winter will melt away as did the snow 'neath the warm April sun and showers.

A veritable transformation.

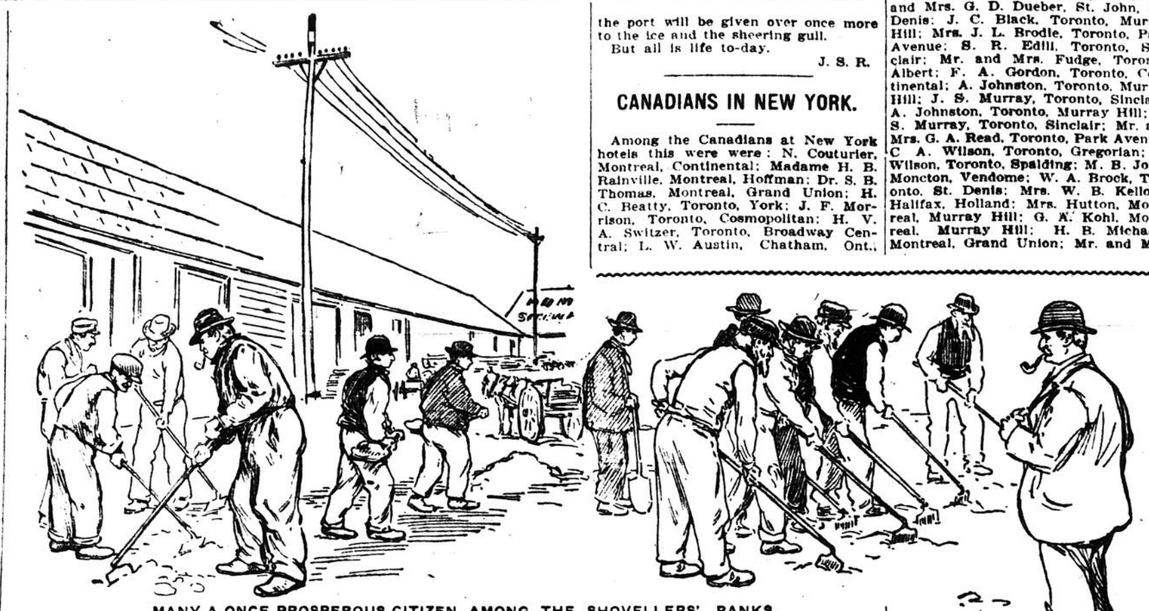
With a stroke of the wizard wand of Canadian summer the whole scene is changed.

Presto! change! and winter with its stagnation is turned into smiling busy summer.

SCENES ON THE WHARVES.

Take a walk along the water front ye Montrealers who like to see life as life is. When the season is at its height the kaleidoscopic changes are so frequent that the picture loses its reality and a dim and blurred impressionistic sketch is all that clings to the mind. To-day, however, everything stands out in bold relief. The new broom of early summer has brushed away the cobwebs of winter, and all is new and fresh. The early days of the shipping season are the best in which to study the life along the water front.

There was once upon a time a city editor who gave his ideas as to the value of "news" by the following illustration. "A dog bites a man, that's a story." "A man bites a dog, that a good story." It is the unusual in life that is a good story, and the unusual sights and scenes along the water front in these early days of the opening of navigation are worth studying. As the season advances they lose their charm, or perchance they are not so noticeable.



MANY A ONCE PROSPEROUS CITIZEN AMONG THE SHOVELLERS' RANKS.

AMONG THE RANKS.

The S.S. Dominion to-day was discharging salt. That in itself is a commonplace fact, an every day proceeding so far as the S.S. Dominion is concerned. But the men who were aiding that discharge were not so commonplace. The crew and longshoremen are well worth studying.

Among their ranks are men drawn from all walks of life, men who have failed to "bite on the bullet," public school men with the traces of their English education still apparent; men whose faces show the reason of their present position, lawyers, wharfrats, clerks, and occasionally a man whose hands are still white and well kept, in spite of the dirt and grime of the work and whose tongue betrays his breeding. True, these are only a few among the great herd of common men whose mission in life was designed to be that of the slinger of freight and who could do nothing else if their lives depended upon the doing. They are the exceptions, it is true, these derelicts on the sea of life, but there they are all the same.

And the variety of accent. The broad Yorkshire and the broader Lancashire, the long "a's" and the ringing "g's" of the man from the Midland shires, the Cockney tongue of the man born within the sound of the bells that made Bow famous; the men of the Thames, from Woolwich and Greenwich, from Gravesend and Sheerness, with their Kentish dialect, which is often confused with that of the Cockney; the men from the Tyne with speech redolent of Newcastle's streets; all blending in one at times inharmonious jangle of sound. These are the men who, many of them, have seen better days, and whose present position is sometimes the result of hard luck, but it must be said more frequently the result of their own indiscretions.

THE REMNANTS OF WINTER.

HUMAN DERELICTS.

In a corner near the revetment wall not far from the pier of the Dominion line a group of old men, bent and hoary with age, were shovelling the dirt and raking the stones into the ruts. The foreman, a bright voluble French-Canadian was perfectly willing to talk. There are stories bound up in these old men, stories of failure and disappointment, of lives shattered by the cruel strokes of adversity; of life-long struggles against relentless fate, a struggle to the bitter end, and, then, at last, to give up and admit defeat. These were some of the stories to be found among the little group. One man patiently shovelling away was at one time many years ago a leading merchant of this city; another was a notary, respected and prosperous. To-day they are doing manual labour for a pittance and glad to get the opportunity.

"But," I said, "do these old men work satisfactorily? Can they do enough?"

The foreman smiled.

"They do more than the young men," he replied. "They work steadily all the time. They are slower, of course, but they keep right at it, and when the day is over they have done just as much, if not more, than the younger men who work for half an hour and then slacken up."

"And their pay?"

"Oh, they get enough to live on, and I don't work them too hard, you know," was the kind reply.

"And after they are too old to do even this?"

The foreman shrugged his shoulders. "Sais pas," he murmured significantly.

But not all the men working along the docks are old.

There are the young and strong the sturdy and quick. In one corner a group of chattering Italians were shovelling granite, in another a gang of men were doing mysterious things to steel rails with instruments that looked like gigantic lobsters' claws, further along men were trying to get rid of the huge piles of ice that had been cast up on the shore when the shove came; all working away with a will, glad to be at it once more after the hibernating season.

The ice shovellers were interesting. They were mostly French-Canadians, and went about their work stolidly as though it were the sum total of their ambition to handle piles of the refuse of winter. Most of them were smoking pipes with evident enjoyment and all of them were working hard. Whether that was due to the long period of winter rest or to the keen eye of the foreman, is a matter of individual belief.

THE INEVITABLE LOUNGER.

And the loungers, the men who appear to do nothing in life but live, they have taken of their summer quarters along the water front. How they exist no one knows. They look well fed and are generally sleeping when they are not smoking. Seated on a convenient pile of lumber in a warm corner they dream the idle hours away or pass learned remarks on the work of others. How they live is a matter of conjecture. The wharves are to them a happy hunting ground where they can sleep without undue interference from the guardians of law and order.

And so the port of Montreal is about her business. The hour of her emancipation from the chains of winter is come. The familiar sights and sounds are once more to be seen and heard. It came with a rush, and for the next few months rush will be the order of the day. Then the days will shorten, the chill winds will come, the ships like frightened birds will flutter away, and the port will be given over once more to the ice and the sheering gull.

But all is life to-day.

Tales of Home-Run Haggerty.

How Club Pudgely Overcame His Chief Defect as a Pitcher and Was Undone Through the Science of Punch Hobbs.

(Copyright by Geo. William Daley.)

"Player managers seem to have the call in the big leagues just at present. A team ain't a team and can't fittingly represent a great city unless its manager is a crack pitcher, or a lively shortstop, or a heavy hitting outfielder. It's dangerous practice. All baseball history goes to show that the less responsibility a man has in a ball game the better he can play. But if he's thinking of catching trains at the end of the game, or wondering whether his best pitcher is drunk or sober, then he ain't worth shucks—as a player, I mean. He may be conserving his employer's interests in looking out for the boozy pitcher, but what does it profit a manager to keep a twirler straight for Thursday's game if he loses Wednesday's himself just through thinking about it?

"If the baseball magnates of the present had the experience I have had with that bifurcated manager-player system they'd never sign a man as manager who wanted to play, or a man as player who had the managerial bug. The places should be separated and distinct.

"There's just one step beyond the manager-captain-player business, and that's to have the big club owners learn the game themselves and break in. Then we'd have Magnate-Manager-Captain-Shortstop John T. Brush fillin' the air at the Polo Grounds full o' dents, or President-Manager-Captain-Left Fielder Garry Herriman pickin' flies off the fence. Whenever I see Manager-Captain-Pitcher Clarke Griffith or Manager-Captain-Left Fielder Joe Kelley mentioned in the papers my mind harks back to the untimely fate of Manager-Captain Riley Pike of the old Alfalfas, and I shed a tear. His story may serve as a warning to ambitious players who want to manage, captain, play and do a general I-am-it act with their nines.

"Riley Pike was a good-looking guy with a strong pitching arm, a fine line of interesting stories about ball games he had played and won, and a consuming desire to be a manager. Mere captain didn't suit; he had to be the complete boss. As a player he was very good, and of the earnest, never-say-die kind. He got the good will of the management for this, and finally, after a season or two, he got his wish and was was manager-captain of the Alfalfas, with full control of the players. But then, when he seemed on the very pinnacle of fame, he found his troubles had only just begun, for all the players except me and Pete Brown and Pinch Hobbs, banded together against him. They were jealous. They threw him down every chance they got, and claimed that his promotion had given him a big head. Maybe it had. I won't deny that. But it was his quick temper that led him into the extraordinary proceedings I am going to tell you of.

"Back to the bench," yelled Riley.

"We were to meet the Cloverdales, who had been carrying everything before 'em, in the first series of the season, and Riley picked himself out to pitch. That, of course, made Reggie Van Rensselaer and Lamp Hymes and Dan Delaney sore, and they went up in the grand stand in citizen's clothes and wouldn't have anything to do with the game.

"Well, I could see that Riley was nervous and irritable at the start, and set the squall signal for the boys. The squalls came quick. The first Cloverdale batter sent a sizzling grounder to Jim Harrison, at third. Jim generally "et" those kind, but he somehow fell down on this, and fumbled it, and then couldn't pick it up, and finally ended by tossing the ball to Riley without even trying for his man at first. The audience groaned and Riley broke out:

"'Why, you good for nothin' lobster!' he yelled, getting as red as a lobster himself, he was so mad. 'That last fall you had on the water waggon must a jolted your nerves. Back to the bench. I'd ruther have a good, lively fence post on third than you. Your place is in an art show, anyhow, you good-lookin' dub.'

"With that he stalked back to the box, leavin' third uncovered, for with our pitchers gone there were no extra men. I called his attention to it, but he waved me off, and I made up my mind to save my breath. On the next ball pitched the fellow that had got first on Jim's error started for second, and Johnny Harrison took my throw. I got it down hard and he made a clean muff.

"'Get back to that bench, too, you buttered fingered quitter,' says Riley to Johnny, running to second. 'No brotherly sympathy acts when I'm runnin' things. I'll go without players ruther than let 'em have the satisfaction of doing me.'

"The next batter, seeing so much territory bare at third, swung around to put it down the alley. He did it all right, but got it a little high and Hennessy came in from left like a racehorse for it. It's a hard catch, that meeting a ball on the dead run about two feet from the ground, and Hennessy dropped it. But he held the batter on first, and the man who had been at second stopped at third.

"But it didn't suit Riley. He piled into Hennessy on all fours.

"'Git out the game, you prayer-singing' tarrier,' says he. 'Nobody's goin' to throw me down twice. Git out!'

"Hennessy gave him some sass about gettin' no credit for a hard effort, but finally joined Johnny and Jimmy on the bench.

"The next batter popped up a high fly right over Pinch Hobbs's head at short. Pinch steadied for it, and just then there was a yell and a crash and

He fell down with eyes rolling.

Riley Pike had bunked into him. The ball went spinnin' over into right field and three men were perched on the bases, nobody out and Pinch was staggerin' around with his hands to his head wonderin' what had hit him.

"'For the love of Gosh, Hobbs,' says Riley, 'don't you know enough not to interfere when I'm after a ball?'

"That was nonsense, for the ball was Pinch's, all right. But Pinch went to the bench, bein' too dizzy to stand.

"'Well, that left Pete Brown on first as the only infielder. Sam Merritt and Billings had spread out to cover three fields, but as Pete Brown is, he couldn't stretch from first to third and cover short' besides.

"Riley put in three fast drops on the fourth man up and sent him to the bench. He struck out the next man in three more balls and got a great hand. The audience recognized that Riley was attempting an unusual feat and was helping him on. The third man drove out a fly to Billings. He dropped it, two runs came in, and Billings went out the game. That left only myself, one outfielder, one infielder, and Riley. The next man popped up a foul to me and we came in to bat.

"The hammers were swinging lustily on the bench, but Riley never looked that way. He went to bat and pounded out a single. Merritt struck out, but Brownie clouted a double and I tore off a shrieking drive that got away from their left fielder and I went all the way around. Three runs and the lead. Not so bad for four men.

"That was all we got, for Riley died out and Merritt struck out a second time. For this he got a call-down from Riley and when he talked back he went out the game, too, leaving Brownie on first, the only man outside the battery.

"By this time everybody was speechless with wonder. Riley sailed up a ball that the first batter tipped into a high foul back of first base. Ordinarily it was a sure out, but just as Pete clutched the ball he collided with the Cloverdale coacher and made an excusable muff. The batter got first, and seein' second and third unguarded, went right around. It made Riley purple with rage.

"'What, you throwin' me down, Brown?' he hollered, stridin' over towards Pete, his voice shaking with passion. 'I'd never think it! Such ingratitude! Git out the game, fast as you can. I want no drawbacks with me.'

"Well, it only wanted that touch to make it complete. There was me and Riley playin' the hull Cloverdale nine. The audience just looked on with eye bulgin' interest. Picture such a thing happenin' in one o' them pikin' National League towns. It might, if they had the talent.

"Well, there was a man on third and none out. Riley fanned the first man and the second hunted. I got the ball, Riley covered first and we got the batter, but the man on third slid over the plate an instant ahead o' Riley's throw to me to ketch him. That was only one run, though, and we got the next man on a little fly to Riley.

"It was up to me to pull us ahead, and I swung the old lead ender with a vengeance. I made the score board in deep left look like a dum-dum bullet had gone through it, and we were ahead again, 4 to 3. Riley flied out. I came to bat again, and this time I hit a cow in a field back of centre. Riley struck out in his turn, and I looked hard at him. However, I boomed one over the right field fence on the third shot, just to keep 'em guessing as to where I was aiming for, and it was 6 to 3. Riley grounded to short, and went out at first.

"And so it went through the game. Unless Riley struck 'em out, or they fouled, it was easy runs for them. They had him chasin' after balls so hard sometimes that I could see he was sorry he hadn't kept Merritt out there for Pete Brown. But he pitched good, and held 'em right down. It was real excitin'. Say, they made six runs in their inning. When we came in we'd get six, too—three bases on balls to him and three homers for me. Nobody else could a done it, I admit. It was great team work.

"Well, that audience kept getting crazier and them fellers on the bench greener and greener, as the game went on. It was the Cloverdales' last inning. When we finished our half of the ninth we were three runs ahead.

"The first Cloverdale man struck out, and the crowd roared. The second one fouled to me, and there was a deeper roar. The next man knocked a grounder to third and, of course, got around to that station as Riley had to run out and get the ball. The next one Riley hit, and as the next was their hard hitter, I purposely stood away from the plate and had him take a pass. That put three on the bags and two out.

"Riley passed up a strike and there was a cheer. He twinged a fast inward around the fellow's neck and there was another cheer. He drove in a fast drop and the fellow slammed at it and just touched it with the lower side of the bat. It went dribbling along the ground to Riley and the batter dug for first.

"Riley jumped out the box and scooped the ball up. And then, instead of passing it right to me to get the man who was pluggin' it in from third to make the third out and win the game, he turned and raised his arm to throw to first. Seeing nobody there he turned a trifle more and aimed for second. No one being there to get the throw, he turned further and focused his eyes on third, where a panting Cloverdale player was planting his spikes. No waiting third baseman stood there to receive the ball, and with a wild, despairing shriek Riley turned to me, hurled the ball over the roof of the grandstand behind me, and began to spin around in a circle, with his eyes rolling and his arms waving and all the time screaming:

"'I'm the manager! I'm the captain! I'm first base - I can pitch! Hurroo for Shortstop Pike! Put-emout the game!'

"Then he fell down, frothing at the mouth, while four Cloverdales pattered over the pan. Riley Pike went to the bug ward that night and a good ball player was lost in the effort to make a poor manager. If the league magnates want a clinching argument against player-managers let 'em visit the Sunflower Asylum and view a fine-looking feller known as J. 4 (otherwise Riley Pike). He orders all the keepers and guards out the game about 4.30 every afternoon. When the league presidents see him they'll never move thier managers off the bench."

Riley Pike went to the bug-ward.

Hennessy gave him some sass.

Hawking Hurts the Lungs

Catarrh, Consumption's First Stage, Undermines Health, Causes Many Diseases.

Why do we forget that hawking and coughing must make the lungs sore and tender? Nearly everybody takes big chances with colds, yet not a day passes that we do not see some unfortunate victim of the consequences of a neglected cold.

All the time these colds are running down one's strength and the coughing renders sleep difficult, besides shaking up dreadfully the whole breathing apparatus.

Catarrh can be quickly cured by Catarrhozone, which immediately stops the hawking and spitting, because it kills the germs that keep up the disease, and it soothes and heals the inflamed surfaces caused by colds.

Then besides all the discomforts and offensiveness of catarrh, three-quarters of the people who die of Consumption prepared the way by neglecting the catarrhal condition.

You see, it's like this. You go about, and into your throat is carried the germs of Consumption. It doesn't need to go to the lungs; it simply needs to be deposited on the inflamed catarrhal surface that is a hotbed for all sorts of catarrhal germs. They develop there, pass into the circulation, and then we have Consumption as a natural result.

Catarrhozone prevents all this, because it kills the germs; but it does far more—it heals the inflamed tissue, and when the germs find no breeding place they die, and you escape in consequence further trouble.

Nothing ever made equals Catarrhozone for all diseases of the throat, lungs and nasal passages. A remedy that both destroys the cause of the disease as Catarrhozone does and repairs the havoc wrought by it is surely the medicine that you and all sufferers are looking for. Get it now.

RULES FOR PRONOUNCING NAMES IN WAR DESPATCHES

Henry Gannett, geographer of the United States Geographical Survey, has been interviewed regarding the proper spelling of the places named in Corea and Manchuria that have become prominent in the news columns of the day since the outbreak of hostilities between Russia and Japan.

The variation in spelling observed in the usage of different newspapers and different map makers is confusing to the common mind. Mr. Gannett suggests that the matter would be much simplified if it were generally known that a system of transliteration of such names has been adopted by most European nations, by Canada and by the United States.

The confusion arises from the fact that these geographic names are written in their native tongues in characters unlike those we employ. Different persons transliterate them into Roman characters in different ways. The value of a set of rules that would reduce the variations in spelling to a minimum is apparent.

The rules adopted by the Board on Geographic names provide that the vowels shall have the sounds that are common to the vowels in the language of Southern Europe. It follows, therefore, that "u" has the sound of "oo" in boot, and that Manchuria is, there, fore preferred to Manchooria, Chefu to Chefoo and Amur to Amoor.

It has been ruled that "ai" has the sound of "i" in ice, "au," the sound of "ow" in how (ao — a very frequent combination in the East, heard in names like Mindanao and Nanao—is slightly different from the preceding); "ei" as in Beirut, has the sound of the two Italian vowels, but is frequently slurred, when it is scarcely distinguishable from "ey" in the English word they.

In accordance with the rules, "c" is always soft, having the sound of "s." Hard "c" is represented by "k," and it, therefore, follows that Korea is the accepted form, and not Corea.

Other rules are that "ch" is always soft, as in church; "f" is sounded as in English, and "ph" should not be used to represent this sound; "g" is always hard, as in get; "h" is always pronounced; "j" and "k" have the English sound; "kh" has the sound of the Oriental guttural; "gh" is another guttural; "ng" represents in different words different sounds — two sounds, as in finger, and one, as in singer; "q" should never be employed for the sound of "qu," which is represented by "kw," as in Kwang-tung; "y" is always a consonant, as in yard, and should not be used for the sound of the vowel "i," as it is in very or rely.

These rules are recommended as simple and easy of application. Their general acceptance would undoubtedly be appreciated by the average reader.

I can cure consumption with my remedy. This is not mere talk or braggadocio. It is honest fact. Healthy, living, human beings testify to it.

Shiloh's Consumption Cure The Lung Tonic has cured and is still curing consumption.

S. A. Wilt, of Mill Hall, Penn., when a young man, was troubled with a chronic cough. He consulted many doctors in an effort to get relief. It developed into consumption. He had given up all hope of recovery when, on the advice of a friend, he tried Shiloh's Consumption Cure. His rapid recovery surprised him after so many failures with other preparations. After taking a few bottles of Shiloh's Consumption Cure, he was completely restored to health. He is now jubilant and hearty and seldom has a cough. When he does, he finds a few doses of Shiloh's Consumption Cure rids him of it.

I hope those suffering from consumption and chronic coughs will take heart when they read this story. I know of many more just as remarkable.

Try Shiloh's Consumption Cure (the Lung Tonic—25c., 50c., and $1.00 a bottle—your money back if it doesn't cure you.

Some Charming Dress Accessories to Be Worn by the Summer Girl. . . . .

Special Correspondence of the Montreal Star.

Paris, April 28. — That witching creature known as the Summer Girl, who comes each year to charm us anew plans to introduce this season many new fads. She is studying more than ever every little detail of her dress, and her aim is always to look a finished picture. She orders her hat to match her frock, and then—not content with this—she selects her parasol, her veil and her gloves to carry out perfectly the colour harmony of her costume.

The majority of her gowns for summertime wear will be in delicate tints. Already she is showing a preference for faint gray, ivory tints, and the palest of greens. The fabrics she selects are soft and silky, and the greater number of them are transparent. In place of serge and cheviot, she will wear the new silky, supple mohair, or Sicilienne, and she specially favours the voiles and the soft, pliable taffetas. Her gowns will be elaborate, but never will their elaboration interfere with their artistic egect.

And what is true of the summer gowns is true of the parasols.

Each parasol is beautiful from an artistic standpoint, to say nothing of its showing the trend of the newest fashions. The tucked gown has emphasized the popularity of the tucked parasol. Soft little ruchings, which constitute the trimming of so many of the newest French frocks, are also depended upon to give a new touch of charm to the parasol of fashion. There are shirred parasols to match shirred gowns, lace parasols to carry with lace frocks, and parasols specially hand-embroidered and hand-painted to exactly match particular gowns.

This fad for matching the parasol and the gown is not only shown in the more elaborate frocks and sunshades, but in the linen gowns for morning wear and the coaching coats.

To carry when a linen gown is worn, there are smart looking linen parasols in the same shade as the dress, and trimmed with a cut-out pattern in embroidery.

The coaching parasols are made to match in colour either the coat or its trimming, and the newest have a finely carved horse's head in ebonized wood for the top of the handle, or the handle is capped with a crystal ball, which, when you look into it, reveals a tiny coach-and-four, with the seats occupied by gaily attired little people.

Pompadour roses and Pompadour colours are to be all the vogue this summer. And, of course, there are parasols to harmonize with the flower-flecked organdies and floral silk gauzes. Fascinatingly picturesque is a parasol which owes its artistic touch to a hand-painted design of Pompadour roses, and is made of a delicate shade of gray silk with deep ruffles of chiffon in the same silvery gray tint. The ruffles are trimmed with little old-fashioned ruchings in the faintest possible shade of rose-petal pink. Over the silk portion of the parasol trails a hand-painted design of pink Pompadour roses and green leaves. To make the parasol throw a becoming light on the face it is lined with rose-petal pink chiffon.

When the Summer Girl sets out to charm she will hold above her head a parasol like this one. She must be careful, of course, that her gown and her hat are in harmony with her sunshade. A delicate gray gown of chiffon cloth, or, what is less expensive, soleiaine in the same pale colour, would be effective to wear when carrying a parasol of this sort. The skirt is finely pleated, and is extremely full at the bottom. The blouse buttons up the back with small buttons which look just like little pink roses. The sleeves are pleated and are full and flowing to the el, bow, while the lower part of the sleeve is in the form of a mitaine cuff.

Below the yoke in front there is a blouse, and the waist is finished with a high girdle of rose-petal louisine silk made over one of the convenient girdle frames which are constructed of tapes, and made firm by pieces of featherbone. The touch of black to which so many gowns owe their distinction is introduced charmingly and in many varied ways in the new parasols. The pale-tinted silk parasol scattered with graduated black velvet dots is very new and very smart in style, particularly if its effect is softened with ruffles of tucked chiffon.

Another idea is to introduce the touch of black in a border of black velvet circles, which are mounted on a band of lace. These circles are often finished with an embroidered edge, sometimes in white and sometimes in colours. A forget-me-not blue silk parasol will have, for example, an entredeux of lace, upon which black velvet circles are mounted, the circles framed in wreaths of embroidered forget-me-nots.

Clusters of conventionalized peonies in shades of pink and white are used to form the decoration of an exquisite almond green silk sunshade. The design is hand-painted and the parasol is a work of art.

The tucked parasols and the parasols trimmed with little ruchings are much the mode this spring for every day wear. The girl with an economical turn of mind can purchase a plain shade and deck it with tiny ruchings, thereby saving a good deal. These parasols are fashionable in grass green, onion brown, navy blue and champagne, and many of them are made waterproof, which is certainly an achievement.

In studying the fashions for summer days, it is noticeable how many of the modes of long ago are returning. It is at least half a century since the fashionable woman looked with pronounced favour on the lace coat. To-day it is one of the smart modes of the moment. It is made for certain occasions of black Chantilly over changeable taffeta, and then again, it is of the heavier laces like Irish crochet, Renaissance and Plauen. When made of these coarser laces it is the best style in white.

A white Irish crochet coat is exceedingly smart in style made with a deep collar of white linen, trimmed with medallions of the lace, and having the lace sleeve made with turn-back cuffs of the linen and also finished with fluffy lace-trimmed undersleeves. A coat of this style should be worn with a linen skirt trimmed with lace insets. It would also look well with a skirt of white mohair, with the soft, silky finish. But then, the cuffs and collar of the coat should have white silk substituted for the linen.

It is quite the smart fad of the day when wearing a lace coat to have the hat made to match. With the Irish crochet lace coat a white picture hat is good style with the flaring brim faced with the coarse lace, and an ostrich feather caught through the brim and drooping over the hair at the left side. If the wearer feels that a touch of colour will make the hat more distinctive it may have the crown a mass of green leaves or formed entirely of pansies, forget-me-nots, or blue hyacinth blossoms.

One of the newest frocks of the day for summertime wear is of soft, silky soielaine in a becoming tint of ivory white. A feature of the gown is its exquisite trimming, which consists of heavy lace designs in fawn color with the smaller pattern of the design worked in faint green and pale pink silk threads. The skirt is one of the very newest models; in fact, a study of it will reveal to any woman all that is newest about the summer skirts. It shows the vogue for horizontal trimmings. It introduces a group of fine corded shirrings, in the form af a yoke, and it shows at a glance how perfectly fitted over the hips is the new full skirt. The fine cordings of the shirred yoke do not wrinkle and get out of place, for they are all stiffened just a trifle with featherbone. At the knees a puffing of the material is shown which is outlined effectively with the lace and silk embroidered trimming. The lower part of the skirt is in the form of three flounces, each flounce deeper in the back than the front. They are finished with cluster of narrow folds. The skirt is exceptionally long, but it is protected by a velveteen binding in which exactly matches the soielaine in color.

Since the Summer Girl of 1904 will either wear her skirt extremely short or extremely long, the question of her footwear is of the greatest possible importance. Her shoes will be particularly conspicuous when she is wearing her short walking skirt, and they will be in evidence almost as much when she is gowned in a trailing frock, for so long is the fashionable dress skirt all the way round that to walk in it gracefully it must always be kept up. With her walking costume she wears either a black japanned or patent colt shoe, made with a Cuban heel, and a good, sensible sole. With her more elaborate gowns she makes a point of having her shoes and stockings, if possible, reflect the color of her frock.

PRETTY GOWNS FOR A JUNE TROUSSEAU.

A WOMAN AT THE PLAY

The Immaculateness of John Drew.

There never was a man so wonderfully well-gromed as John Drew. The cut of his shoulders is a thing to marvel at, and the hang of his trousers would have been the despair of Beau Brummel.

This year he is to be seen in all his glory in a play—rabidly British—"The Second in Command." It has been playing to crowded houses in the United States and is one of those apparently immaterial things which do more than diplomacies and treaties to foster a friendly feeling between nations. It does this because it shows to the American people, often too ready to scoff, the much-abused British officer in an exceedingly pleasant light, and incidentally discloses his best characteristics, loyalty, honour, and love of profession.

Drew is "Binks," a kindly, popular, not brilliant Major, who has been passed over in the command of his regiment. The man who is given the place he should have had is an old friend of Binks and they continue to be friends even when they fall in love with the same woman.

She is driven into an engagement with Binks, of whom she is very fond, but immediately afterwards meets the Colonel and discovers in him the man with whose portrait in the Academy she has fallen in love. It is a case of love at first sight on both sides and Binks is thrown over. At this point the scapegrace brother puts a finger in the pie. He thinks his sister is going to marry the Colonel, who has a pot of money, to help him to pay his debts. He therefore, in a fit of misplaced remorse, feels it his duty to tell the Colonel so, and the engagement is broken. On top of all this comes the news that the regiment is ordered to South Africa and both Binks and the Colonel are jubilant.

But on the eve of departure comes a telegram from the War Office saying that Binks is not to go, another officer on special duty taking his place, and our hero is ordered to an out-of-the-way post.

Poor Binks! His heart-rending grief and helpless rage are very convincing and the curtain falls on a melancholy house.

It almost seems as though the play should have ended here, but to satisfy the public demand for a happy ending another act is added. In this we discover Binks, who has managed to get to the war after all, covered with wounds and glory, and reconciled to a life of old bachelordom; and the fair lady happy with her gallant Colonel, all misunderstanding having been explained.

An inartistic and unnecessary detail is introduced by dragging in a Royal Duke, presumably Connaught, who pins the Victoria Cross on Binks' bosom and presents a young titled person, who has enlisted in the Yeomanry and who furnishes the comedy of the piece, with his commission.

Such is the outline of the play with which John Drew has been entertaining our cousins across the line this season. As for Drew himself, he is a model officer. To revert to the subject of our opening sentence, he is extraordinarily well turned out. It is obviously impossible that he could have got into his trousers without the aid of a shoe-horn, which is what they used to say of a smart officer in Quebec in the good old days. His shoulders are so miraculously broad that it is difficult not to suspect upholstering, and his waist is so entrancingly small that half the women in the audience turn green with envy and the other half contemptuously sniff "corsets." His head is such a shining dome that we feel sure a hair-dresser lurks behinds the scenes, and his moustache has precisely the correct military twirl.

Dear John Drew! Long may he charm us with his inocuous plays and his astounding personality.

Julie Opp and Ethel Barrymore.

Another actor who rivals John Drew in popular favour is William Faversham. He, too, is playing in an intensely English play—not military, but smart and horsey—"Lord and Lady Algy," wherein he makes a delightful "scion of the aristocracy," as the phrase is. He is a young man with a whimsical face, a merry eye, a mouth quivering with humour and good nature, and a perfectly natural manner.

His wife, known as Julie Opp, shares the honours of the play with him. She is without doubt one of the most attractive women on the stage to-day. She is unique; not pretty, but superbly handsome; very tall, six feet, they say, but it seems incredible; grace incarnate; and the figure of a Juno. Her voice and her features are equally clear cut and distinctive. Her heavy brown hair is parted in the middle and coiled low in the back. She looks to the life the character she portrays, a well-bred, horsey Englishwoman. In the important matter of make-up she sets a praiseworthy example to ninety per cent. of the actresses, who flaunt their paint and powder in the eyes of a long suffering public. It is to be presumed that she owes something to art, but it is not obvious even to the front rows. She looks absolutely clean, an abnormality on the stage where young women seem to think it necessary to bedaub themselves with all the colours of the rainbow.

In the first act, Miss Opp appears in a most becoming costume of pale rose colour linen. The skirt is pleated and stitched to about half its length, from which it falls in graceful folds. The bodice is perfectly simple, a little full in the front, with a collar widening over the shoulders and with stole ends. This collar is joined in front with a band of the same lace above which rises Miss Opp's beautiful throat, absolutely unadorned. With none of her costumes did she wear a collar, wisely realizing that when one has a neck like a marble column it is better to leave it uncovered. With this dress she carried a fluffy white parasol and wore a hat entirely composed of white lilacs, with a large pink rose at one side of the front. The tout ensemble was excellent and just the sort of thing one could copy in every detail for a summer costume.

Another actress who wears pretty and unexaggerated clothes is Ethel Barrymore. She, too, oddly enough, is to be seen in a play most pronouncedly English. In "Cousin Kate," the plot is extremely slight; in fact, the whole performance is so immature and calls for so little dramatic talent, that only the taking personality of the young actress rescues it from being a failure. It is a play which would do exceedingly well for amateur dramatic companies and is strongly recommended to their notice. The dramatis personae comprise a very English widow, and her equally insular daughter. The latter, pretty as a picture in her Peter Robinson blouses and short skirt, is very young, very religious, and very namby-pamby. She is engaged to an Irish artist, rich and erratic. Religious differences lead to a broken engagement and Cousin Kate—charmingly played by Miss Barrymore—is sent for to smooth matters out. But she complicates them by falling in love with the artist and he with her. But the ubiquitous happy ending is not wanting. A young clergyman, who has fallen in love with the daughter, comes to the rescue and everybody is satisfied—the two good young people and Cousin Kate and her artist.

In the first act Ethel Barrymore appears in a smart travelling costume of tobacco brown voile. This is made with an odd little bolero crossing in the back, and with rows of fringe and applique on the skirt. With it she wears a large picture hat, brown with pink and red roses and leaves. In the last act she looks extremely pretty in a high-necked evening frock. It is of some soft, lustreless material; the skirt sun pleated and very long. The bodice is also pleated and falls over a deep girdle, all around. Like Julie Opp's gowns it has no collar, but is embellished with a little lace. The only bit of colour about it is the girdle which is of palest blue silk, and, contrary to the usual custom, is deeper in the front than the back, where it closes with a neat bow without ends. This is a remarkably pretty and youthful style of frock and would be delightful on a tall and slight girl, either in some shade of the many whites so much worn, or in pale grey or brown.

The United States statistician says two-thirds of a school year would be saved to American boys and girls by putting the metric system in place of the other twelve or thirteen systems. Carry the enormous saving of time into the counting-houses of the country, into all kinds of calculations, from the farm to the factory, and a fairly good idea is obtained of what the metric system would save.

FROM A FEMININE STANDPOINT.

The New House and the Old Home at This Time of Year. . . . .

Did you move this year? And, if so, are you settled, or is your future home still a scene of chaos in which it is impossible to distinguish a brush and comb from a case of china, owing to their multitudinous coverings, and somewhat erratic packing?

Are your carpets stretched smoothly where they belong? Is the furniture at just the correctly fashionable angle, and are the pictures hung to your own taste, even if not to that of an art connoisseur? Or are you sharing the lot of the large majority of housewives at this season of the year, and possessing your soul in what patience you can, until the workmen make their appearance, and finally achieve the necessary renovation promised by the landlord?

Just now there is more than one woman trying vainly to keep her temper while she sits among the boxed up belongings that are to make her home a thing of joy when once nimble fingers have given the walls shining new faces, turned the finger-marked woodwork into a thing of beauty, and put the very useful gasalier in its intended place. Indignation never yet hastened the movements of the men who work these household wonders around May first, at least, not in individual cases. The only way to cope successfully with the situation is to cultivate contentment and a small appetite, and learn to play at camping out.

Procrastination seems the keynote of the annual flitting. The people occupying the house we intend to make our home, at the last moment develop a sudden affection for the abode they are leaving, and cling to it until the time limit the law allows. They move about among their bags and boxes and pretend they are dreadfully sorry they cannot get out when they promised, but as likely as not they are merely refusing to budge until their new quarters are swept and garnished and quite ready for occupancy. There is little doubt that people are seldom as selfish as at moving time, when their sole regard is for themselves, without a thought of those who are to come after.

Beguiling our minds with the philosophic reflection that "they also serve who only wait," we who are ready to move, but cannot, sit dejected among our much packed Lares and Penates, and wonder what on earth ever induced us to undertake the unnecessary hegira. Incidentally we register something stronger than a promise that never again shall we be driven to move, unless by fire. Even the fact that everything is wrong with the house we are leaving makes no difference. The knowledge that the drains are out of order, the roof leaking, and the landlord adamant when repairs are mentioned, only seems to endear the place to us, and with all its faults we love it more at the moment of departure than ever before.

The actual moving of the furniture is one long martyrdom, provided one is foolish enough to watch the corners being knocked off the furniture. Tramp, tramp, up and down the staircases, the moving-men go, dropping burdens until we are heart sick. If they bump the walls it is sure to be in the new abode, and not in the old one, that the wall paper chips off, and the paint gets scratched. At last, it is over, and our goods and chattels are once more stored under the same roof. At last, with a mingling of joy and misery we realize that we are once more come into our own. In the cold light of possession it is wonderful how low the new ceilings seem, how small the rooms appear, and how shabby the paint has grown since we surveyed the house filled to overflowing with our predecessor's daintily arranged belongings. Possession may be nine points of the law, but its nine times nine points of disillusionment under the moving circumstances.

It will be the first of June, at least, before the majority of the newly occupied houses take on a semblance of home, and in the interim there will be more bad temper, disappointment, and worry than will be found in the next eleven months; in fact, until it is moving time again, and it is once more our lot to discover that the old furniture doesn't harmonize with the new wall-paper; that the portieres are too short for their new positions, and that we generally did worse rather than better in adding ourselves to the list of movers.

FOR THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

Advice.

There was once a pretty chicken;
But his friends were very few,
For he thought that there was nothing
In the world but what he knew.
So he always in the farm-yard
Had a very forward way,
Telling all the hens and turkeys
What they ought to do and say.
"Mrs. Goose," he said, "I wonder
That your goslings you should let Go out paddling in the water;
It will kill them to get wet."

"And I wish, my old Aunt Dorking,"
He began to her one day,
"That you wouldn't sit all summer
In your nest upon the hay;
Won't you come out to the meadow
Where the grass with seeds is filled?"
"If I should," said Mrs. Dorking,
Then my eggs would get all chilled."
"No they won't," replied the chicken;
"And no matter if they do,
Eggs are really good for nothing;
What's an egg to me or you?"

"What's an egg?" said Mrs. Dorking,
"Can it be you do not know
You yourself were in an eggshell
Just one little month ago!
And if kind wings had not warmed you,
You would not be out to-day,
Telling hens and geese and turkeys
What they ought to do and say!
To be very wise and show it
Is a pleasant thing, no doubt;
But when young folks talk to old folks,
They should know what they're about."

ANON.

Bob.

Bob was a very poor little Scotch lad who had been in gaol when he was ten for stealing bits of brass from the factory where he worked and while in Bridewell" had lost his toes from frost-bite.

"One morning Mr. Greenwood was sitting on his bench reading the weekly paper as Bob came in. "Bob," he said, "I see something in the paper this morning that will do for you." It was an advertisement by a great pattern-designing and art publishing firm for an apprentice. "Look here, Bob," the eager friend said, "the only condition is that the boy must have a taste for drawing."

"But," Bob replied, "they will look at my taes."

"No," said Mr. Greenwood, "and don't you say anything about your toes. And nobody now has any business to ask you about the past. You have suffered plenty already by those toes. At any rate, you go and try; and go this very forenoon."

Bob returned home and told his mother. He was made as tidy and clean as possible. And looking in as he passed at his friend's shop, the boy set off, as Mr. Greenwood said, "to try his luck."

He knew the building well at whose door he had to knock. Often he had passed it when going messages. Often he looked in the winter evenings at its three tiers of windows all lighted up. Often on such evenings had he marked the shadows of the printers as they moved among the presses. Often had he been struck in the daytime with the great rope dangling from the topmost story at one end and swinging up and down great bales of paper. Oftener still, he had stopped for a moment at the beautiful porch at the other end, and looked through the glass door at the fine pictures and statues which were ranged around the walls of the entrance hall. At this very door he stood this morning, but with fear filling his heart. What chance had he, so poor, so ragged, to be received in a place so fine?

And indeed he seemed very poor. No wonder the junior partner, Mr. Bathgate, looked at him as he was shown into his room. He was still a tiny-looking boy—he had not begun yet to shoot up into the tall youth he had become when we first met with him. And he was bare-footed. And his trousers through honest wear were more like knickerbockers than trousers. His jacket also was too small for him. The cap that he held in his hand was not without a hole or two. But over against all this there was an intelligent face, two honest eyes, hair combed beautifully to one side, and hands and legs and face as clean as water could make them.

This was the conversation that followed:

"You want to become our apprentice, my little man?"

"Ay."

"Can you draw?"

"A wee."

"What can you draw?"

"Dougs and horses and trees."

"Who taught you?"

"Masell."

"Well, take this home with you and let me see what sort of copy you can make of it."

Mr. Bathgate took a wood-engraved landscape from a desk, a sheet of cardboard, and a pencil, wrapped them up for the boy, and told him to come back when he had made a copy.

Whoever saw Bob that forenoon as he turned his steps towards his home, saw a boy who ran as if he had wings. He seemed to himself to have become suddenly the heir of a great possession. The sheet of cardboard, the new pencil, the fine engraving; he had never had such things in his hand before. He did not stop until he reached his patron's shop, and unrolled his treasure on his cutting board. But Mr. Greenwood's heart gave way a little when he saw the landscape.

"Can you manage this, do you think, Bob?"

"I'll try," said Bob. And away he ran up the long stairs to his mother."

The witty sayings of Douglas Jerrold are without number. It was he who said "Dogmatism is puppyism come to its full growth," a saying as true as it is witty.

To a conceited man who said to him, "We are rowing in the same boat," he replied, "But with different sculls."

A noted bore stopped him one day and asked, "What's going on to-day?" "I am," he answered like a flash.

On seeing a very tall man dancing with a very short partner, he remarked, "The mile is dancing with the milestone."

REPLIES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Blue Nose.—You were quite right; the serviette should have been left unfolded. (2) It is no longer customary.

M. J. P.—The bridesmaid may wear either a cloth costume or a gown of lighter material. The former is more appropriate when the bride wears her travelling dress.

Robert.—The best man attends the groom at the wedding, hands the clergyman his fee, sees that railway tickets are secured, attends to the checking of baggage, and generally makes himself useful. 2. Send a piece of cut glass or silver for a wedding gift. 3. The groom sends the flowers the bride and bridesmaid carry; the other flowers are provided by the parents of the bride. 4. The bridesmaid buys her own gloves, etc.

A Constant Reader.—The groom should wear ordinary afternoon dress, grey striped trousers, black frock coat and waist-coat, white four-in-hand or Ascot tie, grey Suede gloves, and a silk hat. 2. At least two weeks. 3. The groom waits in the vestry until the bride arrives at the church, when he takes his place at the altar. 4. Seats will be provided side by side.

Francis—Guests at a large party are not all introduced to each other. If you see anyone whom you would particularly like to know, ask your hostess to introduce you. (2) When there are no servants to wait at the supper table, or only a very limited number, it is a man's duty to see that his partner has everything for which she may wish, before thinking of his own supper.

Fairy.—"Trousseau teas" are not a novelty by any means, although in Montreal they are rather uncommon, and are in a more informal scale than in the United States. Here a brides-elect simply asks a few girls to come in some afternoon just before the wedding, and talk over and admire all her new belongings, from wedding presents to wedding gown, the elaborate description you give of the New York trousseau tea would be easy to carry out if the bride was the possessor of several dozen gowns, but it would be quite out of place when her new frocks are limited to half a dozen.

Failure.—Have the word "dancing" in the corner of the card. (2) Blue eyed girls, as a rule, can find nothing more becoming to wear than a shade of blue matching as near as possible to the colour of their eyes.

Fortunate.—The bride and groom are seated side by side at the wedding breakfast. (2) A travelling dress would be the more suitable to wear when the ceremony takes place at such at an early hour in the morning. (3) The groom's place, of course. (4) A European custom not much in vogue here.

Laurel.—In business hours it would be advisable to call your employer "Mr. Black," rather than by his Christian name, even if he is your cousin. (2) The more dignified course is the better to follow, and I would certainly counsel you to keep in mind that one never does a foolish thing without living to regret it.

Effie.—You don't seem to know your own mind, so how can I know it for you? It would be impossible to choose your husband for you, when you cannot yourself make up your mind between the advantages offered by your two suitors. Apparently you do not care very much for either of them, so your best policy would be to give them both up and wait.

Florrie.—Send the card by mail. (2) When people are such old friends they usually bow simultaneously, as there is no need of standing on ceremony. When you meet the man who accuses you of cutting him, explain that you did not see him. If he fails to accept the explanation, it would be foolish to try and convince him. Instead you had better let the matter drop.

Amy.—It is the place of your fiance's people to make the first advances. If they do not call upon you as soon as the engagement is announced, and take some notice of you, it would be very unwise to try and thrust yourself upon them. After all, a girl marries a man, and not his family, so if their dislike of you is merely prejudice, and there is no real reason why they should object to the match, you would be very foolish to break the engagement.

GREAT THOUGHTS

Idleness.

Idleness is called "the sin of Sodom and her daughters," and indeed is "the burial of a living man"; an idle person being so useless to any purposes of God and man that he is like one that is dead, unconcerned in the changes and necessities of the world, and lives to spend his time, and eat the fruits of the earth. Like vermin or a wolf, when their time comes they die and perish, and in the meantime do no good; they neither plough nor carry burdens; all that they do is either unprofitable or mischievous.

Idleness is the greatest prodigality in the world; it throws away that which is invaluable in respect of its present use, and irreparable when it is past, being to be recovered by no power of art or nature.—Jeremy Taylor.

Do Women Regret Their Youth?

In Gertrude Atherton's new book "Rulers of Kings" there are some passages which cry for repetition. One of them is on the much discussed question of regret for lost youthfulness. Her remarks show a wonderful insight into the workings of the feminine mind. She writes: There is no greater fallacy than the belief that women regret their youth—I mean women who have lived the life of the heart. Nature invariably compensates, and in exchanging wisdom for youth she is at her best. No woman ever crowded more into her youth—nor held to it longer—than I did, yet I can recall none the sensation of relief when I finally realized that henceforth I should live for myself alone; above all that I had had my final disappointment. For love, my dear, is one exquisite disappointment from first to finish—for the woman, I mean. Men are rarely psychological enough for the disappointments that grind the heart of woman until it is callous. When they are they are not able to hurt us, so may be left out of the question. The thoroughly masculine man is in the very completeness of his equipment blind to all that is most subtle and feminine in woman, giving her, therefore, twenty strokes of torment to one of happiness, or even pleasure. What is the result? We live, the most irresistible of us, three-fourth—five-eighths—of our lives alone, striving to find in imagination what man will never give us. Life, with women who are not small pieces of pulp in the domestic mill, is one long chase after happiness—what is there for most of us but happiness, politics, and charities?

Epigrams from Rulers of Kings.

The fact remains that man is eternally unsatisfactory and woman eternally unsatisfied.

I will stake my life that a woman is happy only when she is not in love. There is no such thing as sympathy between the soul of a man and woman.

Strength is created by adversity, by trying to win first the small battles of life, then the great, by casting out fear, by training the mind to rule in all things—the heart, the passions, the impulses, which if indulged make the brain the slave instead of the master.

Failure is worse than death. Man's internal strength is created by watching circumstance like a hawk, meeting her every spring stiff and straight, laughing at her pitfalls—which in the beginning of life are excess, excess, and always excess, and all manner of dishonour.

A Pariah of the Sky Line.

There is a deal of coyote hunting in the West that is not attended by the niceties of the club hunt. Ever since the first pioneers pushed their way across the great plains the coyote has been an outlaw, looking for no mercy at the hand of man. His predatory habits have made the animal the bane of the ranchman, and his howl has made him the exasperation of the camper and the terror of the tender-foot. Then, too, his habit of skulking just within rifle range has always made him a tantalizing target for the man with the rifle.

In spite of his unpopularity with all classes of men, however, the coyote has managed to hold his own better than any other animal in the great West. The antelope is swifter of foot, mayhap, but, not having the cunning of the coyote, has been lured within rifle range until practically exterminated in many States. The ranchman's lust for fresh meat, the Eastern tourist's desire for antlers and elk teeth, and the native who slays for the market, have depopulated Colorado and several other States of their best game. The bear, cougar and bobcat have felt the same blighting influence, but the coyote still figures in the skyline of the average Western picture. Sometimes he is unwise enough to eat of poisoned carcasses of cattle, but this is seldom. Again, he falls a victim to a coyote "drive," organized by ranchmen and participated in by townspeople, tenderfeet, newspaper correspondents and amateur photographers. These coyote "drives" are held annually, or oftener, in nearly all Western communities where the prairie pest flourishes. An average "drive," participated in by several hundred individuals, will yield sometimes as high as twenty coyotes and sometimes none at all. A good eal depends on the wind, and more depends on the coyote's cunning and ability to sprint.—May Outing.

Help Your Boys and Girls. Make Them Strong and Healthy This Month.
When you find your dear ones weak, nervous, sickly, irritable or despondent; when they do not sleep well; when they have headache, variable appetite, sallow skin, sunken eyes and face eruptions, be assured the blood is foul and thin, and nervous force is very low. They are in need of a special nerve medicine and blood cleanser like Paine's Celery Compound, noted for its wonderful flesh-building and nerve-bracing virtues. Paine's Celery Compound is the great and only true medicine for weak and frail bodies; it has no equal for the spring ailments of the young. We strongly advise mothers and fathers to have their boys and girls use Paine's Celery Compound at once if they are not robust and healthy.

THE MAY DAY ENTERTAINMENT A GREAT SUCCESS.

The May Day entertainment, which took place at the Belmont School yesterday afternoon, proved an enjoyable affair. The singing, under the direction of Prof. J. A. Archambault being a feature. The songs of Botrel, and "The Day of Recompense," calling for special mention. At the end of the entertainment, the principal, Mr. J. V. Desaulniers, complimented the pupils on the success of the afternoon's entertainment, and referred feelingly to the death of Master Paul Bourcier, who died at the Notre Dame Hospital, on Wednesday night, and was to have taken part in the entertainment. The following pupils received prizes and medals:—Alfred Jubinville, Leo Clarke, Charles Limoges, John Ryan, Stephen Langevin, Archie Orr, Francis Johns, Henry Lacroix, Edgar Neville, Wilfrid Falardeau, Henry Savage, Joseph St. Onge, Hector Duranceau, James Freeland, Phillas Beaudoin, Michael Flynn, Arthur Pelletier, Leo Renaud, Ernest Cloutier, Paul Racine, Eugene, Douesnard.

A common hare skin can be made to represent a valuable dark brown fox, and to such perfection that only an expert may discover the difference. A common Arctic fox skin, original cost only $2.50, transported to Leipsic, is deftly turned into a first-class dark-brown fox worth $30 to $50. A marmot skin, after treatment, successfully represents a sable skin; a rabbit is made to imitate a fur seal skin.

NOT A CHANCE TO DOUBT THIS
Incurable Kidney Disease Cured again by Dodd's Kidney Pills.
Joseph Boone Given up by Doctors and Discharged from the Hospital As Incurable, Back at his Work Again.
Fortune Harbour, Nfld., May 6.—(Special)—A cure that is considered miraculous is reported from Cottle's Cove, New Bay. A fisherman named Joseph Boone has been ailing during eight years, seven of which he was unable to work because of terrible pains in the back, and other symptoms of kidney complaint.
During this time he was treated by several doctors, and was finally sent to the hospital. After a treatment of seven months there he was sent home as incurable.
Reading of the cure of Richard Quirk, of this place, of kidney disease by Dodd's Kidney Pills, led him to try them. The result is, that after using twenty-one boxes he is back at his work at lobster fishing.
There is no chance to doubt the truth of this story. There are trustworthy witnesses to every part of it. It just proves once again that there is no case of kidney disease that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure.

WANTS REFORM IN CIVIC AFFAIRS

Mr. Leandre Belanger Would Change System of Administration.

WANTS CIVIC COMMISSION

Real Estate Proprietors Think They Should Elect Those Who Control Patronage.

Real estate proprietors are not satisfied with the present government of the city. They believe that the present administration of the city does not give the people the best results possible for the outlay.

Mr. Leandre Belanger, one of the leading notaries of the city, and a large real estate owner, discussed the situation with the Star.

"We would like to see the administration of the affairs of the city placed in the hands of a certain number of men who could look after the city's business all the time, and to the exclusion of everything else. To get such men it would be necessary to pay large salaries, but that should be no obstacle.

At the present time, continued Mr. Belanger, "too many people have to do with the administration; and as every one knows, "what is everybody's business is nobody's business."

"I do not see why we could not apply business principles to the City Council. At the present time, the officers of the department do not know whom they should obey. One alderman wants one thing; another thinks something else should be done, and in the end nothing is done, or whatever is done is accomplished too late to meet the requirement and must be begun over again. Every corporation has its proprietor or general manager, who commands the operations, and each department has a responsible head. So it should be with the city. We should have a body of men, call them commissioners, administrators or any name you will, but let them have discretionary powers to administer the affairs, and to administer all the business. They should be paid well enough and should be independent of all influence.

Under present circumstances, neither the Mayor nor any alderman can be expected to devote all his time to the city. The affairs of the city are about as important, from a financial standpoint, as those of the province. We have experience of how things go in the Legislature. It is known that men who, in the Legislative Assembly, have voted for certain measures because some influential person among their constituents wanted them to do so, or to please some friend, are among the first to go to the Legislative Councillors, and ask them to revise that legislation.

"I believe that the city councillors should pass the by-laws of the city, and determine the course to be followed on questions of general public interest, just as the board of directors of a bank would do, but should have nothing to do with the details or the patronage."

"I would like to see a small body of independent men administer business, untrammelled by the solicitations of the aldermen, or the general body of voters."

"I do not wish to diminish the rights of the public generally, but as the proprietors of real estate have to pay the taxation in practically every case, I believe the administrators or commissioners, or whatever they may be called, should be chosen by the proprietors exclusively, while the mayor and aldermen could be chosen by the public in general."

SPECIAL SERMONS AT ST. GILES CHURCH.

A special course of sermons is being given on Sunday evenings by the pastor of St. Giles, Rev. J. R. Dobson. The subject is "From Gethsemane to Calvary," and the third of the series will be delivered to-morrow evening on "The trial and condemnation of Jesus by the religious leaders." The object of the course of lectures is a devotional study of the trial and death of Christ, making the atonement the central theme.

FIRST COUNTY RALLY OF Y.W.C.T.U. HELD YESTERDAY.

The first county rally of the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union was held Thursday afternoon and evening at the Young Men's Christian Association, with Miss Crossley, County Superintendent, and Westmount "Y" president, in the chair. There was a large attendance. On the platform were Mrs. Starr, Mrs. John Currie, Mrs. R. W. McLaughlan and Mrs. Gillelan. Devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Currie, the address of welcome was read by Miss Crossley, and replied to by the presidents of the various unions. After a vocal solo by Miss Dorothy Locke, and instrumental solo by Miss Jacques, Mrs. Starr led a discussion on Flower Mission work. The meeting was then divided, when a discussion was led by Miss Crossley on parlour meetings, Mrs. Starr on Health and Heredity, Mrs. McLaughlan on Legislation, and Mrs. Currie on the Medal contest. One hundred and fifty sat down to tea. The arrangements were in charge of Mrs. Thurston, and the beautiful floral decorations in charge of a committee of which Miss Thurston was convenor. The prevailing colour was pink, and at the evening meeting the parlours were decorated with white ribbon and flowers. At this gathering Mr. Rivard and Rev. Mr. Ford opened the proceedings, and the presidents of the unions spoke. They were Central, Miss Shortell; Westmount, Miss Crossley; St. Lambert, Miss Anderson; Willard, Miss McKinnon; Eastern, Miss Singer and Western, Miss Cochrane. Musical selections and recitations were contributed by Miss Frost, Master H. Kerr, the Misses Somers and Miss D. Locke. The Rev. Melvin Taylor gave an address. A plea was made by Mrs. Currie, Mrs. Gillelan and Miss Crossley for new members, and the secretary of each union was present to enroll those who desired to join.

SPECIAL MUSIC.—At St. Mark's church next Sunday at the evening service, there will be a special musical programme.

THE NEW BY-LAW CONCERNING CIVIC VITAL STATISTICS.

Medical Health Officer Points Out the Advantages of the New System.

Considerable interest is being evinced at the Health Department of the City Hall in the new by-law, in regard to physicians and others, reporting without delay all cases of births to the Health Department.

"I think," said the Medical Health Officer of the city, "that this new enactment will result in the city being able to get far better census returns of the city of Montreal than the Dominion Government was able to show.

"In the past the city has suffered in a remarkble degree on account of the untrustworthy reports of births that were made. I might explain that in the case of deaths, the Healh Department was naturally promptly notified. But in the case of births, the Legislature required that they should be made known, not to civic officials, but the officials of the Court House. After the lapse of weeks and months the Court House officials finally sent the returns to the Civic Health Department; but the whole proceedings were conducted in such a loose manner that the city, for years past, has had no accurate knowledge of what the birth rate of the city was.

"When it is considered that the city has a very accurate knowledge of the death rate, and prints such statistics, it will be seen at a glance how possible it was for the death rate to aspear out of all proportion to the birth rate.

"The trouble without vital statistics has been that the Health Department has never been in a position to know just what was the birth rate of the city. I think it will be found now that doctors have to report direct to the Health Department, that in the course of a year or so the population of Montreal will be admitted to be much greater than what was admitted under the old regime."

"And when will the new by-law in regard to doctors reporting all births in the city be put into effect?"

"I expect," said the Medical Health Officer, "that it will be put into effect within the next two or three weeks. I do not anticipate any trouble from doctors and others furnishing, and that promptly, the information the city desires. I consider the whole question of the city's vital statistics one of the most important that the City Council can consider."

REAL ESTATE SALES SHOW FALLING OFF

Those Registered Last Week Aggregated $236,000.

THE BUILDING OUTLOOK

Permits for New Work and Repairs in April Reached Half Million Dollars.

The actual value of the permits for new buildings issued at the City Hall during the month of April was $438,243. Those for repairs and improvements amounted to $62,895, making a total value of building work to be undertaken as soon as satisfactory arrangements can be made between employers and employes, of $501,118, or over half a million for the month of April alone.

The number of the building permits issued was 111. Of these, 46 were for houses, representing 141 dwellings. There were also 3 warehouses, 3 factories, a church, an office building and a dozen or so sheds and stables.

Although less than a week in May had elapsed up to Thursday night, the value of the permits issued for new buildings up to that time amounted to $226,025, or somewhat more than half those for the entire month of April. Among these, however, was one building for a very large amount, the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association, on Peel street, at a valuation of $125,000. Other smaller buildings were:—

Two buildings of three dwellings each, three storeys high, 46 by 80 feet, on Bleury street, for Mr. F. Casey, value, $9,500.

A two storey dwelling, 26 by 52 feet, on Pine avenue, for Rev. W. S. Barnes, $3,800.

Two buildings of two dwellings each, two storeys high, 24 by 60 feet, 1164 to 1170 St. Hubert street, for M. Rochon, $4,000.

A three-storey building, containing three dwellings, 35 by 45 feet, on Oxenden avenue, for Wm. Tatley, $9,000.

Two buildings of three dwellings each, three storeys high, 40 by 68 feet, at 343 Plessis street, for F. Dulong, $5,000.

The permits for repairs and alterations for the first five days of May amounted to $43,385, as against $62,895 for the entire month of April. In this also there was one item of a large amount, $24,000, for the S. Carsley Co., Ltd., corner St. Peter and Notre Dame streets, basement.

SALES OF REAL ESTATE.

The sales of real estate in Montreal and its environs, as registered last week, amounted to a total of $235,740, this being $52,825 less than those for the previous week.

PRETTY MRS. E. SMITH,

280a Craig Street, Montreal.

SHE PRAISES ST. JAMES WAFERS STOMACH AND NERVE REMEDY FOR WHAT THEY HAVE DONE FOR HER.

Those Having a Bad Stomach and Nerves Must Constantly Beware—Nearly All Troubles the Human Body Is Heir to Can Be Traced to Functional Derangement of the Stomach.

Begin by Making Your Stomach Well if You Wish to Protect and Rid Yourself of All Sickness—This Is Only Plain Common Sense. St. James Wafers Stomach and Nerves Remedy is a Specialty of the Stomach and Nerves and Will Set Your Stomach Right—A Good Stomach Means Good Rich Blood—Good Blood Means Sound and Vigorous Health. This Is as Simple as It Is True.

Do not disregard this simple fact that if your stomach is right, all will be well with you.

Rheumatic, liver complaint, kidney troubles are all to be traced to impurities of the blood, this is as sure as there is a sun. Poor blood has its origin in the functional derangement of the stomach; on this all doctors have always agreed. Common sense tells us to begin by setting the stomach right, and that all other symptoms will have no cause to remain. St. James Wafers Stomach and Nerve Remedy is a specialty of wonderful merits. It is not a cure all, it is a remedy of the stomach and nerves. Thousands in England, Scotland, Ireland and Canada are daily learning by experience the wonderful cure of this great English specialty.

Mrs. E. Smith, living at 280A Craig St., Montreal, writes as follows:—

"I felt weak and in poor health this spring, so my friends told me I needed a spring remedy. Seeing St. James Wafers Stomach and Nerve Remedy so well recommended, I decided to take them for my stomach troubles. I took six boxes. I have derived so much benefit from their use that I am glad to give you this testimonial and my photo for the benefit of other sick people.

"I knew my stomach must have been the cause of all my other troubles, because for a long time it troubled me greatly. My appetite was poor and my digestion always out of order. My nerves were bad and I could not sleep well, and was always tired in the morning. I had severe headache, pain in my back and side. I was very pale and weak; in fact, so weak that I was in a continual feeling of exhaustion, and could do my work with the greatest difficulties. Your St. James Wafers have put new life in me. I am now very well and in the best of spirits. Instead of being pale and sallow, my complexion has a healthy, ruddy appearance. I do not believe there is a better remedy than St. James Wafers for the stomach, and I recommend them to any one suffering from hi stomach."

MRS. E. SMITH.

St. James Wafers banish all symptoms caused by a bad stomach, such as headache, nervousness, sleeplessness, they give vigour and tone to the feminine organs. They banish pimples, blotches, by enriching the blood and remove the black circles around the eyes by giving a good complexion.

St. James Wafers are easy to take. They can be carried in the pocket, and taken regularly. Thousands in Great Britain and Canada are daily treating themselves in the security of their homes with this wonderful invigorator.

St. James Wafers are of a pretty le mon colour; have neither taste no smell; they cost little; a big box fo 50c, or six boxes for $2.50, at all drug gists, chemists or medicine vendors or, on receipt of cash remittance fro our sole Canadian agents, Messrs LYMAN, SONS & CO., WHOLESAL DRUGGISTS, 380 ST. LORD DUDLEY PAID FOR DOG HE HAD KILLED.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Dublin, May 7—The Lord Lieutenant is known to be rather a fast driver of his motor-car, which he generally uses in travelling about Dublin and the suburbs. Recently, while going along Clonliffe Road en route to Clontarf, he ran over and killed a terrier dog, the property of a Mr. Cass. Lord Dudley pulled up at once and expressed his sorrow at having the means of killing the dog, asking the owner to put his own price on it. This Mr. Cass did, naming a pretty stiff figure, when the class of animal was taken into consideration, but this was at once paid by the Lord Lieutenant, who then resumed his journey. As might be expected, the incident created quite a stir in the vicinity.

The Prospects for Home Rule.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 7.—In an address before the United Irish League last night Coner O'Kelly, M. P., said: "Ireland is nearer home rule to-day than at any time in the last century. There will be a general Parliamentary election in England in a few weeks and it will be then that the cause will be brought to the front and the cause of home rule will be in even a stronger position than it was in the best days of Gladstone. The Irish votes will go to the highest bidder, and the party that will give the Irish people home rule in exchange will get them."

Elected President of Bolivia.

New York, May 7. — The Bolivian Consul has received a despatch from La Paz, Bolivia, announcing that the Presidential elections in the Republic took place on the first of the present month "with all tranquility." The Liberal candidate, Col. Montes, won in all the different points of the Republic.

A SCOTCHMEN'S HALL

May Be Erected by Ottawa St. Andrew's Society.

Ottawa, May 7. — The erection of Scotch national hall was considered last night at the meeting of St. Andrew's Society, and warmly advocated. The Irish have a fine hall, and the English and French-Canadians are erecting suitable structures for their respective uses. Lord Dundonald, Sandford Fleming, Dr. Thorburn, W. D. Hogg, K.C., John Manuel, Geo. Burn, David MacLaren, W. Wilfrid Campbell, Rev. Wm. McIntosh, J. R. Reed and J. A. Gemmell were appointed a committee to report upon the subject at the next meeting. It has been suggested to call the headquarters Macdonald Hall, in memory of the late Sir Hector Macdonald.

According to a magazine devoted to engineering, the Yukon River, which is 2,400 miles in length, is navigable by steamer for over 2,000 miles.

An apparatus which makes it possible to draw in perspective mechanically without previous training is the invention of a Swiss, who names it the perspectartigraph. A telescope with hair lines to show its centre and a crayon pencil are hung with a universal joint so that they move together. The draughtsman holds the pencil in his hand and moves it over the paper in such a way as to make the intersection of the hair lines in the telescope follow the outline of the object to be copied.

ALL OVER THE WORLD THE PEOPLE KNOW AND USE PE-RU-NA FOR CATARRH!

The Phenomenal Success of Dr. Hartman.
A Doctor of National Reputation.
A Medicine of World-Wide Fame.
Congressmen, Governors, Consuls
And Other National Celebrities.

DR. HARTMAN SENDS HIS CONGRATULATIONS to that vast multitude of former patients scattered throughout the length and breadth of the United States and Canada. Thousands of these patients have visited him at his magnificent sanitarium at Columbus, Ohio. Thousands upon thousands have never seen the Doctor's face, but know him as their benefactor through the ministrations of his world famous remedy, Peruna.

A multitude so great that its exact number will never be known have been raised from beds of sickness or rescued from some chronic malady which kept them half sick and half well—have been rescued by Dr. Hartman's remedy, assisted by free advice and friendly counsel.

To all these former patients, and to all those under treatment at present, Dr. Hartman sends hearty greeting, sincerely hoping that the good cheer of perfect health will be the lot of every one. He wishes you all the splendid health and bodily vigor which he himself has enjoyed throughout a long and useful life, and still continues to enjoy.

Belva A. Lockwood, one of the foremost women of the United States, writes:

"I have used Peruna both for myself and my mother, and find it invaluable for colds, catarrh, hay fever, and kindred diseases.

Mrs. Theophile Schmitt, wife of the Ex-Secretary of the German Consulate, writes the following letter to Dr. Hartman, from 3417 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill., concerning Pe-ru-na, the National Catarrh Remedy.

"I suffered this winter with a severe attack of la grippe, and having repeatedly heard of the value of Peruna in such cases I thought I would try it. I used it faithfully and began to feel a change for the better the second day, and in the course of a week I was very much improved. After using three bottles I not only found that the grip had disappeared, but my general health was much better."—Mrs. Theophile Schmitt.

Peruna can be relied upon to cure slight colds and coughs and other catarrhal ailments with a promptness that is unequalled by any remedy.

If a cold has settled in any portion of the body and produced catarrh, it is generally thought by people that they must suffer on year after year without any hope of cure. This is not true, however, Peruna cures such cases. Thousands of testimonials that can never be used attest this fact.

There is only one systemic catarrh remedy that is sure to cleanse the whole system of catarrh. That remedy is Peruna. This is a remedy that needs no eulogizing in addition to what the people say of it. Everywhere the people are praising Peruna as a remedy for catarrh.

Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio, for a free copy of Dr. Hartman's latest book on catarrh. This book should be in the hands of every catarrh sufferer. A book entitled "Health and Beauty" sent free to women.

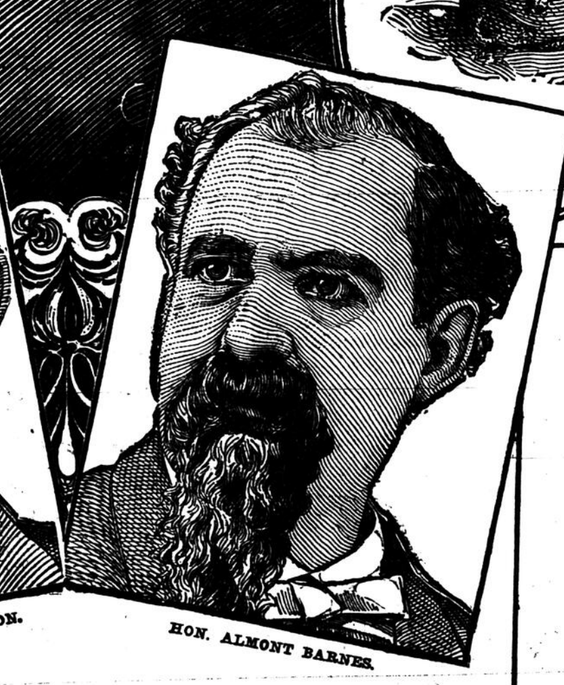
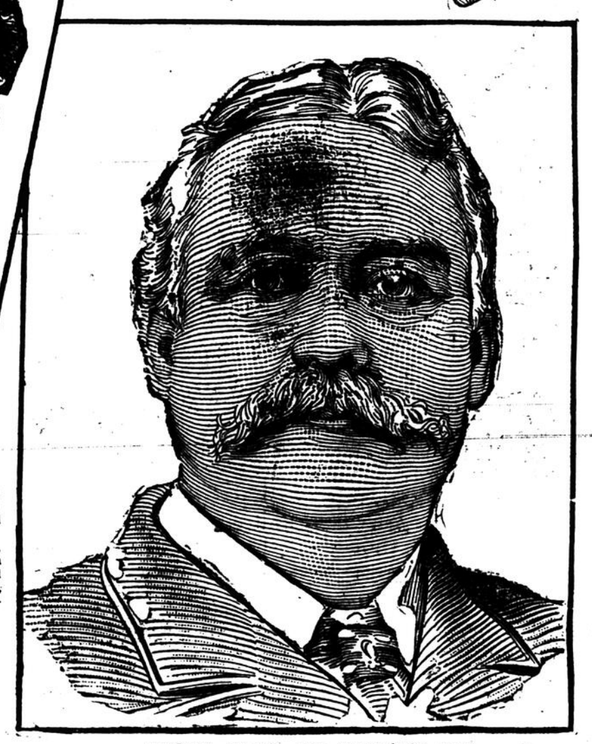
CONSUL-GENERAL PERRY M. DELEON.



HON. ALMONT BARNES.



HON. JAS. M. MORGAN.

Mr. Perry M. DeLeon, Consul-General from the United States to Guayaquil, Ecuador, writes:

"I cheerfully join with my friend Congressman Livingston, in recommending Peruna as an effective remedy for catarrh, colds and coughs."—Perry M. DeLeon.

Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

Peruna is not a guess nor an experiment—it is an absolute scientific certainty.

Peruna has no substitutes—no rivals. Insist upon having Peruna.

HON. ALMONT BARNES, late U. S. Consul to Venezuela, S.A., ex-Chief of Bureau of Statistics of State Department, now in Bureau of Statistics in Agricultural department, Washington, D.C., writes:

"Peruna is not only a remedy for catarrhal troubles, but equally as effective for colds and aches arising from the same. It is a most excellent tonic for debilitated systems. Many of my friends have used it successfully, and I have no hesitation in giving it my recommendation."—Almont Barnes.

HON, J. C. HIXSON.

Hon. J. Courtney Hixon, ex-United States Consul at Foo Chow, China, of Washington, D.C., says the following of Peruna:

Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen,—"I join with many of my distinguished friends in recommending your preparation, Peruna. Those who have used it recommend it as an excellent tonic and particularly good as a catarrh cure."

Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, devised the remedy, Peruna, over forty years ago, and the remedy as a catarrh cure has been growing in favor steadily all these years.

It stands to-day before the nation as a thoroughly tested, accurately scientific internal remedy for catarrh. There are practically no medicinal rivals in the field.

Peruna is not a local application or temporary relief; it is a permanent cure. Peruna is a systemic remedy. It eradicates catarrh from the system. It cures catarrh wherever located. Its cures are radical and lasting.

Therefore Peruna is receiving the endorsement of the leading statesmen and history-makers of the day.

Men of prominence all over the United States are recommending Peruna.

Over fifty members of Congress have written their endorsement of it.

Scores of other government officials speak in high praise of it.

Thousands of people in the humbler walks of life rely upon Peruna as a family medicine.

Send for free book of testimonials.

HON. JAS. M. MORGAN.

HON. JAMES M. MORGAN, 1735 Twentieth Street, Washington, D.C., ex-Lieutenant U. S. Navy, ex-Lieutenant Confederate Navy, and ex-Consul-General to Australia, writes:

Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen,—"The use of your Peruna as a remedy or cure for catarrh by many of my friends who have been benefited by the same, as well as my own experience as to its efficacy and good tonic properties causes me to recommend it to all persons, and you are at liberty to use this endorsement and my photograph if it will give any force to same."—James M. Morgan.

Peruna does not operate upon the system, as the usual remedy does. It is not a local treatment. It operates as a systemic remedy. It gives tone to the weakened nerve centres, and thus gives tone to the mucous membranes that line the various organs of the body.

Catarrh is always located in some mucous membrane.

Catarrh is flabby condition of the blood vessels of these membranes.

Peruna gives tone to these vessels and restores them to their natural elasticity.

Thus it is that Peruna strikes at the root of the evil.

Peruna removes the cause of catarrh and the symptoms disappear.

It is useless to doctor symptoms.

Symptoms disappear once the cause is removed. Peruna removes the cause. It is the only systemic catarrh remedy yet devised.

Catarrh is an American disease. Fully one-half of the people are afflicted more or less with it in some form. Previous to the discovery of Peruna catarrh was considered well nigh incurable. Since the introduction of Peruna to the medical profession thousands of cases are cured annually.

Read The Letters From Famous Men and Women Who Are Now Using and Praising Pe-ru-na.

WM. T. JOHNSON, late United States Army, Tacoma Park, D.C., writes:

"Please put me down as a thorough believer in Peruna as a catarrh remedy and as a tonic good for the effects not only of that obnoxious disease, but to tone up the system that has been overtaxed or run down."

WM. T. JOHNSON.

MRS. WILLIAM KELLY, Landgraft, W.Va., writes:

"I wish to say that my daughter is entirely cured of catarrh, and I feel that I owe a word of praise and thanks to Dr. Hartman for his free and timely advice. It gives me pleasure to recommend it to sufferers with catarrh."

MRS. WILLIAM KELLY.

MISS ROSE DE LA SEN, Windsor avenue, Windsor, Ont., Secretary of the French Women's Clubs of Ontario, Canada, writes:

"I have been a sufferer from ovarian troubles for over four years, which caused me excruciating pains at times, and life looked very dreary to me. My family physician and other doctors prescribed for me, but failed dismally in relieving me, but I am pleased to state that, after years of suffering, I have been entirely cured by your woman's friend, Peruna."

MR. W. EICHLER, No. 153 Degraw street, Brooklyn, N.Y., writes:

"I am glad to report that my little girl has entirely recovered from catarrh of the nose and eyes. I am proud and thankful to say that, with your kind treatment and the Peruna, she is now well and happy, although the weather has been changeable this year."

W. EICHLER.

MRS. SCHAFER, No. 436 Pope Ave., St. Louis, Mo., writes:

"I wrote to you for advice for my daughter Alice, who is now four years old. She has been a puny, sickly, ailing child almost ever since she was born. I was always doctoring until we commenced to use Peruna. Thank God for your good advice and Peruna. She soon grew strong and well. Peruna is a wonderful tonic—the best medicine I ever used.

"I was also in a wretched condition when I wrote you. I had catarrh all through my whole body, but your valuable medicine soon set me all right. I would not have any other medicine. It cured my baby boy of a bad spell of cold and fever. I have given him Peruna off and on ever since he was born, and I think that is why he is so well. We have not had a doctor since we began using Peruna."—MRS. SCHAFER.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL D. T. KIRBY, Washington, D.C., writes:

"I am much impressed with the curative qualities of Peruna, as many of my friends have used it with such good results, and can recommend it to all those who are afflicted with catarrh."

GENERAL D. T. KIRBY.

MRS. ATSY D. RODGERS, Avery, Mo., writes:

"I suffered for two years with catarrh. Peruna has cured me. Last spring I was so bad that I gave up all hopes. I was coughing so hard that it seemed as if it would kill me. I saw one of Dr. Hartman's advertisements and wrote to him. He advised me to take Peruna.

"I wish that all people who have lung trouble would try Dr. Hartman's medicine. I think it is the best medicine in the world."

There are three roads which lead from health to consumption. Over one of these roads pass all of that great multitude of people who die every year of consumption. Each route begins with health and happiness and ends with disease and death.

First road.—A slight cold—neglected—settles in the head or throat—chronic catarrh—extends to the lungs—consumption—death.

Second road.—A slight cold—neglected cough—settles in the lungs—cough gradually growing worse—consumption—death.

Third road.—A cold—neglected—settles in the throat—hoarseness—short breath—consumption—death.

Thousands have just started on one of these roads, all of whom could be easily cured by Peruna. Thousands more are half way to the fatal end of one of these roads who are still curable by a course of treatment with Peruna. Yet other thousands are near the end whose last days could be made bearable and hope of recovery more probable by commencing Peruna without delay.

MRS. MATTIE ZENK writes the following letter from No. 838 Forest Ave., Oak Park, Ill.:

"I have suffered for ten years with chronic catarrh. The slightest cold made me very sick. I used different remedies, and the doctor did as much as he could for me. For two years my condition was very bad. I could not speak aloud for three months. I cannot express how I suffered with my throat.

"Finally I heard of Dr. Hartman's book called 'Health and Beauty.' I read it and wrote to the Doctor, who answered my letter promptly, and I began taking treatment as soon as possible. I am now in perfect health, entirely free from catarrh. I cannot praise Peruna enough. Any one who has chronic catarrh should try Dr. Hartman. He will help any one. I feel grateful for what the Doctor has done for me, and would not do without Peruna. I thank the Doctor very much for his kindness."

MATTIE ZENK.

PHYSICIAN HEAL THYSELF.

A Doctor Who Takes His Own Remedy—The Secret of a Long Life and Vigorous Health.

Dr. Hartman, in speaking of his long and busy career, made use of the following language:

"For a number of years my professional duties compelled me to be much on the road, travelling long distances by rail, night and day, exposed to all kinds of vicissitudes, sleeping and eating in different hotels continually, and through it all I have preserved myself from any derangement of the body resulting from catching cold.

"This could not have been done without Peruna. At the slightest evidence of a cold a few doses of Peruna invariably checked it. If I found myself hawking or frequently blowing my nose, instead of letting it go, as the average man would do, I always took Peruna for a few days, and at no time in my extensive travels have I been obliged to stop a day on account of my health."

MR. ALEXANDER McKENZIE, Montreal, Ont., bookkeeper for the Canadian Jewelery and Importing Company and Scribe for the I.O.O.F., Jeanne of Arc Court, No. 1650, writes:

"As I have used Peruna with happy results, I am glad to endorse it. My system is at times an easy subject to catarrhal colds, especially if I am out in inclement weather or become suddenly chilled. When I get a cold I take Peruna, and it is only a question of a day or two until I am fully restored."

ALEXANDER McKENZIE.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

The Universities of Canada---Toronto University.

Toronto University, which now embraces, besides the usual faculties which are ordinarily identified with all educational institutions of the kind, two denominational universities, three denominational colleges, a college of music, a dental, a pharmacy, an agricultural, and a veterinary school, was founded in a very modest way in the year 1842.

The movement, which ended in it being established, originated with General Simcoe, the first Governor of Upper Canada; but it was not until 1797, or a year after the close of his term of office, that the project assumed definite shape. In that year the Legislative Council and House of Assembly of Upper Canada, in a joint address to King George III., asked that "a certain portion of the waste lands of the province be appropriated as a fund for the establishment and support of a respectable grammar school in each district of the province, and also a college or university for the instruction of youth in the different branches of liberal knowledge."

A favourable answer was returned, and the acting Lieutenant-Governor, the Hon. Peter Russell, directed to determine the manner and character of the appropriation. For both purposes 500,000 acres were set aside; but it was only in 1827 that a royal charter was granted for the establishment of the institution desired, the name given being King's College, an ample proportion of the waste lands being set apart for its endowment. These lands were exchanged, in 1828, for 225,944 acres of Crown reserves.

Notwithstanding the granting of the charter and the endowment, fourteen years elapsed before the college was opened. The delay was due to the terms of the charter, which required all the members of the college staff to be adherents of the Church of England. This clause in the charter was rescinded in 1842 and steps were at once taken towards the erection of a building.

The edifice, which was by no means ambitious in style, was placed on the eastern portion of the site now occupied by the provincial Legislative buildings. Four faculties were provided for—arts, medicine, law and theology, and the first matriculation of students took place in the autumn of 1843.

The public were still dissatisfied with the charter under which the work of the university was carried on. The general desire was for the abolition of the faculty of theology, and as the result of an agitation in this direction, instruction in that subject finally ceased in 1849, while through the formation of a Senate, the public were given a larger measure of control, than they formerly enjoyed. In the affairs of the university, the Crown merely retaining the right to appoint only a limited number of the members of the newly created court. A change was now made in the name of the institution, the University of King's College giving place to the University of Toronto.

In 1853 the university underwent a further transformation, its functions being divided between two newly created organizations, the faculty of arts falling under one, namely, University College, while the faculties of law and medicine came under the jurisdiction of the other, the University of Toronto, to which also was entrusted the administration of the affairs of all the faculties. The models followed in the making of this change were the University of London and University College, London, both of which had then been only recently established.

In its early years the University experienced several changes in its local habitation. When in 1853 by a special act of the Legislature the site granted the University was taken for the proposed new Parliament buildings, a temporary home was found in the old Legislative offices. In 1856 a removal took place again back to King's College building, only to be followed by another change of residence, this time to a building then used by the medical faculty, situated on the site of the present Biological building, whence, in 1858, a transference was made to the newly completed buildings specially erected for the use of the University. There the work has been carried on ever since, save for a brief space in 1890, during the rebuilding of that structure after a fire through which a portion of it was destroyed.

The constitution of both the University and University College remained unchanged until 1887, when it was remodelled by the University Federation Act, whose purpose was to secure for the province a more uniform standard of education by the union of the various denominational colleges with the Provincial University. The Senate was then reconstituted so as to admit of representatives, from the various colleges, that might join with Toronto, sitting in it as members.

The government of the University is entrusted to three bodies, each of which has functions quite distinct from those of the other two. First there is the Board of Trustees, when members are appointed by the Government, and which has charge of the financial affairs of the University. This body pays the staff and all the expenses the work en[illegible] Then there is the Senate, composed of representatives from all the colleges whose province it is to overlook the curriculum and make all the necessary arrangements for examinations. Nothing is initiated in connection with the educational work of the University without the consent of this Board. And lastly there is the University Council which consists of the entire staff of the University and all the federated colleges. The task committed to the Council is that of attending to the discipline of the University, and on several occasions this has been found to be no light duty. About nine years ago, what may be described as a revolt of the students occurred through the interference of the University authorities in some horse play that was going on between some Arts' men. The disturbance was quickly quelled, and, as a consequence of the trouble, one student was expelled.

Over the three boards already mentioned, of course, the Government exercises supreme control, keeping within its power the granting of all moneys required for the University's maintenance, and also the appointing of the staff.

Considerable dissatisfaction prevails in University circles with the existing system of government. Besides the functions of the boards being distinct, their personnel is almost entirely different, so that it is almost impossible for them to act concertedly. The president of the University instead of being, as many desire, chief executive, is merely chairman of the University Council and has nothing whatever to do with the appointing of the staff or, save as an ordinary member of the other two boards, with the administration of the University funds and with the arranging of the curriculum. The result is that the president and the staff are practically powerless in regard to the needs and policy of the University, the whole, say, lying with the government who are not often in accord with the academic body.

It is proposed, but whether or not it will be carried through is quite another matter, that the president be, ex officio, the chairman of the three boards, the belief being that he would thus find himself stronger and better capable to force a consideration of his views on the government.

The present chancellor of the University is Sir William Meredith, who succeeded Mr. Edward Blake in that office on the latter taking up his residence in England.

The presidency is filled by Prof. James Loudon, LL.D., who was appointed to that position in 1892. President Loudon's reign has seen considerable progress in university development. Through his instrumentality, largely, new medical and science buildings have been erected while a new chemical and mineralogical building is in process of construction.

Advances also have been made in other directions by the federation of Trinity University and the affiliation of Ontario Veterinary College.

President Loudon's predecessors in office were Bishop Strachan, Rev. Dr. McCaul and Sir Daniel Wilson.

Besides Trinity University, which is High Church, Anglican in spirit, the denominational institutions federated with Toronto are Victoria University, the Methodist Theological School, Knox College, which is Presbyterian, Wycliffe College, which stands for the Low Church Anglican party, and St. Michael's, the Roman Catholic College.

Last year has, perhaps, been the most marked in the history of the university in regard to building up its strength as an organization. As the result of a tour made in the West by the President, and Dr. McLennan, secretary to the Alumni Association, all Toronto graduates in the West became members of that body. In almost every locality branch associations were formed, making the total strength of the association over 10,000. A new feature was added to the work performed by this body, namely, the fact of each member taking upon himself the task of procuring employment for his fellow-graduates. The aim is to fill, if possible, every important position throughout the Dominion with Toronto Alumni. The Alumni maintains a journal, viz., Toronto Alumni Monthly, which is devoted to the interests of the graduates.

Student life at the university is well organized. There are societies by the score, one to suit almost, it may be said, every kind of disposition. A students' union is in existence which is largely taken advantage of. It is open to all the students of the university; but a lack is felt of an organization which will combine all the faculties and federated colleges. A movement is on foot to form a debating club or dialectic society, by which it is hoped this end will be gained. Residences, one for male and one for female students, are also talked of. The organ of the students is 'Varsity, which appears weekly during the winter months. Last year's attendance of students was the largest on record, the number being close on two thousand.

Catarrh

Sufferers Read !

C. C. Archer, of Brewer, Maine, says: "I have had catarrh for several years. Water would run from my eyes and nose for days at a time. About four months ago I was induced to try Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, and since using the wonderful remedy I have not had an attack. It relieves in 10 minutes."

Military Happenings.

The Royal Scots and the Victoria Rifles are regiments of which any city might be justly proud. On Thursday evening they both paraded on the Champ de Mars, going through a variety of battalion drill. The Victoria Rifles assembled in their armoury up town, and marched by way of St. Catherine, Peel, Dorchester, Beaver Hall and St. James streets to the Champ de Mars, where they took up a position on the western end of the field to go through their manoeuvres. The Royal Scots occupied the eastern portion. Occasionally the one would invade the other's territory. Col. Wilson and Col. Carson commanded the regiments respectively. A peculiar coincidence upon this occasion was the fact that the regiments had identically the same number of men on parade, the exact figure in each instance being 278, both being about one hundred under strength. What lack there was, however, in point of numbers was fully made up by the admirable appearance that the men presented. Two neater or better dressed regiments could scarcely be imagined. The Royal Scots, in the semi-darkness, naturally showed to the better advantage, owing to the fact that they wore their white shell jackets. When the admirable effect produced by these was observed, the only looker could not but regret that the officers did not appear in the parade jackets worn by the Black Watch and the Gordon Highlanders. An officer belonging to this latter regiment, who is provisionally attached to the Royal Scots, was noted in the ranks wearing the approved costume. Had this not been the case the incongruous appearance presented by the other officers would not have been so strikingly observable. The sooner the entire body of the officers belonging to this crack corp make the change in question the better it will be for the appearance of the regiment as a whole at the weekly parades. On their return to their Armory the usual supper was served to the officers of the Victoria Rifles, a number of the officers of the Royal Scots being entertained.

The Prince of Wales Fusiliers will next week abandon the company drill that has been in operation since the commencement of the drill season. Instead there will be two battalion parades each week up to the date of inspection of June 4th. The officers of the regiment have decided to adopt the practise of inviting their lady friends to partake of the privileges of the mess room every Tuesday evening, when light refreshments will be served upon the conclusion of the parade. The services of Sergeant Pasthke, of St. Johns, Que., have been secured as drill instructor for the balance of the drill season. The committee of the officers, who went to Burlington to arrange the details of the reception for the regiment in that city on Victoria Day, report that a most enjoyable time may be anticipated. Great preparations are being made by the local militia of Burlington to give the visiting regiment the best kind of a reception. Accommodation for the men has been procured at two of the hotels, where 300 men can be accommodated at one and 150 at another at the same time. The hotels are the best in town, so that no lack of comfort need be feared by those who take in the trip.

Three of the former non-commissioned officers of the 3rd Field Battery, Messrs. Ben I. Holdbrook, late Q.M.S.; Thomas V. Bell, late Q. M. S., and W. J. Rowland, ex-Senior Sargeant, have written to say that a misconstruction has been placed upon an item that appeared in this column a couple of weeks ago, relative to the retirement of a number of the older non-commissioned officers in the Battery. "I am sure," writes one of them, "that the officer commanding did not intend to imply that these non-commissioned officers had been removed from the corp on account of age and inefficiency." In order that no misconception shall exist, Major Stephens, the officer commanding, in response to a request, made the following statement: B. T. Holdbrook joined the 3rd F. B. in 1837, served continuously till 1903, and retired after 16 years' faithful service, with the rank of Q. M. S. Thos. V. Bell joined in 1834, and served till 1904, having risen likewise to the rank of Q. M. S. with 30 years' service to his credit. W. J. Rowland joined in 1897 and served till 1904, retiring with the rank of sergeant. All these men were devoted to the Battery's interest during the entire time of their connection with it and retired after years of long and faithful service, the appreciation of which has been more than once expressed by the O. C. To their places have been promoted younger non-commissioned officers who, with such creditable examples to follow will no doubt contribute to the future successes of the Battery. The success of any corps lies mainly in the quality and enthusiasm of its non-commissioned officers, and I am happy to say that the 3rd Field Battery is equipped to-day with a group of young, enthusiastic and intelligent non-commissioned officers, who are devoted to their corps, and who when the time comes will give a good account of themselves.

The Canadian Army Service Corp will go into camp on the 26th of June, to prepare for the annual camp of the cavalry brigade, which this year opens two days later than the date mentioned. Major Lockerby, the commanding officer, announces that there are still one or two vacancies in the ranks to be filled, and that he will be glad to meet intending recruits any Monday night in the regimental quarters at the Drill Hall. Up to the time of inspection there will be squad drill and parade every Monday night. The comfortable and well-appointed quarters of the regiment were on Thursday evening the scene of a very enjoyable smoker, the programme being supplied by members of the corp. Songs were contributed by Mr. Ritchie, Corp. Blackmore, Sergt. Shaw, Pte. Patton and Pte. Benton. A most amusing boxing bout was given by Pte. Brown and Pte. Valliers. These gentlemen were egged on to renewed exertions by the exultant shouts of the onlookers. However, the affair ended up in the most amiable spirit, no blood being shed. A feature of the entertainment was the surprisingly capable fashion in which the accompaniments were played on the piano by Master Willie Eckstein, a very small boy whose mastery of the instrument is at once complete and thorough.

An inspection of the Montreal brigade has been arranged for the 4th of June, under the direction of Lord Dundonald, when it is anticipated that, at least, one outside regiment, the 48th Highlanders, of Toronto, will participate. The general officer commanding has frequently expressed a desire to see the two great Highland regiments of Canada brigaded together, and the present is thought to be a most opportune time for such a demonstration. The Royal Scots had been invited to attend the inspection of the Toronto brigade on Victoria Day, but the review that was scheduled for that date in the Queen City has been called off. That fact has thus enabled the local Highland corps to press upon their Toronto brethren the desirability of coming to Montreal for the 4th of June. The Royal Scots are hopeful that the invitation will be accepted. The New York Telegraph has this to say of the visit of the 48th Highlanders (of Toronto) to that city:—Great is the havoc being wrought among feminine hearts by the bra' lads of the Forty-eighth Highlanders, Canadian Militia, who, with their kilts and the skirling of their pipes, have captured hundreds of fair admirers since the opening of the military tournament in the Garden this week. Last night they divided honours with General Adna R. Chaffee, chief of staff of the United States army, who reviewed the exercises.

The Victoria Rifles will, on the 14th of this month, go through a number of manoeuvres at Back River. Generally speaking it will take the form of a night attack by a scouting party upon the piquets of a defending force. The manoeuvres should prove very interesting, as the parades so far have been well attended.

The 6th London Field Battery, C.A., which has not been on parade for several years, is disbanded, and removed from the list of corps of the active militia.

The Highland Cadet Battalion's engagements for the coming week are:—Monday, 9th May, bugle practice and recruits, and special class for assault-of-arms. Tuesday, 10th May, Point Company, Engineer's armory, no uniform. Wednesday, 11th May, battalion drill, uniform; bugle band to attend. Saturday, 14th May, recruits and special class for assault-of-arms. Fred Lydon, Major.

The formation of two additional companies to the 91st Highlanders, Hamilton, making six in all, is authorized, and a badge and motto for the regiment approved.

Lieut.-Col. Denison, of Toronto, who recently examined the Brockville provisional school of instruction, pronounced it the best, both in training and results, that he had seen. Eighteen officers and seven n.c.o.'s took the course. The officers of the school to whom these effective results are due, were: Lieut. Horetsky, R.C.R., Fredericton, N.B.; Sergt.-Major Collins, of the Canadian School of Musketry, and Sergt.-Instructor Price, of the London Infantry School.

The 41st Regiment, Brockville Rifles, will be reorganised with an establishment of four companies instead of eight.

During the progress of the South African campaign it was said that the bayonet would never again be used in modern warfare. But only the other day, on the Yalu river, the Japs used the bayonet with tremendous effect. Officers here are of the opinion that such a demonstration of the utility of this old-time weapon will prove exceptional. Col. Ibbotson, in discussing the point, said that the modern rifle had rendered the utility of the bayonet problematical. Major Stephens, on the contrary, drew attention to the fact that the Japanese Field Artillery — which might be assumed to be armed in the most modern and practical way —carries carbines to which are attached sword bayonets of a special pattern. Besides this weapon they also carry revolvers. Discussing another phase of the same subject, the Pall Mall Gazette says: "The controversy as to the retention of the lance as a cavalry weapon is by no means over, and it is important to note that the Indian army has not conformed to the decision arrived at by the British war office—or, in other words, that Lord Kitchener has not been converted to the new way of thinking. What the opponents of the lance persistently ignore is the obvious fact that for savage warfare this weapon is as effective to-day as it ever was, and that it is against savages that we generally fight. Moreover, it should be remembered that whereas the trained lancer can readily discard the lance in favour of the rifle when the former is unsuitable, it is worse than useless to put a lance in the hands of a man who has not been taught to wield it. Thus common sense would seem to suggest that the efficient use of the lance should be taught in times of peace, and the lance taken on service or left at home, according to the sort of war in which our troops are to be engaged."

Col. Carson announces that the history of the Royal Scots, which was written by Capt. Chambers, formerly of this city, but now Usher of the Black Rod at Ottawa, is in the press and will be issued within a month.

Owing to the increased establishment there will be vacancies for eighteen first-class men in the recruiting ranks of the 3rd Field Battery. As the battery goes into camp early in June men contemplating joining had better do so before the vacancies are filled.

There will be a brigade church parade on Sunday, May 29th. The various regiments will as usual congregate on the Champ de Mars, marching thence to the churches which will be chosen later.

LAVAL STUDENTS' ANNUAL PILGRIMAGE.

The students of Laval University will make their annual pilgrimage to Bonsecours chapel to-morrow morning. The students will form ranks at the University at eight o'clock. Rt. Rev. Mgr. Archambault, vice-rector of the university, will celebrate mass. Rev. George Gauthier, of the Cathedral, will give the sermon for the occasion.

To Locate Trout Lakes.

Mr. L. O. Armstrong, the colonization agent of the C. P. R., leaves to-day to locate trout lakes off the Mississaga route. The number of anglers that have already come into the country from the United States since the opening of the fishing season shows a decided advance over former seasons. Later on, from reports in the possession of the company, the expectation is that a record year will result. Mr. Armstrong says that there is more and more a disposition upon the part of the anglers who go long distances after the finny tribe to seek resorts as largely virgin as possible, and it is with a view to supplying this demand, as also to be in a position to afford information to intending tourists, that Mr. Armstrong is taking his intended trip.

HER FATHER WAS A DRUNKARD

A Plucky Young Lady Takes on Herself to Cure Her Father of the Liquor Habit.

STORY OF HER SUCCESS.

A portion of her letter reads as follows: "My father had often promised mother to stop drinking, and would do so for a time, but then returned to it stronger than ever. One day after a terrible spree, he said to us, 'It's no use. I can't stop drinking.' Our hearts seemed to turn to stone, and we decided to try the Tasteless Samaria Prescription, which we had read about in the papers. We gave him the remedy, entirely without his knowledge, in his tea, coffee or food regularly, according to directions, and he never knew he was taking it. One package removed all his desire for liquor, and he says it is now distasteful to him. His health and appetite are also wonderfully improved, and no one would know him for the same man. It is now fifteen months since we gave it to him and we feel sure that the change is for good. Please send me one of your little books, as I want to give it to a friend."

THEY ARE STRICT IN CRACOW PARLIAMENT.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Cracow, May 7.—Andrew Wilk, a representative of the popular party, was discovered the other day sending to his private residence for his own use a parcel containing a great quantity of writing paper, envelopes, pencils and pens. These articles are supplied for use in the chamber only. The chancellor, informed of the fact, confiscated these articles, and the president of the Polish party censured Wilk very severely. The affair is a paltry one, but the Germans, always hostile to the Poles, are making capital of it and it will no doubt be impossible for the Poles, even if in compassion for the man's knowing no better they wished to do so, to refrain from expelling him.

Seven Thousand People Vaccinated.

Special to the Montreal Star

Sydney, N. S., May 7.—To date seven thousand people have been vaccinated in Sydney. There have been sixty-one cases of smallpox, thirty-two of whom have been discharged, nineteen being still in hospital. The condition of the patients is good. There has been only one death. Seven houses are now under quarantine.

A London newspaper gives this little item of American news: "If a white man kills a negro in the town of Lake Charles, La., he is fined 50 cents. This has led to a good deal of grumbling among the white inhabitants."

STREET CLEANERS HAVE TUBERCULOSIS

Serious Problem Faces the New York Health Department.

LIFE LIMIT IS FIVE YEARS

For the Average Man Who Works Steadily in the Dusty Thoroughfares.

From the Special Correspondent of the Montreal Star Resident in New York:

New York, May 7.—Through an investigation conducted at the instance of Health Commissioner Woodbury, it has been discovered that a large proportion, possibly one-third, of the force of 5,000 street cleaners are infected with tuberculosis. The disease has been contracted by breathing the germ-laden dust brushed up from the streets. It is estimated that the average man cannot live more than five or six years if he remains at the work. The menace to the city of such a medium for the propagation of the disease has set the department heads to thinking.

Every man who has been employed was examined by civil service physicians and pronounced free from organic disease before he was placed on the roll. The malady has been contracted during an average service of less than five years. The investigation conducted by the medical examiners was confined to those who applied for sick leave during the year. It was found that one-half of those applying were suffering from advanced stages of tubercular trouble. These patients numbered about five a day or 1,800 in a year. Eliminating those who applied twice, the number is brought down to about 1,000, or one-fifth of the force. That this was far from the total number, however, was evidenced by the fact that the men rarely made application until beyond hope of recovery.

The examiners say that the force has become alarmed by the spread of the disease and the men will not ask for treatment if they think their ailment is likely to be pronounced consumption. The Health Department has a clinic for them, but they have become afraid to go there because so many have learned the dreaded news.

HUGE RAILWAY TRAFFIC.

At a meeting of the State Railroad Commission yesterday, a comprehensive statement of the traffic business of the surface and elevated railroads of the city brought down to February 29 of this year, was made public. The report for the year ending on that day shows that 670,000,000 passengers were carried in the Borough of Manhattan alone, not including transfers, which were 166,000,000. This was an increase of 37,463,168 over the previous twelve months. The steam railroads of the United States in the same period carried 568,000,000 passengers.

The total number of passengers carried in Brooklyn on all lines was 320,107,163; an increase of 24,363,201 over the previous twelve months. The passengers carried on transfers numbered 61,281,419.

The greater city, on all railroads, surface, and elevated, carried 1,036,834,773 passengers, an increase of 65,075,964. The total in all boroughs for the previous year was 971,758,809.

STEEL AND IRON TRADE.

Experts in the steel and iron business are doubtful concerning the possibility of a betterment in the immediate future. The majority of the comments on the situation contain a note of pessimism, and it would seem as if the trend of business is downward and that progress has been temporarily arrested. It is difficult to reconcile some of the opinions, but the fact seems apparent that trade conditions are not so good as they were a month or so ago. Those who are best qualified to judge, because of their intimate relations with the big manufacturing concerns, say that a halt has been called in the advancing movement of the trade. They do not regard the situation as serious, nor do they believe that it will drift back into the conditions prevailing three or four months ago. They take the ground that the present condition is merely temporary, and that a rally in business is among the possibilities of the next two or three months.

BABY BURNED TO DEATH.

In Fire Which Destroyed Two Buildings in Quebec.

Quebec, May 7.—A fire started in the basement of a three-storey wooden building in Park street, St. Roch's Thursday night, and as all the adjoining buildings were built in wood, the firemen, upon arrival, rang in a second and third alarm. Two buildings occupied by five tenants, were completely destroyed, and a nine months' old baby, the child of Gaudiose Tremblay, saddler, perished in the flames, its body being found about 11 o'clock. The fire started in Tremblay's residence, supposed to be due to the overturning of a lamp by one of the latter's children. Tremblay and his wife were visiting a sick neighbour at the time. Loss about $3,000; partly insured.

PRESBYTERIAN WOMEN.

Missionary Society Closes Its Annual Meeting.

Toronto, May 7.—The Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church concluded its twenty-eighth annual meeting Thursday afternoon. The motion to reduce the number of delegates from the branches to the annual meeting was rejected, the feeling being that the gathering together of such a large body of workers was an incentive to much good work.

The election of officers resulted as follows:—President, Mrs. Shortreed; vice-presidents, Mrs. Maclaren, Mrs. G. H. Robinson, Mrs. Telfer, Mrs. Jeffery; recording-secretary, Miss B. Macmurchy; corresponding-secretary, Miss Martin; home secretary, Miss J. Caven; international conference secretary, Miss Thornton; secretary of Indian and Chinese Associations in the North-West and British Columbia, Miss Craig; foreign secretary, Mrs. J. J. Bell; secretary and treasurer of publications, Miss Parsons; treasurer, Miss George; editor of Tidings, Mrs. McGillivray.

Nova Scotia Lady Found Splendid Health in a Combined Treatment of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets and Dodd's Kidney Pills.

There is nothing in the world that so quickly and surely brightens up a run down woman as a combined treatment of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets and Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets ensure the proper digestion of the food—make sure that every part of the body gets the food that it needs.

Dodd's Kidney Pills ensure healthy kidneys—make sure that the kidneys strain all the impurities out of the blood, and send pure blood coursing through the body.

That these are the essentials of health and vigour is proven by thousands of statements like that of Mrs. John A. Lawrence, of Maitland, N.S.:

"I have used six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and six of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets, and have not enjoyed as good health in years. I cannot praise them too highly."

Women who are suffering in secret—and there are thousands of them in Canada—should take their sisters' advice and use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets and Dodd's Kidney Pills.

MOST DREADED FOE OF THE CZAR

Gershunin, the Dreaded Anarchist, to Be Executed This Month.

HE HAD LAID MANY PLOTS

Was for a Short Time Resident of Montreal During a Visit to America.

(Specially written for the Montreal Star by C. W. Dubin, formerly an officer of the Russian Navy.)

The announcement has just been made through the Russian press that Dr. Gershunin has been caught and sentenced to death; his execution takes place in St. Petersburg some day in May not yet fixed. This man has long been considered by Russian officialdom as the most formidable Nihilist living and as a perpetual menace to the law and order of several other European countries.

Dr. Gershunin, a Polish Jew, was driven into the Nihilist camp by persecution on account of his Israelite descent. It is alleged that his parents were both killed in an anti-Semitic riot in Kieff, and this made Gerschunin, then a youth of eighteen, a bitter enemy of the Russians and particularly of Russian officialdom.

Dr. Gerschunin took a prominent part in some half dozen revolutionary movements in South Russia, notably at Odessa, Kieff and Kharkoff. On these occasions, disguised as a workman, he fought the Russian police and troops side by side with the men whom he had incited to rebellion, and though nearly all of his men were arrested, he himself was not caught till recently.

He was a leader in the daring attempt to poison the present Czar in January, 1897, and has been mixed in the plots of assassins of Austria. After the failure of these murderous lookout for him, he defied them and became the acknowledged chief of the Russian revolutionists and anarchists of the other countries. He was a strong believer in political assassinations and bomb outrages. His temporary homes in Vienna, Berlin and some Italian cities became the centres of many plots, and he held the whole Nihilist organization of Europe in his hand.

THE CENTRE OF THE PLOTS.

The numerous branches of the secret revolutionary league in Russia were sending money collected for the cause to him, and were taking their instructions from him. When some desperate deed had to be accomplished somewhere in Russia, it was Gerschunin who planned the details and despatched the emissaries to carry out his ideas. Sometimes a police officer had to be removed by assassination; at other times outbreaks of treasonable discontent had to be organized in different parts of Russia or abroad. Gerschunin plotted and planned everything, and always contrived to find willing agents of his will.

During the six years that he spent abroad, the Russian Government was able to trace about a score of local revolutionary outbreaks among the workmen of Russian towns, four outbreaks among peasants, three risings in the Caucasian provinces, six political assassinations, a number of student risings in various university towns, and eight unsuccessful attempts at assassination —all to Gerschunin's followers.

Besides this revolutionary activity, he edited a Nihilist organ, wrote manifestoes, compiled records of crimes recorded in history as having been committed by successive Russian Czars, and contributed vigorous criticism of the Russian government's policy to numerous leading journals in several European countries.

About two years ago, Gerschunin was reproached by his comrades with remaining abroad in safety while his emissaries risked their lives in realizing his schemes in Russia. The reproach stung him to the quick, and as he was the author of many atrocious deeds in Germany, Austria and Italy, and the further keeping of his abode in those countries was getting very precarious, he immediately went back to Russia to continue his campaign of terrorism right under the nose of Russian officialdom.

He continued to be a plotter in the background and to find other men to do the deeds of violence which he planned. He persuaded an enthusiastic young revolutionist named Balanschoff assassinated the Minister of the Interior, Sipiagin, and elaborated all the details of the crime, which was successfully perpetrated, though Balanschoff was arrested red-handed and executed. Gerschunin then arranged the attempts to assassinate Prince Obolensky and Governor-General Bogdanovitch, but both of these failed.

Recently, Gerschunin contrived to gain a remarkable and mysterious ascendancy over a young artillery officer, Lieutenant Gregorieff, who under his influence, was transformed within a short time from a royal servant of the Czar into a red-hot revolutionist. Gerchunin wanted to have Pobiedonostseff, the Procurator of the Holy Synod, assassinated, and he induced Lieut. Gregorieff to undertake the task.

Gregorieff went to the appointed place with the intention of murdering the aged statesman. When, however, he realized how old and feeble his intended victim was he refrained from shooting.

Gerschunin, wild with fury, sent an anonymous communication to the authorities denouncing the young officer. Lieut. Gregorieff was arrested, and compromising papers were found in his possession. Gerschunin's treacherous act, however, led to his own downfall. Gregorieff, bitterly regretting his criminal folly, supplied the police with information which enabled them to lay their hands on Gerschunin just as he was leaving St. Petersburg in the disguise of a priest.

Gregorieff's information also led to three of Gerschunin's closest confederates being seized; a student named Wezenfed, a workman named Mentschikoff, and a young woman of good family, Mlle. Raemianikoff.

The trial took place in St. Petersburg and the proceedings were secret. It transpired, however, that Gerschunin received his sentence of death calmly without flinching. Lieut. Gregorieff, on the other hand, pleaded that he was Gerschunin's unwilling victim and begged for mercy.

When he, too, heard his sentence of death, he threw himself on the ground before the tribunal and besought the judges to intercede for him and allow him to expiate his offence by fighting as a common soldier, in the foremost rank of whichever body of Russian troops in the Far East had the most dangerous military task to perform. His application was submitted to the Czar, and it is expected that his petition will be granted.

The workman Menstchikoff was sentenced to death, but it is understood that the capital punishment will be remitted and that he will be incarcerated in the terrible prison of Schlisselburg till a natural death relieves him from a fate always regarded as worse than execution.

The student Wezenfed escaped with a sentence of two years' imprisonment, and Mlle. Raemianikoff received the slightest punishment, one year's imprisonment.

All the culprits are still young in years. Gerschunin is 35; Lieut. Gregorieff is 27; Menstchikoff is 26; the student Wezenfed is 22, and Mlle. Raemianikoff is 24.

THE OPENING UP OF DOMINION STREET.

The Railway Commissioners Listened to the Interested Parties But Reserved Judgment.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, Ont., May 7.—The Railway Commission on Friday heard the application of the city of Montreal and the city of Ste. Cunegonde for the opening up of Dominion street, Ste. Cunegonde, across the track of the G. T. R. The city of Montreal was represented by Hon. Mr. Atwater and Mr. Ethier, and Ste. Cunegonde by Mr. Dupuis, M.L.A. Mr. Wainwright opposed the application on the ground that the city of Montreal was at the present time engaged in negotiations respecting the doing away with the evil of level crossings. The railway company were willing to spend some three millions of dollars to remove the danger and now the city was taking part in proceedings to establish another death trap. There must be something behind the proceedings. Mr. Atwater, in reference to this, said the council of Montreal were only anxious to have the street opened.

Mr. Biggar contended that the city of Ste. Cunegonde could only expropriate in this matter for the purpose of building a tunnel. If the street were opened at all the whole cost of the work should be borne by the city.

Hon. A. G. Blair asked if the negotiations with the city referred to by Mr. Wainwright were actually in progress.

Mr. Wainwright said they were at present dormant, waiting for the committee to be called together. The council had appointed a committee in the matter.

Mr. Atwater did not know of the committee. To base the opposition on this ground was to base it wrongly.

Mr. Blair said that by entering into the negotiations the city had recognized the danger of the level crossings, and now they were trying to establish another.

Mr. Dupuis, M.L.A., dwelt on the number of fatalities at this point, and urged that a subway was impossible, as the spur of the mountain commenced within a hundred feet of the line.

Mr. Savigeau, M.L.A., on behalf of St. Joseph, urged the opening of the street.

Ald. D. Gallery, M.P., substantiated Mr. Wainwright's assertion regarding the appointment of a committee of the Montreal city council and urged the granting of an order for a level crossing.

Dr. Pouport, chairman of the Ste. Cunegonde finance board, urged the granting of an order, and stated that his council was willing to bear one-fourth of the cost. Judgment was reserved.

The court then adjourned.

How Iron-ox Tablets Completely Cured Jas. Huston of 20 Years' Serious Trouble.

January 27, 1903.

I cannot express in words the praise that is due to Iron-ox Tablets, which I got as a trial package from our druggist, Mr. McDonald, who told me they were just what I wanted. I took them more for fun, but before I had finished one box I got great relief. I was subject to great misery after meals, with bloating, and would rift up bile of the bitterest taste, and always woke up in the morning in the same way for the last twenty years. Had tried all medicines, but now I am completely cured, and it was by taking Iron-ox Tablets. Words cannot express my gratitude to you.

SUBURBAN COMPANY'S BILL WAS REPORTED.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Quebec, May 7. — Another big fight took place yesterday before the Railway Committee over the Suburban Company's bill. The measure was finally adopted with a few amendments, the Terminal Railway people succeeding in excepting the parishes of Pointe aux Trembles and Longueuil from the company's operations. The vote was 13 to 10. Mr. Mullarkey tried hard to prevent the passage of the clause ensuring a perpetual charter to the company, but was told that this was regulated by the general law.

SIX FACTORIES ARE FOR THE OPEN SHOP.

Chicago, May 7. — Following the lockout of the boot and shoe workers in six of the large Chicago shoe factories, the manufacturers have notified the officers of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union that the plants will hereafter be run as open shops, and that the union label will be discontinued.

Mason work was shut down on many partly completed buildings throughout the city yesterday by the lockout of the limestone and cement teamsters. It is estimated by employers and union officials that 15,000 to 20,000 workers are out of employment.

More Harbour Boards.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 7.—The Government intends to place the harbours of Port Arthur and Fort William under the control of harbour commissioners. The Minister of Marine has given notice of bills for that purpose.

Story of a Life.

Mrs. H. W. Fretter earnestly requests all suffering ladies to read this card, which she allows to be published from a sense of gratitude to Dr. Coonley and Duty to Him who made the doctor the instrument whereby the Orange Lily treatment was discovered.

"After suffering for several years with displacement (prolapsus uteri) and ulceration, for which I had received treatment from various physicians in vain it was discovered that I was suffering from a cancerous growth, too. This rapidly developed, and all hope of saving my life given up, and the above picture to the left, which I had taken at that time for friends, was the last I ever expected to have taken. About that time Mrs. Effie Rice told me that the Orange Lily, made by Dr. Coonley, of Detroit, Mich., had cured her of severe troubles, and urged me to give it a trial. I did so without faith or hope, but, thank God, after two months' treatment, I began to feel better and gain flesh, and now I am well and strong and free from all traces of those troubles—see my picture to the right, as I am now. I will be pleased to answer all letters of enquiry and send sample if stamp is enclosed for reply. There is no deception or scheme to get money in this, and I earnestly pray that all who read this will give the treatment a trial if they need it."

THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY

TRADE THERAPION MARK

This successful and highly popular remedy, as employed in the Continental Hospitals by Ricord, Rostan, Jobert, Velpeau, and others, combines all the desiderata to be sought in a medicine of the kind and surpasses everything hitherto employed.

THERAPION No. 1 in a remarkably short time, often a few days only removes all discharges from the urinary organs superseding injections, the use of which does irreparable harm by laying the foundation of stricture and other serious diseases.

THERAPION No. 2 for impurity of the blood, scurvy, pimples, eruptions, blotches, pains and swelling of the joints, secondary symptoms, gout, rheumatism, and all diseases for which it has been too much a fashion to employ mercury, sarsaparilla, &c., to the destruction of sufferers' teeth and ruin of health. This preparation purifies the whole system through the blood, and thoroughly eliminates every poisonous matter from the body.

THERAPION No. 3 for nervous exhaustion, impaired vitality, sleeplessness, and all the distressing consequences of early error, excess, residence in hot, unhealthy climates, &c. It possesses surprising power in restoring strength and vigour to the debilitated.

THERAPION is sold by all the principal Chemists and Merchants throughout the World. Price in England 2/9 & 4/6. In ordering, state which of the three numbers is required, and observe the Trade Mark, which is a fac-simile of word "Therapion" as it appears on the Government Stamp (in white letters on a red ground) affixed to every package by order of Her Majesty's Commissioners, and without which it is a forgery.

APPEAL FOR AID TO CITY COUNCIL

A Hero's Widow In Distress to Be Granted $500.

POLICE BENEVOLENT FUND

Civic Finance Committee Grudges Money for the Mountain "Lookout."

A question interesting to members of the police force came before the Finance Committee for adjustment yesterday afternoon. For some time it has been the practice to devote all moneys accruing from absences and sickness on the part of the men to swelling the Police Benevolent Fund. The committee was of opinion that this method of treatment was wholly illegal and was apt to engender favouritism. In order to clarify the atmosphere, the following resolution, forwarded by the Police Committee, was referred to a special sub-committee to report:

"That it has been customary for the superintendent of police to place in the hands of the treasurer of the Montreal Police Benevolent Society, from the time of its formation, all stoppages made by him in connection with pay of the officers and constables on account of absence, sickness or any other cause. And your committee beg to recommend in order that said practice be rendered legal, that in future in all cases in which the superintendent of police shall judge proper, according to the by-laws, to make a reduction from the salary of any officer or constable for the reasons above mentioned, it shall be the duty of the city treasurer to remit to the treasurer of the Montreal Police Benevolent and Pension Society, the sums previously and in future so deducted as they may appear on the pay roll of the Police Department, signed and certified by the superintendent of police."

When this resolution had been read, the legality of such a mode of procedure was immediately called in question. The members felt that when moneys had been voted for such a specific purpose as wages they could not be diverted legally to any other uses. Ald. Deserres favoured the granting of a stated sum to the Police Benevolent Fund and the keeping of all moneys "docked" from the wages of employes in a separate fund. Ald. Ekers thought that, in such an event, the deductions would be very much less numerous than at present. That brought up the question of possible favouritism in making the deductions. Ald. Sadler contending that it was questionable whether action should be relegated to the discretion of police captains. Ald. L. A. Lapointe was strongly against appropriating moneys to the Benevolent Fund, as the city had no control over it whatever.

A HERO'S WIDOW.

A pathetic request was submitted to the committee on behalf of the widow of the late James Curtis, who lost his life about a year ago. Curtis came to his end while endeavouring to rescue a civic employe who had received an electric shock.

Mr J. M. Ferguson, who preferred the request for relief, did not mention any stated sum, leaving that to the generosity and good sense of the committee.

Ald. Ekers pointed out that the committee could not legally vote moneys for charity, and he was of opinion that it was only upon such ground that the committee could act.

Ald. Carter maintained that it was only just the city should look upon the application with favourable eyes. It was undoubtedly the fact that Curtis had really sacrificed himself to save the life of a city employe, and had left a wife and a young family in almost destitute circumstances. He proposed that Mrs. Curtis be paid $300 in settlement of any claim she had against the city.

Ald. Ekers said, there was no claim against the city that could be collected. He, therefore, modified the motion to that extent, and suggested to have the motion submitted to the city attorneys for approval, which was accordingly done.

THE MOUNTAIN "LOOK-OUT."

The members of the Finance Committee look with no favourable eye upon the proposition to spend additional moneys for the new "Look-out" on the mountain.

The chairman of the Parks and Ferries Committee, Ald. Robillard, appeared and asked for the sum of $3,000 to complete the "lookout." Ald. Robillard contended that the "look-out" could be completed and made a thing of beauty if the extra $3,000 was voted.

In reply, Ald. Carter said he would vote no such sum to complete a structure that had no artistic features. The 'lookout" on the mountain ought to be built in a way that would be a credit to the city. He was sure the uncompleted "lookout" was no thing of beauty. It would be wasting money to try and complete a structure that was already so much disliked. The present structure should be pulled down and a new, and artistic building put up.

It was decided to let the matter stand over till the next meeting.

TO ENTERTAIN PRESSMEN.

Members of the French Press Association waited upon the committee and asked that the Association be given the sum of $500 to entertain French pressmen who would visit the city in June next. The request was referred to the Reception Committee for consideration.

A communication was read from a deputation of the French medical men of North America, saying that a number of medical men of North America would visit Montreal this summer and would call upon the Mayor and aldermen. The visitors will be received by the Civic Reception Committee.

THE PUMP TROUBLE.

Ald. Clearihue, chairman of the Water Committee, submitted a method of partial settlement of the difficulty that has arisen over the vibration caused by the electric pump at the McTavish street pump house.

The city has been unable, owing to legal restrictions, to operate the electric pump, but all the time it has been paying $20 a day for current. The account has now reached the amount of $4,000.

Ald. Clearihue drew the attention of the committee to the fact that until the pump is running again the company agrees to accept 10 per cent. on its cost of installation. Ald. Clearihue said this would be about $2 a day instead of $20.

Ald. Carter said at present, and till such time as final responsibility were placed for the cause of the vibration nuisance, it was clearly the duty of the city to keep the damages down as low as possible.

This settlement was accepted.

HOSPITAL AMBULANCES.

There is a prospect of the city increasing its contributions in aid of various hospitals. No less than three applications for assistance from this quarter were submitted. One of these was from the Hotel Dieu, which desires a contribution toward the maintainence of an ambulance. Ald. Sadler said that at present the city voted $500 annually to the General and Notre Dame Hospitals. And if other hospitals were to be put upon the list, he suggested to include the Western, an institution that was doing much good. All the requests mentioned were laid on the table.

In reply to a question by Ald. L. A. Lapointe, as to the reason of the non-collection of taxes from a few large firms in the city. City Treasurer Robb said that the cases in question were in dispute and had been handed to the city attorneys for settlement.

The sum of $312,000, as the city's share of street expropriations was voted as follows: St. Lambert Hill, $89,000; St. Antoine, $74,000; Notre Dame, $132,000; Robin, $14,650, and St. Timothee, $2,400.

POLICE INSPECTION.

Details of the Police Committee's Automobile Tour.

After visiting No. 2 police station yesterday a quick run was made by the Police Committee and its friends to No. 11, on St. Catherine street. There everything was found to be in splendid order. At No. 11, Ald. Marchand made a speech in which he advocated a new station for St. Mary's ward. After No. 3 station was inspected, the automobiles, in which the whole party rode, went at great speed through Lafontaine Park to No. 14 station, on Rachel street. At this station, another photograph of the party was taken. Hence the party went to the residence of Mr. U. H. Dandurand, 597 Sherbrooke street, where refreshments were enjoyed. No. 4 and No. 5 stations were found in the best of order. The next stop was The Corona, where refreshments and speeches took up the time until after 6 o'clock. The west end stations were all visited in turn, and everybody seemed pleased with the condition of affairs. Among those who were in the party were the following:—Ald. St. Denis, Ald. Walsh, Ald. Marchand, Ald. Paquin, Ald. Wilson, Ald. Chausse, Chief Legault, Sub-Chief Campeau, Inspectors Leggett, Lamouche and McMahon, Quartermaster Kehoe, Chief Detective Carpenter and J. J. Barry, secretary of the Police Committee.

At the morning service in Christ Church Cathedral Rev. A. T. Foster, M.A., will preach, and in the evening there will be a sermon by the vicar, Rev. Dr. Symonds, on "The Religious Aspect of Nature."

Rev. G. Osborne Troop will preach at St. Martin's to-morrow evening on "The supposed cruelties of the God of the Bible."

To-morow being Rogation Sunday there will be special hymns and procession at the Church of S. John the Evangelist.

BIBLE DISCUSSION.—At the Sunday afternoon meeting at Empire Hall to-morrow, there will be a discussion on the Bible, arising out of Canon Henson's recent article, and Rev. G. Osborne Troop's sermon of last Sunday.

CURTAIN DRAWN ON VALLIERES MATTER

The Incident Closes With Lively Discussion In Legislature.

MR. PREVOST WAS SCORED

Hon. Mr. Pelletier Said He Should Prove Charges When He Makes Them.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Press Gallery of the Legislature, Quebec, May 7. — The Montreal Bill got as far as the Legislative Council, where it was read a first time yesterday and fixed for a second reading on Monday. It cannot therefore be taken up by the Private Bills Committee of that House before Wednesday.

But as Thursday, Ascension Day, is a holiday, it is a question whether the House will ask the delegation to come down and remain over the day or return to Montreal and come back again for Friday. Nor is it likely that the delegation would care to come for Friday alone and return again for the following Monday. Consequently the bill may go over till the week after next.

As usual on Fridays, there was only a handful of members in their seats when the Speaker took the chair. Most of the others had gone to Montreal by the afternoon train and the Speaker followed them after calling Mr. Giard to the chair.

THE VALLIERES CASE.

When the report of the committee on Privileges and Elections was presented, and its adoption moved by the chairman, Hon. Mr. Pelletier asked what Mr. Prevost, who had made such a serious charge against Ald. Vallieres, was going to do about it. The member for Terrebonne had made his declaration from his place as a member of the House and the committee on Privileges and Elections has preferred to accept the sworn statements of Messrs. Vallieres and Leclaire to those of Messrs. Hebert and Gratton. Ald. Hebert was described by Mr. Pelletier as an informer, and he regretted exceedingly that such an individual could be found among the aldermen of Montreal. As for the charge made by Mr. Prevost, it had all ended in smoke. Having failed to prove the allegations of his solemn declaration, he ought to know what to do. Mr. Prevost affected not to understand what Mr. Pelletier said.

The latter said that he had spoken plainly enough for an intelligent man to understand, and that Mr. Prevost should know that in failing to prove the truth of the charges formulated by him on the faith of his position as a member of the House, he ought to lose his seat. He said the incident had provoked in the press, especially in one newspaper, charges against members of the Legislature very much more serious than those attributed to Ald. Vallieres. Yet nobody had brought the proprietor of that paper to the bar of the House.

MR. PREVOST'S DEFENCE.

Mr. Prevost defended himself very vigorously against the telling assault of Mr. Pelletier, declaring that the conduct of this latter and the attacks of his paper, L'Evenement, were mainly responsible for all the false and disrespectful things which had been charged of late against the Legislature. He sought to make it appear that in attacking the policy of the Government, the member for Dorchester was insulting the Legislature and all its members and was, therefore, engaged in an anti-patriotic work. He bitterly complained of the uncomplimentary things that certain Montreal aldermen were constantly saying against members of the Legislature, claiming that his only objects in bringing the matter to the attention of the House were to expose some of the outrageous things constantly heard regarding its members, to afford an opportunity to their maligners to offer proof of their alleged statements and to vindicate the honour and the dignity of the House. The report was adopted and the incident closed.

NEW BILLS INTRODUCED.

The new bills introduced yesterday included one respecting physicians and surgeons by Mr. Pelletier; one by Mr. Nault to erect the village of Radnor Forges, into a separate municipality, under the name of Fermont; one by Mr. Dupuis respecting persons making use of the name of another as a firm name, and one by Mr. Kennedy to amend the Election Act in relation to the county of Gaspe.

The small Government bills to amend the Education Act and to amend the law respecting pawnbrokers were read a second time. Amongst the bills which passed their final readings were those:

To regularize the position of Les Soeurs de la Charite de Quebec with respect to the purchase of Beauport Asylum.

To incorporate the Laval Electric Company.

To amend the charter of the city of Sherbrooke.

To ratify, confirm and authorize by-law No. 92, of the town of St. Johns, respecting a grant of land and certain privileges as well as an exemption from taxation and a concession of rights to the Singer Manufacturing Company.

THE PROCESS OF ELECTRIC SMELTING.

Dr. Haanel Has Received Specimens From France and Sweden.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 7.—Dr. Haanel, chairman of the commission appointed by Hon. Clifford Sifton, to investigate in Europe the process of electric smelting, received yesterday some specimens from Sweden and France, both of smelting from the ore direct, and of converting scrap and pig iron into steel. The doctor is highly delighted with the specimens, which are a practical demonstration that the new process is a great success. There are several samples of pig iron smelted by the electric process from the ore direct. The pig iron is grey, white and mottled. The grey is used for the acid process of making steel, and also a foundry pig for the purpose of producing the ural foundry cast iron castings. The white is used for the basic process of making steel. The mottled may be used for malleable iron castings.

The exhibit shows that the new process is elastic, and that it is possible to pass readily from one class of pig iron to another, which cannot be done so readily in a blast furnace. Samples of the ore coke and lime used in the process have also been received by the doctor. Some excellent castings, hard and smooth, are shown taken from the electric furnace direct. The castings are made without the iron going through a foundry cupola. One of the castings is a large plate, on which there is a French inscription, the lettering being remarkably clear. The translation is: 'Homage to Dr. Haanel and his mission, cast from obtained by electric process direct from iron ore, Kellet Foundry, at Livet, March, 1904, of tool steel made by the electric process direct from pig iron and scrap." A full set of cold chisels and the tools are exhibited. The steel was made in Gysinge, Sweden. The tools are to be tested with respect to the quality of the steel.

ON THE ROCKS

WHAT would you think of a captain who attempted to navigate his vessel with a broken rudder? He would soon be on the rocks, would he not? Well, every man and woman who is suffering from kidney trouble without taking the proper means of curing this dangerous malady is attempting to ride safely over the rocks and shoals of everyday life with a broken rudder. It is impossible to keep off the rocks of rheumatism, dropsy, backache, sleeplessness, sick headache, bad breath, lack of ambition, lack of courage, dyspepsia, blood poisoning, weak heart, failing memory, irritable temper, sallow complexion, and a hundred and one other troublesome and dangerous ailments if the kidneys are allowed to remain out of order.

Bu-Ju, The Kidney Pill, is absolutely guaranteed to cure disordered kidneys, and thus eradicate all the troubles that arise from them. There is no use in treating the symptoms. The root of the evil, your kidney trouble, must be cured, and Bu-Ju is guaranteed to cure it.

Toronto, Sept. 8, 1903.

ST. GEORGE'S LODGE HOLDS ENJOYABLE LADIES' NIGHT.

The officers and members of St. George's Lodge, No. 440, A. F. and A. M., E.R., fully sustained their reputation for hospitality last evening, when they inaugurated their new rooms in the Inglis building, 2361 St. Catherine street, by a ladies' night, when some two hundred lady and gentleman friends of the lodge were present. The guests were received at nine o'clock by W. Bro. G. L. Lamb, W.M., assisted by W. Bros. James Martin, D. R. Kennedy, Wm. McGilton and J. P. Adams and the officers of the lodge. The first portion of the evening was devoted to progressive euchre, the ladies' prizes being won by Mrs. Joseph Horsfall and Miss G. Inness, and the gentlemen's by Messrs. J. Brechin and J. A. Hall. The presentation of prizes was enlivened with musical programme, Miss Lamb and Messrs. A. W. Ward, A. E. Coombes and Jesse Joy giving some excellent songs, and Messrs. T. Gregory and J. Henkel contributing a mandolin and guitar duet. Supper was then served, after which dancing was commenced and kept up with zest till an early hour this morning. The regular communications of St. George's Lodge will in the future be held in this hall on the third Friday of each month. Among those present were: W. Bro. Geo. L. Lamb, W.M., and Mrs. Lamb, W. Bro. J. P. Adams, I.P.M., and Mrs. Adams, W. Bro. C. Chappell, Miss Chappell, Master Chappell, W. Bro. James Martin and Mrs. Martin, W. Bro. James Crankshaw and Mrs. Crankshaw, W. Bro. D. R. CREAMERIES SHOULD BE WELL DISINFECTED.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 7.—The dairy division, Ottawa, recommends that every spring before a creamery refrigerator is used, the whole interior of the room should be gone over with some kind of disinfectant to destroy the germs and spores of mould that may be there. Dr. Connell, the well-known dairy bacteriologist, suggests the use of a solution of bichloride of mercury (corrosive sublimate), the proportion of one part to 1,000 parts of water. This is a very deadly poison as everybody knows, but it is one of the most effective fungicides known. The solution is safe to use, so fas as to washing the hands is concerned. All of the Government coil-curing rooms were disinfected with this solution last year, and it was found very effective. The use of solution of this kind, or a solution of formailn in the refrigerators in the spring, will be helpful in keeping them pure and sweet during the summer.

Gossip of the Stage World.

Plays and Players of Interest Here.

In a look backward over the events of the last couple of seasons it appears easy to explain the growing interest in Biblical plays. The wonderful success of "Ben-Hur" impressed managers with the belief that the public was drifting into a mood to approve sacred dramas generally, and now come announcements of many religious productions in the near future. Probably to Mrs. Fiske more than to General Lew

GEORGE SIDNEY.

In "Busy Izzy," at Proctor's next week.

Wallace belongs the chief credit for convincing several prominent promoters that there has been a decided change of public attitude toward attempts to depict incidents in Biblical narrative on the stage. The approval that attended Mrs. Fiske's presentation of "Mary of Magdala" developed the opinion that at last a new field had been opened for theatrical endeavour; the proof given by large and sympathetic audiences that deep prejudice against religious plays had disappeared, for the time at least. David Belasco seems to have taken the lead in the new movement, and the bare report that he plans to present a sacred drama is enough to arouse the curiosity of all classes of playgoers. He is credited with the statement that the future of the American drama lies in plays founded on the Bible. Mr. Belasco has obtained the rights to "Vashti," a play of Biblical times by George Baxter, a newspaper man of Cincinnati. It is said that Blanche Bates will act the leading role. Mr. Baxter has written three plays—"Judas," "Vashti," and "Belshazzar"—and is hard at work on a fourth.

Lulu Glaser is to appear under Charles B. Dillingham's management next season. Miss Glaser will have a new opera which is being written for her.

A scheme is on foot in New York to gather a century of donors who shall agree to subscribe twenty-five thousand dollars apiece to the fund for an endowed theatre in New York city under the auspices of the National Art Theatre Society.

Wilton Lackaye delivered a lecture last week upon the censorship of the stage. He said: "The American stage is overrun by playwrights and actors who seize upon and exaggerate the follies and crimes of life. These sensational plays and their actors unquestionably work great injury to our national character."

"For His Brother's Crime," is the attraction at the Francais next week, when the regular Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday matinees will be given. "For His Brother's Crime," was written by Mr. Chas. E. Blaney. It is his latest effort in melodrama and is decidedly the most sensational of any of Mr. Blaney's numerous successes. The play was written especially for Mr. Montgomery Irving, who possesses the unique distinction of being the most powerful athlete on the American stage. Mr. Irving appears in the dual role of twin brothers, one good and the other bad, Ben Stirling, the wayward brother, commits murder, and in order to save him from the vengeance of the law, Victor Stirling allows himself to be mistaken by officers for Ben, and is arrested for the crime, prior to which he passes through many thrilling experiences. The man murdered by Ben Stirling is Rose Barclay's father. Rose is a beautiful girl whom Victor idolizes, and who loves him, though he be only a blacksmith. Larry Monckton, an unscrupulous scoundrel, and a society favourite, wishes to marry Rose for her wealth. She frankly tells him of her love for Victor, and Monckton, in order to prevent their union, employs a gang of thugs to murder the blacksmith, failing in which he tries to have him hanged. This is prevented in the last act by the death of Ben in a foreign land, who confesses his identity, thereby preventing the hero from paying the death penalty "For His Brother's Crime."

Mr. Robert B. Mantell, the veteran actor, who is playing at the Francais this week, and who is making a tour of Canada, including the Maritime Provinces, thus describes his career:

"I was born in Irvine, Ayrshire, Scotland, not far from the birthplace of Robert Burns, and at the age of four, our family went to Belfast, in the North of Ireland, where I was educated. I was originally intended for the bar, that is, my mother's greatest ambition was to see me a barrister. Perhaps, unfortunately I was unable to pass my last examination, and my father was so disgusted with me, that he walked me over to our wine merchant and apprenticed me for five years. I can honestly say I had no great liking for bookkeeping or for office work, and often was reprimanded by my employer for reading play books, instead of the ledger. At the age of 14, I tried to enact such roles as "Polonius," in "Hamlet," "Sir Edward Mortimer," in the "Iron Chest"; "Carwin," in "Therese, the Orphan of Geneva," and many other heavy parts as an amateur. I never thought seriously of going on the stage until I played "Iago," at a benefit performance in Belfast, then that sterling old actor Sam Johnstone, of the Lyceum Theatre, London, advised me to adopt the profession. My first professional appearance was in Roachdale, Lancaster, England, October 21, 1876, the part being "The Sergeant," in "Arrah na Pogue," for which I received five shillings a week. During my first season, I played everything from "My Lord, the carriage Waits," heavy thinking parts, dead soldier, on the field of battle, shouts outside, eccentric utility to "Macbeth," and my salary never reached higher than one pound per week. My first London appearance was at the Olympic Theatre, supporting Miss Wallis in 1881. That same year, I was engaged by the late John Stetson for the leading business at Booth's Theatre, New York, where I played "Jack Herne," in "Romany Rye." My next engagement was with Miss Fanny Davenport, in "Fedora."

Local theatre-goers are anticipating with pleasure the coming of the popular Aubrey Stock Company, which comes to the Theatre Francais for the entire summer with a change of bill weekly. The opening date has been set for Monday, May 16th, and on that occasion we will have an opportunity to witness a splendid production of "Under Two Flags," it being the piece selected for the opening week. The players so far engaged will embrace such well-known people as William Beckwith, Francis Morey, Charles F. Nelson, Billy Walsh, Frank Carroll, George Lund, Leah Starr, Una Clayton, Maude Scott, Bertha Welby and Bertine Robison. A staff of scenic artists and stage mechanics will be employed, and each play to be presented will receive the best possible scenic equipment.

"The Utopians," a burlesque show, will be the offering at the Royal for the week, commencing Monday matinee, May 9. This show has always been considered one of the leaders of its kind on the road. An olio, two burlesques and a dramatic review make up the programme. This review is interpreted by the entire company, headed by George B. Alexander, and is in three scenes. The first scene shows a concert hall in full blast, the second a battlefield in the Philippines and the third the death of a soldier and a vision of his early home. The act is said to be one of the most pretentious ever attempted in vaudeville. In the olio are following the acts: Madden and Jess, Irish comedians; George H. Diamond, vocalist; Tom McRae, the silly kid; Nice and Coy, singers and dancers, and Emmonds, Emmerson and Edmonds, in a laughable sketch. "The Red Lion Inn" is the title of the opening part and "Hotel Ups and Downs" brings the performance to a close.

Ethel Bret Harte, the younger daughter of the late Bret Harte, will devote herself to the concert stage in London. She possesses a soprano voice of fine range and sympathetic quality. She is also young and pretty. She served her stage apprenticeship as a member of D'Oyly Carte's and George Edwardes' companies.

John Coleman, the veteran English actor, playwright and manager, who died in London on April 21, was by reason of his achievements, and perhaps more particularly because of his associations, one of the most interesting figures on the stage in recent years. He had played Hamlet and Charles Surface a greater number of times than any other actor of his generation. He had made notable contributions to English dramatic literature, and he had been intimately associated with almost every celebrity of the British stage from Macready down to the stars of the present period. Mr. Coleman was born at Derby in the early thirties, of an illustrious English family, and in his youth he was educated for the Roman Catholic priesthood at the monastery of St. Bernard, in Chornwood Forest. While at the monastery he became enamored of the stage through taking part in various students' performances; and with boyish enthusiasm he determined to ally himself with William Charles Macready, then the prime favourite of the London stage. Upon a pretext of visiting his family young Coleman—a lad of fourteen at the time—left the monastery and went post haste to London. He gained an audience with Macready and recited, to the amusement of the great actor, the "My name is Norval" speech and Hamlet's first soliloquy. At the conclusion of the recital Macready patted the boy's head kindly and advised him to return to his home. The advice was followed, and young Coleman ended his first theatrical exploit with a sound thrashing from his father. Soon after this incident he was apprenticed to an architect and surveyor, but in a few months he rebelled, ran away, and presently entered in earnest upon his dramatic career. In the winter of 1896 Mr. Coleman produced his own play, The Duchess of Coolgardie, at Drury Lane. Later he presented his own Irish drama, Soggarth Aroon, at Birmingham, and sent a company out to play it in the provinces. Next he appeared in The Price of Peace. In 1900, with F. R. Benson, he made the magnificent production of his own version of Pericles at the Memorial Theatre, Stratford-on-Avon, and himself played the principal part with dinstinguished success.

The following is the programme for Mr. Goulet's testimonial concert at the Academy on Friday afternoon, May 13th. The soloists will be Mr. A. Laurendeau, baritone of St. James Cathedral, and Mr. Rosario Bourdon, 'cellist of Cincinnati. The orchestra will be reinforced by Mr. E. Tarrantò, violinist, who will be concert master and Prof. J. B. Dubois, first 'cellist.

Isaye, the world's great violinist, is returning to America after an absence of several years, and is under contract to play fifty concerts. He is being booked in nearly all the large American cities, the Boston Symphony Orchestra alone engaging him for five concerts, at what is said to be the largest fee ever paid any artist. He will be heard in Montreal the coming season, the concert having been secured by Mr. Veitch.

In presenting George Sidney as a musical comedy star, E. D. Stair has added to his string of amusement enterprises another "sure fire" laughmaker. There are some who have won reputations doing so, Sidney's characterization is not a burlesque, neither is it an imitation of any of the many types of this much-abused character. Izzy, as portrayed by Sidney, is a jolly little fellow, ever alert for fun and laughter, as well as a laugh-maker, always ready to invest in any airy scheme, and on this account always losing his money without learning the lesson of providence. "Izzy" could not be played by a clown. It is the characterization of an artist. George Sidney and his company will be seen at Proctor's Theatre one week beginning Monday, May 9th. There are two acts to the entertainment. Izzy is first seen as the proprietor of a department store, where much is sold, but nothing paid for. Then he concludes to trade his store for a summer hotel, and run it for the pleasure of his friends. The company numbers forty-five people, and contains many first-water fun caterers.

The management of the Arena announces that arrangements have been made with Mr. Stewart Houston, of Toronto, for the appearance here, in September, of the Black Watch (42nd Highlanders) Band, which will make a tour of the principal cities in Canada for four weeks. The band is being brought out expressly for the Industrial Exhibition in Toronto, and Montrealers ought to congratulate themselves that they will have an opportunity of hearing them, as the "Black Watch" is the most historical of all Scottish regiments and has a history that is unequalled in the glorious annals of the British army. The band is now quartered at Edinburgh Castle and on their visit to Canada will be accompanied by a commissioned officer in the person of Major Rose.

Last year the public had the advantage of hearing the brass band of the Coldstream Guards, but on this occasion they will hear not merely the brass band of 50 pieces, but also the Royal Pipe Band of ten pipers.

Nellie Farren, who, for over twenty-five years was one of the best known stars in the London burlesque, and who died in that city recently, was born about sixty years ago in Lancashire, and made her first appearance on the London stage in 1864. She was John Hollingshead's principal card at the Gaiety Theatre for many years. She paid a visit to this country with the late Fred Leslie, and appeared for a long engagement at the Standard Theatre (now the Manhattan). In 1898, when it became known that she was destitute, a benefit took place in London at the Drury Lane Theatre, with over thirty thousand dollars as the receipts. The interest on this money kept her from want, and it was stipulated that at her death part of it was to endow the Theatrical Benevolent Fund. Her greatest successes were in Little Jack Sheppard, Monte Cristo, and the Forty Thieves. In private life Miss Farren was Mrs. Robert Soutar.

A London paper, noting the fact that the chief claquer of the Comedie Francaise has retired on a pension of $160 a year, remarks that while that sum "is not very much," it should strike the English playgoer, who imagines that the claque is not to be heard in London theatres, as really quite an amount. And then the London paper declares that the claque is known in the London theatre—or at least that he there operates—for he a a discreet person, to whom are given tickets which he distributes among equally discreet persons who he knows will applaud at points in a play or a performance where applause is needful and gratifying. The claque in London, according to this authority, is more commonly found in the music halls than in the regular theatres. "Foreigners," says the London paper, "to whom applause is as necessary as their breath, learn the name and address of the chief claquer when on the continent, and when they come to London they call on him, and, saying that they have been engaged at such and such a hall, ask him to provide a guarantee of a certain amount of public 'appreciation' for them." There is one very significant thing pointed out as to this matter, and that is that the claquer "does not arrange for applause for bad performers."

Edgar Fawcett, the actor, died the other day in London.

The Spider and Fly Extravaganza Company will come to the Royal shortly.

The farewell performance of Mr. and Miss Prad will take place at the Monument National, Monday, 30th of May. "L'Aiglon," the masterpiece of Rostand, the author, of "Cyrano de Bergerac," will be presented.

Next week will be a remarkable one at the Theatre des Nouveautes. There will be a first class production of "Monsieur Alphonse," the famous play of Alexandre Dumas. This play, one of the best written by the French author, will have an excellent cast. Messrs. Dhavrol, Laurel, Darcy and Veniat, and Mesdames Devoynod, Varennes and Harmant will render the different characters of the play with their usual talent.

The performances will begin with a curtain raiser entitled "Le Homard," by Edm. Gondinet, the well known comical writer, and will be played by the two well known comedians, Messrs. Fertinel and Darcy, and Mr. Laurel and Melle Riviere. On account of the Ascension holiday, there will be a special matinee on Thursday, 12th, besides the regular matinee on Saturday.

Stephen Phillips has finished a poetic drama dealing with the life of David. It is called "The Son of David," and from the few details that have been made public about the play in London, it is gathered that Phillips has made Absalom one of the chief characters.

A Seasoned Rustic.

The young daughter of a prominent New York financier, who had passed most of her years either in the city or at the large summer resort, recently paid her first visit to a real country home. She was anxious to show that she was not altogether ignorant of rural conditions, and when a dish of honey was set before her on the breakfast-table she saw her opportunity.

"Ah," she observed, carelessly, "I see you keep a bee."—Harper's Weekly.

Common Soap ruins the hands

Pure soap requires experience and knowledge to manufacture.

Pure soap contains fats and alkalis—an exact proportion of each properly combined.

If there should be too much of either alkali or fats, the clothes washed will be either shrunken, hardened, made greasy, discolored or rendered ill-smelling.

There is no free alkali in Sunlight Soap—there are no harsh, biting acids to shrivel the hands and ruin the clothes.

Nothing but the purest materials all skilfully compounded under the supervision of expert chemists who carefully watch each process of manufacture.

Sunlight Soap washes without boiling or rubbing, and—if you read the directions and use it the Sunlight way—less than half the labor involved with ordinary soap and better results ten times over.

Boils were so painful could not sleep at night.

APPEARED ON NECK, LEGS AND ARMS.

Burdock Blood Bitters

CURED THEM.

It is well-known to all that bad blood is the direct cause of all skin diseases and it is necessary for the blood to be cleansed before the eruptions will disappear. For this purpose there is nothing to equal Burdock Blood Bitters as the thousands of testimonials we have on hand will testify.

Mr. Willard Thompson, McNeill's Mills, P.E.I., writes us as follows: "I wish to state to you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Some time ago my blood got out of order and many boils appeared on my neck, legs and arms. They were so painful that I could not sleep at night. After having tried many different remedies without any success, I finally decided, on the advice of a friend, to use Burdock Blood Bitters. Before I had quite used two bottles the boils had completely disappeared, and I wish to emphasize the fact that I think Burdock Blood Bitters the best blood purifier on the market to-day."

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

This is the age of research and experiment, when all nature, so to speak, is ransacked by the scientific for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made giant strides during the past century, and among the—by no means least important—discoveries in medicine comes that of Theraplon, particulars of which will be found in another column. This preparation is unquestionably one of the most genuine and reliable Patent Medicines ever introduced, and has, we understand, been used in the Continental Hospitals by Ricord, Rostan, Jobert, Velpeau, Maisonneuve, the well-known Chassaignac, and indeed by all those who are regarded as authorities in such matters, including the celebrated Lallemand, and Roux, by whom it was some time since uniformly adopted, and that it is worthy the attention of those who require such a remedy we think there is no doubt. From the time of Aristotle downwards, a potent agent in the removal of these diseases has (like the famed philosopher's stone) been the object of search of some hopeful, generous minds; and far beyond the mere power—if such could ever have been discovered—of transmuting the baser metals into gold is surely the discovery of a remedy so potent as to replenish the failing energies of the confirmed roué in the one case, and fix the other so effectually, speedily and safely to expel from the system without the aid, or even the knowledge, of a second party, the poisons of acquired or inherited disease in all their protean forms as to leave not taint or trace behind. Such is The New French Remedy Theraplon, which may certainly rank with, if not take precedence of, many of the discoveries of our day, about which no little ostentation and noise have been made, and the extensive and ever-increasing demand that has been created for this medicine wherever introduced appears to prove that it is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that were formerly the sole reliance of medical men. Theraplon may be obtained in England "direct from the proprietor, and of the principal Chemists and Merchants throughout the Colonies, India, China, Japan, &c., not even excluding such remote districts as Central Africa, the Fiji Islands, St. Helena, &c.—Diamond Fields Advertiser Kimberley

LIBERAL METHODS IN GUYSBORO COUNTY

How Conservative Electors Were Robbed of Their Votes in the Recent By-Elections.

A Case That Should Call for the Investigation of the Privileges and Election Committee.

The Halifax Herald has the following on the Murray-Longley election laws of Nova Scotia in the recent by-election in Guysboro:

"Bribery and corruption may be counted the least of the offences set out; the 'switching of ballots' and stuffing of ballot boxes, with which Rossism in Ontario has rendered the public familiar, are now eclipsed; the latest Grit method is simply to disfranchise, by official action, as many of the opponents of the Government as is considered necessary to ensure the return of the Grit candidate. The fine feature of the latest Grit method is its simplicity; it does not even require 'skilled men' such as Ross's 'ballot switchers'; any common scoundrels in official position can work this latest Grit method with entire success. The letter referred to sets the whole matter forth very circumstantially and clearly, and proves the charges as fully as it is possible to prove charges without the examination of witness before a court. The latest Grit methods are so described with all the connected details that the reader can hardly remain in doubt of the charges involvtd. The light that the letter throws upon the methods by which Guysborough was carried by the Grits was very interesting; but the public and political interest in this matter is by no means limited to Guysborough, for it is not for a moment to be supposed that this fine new Grit method is not for general use throughout the constituencies. In the light of these exposures there is hardly a county that can feel sure that it will not find the political power thrown into the hands of a minority of its people. There is no telling how far the official disfranchisement of the people may be carried by unscrupulous Governments and their heelers. But in this, as in other threatened evils, publicity may prove some safeguard.

The letter to which the Herald refers follows:

Sir,—Guysboro county is divide into two municipalities, the larger in population being Guysboro East, and the smaller Guysboro West, or St. Mary's. In the recent by-election the vote in Guysboro East was 2,810, and the Grit majority there 166. The vote in St. Mary's was 852, and the majority there 226. In the election of 1900 (Fraser and Gregory), the St. Mary's vote was 881, and the majority 149.

Why is it that St. Mary's, with a vote of 36 less, than in 1900, gives a greater Liberal majority to-day by 77? Let us examine.

The franchise law of Nova Scotia, on which (as in the other provinces), the Dominion franchise rests, enacts that in determining who are to compose the voters' lists, the first step in the enquiry is the assessment, and the next the revision.

"Every person shall be entitled to be registered * * * upon the list of voters * * * * * if such person

"(1) Is of the full age of 21 years and is not * * * disqualified or prevented from voting * * * and has not since the last revision received aid as a pauper * * * * and (2) is a British male subject * * * and, either (substantially) (a) had land assessed worth $150 or land and goods assessed worth $300; or (b) being so possessed was exempt from taxation or (c) tenanted a place assessed to owner to owner for $150; or if such place and tenant's assessment together amounted to $300; or (d) is the son, not otherwise qualified, or a person qualified as above; or (e) if the father living, has sufficient for two or more, equally divided; or (f) if the father is dead the estate is sufficient if equally divided; or (g) had, at last assessment land worth $150, or land and goods worth $300, and his name was omitted; or ((h) was assessed up to $250 income; or (i) derived an income of at least $250 annually from his earnings in money or money's worth; or (j) owned land, boats, nets, fishing gear and tackle; or boats, nets, fishing gear and tackle worth $150."

The qualifying sections of the law are quoted at length in substance, in order to show how very general is the right to vote, and how near it comes to reaching almost universal manhood suffrage.

No sound, healthy and industrious young man but can satisfy its requirements—no labouring man married and occupying a rented tenement, but can qualify under ordinary circumstances. Qualifications multiply until they run "way up in G." There are, it is true, some disqualifications, but a short examination will show that it would be no common case, where a man, once on the list, and not moving away from the district, should be struck off the lists.

Now, let us see, with an understanding of the law, how the St. Mary's vote has been affected, and why?

The assessment is made by statutory officials called assessors, the voters' lists by others called revisors, who take the names from the assessment rolls; both sets are appointed by the municipal councils.

The members of the St. Mary's municipal council are as follows: Alex. Sinclair, warden; Charles W. Pye, William H. Hanlow, John J. McQuarrie, James M. Connell, George Publicover, David Whidden.

Mr. Sinclair is a grit, a brother of John H. Sinclair, member elect, and is accounted a prospective candidate for the seat in the local assembly just vacated by the resignation of his brother.

Charles W. Pye is a grit, a deputy Crown land surveyor and registrar of deeds for St. Mary's, who received his appointment from the grit local government.

James McConnell is a grit, another prospective grit candidate for the seat in the local legislature.

William H. Hemlow is a grit.

George Publicover is a grit. He is captain of one of Burnham and Morrill's lobster factories, on Ecum Secum inlet.

John J. McQuarrie is a grit. He was formerly a conservative.

David Whidden is a grit.

Thomas Campbell, municipal clerk, is a grit.

With such an appointing power, it may be predicated that no large conservative representation is to be found on either the board of assessors, or the board of revisors, who are the practical makers of the lists.

Still, good and honest administration of the laws of the country demands that there should be some of each party. It is grand to have a giant's strength, but despicable to use it as a giant; and to save appearances at least, if nothing more, and preserve a face of common decency, one would suppose that this petty Grit conclave would give Conservatives places on these boards in the proportion of at least one or two. But no! These gentlemen will not take any such chances in conservation of the rights of the minority; and they practically exclude all Conservatives from both assessors and revisors' boards. They, no doubt, all hold, unspoken, the creed expressed by one of their number, who is reported to have said he "did not believe there will be room in heaven for any but Grits."

Well, then, such being the fount, what is the stream? Who are the assessors and revisors?

The Board of Assessors comprises: Alexander McDonald, general assessor; William McLean, Goldenville; Charles A. Dickson, Marie Joseph; Thomas Ross, Forks; Bernard Cornealy, Indian Harbor; John F. McDonald, Caledonia; John R. Sutherland, Goshen; W. H. Rudolph, Liscomb.

These men were all Grits when appointed. One is now claimed by both sides. Most of them are rabid Grit partizans.

The revisors of electoral lists are: George W. Ross, Leonard Pye, Robert Reid, all Grits of the most rank type.

Now, as to the way these men get in their work:

In Liscomb in the election of 1900, Mr. Gregory had a majority of seven. So seven at least must fall, seven heads be dropped into the basket. Those marked out for slaughter were, as it happened, nine, two being presumably for good measure: Alex. Redmond, Henry Redmond, Gilbert Redmond, John A. Redmond, Walter Redmond, Neilson J. Neilson, John W. McDonald, David Rodenheiser, Samuel McDonald. They had, all of them, voted Conservative at the election of 1900, on their registration, but on a subsequent revision, on which the last by-election was run, their names were, without exception, without notice to them, and without posting of the preliminary list, struck off by someone, who thus unwarantably deprived them of their statutory rights by a direct act of spoilation. Although this was done months before the election came on, each of the beheaded ones remained in ignorance that he was a decapitated member of the body politic until the close approach of the election caused inspection of the lists to be made, and only then did the true condition of affairs appear to these unfortunates. It was then too late to repair the damage, and, of course, the votes were lost.

Supposing, however, that the revisors had done their duty, as defined by the law, these nine voters would have known their names were intended to be struck off by means of the published preliminary lists, and could have kept them on. The law was evaded, the preliminary lists suppressed, and the stricken ones kept in the dark until it had become too late to apply for registration anew before the recent election.

These nine men were all qualified; none of them had died; none had moved away. Very few, indeed, of those in their own polling district are up to their standard either in income, property or intelligence, and if such a list, and such a notice as the law imperatively requires, had brought the facts to their knowledge, nothing could have prevented their names from being restored to the lists; but some pliant tool of the municipal council worked the will of his masters so perfectly that the whole matter was kept secret, and in the election just passed the nine votes were not polled against the grit candidate, and the men rightfully entitled to a voice in the representation of their county, perforce were dumb.

Again, returning to the Sherbrooke lists, the following names were struck off under precisely the same conditions as in the case of Liscomb, without notice, without the separate list of voters proposed to be struck off, and without the formality of posting the preliminary lists in three of the most public places in the district:

Jno. Baird	Colin Chisholm
David J. Beers	Thomas Cluney
Jno. H. Brehaut	William Connors
Edward Briggs	John Faulkner
John Bright	John Kenny
C. Crown	James Murdoch
Daniel Cameron	Alvin McDaniel
John A. Cameron	John W. McDaniel
Lauchlin Cameron	Howard McDonald
Thomas Cameron	Hugh McDonald
William Cameron	John H. McKeen
James Nauffts	Thomas O'Hara
Alexander Paris	John Paris
Charles Taylor	William Thomson
John Wells	John Whalen
J. Whalen (of Jno.)	A. H. McDonald

With one notable exception, to be referred to hereafter, these men were either out-and-out conservatives, or were suspected of Conservative tendencies. Most of them had committed the unpardonable sin of voting wrong, and no expiation short of loss of the franchise could amount to an atonement.

The work of Messrs. Pyne, councillor, and Ross, revisor, is seen to good advantage in the Sonora polling district. There, under precisely similar conditions, without separate lists, or posting, the following names were struck off the lists:

Brenton Brydle	William Mallman
Charles Brydle	Freeman Mills
Joseph Brydle	James Mills
Edward Burns	Ashton McDiarmid
P. J. Burns	James McDiarmid
Thomas Burns	Allan Pride
Henry Cole	William Pride
Edward Croft	William Pride, Esq
John Croft	Freeman Pride
A. R. Dickson	John Ray
H. Mallman	Thomas Ray
David Mallman	Stephen Whitewood
Jacob Mallman

In Sonora the general principle, viz., to get rid of Conservative voters, was also largely applied, the worst notable instance being the case of Captain William Pride, or as he is generally called, being a magistrate, and a very leading man in his district, "Squire Pride." Guilty of no crime, but an unswerving support of the Conservative party, his name was ruthlessly struck off along with those who were weaker and less liable to excite remark. Living in a district where most men are in moderate circumstances, he is, with one or two exceptions, the most comfortably provided with this world's goods of any of his neighbours. He owns the best farm on the lower end of the River St. Mary's—a valuable place—and has a goodly amount of personal property about him—all in all, enough to qualify him many times over under the franchise act.

"The Squire" is a man who never hesitates to speak his mind. He has been in the habit of forcibly proclaiming his Conservative principles and denouncing Grit methods, in a public and unstinted way, all his days. He never shrank from "nailing a Grit lie," no matter whose head might be struck, so that he became in the estimation of Grit henchmen, just the man to let down hard. And the squire certainly was hard hit when he found he had, for one election at least, lost the franchise he held so dear.

There was here in Sonora, however, another reason operating to cut down the lists. It was this: A municipal election had been run between Councillor Pye and A. D. McLane, resulting in the return of Pye. The election had, as usual, been run on party lines, the Conservatives supporting McLane; but some of the Grits had kicked over the traces and voted for McLane. For this defection a wholesome castigation must be applied, and so, for reproof and correction, certain Grit names were struck off in the general decapitation. These included, it is thought, the names of Allan Pride and William Pride (not esquire), and the three Brydles, who were all suspected of being guilty.

Punishment in this instance also descended upon the heads of James Murdoch, before named in the Sherbrooke list, who fell under the ban of the lordly displeasure of the Grit Machine and was accordingly struck off. This, like all the rest, was a most arbitrary exercise of power. There never was and never could be, any question of Mr. Murdoch's qualification; though, for the matter of that, most all the men struck off were well qualified—but Mr. Murdoch was an especially shining mark. He is one of the most respected and respectable inhabitants of Sherbrooke. He has lived a lifetime nearly in that town. His whole life and character are spotless. He is a Christian gentleman. He has a comfortable independence and his property is far and away beyond the requirements of the franchise act many times over, and his striking off the list cannot be regarded in any other light than as arbitrary, tyrannical, vindictive and wholly indefensible. Prominence, however, would not be given to his case if it did not serve to illustrate to what reckless and unheard of lengths this little clique of operators is prepared to go in stripping the lists of all material offensive to themselves, or dangerous to Grit supremacy in the country.

In the Indian Harbour district, the most glaring piece of injustice is shown in the case of John H. McDonald, who is and always was a Conservative, and so staunch a one that he could not be coerced, cajoled or bought, and, being a man of that stamp, was a very suitable person to be made an example of, that others seeing his sad fate might take warning. He is a farmer and fully qualified under the act for a place on the lists. His three sons, William, David and George, are properly entitled to be placed on the voters' lists but have been persistently kept off, being of the same political stripe as their father.

The full list of those struck off the Indian Harbor list (exclusive of non-residents) is as follows:

Jilbert Benoit,	James McDonald,
Stuart Horton,	John H. McDonald, ("Killduck")
Amos Horton,
William Hingley,	R. E. McConnell,
George Kelzer, sr.	Robert Mills,
Samuel Kelzer,	Freeman Rood,
William McDonald	George McDonald,
David McDonald,	D. M. Sutherland,
Silas S. Kelzer.

The revisors are open to the same charges in regard to this list of non-observance of the plain conditions of the law. They made no separate list; they put on no notice; and they suppressed the separate and preliminary lists.

Not only in the matter of being struck off the lists have the Conservative voters been robbed of their rights and privileges, but an equal wrong has been wrought upon them by the revisors in placing and in leaving the names of Grits on the list that had no business to be there.

Take, for instance again, the Sherbrooke list, and examining it for names that should have been struck off, and those that never should have been on, we find the following:

Hugh Cameron, moved away.
John Cameron, moved away.
Alexander Fraser, moved away.
Lyman Fraser, under age.
Edison McDaniel, moved away.
James McDaniel, moved away.
Gordon McIntosh, under age.
Harry H. McLean, moved away.
Fred Cameron, moved away.
James A. Fraser, moved away.

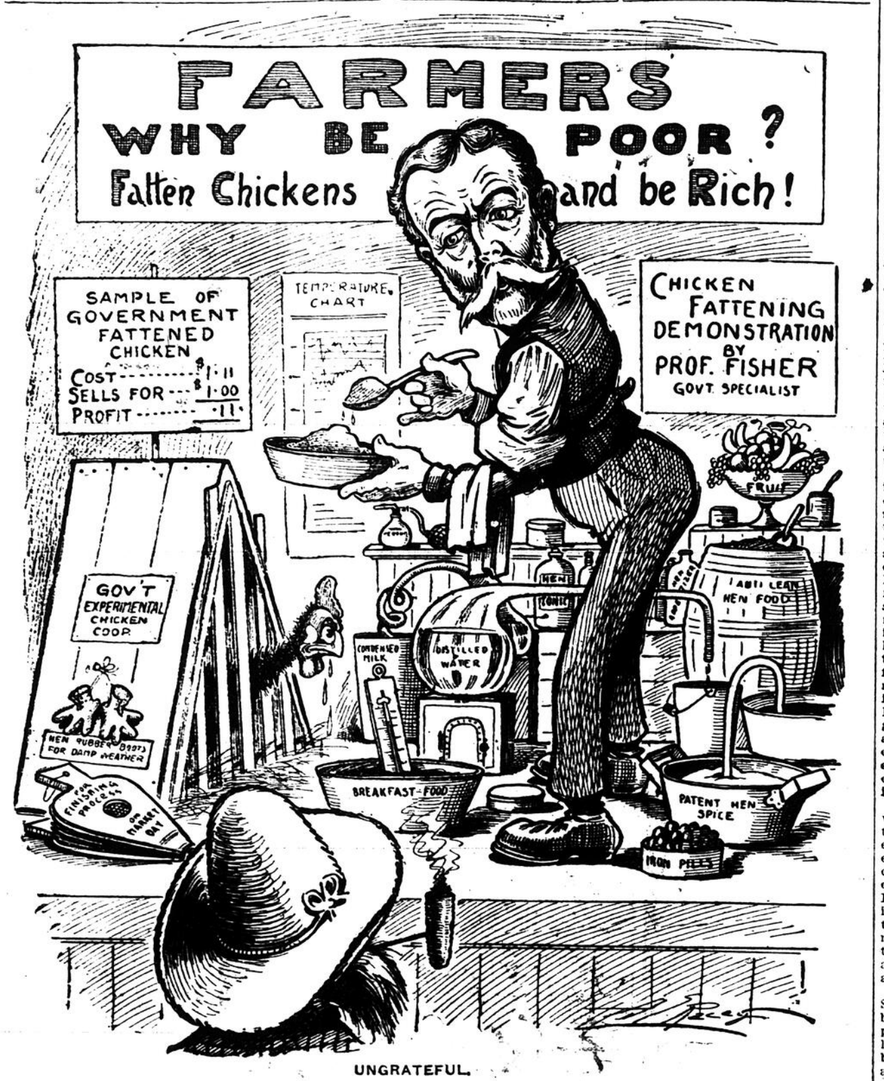
If the above had been Conservatives, not a man of them but what would have been struck off, or in the case of the minors, never put on.

Let it be understood that no blame is intended to be attached to those, who, being absent, art kept on by the revisors here, and who do not come back to vote. But "there are others."

Without going further afield at this time, we have before us a list numbering 83 improperly struck off, and and some 10 improperly on, or in all 93 off and on, whose votes were either lost, or, if not lost, were grossly prejudicial to a fair determination of the election. Deducting those names not ordinarily claimable by the Conseratives, and which were struck off because "personae non gratae" to the Machine, such as the three Brydles, two Prides and James Murdoch, 6; and 6 who were not back to vote, twelve in asl, we come marvellously near to the magic figure 77, by which the majority was increased in St. Mary's. We do not assert that this increase is strictly accounted for by these very names—that is to some extent a coincidenne — but warrant is given for concluding that the increase is the result, not of the will of the people, but that by an unscrupulous manipulation of the electoral lists, and by a gross abuse of public trust, the municipality of St. Mary's has been reduced to the condition of a Grit Pocket Borough—and a very rotten one at that.

Believing that under a responsible system of government and regulation of local affairs, such as ours, the will of the people cannot and will not allow such an open sore to remain unremedied, upon the body politic, once it has been pointed out, and relying upon the innate British sense of justice that cannot endure a wrong, known and seen, I have ventured to proclaim upon the housetops those things that have been done and were intended to be kept in secrecy and in silence.

Honest men, Liberal or Conservative, will alike condemn and join hands in bringing about a reformation of such methods. Only rogues and knaves will try to perpetuate them. OCULUS.



UNGRATEFUL.

WHO GETS THE PLUM?

Prince Edward Islanders Engaged Laying "Pipe Lines" Leading to Government House.

Some interesting gossip is percolating across the Straits of Northumberland, regarding the lieutenant-governorship of Prince Edward Island. His Honour Lieutenant-Governor McIntyre is naturally desirous for a second term. But there are somewhere in the vicinity of one hundred other applicants who think otherwise.

For instance, there is Hon. P. McNutt, who claims to have the support of an influential relative. The latter, though no longer in active political life, has not ceased to take an interest in his native province. For years he was the chief exponent and representative of Liberalism in the Island province, and he appears to still retain "the habit."

D. A. McKinnon, M. P., it is stated on good authority, would not worry much if the gubernatorial lightning should rush down his "arrester."

Two provincial statesmen, name of Ben Rogers respectively and collectively, have their apparatus equipped by the wire pulling — not the "wireless"—system.

Premier Arthur Peters is not so greatly engrossed in the process of preseving the equilibrium of the Island's revenue and expenditure, that he does not pause occasionally and clap his ear to the ground.

His Honour Justice Warburton, a county judge of presence and legal attainments, it is alleged would not mind exchanging the rather sombre uniform of the court for the cocked hat and knee breeches of the Windsor uniform, and the incidental emoluments which go with the office.

Then there is Senator Yeo. The price of potatoes and oats has long since ceased to bother the honouroable gentlemen, who thinks the exchange of his seat in the Red Chamber at Ottawa for the occupancy of Government House at Charlottetown would do. It is understood that Mr. Yeo does not want the appointment made until after the general election. His son-in-law (or is it his nephew?) at any rate, his relative, Hon. James Richards, will be the Liberal candidate in Prince against Mr. A. A. Lefurgey, the sitting Conservative member. In case of Richard's defeat—which seems most likely—it is thought he may still have a chance for Mr. Yeo's senatorial toga, in case the present administration is maintained. In this event Mr. Yeo would still be in the field for the lieutenant-governorship.

The details surrounding the candidacy of the other ninety- odd applicants for Lieutenant-Governor McIntyre's place would be too great a task on space to relate. But each and every one thinks he has claims. This state of expectation of favours to come has been known hitherto to turn money in the Government's campaign coffers. But whether that is the practice in Prince Edward Island or no, The Star's informant saith not!

ONE LANGUAGE FOR ALL PEOPLE

'Volapuk' and 'La Langue Bleue'--How They Were Constructed.

SIR WM. RAMSAY'S VIEWS

Distinguished British Scientist Believes That Problem Will Some Day Be Solved.

Sir William Ramsay, K.C.B., contributes the following in a recent issue of the London Mail:

The progress of science during the last fifty years has had the effect of convincing them that much more lies in their power than their ancestors dreamt of.

The intercourse between nations has made it necessary to find some means of communication by which ideas can be interchanged. For long French was the medium of the courts; and in Germany and Russia and Sweden, at least, it was at one time considered unfashionable to speak the languages of these countries; they were thought to be fit to be used only in speaking to the peasants or to the bourgeoisie; but the spirit of nationality has spread, and now even Servians, Roumanians, Norwegians and Hungarians publish books and journals in their respective languages, and in France attempts are being made to revive rovencal, and in Ireland Erse, as a national language. However much we may regret this aspect of national spirit, it must be faced as a growing tendency.

The result of this spread of the fashion popular at the date of the Tower of Babel has been an attempt to minimize the difficulties of intercommunication by the invention of a language which shall be easily learned and easily spoken and written. But why not choose an existing, living language? Here international jealousies arise. It may be argued that English (bar spelling) affords perhaps the simplest, most convenient means of expressing ideas; that it is spoken as their native language by about one hundred and twenty million people, and is the lingua franca of educated India. Commercial rivalry, however, obviously renders this impossible. It is to be conceived that Russians, Germans and French would give England such a preponderating advantage in commerce as would be caused by the adoption of English as a means of advertisement, of contracts, of delicate negotiations. The answer is hardly doubtful.

Why not return, then, to Latin? It was once the medium of communication between all learned men. But every schoolboy knows that even after eight years' study he would still have difficulty in asking what o'clock it is, or what are the latest odds on the Derby favourite. No; the day of Latin is past; it is too cumbrous, and it is too irregular. As a means of communication of ideas on commercial, scientific and political subjects, therefore, a simple, common, regular language is a desideratum.

Several attempts have been made. Some years ago Volapuk was invented by Father Schleyer, a Roman Catholic priest. Let us see what Volapuk is like. Its words are supposed to be borrowed from European languages, and "dom" is an easy form of "domus," a house. We have "doma," "domo," "domi," for of a house, to a house, and a house (accusative), and adding "s" gives the plurals; we have "labob," I have; "labobs," we have; "binob," I am; "binobs," we are. "Flens nilela labobs domis" means, "The neighbour's friends have houses." It is not to be wondered at that this attempt failed. The world is 400 old for an inflected language like Latin; people have too much to do to learn unfamiliar words awkward and difficult to pronounce, and no' like anything they know already.

I have heard of "La langue bleue", but I have not seen it. Its name does not commend it. There are many others; has any one come to stay? I think that Esperanto has. It is so simple that all who have any knowledge of French or Latin roots can read it; it is perfectly regular, and it is pretty. The idea is not to form an inflected language, but so far as possible to do away with inflections. It is almost incredible that the whole essential grammar of a language can be given in a paragraph; but it is none the less true.

Here is the Esperanto grammar: Aml, to love; amanta, loving; aminta, having loved; amonta, about to love. Amata, being loved; amita, having been loved. Mi amas, I love; v amis, you loved; il amos, he will love; ni amus, we should love; lli estas amata, you are loved. Similarly, esti, to be; havi, to have; veni, to come. All present tenses end in "as," past in "is," future in "os," conditional in "us." All nouns end in "o," all adjectives in "a," all adverbs in "e." Thus bono, a good thing; bona, good; bone, well.

At one stroke half the adjectives are done away with. Ther is no word for "bad;" it is "malbona," not good; no word for "slowly;" it is "malrapide." "Homo" is a man, "homoj" men (pronounced homoy), "la homino" the woman "la hominoj" the women. Not is "ne;" "mi ne havas amikon," I have not a friend. Here it is to be remarked that the objective case (in n) follows the verb, but it is only used in that connection—not after prepositions. Questions are introduced by the syllable "cu," pronounced chee; thus: "Cu vi ekiras?" are you going out? Comparatives of adjectives are made by "pli," more; thus: "pli bona," better; "malpli bona," less good; "pli malbona," worse. The language also admits of modifying particles, such as the "in" in "homino," which conveys the feminine; for example, "mastrino," a mistress; "et," which gives the idea of smallness; "babineto," a little baby girl, and so on. These particles are particularly useful in constructing words; here is an instance: "ig" means the art of causing or making; "bona," good; "bonigo," making good; "plibonigo," making better, i. e., improvement.

This sketch contains the most important parts of the grammar. Of course, there remains the vocabulary, but any one who knows a little French or Latin can guess it. What of those who do not? Well, it is pretty certain that an English child could learn it in at most, six months, so as to be able to read, speak, and write it, for all the common words are retained. Telegrafo, tabako, posto, teatro, lampo, lemonado, rozo, sekretaro, explain themselves. Komenci, to begin; acepi, to accept — many words with Latin roots are found in Esperanto the same as in English.

The renewed attempt to create a universal language dates from 1900, the year of the Paris Exhibition. Many individuals, from many nations, met there, and were dumb; they had no language in common. Following on a lecture by L. Leau, a commissioner was appointed to consider the question of the possibility of a universal language, and to decide which of the claimants should be recommended. Their preliminary conditions were: (1) The language must fulfil the requirements of ordinary life, as well as of commerce and science; (2) it must be so easy as to present no difficulty for average Europeans; (3) it must not be one of the living languages.

Attempts are now being made to get the Association of Academies, or learned societies, which will hold a meeting in London in June, to take up the question, with the ultimate object of inducing the various governments to move in the matter, and to make the language a compulsory subject in schools. Should that be successful, the next generation will find themselves able to communicate freely with each other, from the North Cape to Gibraltar; from Galway to Odessa. Fairly rapid progress is being made; no fewer than 150 societies, with a membership of many thousands, have been formed, and they receive recruits daily.

It must be remembered that no attempt is being made to displace any modern language. The men and women of each country will continue to speak their native languages, but at the same time they will be able to converse and to write to those speaking a different tongue. My personal opinion is that England will be one of the last to join this movement, owing to its national conservatism; but it is much to be desired that it should receive careful consideration, for there can be no doubt that the promoters are in earnest, and that they are likely to receive support from foreign governments.

MARKET PRICE OF SOME FAMOUS NAMES.

There were some curious and diverting vagaries in the prices paid for autograph letters of celebrities at the sale recently concluded in London.

Letters of the great Duke of Wellington varied from 5s to £5 10s each, according to their interest; one from Cardinal Mazarin fetched a guinea, whilst Madame de Maintenon was appraised at £3.

A document signed "N." by Napoleon I. realized three guineas; a comparatively long letter from his great rival Lord Nelson, three and a half guineas; a long letter from S. T. Coleridge to the Rev. F. Wranghan, £3 15s. Robert Browning letters varied from three guineas to £5 7s 6d, and David Garrick was sold at £5.

A portion of the MS. of Tennyson's "Charge of the Light Brigade," in his autograph, and a variation from the published version, brought the second highest price of the day, £22 15s, and a one page letter from him to Thackeray asking the latter to dine with him to meet Forster, Leigh Hunt, and others, went for £4 17s 6d.

Eight pages of the printed proof-sheets of "Martin Chuzzlewit," with autograph corrections by Dickens, produced £21; a document with the signature of Henry VIII., £11; and at the same price a holograph letter of Prince Rupert; a document signed by William Harvey, the discoverer of the circulation of the blood, realized £9; and a holograph letter from John Locke to M. Toinard, in French, dated May 25, 1679, £14 5s.

Perhaps the most interesting, and certainly one of the rarest, was a holograph opinion signed by Francis Bacon, Viscount St. Albans, on petition of John M. Carterett, of the Isle of Jersey, and also signed by Robert Cecil, afterwards Earl of Salisbury. This realized £39. This identical document is given in facsimile in Philip's "Autographic Album."

Land owners in California expect to irrigate sections along the Rio Grande by a novel and inexpensive method. A wheel placed between two boats that rise and fall with the waves will, it is expected, operate a series of pumps.

Living for years is well, but living each year well is better

Old age requires no pity when it is accompanied by good health. Eat proper food and you will not only live long but enjoy every year you live. It stands to reason that if you give the proper food in Nature's exact proportions to each element in your body they will always be healthy and vigorous. Now the whole wheat grain contains every element the body requires to build it up. The only foods in which you can get the whole of the wheat are

Weakness in The Springtime

Can be Promptly Changed into Vigor and Health by Nourishing the System With

FERROZONE

FOOD AND NERVE REMEDY

If your blood were examined you would find it greatly impoverished, lacking in red corpuscles, deficient in iron and oxygen. This is why your mind grows tired, why your memory is so provokingly poor; it is this lack of blood tone that is undermining your very life.

You have to fight to secure sleep, you have to force yourself to eat, and yet you're not trying to help yourself. Don't you think it's a foolish policy when Ferrozone will make a new man of you? Think of it; consider how enjoyable life would be if you were stronger, more able to work and toil like other folks.

FERROZONE

Invigorates, Tones, Rebuilds, Gives Vital Stamina and Force.

Try Ferrozone. It strikes at the very root of weakness by forming rich, nutritious blood that can't fail to impart new strength to every organ of the body.

Ferrozone contains the exact food elements that are needed to rebuild the nervous system, to fortify the brain and spinal cord. It will quicken your entire being, make you happy, healthy and well. You are foolish to wait.

Get Ferrozone to-day and get better that much sooner. Price 50c per box, or six boxes for $2.50, at all druggists, or by mail from N. C. POLSON & CO., Kingston, Ont., and Hartford, Conn., U.S.A.

MR. BELL'S ATTACK ON G. T. PACIFIC

Member for Pictou Mercilessly Ridiculed Weak Points in the Measure.

THE MANY CHANGES MADE

Views Expressed by the Directors of the Grand Trunk to Their Shareholders.

One of the most telling speeches during the Grand Trunk Pacific debate was that made by Mr. A. C. Bell, the member for Pictou. With unerring knowledge he detected and attacked the weak points in the proposals, ridiculing, denouncing and controverting the pretensions and fictitious claims made by the supporters of the measure and unmasking the ignorance of the Government on points of vital importance in the carrying out of the proposed contract. Mr. Bell, who was listened to with great attention, spoke, in part, as follows:—

Mr. Bell.—What is the position of this scheme to-day? The right hon. gentleman (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) practically declares to the world, that at this moment there is traffic in this country which cannot be accommodated over the lines which at present exist. Does he not know that Mr. Hays and Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, speaking to their shareholders with a view to persuade them to accept this agreement, stated that in summer, all the freight would be brought across the lakes, and that not one ton of it will come over this railway. Does the Prime Minister not know, that if the freight comes to this end of Lake Huron and is there delivered into trains—not of the Grand Trunk Pacific, but of the Grand Trunk Railway—that there is every probability that it will continue to go to Portland as it has gone in the past. If the right hon. gentleman is in a position to show to the people of this country that his bill contains any clause binding the Grand Trunk Railway to carry the waterborne freight that they receive at this end of Lake Huron to Canadian ports, he could have very profitably spent some time to-night in pointing out to us that clause of the contract. But the Prime Minister has not seen fit to do that. He has simply closed the discussion on this bill in the same manner in which he opened it, with an appeal to the sentiment of the people of Canada.

THE SCHEME BROKE DOWN.

We are here to-day engaged in discussing a bill which we spent months discussing last year, and why are we discussing it again? The scheme is here before us now, because it broke down; it is here, because when it was set up and had to stand by its own strength it proved to be a weakling and a failure. The right hon. gentleman with his majority in this House, can vote it through; he can vote anything through; but when it passed out on the stage and the sustaining hand of the right. hon. gentleman's majority was taken from it, it collapsed. What guarantee have we that it will not collapse again to-morrow. There is not much more to be given to it; there is not much more which the right hon. gentleman can do for it.

I want to call the attention of the House to the fact that the views of the Grand Trunk directors expressed before their shareholders are in direct variance to the views presented to this House by the right hon. gentleman and his supporters. And in this divergence of opinion there is great probability that the scheme will collapse again. If it becomes known to the Grand Trunk shareholders and to the financiers who are to supply money for the scheme, that their scheme for equipping that road with $20,000,000 of rolling stock, as they present it, cannot be carried out because the Prime Minister of Canada and his supporters have decreed that it shall not be done; if that becomes known it seems to me that their scheme is likely once more to prove that its own strength never can carry it forward to completion.

We have in the original contract provision for $20,000,000 worth of rolling stock; $5,000,000 of which is to go on the eastern portion of the road. But what have we to-day in this supplemental contract? We have a provision for $20,000,000 worth of rolling stock, less $5,000,000; less that precise quantity which was to go to the eastern division of the road. So far as that $5,000,000 worth of rolling stock for the eastern division is concerned, the argument has been modified, and the Government is not going to require the company to provide rolling stock for the whole system, but only for three-fourths of it.

All these things go to show that what we are going to have is precisely that scheme which the right hon. gentleman has asserted most positively to-day, will disappoint the hopes of Canada—a line built for the Grand Trunk on the prairies and terminating at North Bay; a line which the right hon. gentleman has said will preclude any hope of establishing an all Canadian line, terminating at Canadian ports, and over which Canadian traffic is to be carried.

A BUSINESS PROPOSAL.

My right hon. friend should remember that this is a business proposal. It is all very well for him to go through the country shouting Canada for ever! an all-Canadian line! Canada is going to have so many millions of people on the prairies! We know all that; but is that any reason why we should spend $150,000,000 to build a line of railway where it should not go, and as to which he has not produced a single bit of evidence to-day that we had not last year to show the character of the route? It would be far more satisfactory to members of this House to have some evidence. Last year he promised to give us mountains of information, and he did the best he could in that regard. On this occasion, he laughed at those mountains of information himself; it was the only thing he could do. Last year I took the opportunity to place on Hansard a list of the mountains of information which the right hon. gentleman had laid on the table. That information was contained in eleven or twelve volumes, which dated from 1865 or earlier. From all the years since then, he had not added even one molehill of information to these mountains. But this year he has introduced another piece of evidence, more than thirty-five years old; and if we are to revere authorities according to their age, this is most important and valuable, and ought to be looked upon as the most respectable and authoritative evidence with respect to the character of the country through which this railway is to be built that has ever been presented to any Parliament, apart from the somewhat sacred character which it assumes from having been taken from one of the relations of the Jesuit Fathers. It is 240 years old. This venerable evidence reminds me of a story of a gentleman who had a guest to whom he offered a bottle of wine. He said: "This is very good wine; it is twenty-five years old." The friend, who had a good appreciation of wine, looked at it and said: "Well, it strikes me that it is very small for its age."

The fact is that if this is the best information the right hon. gentleman can give us, he leaves the case just in the position in which he found it. There may be a country there through which a railway can be built, or there may not; and here are 214 representatives of the people of this country invited, on two separate occasions, at two different sessions of the House of Commons, to deliberate on a project for spending $160,000,000 of the money of Canada for the purpose of building a railway over a country which the right. hon. gentleman has not taken the trouble to have surveyed. It is evident that this Government is carried on by faith; and if their works should prove to be equal to their faith, perhaps they may be able to build a railway some time. If not, we must come to the conclusion that their faith is not much better than their works.

There was a very definite proposition made by the hon. leader of the Opposition, and he gave his reason for it; and so far as the Maritime Provinces are concerned, it was a very good reason. He said: If you are going to derive any advantage from the possibility of receiving more cargoes from the west, the scheme of the leader of the Government, if it should ever descend from the clouds, may give it to you in eight or nine years. Eight years is the time he has fixed for the construction of the western section of the line, on which there will probably be some progress made. But the hon. leader of the Opposition is in a position to say: I will give you that advantage to-morrow. I will buy the Canada Atlantic Railway, and as soon as vessels begin to go into Depot Harbour in April or May this year, the city of St. John and the city of Halifax will be placed in direct communication over one line of railway with the ports to which cargoes are brought by those vessels.

A DEFINITE ALTERNATIVE.

But there was another exceedingly definite proposal made, not only by the hon. leader of the Opposition, but by several others on this side of the House. That was this: If the Government is going to spend $150,000,000 on the railway as its contribution to the partnership into which it has entered, while the Grand Trunk Railway Company, the other member of the partnership, is going to contribute only $14,500,000, why should not the Government spend the whole $165,000,000 and own the road? The right hon. gentleman could not have forgotten that proposal. It formed a very important part of the speech of the hon. leader of the Opposition; yet the right hon. gentleman saw fit, I think very prudently, from his point of view, to ignore it and pass it over altogether. But the people of this country will expect him to give an answer to that question. Why should the Government contribute nine-tenths of the cost of this road and leave it in the hands of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, who are practically independent of the Government for all time to come—who cannot be interfered with for a period of fourteen and a half years, even though they do not pay a dollar of interest in that time?

They get seven years' interest for nothing, three years in which the default is to be added to the capital, and four and a half years further in which the Government will not be warranted by any further default in taking possession of the road. Why did not the right hon. gentleman give a little attention to that proposal? Why does he think that the Grand Trunk Railway, in addition to managing its present system, can take over this line of railway, 3,400 miles in length, and make sufficient profit to enable it to meet all the obligations it is incurring, and at the same time come to the conclusion that he himself and his Cabinet are incapable of so managing that property that it will give a good return to the country for the money invested?

Have our people ever failed to respond to any appeal made to them in the interests of good, broad statesmanlike government and honest and good measures? There is nothing at all in the conditions of this country to frighten the right hon. gentleman. But there is some monstrous influence which induces him to surrender himself and the party he leads into the hands of two or three men who have gained his ear and to gratify whom he has parted with one of the ablest men in his Cabinet. True, he has since then rewarded his ex-colleague by a very important appointment, but the country looks rather askance on the course taken by the right hon. gentleman. To gratify these men who have gained his ear, he is willing to see his party disrupted.

Why does he, if he wishes a railway company to build a new transcontinental line, select the Grand Trunk Railway Company of all others to do the work? Of all others, the Grand Trunk Railway Company is the one which is the least interested in Canada, and which has the greatest interests outside of Canada.

Why did he pass over the Canadian Pacific Railway and choose the Grand Trunk Railway as the medium by which this Government would carry out its scheme of nation building? Or if he did not choose to take the Canadian Pacific Railway, there is another Canadian company—an all-Canadian company, in which two Canadians have shown not only the possession of great ability, but great courage as well. I refer to the Canadian Northern. There is a company which has achieved wonders and is going on quietly to achieve further wonders at this moment. Why did not the hon. gentleman, when that company was given a Government guarantee for the prairie section last year, say to it, we will give you connection with North Bay, and you will later on go to Quebec and Moncton and we will make you a great transcontinental all-Canadian railway line? Why did he not do that?

The right hon. gentleman ought to know that he cannot, either by a stroke of the pen or an order-in-council, force trade to go to any particular port in Canada. He must know that the difference of half a cent in the cost of freight will divert trade from one port to another. Still he made the statement, and apparently made it in earnest, that he will force the Grand Trunk Pacific to carry all the traffic it brings to North Bay, to the Maritime Provinces. Does he believe he can do it? Does he believe that he will force the farmers of the Northwest to bring their grain over a route which will compel them to lose from 5 to 10 cents a bushel on it? His own scheme shows that he does not believe it, because by it he gives the shippers of the west the privilege of routing their freight which ever way they like, and they will route it the cheapest way.

The Shipbuilding Trust.

In the May Pearson's, Mr. Henry George, jr., gives the following analysis of this notorious Prospectus:

"The Dresser prospectus of June 14, spoke of the United States Shipbuilding Company as being organized; whereas it was not incorporated until three days later, and was not fairly organized until September of that year.

"The capital stock, said the prospectus, was $20,000,000, whereas it was nonexistent then; never was $20,000,000; was only $3,000 on June 17, 1902, and on June 24, was increased to $45,000,000.

"The prospectus published a list of ten directors. None of these men then were, and six of them never became directors.

"The prospectus declared that the United States Shipbuilding Company had on hand contracts exceeding $36,000,000 in value. The face value of these contracts was $34,097,739.23, and the at that time uncompleted parts of these contracts amounted to less than $20,000,000.

"The prospectus said that the combined working capital of the merged companies was more than $5,000,000. Receiver Smith found that "the figures of the accountants" showed approximately $3,279,000; which, however, "was almost obliterated by subsequent adjustment."

"The prospectus asserted that the profits on the contracts on hand would be $5,000,000. This, Receiver Smith declared, was "undeniably false," that the profits on such contracts would be "about $1,000,000," realizable in upward of three years.

"This wonderful combination of misstatements was made, the receiver says, "to mislead and deceive the investing public." For a similar offence the Englishman, Whitaker Wright, had suffered a sentence of seven years' imprisonment, to escape which he killed himself.

"Who was responsible for the wilful falsehoods in the Dresser prospectus of June 14?"

The Late Surgeon-Gen. Ward.

By the death of Surg. General J. W. Ward, which took place on April 19, and which has already been mentioned in The Star, a well known military figure has been removed. The deceased soldier was born in Reading, England. After passing through Rugby, at that time presided over by the most famous of all headmasters, Dr. Arnold, he embraced the medical profession. As a student, he walked Guy's Hospital. After going through the course of the Royal College of Surgeons he was, in 1841, appointed assistant surgeon in the East India service. He saw service under Sir Charles Napier in the battle of Hydrabad, and went through the Indian Mutiny under Sir Hugh Rose. After the mutiny, Dr. Ward was promoted to the rank of a General Deputy Inspector of Hospitals in Bombay, where he remained until he retired with the rank of a General Officer in her late Majesty's service.

The laws in Russia pertaining to bankruptcy are very severe. A merchant in Russia can be declared bankrupt if his liabilities exceed $772 and he has not the ready cash to meet them. He can be arrested, and his retention depends on the good will of his creditors.

Sunshine Furnace

Uniform Heat Distribution.

Your experience with common furnaces is that one room will be hot and another will be cold.

You seldom have all the rooms warm at the same time. You cannot regulate the temperature. Your furnace man will say it's the direction of the wind—you don't know, but you do know that you cannot keep the house comfortable.

It's not the fault of the wind or the system but the unscientific construction of your furnace.

The Sunshine Furnace is built to distribute heat evenly throughout the house under any conditions of wind or house plan—heat must be divided in the furnace—if through faulty construction the wind drives all the heat up one or two pipes, it's the fault of the furnace.

The Sunshine divides the heat where it is generated and sends it evenly into every room in the house.

It's the most scientific furnace made in Canada—it is the best. Economical, easily regulated, simple in operation, clean and thorough

Doan's Kidney Pills

FINALLY MADE A COMPLETE CURE.

Mr. Jacob Jamieson, Jamieson Bros., the well-known Contractors and Builders, Welland, Ont., tells of how he was cured. "For fourteen years I was afflicted with kidney trouble which increased in severity the last five years. My most serious attack was four years ago, when I was completely incapacitated. I had terrible pains across my back, floating specks before my eyes and was in almost constant torment. I could not sit or stand with ease and was a wreck in health, having no appetite and lost greatly in flesh. I had taken medicine from five different doctors and also numerous other preparations to no purpose. I finally began to take Doan's Kidney Pills and before I had taken five boxes the trouble left me and I now feel better than I have for twenty years. Those who know me know how I was afflicted and say it is almost impossible to believe that I have been cured, yet they know it is so. I have passed the meridian of life but I feel that I have taken on the rosy hue of boyhood."

THE WAR SITUATION.

Those irrepressible optimists, the military authorities in St. Petersburg, find some comfort even in the cutting off of Port Arthur. They say it "clarifies the military situation."

When there is a bad collapse in the Montreal Stock Market the brokers say, "it will clear the atmosphere." The Russians claim that Port Arthur is amply provisioned for twelve months, and that it is impregnable. Both statements must be taken with a grain of salt. It seems to be assumed at St. Petersburg that the Japanese will attempt to starve out the garrison, in preference to risking the loss of thousands of troops by an assault. In this connection it is interesting to note, that in the present war, so far, the strategy of the Japs has in its main outlines been very similar to that employed by them in the war with China in 1894. There was a naval battle at the mouth of the Yalu, in which the Japs were victorious. The remnant of the Chinese fleet took refuge in Port Arthur, where it was effectually bottled up. There was a great battle at Ping Yang in which the Chinese were defeated and they then fell back to Wi-Ju. At the Yalu there was a feeble attempt to obstruct the crossing of the river by the enemy, and then the Chinese army of about 16,000 men retreated to Feng-Huang-Chang and finally to Mukden. A little later a second Japanese army was landed at Talien-Wan Bay, on the Liao-Tung peninsula, about half way between Port Arthur and Pitsewo, where the Japs effected a landing on Thursday.

In 1894 Talien-Wan was strongly fortified with all the most modern appliances; the only defect being that the garrison might almost well have been a flock of sheep. The invaders took a fortnight to march down the peninsula in two divisions, one on the east coast and one on the west. They met with frequent opposition, but the defenders were driven into Port Arthur, the land defences of which were carried by storm in a single day. The following morning, aided by the flotilla of torpedo boats besieging the Port, the sea-ward defences were captured and the Japs became completely masters of Port Arthur.

They are exceedingly likely to attempt to repeat in 1904 the tactics which were so successful in 1894; with such modifications as may be necessitated by the difference in the quality of the foe they have to fight, and by the improvements that have been made by the Russians in the fortifications of Port Arthur. Their game manifestly is not a waiting one, and they are more likely to run the risk of great slaughter among their soldiers, than to give the Russians time to accumulate in Manchuria the overwhelming force, they talk so confidently about. In 1894 there were about 20,000 Chinese defending Port Arthur, and about the same number of Japanese attacking it. The army landed at Pitsewo on Thursday is said to number 40,000, and another army of unknown strength was landed the same day at Port Adams, on the other side of the peninsula. Such a force is altogether too big to be tied up for months in besieging a place, which is probably defended by ten or twenty thousand men. Much depends upon the information the Japs have with regard to the strength of the garrison. If numerically small it will take so much longer to starve and so much less sacrifice to carry by assault.

JUDGE DUNLOP.

The Government is to be congratulated upon the excellent judgment manifested in the selection of Mr. Dunlop, K. C., for elevation to the judicial bench. No better choice could have been made. The general feeling at the bar and among the general public is that upon this occasion, at any rate, the selection has been based upon legal ability and professional eminence, rather than, as is too often the case, upon political party services. The new judge has the reputation of being a sound lawyer and commands the confidence and respect of the legal profession and, indeed, of the community generally to a high degree.

PROBING THE GUYSBORO ELECTION.

In another column of The Star—page 12 — is given a letter which deal with the recent by-election in Guysboro. That many Conservative voters were deliberately robbed of their franchise is set forth with circumstantiality of detail that admits of no denial. That disqualified Liberals were retained on the lists is made equally plain. There never has been a worse expose of partisan methods than the story told of Guysboro. The method, however, seems to be characteristic of the operations carried on in other counties of Nova Scotia. A correspondent, in a recent number of The Star, showed that Attorney-General Longley worked a "system" in Annapolis, which differed somewhat from the Guysboro method, but accomplished "results." Under the unscrupulous methods of Premier Murray and his followers the exercise of the franchise in Nova Scotia is becoming a prostituted institution. The first minister of the province led the Liberal hosts in the fight that resulted in Mr. Sinclair's election in Guysboro. Mr. Sinclair himself has, for years, personally supervised the lists in the constituency. In his capacity as local member he was largely responsible for the erection of the machinery which helped to send him to Ottawa in March last. Not sure even of this loading of the dice, it can be shown that flagrant bribery was resorted to in that fight. Guysboro has always been considered a Liberal stronghold. When such measures are resorted to as those practised in the bye election, desperate indeed must be the standing of the Liberals in Nova Scotian seats which are not "strongholds."

At the present time there is evidence to show that the tactics pursued in Guysboro are in process of accomplishment or of contemplation in other counties. The matter is a serious one. What are the people of Nova Scotia going to do about it?

THE "AUTO"-CRAT OF THE ROADS.

A bill has been introduced at Quebec which should not only give the automobilists pause, but the habit of pausing. It proposes to put it in the power of any man, who happens to be driving horses or domestic animals—including himself—along the road, to stop an automobile by simply lifting his puissant hand, for all the world like a London "bobby." Ridiculous as this is, it is precisely what the automobilists may expect, if they do not carefully leave the impression upon all and sundry that they, too, are driving the mildest of "domestic animals." The automobile is just introducing itself to the people of Montreal and the surrounding municipalities. Pedestrians, drivers, carriage folk, 'cyclists, all sorts and conditions of people who use the streets and the island roads, are forming their first impressions of the spick-and-span machine which goes bumping along with its asthmatic breath and its varicose tires.

And, as a rule, the impression is a favourable one. We like to see Montreal getting up-to-date, and equipping itself with the modern improvements which are to be found in other parts of the world. The great objection which is commonly raised elsewhere to the automobile, is that it travels so fast as to endanger life; but this peril our rougher roads pretty well protect us from. The man who values his "auto," or who does not care to be shaken quite to pieces, will not run at racing speed over a Montreal road.

Still any who are having practical experience with the roads these days, know that it is entirely possible for the automobile to make itself intensely unpopular. It runs faster than the ordinary vehicle; it kicks up a lot more dust; it frequently has to ask a passage along the road by blowing on its horn; and many horses and people are still nervous about its power to go just where it wants to. All these things should make it—if it is wise—the politest traveller on the highway. It ought always to humour a frightened horse; it ought never to crowd a passing vehicle into the ditch; it should be the last carriage to rush brutally down the very centre of the road, compelling all comers to make way for it by an insistent horn and the puissant terror of the unknown which it carries in its front.

Now all automobilists are not obeying these rules of prudence and politeness just now. Many are; but they will suffer from the indiscretions of the others, if they are not checked. It will not take many frightened teams and many annoyed carriage-fulls and many angry 'cyclists crowded into the ditch, to start an agitation against the "auto" which will enmesh it in such an intricacy of local regulations and restricting by-laws that it might as well be drawn by a horse and be done with it. But a little politeness and consideration for others will avoid all this. When we get well used to the machine, it can run more boldly as one of the rightful occupants of the road; but it should remember the trouble which the bicycle got itself into, to begin with, and pose as "the gentleman of the road" for a little time.

THE WEAKNESS OF "I WILL."

It was an English poet of no mean insight into human nature who wrote:

"Ah, the key of our life that passes all wards, opens all locks,
Is not, 'I will,' but 'I must.'—I must,—I must,—and I do it."

Yes when it is "must" we do things; when it is only "I will," the betting is very uncertain. Now for an illustration, which is always the better half of an argument. An ex-employe of one of the Government departments at Washington writes to a New York paper giving his impressions of the civil service in that city. Nine out of ten of the clerks who go to Washington to accept positions go with the intention of remaining only a short time. There are excellent institutions in the city for the study of almost every profession, most of which give their lectures in the evening for the express purpose of accommodating government clerks. So the ambitious young men, who think the government service does not afford a sufficient field for their abilities, enter the classes and often keep up their attendance till they have got their degrees or diplomas. But meantime the atmosphere of the Government office has been doing its deadly work. "They think of the hard work, the small pay and the long hours they put in before they went to Washington; they think of the chances of success if they strike out alone, and then they think of the soft snap they are enjoying, and they give up their first intentions and stay on, taking their easy money twice a month, growling at 'jumped' promotions, sick at themselves for not daring to throw up the job, knowing that every year they stay makes their leaving the harder. Discouraged, they work on, the victims of their own weakness. The lazy life, the lack of responsibility, the calm certainty of pay-day, the consciousness of security in his position if his work is even decent, all these things have a tendency to overcome many a man who would be ambitious and would make his mark under adverse circumstances." The result, according to the writer, is that out of ten men who had proposed to use their Government positions merely as a stepping stone to something better, nine settle there like limpets on a rock.

This seems to us a good illustration of the natural weakness of the human will when circumstances do not compel exertion or the braving of difficulties. Thousands and hundreds of thousands say, "I will," and nothing comes of it; but when circumstances say, "You must," and the man feels that he must, then he gets under way. The moral is to beware of getting into a position where your further advance will depend wholly on your ability to say "I will" and to make it good. The man who can do that in the absence of compelling circumstances, and in the midst of present ease, is not the kind of bird you see on every twig.

Mr. W. R. Hearst, proprietor of the American, of several "Americans," in fact, and aspirant to Presidential honours, is going to have a chance of proving in the courts an aspersion which his New York organ cast upon the Times of the same city in saying that its editorial opinions were dictated by Mr. Auguste Belmont, the well-known banker. Mr. Hearst, who is red-hot against the Trusts, will have it that the papers that do not join him in running amuck at them are controlled by the money power, and that their opinions are, therefore, not honest. The Times categorically denied that Mr. Auguste Belmont either held a dollar of its stock, or exercised the slightest control in any way over its columns; and, as Mr. Hearst did not withdraw his statement, papers have now been served on him in an action for libel. The case will be an interesting one to follow.

A WEAKENED MINISTRY.

(Bystander, in St. Johns News.)

Sir Richard Cartwright has sat (when he was able to appear in the House) silent and saturnine, thinking many thoughts.

The Hon. Mr. Emmerson has not ventured to interpose in the Grand Trunk debate. From the point of view of intellectuality, he is below mediocrity. That such a man should succeed the Hon. Mr. Blair, the greatest intellectual force in the Cabinet, next to Sir Richard Cartwright, indicates conscious weakness.

The Hon. Mr. Prefontaine busies himself with disallowing the purchase of a dozen lead pencils by the Montreal Harbour Commissioners—that body of unconscious humorists who give a fillip to life in the rather dull metropolitan city. The Hon. Mr. Sutherland is as genial and as ineffectual, as ever.

The Hon. Mr. Paterson is seldom heard, and then only as a verbal blunderer.

The Hon. Mr. Mulock doesn't develop strength.

The Hon. Mr. Fisher is more frequently heard at unimportant meetings in the county than in the House. He is not taken seriously.

The only Minister who develops strength is the Hon. Mr. Sifton. He has brains, but he is at a sad disadvantage in the House by reason of his deafness.

This is the simple fact: the Ministry does not cohere. It has no settled convictions as to the policy to be pursued for the benefit of this country. It said it was free trade government, but it framed a tariff upon the lines of the National Policy. It said it would protect the manufacturers, but it allows the woollen mills to close down, and thousands of men to remain idle, because it cannot make up its mind to give an adequate protection to this industry which promised so hopefully for Canada. The needs of the country demand a fast Atlantic service; it trifles with a pressing question, and runs a railway through a wilderness.

Burglary Led to an Assignment.

Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., May 7.—R. E. Denison, private banker, who suspended payment a month ago, has assigned voluntarily. The deficit is placed at $2,500 and it is thought that the estate will not pay more than forty cents on the dollar. Mr. Denison's difficulties are due to losses by the burglarizing of his bank some time ago.

A Centenarian Widow.

St. Denis, River Richelieu, May 7.—Mrs. Lapres, the widow of Toussaint Lapres, celebrated the hundredth anniversary of her birth on Wednesday, and there was a large family gathering to mark the occasion.

Graham Murray's little story told at the Galloway dinner should be recorded. A Scottish minister, taking his walk early in the morning, found one of his parishioners recumbent in a ditch.

"Where hae you been the nicht, Andrew?" asked the minister.

"Weel, I dinna richtly ken," answered the prostrate one, "whether it was a wedding or a funeral, but whichever it was, it was a most extra-ordinary success."—Sporting Times.

A gentleman, travelling under the seat on the Great Eastern Railway, had the bad luck to be in the same carriage as the ticket collector. Nor did his bad luck end here. He could not resist giving vent to a mighty sneeze, and, coming from no one knew where, his fellow travellers were almost frightened out of their wits. Result—case before the Beak. This reminds us of a journey we once took from Doncaster. As the train was moving out of the station, a man sprang into the carriage. Taking a hasty look around, he said, "Gentlemen, I rely upon your honour," and forthwith dived under the seat. —Sporting Times.

THE STATESMAN'S LULLABY.

To Little Bill.

O sweetest of Billies! Adorable Bill!
Let scoffers deride thee, and say if they will,
That "the Grand Trunk Pacific's a blunder terrific."
We'll talk about roses, until they count noses,
And the scent of the wild rose shall cling to thee still.

O heed not their laughter, my sweet little grafter,
Dream of millions and billions, the stuff that we're after,
We'll take off our rake off, don't fear but we will.
We've a little collection, for a general election,
But—the scent of the wild cat will cling to thee still.

TABLE PROBLEMS.

HOW MANY WERE THERE?

"Had you a good turn out at the parade?" asked the captain.

"Well, there were thirty-three riders, some on tandems and the rest on singles. There were twelve more singles than tandems."

How many of each machine were there?

The answer to the problem, "The Annual Meeting," is 240. Twenty proxies represent the difference between one-third and one-fourth of the total number of shareholders—i.e. 10 1-12th of the number, from which it is obvious that the number is 240.

PROVERBS OF THE WORLD

By Geo. Murray, B.A., Oxon.

NO. 9.

Various friends have sent me lists of proverbs, requesting me to offer some comments on them; in this series of short papers. I have selected two for notice, as a little irregularity will serve to vary the monotony of a more formal treatment. The proverbs picked out are certainly worthy of some attention, and the first is one which is mentioned in Chapter XXV. of Boswell's "Life of Johnson," under the date of April 15, 1775. After saying that the doctor had on that day given his servant Francis some directions for "reviewing his life, and resolving on better conduct," Boswell adds: "No saint, in the course of his religious warfare, was more sensible of the unhappy failure of pious resolves than Johnson. He said one day, talking to an acquaintance on this subject, 'Sir, Hell is paved with good intentions.'" In "Jacula Prudentum: or Outlandish Proverbs, Sentences, etc., selected by Mr. George Herbert" (1651), a book which is now lying before me, the saying is somewhat different, viz., "Hell is full of good meanings and wishings." Archbishop Trench has only a very few words to say about it, viz., "How exquisitely witty many proverbs are. Here is one familiar to us all, which is, perhaps, the quen of all proverbs: 'The road to hell is paved with good intentions.'" In a note he adds: "Admirably glossed in the "Guesses at Truth:" 'Pluck up the stones, ye sluggards, and break the devil's head with them.'" The Archbishop has done well in quoting the German version of the saying: Der weg sum verderben, etc., i. e. "The way to perdition, etc." A Scotch proverb warns the weak in will who are always hoping to reform and do well, that "Hopers go to hell," for there is little use in virtuous resolutions that never ripen into action. In other words, good intentions, not carried out, smooth the sinner's road to destruction, as the very fact of well-meaning offered as an excuse for ill-doing blinds him to his danger. In Lockhart's "Life of Sir Walter Scott" we find a letter from the novelist to Miss Joanna Raillie, dated October 12, 1825, in which he says: "I well intended to have written from Ireland, but alas! as some old divine says, "Hell is paved with good intentions." There was such a whirl of laking and boating, and maundering, and shouting, and laughing and carousing, so much to be seen, and so little time to see it; so much to be heard, and only two ears to listen to twenty voices, that upon the whole I grew desperate, and gave up all thoughts of doing what was right and proper on post-days, and so all my epistolary good intentions are gone to Macadamize. I suppose, the burning marle 'of the infernal regions.'" I may add that Coleridge, in quoting the saying, attributes it to Baxter, but omits to mention in what work it occurs. Some one has suggested that "Hell is not paved with good intentions,' such things being all lost or dropped on the way by travellers who reach that bourne; for, where "hope never comes," as Dante says, "good intentions" cannot exist any more than they can be formed—since to fulfil them would be impossible. Hence "The road to Hell, etc., seems to be the better version of the old proverb. Another saying on one of my lists is that "Marriages are made in Heaven," and on this I find the following brief comment in Trench's "Lessons in Proverbs," p. 57: "In respect of love not the Roman proverbs only, but Greek and Roman alike, are immeasurably inferior to those which many modern nations could supply. Thus a proverb of such religious depth and beauty as our own, "Marriages are made in Heaven," it would have been quite impossible for all antiquity to have produced, or even remotely to have approached." Those practical people, the Scotch, do not seem to approve unreservedly of the Archbishop's opinion, inasmuch as they have a proverb which runs: "If marriages be made in Heaven, some have few friends there." Other nations, also, have failed to find in Trench's lauded quotation, even a shadow of religious sentiment. It simply implies that it is not forethought, inclination, or mutual fitness that has the largest share in bringing man and wife together. More efficient than all these is the force of circumstances, or what we vaguely call chance, fate, fortune, accident, or, as the Turk says, "kismet." In the French version of the adage "Marriages are written in Heaven," "Les marriages sont ecrits dans le ciel," we find the special formula of Oriental fatalism, and fatalism is probably the popular creed respecting marriage. Hence, as Nerissa says in "The Merchant of Venice," Act II. 9. 82:

"The ancient saying is no heresy—Hanging and wiving go by destiny."

So, also, in Hall's "Chronicles" we find: "But now consider the old proverb to be true that saieth, that marriage is distance." Finally the Italian proverb declares: "I matrimoni sono non come si fanno, ma come riescono," that is, "Marriages are not as they are made, but as they turn out."

COMMONS DISCUSS MOUNTED POLICE

The Government Members Twitted for Change of Attitude to Force.

SOME NEW SHIPPING LAWS

The Grand Trunk Pacific Debate Laid Over Till Wednesday by Agreement.

Special Staff Correspondence.

The Press Gallery, House of Commons, Ottawa, May 7. — A comparatively uneventful day was yesterday in the House. The National Transcontinental Railway bill was, by common consent, laid over until next Wednesday, the Minister of Justice not yet having had time to consider the amendments proposed by the Opposition. Most of the day was spent in committee of supply, but previous to going into supply five bills were introduced by Mr. Prefontaine. Two of these are for the purpose of placing the harbours of Port Arthur and Fort William respectively under the jurisdiction of harbour commissioners. A third amends the Pilotage act by permitting the pilotage jurisdiction of any harbour to be brought under the control of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries by an Order-in-Council. A fourth provides for inspection of boats run by naphtha, gasoline, electricity or other modern device when such boats are engaged in carrying people for hire. The fifth amends the Shipping Casualties act, so that in case of accident the investigating board may enquire in the first instance into the conduct of the pilot as well as into that of the master and mate, thus doing away with the necessity of a second enquiry where the pilot is thought to be at fault.

MOUNTED POLICE ESTIMATES.

The estimates first taken up were those of the Mounted Police. The Premier stated that it has been decided to increase the force by one hundred men, this being rendered necessary by the increase of population. Originally the force was 1,000, then it was reduced to 750, and afterwards to 500, but this number is now found insufficient, and it is to be now increased to 600.

Dr. Sproule argued that if the Government were to grant the Territories provincial autonomy it would tend to decrease the cost of the Mounted Police considerably.

The Prime Minister explained that $20,000 of the vote was required for rearming the force, $10,000 for new buildings, and $70,000 for pay for the increased force.

Walter Scott urged that the Mounted Police be given increased pay, and wanted to know if the Government had taken into consideration the necessity of providing a pension system for the police.

In reply to Mr. Clancy, Sir Wilfrid stated that the intention was to increase the force in the North-West to 600 men and in the Yukon to 300 men.

Messrs. Henderson and Boyd confronted the Prime Minister with his criticisms of the Mounted Police as an unduly expensive institution, when he was in Opposition.

In the course of the further discussion, Mr. Oliver defended the increase of the police as a necessity to the maintenance of security in the Territories.

At this Mr. Fowler twitted the hon. member with disparaging the character of the people of the North-west, and Mr. Oliver excitedly claimed the "protection of the Chair."

THE LIBERALS HAVE VEERED.

Dr. Sproule pointed out that previous to 1896 the Liberals contended that if the Territories were well governed from Ottawa there would be no danger of insurrection or other troubles, and consequently the police force might be abolished. Since then, however, according to the Liberals, we have had the very best Government, yet the police must be increased.

Mr. Sifton said if it were made a condition of the granting of autonomy that the Mounted Police should be abolished, not 500 of the 500,000 people in the North-West would vote for provincial autonomy. He justified the increase in the police on the grounds of the increased demands of the Yukon, the draft occasioned by service in South Africa, the administration of criminal law in the Territories by the Dominion Government and the absence of any depot of permanent militia in the North-West.

E. F. Clarke cordially supported the policy of an increase in the force and favoured an increase of its pay, but reminded the Minister of the Interior that the strictures of the Opposition had been directed to aspersions cast by members on the Government side upon the character of the immigration coming into the North-West.

After Mr. Ingram had quoted from the report of Commissioner Perry to show that one of the chief reasons for increasing the force was the expected influx of labourers to build the Grand Trunk Pacific, the item carried.

THE YUKON FORCE.

On the item of $170,000 for pay of the Mounted Police in the Yukon, the Prime Minister stated that the question of increasing the pay of the police was under consideration, and Parliament might be called upon this session to vote the necessary amount. He added that the intention was to arm the force with the Ross rifle.

THIRD READINGS.

After recess the following bills were read a third time and passed: Respecting certain patents of Lewis E. Curtis, Mr. Ross; the Robert McD. Roger Divorce Bill, Mr. Grant.

AGRICULTURE ESTIMATES.

The House went again into committee of supply and the Agricultural Department estimates were taken up. On the vote for the archives branch, referring to the appointment of Mr. Doughty as archivist, Mr. Fowler (Kings, N.B.) expressed his regret that Mr. Fisher had not seen fit to appoint a native Canadian in the person of Dr. Hannah, of St. John, to whom he referred as a gentleman of literary ability and author of a history of the war of 1812.

The item of $5,000 for the Winnipeg Exhibition was also passed.

The House then adjourned.

PARLIAMENTARY NOTES.

Mr. Gervais gives notice of a question that will draw the attention of the Finance Minister to the resolution of the Chamber du Commerce de Montreal respecting the investment of French capital in Canadian securities.

Mr. Bayfield Williams, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., who was private secretary to Sir Louis Davies, when the latter was Minister of Marine and Fisheries, is in Ottawa, negotiating with the Department of Justice with a view to arranging a satisfactory and immediate disposition of the Halifax award of $5,000,000 in the provincial fisheries question.

Mr. Sifton yesterday tabled a return moved for by Mr. Roche, Marquette, showing the names of all delegates sent by the Government of Canada to Great Britain and Ireland during last year. The return shows that 55 delegates were sent over to lecture, attend and give information at farmers' fairs, give advice to intending immigrants, etc. Twenty-two worked in the south of England, ten in Lancashire and Yorkshire, nine in the Midlands, three at Cardiff, two at Belfast, ten at Glasgow, one in Norway and Sweden and two in Belgium. The lowest amount any delegate received was $150, the highest $707.

ANNUAL MEETING OF INSURANCE INSTITUTE.

Record of a Year of Useful Work—Officers Elected.

The annual meeting of the Insurance Institute was held yesterday evening. Mr. T. C. Morrisey, the president, in his address, stated that, in addition to the regular monthly meeting, there should be a series of less formal gatherings. The institute had now a very pleasant room, and if the members used it consistently and got into the habit of coming together, one great point would have been gained. Working in conjunction with the Toronto Institute, arrangements had been completed with the Federation of Insurance Institutes of Great Britain for the holding of examinations and the granting of certificates, which should prove of inestimable value, the certificates being something to be prized. He hoped that the members of the Montreal Institute would enter enthusiastically into this work, and would not lag behind Toronto in this very important matter.

The election of officers resulted as follows, the scrutineers being Messrs. Grigg and Dobbin:

President—Mr. T. L. Morrisey.

Vice-presidents—Messrs. T. B. Macaulay and H. M. Lambert.

Hon. secretary — Mr. George Lyman.

Hon. treasurer—Mr. Charles C. Hole.

Governing Council—Executive members: Messrs. J. G. Thompson, D. McGoun, A. H. Lavers, A. R. Howell, R. J. Dale, Lansing Lewis, T. F. Dobbin, A. B. Wood, J. B. Paterson, W. B. Colley. Associate members: Messrs. W. S. Jopling, C. J. Alloway, Pemberton Smith, A. J. G. McDuff, and Henry Timmis.

The report of the secretary, Mr. George Lyman, which covered a period of eight months, owing to a change in the date of the annual meeting, touched on the need of greater interest in the Institute on the part of the members. The work of the session was referred to, one of the new features being the offering of prizes for essays. The membership of the Institute was about the same as in the previous year —77 executive, 198 associate, 6 honorary and 3 corresponding; or a total of 284. It was suggested to the incoming governing council that the associate and junior members be given more of a part in the monthly meetings, and that the discussion of the papers read take place at the meeting following their delivery, thus giving time for the fuller consideration of them.

The report of the treasurer, submitted by Mr. C. C. Hole, showed a small balance on the right side.

The reports were adopted so as to make the annual subscription of associate members $2, instead of $1.

The president returned thanks for his re-election, and the gathering was then resolved into a smoking concert, the evening passing very pleasantly. Those who contributed to the enjoyment of the occasion were: Messrs. Barnes, Dumbrill, Griggs and Pickard.

FIRST MASS TO BE CELEBRATED IN THE NEW PARISH.

The first mass will be celebrated, tomorrow morning, at ten o'clock in the Ollier School Hall, the temporary church for the new parish of St. Agnes.

Father Casey has had a score of carpenters and painters working in the hall during the past week to put it in proper shape for to-morrow. The stage has been transferred into a sanctuary, with an altar in the middle, surrounded by a communion railing.

Rt. Rev. Mgr. Racicot will assist at the ceremony to-morrow. High Mass will be celebrated by the pastor, Rev. J. Casey, assisted by deacon and subdeacon. Prof. McCaffrey will lead the choir and Mrs. McMillan will preside at the organ. Sunday afternoon at two o'clock a general meeting of the parishioners will take place to discuss the site of the new church.

PICTURES OF GRADUATES.

Problem of How to Find Space for Them at McGill.

For years it has been the custom of graduating classes to present to their respective faculties a framed group photograph of the members of the class.

The walls of the different faculty rooms are fast becoming covered with such pictures, and as mural space is limited, the problem of what is to be done with the pictures of future classes is being discussed.

Mr. Charles Gould, university librarian, suggested a plan which might obviate the difficulty as well as establish a record of the students who have passed through McGill, which as time goes on will not only be interesting, but valuable.

It is proposed that each year in future, when it graduates, should present to the university a photograph album containing individual portraits of the members of the year. This album would be stored in the Redpath Library stacks, where it would not only take up less space, but be better preserved from the dust.

Whether each faculty year would have a separate album or whether each graduating year in all faculties would comprise one album is a matter to be decided upon.

Mr. Gould's suggestion of doing away with the framed group and inaugurating the album system is being generally discussed and finding favour among the students.

Just what year will introduce the change is not known, but most of those in authority and the student body consider the change should be made with the next graduating class.

St. Louis Council.

The Town Council of St. Louis met last night under the presidency of Mayor Gelinas. All the councillors were present. The discussion centred round the expropriations on St. Lawrence street, but no decision was reached.

The Criminals of Great Britain.

There was less crime in the year 1902, than in 1901, but it was more serious in character.

This is the burden of a bulky blue-book dealing with criminal statistics for England and Wales, which was issued recently.

	1902	1901.
Persons tried for indictable offences..	67,063	55,453
Persons tried for non-indictable offences	730,613	792,419
Total persons tried ..	767,676	847,872
Persons received in prison	207,384	199,875

The vagrant continues to perplex the police, who in some districts are taking more active steps to deal with the pest. During 1902 no fewer than 16,184 persons were charged with begging, and 9,598 with sleeping out, a total of 25,782.

Drunkenness was a little less prevalent than in 1901, but the figures for that year were with one exception the highest yet recorded. Habitual offenders form the bulk of the prison population. The figures prove this conclusively.

Women are the most incorrigible of criminals. Although out of every four prisoners only one is a woman, of every five habitual offenders—that is persons convicted more than twenty times—three are women. The proportion of women to men in prison is usually about one in three.

The increase in the number of suicides continues. There were 3,239 in 1902, and the increase has been going on steadily for many years now. The proportion per 100,000 of the population was 6.71 in 1863, and it had risen to 9.82 in 1902.

An English engineer is said to have found a process for manufacturing ozone that is much simpler than those used heretofore and permits of a larger production. Ozone is by him produced in an apparatus into which atmospheric air is forced by means of an air pump. An electric alternating current of 120 volts in three amperes, changed through a transformer to 1,100 volts, is then introduced. Through electric discharges in the apparatus, ozone is engendered.

FOR SALE — AT ST. AGATHE, FAmous for its pretty houses; it is the summer home of many of Montreal's leading citizens; men of standing and wealth who are constantly beautifying and improving the country in every way; in this ideal spot I am instructed to offer for sale the magnificent property of the Hon. G. Nantel, which will be sold, en bloc, or separately. Comprised in this valuable property are the following:
1. "Le Rocher," the family residence, with stables, bath house and boat house, and about 5 acres of land, beautifully wooded.
2. "Le Petit Ramapo," a smaller house, occupied for several summers by Mrs. Donner, of New York. Both houses are charmingly situated on Lac des Sables, with winding driveways and paths through the woods.
3. 20 acres of land thickly wooded with pine trees, rendering the air full of life-giving ozone. With this block can be bought, if desired, one of the finest points up the river with several choice building lots. The whole property will be sold either en bloc or separately at a very moderate price. For plans and coloured view of "Le Rocher," and full particulars as to price, apply to

NEW JAPAN AND HER RELIGIONS

Three Ancient Religions Mingle With Modern Philosophy.

CHRISTIANITY IS GAINING

Old Doctrine of Mikado's Divine Descent is Being Modified by Growing Enlightenment.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Tokio, May 7. — In Japan three religions and three systems of morality live together on friendly terms and are blended together in the minds of the people. Shintoism supplies theology, Confucianism anthropology and Buddhism soteriology. In religion, as in everything else, the Japanese are eclectic. Any Japanese you meet may be at one and the same time a Shintoist, a Confucianist and a Buddhist.

Christianity is also steadily gaining ground in Japan, and it will be interesting to note in what manner the eclectic mind of the island empire will apprehend the doctrine of Christ. Shintoism and Buddhism exist in form, not in doctrine. They are living on past successes, not on present vitality. Confucianism, which has no priesthood and merely furnishes rules for correct living, is rapidly approaching a similar condition. The rising generation is influenced by western philosophy, along with which Christianity is slowly securing a place in the Japanese mind.

SHINTOISM IS NATIVE CREED.

Shintoism is indigenous to Japan. It is not improbable that the prehistoric tribes of Japan worshipped the sun as the highest expression of deity. This crude monotheism was modified by the worship of subordinate spirits. The Aryan canquerors of the island were looked on as gods by the aboriginal tribes and availed themselves of this superstition to strengthen their power, declaring themselves descendants of the sun god.

Shintoism is founded on the principle inaugurated by the invaders and to this day the doctrine of the Shinto faith is "mikadoism" or "emperorism." It deifies the ancestors of the Emperor and regards as sacred the place whence the superior race started its conquering career. Many of the old Emperors were deified after death. The Mikado tribe or Yamato clan took possession of the aboriginal religion and turned it into an effective political machine.

The conquerors added to their own stock of fetiches that of the natives. While recognizing the earth gods of the aborigines they proclaimed the superiority of the Mikado as the vicegerent of Heaven and demanded that the gods of the mountain, river, ocean and sky should obey him. Shintoism in this crude form can scarcely be said to exist at the present day.

In former times, however, it did effective work in consolidating the state. In Japan, as in England and Germany, it was religion that first brought the warring tribes together and welded them into national unity. Shintoism is essentially monarchical. Had it not been modified by Buddhism, it would have checked all democratic growth in Japan. It still finds expression in the constitution of the country, which declares the person of the Mikado to be sacred and inviolable."

SHINTOISM IS MONARCHICAL.

One feature of Shintoism has done more to make Japan what it is than almost any other national force—the worship of ancestors. In reality this is loving gratitude to the past. It teaches the people to remember, love and respect the dead, and it created in time that marvellous patriotism and that loyalty to the Emperor which are so distinctive of Japan. It evoked respect for tradition. It explains the absence from the history of Japan of those terrible revolutions through which Europe has passed and may still pass.

BUDDHISM DEMOCRATIC AT FIRST

Buddhism at first rose as a protest against caste and spiritual and secular oppression. It proclaimed all men equally sinful and miserable and equally capable of being freed from that bondage through self-denial and enlightenment. Equality and fraternity were the original doctrines of Buddhism.

Buddhism, however, became more organized and under the influence of a developed government and administration the principles of equality and fraternity were lost. Like all religious societies, it elevated the governors over the governed. Its priests in time became a separate class and at the present moment the Buddhistic theory of democracy is a mere memory overlaid by the forms of hierarchical organization.

In Japan Buddhism, essentially monotheistic, has made a compromise with the gods of Shintoism. To convert the Japanese the Buddhist missionaries taught that the gods of Shintoism were merely incarnations of the supreme being of Buddhism and that the divine descent of the Emperor was not incompatible with the new doctrine. On this account Buddhism lost its vitality long ago.

CHRISTIANITY IS AGGRESSIVE.

Christianity first entered Japan among the lower classes. From the very first the spirit of Christianity has been democratic. The preachers have been fighters. They have denied the divine descent of the emperor and declared that there are no "kamis" or inferior gods, and no deity except the only living and true God."

Christianity has a great future before it in Japan. At first its propagation was threatened by both public and government. Freedom of belief in religious matters was proclaimed and definitely recognized by the constitution of 1889. The twenty-first article of the constitution says: "Japanese subjects shall, within limits not prejudicial to peace and order, enjoy freedom of religious belief."

ITO URGES RELIGIOUS FREEDOM.

Marquis Ito, the framer of the constitution, commenting on this article, says: "Freedom of conscience concerns the inner part of a man and lies beyond the sphere of interference by the laws of the state. To force on a nation a particular form of belief by a state religion is injurious to the intellectual development of the people and prejudicial to the progress of science. No country possesses, therefore, by reason of its political authority, the right to enact oppressive measures concerning questions of religious faith."

KAISER'S COLONY IN BRAZIL FAILS

Plan to Create German Nation in South America Found Unavailing.

BREAKS TIE TO FATHERLAND

Emigrants Forget Loyalty—Children of Mixed Marriages Speak Portuguese.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Berlin, May 7.—Discouraging tidings reach Berlin from southern Brazil, where hopes have long been cherished of planting the seeds of an oversea Germany. Settlers sent there by the thousand to colonize cities and farming districts and to "remain German" are adopting Brazilian citizenship, names and customs so extensively that "Deutschthum"—the preservation of German identity and ideals—is undergoing complete disintegration. To appreciate the disappointment these facts contain, the extent of the German colonial scheme in Brazil requires mention.

EXPECTED MUCH OF COLONY.

According to a recent compilation, Germans own more than 12,000 square miles of territory in southern Brazil, an area larger than Saxony and Alsace-Lorraine combined. About 500,000 Germans, either natives or Brazilian-born, children of natives, are resident in the republic. In communities where the German element has become most pronounced a sort of German local self-government has been set up, with German as the official language of schools, churches and town councils.

Until now it has been supposed that the Germanizing process was going ahead steadily and thoroughly, and numerous colonial agitators and pamphleteers have expressed the belief that the way was at last prepared for a realization of the celebrated prediction of Prof. Schmoller, of the University of Berlin, that the world would witness within the next 100 years "the rise of a German nation of 20,000,000 to 30,000,000 souls in south Brazil."

BLASTS EXPANSION HOPES.

A communication to the National Zeitung of Berlin from the state of Rio Grande de Sul, the centre of the German movement in Brazil, has blasted the hopes of the South American expansion party. How the Germans there are proceeding to break home ties is described as follows: "The motion has long been propagated in Germany that conditions for the maintenance of 'Deutschthum' are more favourable in South Brazil than in European countries or the United States. This is true in isolated farming settlements, but not in the cities where the vast bulk of the German element is concentrated. It is puzzling how little power of resistance Germans in Brazil are able to bring to bear against the racial assimilation of the Latin, negro and Indian elements with which they come in contact. The most disturbing feature is that this submission manifests itself not only among the working classes, but in the middle and upper classes.

SECOND GENERATION BRAZILIAN.

"Frequent intermarriages with Brazilian women have strengthened the preference for the adopted country. The education of the children being left to the mothers, it happens frequently that the German language is not spoken in families with German heads. Even in cases where both parents are German or of German extraction their children regard themselves with few exceptions as Brazilians, in accordance with the law which considers every native of the republic a Brazilian citizen. Most German immigrants change their names into Portuguese. Wilhelms have become Guilhermes; Friedrichs calls themselves Fredericos, and the Karls, Carlos.

MILITARY TITLES ATTRACT.

"The Brazilian government has, of course, not been blind to such opportunities of increasing the estrangement between these 'Germans' and their fatherland. Seeing the trend of events, it has made still easier the obtaining of Brazilian citizenship by permitting a man, if he wishes, to retain his German citizenship. The government has also understood how to cater to the average German by making workingmen eligible to the officer-staff of the local militia. Many naturalized Germans proceed to acquire officers' positions notwithstanding that their importance usually is confined to the privilege of tacking 'captain' or 'major' onto their name.

"Many private schools, conducted by former Germans along typically Brazilian lines, are adding fuel to the German-killing fire. The German schools receiving subsidy from the Berlin government are unfortunately not yet in a position to neutralize the effects of these pseudo-German schools. The German newspapers in Brazil also do little or nothing to stem the Brazilianization movement.

SHOW LITTLE PATRIOTISM.

"While Americans, English, Swiss and other nationalities represented in Brazil hoist upon their national holidays the flag of their respective countries and no other a large percentage of the so-called Germans may fly no flags, hang the German standard next to the Brazilian flag or else hoist Hamburg, Bremen or other local territorial emblems—a performance not calculated to impress either Brazilians or other nations with 'German unity.'"

This recital goes to show that the German emigrant, apparently, whether he settles in Brazil or in the United States, becomes sooner or later an assimilated, loyal citizen of his adopted country. The significant fact is that Germany has counted in vain upon transplanting to Brazil great communities of Germans, willing to remain loyal subjects of Kaiser and empire for whatever purposes the future might make them useful.

TO MANUFACTURE COAL FROM PEAT.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Dublin, May 7—A new Peat Coal industry is being started under the title of the Electro Peat Coal (Parent) Company, with a capital of £130,000. The directors include the Earl of Mayo, Sir Leslie Falkiner Bart, and Mr. Walker, a land colliery proprietor. The company acquires J. B. Bessey's patent for electrical manufacture of peat coal, charcoal, and fibrous peat, and will at once erect a plant in reland, capable of treating 5,000 tons of peat weekly. The company claims that electro peat coal can be produced at the works at 5s per ton, and that it is superior to the best smokeless coal. It is to be hoped that this new venture may be more successful than its predecessors. There is a splendid field for such an industry here with the enormous bogs, but hitherto all attempts to convert peat to profitable use has failed.

TROUBLE NOT OVER IN MACEDONIA

Lord Lansdowne's Ominous Words Create Some Alarm.

DANGERS OF THE FUTURE

If Russia is Defeated by Japan, Imperialists Will Seek New Fields of Ambition.

Special to The Montreal Star.

London, May 7.—For the time being high politics in Europe is concerned almost entirely with the East Asian question. Lord Lansdowne's ominous words in the House of Lords concerning Macedonia are fundamentally referable to the Russo-Japanese war. His Lordship declared that the Balkan situation warranted the deepest anxiety, and added that Great Britain was doing more than any other power to hasten the enforcement of reforms. Diplomatists in Lord Lansdowne's confidence know that while he earnestly desires changes in Macedonia for humanitarian reasons, he has been moved to assume the practical leadership of the reform movement for political considerations. He understands the deep rooted desire of Russia to dominate the Balkans and looks forward to a Japanese triumph in the Far East and a consequent heavy Russian recoil. Lord Lansdowne expects that when peace has been signed and the limits of the Czar's dominion placed south of the Amur, the Muscovite Imperialists will undertake exploits nearer the base of the national strength. He thinks that the Balkan peninsula will be the scene of the exploitation of these ambitions, and that Europe may be forced to face a general war or permit the Russians to occupy Constantinople.

The British Foreign Secretary is determined to do his utmost to promote a solution of the Macedonian question before Russia is prepared to make that province the ground of an Imperialist adventure.

ANXIETY JUSTIFIED.

Sofia, May 7. — Lord Lansdowne's anxiety about Macedonia is thoroughly justified. There is great distress throughout the disturbed vilayets. The young and strong are emigrating. Five thousand emigrants have left Monastir alone for the United States within two months. Notwithstanding the Sultan's amnesty, fugitives are afraid to return to their villages. The Turkish officials are not inspiring confidence.

LAPLAND GIRL APPEALS TO KING OSCAR.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Stockholm, May 7.—E. Laula, a Lapland girl, who has come to Stockholm to plead the cause of the Laplanders with King Oscar, says that formerly when her grandfather herded his 6,000 reindeer on the mountain slopes of Lapland her tribe was lord of all it could survey, and wandered from place to place with the herds, seeking out the best pasturage, but now the new settlers from the South come and squat in the middle of the best pasturing grounds, take up homesteads, and get laws passed to protect them in every possible way, regardless of the rights and necessities of the native Laps. Thus, for instance, the Laps are prohibited from pasturing herds on the lower mountain slopes during the months of June, July and August—just the time when the reindeer are in need of the lowland pasturage and the mild lowland temperature. If they are prevented from going to this, their natural summer home, their newly-born calves perish in the cold spring rains and snows of the highlands. Many break loose from the herd in spite of careful watchfulness and bolt for the valleys and then their owner has to pay a fine of 200 kroner ($53) for each roving reindeer. All this makes the richest Laplander destitute in the course of time, and then he and his family have to roam as outcasts among the lowlands, begging their daily bread and with nowhere to lay their heads save on the bare ground under the bare sky.

Unique Exhibition at Siena.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Rome, May 7.—Siena's exhibition of ancient art is intended to be a unique collection in the historical Palazza Publico — the mediaeval seat of ne old Republic—of works of art prior to the sixteenth century. Paintings, sculptures, gold and silver work, bronzes, prints, ceramics, laces, tapestries and manuscripts are all coming from the ancient States of Siena and Grosseto. Objects found outside these provinces executed by Sienese artists will be included and a special section will comprise treasures of Etruscan and Roman workmanship found within the Sienese territory. The sacred portion alone of the exhibition would ensure its success. The church treasures of the provinces are wonderful, particularly the gold and silver vessels and the vestments preserved within the cathedral church, masterly specimens of mediaeval handiwork. A section devoted to music and illuminated missals have been added. The show will remain open until the end of November.

In the Exchequer Court.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 7.—In the Exchequer Court yesterday, Messrs. M. A. Pigott and J. C. Ingles, of Hamilton, who have filed a petition of right against the Crown for a balance of $154,244, claimed to be due to them on their contract for widening the Grenville canal, were examined on discovery before Deputy Registrar Morse by Mr. Chrysler, K.C., for the Crown. Mr. Smoke, of Toronto, appeared for the suppliants. The case will be tried in Toronto early in June.

BABY'S HOLD ON LIFE.

The little ones are frail—their hold upon life is slight. The slightest symptom of trouble should be met by a reliable corrective medicine. Baby's Own Tablets have proved by their record of success to be an ideal medicine for the ills of infants and young children. The Tablets cure all stomach and bowel troubles, allay the irritation of teething, break up colds, prevent croup and destroy worms. The mother has a guarantee that this medicine contains no opiate or harmful drug. Mrs. T. E. Greaves, Maritana, Que., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets with great success. They never fail, in my experience, to cure the little ills of children." You can get these Tablets from any medicine dealer, or they will be sent by mail at 25 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ANTI-JEWISH RIOTS IN BULGARIA

Troops Were Called Out by Authorities, But Too Late.

MOB HAD WORKED ITS WILL Hardly a House in Jewish Quarter Escaped—The Synagogue Was Attacked.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Vienna, May 7.—During the recent anti-Semitic riots in Lom-Palanka, Bulgaria, the authorities had to telegraph to Sofia for permission to interfere. The mere intimation that the troops would be ordered to fire among the mob unless it withdrew quietly was enough to restore order; but the work it had come to do was already done.

Hardly a house had escaped in the whole quarter of the Jews; not a window pane remained unbroken. In the synagogue alone the damage is estimated at 11.000 francs $2.123).

A Government commission has been appointed to fix the amount of the loss and to take measures for the temporary relief of the victims, among whom the destitution is extreme. Many Jewish families have left the town for good.

NOBEL PRIZEMAN'S GENEROUS GIFT.

Has Invested it to Be Used for Promoting Arbitration.

Special to The Montreal Star.

London, May 7. — William Randall Cremer, secretary of the International Arbitration League and a member of Parliament for Haggerston, announced at a dinner in his honour that the Nobel peace prize, amounting to $39,150, awarded to him, will be invested at a guaranteed interest of five per cent. The proceeds will be used by the International Arbitration League to promote arbitration. Should the league cease to exist, the trustees are empowered to devote the funds for the furtherance of arbitration according to their discretion.

The dinner was attended by two hundred persons, including Mr. Andrew Carnegie, the Bishop of Hereford, members of the labour and arbitration groups in Parliament, Lord Monkswell and Lord Kinnaird.

Thomas Burt, the radical member of Parliament for Morpeth, who presided, paid a tribute to Mr. Carnegie, who, he said, was one of the strongest links in the Anglo-American friendship, and who had done much to further the cause of international arbitration.

Mr. Cremer gave a history of the Nobel peace prize. He said it had always been a mystery to him how Alfred Nobel came to donate a large portion of his fortune, made in the manufacture of dynamite, to the forwarding of a peace propaganda, but, believing that Nobel would have preferred that his prize should be appropriated to the personal use of the winners, he had decided to invest his prize with the trustees to help in the workj of the International Arbitration League. However, Mr.Cremer said, he had made it a condition that the income from the amount of the prize must be supplemented by substantial annual contributions from other sources.

Mr. Carnegie spoke appreciatively of Mr. Cremer's work for arbitration, and said he hoped the English-speaking race would set an example to the world by substituting arbitrament by treaty for that of the sword.

LONDON SHARPERS PREY ON CANADIANS.

Special Cable from Our London Correspondent.

London, May 7.—The opening of the Canadian season is marked by activity of the sharpers who prey upon Canadian visitors by fraudulent appeals, and other ways of obtaining money by false pretences. This week two cases of alleged fraud have arisen, one of which has been placed in the hands of Scotland Yard police staff. The High Commissioner's office are keeping a sharp lookout for such cases.

WINDERMERE.

PREMIER BALFOUR ON ANGLO-FRENCH TREATY.

Canadian Associated Press.

London, May 7.—Premier Balfour, in a speech at the Primrose League demonstration yesterday, referring to the Anglo-French agreement, said there were arrangements which, put off an evil day, which might never come, but that was not the nature of the agreement just arrived at. He attached enormous importance to the agreement because of its very character. It was, he believed, going to be a permanent arrangement.

The trophy for the highest aggregate in open events was awarded to H. Alexander.

GUSTAVE LAMOTHE, K.C., NOW ELECTED BATONNIER MONTREAL BAR.

Mr. Gustave Lamothe, K.C., the new batonnier of the Montreal Bar, is one of the leading French-Canadians in that body. Born at Champlain, Que., he pursued his studies at Three Rivers College, and later at Laval University. He was called to the Bar in 1880, and at once took a high place in the profession. He entered the partnership of which the late Hon. Senator Trudel was the head, and now is the head of the firm of Lamothe & Trudel.

He was created a Queen's Counsel by the Earl of Derby in 1893. He is the attorney of most of the religious communities in the city, and of several financial corporations. He is also a director of the Real Estate Owners' Association. In politics, he is a Conservative, and has rendered important services to his party as a member of various executive committees for years. At the present time he is the president of the Jacques Cartier Club, whose quarters on St. Vincent street, have become a rallying point for the Conservatives of the city and district.

He has, on various occasions, occupied positions of distinction in the Council of the Bar, and on Monday last was unanimously elected batonnier, the highest office in the profession in this district.

IRON MOULDERS AND FOUNDRYMEN.

Arrangements Being Made for Annual Conference.

Arrangements are being made for the annual conference between the iron moulders and the local foundrymen. The meeting was to have taken place this week; but owing to the absence from the city of several of the foundrymen, the matter had to be postponed for a few days. It is not thought by the officers of the union that there will be any difficulty in arriving at an amicable agreement. In the event of the local people failing to agree, the matter has to be referred to a committee composed of the National Association of Foundrymen and representatives of the International Union.

The officers of the union when seen to-day by the Star talked freely about the labour situation. They said that the iron moulders settled their differences by conference.

"Do you ever experience any trouble with reference to what is called the "open" or "closed" shop?" was asked.

"As far as the iron moulders are concerned, they know nothing whatever about the "open" or "closed" shop policy. We do not believe that an employer of labour should know who in his establishment belongs to the union. It is not his business. The iron moulders look after that end of it. We never have any clause in our agreement which calls for a closed shop and consequently we never have any differences along these lines. Our men are concerned in rates of wages and hours of labour. That is all. If a man has the right to belong to a church he has the same right to belong to a labour union or a fraternal society."

The Iron Moulders' International Union has appointed a label agent for the Dominion. He is now in the east and is working his way westward. According to the officers of the organization, the label is now being placed on large numbers of stoves and ranges as well as on heavy hardware.

The iron moulders are making elaborate preparations for the opening of their new labour temple, on Place d'Armes Square. The occasion will be made the subject for a demonstration.

COACHMAN GETS $500 DAMAGES AGAINST STREET RAILWAY.

At the special jury trial before Mr. Justice Curran yesterday, the jury, by a majority of nine against three, awarded plaintiff, Martin King, five hundred dollars damages against the Montreal Street Railway Company.

The plaintiff, who asked $3,000 damages, was injured on August last, while driving his employer, Dr. Campbell. The rig was struck at the corner of Crescent and St. Catherine streets by one of the company's cars and overturned, the coachman and Dr. Campbell being seriously injured.

The evidence was concluded yesterday morning, the afternoon being taken up with the addresses to the jury and the judge's charge and the jury's deliberation. Mr. F. E. Meredith addressed for the defendant and Mr. W. D. Lighthall for the plaintiff.

Mr. Justice Curran, in summing up the case, pointed out that while the employes of the company may have been negligent in their duties, there was also the chance of the plaintiff not having exercised prudence.

When the verdict was rendered, Mr. Meredith asked that sentence be deferred for the Court of Review. Mr. Justice Curran replied that he would wait a couple of days before pronouncement.

The case of Dr. Campbell, who has taken an action for $10,000 damages in connection with the same accident, is fixed for May 18. It was called for Monday last, but the jury could not be filled.

Not Affected.

Toronto, May 7.—A number of the lake boats, owing to a labour dispute, are on the eve of a tie up. The Canada Atlantic Railway Co. are declining New England freights for lake shipment on this account.

The Grand Trunk Railway, however, has announced its first sailings from Collingwood on May 10th, and from Point Edward between May 10th and 20th. Though the Canadian Pacific has not yet announced its sailings from Port Arthur, it is expected to do so within a week. The delay is due to the fact that the above harbour is, as yet, blocked with ice.

SS. Sardinian Reported.

Father Point, Que., May 7.—SS. Sardinian, Allan line, from Glasgow, inward 9.35 a.m., Captain Moar, reports head wind and heavy sea all way. Crossed south of Grand Bank, lat. 42.30 N., saw no ice until thirty miles west of Cape Ray, then met some light field ice, and was in it for sixteen hours. They passed two steamers twenty miles east of Cape Ray, bound east, one a Manchester liner; C.P.R. steamer stopped off Cape Ray. Also saw three steamers in ice. The SS. Sardinian has on board 209 intermediate and 117 steerage passengers.

Will Not Accept Lake Freight.

Special to The Montreal Star.

New York, May 7.—Owing to the inability of the freight carrying lines on the great lakes to reach an agreement with their masters and pilots, the New York Central, Pennsylvania, Erie, B. & O., and Delaware, Lackawana & Western Railway Companies have announced that they will no longer accept rail and lake freight at eastern points, and have cancelled all tariffs in this section. The agreement was not limited to any definite period.

AMID ICE FLOES PROPELLOR DAMAGED, REFUSES AID.

St. Paul's Island, May 7.—The Norwegian SS. Norfolk, nineteen days out from Preston for Chicoutimi, is lying off here with three blades of her propeller broken. There is heavy, open ice everywhere, moving south. The vessel is trying to get to Sydney.

Halifax, May 7.—The Manchester SCity, en route to Montreal, arrived here last night. Being unable to make the Gulf on account of ice, she came here for orders. Captain Forrest reports that on May 2nd, at 2.15 p.m., Norwegian steamer flying flags M.B.F.A. was sighted in the ice packs, and signalled that she had lost three blades of her propeller. She was bound for Chicoutimi, and declined offer of assistance. The steamer, when sighted, was in lat. 46.22 north, long. 59.40 west. She cleared the ice about 3.40 p. m., and proceeded N.N.W.

Bring in the horses.

Let the bugle sound, and permit the ringmaster to strut around once more, and to dazzle us with his beautifully shining boots.

Open the gates, and let the band play in the inaugural parade, for everything is ready to let Montreal's Fifth Annual Horse Show begin.

Fifth, and it seems so close to the first, that first which was arranged with so much doubt of its ultimate success that a few men like the directors of the Montreal Arena Company had to take all the responsibility.

The principal moneyed men in the city who kept horses worth showing were shy of the proposition then. Now they look upon it as an institution, a regular fixture on their annual programme of amusements.

The professional exhibitors look upon it as a sort of an idealized mart for high-class equine wares, and a self-supporting mart at that, for whether they sell or not the prizes gained pay the expenses. And the dressmakers and tailors look upon it as an annual blessing, an occasion not only profitable while it lasts, but worth much money to them in future advertising.

The horses will be quite a feature of the occasion, as usual, but the increased demand about this time of the year for lorgnettes and lorgnons would go to show that many of the visitors intend to have a good look at what is beyond the show ring.

About the only time when the horse will receive the undivided attention of the spectators, when neither dresses nor faces nor flowers will be capable of robbing it of its just dues, will be on next Saturday morning. It will be children's day then, and if horses could feel even a portion of those emotions which make the life of a human being alike bitter and sweet, there would be a lot of jealousy felt among the grown-up ones at the fact that the ponies will take up the lion's share of the programme that morning.

Everything looks most favourable for the success of the show. The entry list is fully as large as on previous years, and a great feather in the cap of the management will be the presence of the Governor-General's children as active exhibitors and participants.

VICE-REGAL INTEREST AND SHOW ENTRIES.

Socially and otherwise the Montreal Horse Show of 1904 will be unique.

It will possess a cachet never bestowed upon its predecessors, and quite unknown in the history of Horse Shows in Canada or the United States. The features of the Show are, of course, the entries from the Government House stable, while interest is doubled by the announcement that a large party will be present from Rideau Hall to see the events in which their entries appear.

Quite apart from every other reason, the presence of His Excellency the Governor-General, would be an incentive to society to turn out in full force, even if popular interest were not further aroused by the fact that their Excellencies' children had made entries, and that pretty little Lady Violet Elliot would drive her own tandem, while Lord Melgund's pet pony would also be shown.

In the long and varied history of Horse Shows on this continent, this is not only the first time entries have been made from Government House stables, but that so deep a personal interest has been shown in matters equine, by His Majesty's representative in Canada. His Excellency is a keen sportsman, his record as a steeplechase rider is well known, and his cross country rides with the Montreal Hunt have won him the admiration of all the members. Keen judge that he is of a good horse, Lord Minto's interest is rather more with the horses than with the social side of the Show, and he is said to be particularly interested in the success of the class for which he has given a cup.

As far as society is concerned, its interest in things equine, and also in what has been flippantly called "the dress parade," that forms so important a part of the Show, seems to have increased rather than diminished. The Show which a few years ago was looked upon doubtfully as an experiment, has triumphantly emerged into an assured annual success, and is patronized by everyone with an interest in horses, or gowns, or both. With many more applications for boxes than can possibly be filled, and taking into consideration the fact that a very large number of out of town visitors are expected for the occasion, it can be safely prophesied that the Show this year will outdo its predecessors in every respect.

The enforced absence through illness of Lady Minto, will be deeply regretted, particularly as Her Excellency's stay in this country is drawing to a close, but Lady Eileen will accompany Lord Minto to Montreal, and as at the Toronto Horse Show last week, will add greatly to the popularity of the two days on which the vice-regal party is in town. The same box as in other years—the central one on the East side—will be placed at the disposal of His Excellency. Boxes will also be occupied by people from New York, Hamilton, and the South, and the list of subscribers shows almost the same Montrealers as last year, and moreover the same people having the same boxes, which, through their occupancy for several seasons have come to be identified with them, and to be almost looked upon as their property. Many people unable to obtain boxes will engage the same seats for each performance of the Show, in this following a custom made popular in New York and Boston, and will gather little parties of friends about them on each occasion.

A large number of ladies will ride or drive this year, and on Friday afternoon when the ladies' saddle and harness horses are shown, and on Saturday afternoon when ladies' hunters, and ladies' tandems are among the classes exhibited, there is sure to be a tremendous crowd. But even these performances can hardly vie in popularity with that of Saturday morning, when the future belles of Montreal—at present in the school girl stage—lose themselves in admiration over the riding and driving of their young friends, and who, on this occasion, exhibit more enthusiasm than is to be found at any other time during the Show.

The Show this season, as in other years, will be used as a peg upon which to hang any number of entertainments, and almost without exception, box holders will entertain their guests at dinner prior to the evening performance, or at supper afterwards. Six, the number each box holds, makes just enough for a jolly little dinner, a fact that will be taken advantage of very largely. The introduction of morning performances—an innovation this year—will also doubtless be used as an excuse for numbers of informal luncheons. Tea will be served each afternoon of the Show, the proceeds, as last year, to go to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The ladies' committee will be in charge and those attending to the tea room on the various afternoons are: Mrs. Charles McEachran and Mrs. Baumgarten on Wednesday; Mrs. Andrew A. Allan, Mrs. Colin Campbell and Miss L. Gillespie on Thursday; Mrs. H. V. Meredith, Mrs. G. W. Cook and Mrs. Hartland B. Macdougall, on Friday; and Mrs. F. L. Hutchinson, Miss Eadie, Miss Bond and Miss Brainerd.

The tea rooms will be situated in the same quarters as last year, with the addition of a large space under the promenade. The rooms will be charmingly decorated and a number of girls will assist the ladies in charge.

It seems to be an assured fact that theh gowns designed for wear at the Horse Show this year will surpass those seen on any similar occasion in Montreal. White and very light tinted gowns are to be the mode. As there is to be a performance each morning of the Show, costumes during the day will vary from the straightest tailor-made variety to the fluffiest and flimsiest and daintiest of frocks for the evening. The new promenade which extends all the way around the Arena, and does away with the necessity for turning at the north end of the building, will afford a splendid place for the wearers of handsome gowns to see and to be seen. New entrances into the promenade has been placed on each side, near the north end of the building, and these will make the promenade easy of access to those occupying the reserved seats behind the boxes, and encourage them to make greater use of it than has been the custom in other years. This innovation, which should prove very welcome, will tend towards giving the sartorial triumphs at the Horse Show every opportunity of being in evidence and will make the rivalry between the King of the Show and the fair onlookers more keen than ever.

OUTSIDE EXHIBITS AT OUR SHOW.

The approaching horse show in Montreal will see in the ring many of the best horses from Toronto and neighborhood. It is not likely that private owners will venture the railway journey with their animals, but the two principal Toronto dealers, Messrs. Geo. Pepper & Co., and Messrs Crow & Murray, will try their fortune with the pick of their stables.

Among the animals the first mentioned firm will exhibit is Myopia, a handsome brown gelding, 15.3 in height, with a splendid record behind him. During the two seasons, this horse has been in the ring he has taken at least fifty firsts for his performances at the hurdles. His record for jumping is seven feet. Pearl, the very ideal of a hunter, will also be in evidence, she is a bay in colour and stands 16 hands. It is a sight to see her clear the hurdles, she goes at them in such an enthusiastic and businesslike fashion. At Toronto fair last year, she jumped 7 feet, 6 inches and at the recent horse show she made a most creditable performance.

Rupert a large weight carrying black gelding will also be among the number of Messrs Pepper's string. This animal has equalled record of Pearl as regards the heigh he has cleared, and ten chances to one, he will carry off a good many red ribbons in Montreal. A good steady jumper is Blue Girl, a grey 15.3 in height, that always takes with the spectators. She is not so high a jumper as those already mentioned, but at 4 foot or 5 foot, she is never guilty of mistakes and she goes through with her performance in a neat and graceful manner.

Messrs. Pepper & Co will also show their famous Creighton which has again and again won the championship as a saddle and harness horse. It is seldom a horse so well trained and with apparently so much zest in his work is seen in a show ring. He positively shines as a leader of a tandem and it was his splendid performance that won the tandem first prize for his owners, at the recent Toronto horse show.

Messrs. Peper & Co. will exhibit in all 18 horses, all of which are first class animals both as regards quality and training. Two of them Wiry Jim and Daisy Dean, combination animals, are recent purchases from the States and their quality may be judged when it is mentioned that each won two firsts recently at Toronto.

Messrs. Crow and Murray's string will number 15 animals. The Thistledown is a 16 hand bay mare that divided first place with Messrs. Pepper's Myopia in the high jumping class at Toronto a week ago. This animal is only 5 years old and has shown herself of so high quality that she is likely yet to rank with the highest jumpers on the continent. Her form and weight carrying ability are far beyond the common, her record hitherto is 7 feet 1½ inches. Timber Tipper and Coquette are a pair not easily beaten. The latter particularly, a bay mare 15.3 in height has won a name for herself. She has proved her mettle in the States having taken over 20 firsts and her performance at Toronto won for her the applause of the spectators besides three firsts.

Hands Off, a clever little harness gelding, another of Messrs. Crow and Murray's string, should stand well in Montreal, he has plenty of action and speed as well. In harness he looks as pretty as a picture.

Show girl and Sporting Duchess, two recent purchases of Messrs. Crow and Murray's, that took first at Madison Square show and at Toronto in the pairs driving class, will not unfortunately be on exhibition, as the latter of the two is slightly under the weather.

It is expected that Mr. A. Yeager of Simcoe will exhibit his well known Hackney stallion Hillhurst Sensatius, a large bay which proved true to his name by reason of the stir he created when he appeared in the ring at Toronto. Mr. Adam Beck of London will also show his fine jumping horse Guardian, a bay which has all the points of an excellent hunter. By his performance at Toronto this horse made quite a reputation for himself, coming in first in two competitions. He would have done better had he been more skilfully ridden.

HINTS ON HARNESS BY AN OLD COACHMAN.

An old London and Brighton Road Coachman says in "The Road":—

As I have noted how little matters connected with harness cause many serious accidents, I am of opinion that space will not be wasted if one such accident be saved by a few recitals and remarks. As a rule, singularly little is known by the horse owner himself as to the "wear and tear" of harness, and the desultory understanding between master and head man of a stable, be he studgroom over forty, or single handed coachman over one, leaves much to be desired. Certainly, if a master have a good man, he should give him permission to have harness repaired so far as is needful, and convince himself that the necessity does not exist when new harness is asked for and refused.

When I see hame straps with a "speck" in them I cut them close to the buckle. They easily get slipped in when least wanted, if put on one side. I once went through the harness with the owner of forty horses, and remarking that a certain set was too far gone to use in such surroundings, was met with the reply: "Well, it's a bit shabby for daylight, but it will do for night work.' I replied: "Pardon me, but if obliged to use perished harness, I prefer it by daylight. You can so much more easily see where it has broken."

I went to drive an "awkward" pair at another place. The harness was well cleaned, and as an experienced (?) man had been in charge, great was my surprise, whilst waiting for the groom outside the post office, to see one horse hit his head against the other, and the winker give way at the top of the "cheek piece," the while the horse was calmly looking at me, the bit keeping in his mouth, solely supported by the curb. I unbacked my rein and jumped down and put the handpiece round his neck till assistance arrived; but think of such a thing happening on a dark night, all for the sake of putting on perishing harness of which the owner, though detesting "waste," was quite unaware. Indeed, he immediately ordered a new lot to replace what I found on a thorough examination of the harness rooms was necessary—a four-horse set, two single, one double, and a tandem harness, all the vital parts of which snapped like a "carrot" when bent double with the hand.

Again, I know a very rich M.P., whose place is full of old perishing harness. The coachman keeps his man cleaning it, but does not possess sufficient confidence in his master to jeopardize his situation by giving him to understand the real state of affairs, and seeking permission to clear it out. Although they have some new harness, the old gets used more or less in wet weather, and the danger is ever present. How comfortable for others on the road!

I once saw the belly-bands of a new set of harness practically burnt up. Having been sodden with rain, they were put on a fender to dry, and, of course, the heat perished them. Nothing is worse than steam from the stable direct into a harness room, or a harness room badly ventilated or damp; the trouble is soon apparent by steel going rusty and mildew appearing even in 24 hours. Billets of reins become brittle by the continued moisture from the mouths of horses. They should be daily greased or they soon crack and break; terrets become worn so thin they will cut the reins; pole pieces should be well looked after, and the head pieces of the bridles also. I really think it would pay to have a practical man look through the harness, say, twice a year, in addition to impressing the men with the necessity of immediately drawing attention to slight defects. The practice of having a footman on the box instead of a carriage groom sometimes leads to accidents, the former being ignorant of the names of the harness. I remember a Prime Minister's brougham turning over, because when the near side horse fell and the coachman told his footman to let out the polepiece, the latter undid the outside trace, with the result that the horse then went at his companion at right angles to the pole, and, of course, over the vehicle went. This would never have happened had a plucky stable lad been on the carriage. Owners of road coaches should be very careful of hame straps. Men, left to themselves at a country inn, are likely to be careless when in wet weather the dirty horses claim attention, and the harness has to go. I know of a device which gives on the control of the pole even though the hame strap should break, and I think no passenger coach, liable to heavy loads on hilly roads, should be without such.

THE MONTREAL HARNESS HORSE AT THE SHOW.

The harness horse has always been a cherished animal in this city and province. Trotting is the sport par excellence of the French-Canadian, and one of the principal hopes of the young French-Canadian boy when he starts to work, is to, at one time or another in his career own a fine trotter. The English-Canadians are not far behind in their love for fast driving, and at the present day the absence of a speedway, is a constant thorn in the side of all those who own nice fast trotters, and as the result of the Upper Lachine Road is used for that purpose, many times, because it is not properly policed to the danger of life and the equine property of the people who indulge in the fascinating sport.

As to parks for harness racing, Montreal has had several with more or less useful tracks, and Quebec has also been well provided with them at different times. Every one of the smaller towns in the province has a track, and during the annual fairs and on many other occasions, they are generously patronized.

Among the people who do not go in so much for speed as for show, the harness horse has also been a great favourite in the past, and is so still, but the organized parades, which used to be a feature every Saturday, both here and in Quebec, have somewhat gone out of fashion.

The old Tandem Club in Montreal certainly did a great deal to keep up the interest in fine horses and fine turnouts, and their parades used to be things worth seeing. They were a feature of the great carnivals which Montreal has had, and visitors from Europe often said that nothing finer than some of these winter processions could be seen over there.

Gradually, however, the concerted outings went out of fashion, but the love of fine turnouts did not, and the coming show will prove that the people who can afford it, in Montreal, have kept up their reputation in that line. Few people know what a number of fine stables there are in Montreal, and it takes a show like the one which opens next week, to give them an idea of what care and money there is expended in this city and province in fine, valuable and useful horseflesh.

For some years now, Montreal has not seen any of the old tandem drives, but the Canadian Hunt Club tried to revive them last fall, and managed to make a very creditable showing, just with their own members.

CARRIAGE HORSES IMPROVING CONTINUALLY.

The very general interest felt in horsy matters at present throughout the country is directly due doubtless to our horse shows. Several shows have sprung up within the last few years, and the growth from year to year has been most gratifying. The marked improvement in the harness classes, for instance, at our recent shows must be apparent to the most casual observer. Directly as a result of the influence of these shows the improvement is little less than marvellous.

"The improvement in the stock exhibited at the horse shows is particularly gratifying," writes Mr. Francis T. Underhill, the well known authority. "As regards carriage horses especially the country is doubtless in need of some such court of correct judgment. An enormous number of cheap carriage horses have been thrown upon the market of late by the introduction of cable and electric tramways. The result has been that even the better class of horses were not always bring their actual value. The best horses, however, have never commanded a higher figure than at present.

"The quality of the horses bred in this country is certain to improve for several reasons. It must be remembered that certain farmers in the west have been sending to market hundreds of monstrosities called horses which should have no particular value outside a dime museum. These breeders were encouraged by the enormous demand for street car horses to purchase broken down, unsound mares. They bred these mares in turn to slab sided trotting stallions and grade Percherons, finding a ready market for their produce. But as quickly as these farmers find that there is no demand for such horses, due to the introduction of the trolley lines, they will abandon such efforts. Meanwhile the demand for high grade horses continues to be encouraging, and the intelligent breeder will gradually come to supply the demand with good stock.

"Too much stress cannot be laid on the selection of sires, and none but high class mares will be used in the stud. An illustration of the extraordinary effects which selection can effect may be seen in the breeding of pigeons. The tumblers, pouters, fantails, Jacobins, and the homing pigeons, have all been bred, for example, from the common blue rock. If any one will study the breeding of cattle, dogs, sheep and chickens, the importance of selection will soon be realized. The same or similar effects may be produced, though of course the progress will be slower.

"The institution of standards of types is especially recommended. Much breeding is done nowadays with no definite object in view. Instead of breeding at random, as most of them do at present, the standard of type should be made a difficult one which breeders may grow to. The existing specimens should not be accepted, but more perfect ideals should be set as the standard. Care should be taken not to make the standard, however, an impossibility.

"The horses of the country have been injured by the breeding of trotters merely for speed. As a result of such breeding from twenty to thirty useless horses are thrown upon the market for every fast horse. Some surprising results have been obtained, and these, of course, are appreciated, but it is doubtful whether in the horse world at large such results are beneficial. It is coming to be realized by many trotting horse breeders that size, conformation and uniformity pay better than mere speed. Meanwhile certain lines of trotting horses have been produced which are particularly adapted to light carriages. As time goes on and the breeders come to appreciate the value of such horses the better types will be improved.

"The English thoroughbred has exerted a marked influence on American breeding, and has doubtless been of great benefit. We should, however, endeavour to prove to the horse world at large that we can produce a horse the equal of, even the superior to, the hackney. We may not be able at present to equal the exhibition of the high class hackney. There is noticeable a certain coarseness about the throat and a shortness of the neck which are specially obvious in horses in harness. The customary side reins make this the more noticeable. The hackney, it should be borne in mind, is an excellent type of an old gentleman's park hack. It is, besides, well suited particularly for a lady's phaeton or a small two wheeler. Its pony types are also very good. It would, of course, be foolish to let prejudice hinder our benefiting whenever possible by the introduction of this blood. The intelligent crossing of these on our trotters or with our thoroughbreds, it seems to me, should be especially encouraged. This progeny will then compete with American bred ones.

"The horse of the future should have confirmation and quality; it should be a suitable size and type, and it should conform to the best standards in point of weight, pace, action, colour and soundness. Every horse owner should bear in mind that although his horse may be a good one he is not necessarily suited to vehicles of every type. As a general proposition every one must admit, of course, that there is nothing like blood, and that at present for us none can compare with the English thoroughbred. This is chiefly true because the type has been so long established.

"The history of the breeding of these horses is probably familiar. As early as the sixteenth century Henry VIII. of England issued an edict prohibiting any of his subjects from employing any stallion under fourteen hands high for the purposes of breeding. It is well to remember this fact when listening to the arguments that the best qualities of the English thoroughbreds are inherited from the horses of the eastern countries. As a matter of fact there was racing in England a full half century before Arab, Barb, of Turkish blood, was introduced. The American trotter traces its ancestry directly to the trotting thoroughbred of England. By intelligently commingling the blood of the English thoroughbred with that of the American trotter, we shall doubtless be enabled to produce all heavy harness types."

THE SONG OF THE SHOW.

(By James Montague.)

With starting and bloodshot eyes,
With falterong breath and slow,
A town horse savagely champed his bit
As he neighed the lay of the show.

"Prance, prance, prance,
While the maddening band plays on;
Prance, prance, prance,
Till the murmuring crowd is gone;
It is, oh! to pull a dray
And slide on the avenue,
If this is the task our masters ask
A well-bred horse to do.

"Check and bridle and cinch,
Cinch and bridle and check,
My head will not move through a half an inch,
And a cramp grips my tortured neck;
And what are the wages? A ribbon of blue,
And my number where all may see—
An honour which may look grand to you,
But it doesn't appeal to me.

"Far better an open range,
Where I might run wild and loose,
Than to pull a groom in a crowded room—
A thing of no sense or use.
Oh, men who have loved the horse,
Be ye cowboy or cavalier,
You would smile to see the humility
That I feel as I caper here.

"For what is the use of strength
And spirit, and wind, and speed,
If I must not and circle and prance
For a crowd that gives no heed?
And what is the good of a gait
That's been bred for a hundred years,
When some upstart dub of a mincing scrub
Gets the ignorant onlookers' cheers?"

With starting and bloodshot eyes,
With faltering breath and slow,
The town horse scornfully champed his bit
As he neighed the lay of the show.
While, wearing a full-length tail,
On a sunny, rural mead,
A plough horse cropped the tender grass
And envied the city steed.

THE PROGRAMME OF DAILY SESSIONS.

Following is the programme laid out for the week. It begins on Wednesday afternoon but will be continued each morning of the succeeding days.

THE DAILY PROGRAMME.

The show opens in the mornings at 10.30; in the afternoons at 2.45, and in the evenings at 8.15.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, MAY 11.

2.45 P.M.

15. Judging 14 single horses in harness over 15 hands 3 inches.

3.10 P.M.

44. Judging 28 jumpers over 6 successive jumps at 4 feet 6 inches.

3.50 P.M.

20. Judging 8 pairs of horses, 15.2 and over. Shown to a Victoria.

4.10 P.M.

31. Judging 11 saddle horses (heavy weight).

4.40 P.M.

27. Judging 6 combination saddle and harness horses, 15.2 and over.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, MAY 11.

8.15 P.M.

61. Judging 6 officers' mounts.

8.40 P.M.

21. Judging 6 pairs of horses in harness, to be shown before an appropriate trap for gentlemen's use.

9.05 P.M.

45. Judging 15 jumpers over 6 jumps, 2 at 4 feet, 2 at 4 feet 6 inches, and 2 at 5 feet.

9.30 P.M.

50. Judging 10 roadsters in harness, 15.3 and over.

9.50 P.M.

17a. Judging 18 single horses in harness, 15.2 and over.

10.20 P.M.

41. Judging 12 horses owned and ridden by members of the Club de Chasse a Courre Canadien.

THURSDAY MORNING, MAY 12TH.

10.30 a.m.

1. Judging 4 thoroughbred stallions.

10.45 a.m.

4. Judging 3 three-year-olds likely to make saddle horses or hunters.

11.00 a.m.

2. Judging 7 standard-bred roadster stallions.

11.20 a.m.

9. Judging 2 light draught teams.

11.30 a.m.

10. Judging 9 single horses in harness shown to a Scotch cart.

11.50 a.m.

5. Judging 4 three or four-year-olds likely to make a carriage horse.

THURSDEY AFTERNOON, MAY 12th

2.45 p.m.

28. Judging 21 combination saddle and harness horses over 15.2.

3.15 p.m.

26. Judging 5 four-in-hand teams.

3.35 p.m.

59. Judging 6 cabmen's turnouts.

3.55 p.m.

30. Judging 14 saddle horses (middle weight).

4.25 p.m.

13. Judging 10 single horses in harness, over 14.2 and not exceeding 15.1

4.50 p.m.

38. Judging 12 green hunters (middle weight).

THURSDAY EVENING, MAY 12th

8.15 p.m.

12. Judging grocers' deliveries.

8.30 p.m.

18. Judging 7 pairs of horses in harness, 15.2 and under.

8.50 p.m.

42. Judging 19 hunters entered in Corinthian class.

9.20 p.m.

49. Judging 12 roadsters' in harness under 15.3 inches.

9.45 p.m.

22. Judging 22 single high steppers

10.15 p.m.

35. Judging 5 qualified hunters (middle weight).

FRIDAY MORNING, MAY 13TH.

10.30 A.M.

8. Judging 3 Clydesdale or Shire Stallions.

10.40 A.M.

9. Judging 5 Light Draught Horse (single).

10.55 A.M.

58. Judging 6 strings of Three Pole Ponies each.

11.30 A.M.

36. Judging 9 Qualified Hunter (heavy weight).

11.55 A.M.

6. Judging 2 Four-year-olds for Governor-General's Prize and auctioning of winners.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, MAY 13TH.

2.45 P.M.

39. Judging 6 Green Hunters (heavy weight).

3.10 P.M.

16. Judging 5 Single Horses in Harness, 15.3 and under. (Ladies to drive).

3.30 P.M.

57. Juding 11 Polo Ponies (light weight).

3.55 P.M.

32. Judging 8 Ladies' Saddle Horses (Ladies to ride).

4.25 P.M.

24. Judging 11 Harness Tandems.

4.50 P.M.

60. Judging 8 Professional Coachmen driving through obstacles.

FRIDAY EVENING, MAY 13TH.

8.15 P.M.

11. Judging 12 General Deliveries.

8.35 P.M.

37. Judging 10 Green Hunters (light weight).

BASEBALL

Another Hard Luck Story.

Jack Toft stood in Toronto town
And proudly tossed his head.
He wore a suit of navy blue,
And looked slick and well fed.

"I will not go to Montreal,"
He said, "It is my right,
To stay here and refuse to help
The Royals in their plight.

"They may lose more, I do not care,
I'll bide a day or so,
Mount Royal is too high for me,
Its average is too low.

"The Fiddler who controls this club
Can play himself to death,
If I can't catch another thing,
I still can catch my breath.

"Because my bally back is sore,
Is that a good excuse,
To send me to a blooming club
That can't do aught but lose?

"Five hundred plunks they'll pay for me,
For me, old, stiff Jack Toft.
They hope with my good work, to fly
The pennant yet aloft.

"But they may pray, and beg, and shout,
May offer what they like,
Jack Toft won't go to Montreal,
Jack Toft is out on strike."

Oh, manly Toft, heroic Toft,
Stick to your noble plan,
Decline to budge, let Royals fight
Misfortune like a man.

Don't burden the unfortunates
Who've played in such hard luck.
Your heart is in the proper place,
And you have lots of pluck.

But backstops from Toronto's Club,
Let go by them are not
The thing the Royals want,
To help them make their frozen season hot.

They want some men to watch the field,
Some men to wield the bat,
Some men who know the game,
And have the baseball business pat.

You're right, oh Toft; stick to your guns,
Refuse at any price,
To join the Royals, who will bless
You for your sacrifice.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Jersey City, N. J., May 7.—If good field work could have won, then Montreal would have scored against Jersey City in the game played yesterday at Westside Park, for the team worked together like a charm and everyone tried their best to score, but fate was against them, and the "skeeters" shut them out. The score was three to nothing, but better luck is looked for today, and then Capt. Atherton and his men hope to send news home which will encourage Montreal.

McCarthy was in the box for Montreal, and Doran guarded the home plate. "The Kid," as Mac is affectionately dubbed by his fellow players, pitched great ball, his drop curves particularly being good. Doran split his hand in the fourth inning, while stopping a hot drive, when Kiester, of the Jersey's slid for home, but continued the game. Jersey's battery was Barnet and Dillon. Cassidy, the Jersey's big first baseman, lined it over the fence in the 8th inning, but while he received the applause it deserved, still it didn't matter much, as the goose eggs credited to Montreal had settled the question long before. Centre fielder Walters, of Montreal, made a good running catch on a hot drive from Woods, and Cosgrove did some good work at second, although his batting was not up to his standard. Captain Atherton lined a good one for the place, but it dropped foul, in the fourth inning, and in his next he went down and out, Clements getting the ball in left. The team was materially strengthened by the reporting for duty of Clancy, the big first baseman over whom there was considerable trouble early in the season. The national commission finally awarded Clancy to the Oakland Club of the California League. He has just been purchased by Montreal from Oakland for $1,000, and Hartman at third has just been released to the Canucks from the Buffalos. The team plays to-day at Westside Park. Sunday at Eastern League Park, at Bayonne, and again at Westside Park on Monday and Tuesday.

The Jersey City Club has made an offer to Manager Irwin for Catcher Toft.

Hans Wagner is leading the National League, with a batting average of .450, but, at the same time, his team, Pittsburg, is making a desperate fight to keep out of last place.

Another baseball team, to be known as the Cuban Giants, has just been organized in Brockville.

Jack Beckley, of St. Louis, was suspended for three days for discussing baseball law with Umpire O'Day on Tuesday.

McGee, the Buffalo wonder (?) was an easy mark for Jersey City on Wednesday. He is in the Hooker-Amole class.

What a cinch that Columbus team, of the American Association must be! Buffalo actually beat them three games in the spring.

Hooker, the curveless star, was batted for five runs by Rochester in the ninth innings on Wednesday, and the Greys were bored out by one run.

SWIMMING

Montreal Swimming Club.

The twenty-seventh annual meeting of the Montreal Swimming Club for the election of officers and reception of reports will be held in the M. A. A. A. rooms, 149 Mansfield street, Monday night, at 8 o'clock. Members are invited to attend.

LACROSSE

Some New Lacrosse Professionals.

There was a meeting of the Board of Governors of the Canadian Amateur Athletic Union last night and those present were: Mr. George Ayling, president; Mr. P. Gorman, first vice-president, representing the C. A. B. A.; Mr. H. J. Trihey, representing the C. A. H. L.; Fred. J. Tees, representing McGill U. A. A. A.; W. J. McGee, representing the S. A. A. A.; Lieut. J. S. Trempe, representing the C. P. A. A. A., and Mr. E. Herbert Brown, secretary of the union.

The first business taken up was the case of the Toronto Lacrosse Club players, charged with having received money for their services as players, and secretary of the High School board, and more regently clerk of the division, was found dead in a chair on his verandah this morning. He had been out in his garden early and returned to his accustomed seat, where he was found with his head resting on his hand. He was in his 70th year.

MONTREAL'S NEW BASEBALL PETS.

GEORGE ALLEN.

(From a photograph taken specially for the Montreal Star at Richmond Va.) George Allen, at second, was the best known in Richmond of all men with the Montreal team, as he played there once upon a time. Last season he was with Joppa, Mo., in the Missouri Valley League. He batted .209 and fielded .907. He is a peppery player, infuses lots of life and action into the game, and may make good at second.

BILLIARDS

The Big M.A.A.A. Tourney.

The final games in the second draw of the straight rail tournament in both groups were played off last night. The scores were as follows:

Group 1.

Allan Cameron, jr. (165), scored 165, defeating C. A. L. Fisher (52), who scored 34.

Group 2.

C. P. Lyman (105), scored 105, defeating G. de L. Selby (52), who scored 50.

BRITS HAVE STUCK TO THEIR GUNS AND WILL PLAY AGAIN.

The Brits stuck to their guns and are alive yet.

Forty members decided so last night.

A telegram from Mr. R. D. McGibbon, K. C., who was the organizer of the club, from Hot Springs, helped them to reach the decision of remaining in the field. There were a number of old timers present, and all having promised their support, the election of officers was proceeded with, resulting as follows.

Honorary president — Mr. R. M. Liddell.

Honorary vice-president—Mr. George Blaiklock.

Honorary second vice-president—Mr. R. D. McGibbon.

President—J. H. S. McClure.

Vice-president—James Strachan.

Second vice-president—D. Rayside.

Secretary—J. P. Harrison.

Treasurer—C. Severs.

Committee—F. McKenna, L. McAllen, D. A. McGregor, Alex. Christmas, C. Anderson, W. F. Vittle, Geo. Meldrum.

MORE BROKERS MAY BE EXPELLED.

Investigation Going on by the Officers of the Consolidated Exchange in New York.

New York, May 7.—Other expulsions from the Consolidated Stock Exchange may follow shortly, as President Randolph and the board of governors are still investigating and are collecting evidence against certain individuals and firms now under suspicion. President Randolph said to-day: "I regret very much the unenviable publicity that has come to the Exchange in connection with the Woodend failure and almost coincident expulsion of five members of the Exchange. I wish to say as emphatically as possible that the Woodend disclosures had no connection with the expulsions of yesterday and to-day. An investigation has been on foot in some cases where action has been taken for months. This is no fresh access of zeal on the part of the governors and officers of the Exchange.

"We have discovered a sort of round-robin agreement or system of inter-trades that, while I would not like to call it criminal, was at least highly irregular and afford opportunities to others for illicit trading and practices. Three of the expelled men were engaged in this practice, and there may be others whose names we do not know yet. The investigation has not ended. The officers of the Exchange will not allow any shady practices, and as soon as a man is discovered he will lose his seat."

Died by Carbolic Acid Poison.

Springhill Mines, N. S., May 7.—Chas. Willet, a photographer, was found dead in his studio yesterday. A post mortem examination, held by Coroner Murray, pointed to the probability that death was caused by carbolic acid poisoning. He leaves a widow and four children.

Sudden Death at Iroquois.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Iroquois, Ont., May 7.—John N. Tuttle, J. P., for many years reeve of Iroquois late Senator Reid, in the Upper House, and secretary of the High School board, and more regently clerk of the division, was found dead in a chair on his verandah this morning. He had been out in his garden early and returned to his accustomed seat, where he was found with his head resting on his hand. He was in his 70th year.

MISSIONARIES WILL PROCEED TO HONAN.

The foreign mission committee of the Presbyterian Church has appointed Rev. A. W. Loughead and Rev. J. A. Mowat, graduates of Montreal College, as missionaries to Honan, China. The expenses of Mr. Mowat are to be borne by Erskine Church, Montreal, while Mr. Loughead is to be supported by a gentleman whose name is withheld. Rev. Murdoch Mackenzie, who has been detained in Canada on account of the illness of his children, is expected to go to Honan shortly, thus increasing the number of missionaries for this province to four. Rev. J. A. Mackay, of Manitoba College, Winnipeg, was appointed to work in Central India, and $800 has been contributed by St. Stephen's Church, Winnipeg, towards his support in this work.

The Western Senate Vacancy.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 7. — Great interest is manifested by the British Columbia contingent as to the successor of the There are some island aspirants for the position, but in view of the fact that Senator Macdonald and Senator Templeman are both island men, it is felt that the Senatorship will go to a mainlander. In this connection the name of Mr. Hewitt Bostock, ex-M.P., is mentioned, although Dr. Sinclair, of Rossland, is in Ottawa strongly pressing his claims. Dr. Sinclair is a Glengarry man by birth.

Case Has Been Withdrawn.

The charge against Mr. B. R. Magnan, insurance agent, has been withdrawn, having been made in error. The explanations of Mr. Magnan were satisfactory to the prosecutrix, who acquits him of blame.

The See of Ontario.

To the Editor of The Montreal Star:

Sir,—In support of the Rev. H. C. Stuart in your issue of 16th April, on the subject of Ecclesiastical titles, and against the pretensions of G. H. W. in his letter in The Star of 23rd April, I would quote from the Sessional Papers of the British House of Commons, and Alpheus Todd, C.M.G., the known authority on such matters; which clearly prove that neither the Bishop of Ontario nor any other Colonial Bishop can, but by courtesy alone, be styled "My Lord;" nor can the initials with the name of the Diocese attached be taken as such Bishop's signature, as is often done. Perhaps such signature may be accepted in matters purely clerical, but for business affairs the christian and surname must be signed like any other citizen:

"Consequent upon a judgment of the Privy Council in 1865 in the case of Bishop Colenso of Natal:—That while the Sovereign had undoubted right, by virtue of Her prerogative, to give, style, title, dignity, and precedence in all parts of Her dominions, she had no power to issue letters patent professing to create episcopal Sees, etc., in Colonies possessing representative institutions—the Home Government resolved to refrain henceforth, from issuing letters patent to Bishops in such Colonies." (Todd's Parliamentary Government Vol. I. pp. 310 to 321 note J. p. 318).

"This destroyed the last vestige of state superiority in Anglican Bishops in the Colonies, over Bishops of other communions. It has since been determined that 'no Colonial Bishop is entitled to any territorial designation, nor to be addressed as 'Lord Bishop,' and that Bishops of different denominations should rank inter se according to the date of consecration." (Lord Kimberley's despatch of 30 September, 1881. Sessional papers of the Imperial House of Commons, 1882, Vol. 46 p. 631).

Todd page 328—"During the administration of William Pitt, and soon after the first appointment of Colonial Bishops in the West Indies, it was agreed to allow these dignitaries to be styled 'my lord.' Afterwards the practice became general; although, in various letters patent issued to Bishops in North America and in Australia, up to the year 1866 (when the issue of Episcopal letters patent in the Colonies was abandoned), no uniform practice was observed: at one time, and in one instrument, the title of 'lord' would be appended to that of Bishop, on another occasion it would be omitted; and that indifferently, and upon no definite principle." (Sessional papers of the Imperial House of Commons 1867, Vol. 48, pp. 885-914, particularly page 908).

"Since then Bishops are not entitled to be officially addressed by Government otherwise than as 'Right Reverend.'"

F. C. W.

Brandon, Man., May 7.—The Electric Light Company's dam is a complete wreck, though much of the timber used in its construction will be saved. The loss will be fully $25,000. The company will rebuild at once and hope to use the water power again before two months elapse.

WHAT ATHERTON DID SAY WHEN INTERVIEWED TO-DAY.

It is not the fault of the men, for you saw how we worked yesterday, but just a continuation of the hard luck we have been up against since we left home, and if it continues I can't blame the folks in Canada for being discouraged. Everyone does his part, but still we haven't won. Still, I don't see any reason for being discouraged. The season is young yet and we will open up when the boys get into batting form. By this I mean the rounding out of safe hits. It is discouraging, I must admit, to have three men left on bases, as has occurred, but then such is the fortune of a game of ball. The team has been strengthened by Hartman and Clancy, whose work yesterday was all right, and other changes to come, will, I am sure, change our streak of hard luck. We have released Connors and Edmonson, and Tracy goes to-night. They will be succeeded by Sanders, an old Montreal man, and Doyle, of the California League. Sanders is now on his way here from Kansas City. May pitch on Sunday, when we play in Bayonne. All the boys are in fine fettle and before we leave Jersey City hope to score.

(From an interview with the special correspondent of the Montreal Star at Jersey City.)

Ontario Lacrosse Club, 1871, and the City Championship Medal. — Top row—W. Pearson, Jas. Carruthers, Thos. Brown, J. Sullivan, A. Patterson. Centre row—Chas. H. Varcoe, W. K. McNaught, Col. Arthurs (Q.O.R., Vice-President) James Michie (President), Chas. Pearson, John Innes. Bottom row—Col. Bruce, Fred. Walker, White Miller, John F. Scholes, W. Whiteman.

For many years the team of the Ontario Lacrosse Club keenly contested supremacy with the Torontos, the premier lacrosse club of Ontario. Victory usually went to the Torontos, but in 1871 the Ontarios won the city championship, the members of the team being those whose portraits accompany this article. The late James Michie was president of the club and Col. Arthurs, of the Q. O. R., was president. The medal in the centre of this group was emblematic of the city championship, and was presented by the four city members of Parliament for competition between the two clubs. When the Ontarios won the emblem it was handed over to W. K. McNaught, and afterwards given by him as a prize for long distance throwing, being won by a Cornwall man. It has since been lost sight of.

As none of the following had furnished affidavits in defence of the charge they were placed on the professional list: Anson, Farley, W. J. Hanley, F. McBride, Allan, C. Iler, Charles Querrie, F. McLaren, H. Adamson, Hugh Lambe, H. Kirkwood, E. McLean, W. F. Selby, G. Henderson, C. H. Pringle and Walter Jeffreys.

The cases of E. J. Brown, James Murray, W. Parkes, G. Jackman and Robert Gray are still pending, the letters which were sent to them having been returned to Mr. Brown by the postal authorities.

Wilfrid Stollery and Wilfrid McLean were granted amateur standing, they having furnished affidavits to the effect that they had never received a cent for their services as players, and had no knowledge of the fact that the other members of the team were being paid.

The notices of motion by Mr. P. Gorman were taken up and adopted. The effect of the most important is that once a man knowingly becomes a professional he can never be reinstated to amateur standing. The other is that applications for reinstatement to amateur standing will only be considered at the annual meeting of the union.

Two applications from Fred. W. Young and E. McGee, two Toronto men, were acted upon, and the committees appointed to deal with their cases having reported favourably, they were readmitted to the amateur ranks.

Articles of alliance with the Athletic League of the Y. M. C. A. of Canada, on the same lines as those between the C. A. A. U. and the A. A. U. of the United States were signed, and the meeting adjourned.

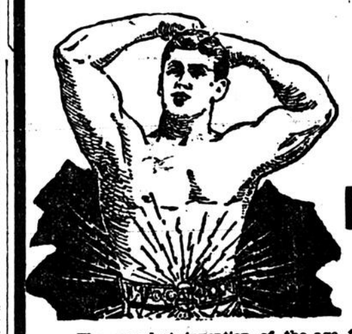
A Weak Person



Who wears a Dr. McLaughlin Electric Belt for a few days begins to feel the joys of youthful fire and courage in the veins, the strength which was lost in earlier days comes back, and those "come-and-go" pains in the back are driven out forever. Where it is used there are vigour, youthful ambitions, a light heart and freedom from worry and care. If you have lost your vitality, no matter how, get it back; feel young, look young, act young. Life is beautiful when you have health. Come to me, for I can give you back your strength.

Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt

The grandest invention of the age for weak men; the surest and easiest cure for all nervous and chronic diseases. Its wonderful power is directed to the seat of the nervous system, through which its vitalizing strength penetrates into all parts of the body, carrying new life to every function which has been weakened by excesses or dissipation, restoring energy to the brain and power to the vital organs. No weak man, no sickly or delicate woman will ever regret a fair trial of the Dr. McLaughlin Electric Belt, which is nature's restorer of vitality. It will cure every case of Rheumatism, Nervous Debility, Weak Stomach, Kidney and Liver Troubles, Lame Back, Sciatica, Varicocele, Loss of Vitality, and all Weaknesses in Men and Women.

YOUNG MEN men young in years, but aged in experience, aged in vitality, wan-featured, dull-eyed, slow-minded young men, young men who have in a few short years thrown away the precious vigour of youth, young men who have scarcely stepped upon the pinnacle of manhood and find that they have lost their right to stand upon it, young men who look back a few years and see themselves as they were, blooming into manhood, and now, as they are, at the age when manhood should be complete, the heart strong, the eye bright, they find the force of manhood gone; middle-aged men and old men, who realize that they have not the force of vitality that should be theirs—men of any age who are lacking in animal vitality—can be made new by Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt. It will not fail. It cannot fail, as it infuses into the weakened parts the force of life and strength—the force which is the origin of all vital power—Electricity. OLD MEN

OTHER SHIPS.

14. Korietz (gunboat).—Sunk by the Russians at Chemulpho to avoid capture, April 13.
15. Yenisei (mine transport).—Sunk by Russian mine at Dalny, February 11.

All the above are lost or useless, except the Poltava, Pobieda, and the Diana. Russia's lost or useless ships represent about £6,000,000.

The following table shows the relative naval strength of the Anglo-Japanese alliance and the Franco-Russian alliance before the war, and also after allowing for the Russian vessels totally disabled by the Japanese fleet:

GREAT BRITAIN AND JAPAN.

Battleships, 1st, 2nd and 3rd class, and coast defence ships	72
Armoured cruisers	47
Cruisers	143
Torpedo gunboats, destroyers and torpedo boats	256
Submarines	19

FRANCE AND RUSSIA.

Battleships, 1st, 2nd and 3rd class, and coast defence ships, 76 before the war; with war losses	72
Armoured cruisers	34
Cruisers, 60 before the war; with war losses	57
Torpedo gunboats, destroyers and torpedo boats, 414 before the war; with war losses	408
Submarines	70

Every success scored by the Japanese against the Russians means a corresponding decrease in the naval expenditure of Great Britain—until such time as Russia starts to build new ships.

HOUSING OF VISITORS AT THE ST. LOUIS FAIR.

Two years ago the estimate of the hotel accommodations in the city disquieted the responsible men of St. Louis, Foreign capital seemed reluctant to enter the hotel field. The Business Men's League opened a local subscription for a new hotel, and a million dollars was got and spent in building the Jefferson. That evidence of confidence in the situation was all that was needed. Hotels, permanent and temporary, sprung up as sweet peas in summer do.

The Business Men's League got signed statements as to rates from the principal hotels, and printed a reassuring comparison with the hotel rates of other cities, and the Fair built an enormous hotel on the grounds—the Inside Inn—whose rate of $2 a day, European plan, including admission to the grounds, regulates the prices at other hotels. Then, to secure a public proclamation of the ability of St. Louis to properly house the people, the Business Men's League went to Washington, and, presenting facts and figures to the Democratic National Committee, induced that body to send the national convention to St. Louis, with its 50,000 attendants. I have before me now a list of 130 hotels, eighty of them so good that I would send my best friend to any one of them if my other best friends had filled my own house.

These hotels, excluding ten which are fashionable and expensive, will charge no more than the Inside Inn, some of them not so much. On this same list, whose accuracy is guaranteed by the World's Fair Company, are many apartment houses and boarding houses, with excellent service, the rates of many of them as low as seventy-five cents a day. In fact, the capacity of the St. Louis hotels alone will not be taxed during the Exposition. Counting the temporary ones they have now an unfilled capacity of more than 100,000 people. There will be many people who will come to St. Louis having made no arrangements, many arriving at night, and they will go at once to some of the noted hotels of which they have heard.

Of course, they will find these hotels full, and they will not get themselves unpacked in a pleasant room without spending that night and a part of the next day uncomfortably. Effort is being made to save even the careless people from discomfort. The Business Men's League and the World's Fair have official and free bureaus of information which secure accommodations for enquirers and protect them from imposition. So has the Interstate Merchants' Association and the Credit Men's Association, the Young Men's Christian Association, and the King's Daughters, the Knights of Columbus, and the National Educational Association.

The leading business men, at much individual expense, are conducting similar bureaus. The Princeton alumni have leased a large, well fitted, many-roomed mansion, where they will provide for Princeton men, and indeed any university man, by a plan which will secure economy and good service. Letters addressed even vaguely to any of these organizations will be put into the right hands by the post office authorities.—From "The Art Exhibition at St. Louis," by Halsey C. Ives, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for May.

At the outbreak of the war the medical department at St. Petersburg should have had in store about $15,000 worth of lint. There was none. The official explanation is that the lint was "eaten by rats."

MASON AND RISCH

ONE of our oldest employees says he remembers when we had to make a round of the lumber yards in search of the wood we wanted and he finds we are just as great cranks about it now when we have a million feet of it in our own yards. Yes, we are cranks, if that means asking and persistently insisting on getting the very best.

We know how much the tone quality and the life of a piano depends on the wood in it. So we won't let any but the best lumber into our yards and we keep it there on probation about five years. If in that time it seasons right and we are satisfied with it we put it in our drying kilns where we keep it an average of twenty-four days according to its kind and its needs.

Then the wood comes up for its final inspection and even what we discard is good wood. We learnt the importance of the best materials long ago and it pays us to discard much that might be good, so we know every bit we use must be good.

We don't want to make all the pianos in the world, but we do want to make the best and some of the world's greatest musicians agree with us that we have found it.

You can buy a Mason and Risch Piano on the easy-payment plan, if you wish, and we allow a liberal price for old instruments. Write for our catalogues and full particulars.

HOW I GREW TALL

A Startling Story Which Will Interest All Who Are Short.

The Height of Either Sex Can Quickly be Increased from Two to Five Inches. These Marvelous Results Can be Accomplished at Home Without the Knowledge of Your Most Intimate Friends.

The Free Book Tells You All About It.

MR. K. LEO MINGES.

Inventors, scientists and physicians have for years been trying to find some method whereby the height of an individual could be increased, and up to the last few years have met with failure. It remained for a comparatively young man, Mr. K. Leo Minges by name, to discover what so many others had failed to do.

Mr. Minges resides in Rochester, N.Y., and has devoted the best part of his life in studying and experimenting on the Cartilage, and his great efforts have at last been crowned with success. A large company, composed of Rochester's leading citizens, has been formed for the purpose of placing Mr. Minges' discovery and inventions before the public, so that now is it possible for any lady or gentleman who is short to increase her or his height from two to five inches. These results are absolutely guaranteed.

Mr. Minges has successfully used his method on himself, and has grown from a short stunted boy to a handsome robust man of six feet one inch in height. Thousands of people living in all parts of the world are using his method with equally startling results. Let us send you the absolute proof of the above statements. We have just issued a beautifully illustrated book, entitled "The Secrets of How to Grow Tall," which contains information that will surprise you. Ten thousand of these remarkable books will be given away absolutely free of charge in order to introduce them. If you fail to receive a copy, you will always regret it. This great book tells how Mr. Minges made his wonderful discovery. It tells you how you can increase your height and build up the entire system. It contains the pictures and statements of many who have used this method. After you receive the book you will thank us the longest day you live for having placed within your reach this great opportunity.

Remember, a postal card will bring it to your very door, all charges prepaid. All correspondence strictly confidential and sent in plain envelopes. If you wish a free copy of this book and the proof of our claims, write to-day. Address The Cartilage Co., Dept. 1227-J., Rochester, N.Y.

Montreal Musicians Defend Church Programmes.

Montreal organists and choirmasters in the Roman Catholic churches are naturally much interested in the subject of the Pope's ideas on musical reform. It is stated that M. Bordes, president of the Schola Cantorum of Paris, had an audience with the Pope when His Holiness said that operatic music should be confined to the theatres and not brought into religious services. Special mention was made of the programmes of Easter music in Montreal, the Pope asking if such music was played in churches in Paris, and learning that this was the case, said a reform was needed. M. R. Octave Pelletier, organist of St. James Cathedral, was shown this statement, and said that in his opinion there must have been some misunderstanding.

"For instance," he said, "the Pope speaks of Bach in connection with opera, but Bach's work was not operatic. As far as the music in Montreal churches is concerned, I think I can say that secular music is not played here. The music which we use has been composed specially for church services, and is not merely adapted for the purpose. It is impossible to say that no secular music is played, but I am speaking of what comes within my knowledge. It must be remembered that while the music may be written for church, it is not always rendered in the liturgical manner; the words may not be sung in the order in which they should come, and there is much repetiton. There are parts, for instance, of Gounod's "Saint Cecilia," to which this would apply, and there is other similar music, which is arranged for church purposes, but which has not the purity of chanting His Holiness desires to see restored."

To the question whether there would be much difficulty in bringing about the desired reform, M. Pelletier replied that he did not foresee that there would be serious resistance offered, although many people would regret the musical programmes now rendered in the churches. The music which the Pope wished used was the Gregorian chant, and the simple music, sung simply, and in accordance with the manner in which it was originally composed, and as intended to be sung.

THE VOICES OF WOMEN.

"You know," said M. Pelletier, "that there is objection, too, to the voices of women in the liturgical services? You will understand that, strictly speaking, women have no right to take part officially, as one might say, in any part of the church service; thus we could not have women clerks, let us say. Therefore, at Mass or vespers we could not have women sing, but we do at Benediction, which is not a liturgical service. This new rule would not apply to congregational singing."

"I have no hesitation in saying," remarked Professor Fowler, organist and choir director of St. Patrick's Church, "that there must be some exaggeration in the statement made that the Pope had objected to the musical programmes for the Easter services in Montreal. I cannot, for my part, recall that in any of the churches there was music of such a secular tendency that His Holiness could have objected to it. Here in Montreal, which is largely a Roman Catholic city, we are very particular that the music we render is such as has been written specially for church services. It is true that in Italy and France music from operas is played and sung, but you do not hear of that in this province. There they have become extreme in the liberty exercised in the matter of church music. Even in the United States, although it is difficult to adhere to the idea of the Gregorian chant, there is a more religious class of music used than in either of the European countries mentioned.

A UNIFORM RULE.

"However, it is easy to understand that the Pope cannot make a rule for one people and not for another. The same must apply to all Catholic countries. This will put a stop to selections from any opera being used in church services, for it would be impossible to draw a line. The Pilgrims' Chorus, or selections from Parsifal might be suitable, but if they were permitted, the next thing would be selections from some other opera not of a religious nature, being merely introduced in some part of a secular opera.

"This reform cannot be carried out in a day; in fact it is more likely to be a year before we have the proper books, and know just what is to be used. Another thing is that only certain composers will be sanctioned. His Holiness, with the advice of musical authorities, will prepare a list of the composers whose works may be used in church services, and we must confine ourselves strictly to those. Even the hymns, and the music at the offertory must be of a specially religious charcter.

CARRYING ON THE REFORM.

"There will be no difficulty experienced in carrying out his reform. Already we are practising the Gregorian chant, and as soon as the Archbishop issues a proclamation with the list of composers, and tells us exactly what changes are to be made, we will follow the rules laid down for our guidance.

"As far as women singing in Church is concerned, I think we are already doing very much what His Holiness desires. He will make no objection to women singing at non-liturgical services, and for the Month of Mary, the Novenas, and at Benediction.

"One has no difficulty in understanding that when opera and dance music is being played in churches in Europe His Holiness felt that some strong measures were necessary to restore the plain chanting of a high sacred character which he considered the only music suitable for church services. But I am convinced that the Montreal churches do not deserve to be pointed out as having unsuitable music at their Easter services."

A JAPANESE ESTIMATE OF THE CHARACTER OF THE MIKADO.

The following letter is from a native Japanese correspondent of the London Chronicle at Tokio:

The Emperor of Japan is in the height of manhood. His courage has been tested morally and physically in the blasting furnace of revolutions and campaigns extending over forty years. His Majesty is a man of reticent character, but when he strikes his arm is a rod of steel. He has won the admiration and love of all his subjects. With the soldiers and sailors, high and low, he is worshipped even to fanaticism. The last word of every man in the Army and Navy in struggling for his last breath is "Long live the Emperor!"

In history there is no parallel except, perhaps, Napoleon in the earlier days. The soldiers' love is warmly returned by His Majesty. His private apartments are lined with the photographs of those killed in the wars, and nobody laments their deaths so much as the Emperor. At Hiroshima, for instance, His Majesty gave private audiences to common soldiers, made inquiries of their conditions, how they were clothed, how they were fed, and how they felt in battle. The reply in every case was the same—tears. The sympathy felt by His Majesty was so great that he chose to live the life of a common soldier. Food was reduced to absolute plainness. His dress became the uniform day and night. The Empress and her maids of honour remained in Tokio, and turned into nurses of Red Cross Hospital.

The Emperor is an inveterate smoker, but he left off smoking—much to the chagrin of his cigar merchants and some of his chamberlains. That was in the last campaign. He is an epicure; his banquets at Court are famous. But during the war the chef remains idle. Already in the present campaign he has issued orders that he shall have one soup and one entree only, both prepared in Japanese style. That is in the palace.

When he moves to the headquarters, wherever it may be, he will put himself under stricter regimen. The cellars are shut up, and generally the Court feels the vacuum more than His Majesty. All gold is melted, and the Minister of Household has a nickel watch.

THIRTY-FIVE MILES AN HOUR ON A COW CATCHER.

Ernest Lapierre has little sense of humour or he would have appreciated the fun he made for the crowd of men who had nothing to do to-day but add to the confusion of the little court room presided over by Judge Lafontaine.

Lapierre was charged with having stolen a ride on the Canadian Pacific Railway from Farnham to Montreal. He did not try to hide away in a corner so that the conductor could not find him; neither did he ride on buffers of the cars as does the ordinary railway-ride thief.

He came in all the way from Farnham on the cow-catcher of a train travelling at the rate of thirty-five miles an hour. When he reached the city he was promptly arrested, and before Judge Lafontaine to-day he pleaded guilty.

He was asked if he had any explanation to give in view of the fact that in his pockets when arrested, the police found a little over three dollars—enough money with which to pay his fare.

"Yes," he said, "I can explain it. Last summer I shipped hay and grain to Montreal by the Canadian Pacific Railway, and I thought that they owed me a ride, seeing that I gave them my business!"

His honour asked, after the laughter had died out and the court officers had vainly endeavoured to get some kind of order, "But why did you chose the cow-catcher?"

"Well, I got on it just to see how it felt and when the train got going pretty fast I could not get off, so I thought I would stay right on to Montreal."

The Canadian Pacific Railway representatives did not seem inclined to severely punish the man and his Honour thought that he had suffered sufficiently, so he let him go.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR OF THE STAR ON A VARIETY OF TIMELY TOPICS

The Last Chapter of the Famous Pineau Case Which Recalls Some Recent Events in the Political History of Prince Edward Island.

The Case of Mr. Pineau—and Others.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star.

Sir,—The other day there died in this island a man, who, while having acted improperly himself, bore altogether too much of the blame. He died in poverty and disgrace; his wife and children are not adequately provided for, while the politicians who conspired with him, or profited by his action, are being allotted to places of honour in the gift of the state.

Yes; Henry J. Pineau is dead, while his beneficiaries are living in positions of power and emolument.

Let me recall the main features of this most remarkable case. In 1899, a bye-election was called for the First District of Prince. Mr. Pineau was chosen as the Conservative candidate. He was, indeed, the hope of the party at that particular juncture. The Liberal and Conservative delegations in the Legislature were equal in number. As went the First District of Prince, so went the reins of power.

Bitter was the fight at the polls. The Conservatives won; great was their jubilation; Pineau was the man of the hour. The sceptre of power in Prince Edward Island had passed into the hands of the Conservatives. The people had given them a majority.

Then Mr. Pineau took his celebrated trip to Ottawa. Rumours began to be circulated that his support would not go to the Conservatives. That report ultimately proved to be true. It was announced that Mr. Pineau would represent Prince Edward Island at the Paris Exposition as commissioner. By this time the press had become seized of the facts of the case. Such a storm was raised that Sir Louis Davies did not dare to implement his promise of the commissionership to Pineau. Instead the latter was sent out of the country and resided for a time among his compatriots at Lynn, Mass. While there remittances were regularly made to him by the Ottawa authorities. Among Pineau's effects has been found correspondence, addressed to Lynn, requesting that he return to Ottawa any letters which might prove embarrassing in the future.

In the course of time, Pineau returned to Prince Edward Island, discredited, neglected and abandoned by his coadjutors in dishonour. Upon Pineau was cast the chief odium. Through him, to a certain degree, opprobrium was cast upon his fellow Acadians, although no class of people more than they reprobated his action. The action of Pineau was that of an individual. It had no significance in a sectional sense.

His was the actual dishonour as the sole party to an agreement on the one side.

But what of the other side? Who are they who have builded their fortunes on Pineau's act and the resultant circumstances? Had Pineau remained faithful to the majority of his constituents, the Conservative party would be in power in Prince Edward Island to-day, instead of being the victims of unjust deprivation. Hon. Donald Farquharson (now deceased), would never have been elected to Ottawa; nor his successor, McKinnon, for that matter; there would be no premier named Peters; nor a Judge Macdonald; nor a Postmaster Weir at Charlottetown; nor an asylum superintendent named McLaughlin; nor a commissioner of agriculture, named Rogers; nor, yet, a commissioner of public works named Comisky; nor, finally, a collector of customs at Summerside named McLellan.

This is a partial list of one time publicists who have climbed to office, using the ladder which poor Pineau afforded. The instrument has passed away. His declining days were those of poverty and heartbreak. I have yet to learn that any of his beneficiaries came to his assistance at the end, or that the fate of the widow and fatherless is a matter of any great concern to those whom I have partially enumerated.

Yours,
CHARLOTTETOWN.

Believes in Christianity.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star.

Sir,—In connection with Canon Henson's attack on the Bible, a little pamphlet on the Views of Modern Science may prove very interesting. It is really the report of a lecture by Rev. G. T. Manley, M.A., Fellow of Christ' College, Conn., delievered in Simla, and gives the results of the lecturer's enquiry as to the attitude of scientific men towards Christianity. In order to see whether the statement so glibly made that "all men of science are agnostics," were true, Mr. Manley undertook to look into the matter, and wrote to many leaders in the scientific world as to their position. The results of his enquiry are intensely interesting. He mades a list of 12 names which are greatest in various branches of science and of these no less than 11 have shown "their deep belief in Christianity." The twelfth was at least a believer in God, His Word and Words.

Two exceptions that may be made, Herbert Spencer and Huxley, are not, claims Manley, scientific men in the proper sense of the word, Huxley being anything but logical, while of Spencer, a science professor said: "His philosophy is said to be worse than his science; but that is impossible." Prof. McAlister, in replying to Mr. Manley's enquiry, says that disbelief is more prevalent amongst the "camp-followers of science," than amongst real scientific men.

The pamphlet is published by the Church Missionary Society and could probably be obtained through any book store, and is very interesting and instructive.

Yours truly,
BIBLE READER.

St. Lambert.

Privileges of the Diocese of Ontario.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star.

Sir,—I ventured to question the accuracy of two assertions of G.H.W., under the conviction that they were erroneous. The first of these was that "Ontario diocese is the only one in Canada whose first bishop received letters-patent," from the Crown; and, although I mentioned the erection of the Diocese of Montreal as disproving it, G.H.W., in his answer, made no acknowledgment of his error, but passed over it, and quoted from the Ontario patent, some words he evidently considers unansverable in support of his second assertion as to the Bishops of Ontario being spiritual lords, "by Royal Right and not by mere courtesy." Possibly, G.H.W., deems the quotation so extensive that it proves both of his assertions. As a matter of fact, it proves neither one nor the other.

I naturally demurred to his first assertion, because the Canadian Dioceses of Nova Scotia, Quebec, Toronto, Montreal and Huron, were all created prior to that of Ontario, and their first bishops received letters-patent from the Crown. This statement can easily be verified from the diocesan patents which are all accessible.

But, passing over the improbability of the Crown ever being so extremely foolish as to show the astonishing favouritism alleged, I have a further reason for demurring to the assertion of the legal pre-eminence of the Diocese of Ontario; and that is, my firm conviction that the Diocese of Ontario was not created by the Crown, nor was its first bishop appointed by the Crown. Surely, the people of Canada know this perfectly well. What are considered to be the best historical works on the Church in Canada, have long taught us this. For instance, we are accustomed to the statement made by Dr. Mockridge, in his article on the first bishop of Huron, in "The Bishops of the Church of England in Canada and Newfoundland," where he wrote of the condition of the Church in 1857: "A new state of things had set in for the Church of England in Canada. The Crown was to have nothing more to do with matters ecclesiastical. The people must learn to support the clergy, and the clergy must learn to govern the Church as best they might. Bishops were no longer to be government officers. If the clergy and laity wanted bishops, they must devise some plan of procuring them, irrespective of politics or governments. The only plan that could be devised was the primitive one of election. This was settled. The clergy were to meet in London (Ont.), and with their lay representatives from the different parishes, to elect a bishop." (pp. 155, 6.)

"This (the Huron election) was the first instance," wrote Dr. Langtry, "of an untrammelled Episcopal election in any part of the English Church for many generations; and it was the very first election in the Canadian Church." (Eastern Canada and Newfoundland, p. 201).

It was the same thing in Ontario. Dr. Lewis was elected Bishop, September 12, 1861, but "Through delay in issuing the Royal Letters Patent, which were still thought a necessary preliminary," continued Dr. Langtry (p. 219) "his consecration did not take place till the Feast of the Annunciation in the following year, 1862."

What was this new state of things that made Bishops' Patents unnecessary? The late Fennings Taylor thus wrote on this subject: "The year 1850 will be accounted a noteworthy era in the history of the province of Canada; for in that year the Royal Supremacy in matters ecclesiastical was asserted for the last time, when Her Majesty, in the exercise of her prerogative, was pleased to nominate and appoint the Reverend Francis Fulford, D.D., to be the first Bishop of the newly created Diocese of Montreal." This extract is taken from the preface of "The Last Three Bishops appointed by the Crown for the Anglican Church in Canada,"—an important work, consisting of the biographies of Bishops Mountain, Strachan and Fulford, and written in 1869, eight years after the election of Dr. Lewis to Ontario. Dr. Cronyn, Dr. Lewis, and all Colonial Bishops from 1850 to 1866, and downwards, were elected and appointed by the sole authority of the Synods of their diocese—their letters patent merely raifying the appointment, and conferring nothing upon them which the Synod had not already conferred. In 1866 the Government refused to issue any more Episcopal Patents, which had conferred really nothing upon the recipients since 1850.

Upon these grounds I considered assertion incorrect that the Diocese of Ontario was created by the Crown, and the first Bishop appointed by the same authority.

The second assertion of G. H. W. that "the late Archbishop Lewis was a Lord Spiritual by Royal right, and not by Courtesy," is, I think, equally inadmissible. He answers my question by the rejoinder: "It may again be stated that the See of Ontario was created by Royal Letters Patent issued in 1861, and that the Rev. Bishop of Ontario, Rt. Rev. John Travers Lewis, D.D., LL.D., and to his successors for ever, was granted the "name, title and authority of Lord Bishop. The Bishops of the See are, therefore, Lords Spiritual by royal right, and not merely by courtesy."

I had hoped that G. H. W. would afford us some better evidence as to the special honour conferred upon Ontario than a mere re-statement of his former assertion. For it is well known that the late Dr. Fulford was both nominated and appointed first Bishop of Montreal by a Patent dated July 18, 1850, and further than this, that this Patent, (pace G. H. W.) decreed that "the said Bishop of Montreal should be a body corporate....and that he and his successors should for ever thereafter be called and known by the name or title of 'Lord Bishop of Montreal.'" (1st Provincial Synod Report, p. 11.)

I conclude, therefore, that the Diocese of Ontario possesses no exclusive royal favours, and that it was by no means the first Canadian See that received Letters Patent.

There remains to be noticed the assertion about the title "Lord Bishop" having been bestowed "by Royal right" thus creating the Bishops of Ontario Spiritual Lords. In reality this is an old myth, something over a century ago, which appears to have flourished generally in nearly all Colonial Dioceses, but surviving now, it is to be hoped, in the Diocese of Ontario only. Nearly all the Episcopal Patents contained the clause in question, and wherever the Colonial Church was established, there were people who built largely upon the privileges it was supposed to grant. Even the late Canon Hawkins, in his valuable "Annals of the Colonial Church," stated more than half a century ago, "and here, as the question of the proper designation of Colonial Bishops is still sometimes mooted, it may be as well to say, that the title of "Lord Bishop" was formally given to the Bishop of Quebec and his successors, by Letters Patent from the Crown, under the seal of the Province, and bearing date, May 29, 1794. This title had not been borne by the first Bishop of Nova Scotia, nor did he ever assume it." (Diocese of Quebec, p. 20). There being no such Patent, it appears probable, that Canon Hawkins mistook for a special Patent, a Royal Mandamus of the date, and directed to Governor Haldimand for styling Dr. Mountain "Lord Bishop of Upper and Lower Canada." (Canadian Archives, Q. 77—1, p. 5, May 25, 1794.)

However, this question was examined some years ago, and I thought, settled for all time. Dr. Kingsford (History of Canada, vol. vii., pp. 276-7) makes this explicit statement: "There is one point to which I am impelled to allude, feeling that some explanation is necessary, owing to the want of knowledge on the subject, and the consequent misapprehension which has arisen. I allude to the term, 'my Lord,' given to Bishops of the Anglican Church, even when elected by the Synod. I avail myself of the explanation furnished by the late Dr. Alpheus Todd, the former librarian of Parliament, whose contributions to the history of Parliamentary Government have gained for him a permanent place in the literature of the Empire, and whose personal amiability and courtesy still continue as a tradition with the old frequenters of the library. He thus explains the matter in few words: 'It was during the administration of Wm. Pitt, and soon after the first appointment of Colonial Bishops in the West Indies, that it was agreed to allow these dignitaries to be styled my Lord. Since then, the practice has become general; although in the various Letters-Patent issued to Bishops in North America and Australia, up to the year 1866 (when the issue of Episcola Letters-Patent in the Colonies was abandoned), no uniform practice was observed. At one time, and in one instrument, the title of Lord would be appended to that of Bishop, on another occasion it would be omitted; and that indifferently, and upon no definite principle.' Stubbs tells us, however, that the title of Lord does not in England imply a dignity created by the Crown, but is simply a descriptive or honorary appendage to some other dignity.' It 'belongs to all Bishops in all Churches'—nor has it anything to do with a royal prerogative of conferring titles, not being a recognized grade of peerage.'

"If this be correct, and few would be disposed to question the accuracy of so learned and painstaking a writer as Stubbs, it disposes of tihs vexed question in a very satisfactory manner." (Parliamentary Government in the British Colonies, p. 238).

Although I have monoplised too much space already, I feel that I cannot close this paper without expressing an earnest hope that we shall hear no more about special privileges being granted to individual dioceses—which would be unjust and abominable if true, and fraught with increasing dangers if not true. Surely, no diocese in the Church of England in Canada needs any bolstering up by claims to bogus gifts and privileges.

Three Rivers, P. Q.

The May Move or the Montreal Madness.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star.

Sir.—As a newcomer to this city, and one who has sojourned in many cities and climes, may I ask the origin of the annual insanity of Montreal? Is it the effect of the May moon, or, to what old custom, to which of our pioneers are we indebted for the absurd idea that there is only one day in the year when it is possible to change one's residence?

I cannot certainly say that there is no other large city on earth where such a custom prevails, but I should think that such a place would be hard to find. The marvel is that 300,000 people cannot throw off the yoke that has been laid upon them. It has not one good point that I can see—it has many bad ones. It crowds into two short weeks the work that should be distributed over the whole year.

Furniture dealers, all vendors of household requisites, carpenters, plumbers, painters, electric fitters, carpet fitters, auctioneers, carriers, charwomen, handy men, are driven out of their wits with the demand for their services at this period, and those who need most are the greatest sufferers. Charwomen and handy men who can do any odd job who would find almost constant employment in a large city like this in helping people to move house, simply lose the work because the people who could and would employ them have to do the work of getting their houses cleaned and in order themselves, if they are not lucky enough to have secured help weeks or months before. And these are not the only people who are inconvenienced. Insurance agents and companies, city authorities, light, heat, power and telephone companies, grocers, bakers, and milk sellers have to work all hours to cope with the extra work caused by such a universal changing of residences and offices. In any other city, such work goes on all the year round.

The business of furniture moving, as a business, is unknown here, because it would pay no one to go in for the huge pantechnicon moving vans, that one sees in any large city, they would only be required for one brief fortnight in the year.

The curious thing about it all is that everyone agrees that the whole system is mad, but there seems no way to break loose from the trammels of the custom of dating all leases from 1st of May. The landlords are to blame in the first place for this burden upon the people, and the sooner they make a change and fall into line with the rest of the civilized world the better for everybody.

ONE WHO IS NOW SUFFERING.

Improve Park Avenue.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star:

Sir,—Will you kindly give me space in the Star to make a few remarks regarding the wretched state of Park avenue above Pine avenue? Many people have been looking and hoping, for a number of years, that something would be done to make the approaches to our beautiful mountain park something that the worthy citizens of Montreal would not be ashamed of. At the present time no indications of improvement are apparent. Now, I claim that the condition of the road (we cannot call it a street) through Fletcher's field is a disgrace to the city and a reproach to the men who have the administration of civic affairs.

I claim that the avenue through the mountain park should be made one of the most beautiful driveways of the suburbs of Montreal, instead of this we find a miserable, unimproved country road, full of gulleys, covered with loose stones, and dangerous to life and limb. The streets of Westmount, St. Henri and St. Louis are in much better condition than the streets of Montreal, and the taxes in those towns are no greater than in the city. When discussing the annexation scheme, a resident of St. Louis was asked how he knew when he had crossed the boundaries of the municipality. Said the resident of St. Louis: "You just take the St. Lawrence, or the Park avenue line of cars, and keep going till you come to some real nice streets, then you will know you are in the town of St. Louis."

G. P. CLAPP.

Another of the Greeks and Yet Not Another.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star.

Sir,—There are some points in the letter of your correspondent "Crito," that will, I hope, admit of reconsideration on his part. The signature to my letter is evidence that I am too remote from your great city of Montreal to play with any measure of success a Boswell to Professor McNaughton's Johnson or to know whether he was laughing at Mr. Blake or committing a serious breach of good manners by a totally unwarranted introduction of Mr. Blake's name. "Crito" appears to be the alter ego of the Greek Professor, although he plays the part indifferently well, and if the subject under consideration was not so serious, it would be real funny to be told grandiloquently that "it is quite possible Professor McNaughton will take no notice of this communication, as no man is required to hold a discussion in his own name with an anonymous correspondent, and I beg therefore to be allowed to deal with one point in your correspondent's letter." It is barely possible that the ethics of newspaper correspondence may be quite as well known to Western Churchman, as even to so well-informed a writer as "Crito"; but it is a useful canon to invoke as he is apparently covering the Professor's retreat, who, if I am correctly informed, has not a very high opnion of Canadian intelligence even at its best; and hence it would, of course, be infra dig to have him come down from among the Gods and Goddesses of Athens to give such intellectual plebeians information on a topic of so much moment as the "Resurrection of the dead." Your readers are quite capable of drawing their own conclusions. But I think "Crito" ought, in all fairness, to have told us why the Greek Professor with a "Reverend" prefix to his name, volunteered his opinion at all in the matter, or whether that opinion was the result of his Greek studies or of his studies as a "Reverend." So far as I am aware, there was no crowd standing on tip-toe to hear a deliverance from the Professor, but having voluntarily placed himself in the forum, another equally well understood canon is that he is liable to be questioned by anybody in the audience, as to his statements; and the identity of the questioner is not then the point in issue as "Crito" wrongly imagines, but the capacity of the speaker to make good his assertions. This is another canon of newspaper ethics which "Crito" has evidently not come across in his reading.

I am not by any means clear why the Greek Professor burdened himself with a defence of Canon Henson's "learned folly," or in deference to the letter of the Rev. Mr. De Soyres, I select a better mind and call it "Henson's Magazine Christianity."

Now you will permit me to corred "Crito," and I call his very particular attention to the correction, namely this, that I was not then, nor am I now, discussing the "Supernatural," nor the Unitarian view of Christ which is simply the standpoint of Henson and that school, but assuming for argument's sake that the Resurrection of Christ is a historic fact, as clearly sustained by evidence as any fact possibly can be, I was anxious to know how faith in that fact was more reasonable than faith in the story of Jonah, which Mr. Sam. Blake was supposed to have swallowed. The alacrity with which the Greek Professor threw himself into the breach led me to anticipate a satisfactory reply, but as the saying goes, I evidently "went to the goat's house to look for wool." When it becomes a question, as it practically now is, between Christ and the critics, there is little difficulty in deciding with whom the truth is likely to be found. The whole shore of human literature is covered with the wreckage of infidel and philosophic theories from Bolingbrook to Canon Cheyne. The little great men, including in these days, a percentage of college professors, some with and others without a "reverend" prefixed to their names, go about the world firing off their pocket pistols and mistaking the report for the thunders of Jove, and in the words of the Apostle, "Professing themselves to be wise they become fools." It is just as true to-day as it ever was, that the world by its wisdom, knows not God. The dry intellectualism of the schools is as profitless in the domain of Christian faith and experience as a toy boat would be in an Atlantic storm.

If "Crito" is seriously intent upon informing himself on the question of the supernatural, I commend him to the works of the late Bishop Lightfoot, and a prayerful study of the New Testament. To obtrude upon your readers a discussion on the question of the supernatural as a philosophy problem would be profitless in the extreme, and besides a good many college professors do not yet appear to have informed themselves of the fact that Christianity is not a philosophy, but a revelation. In the meantime the higher critics are like infants with rattles, the more noise they make, the better they are pleased with themselves. Quantum est in rebus inane, the questions proposed in my former letter have still possession of the floor.

A WESTERN CHURCHMAN.

The Burial of a Murderer.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star.

Sir:—Will you kindly allow me to ask a question through the columns of your paper? I noticed in the issue of April 28th, in the account of the hanging of Clement Goyette that Mass was held for him from six to seven a.m., by his spiritual adviser, who subsequently accompanied him to the scaffold, praying with him to the end.

"The body," it goes on to say, "after being placed in a coffin, was borne to the grave with no ceremony other than throwing in the earth." Here, it would appear to a casual observer, is a great inconsistency which possibly can be explained; and I shall be greatly obliged to the person who can do so. From the fact that a priest prays with a condemned murderer and holds a mass for him immediately previous to his execution, one naturally infers that a hope is entertained by the Church of his pardon and salvation; while directly the opposite inference is to be drawn from his being denied any sort of Christian burial, which makes the former ceremony seem utterly futile and therefore a mockery of both creature and Creator. Of course, it may be that the law of the land refuses Christian burial to a condemned murderer; if so, or whatever the reason may be, I shall be most grateful to anyone qualified to do so, who will give me the answer to my question, which is—wherefore this obvious inconsistency?

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the space you have so kindly allowed me, I am, truly yours,

Price of Beer Advanced.

Hamilton, May 7.—It is stated that the brewery syndicate will raise the price of beer from $5.50 to $6.50, and of ale from $12 to $15. Up to a few months ago beer was only $4.50. With the two increases the price is still lower than in Toronto, but the hotel men are not pleased, and there is stalk of a co-operative brewery. The advance is to take effect on May 15.

MR. R. L. BORDEN PROPOSES ADDITIONAL SAFEGUARDS TO THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC BILL

The Conservative Leader Will Move An Amendment Further Protecting the Interests of the Canadian People and Providing That Traffic Shall Not Be Diverted to Foreign Railways and Ports.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 7.—Mr. R. L. Borden, leader of the Opposition, in accordance with the agreement made the other evening in the Commons with Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick, has handed the Minister of Justice the following amendments to be made by the members of the Opposition when the debate upon the transcontinental railway bill is resumed in the House on Wednesday. The specially important amendments in these are the first and second, which are new.

The third and fourth are in form similar to those moved last year, the fifth is partially new, being an amplification of last year's amendment, whilst the last is a variation of the amendment moved last year.

TEXT OF AMENDMENTS.

"Section 3 of the bill be amended by adding thereto the following as subclause 2:

"2. Provided always that when and so often as any share of the capital stock of the Pacific Company shall be so given to the Grand Trunk Company, or be allotted or handed over to the Grand Trunk Company under the provisions of section 11 of the act incorporating the Pacific Company, thereupon three of the like shares shall be given, allotted and handed over to the Grand Trunk Company under the provisions of section 11, of the act incorporating the Pacific Company; thereupon three of the like shares shall be given, allotted and handed over to the Dominion of Canada in part consideration for the aid given to the Pacific Company.

"That section 7, of the bill, be amended by adding thereto the following as sub-section (3):

SECURITY FOR GOVERNMENT.

"3.—That all paid up stock of the Pacific Company which shall be acquired and taken by the Grand Trunk Company at any time henceforth until the expiration of the term of the lease mentioned in clause 20 of the said last mentioned agreement, or until payment and discharge of all bonds guaranteed by the Dominion of Canada under the terms of the schedule agreement, shall be pledged and transferred to the Dominion of Canada as security for the due performance and observance by the Pacific Company and by the Grand Trunk Company respectively of all the covenants, undertakings, obligations, conditions and stipulations of the said companies respectively which the Dominion of Canada shall be entitled to have performed and observed under or by virtue of the said scheduled agreements, and the instrument creating such pledge shall contain all such usual provisions as may be necessary to carry into effect the true intent and meaning of the scheduled agreements as modified by the National Transcontinental Railway Act and this Act.

FURTHER SAFEGUARDS.

"That section 7 of the bill be amended by adding thereto the following subsection:

"Notwithstanding anything in this act or in the act hereby amended, or in the scheduled agreements contained, His Majesty the King, acting as aforesaid, shall not be bound or obliged to perform, carry out or fulfil any of the covenants, conditions, or stipulations in the said scheduled agreements contained on behalf of the Dominion of Canada, unless and until the Grand Trunk Company shall have entered into an agreement with His Majesty the King, acting as aforesaid, by which the said Grand Trunk Company shall covenant and agree as follows:

CANADA FOR CANADIANS.

"That neither the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company nor the Grand Trunk Company shall in any manner within its power, directly or indirectly, permit, advise or encourage the transportation of traffic by routes or at rates other than those provided in the said agreement, and that each of the said companies shall in all respects and in good faith use its utmost endeavours to fulfil the conditions upon which public aid is granted and accepted, namely, the development of trade through Canadian channels and to Canadian ocean ports.

A PROPOSED ADDITION.

"That the bill be amended by adding thereto the following section:

"The Government shall have the right to inspect all books or accounts, statements, contracts, correspondence, vouchers, waybills and all other papers and documents of the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada, the inspection of which may be considered necessary for the purpose of investigating or determining any question, matter or thing arising from the said scheduled agreements, or the said lease or of the provisions of this act or of the act hereby amended, or connected with the apportionment of rates and earnings, or with the obligations or undertakings of the G. T. Company or the Pacific Company pursuant to the said agreements or lease or to the National Transcontinental Railway Act, or to this act.

"Notwithstanding anything in this Act or in the Act hereby amended, or scheduled agreements contained, His Majesty, the King, acting as aforesaid, shall not be bound or obliged to perform, carry out or fulfil any of the covenants, conditions, or stipulations in the said schedule agreements contained on behalf of the Dominion of Canada, unless and until the Grand Trunk Company shall have entered into an agreement with His Majesty, the King, acting as aforesaid, by which the said Grand Trunk Company shall covenant and agree as follows:

"That the Pacific Company, so long as the Grand Trunk Company shall control the policy of that company, shall perform, fulfil and carry out according to the true intent and meaning thereof, all the provisions of the National Transcontinental Railway Act and all the covenants, stipulations, and conditions in the scheduled agreements, which according to the terms thereof, ought to be performed, fulfilled or carried out by the said Pacific Company. That the bill be amended by adding thereto the following sections as a sub-section.

ARBITRATION PROPOSAL.

"Should the Government be of the opinion at any time during the continuance of any obligation of the Government in respect of the western division, or during the lease of the eastern division that the earnings upon the traffic interchange between the G.T.P. Ra ilwayCompany system of railways, and the system of railways of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada have not been properly apportioned between the said two companies, the question of such apportionment shall be determined by arbitrators to be appointed by the Government and the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada in a manner provided by paragraph 47, of the agreement, or shall be determined by the Board of Railway Commissioners, as mentioned in section 19, of the said agreement."

STREET GOSSIP AND STOCK EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Star Office, Saturday, May 7.

While the general tone of the stock market has been strong throughout the week, the trading, with the exception of Dominion Iron and Steel shares, has been devoid of special interest. The hardening tendency continues at a satisfactory pace, considering the number of purchases, which have been made. The speculative movement in the Dominion Iron securities has, however, been the main and most interesting feature of the week's operations. The movement of the price of the common stock has been very slow, but the preferred and the bonds have made good advances. The movement has secured some notice on the part of the public, but is still largely professional in character. There is a long road to travel before the prices get back to where they were in 1902, when it is remembered that in the corresponding month two years ago the common sold up to 69, and the preferred to 97. Subsequently the common went to 79 3-8, and the preferred to 103 1-2. In the late trading yesterday, the prices advanced more sharply, common touching 12, the preferred 35 1-2, and the bonds 70.

The general volume of trading was smaller than that of the last week of May, as will be seen by the figures below. Twin City was the most active feature of the traction list, and as a result the price advanced from 92 3-4 to 94 3-8. There has been some talk, originating in New York, of the policy of the directors being in the direction of an advance in the dividend rate to 6 per cent. Richelieu and Ontario continued active, being the leader of the week in point of activity, but the price fluctuations were narrow, the lowest being 86 1-8, and the highest 87 1-2, the best price of the current year. The transactions for two weeks were as follows:—

	Last week.	This week.
Transportation	$6,444	$3,718
Industrials	4,205	2,666
Banks	118	503
Total stocks	$10,767	$6,887
Bonds	$42,000	$143,000
Mining	6,000	2,000

The suspension of members of the Consolidated Stock Exchange, New York, brings to light a new scheme for bucketing orders. The trouble of the two firms, it is stated, is because they were charged with having started a system of interlocking orders. This, it was said, is a new system of "bucketing." Instead of the old system, when either house got an order, instead of paying against it, they would simply trade with the other house; the transaction appearing on the books of the other house as if actually an execution. The books, however, it is said, were in this case, erroneous, there being no actual execution of the order. Systematic fleecing of customers seems to be a fine art in some stock circles.

The Erie Railway has applied to the New York Stock Exchange to list $7,892,400 first preferred stock, $16,000,000 second preferred stock, $16,000,000 second preferred, and $112,378,900 common stock as a result of the termination of the voting trust. The first and second preferred shares are both 4 per cent. non-cumulative shares. In 1903, 3 1-2 per cent. was paid on the first preferred. The last two semi-annual dividends have been 2 per cent. each. No dividends are paid upon either the second or the common stock.

Joseph Wharton, president of the American Iron & Steel Association, says: "The panicky conditions which pervaded the iron and steel trade last November and December have disappeared entirly and the improvement in demand increase in consumption thus far this year have been wonderful. However, I do not look for higher prices this year than are now ruling, for the reason that much buying is curtailed on the eve of the Presidential election. In addition, cost of production has been reduced by lower coke, cheaper ores and a lower labour cost, so that the cost of manufacturing iron and steel products is not nearly as great as at this time last year. Consumption of iron and steel is tremendous at present and while I do not anticipate that production this year will be as great as last year's, I do not look for a very great falling off. The country generally is in very strong condition financially. There is plenty of money, the West and South being in better condition than ever before. There is no sound reason for the feeling of pessimism shown in some parts of the country to-day."

April bank clearings totals in the United States point to the gradual quieting down of general business in various lines and different sections of the country, due to weather conditions or other causes. The shrinkage in clearings is not so manifest as in the past in the leading financial centres, but seems to be shared in by other sections, such as the West and far West, which have hitherto shown increases over a year ago. Following will be found the aggregates of clearings in the past four months for a period of years:

(Six figures omitted.)

January	$9,364	$11,032	$10,576	$10,679
Feb.	7,654	8,420	8,328	8,323
March	8,235	9,533	8,884	9,960
April	8,260	9,530	10,881	11,969

The total clearings at ninety-two cities for the month aggregate $8,260,619,178, a decrease of about 1 per cent. from the March total, of 13.3 per cent. from April, 1903, of 24 per cent. from April, 1902, and of 30 per cent. from April, 1901, but a gain of 11 per cent. over April, 1900. The clearings at New York City compare as follows:

(Six figures omitted.)

Jan.	$5,691	$7,186	$6,929	$7,401
Feb.	4,429	5,241	5,348	5,623
March	4,864	6,004	5,506	6,886
April	4,790	5,944	7,352	8,535

The Bank of England reported this week a decrease for the week in gold coin and bullion holdings of £663,535. Proportion of reserve to liabilities is now 47.68 per cent., against 49.60 last week, 46.70 April 21, and 46.78 April 14. The highest percentage thus far in 1904 was 50.55 in the week ending March 17; the lowest 37.50, on January 7.

The detailed statement compares as follows for the same week one and two years ago:

Bullion—	£33,821,920	£35,358,162	£35,768,390
Reserve—	23,673,000	24,468,492	23,957,145
Notes reserved—	21,631,000	22,311,295	21,488,400
Prop. reserve to liabilities—	47⅝ p.c.	52⅛ p.c.	48⅝ p.c.
Circulation—	29,599,000	29,064,670	29,568,245
Public dep.—	7,544,000	7,689,310	7,965,418
Other dep.—	41,993,000	39,075,980	41,081,113
Gov. secur.—	17,279,000	14,524,291	14,824,003
Other secur.—	26,421,000	25,609,615	28,231,702

	Bullion.	Reserve.	Other securities.
1901	£35,439,819	£23,468,159	£30,769,179
1900	32,366,512	19,960,082	33,259,666
1899	38⅝	1894	63⅜
1898	33,712,717	22,719,737	32,768,582

	Per cent.		Per cent.
1901	46⅝	1896	59
1900	40	1895	65¼
1899	38⅜	1894	63⅜
1898	44⅝	1893	41¾
1897	51⅝	1892	41⅝

All the retiring officers of the United States Steel Corporation were re-elected at the regular monthly meeting yesterday. In the finance committee, Henry Phipps succeeds Charles M. Schwab. Francis H. Peabody resigned as a director, and Robert Winsor, of Kidder Peabody & Co., of Boston, was elected his successor. Mr. Peabody, who is of the firm of Kidder, Peabody & Co., of Boston, retired because of ill health. No reason was given for the retirement of Mr. Schwab from the finance committee.

President E. H. Harriman, of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific roads, who has just returned from a tour of inspection of the properties, gave an informal interview, dealing with some observations made by him during his trip. The conditions of crops in the west and southwest, according to Mr. Harriman, were much better than the Government indicated. He believes the country is in good shape to look after its own financial requirements.

Why Not Invest?

In what is probably the most rapidly growing city on the continent to-day, destined to be the GREAT COMMERCIAL METROPOLIS OF THE CANADIAN NORTH-WEST?

Edmonton, Alberta.

With phenomenal rapidity Edmonton has, WITHIN THE PAST FEW YEARS, grown from comparatively a small town to a hustling and bustling city, with a continually augmenting population. Its superb natural advantages and the possibilities of its surroundings have attracted capitalists, merchants, trades-people, etc., from all parts of the globe, and with a constant influx of settlers, the future of EDMONTON is abundantly assured.

BUILDING OPERATIONS.

Last year 560 new buildings were erected to accommodate residential and commercial requirements, and permits have already been issued for over $1,000,000 worth of buildings to be constructed this year.

A GREAT RAILROAD CENTRE

EDMONTON will shortly be the converging point for at least THREE GREAT RAILWAYS. The C.P.R. at present runs into the city; the Canadian Northern is extending its line from Winnipeg to Edmonton, and the Grand Trunk Pacific has made EDMONTON its western basis of operation. With these THREE GREAT ROADS passing through the richest agricultural and mineral districts in the world, it is reasonable to say that this will bring thousands of dollars of trade to EDMONTON, and create a BIG DEMAND FOR BUILDING ACCOMMODATION.

A STREET RAILWAY SYSTEM

Work has practically begun on the construction of a city and suburban road, and the contractors for the construction of same expect to have AT LEAST TEN MILES IN OPERATION THIS FALL, which will pass through our property. THIS is a significant reason why investors desiring big and quick returns SHOULD INVEST NOW, as it is positively certain that the lots we are now offering for sale will, WITHIN A VERY SHORT TIME, greatly increase in value.

OUR PROPOSITION

London Wool Auction Sales.

London, May 7.—The offerings at the wool auction sales yesterday numbered 13,625 bales. There was a large attendance. Bidding was animated throughout the sale. Victoria greasy combings were in strong demand, and several lots were taken by Americans, who also purchased some greasy halfbreds at full rates. Queensland greasy was very strong, and combings were in exceptionally keen demand. Fine greasy Cape of Good Hope sold well, and low grades were occasionally withdrawn, bids being ½d below holders' limits. Scoureds were firm and unchanged. Following are the sales in detail:

New South Wales—600 bales; scoured, 9s to 1s 10½d; greasy, 7d to 11½d.

Queensland—1,000 bales; scoured, 1s ½d to 1s 8½d; greasy, 9d to 11d.

Victoria—1,700 bales; scoured, 11d to 1s 7½d; greasy, 6¾ to 1s 2½d.

South Australia—500 bales; scoured, 1s 2d to 1s 5½d; greasy, 6¾d to 11d.

Tasmania—200 bales; greasy, 7½d to 1s 11½d.

STOCK MARKET STRONG AT OPENING.

The tone of the stock market was quite firm at the opening, with Dominion Iron forming a conspicuous feature of the trading in line with yesterday's splurge in these issues. Twin City also was a prominent feature of strength. Prices rose small fractions above yesterday's final prices.

Dominion Iron—125 at 12⅜, 25 at 12⅛, 50 at 12, 75 at 12⅛.

Dominion Iron Bonds—$1,000 at 70, $6,000 at 70¼.

Dominion Coal pfd.—25 at 110.

Molsons Bank—1 at 200¼.

Canadian Pacific—2 at 118.

Nova Scotia Steel—50 at 76½, 25 at 76¾.

Bell Telephone—25 at 145⅝.

New York, May 7.—Wall Street.—Ten of the twelve stocks dealt in in the first five minutes of trading to-day were quoted at unchanged prices from last night. The market was stagnant.

WE OFFER $400,000.00 FIRST MORTGAGE Gold Coupon Bonds of the PRINCESS ESTATES COMPANY, (Ltd.)

Realizing the vast and immediate opportunities offered at Niagara Falls, Ontario, in the development of its natural power, PRINCESS ESTATES COMPANY, LTD., has acquired control of 2,500 acres of perfectly level and available land immediately surrounding three great power plants now under construction at Victoria Park, thus placing them in possession of a Factory Real Estate Situation with great money-making possibilities.

There is now being delivered to consumers, 75,000 electrical horse power at Niagara Falls, New York.

At the birth of this enterprise the population of Niagara Falls, New York, was 3,500 and had 17 manufactories; today it has 30,000 population and 357 manufactories.

When the first power plant was started, land at Niagara Falls, New York, was selling at $200.00 per acre, now it is selling at from $10,000.00 to $20,000.00 an acre. Greater results are now assured on the Canadian side where are now being developed the following

THREE MONSTER POWER PLANTS:

The Canadian Niagara Falls Power Company, 150,000 horse power.

The Toronto and Niagara Falls Electrical Development Co., 150,000 horse power.

The Ontario Power Company, 150,000 horse power.

These three companies developing 450,000 horse power, are expending $40,000,000.00 in cash in Victoria Park at the very verge of the Falls.

A SAFE INVESTMENT.

We offer $400,000.00 first mortgage, six per cent., ten-year gold coupon land bonds carrying 200 per cent. bonus in stock. These bonds are as solid a security as the land can make them, holding absolute title to the property, and as the land goes up in price its increased value will be represented by the stock of the company.

HOME PROTECTION FOR HOME INDUSTRIES.

The New English Tariff Policy, proposed by the Hon. Jos. Chamberlain, means a protective tariff against the world by Great Britain and her Colonies, compelling the American manufacturer to manufacture his goods on Canadian soil in order to save the duties. For further protection and to prevent the exporting of this power to the United States, it is proposed to place an export duty on all power produced at Niagara Falls, Ontario. This makes PRINCESS ESTATES COMPANY, LTD., proposition the "Strongest" extant for the Development and Progress of the Dominion of Canada."

DENOMINATION OF BONDS.

The bonds are issued in denominations of $20.00, $100.00 and $500.00, bringing them within the reach of all classes of investors.

Intending subscribers will be furnished all information they desire by writing directly to the undersigned, who will promptly forward prospectus and maps.

CLAIM THAT GASPE CAN SUPPLY LOWER PRICED FRESH FISH.

Quebec, May 7.—Mr. Kennedy, M.L.A. for Gaspe, has furnished the Star correspondent with some very interesting information concerning the Canadian fresh fish trade and the possibility of supplying Montreal and Toronto with cheaper and better fish from the Gaspe coast than is now procured from Portland and other American points. At present the Gaspe fishermen receive only $1.80 or $1.90 per draft of 230 pounds of green or fresh codfish, split, cleaned and minus the heads, which requires about 300 lbs. of freshly caught fish. Now, at the usual prices paid in Montreal for Portland fish, the amount realized for the quantity now selling at $1.80 to $1.90 would be $20. Lobsters, which sell on the Gaspe coast for $1.70 to $2 per 100 lbs., sell in Montreal and Toronto for from $8 to $10.

Mr. Kennedy also points out that the Gaspe fishermen would be only too glad to obtain half the price of 7 to 8 cents per pound paid in Quebec and Montreal for haddock. It is hoped that all this will be changed when the short line of railway is built through the interior of the Gaspe peninsula. In the meantime he suggests that Quebec, Montreal and Toronto could even now obtain large quantities of cheaper, better and fresher fish from the Baie des Chaleurs and the Gaspe coast, if the subsidized steamer on the Baie des Chaleurs route should run only between Gaspe and the present terminus of the Baie des Chaleurs Railway at New Carlisle instead of to Dalhousie. This would enable it to make three trips to Gaspe a week instead of two, and to place fresh fish from Gaspe almost as quickly, and much more cheaply, in Quebec and Montreal than the fish now brought from Portland, while a great boon would also be conferred upon the fishermen of the Gaspe coast.

PORT ARTHUR ISOLATED; ADMIRAL SKRYDLOFF CANNOT REACH THE RUSSIAN FLEET

The Czar's Soldiers Accept the Matter Philosophically and Declare That the Developments Will Clarify the Situation—Japanese Forces Now Extend Across the Peninsula—The Yalu Army is Advancing and Another Battle is Imminent.

St. Petersbug, May 7.—A despatch received last night says that Port Arthur is cut off from all communication by land, the Japanese having disembarked in its rear, occupying the railroad and cut the telegraph.

Vice-Admiral Skrydloff, who is en route to Port Arthur to take command of the naval forces in the Far East, will be unable to reach his destination.

PFLUG HEARD FROM.

The Ministry of War has received the following telegram from Major-General Pflug, chief of the military staff: "According to the information I have received, seven of the enemy's transports, and afterwards about forty, appeared opposite Pitsewo, on the evening of May 4.

"On the morning of May 5 the Japanese began to land at Pitsewo, and on the coast near Cape Terminal (about fifteen miles south-west of Pitsewo, under cover of an artillery fire.

"At this moment about sixty transports were observed bearing down upon the whole front and our posts retired from the shore.

"All papers in the post office at Pitsewo were removed and the Russian inhabitants abandoned the town.

"According to Chinese reports, by the evening of May 5, about 10,000 of the enemy's troops had landed, and taken up quarters in the Chinese villages near the points of debarkation.

"The enemy sent two columns of about one regiment each, on in a westerly direction, and the other to the southward.

"On May 6 a passenger train from Port Arthur was fired upon a mile and a quarter outside Polandien (about 40 miles north of Port Arthur), by a hundred Japanese infantrymen occupying the heights east of the railroad. The train carried many passengers, 200 sick occupying an ambulance carriage, flying the red cross flag. Two of the sick were wounded. The train succeeded in reaching Polandien.

"Tranquility prevails in the Maritime province, and in Yin-Kow."

HOW RUSSIANS VIEW SITUATION.

St. Petersburg, May 7.—2.28 a.m.—Japanese troops swarming across the narrow neck of the Liao Tung peninsula, the railway and telegraph communications cut and the Russian Gibraltar isolated and left to its own resources—all this the Russians seem to accept with great stoicism.

These events have been anticipated since the outbreak of the war, and the authorities in a sense, appear to be relieved now that the blow has fallen. They assert that the fortress is impregnable and amply provisioned to stand a siege for a year, and that it can hold out until the time comes to relieve it.

According to official information the landing of troops from sixty transports began simultaneously at Pitsewo and Cape Terminal on the morning of May 5. It is also reported that troops are being landed at Kinchow, but this is not credited, as the Russians are known to have fortifications there, and it is not believed that the Japanese had the darling to land immediately under an entrenched position, from which the Russians could inflict severe injury on them.

Complete details of the landing are lacking owing to the interruption of communications.

No resistance was made, the few Cossacks observing the movement retiring when the warships shelled the shore preparatory to disembarkation. Ten thousand men were put ashore Thursday and the disembarkation was proceeding yesterday at the time that communication ceased. It is believed that there are over 20,000 now on land preparing for a forward movement. Two Japanese regiments were hurried westward yesterday morning to cut the railroad and telegraph communications. One of these fired on a train conveying the wounded from Port Arthur.

While landing was proceeding on Thursday, the enemy's ships, consisting of the battleships Mikasa, Hatsuse, Shikishima, Yashima and Fuji, and the cruisers Iwate, Idsumo, Adsuma and Asama made a demonstration off Port Arthur to prevent the possible egress of Russian torpedo boats. A number of Japanese torpedo boats were also observed off Miado Island, in Pigeon Bay.

ALEXIEFF GOT OUT.

It was because he was convinced that Port Arthur was about to be cut off that Viceroy Alexieff, accompanied by his staff, and Grand Duke Boris, left hastily. On Thursday several train loads of sick and wounded and other ineffectives were despatched northward.

It is reported here that the Japanese ships bombarded Port Arthur early on the morning of May 6 and succeeded at last in closing the entrance, but no official confirmation of the latter statement can be obtained.

The exact hour at which communication with the Russian stronghold ceased has not been established.

The strength of the garrison at Port Arthur is not revealed by the authorities, who will only say that it is adequate for defensive purposes.

It is not believed that the force there exceeds 10,000 soldiers. A large force is not considered necessary, as was shown from the recent withdrawal of some of the troops, who were simply a drain on the resources of the garrison.

The fleet must now take a secondary position, and the sailors will be used to man the shore guns, if necessary.

Admiral Bezobrazoff cannot now reach Port Arthur, and will probably go to Vladivostok to join the cruiser squadron there. Rear-Admiral Wittzoeft, who was left in charge of the fleet by Viceroy Alexieff, will direct operations at Port Arthur. Wittzoeft is a good officer, and it is believed he will render excellent service.

PLAN OF DEFENCE.

Despite the greater number of Japanese, the general staff believes their formidable fortifications still leave the defensive superiority with the Russians, whose staying qualities, it is confident, will ensure their holding out as long as necessary. While the outer line of fortifications extends to Kinchow, unquestionably no determined effort will be made to hold them, nor is it expected that a desperate attempt to retain Dalny will be made. The main defence will be of Port Arthur, where, since the harbour has been occupied by the Russians, steady work has progressed to complete the system of defence which is just as effective on the land as on the sea side.

Lieutenant - General Stoessel will have supreme command at Port Arthur. He is described as a high-class commander. His recent proclamations show that he is imbued with a determination to hold Port Arthur until the last man is killed.

Officers of the general staff say that the landing of the Japanese army on the peninsula and the investment of Port Arthur clarify the military situation, and the problem General Kuropatkin must solve. Had Kuropatkin had his way before the war, it is said, he would have abandoned Port Arthur, withdrawn further to the north and waited until his army had become overwhelming in its strength, when he would have moved forward; but this was made impossible in consequence of the injuries sustained by the Port Arthur fleet and the impossibility of the departure of the fleet from Vladivostok with a superior force outside that port. Therefore, the commander-in-chief is waiting at Liao-Yang until the enemy's plans shall have developed sufficiently to show just what line it is proposed to pursue.

Caution forbade an attempt in force to prevent General Kuroki's passage of the Yalu, as the troops landed at Pitsewo might have been diverted to take the Russians on the flank or in the rear.

UNCERTAINTY DISPELLED.

Now that the uncertainty is partially dispelled, Kuropatkin, from the interior lines, is free to act. That he proposes to move energetically is shown by the fact that he has sent reinforcements to Feng-Wang-Cheng.

The indications are that he intends immediately to assume the aggressive, and to strike General Kuroki's army before the latter can be reinforced through Corea. Should the Japanese landed at Pitsewo begin a northward movement enough Russian troops are stated to be in the vicinity of New Chwang to hold the Japanese in check until conclusions have been tried with Kuroki. It is not anticipated, however, that the Japanese will march northward, but they will, it is believed, devote their energies to effect the fall of Port Arthur.

FORTY THOUSAND JAPS HAVE LANDED.

Paris, May 7—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Echo de Paris sends the following under date of May 6:—

"The general staff believes that the Japanese landed at Pitsewo number not less than 40,000 and says that the bulk of General Kuroki's army was this morning about nine and a half miles from Feng-Wang-Cheng. The army was advancing in three columns, the third column following the coast, probably in order to communicate with the troops landed at Pitsewo. All the reserves, provisions and ammunition were landed on the Elliot Islands.

"A staff officer said that Lieut.-General Zassulitch will be kept in the background during the remainder of the war, and it is believed that General Kuropatkin will personally direct the operations.

"I am able positively to deny the statement that Port Arthur is bottled up. The passage is still free.

"The telegraph office has received instructions not to accept messages for Port Arthur.

"Vice-Admiral Skrydloff and Vice-Admiral Bezobrazoff have been ordered to proceed to Mukden, from where they will probably go to Vladivostock."

The correspondent repeats the report that the Japanese have occupied Port Adams, and says that they are advancing on Port Arthur, the garrison of which is expected to make a sortie.

Unconfirmed Rumours.

St. Petersburg, May 7—The receipt of news at any time of a decisive battle near Feng-Wang-Cheng will not cause surprise here, and already rumours are circulated in the city, which, however, lack confirmation, and are believed to be untrue, that a battle has been fought, that the Japanese have been defeated with heavy losses, and that General Kuropatkin was wounded. Another rumour is in circulation that Port Arthur has been captured, but this is also scouted in responsible quarters.

BRITISH PRAISE FOR JAPANESE STRATEGY.

London May 7.—The British press is loud in its expressions of admiration for the brilliant Japanese strategy in dealing in rapid succession three great blows—the battle of the Yalu, the sealing of Port Arthur, and the landing at Pitsewo, and the development of these opening moves is awaited with the greatest interest. It is considered to be not unlikely that the primary object will be an assault on Port Arthur, and an endeavour to capture the Russian fleet there. This idea is favoured by Henry Spenser Wilkinson, in the Morning Post, a journal generally well posted on Japanese affairs.

Other journals consider that the Japanese will be contented to place a small force as a mask at Port Arthur and will send their main forces from Pitsewo to co-operate with General Kuroki's army, in which case if the Russian assertion that large reinforcements have been sent to Feng-Wing-Cheng, is true, a great battle is imminent there or at Liao-Yang. It is believed that it is Japan's second army that landed at Pitsewo and that the destination of the third army corps is still to be revealed.

Practically no further news of any kind has reached London, beyond belated despatches from correspondents with the Japanese army on the Yalu, detailing events preceding the recent battle.

The Daily Chronicle's Tokio correspondent asserts that simultaneously with the attack on Port Arthur the Japanese laid cables between one of the islands and the mainland, as a protection to their landing place.

The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Tokio says the nine sunken fireships at Port Arthur were laden with a mass of stone and cement.

The correspondent of the Standard at Tien Tsin cables that Viceroy Alexieff has called upon the Tartar general and all the officials at Feng-Tien to quiet that place immediately.

Anxiety at New Chwang.

London, May 7—A telegram from New Chwang states that grave uneasiness prevails in the British community there. British property valued at $2,500,000 is unprotected, and 6,000 robbers are in the neighborhood. The Government is much blamed for the withdrawal of the British cruiser Espiegle from the port.

Alexieff at Mukden.

Mukden, May 7.—Viceroy Alexieff has arrived here.

FREIGHT RATES IN ONTARIO.

Mr. Hays Explains Increases to the Railway Commission.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 7. — Mr. Charles M. Hays, second vice-president and general manager of the Grand Trunk Railway, has written a letter to justify the increase of rates in Ontario by the Grand Trunk. He states that the company cannot have their expenses and taxes materially increased and also increase their capacity at great cost without adding to their income by raising the rates to a reasonable extent. The increase applies to all the lines north and west of Toronto. This interesting communication was made public by Mr. J. W. Loud, freight traffic manager, before the Railway Commission last evening, and was drawn out by the complaint of the United Factories of Newmarket against raising the rate on logs from Penetanguishene to Newmarket to 4 cents per hundred pounds. The Hays letter is in part as follows:

"I have had an expense statement analyzed, with the following results, the figures applying especially to our northern division in which division Penetanguishene and Newmarket stations are included, the increases being proportionately the same on our lines in other parts of Ontario and Canada generally:

"For the month of January, 1904, as compared with January, 1900, the average cost of maintenance of way (road and bridges and buildings) and conducting transportation increased 23.54 per cent. These items of expense will show relatively the same per cent. of increase for the first three months of 1904 as compared with 1900. The expense of maintenance of equipment for the first three emonths of 1904, as compared with the year 1900, shows an average increase of 28.9 per cent., while for the year 1903, as compared with 1900 exceed 62 per cent., while for the past three months of 1904, as compared with 1900, the increase is 18.8 per cent. We cannot look for any material decrease in this expense in the future."

Apples Arrived in Bad Shape.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 7.—Mr. John Brown, inspector of the Department of Agriculture at Glasgow reports to the fruit division Ottawa, that shipment of over 12,000 boxes of Canadian Baldwins and Greenings recently landed in that city with a large number of the boxes broken. This condition of affairs seemed to be due to the fact that the boxes were made with only a straight dovetail, simply matched, as it were. The advisability of having the boxes made with the regular fan shaped dove tail or else strongly railed is, therefore, apparent.

PRESENT CONDITION OF CITY STRIKES.

Work on a number of buildings was stopped yesterday, including the Bank of Montreal, because of the labour troubles. More work will be stopped to-day, and, according to Mr. J. N. Chabot, of the firm of Wighton, Morrison & Co., masonry contractors, a large number of workmen will be idle unless a settlement is soon reached.

The strike of the Journeymen Stonecutters continues, but it is thought that the difficulty may be bridged over at the mass meeting, which is to be held to-morrow afternoon, at the corner of Duluth avenue and St. Hubert streets.

Mr. Joseph Gervais, business agent of the union, states that there are now less than 100 of their members out. He believes they will all be at work in a few days.

The marble workers are standing firm. They believe that their employers will soon see the justice of their demands.

Strike leaders told a Star reporter to-day that the unions were bound to win eventually.

"We tried conciliation and arbitration, but it was useless," said one of the strike officials, "we have plenty of funds to stick it out, and the men are more confident to-day than any day since the tie-up began."

Equal confidence is expressed by the employers. They say they are going to insist on the "open-door" system.

The strike at the plant of the Consumers' Cordage Company, on St. Patrick street, Point St. Charles, is still in operation. The management of the company are of the opinion that the trouble will end in a day or two.

It was reported at the headquarters of the striking plumbers and steamfitters that two masters had signed the revised scale of wages yesterday. There is, however, not much change in the situation.

Mr. James Ballantyne, of the Master Plumbers' Association, says there will be no settlement with the union. "Cost what it will we intend to maintain our position," said the speaker.

The strike among the Jewish bakers is assuming serious proportions. The leaders say that unless the deadlock between the strikers and the bakers ends abruptly there will, in all probability, be a bread famine in the Jewish community. It appears that most of the people have been baking their own bread since the beginning of the trouble, but those who have moved have been unable to get their stoves connected, as a result of the plumbers and steamfitters' strike. The difficulty is now in a complicated condition.

IN AND AROUND THE CITY.

LUTHERAN CHURCH.—On Sunday, at 7 p.m., divine service, in English, with the Holy Communion, will be held in Stanley Hall, corner St. Catherine and Stanley streets, by Rev. J. C. F. Rupp.

A PILGRIMAGE.—A pilgrimage to the shrine of Notre Dame de Lourdes at Rigaud will take place Pentecost, Sunday, May 22nd, under the auspices of the Holy Name Society of St. Patrick's parish.

MONTREAL TENT, K.O.T.M. — The tenth anniversary of Montreal Tent, No. 2, Knights of the Maccabees, was celebrated in the hall at 280 Richmond street, by a progressive euchre and dance. Some two hundred ladies and gentlemen were present. The euchre prizes were won as follows: Ladies, 1st, Miss Gegnon; 2nd, Lady McAleer, Mount Royal Hive; 3rd, Lady Ulley, Royal Hive. Gentlemen, 1st, Sir Knight Caron; 2nd, Sir Knight Nadeau; 3rd, Sir Knight Seymour. After the presentation of the prizes, which were donated by Sir Knights Sherman, Elcome and H. Hale, refreshments were served, and the remainder of the evening devoted to dancing.

Caught By the Ice.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Halifax, N.S., May 7.—The Allan line steamer Hibernian, which left London on April 16th for Montreal, put in here yesterday afternoon, unable to go up the St. Lawrence on account of ice. The Hibernian was held in the embrace of the ice for a week, getting clear of it on Tuesday last, when she turned her bow for Halifax.

NINE COTTAGES WERE BURNED.

Watertown, N. Y., May 7.—A special to the Standard from Thousand Island Park, St. Lawrence River, says:

A large fire at the point yesterday resulted in the destruction of nine cottages and threatened large hotel properties located here. The loss is estimated at $30,000, which is partly covered by insurance.

The fire caught in a cottage owned by O. T. Green, of Thousand Island Park, where some rubbish was being burned. Mr. Green's cottage, with eight others, was completely destroyed. In addition to these six other cottages are partially destroyed.

The Clayton fire department was summoned and the fire steamer Lafrance in charge of 100 men of the Clayton fire department responded. The Alexandria Bay fire department also came to aid in extinguishing the flames.

The fire was brought under control shortly after three o'clock, with a loss of about $30,000, and insurance of about one-third of that amount.

CANADA WOOLEN MILLS.

Creditors Seek to Have the Mills Shut Down.

Toronto, Ont., May 7.—Creditors of the Canada Woollen Mills Company, representing $410,000 of the $428,000 of claims against the Company, were present at the meeting here yesterday. The shareholders of the Company are desirous of continuing operations in order that the mills may be sold as running concerns. The creditors, on the other hand, claim that as the business is being conducted at a loss, the plants should be tied up immediately. Mr. Creerar, of Hamilton, representing Long & Bisbie, of Hamilton, said that the loss was $300 a week. Long & Bisbie are creditors for $80,000. The other principal creditors represented were the E. T. Carter Estate, with a claim of $31,000, and the Dominion Bank, which is a large shareholder, but which has a claim of $240,000. After considerable discussion the meeting finally decided upon the following board of inspectors: Messrs. W. D. Matthews, George T. Benson, William D. Long, Reuben Millichamp, and N. Carter. Another meeting will be held on Thursday next, when the matter as to the immediate sale of the properties will be decided on.

Fire in Baptist College.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Woodstock, Ont., May 7.—Fire broke out at 3 o'clock this morning at the Woodstock Baptist College, and before extinguished caused about $800 damage. When discovered the entire building was filled with smoke and the blaze had reached the dormitories. The one hundred sleeping students were hastily aroused, and all escaped in safety with their personal property. The origin of the fire is a mystery. It started in a store room in the basement.

PROMINENT CANADIANS WHO HAVE PASSED AWAY.

The death was mentioned in the Star of May 7th, 1849, of Major A. B. Rogers, known as the discoverer of the Kicking Horse Pass. The deceased supervised the line of the C.P.R. west of Manitoba.

Alderman Welter Restored to Health by Warner's Safe Cure.

"Kidney and Liver Trouble Made Life a Burden," Says the Alderman, "but Four Bottles of Your Grand Medicine Cured Me."

"When health is gone, money, honour and politics alike become uninteresting and the one desire of your heart is to get well and let everything else go. Such were my feelings a year ago, when kidney and liver trouble made life a burden to me.

MR. M. J WELTER.

"Through the kindly advice of a physician and friend I was induced to try Warner's Safe Cure. Four bottles made a new and well man of me, and it was worth more to me than a seat in Congress. I feel so extremely gratified with the results and so thankful for my restoration to health and strength that I gladly endorse your medicine and urge every one who even suspects the slightest trace of kidney trouble to take it at once. It is worth its weight in gold." — M. J. Welter, Alderman Twenty fourth Ward, 1332 Otto St., Chicago, Ill.

This testimony of his wonderful cure from Alderman Welter adds but one more to the many hundreds of letters received daily from grateful men and women everywhere who have been saved from lives of misery and suffering and from death itself, by Warner's Safe Cure, the world's greatest cure for all diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood.

Warner's Safe Cure has been used and prescribed by doctors and in hospitals for over 30 years as the one remedy that cures and leaves no bad after effects.

HAVE YOU THESE CERTAIN SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE?

Pains in back and head, swellings, frequent desire to urinate, painful passing of water rheumatism, fulness under eyes, constipation, bad digestion, drowsy feeling, lack of ambition and interest. They are all sure indications that your kidneys have been diseased for months.

Test Your Urine. If you have any doubt let a little morning urine stand 24 hours. If a sediment forms or particles float about in it or it becomes cloudy your kidneys are seriously affected.

You have no time to lose if you have any of these symptoms, or if any member of your family in this or past generations has had kidney trouble; it's hereditary. It's dangerous to neglect the kidneys for even one day. Get a bottle of Warner's Safe Cure at the nearest drug store. It has cured thousands of cases after every other medicine failed, and will surely cure you. It removes the inflammation and replaces the wasted, diseased tissues, and enables the organs to do their work properly and fully. All drug stores, or direct, $1 a bottle.

Warner's Safe Cure is guaranteed absolutely pure and free from dangerous drugs found in many "so-called" kidney cures. Beware of substitutes and imitations.

"SAFE" PILLS move the bowels gently and aid a speedy cure.

TRIAL BOTTLE FREE.

To convince every sufferer from diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood, that Warner's Safe Cure will cure them, a trial bottle will be sent absolutely free, post-paid. Also free doctor's advice, and a medical booklet which tells all about these diseases, with a prescription for each, and contains many of the thousands of testimonials received daily from grateful patients who have been cured by Safe Cure. All you have to do is write Warner's Safe Cure Co., 44 Lombard St., Toronto, Ont., and mention name of this paper. The genuineness of this offer is guaranteed by the publisher. 109 1

A POSSIBLE WAR IN SOUTH AMERICA.

Washington, D. C., May 7.—The Acre dispute, supposed to have been adjusted, has broken out again, and a crisis is threatened. Originally a controversy between three nations, Brazil, Peru and Bolivia, for the ownership of a large triangular tract of rubber lands, situated where the three countries adjoin Bolivia, was eliminated by an agreement satisfactory to her, and it was supposed that Peru's claim also had been met. It appears, however, that Peruvian troops remain in the territory claimed by Brazil, and yesterday United States Minister Thompson cabled the American State Department from Rio as follows:

"If Peru refuses to withdraw troops from the disputed territory inhabited by Brazilians, pending negotiations which are to be followed if necessary by arbitration, Brazil will immediately resort to force to expel the Peruvians and will proceed to reprisals."

Canada's Revenue and Expenditure.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 7.—From present indications the surplus of ordinary revenue over ordinary expenditure at the end of the fiscal year will amount to $16,000,000 or more, and there will be a reduction in the national debt of some $7,000,000. The official statement of receipts and expenditures for the ten months ending April 30th issued shows that the revenue on consolidated account for that period amounts to $56,728,716, which is $4,366,875 more than for the same period of last year and exceeds the expenditure on the consolidated account by $16,815,903 over all expenditures combined. This is a surplus of $13,401,281.

Blinded by an Explosion.

Ogdensburg, N.Y., May 7.—In preparing to fish by exploding unslaked lime in a glass bottle in the St. Lawrence River, H. A. Wilson, of Brookville, Ont., yesterday lost the sight of both eyes. After putting water in the bottle he placed the lime in it, and while he was fitting the cork it exploded in his hands.

CHARGED WITH TRYING TO POISON FAMILY.

Halifax, N. S. May 7.—James Rouse, aged 17, an English immigrant boy, who arrived here four months ago, was arrested on a serious charge last night. Rouse was employed at the residence of C. H. Cahan, barrister, and it is alleged he attempted to poison the family with the intent to rob. Mrs. Cahan and her daughter were taken violently ill Thursday night after being served with tea by the boy, but they are now out of danger. Yesterday morning $125 in cash was missing from Mrs. Cahan's room and the boy could not be found. The police were notified, and Detective Power, of Halifax, captured Rouse at Truro, sixty miles from the city. When searched $65 of the money was found on him. He had purchased a ticket for Winnipeg, which he bought yesterday.

The Canada Eastern Deal.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Toronto, May 7.—A Globe's Ottawa special says: "The Canada Eastern Railway has not been purchased by the Government. Negotiations for the purchase of the line, however, which have been on foot for years past, have been revived lately, and if certain conditions are carried out, Hon. H. R. Emmerson will be prepared to recommend to his colleagues the purchase of the line. At present there is no recommendation before the Council, and Mr. Emmerson states that no purchase price has been fixed. Acquisition, in the opinion of the Minister of Railways, would render the Canada Eastern an important feeder to the Intercolonial."

A New Railway Project.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 7.—The Kingston and Dominion Central Railway is the name of a company that seek a charter from Parliament to build a line from Kingston to a point between Parry Sound and Midland. The right to amalgamate is sought.

Liquozone acts like oxygen—acts as a tonic with which nothing else known can compare. Let us buy you a bottle to try.

We have purchased more than a million 50c bottles of Liquozone and given them free to the sick. During the past four months we have spent over $500,000 to announce and fulfill this offer. We have done this to convince the sick that Liquozone does what medicine cannot do, and we are willing to do the same with you, if you need it.

What Liquozone Is.

Liquozone is the result of a process which, for more than 20 years, has been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. Each cubic inch of Liquozone represents the virtues of 1,250 cubic inches of the gas.

The result is a product which does what oxygen does. Oxygen is the nerve food, the blood food, the scavenger of the blood. It is the very source of vitality, the most essential element of life. But oxygen is a gas and unstable; while Liquozone is fixed and concentrated. It gets an excess of oxygen virtues into the blood, to go wherever the blood goes. The result is a vitalizing tonic with which no other known product can compare.

Kills Inside Germs.

But the great value of Liquozone lies in the fact that it kills germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. There is nothing else known which will do that. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. For that reason, medicine is practically helpless in any germ disease.

Liquozone is so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and an excess of oxygen—the very life of an animal—is deadly to vegetal matter. Liquozone is certain destruction to the cause of a germ trouble, yet to the human body it is the most helpful thing in the world.

We paid $100,000 for the American rights to Liquozone, because this product alone can end a germ disease.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone kills the germs, wherever they are, and the results are inevitable. By destroying the cause of the trouble, it invariably ends the disease, and for ever.

MONTREAL CASES IN SUPREME COURT

Argument In Lapointe Versus the Montreal Police Society.

JUDGMENT WAS RESERVED

A Motion to Quash Made in Dufresne Versus Lee—No Judgment Given.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 7. — In the Supreme Court yesterday the arguments were concluded in the case of Desaulniers vs. Payette, and judgment reserved.

In Connolly vs. Armstrong, a motion to quash inscribed on the notice paper was struck out, as no person appeared for the parties.

In Lapointe vs. the Montreal Police Society, Belcourt, K.C., moved to quash the appeal on the ground that the pecuniary demand was merely for $62.50, pension for one month, and consequently below the amount necessary to give the court jurisdiction. Beaudin, K.C., opposed the motion, claiming that the plaintiff's demand by the action was not only for the first month's pension, but for a declaration that he was entitled to have his name entered on the pension roll, for a mandamus to compel the directors of the society to place his name on the roll, and also to pay him $62.50 per month as long as he lived. In order to estimate the pecuniary controversy, affidavits were put on record showing that—according to the insurance actuary's table—Lapointe's expectation of life averaged seventeen years and four months, and, on the other hand, that over $7,000 would be required to purchase an annuity for even $600 per year, at the rate of $50 per month, that had been allowed him by the Superior Court judgment. Judgment was reserved.

DUFRESNE VERSUS FEE.

In Dufresne vs. Fee, another motion to quash the appeal was made by Buchan, K.C., under the following circumstances: Fee, the plaintiff, sued for about $2,500 for lumber forwarded to the defendant and in barges at the St. Gabriel docks in Montreal, but which defendant had refused to receive under his contract, as he denied having sent an order for it. Pending litigation a consent was filed by the parties without prejudice to rights of either party that the plaintiff might sell the lumber to save demurrage and storage. He sold it for some $150,000, which he kept, declaring that the money had been received by him. The trial court decided in favour aof the defendant, but on appeal the Court of King's Bench reversed this decision and gave the plaintiff a judgment for the balance of his claim, less the sum received on the sale of the lumber. It was contended that by the acknowledgment of the money made on the sale of lumber, the pecuniary demand was reduced below the sum necessary to give the Supreme Court jurisdiction to hear the appeal and many cases were cited to show that the established jurisprudence of the Supreme Court was to this effect. Bisaillon, K.C., contested the motion and insisted that the cases relied upon could be all distinguished, that after the taking of conservatory measures without prejudice to right of parties no amendment of the claim had been made by the plaintiff, no retraxit filed, and that in fact there is no difference between the amount originally demanded by action and the amount finally awarded by the judgment appealed from, because the plaintiff, by that judgment, recovered what he received from the conservatory sale of the lumber as well as his judgment for the amount of the balance claimed by the writ. The principal decisions relied upon by the appellant were in the cases of the Citizens Light and Power Co. vs. the town of St. Louis, and Coghlin vs. La Fonderie de Joliette, both decided during the last sessions of the court. Judgment was reserved.

The appeal in the case of the Montreal Park and Island Railway Co. vs. the Chateauguay Railway Co. will be the first taken up next Monday. The court will not sit next Thursday, it being Ascension Day.

Seeding in the West.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Winnipeg, May 7.—"There is practically a hot house growth wherever seeding has been done and that is well under way all along the line," said Hon. J. H. Agnew, provincial treasurer, who has just returned from Virden. "In some places, where the seed has been in the ground only a week, the blade is over an inch long, weather conditions have been ideal, the warmest. The Assiniboine is still rising, and much land near Virden is under water, and will not be sown this summer. The same thing occurred two years ago, but the seeding had then been done and was washed out. The result was that last ear, when there was no flood, this land yields as much as 50 bushels to the acre."

Very Thoughtful.

His Excellency the Governor-General, accompanied by Major Maude and Captain Bell, A.D.C., called on Mr. Whinett at the Queen's Hotel on Saturday and expressed his great pleasure at the escape of the Queen's from the danger that menaced it during the great fire. His visit was a very thoughtful and kindly act.—"Toronto World."

ABOUT MILLINERY.

The Season's Most Correct Modes

In one of the suburbs of France there is a house so constructed that the front part may always face the sun. It is erected upon a turntable, so that it can be shifted as frequently as "Old Sol" changes its position.

Our Millinery section is manipulated upon somewhat similar lines. Its vision is continually focussed upon fashionland, and no "new mode" can possibly escape its observation. Just now it is showing

FRANCE REJECTS VATICAN PROTEST.

Paris, May 7.—The French Government has decided to reject the protest of the Vatican against the slights put upon the Pope by France in connection with President Loubet's recent visit to Rome. The Government considers the protest null and void.

Water All Out of Mine.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Glace Bay, N.S., May 7.—The water is now all out of Dominion No. 1 colliery, and a pump will be working in the lower lift of the deeps to-day, which will keep the water at its normal condition. It is just about a year since the mine was flooded. The fire or water have done no permanent injury to the mine, and Dominion No. 1 will be producing as much coal as ever it did inside of six weeks.

Connecticut Is For Parker.

Hartford, Conn., May 7.—In one of the stormiest gatherings the party ever held in Connecticut the Democratic state convention yesterday chose fourteen delegates to the St. Louis convention, and instructed them to vote as a unit and for Alton, B. Parker, of New York, as the Presidential nominee.

FIERCE BLAZE AT ANCIENT CAPITAL.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Quebec, May 7. — Quebec was last night visited by another fire of fairly large proportions, when the sash and last factory, planing and saw mill of Onesime Chalifour, on Prince Edward street, was destroyed, together with several piles of lumber. The fire took just about 10.15, and by 11.30 all was over, but in that time fully $25.000 worth of buildings and lumber were destroyed, such was the fury of the blaze. The fire brigade had two engines on the spot, drawing water from the St. Charles River, and, with the aid of these and the powerful hydrant streams, succeeded in confining the fire to a comparatively limited area.

The Canadian Pacific Railway train from Montreal, which leaves at 11 p.m. daily, was obliged to turn back when it reached the scene of the conflagration, which was then at its hottest, and was only able to proceed some time after midnight.

The wholesale textile firms of Leipsic, Germany, have determined to have bargain sales on stated days of the year.

AGREEMENT REACHED.

The Difficulties Between Owners and Masters Being Settled.

Cleveland, O., May 7.—Another conference between the executive committee of the Lake Carriers' Association and the Masters' and Pilots' Association was held yesterday. An agreement was reached, which provides that where a captain is ordered to report on board on or before June 15 and is in constant service throughout the season, he shall be paid his full year's salary. In case the vessel is not in commission for the full season the master is to receive compensation at the rate of one-seventh of his year's salary for each month's service. There still remains a number of minor points to be settled, but both sides seem sanguine that an early adjustment of all difficulties will shortly be reached.

Lambert Committed for Trial.

Fraserville, May 7.—The preliminary enquiry into the charge against Louis Lambert has been concluded, and Lambert has been committed for trial at the next criminal assizes. Lambert is charged with causing the death of Keaton, one of the group of lumbermen who entered his shanty near St. Alexandre, and whom he ordered out, striking Keaton with an axe and inflicting injuries from which he died.

MIDSUMMER MILLINERY EXHIBITION

MONDAY, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY, 9th, 10th, 11th MAY.

This is the crowning event of the season. The triumph of months of plotting, planning and construction—all is ready and only awaits the acknowledgement of your approval.

Our Paris organization keeps us in the closest touch with all the changes of fashion as they occur abroad. There are certain classic events in the Paris World of Fashion for which Parisian designers exert all their genius and skill. The Concours Hippique is the great event of the Parisian year. Our Paris representative attends, and sends us models of the most distinguished hats worn on the occasion. A select shipment arrived to-day and will be shown for the first time on Monday morning—and the hats, they are lovely, they are exquisite, they are wonderful inspirations of color-mingling and effect, they are ideal in composition and style, some of them are fresh from the hands of Lewis, who is said to have the prettiest hats in Paris.

The collection which we have prepared for exhibition on Monday are bright and sunny, light and airy as a butterfly wing. White predominates, the trimmings are exquisite—some of the hats are covered with June roses or flowers of the newest shades, some have nothing to decorate them but a wing and aigrette or a spray of flowers, copies of models designed by Lewis, Susanne, Blum or Charlotte.

Ladies who love to see the latest conceptions in the millinery fashion world will enjoy the exhibition which we will present on Monday morning.

Exclusive Gowns, Waists and Coats

Direct From Paris for the "Concours Hippique"

A superb collection of Beautiful and Exclusive Gowns, Waists and Coats has just arrived direct from our PARIS OFFICE, and Horse Show week will find us having an exhibition of Ladies' High Class Wearing Apparel, the beauty and variety of which has never before been seen in Canada.

The styles are distinctive, exclusive, impossible to duplicate any one of them on this side the Atlantic. No need to dread the possibility of seeing anything approaching the exclusiveness of style which make these Gowns so much admired.

Impossible to detail the many beauty points for which these garments are celebrated. It will be necessary for you to come and see them. You are invited to come any day next week, if possible on Monday.

The prices which we have marked these exclusive Paris Novelties is very low, considering the extremely high class nature of the garments.

Heart Beats

Man lives by heart beats these days. Sun dial marking of time has passed away—not how old, but what did he do, is the way the pendulum swings in the 20th Century. Now all this means force and go and vim, and these necessary agencies need stimulating. Man's stimulation is food and drink, and by common consent TEA is the best beverage to accompany food. Tea is a wonderful restorer. It is a great conservator of the tissues, saving waste. But common tea cannot be absorbed except by the able bodied without risk. This is owing to a chemical substance in the leaf, which, when extracted, leaves tea pure and safe. The only tea sold in Canada which is guaranteed to be genuinely free from chemical impurity is

PRIMROSE LEAGUE AT ALBERT HALL

Centenary of the Birth of Lord Beaconsfield Celebrated.

THE DISPAIR OF STATESMEN

Mr. Balfour So Describes the Near East—Further Report of His Speech.

London, May 7.—The annual demonstration of the Primrose League attracted an enormous gathering at Albert Hall yesterday afternoon, being the centenary year of the birth of the late Lord Beaconsfield (Disraeli). The decorations were more elaborate than usual.

Premier Balfour's address dealt with international and Imperial affairs. The foreign affairs of this country were, he declared, in a happy and prosperous condition. Mr. Balfour attached enormous value to the Anglo-French agreement, because he believed it was going to prove a permanent arrangement. Foreign Secretary Lansdowne and Foreign Minister Delcasse had done work which was not only beneficial to their respective countries, but to the whole world.

Mr. Balfour referred to the Near East as "the despair of European statesmen," and pointed out that the Government did not propose to put the execution of reform in the hands of revolutionists, "who would rather see genuine reform fail than succeed if it did not cover all their demands."

The Premier concluded with lecturing the Opposition on their attitude towards the Colonies, especially in regard to Chinese labour, and declaring that nothing but the unity of the Unionist party would finally lay the specter of Home Rule or protect great Imperial interests from the injury with which they were threatened.

Allan line steamer Corinthian, Captain J. Nunan, with passengers from Glasgow, passed Little Metis at 2.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon inwards for Montreal.

Thomson line steamer Fremona, with a cargo of oranges and lemons, from Messina and Sorrer, to, arrived at Quebec yesterday noon, and is expected to arrive at Montreal to-day.

THE CONSERVATIVES.

Messrs. Roche and Northrup Address Montreal Junior Conservatives.

AN ENJOYABLE SMOKER

Stirring Speeches Against the Government Policy—Tributes to Mr. Borden's Leadership.

The smoking concert of the Junior Conservative Club, held last evening in that organization's comfortable quarters, Beaver Hall Square, proved an entire success in every respect.

The principal speakers were Mr. W. B. Northrup, M.P., for East Hastings, Ont., and Dr. W. J. Roche, M. P. for Marquette, Manitoba. They fully lived up to the character given them by their leader, Mr. R. L. Borden, of being two of the best speakers in the House of Commons. Their addresses breathed hope in the future of the country and of the great party whom they represent. A striking feature of their speeches was the enthusiastic loyalty which they expressed towards their leader, Mr. R. L. Borden, M.P.

The Conservatives from all the city and Hochelaga divisions, from which the Club gathers its membership and in which it puts forth its efforts, as well as representatives of the leading French-Canadian clubs, crowded the spacious rooms, and enthusiastically manifested their appreciation of the addresses. Among those in attendance, besides the officers of the Club, were Messrs. Donald Macmaster, K.C., G. F. C. Smith, Edgar Judge, president of the Westmount Conservative Association; F. J. Bisaillon, vice-president of the Lafontaine Club; Dr. F. W. Campbell, S. O. Shorey, Jos. Lussier, president St. Gabriel Club; Rev. John Almon, J. U. Emard, K.C., Arthur Brossard, Thos. E. Flynn, Perce, Gaspe; J. H. Jacob, secretary Sir John A. Macdonald Club; Real Robillard, secretary Morin Club; Bernard Tansey, A. Tansey, Arthur Pireur, L. J. Peltier, A. McLean, Charlottetown; R. A. Klock, G. L. Rosenthal, C. E. Gault, S. Carmichael, J. Nickle, J. M. Brayley, A. J. Whimby, F. E. Jones, R. C. Wilkins, Ald. H. B. Ames, Thomas Hiam, C. A. Hammond, E. Sawyer, C. C. McCully, E. W. Bolton, C. N. Armstrong, J. W. Blair, J. Rosenthal, G. F. Hudon, P. J. McDonough and many others.

THE PROGRAMME.

Mr. S. W. Ewing, the newly elected president, called the meeting to order and read a letter from Mr. R. L. Borden, M.P., accepting the honorary presidency of the club, and introducing Messrs. Northrup and Roche.

Mr. Frank J. Curran, the secretary, in the course of the evening, read letters from Mr. Gustave Lamothe, K.C., president of the Jacques Cartier Club, who was prevented by absence from the city from attending, and from the Morin Club, which promised to send representatives. In the course of the evening, an interesting musical programme was rendered. Mr. Courtice Brown excelled even himself, and was repeatedly encored. Mr. Eichorn's piano solos and accompaniments were up to his usual high standard. Mr. W. Simpson contributed a couple of banjo solos. The Messrs. Kitto gave some comic songs that were thoroughly enjoyed, and Mr. Johnson also contributed to the evening's entertainment.

MR. NORTHRUP'S SPEECH.

Mr. W. B. Northrup was introduced by President Ewing, and began by disclaiming the qualities attributed to him in the leader's letter. He was pleased, however, to be present, for he believed it was good for men from one province to meet and consult with those of the other provinces, so that each could know of the other's progresses and difficulties, that all might the better work together for the common good. He dwelt on the pride which should animate every Conservative in this country. That feeling was not always as strong as it should be. He deemed it a great privilege for any man to be called a Conservative, for it meant association with the party whose leaders in the old land and in this had constructed the British Empire and the Canadian Confederation. Their party was one with a glorious past, and a bright future. In the past, they had such leaders as Macdonald, Cartier, Tupper, Thompson. Now they have R. L. Borden, a young man, but one who has taken his place with the most honoured leaders the party has had. Mr. Northrup briefly outlined the work done by Mr. Borden since the memorable date when the Conservatives, after the elections of 1900, came together at Ottawa—a party with a glorious past but a dismal present and dark future. After mature consultation, they had unanimously chosen a new man, R. L. Borden, as their leader. If, today, the spirit of success hovers over the banners of the party, if enthusiasm is aroused in every section of the Dominion, it is due to the sterling qualities as a man and as a political leader of R. L. Borden. His followers in the House admire and look up to him, and he has taken his place in the hearts of Canadians of all races and creeds.

After contrasting the record of the two parties in Great Britain and in Canada, showing that the English Tories had been the Empire builders, just as the Conservative leaders had built up the Dominion, while the other party could not point to a single great achievement. Mr. Northrup referred to the great wave, or rather two great waves, sweeping over this country. One was the rising wave of Conservatism which was bearing R. L. Borden to power, while the other was the receding wave, which would soon land the Government in Opposition. Cardinal Newman had once described Conservatism as loyalty to a leader. Nothing could better describe the feelings of his followers for R. L. Borden.

PREPARING FOR THE FRAY.

Mr. Northrup took up the question of preparing for the fray. Every man's vote is equal, but every man's support is not equal. Some men, whatever their social, financial or educational standard may be, possess that magnetism and that spirit of industry and organization which make their aid valuable. A club like that in which he was a guest could do immense good, and it would be regrettable if anything was neglected to ensure the marked triumph of their beloved leader. Let them study public questions and put them fairly before the people. If any man believes the party now in power has carried out its promises, that it is administering the affairs of the country honestly and well, he is bound to support the present Government. The members might ask the electors whether they believed the standard of public honour in Canada had been raised. He ventured to say that outside the not inconsiderable number of people who were dazzled by the possession or promise of positions of emolument, no one would venture to say yes.

They might ask, too, whether it was conducive to public honour to hear the leader of a party say in London, Ont., that preferential trade was the best thing that could be obtained for Canada and that his policy was the only one that could obtain it, and then to see the same leader go to England and tell the people over there that Canada did not need preferential treatment, would not have it, and that he would not like to see the Old Country adopt such a policy for protection, against which Britain should always guard. They might ask whether it was conducive to a high plane of politics for a party which had denounced a policy all the years it was in opposition to adopt the main features of that policy when it reached power.

With regard to the preferential trade question, he had been asked why the Conservatives had not introduced a resolution in support of it in Parliament. Mr. R. L. Borden had been asked by several to do so. He had refrained from so doing, because he well knew that if such a resolution were introduced it would be voted down by the Government majority, and it would prove a set back to the grand work done for Canada and the Empire by Mr. Joseph Chamberlain in the British Isles.

DR. ROCHE'S ADDRESS.

After a musical number and the reception of some twenty new members, mostly young men, into the club, Dr. W. J. Roche was called on, as the representative of the province of the golden grain. He expressed his pleasure at seeing so many young men present. He wished to say nothing derogatory to the old war horses. They had done good service in the field, and now they could aid at the council table. The young men, however, must bear the brunt of the battle, and as a Junior Conservative he was proud to meet so many of his fellows in this city.

The bright, cheery doctor told his disillusionment with politics. After hearing the declarations of the Liberals in the country, he had expected to find them raise the plane of political morality, but had been grievously disappointed. The day of chatisement was at hand, however, and the party in power would be called to time by the people of this country.

He felt somewhat at a loss as to the nature of the speech he should give on such an occasion; but as he was Irish, he believed a fighting speech always in order. He would try to quote a few of the insincerities, inconsequences and incongruities of the gentlemen at Ottawa, who are drawing $7,000 and $8,000 a year for doing what they had promised they would not do.

Dr. Roche dealt with the "prosperity" claim, and concluded that with a country such as we have, and the policy which the Government had not dared wipe out entirely, the country must naturally share in the wide world prosperity. The Finance Minister had warned them that they were on the crest of the wave, but he failed to prepare for the dark years that must come. The Doctor recalled the blue ruin speeches of Sir Richard Cartwright, who found $38,000,000 an unreasonable expenditure, and now as a member of the Government—although a passive member—voted for expenditure nearly twice as large, and authorized a per capita tax of over $8, instead of that which he condemned as too high at $5.36.

Sir Richard and the others had denounced the imposition of taxation for more than absolute needs as an infamous proceeding, yet his party now boasted of surpluses.

Dr. Roche spoke of some of the expenditures which the country should condemn, such as the building of wharves where there was not enough water to float a ship, as in some portions of Mr. Fielding's constituency. He twitted the Government with the waste of money on the prohibition plebiscite, when Mr. Fisher himself declared that they had settled in advance that nothing would be done unless fifty per cent. of the people voted for it, which was an impossibility. He referred to the extra two millions spent on the Crow's Nest Pass, the half million extra on the Drummond county deal, the waste in the Yukon expenditure, the emergency food scandal, and other wasteful transactions.

The doctor touched upon the record of the parties, showing that the Liberals had opposed everything that had been proposed in the interest of the country. So it is to-day. Mr. R. L. Borden has laid before the country a transportation scheme that recommends itself to all business men, but the Liberal party, of course, opposed it, despite the denunciations of Mr. Blair.

LIBERAL DISINTEGRATION.

The Government had a leader with a pleasing personality. No one denied that. He was as pleasing in preaching Free Trade as in practicing Protection, in advocating Preferential Trade in Canada as in denouncing it in England. He ever drew applause from his followers in the House when, faced with his own declarations in Opposition, he says: "Well, we are here, and you are there, what are you going to do about it?" Disintegration is setting in strong. It has even attacked the cabinet, as was shown by the resignations of Messrs. Tarte and Blair. The doctor criticized the Government severely on the humiliating position it had placed itself in by appointing Mr. Blair to office. The Premier had thus admitted that Mr. Blair's criticisms were justified.

Dr. Roche declared strongly in favour of a protective policy alike in the interest of the farmer and the manufacturer and all other sections of the community.

With the policy which the party has, with a leader like R. L. Borden, daily growing in esteem, and with a rich and splendid country, the Conservative party had every reason to have confidence in the future.

VOTES OF THANKS.

Mr. F. J. Bisaillon, K. C., on behalf of the Lafontaine Club, congratulated the Junior Conservatives on having brought such guests to the city. He agreed with the sentiments expressed. The party was proud of its men of the past and present, and had every reason to hope for the future.

Mr. Saumarez Carmichael, president of the Club, moved a hearty vote of thanks to the speakers. He also thanked the members of the club, and especially the new president and the other members of the executive, for the splendid support they had given him during his term. He was glad to see so many recruits, especially as they came from all sections of the city, for the Junior Conservative Club intended to throw itself into the fight in every division, and not only in the city, but in the whole district.

Ald. H. B. Ames seconded the vote of thanks. He recalled some of the things that made him blush while in England for Canada. Of course he could not speak there for one or other political party, so he had to bear his shame in silence. The absence of an insolvency law, the failure of the Parliament to support Chamberlain's fight for Canada, were the principal subjects of reproach.

Mr. Edgar Judge, on behalf of the Westmount Association, and Mr. Jos. Lussier, on behalf of the St. Gabriel Club, supported the vote and congratulated the Junior Conservatives.

The evening closed with "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King."

ADMIRAL TOGO REPORTS THAT PORT ARTHUR IS COMPLETELY BLOCKED

No Vessel Larger Than a Small Boat Can Reach the Harbour—Latest Attack Resulted in Considerable Loss of Life But Not a Single War Vessel is Lost.

Tokio, May 7.—3 p.m.—Vice-Admiral Togo reports that the entrance to Port Arthur is blocked completely to all vessels except small boats. He adds that the Japanese have not lost a single war vessel, although the attack resulted in considerable loss of life.

REPORTED JAPANESE SUCCESS.

Seoul, May 6.—7.30 p.m.—A despatch from Antung says it is rumoured there that the Japanese captured Feng Hung Cheng on May 4, after fierce fighting, and that the losses on both sides were very heavy.

PORT ARTHUR CLOSELY WATCHED.

Port Arthur, May 6.—3 p.m.—Six of the enemy's cruisers are continually in sight off Port Arthur.

A parade of the garrison here was held in honour of the Empress's name day. Lieut.-General Stoessel, in a speech to the troops, alluded to the latest phase of the war, by which Port Arthur is threatened on the land side and expressed his firm confidence in the endurance of the defenders of the peninsula.

The general's address was received with cheers from the assembled soldiers and sailors.

CELEBRATED VICTORY.

Seoul, Corea, May 6.—2.30 p.m.—The Japanese residents of this city held services to-day both in celebration of the victory on the Yalu and in commemoration of those of their countrymen who fell in battle. After the memorial service, luncheon was served in the old east palace. The forenoon and evening was given over to sports and fireworks. Many Corean officials attended the exercises.

ENGLISH CAPITAL FOR CANADIAN OIL.

May Be Result of Canadian Firms Seeking English Tubing.

Special Cable From Our London Correspondent.

London, May 7.—A representative of the petroleum interests in Petrolea, Ontario, is now here, endeavouring to induce the British tube manufacturers to compete for the supply of immense quantities of steel and iron tubing and casings used in the Canadian oil fields, every foot of which is imported from the United States. The difficulty hitherto has been that the British manufacturers have neglected the exact local needs, whereas the American firms have a representative on the spot. Canadian oilmen much prefer the British tubes, which also have the advantage of the preference.

The movement promises to succeed. It is not improbable that an outcome also may be the investment of British capital in the expansion of the Petrolea fields, and the exportation of petroleum to Great Britain. It is stated that an Englishman, who recently invested there, receives 25 per cent. per month on his capital.

CANADA A COUNTRY OF CONFLAGRATIONS.

The London Economist Discusses Fire Insurance in Canada.

Canadian Associated Press.

London, May 7.—The Economist in an editorial on fire insurance in Canada, says: "As a rule profit, even at the high premiums charged, can only, with great difficulty, be extracted out of Canadian fire risks. Large as the profits have been in 1902 and 1903, they have been not much more than enough to cover the losses in Toronto, Canada, like the United States, is a country of conflagrations."

FOUR PEOPLE KILLED BY TORNADO.

Fortworth, Texas, May 7.—A despatch from Goldthwaite, Texas, says:

A tornado, accompanied by severe rain fall, resulted in the death of Mrs. Allen Dennis, George W. Mason and a child of S. E. Harper, of this vicinity. Luther Reed, Allen Dennis, Mrs. S. Harper, Joe Griffith and a child of S. F. Harper were seriously injured and a child of C. E. Behooker was killed. Twelve or more homes were totally destroyed, full particulars were not obtainable.

DUES WILL BE SUSPENDED ON COAL FROM THE EAST.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 7.—The Minister of Railways yesterday afternoon received a deputation of shipping men from Montreal, who asked for the abolition of the wharfage dues at the Lachine canal on coal coming from the east, amounting to five cents a ton, and in the case of screenings to three cents a ton. The Minister agreed to suspend the dues for the present, and will urge the Government to abolish them altogether. The deputation pointed out that no such dues are charged upon coal at other towns on Government canals.
