

Old South Writhes In Bitterness That Recalls Civil War Days

Canadian Writer Takes Candid Look At Boiling South

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
FIRST OF THREE STORIES

The old south is in the throes of a social revolution that is rekindling fires of bitterness and hatred not seen since the black days following the Civil War.

Below the Mason-Dixon line, the Pennsylvania-Maryland boundary drawn by two English astronomers nearly 200 years ago, flaming crosses burn again at night on the soft southern landscape, race disorders and tensions trouble the land and once again there is talk of secession.

Here, in a region making up one-sixth of the land area of the United States and peopled by 30,000,000 whites and 10,000,000 Negroes pressures are mounting and the once easy and often cordial relationships between the two races are fast disappearing.

CAUSE OF UPHEAVAL

The immediate cause of the social upheaval is the 1954 Supreme Court decision holding it unconstitutional for the southern states to bar Negro children from schools attended by white youngsters, a ruling that spelled the legal end of the south's segregated school system and struck deeply at the roots of the ingrained southern tradition of keeping the two races apart.

But the stresses and strains that are weakening the fabric of southern custom go back to a war-induced industrial revolution which brought new wealth to the south, giving the Negro greater economic security and greater incentive to claim the rights guaranteed him in common with other Americans under the United States Constitution.

School desegregation, because of its widespread ramifications, is the headline-catcher at the moment but other race barriers, other elements of southern Jim Crowism, lie fermenting below the larger issue of the public school.

In many southern areas, for example, Negroes find themselves excluded from white restaurants, movies houses, hotels, inns, bars, swimming pools and golf courses. They rest in segregated waiting rooms in bus and rail depots and sit behind a color bar in inter-state buses, though federal authorities have banned racial discrimination in inter-state travel.

OFFICIAL SUBTERFUGES

In theory, the Negro has the right to vote but in much of the south he finds himself disfranchised through various official subterfuges, such as pool taxes, education qualifications and other requirements. In some rural counties, the naked threat of physical violence and reprisal has been used effectively to keep Negroes away from the polls.

Yet, despite a way of life that relegates him to second-class citizenship, the Negro himself is among the first to admit that he has made great strides, particularly in the last 15 years. School segregation now is illegal, though several states are openly seeking ways to circumvent the law. Fair employment laws enhance his chances of employment, discrimination is banned in inter-state travel and some states have eased voting requirements to the point where more Negroes are voting than ever before.

One fact often lost sight of in the welter of angry public debate on the school issue is that 500 Negro students already are attending formerly all-white, state-supported colleges and universities in the south. None of these enrolments was accompanied by the racial disturbances which recently marked the attempted entrance of student Autherine Lucy into the University of Alabama, in the strongly race-conscious deep south.

The impact of the racial problem does not fall evenly on the south as a whole. By its very nature, its intensity rises in those areas where the Negro population is greatest. This is true of the so-called Black Belt, an irregular area extending in an arc from Virginia across the south to Texas and taking in the five states most firm in their refusal to accept integration—Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi.

IN BORDER STATES

The problem is less weighty in the border states—Delaware, West Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri and Oklahoma. There, with a smaller Negro population and hence fewer inter-racial aggravations, state authorities are integrating their schools.

Between the two extremes are six states where state and local authorities, though some are resisting the trend, appear prepared to accept eventual integration. In some, Negro and white pupils already are sitting side by side in the class rooms. These states include North Carolina, Tennessee, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana and Florida.

Thus, local customs and the rights accorded the Negro vary from county to county and state to state. Generally speaking, the Negro's position is better in towns and cities than it is in backwoods rural areas where poor whites often find themselves in economic competition with Negroes.

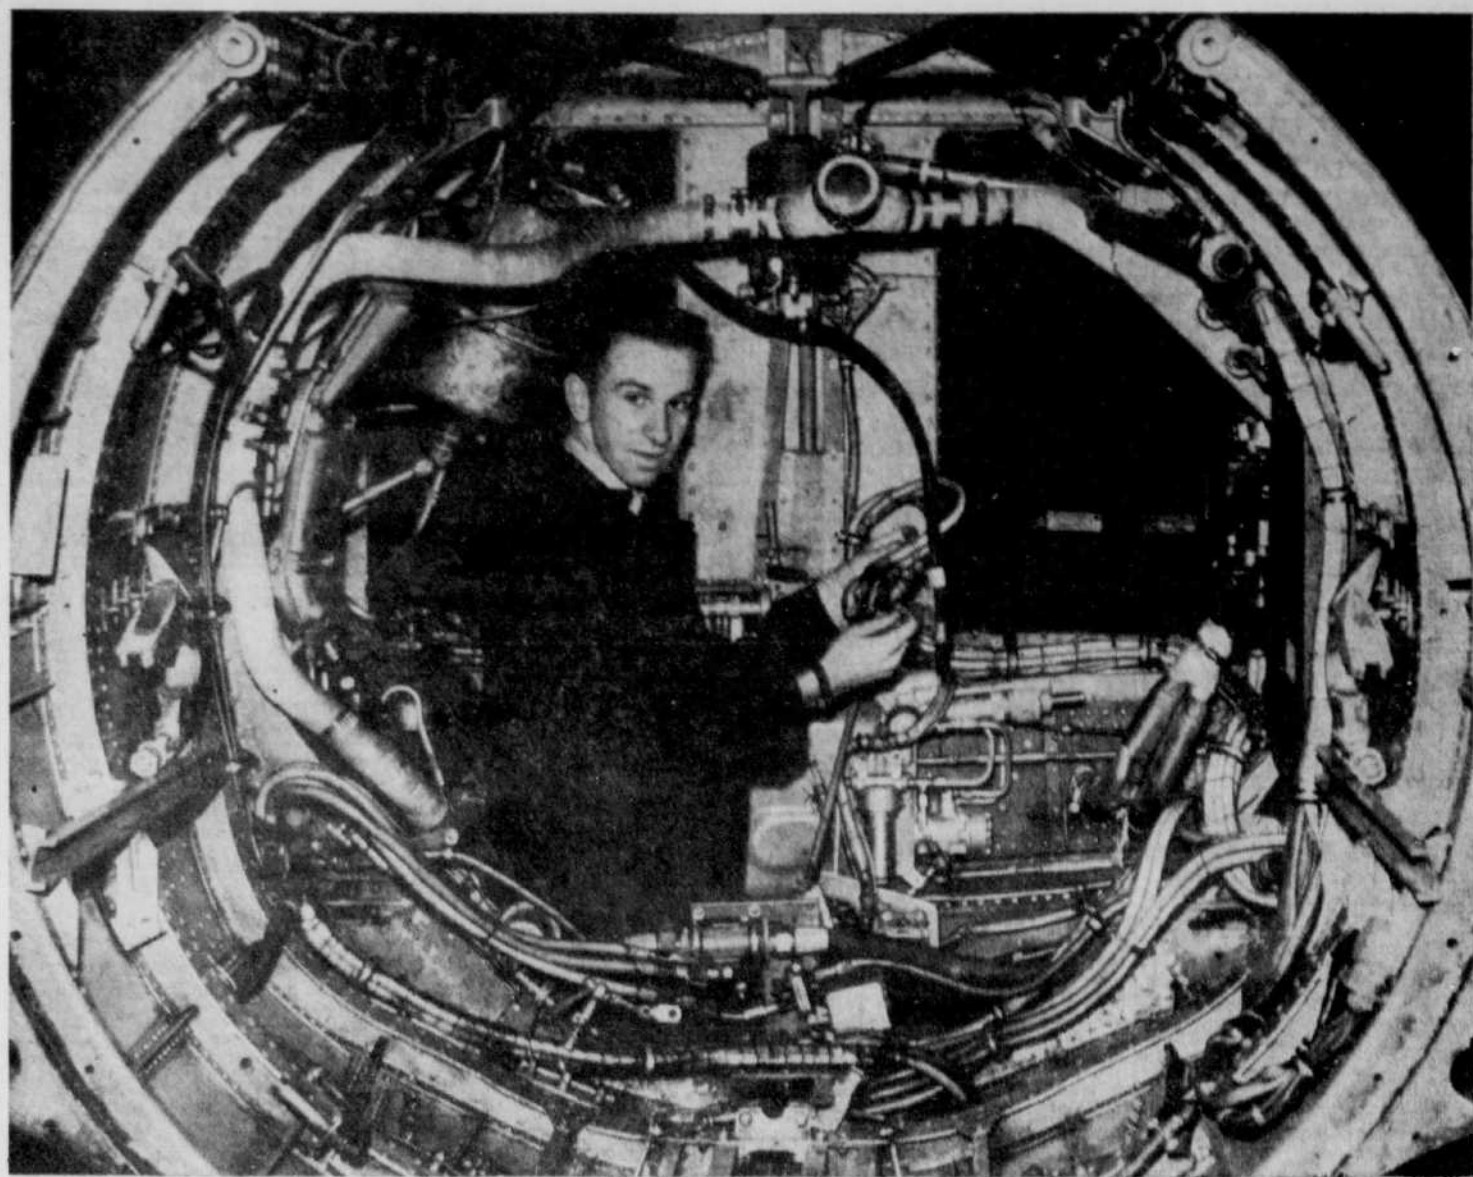

The battleline is drawn between two powerful groups.

On the one side is the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, a militant 300,000-member organization which has been carrying the fight to end school segregation and break down other color barriers. Formed in 1909, it draws 90 per cent of its membership from the Negro race.

OPPOSING GROUPS

On the other side is the newly-formed movement of White Citizens Councils and other organizations carrying such labels as White America, Inc., Southern Gentlemen and the Christian American Segregation Association, which has some of the trappings of the old Ku Klux Klan. The councils, which thrive on talk of "race mongrelization," came into being on the heels of the Supreme Court decision on schools. No accurate estimate of their following is available but Mississippi alone has nearly

Romantic Silhouette In Blossom

These fashions from Europe show a soft and romantic trend for spring. Red and white floral print silk from Italy (left) is by the Fontana Sisters, has slender lines. Shoulder panels are lined with a new shade called parma red. From England comes a printed poplin dress (center) with draped bodice and circular skirt that has slim look. This is by Horrocks. Italian late-day dress (right) is by Fontana. It's in white organdie trimmed with flow ered ribbon, has a big, black velvet bustle bow at the back.

By GAILE DUGAS

New York. — Reports from London show that the sheath, in many variations, is as strong in the English spring collections as it is in America.

Important suit silhouette at John Cavanagh is the brief jacket with short, narrow skirt. The shoulder line is kept natural, with inset sleeves. The allover effect is a slightly tapered one.

This same tapered line is kept for daytime dresses at this house in versions that are both sleeveless and belted. Other daytime dresses include sheaths with jackets.

Norman Hartnell has used turquoise throughout his collection, extending this color even to the jewelry that he designs. The slim, natural silhouette is kept for daytime dresses with some emphasis on the neckline. This is frequently achieved through drapery.

For evening, Hartnell stresses the full-length formal. He uses both the sheath line and the wide-skirted dress for evening in many variations.

Blue also dominates the collection of Michael Sherard but he uses many blues: sapphire, turquoise, navy, flower and even midnight blues.

Iceblue appears for evening in an elaborate short evening gown.

Mechanical Toys Lead Girl To Engineering

As a little girl Zygryda Grygovicz played with mechanical toys while other little girls played with dolls. This childhood in mechanics led her to a career and today she is a chemical engineer at the C-I-L Central Research Laboratory at Beloeil, Quebec.

As a child in her home in Warsaw, Poland, Fryda, as she is familiarly known, was always busy taking household mechanisms apart to see what made them tick. Following the war, she entered the faculty of engineering at Rome University and completed her studies at the Polish University College from which she was graduated in 1950. After graduation she spent some time as a control chemist with an English firm and in 1952 came to Canada.

Although Europe abounds with women chemical engineers, so far Fryda has only met one other female chemical engineer in Canada.

"Whenever I attend a convention of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers," she related, "the reception committee naturally assumes I am the wife of one of the engineers. It is amusing to see their faces when I tell them I am an engineer."

Fryda is particularly interested in the research end of chemistry. "Research is challenging," she explained. "The work never becomes routine and it is necessary for me to be constantly studying, which is always profitable."

When asked if she had any advice for young people starting out on the road to a career, Fryda suggested that a college education must come first. "Whether it be in arts, science or commerce, you will always have that standing behind you when seeking a job," she said.

Curried Rice Tasty And Golden

Cooks in the Far East have long used curry powder to impart a mysteriously delicious flavor to all sorts of different dishes. The attractive golden color of the curry powder gives to food sparks eye appeal, too! With the help of curry powder, economical rice makes this deliciously different dish which you can serve as a vegetable. This recipe uses chicken stock—but equally inexpensive bouillon cubes can be substituted.

INGREDIENTS: 2 tablespoons butter, 1/3 cup onion, finely chopped, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon black pepper, 1 teaspoon curry powder (more if desired), 1 cup uncooked white rice, 2 1/4 cups chicken stock or 2 cups water and 2 chicken bouillon cubes, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, Paprika.

METHOD: Melt the butter or margarine in a 2-quart saucepan. Add the onion and cook slowly, until tender and onion begins to turn yellow. Stir in the salt, pepper and curry powder. Add the rice. Slowly add the chicken stock or water and bouillon cubes and lemon juice. Bring to a vigorous boil over a high heat. Stir until the bouillon cubes dissolve. Turn down heat as low as possible. Cover with a lid and leave over this low heat 20 minutes. Remove saucepan from heat but leave lid on 10 minutes or longer if meal is not ready. Pour into serving dish. Top with the parsley. Sprinkle generously with paprika. This recipe makes 6 servings.

RICE CALAS

Rice Calas are an old New Orleans breakfast treat. Beat 2 egg yolks. Stir in 3/4 cup beet or cane sugar and 1 cup warm cooked rice. Sift together 2 cups sifted flour and 2 teaspoons baking powder. Then sift into the rice-egg mixture. Mix well. Beat 2 egg whites until stiff. Stir into the rice mixture. Drop spoonful into deep hot fat at 350 deg. F. Fry about 5 minutes or until a deep brown and done in the center. Drain on absorbent paper and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Rice is an easily cooked convenience food which can make meals easier to prepare. Remember — clean packaged rice need not and should not be washed before it is used.

The milling of the rice is in itself a cleaning process. Cook rice in the exact amount of water needed. All the water should be absorbed during the cooking. The cooked rice should not be rinsed after it is cooked. This causes food value to be lost and keeps the grains from being fluffy and dry.

It Is Good For The Soul To Make A Self-Analysis

By RUTH MILLETT

Some wives trade too much on their marriages. Because they have a husband, a "Mrs." before their name and a place in the community as the wife of a respected man, they never bother to take stock of what they, themselves, actually are as individuals.

It doesn't hurt any woman to ask herself occasionally: "What would I be if I weren't John's wife, if I were suddenly alone and on my own?"

"Would any other man find me attractive, interesting and charming?"

"Have I any skill or ability that would enable me to be self-supporting?"

Have I good friends who would stick by me if I were alone, instead of one of a couple?

"Do I know enough about business so that I could manage money matters?"

"Do I have anything to talk about besides my family, my house, my neighbors, clothes, the servant problem?"

"Have I tried so hard to please my husband through the years that I have become just a shadow and so would find it almost impossible to stand alone?"

"Did I long ago give up thinking about the political issues of the day and settle for taking my opinions directly from my husband?"

These are questions a woman should ask herself occasionally not only because any woman can suddenly be left alone.

But also, because a woman who wouldn't be much without her husband might not be much of a person with him, if the truth is admitted.

BABY'S CRY IS NOT ALWAYS TEMPER

DISTINGUISH between your baby's cry of pain and cry of temper. The "pain cry" should have instant attention. If it is caused by the distress due to gas on the stomach or bowels, or those common digestive upsets, try sweet-tasting Baby's Own Tablets. As one Ontario mother reports,—"It used to be a worry what to do when my baby had an upset again, needed a regulator. Well, that problem was solved when my water said, 'Give Baby's Own Tablets.' And during teething time—when babies are feverish, restless due to irregularity or have an upset tummy—Baby's Own Tablets not only relieve effectively, but do so quickly, I wouldn't be without them."

National Ballet To Board Children From Out Of Town

Toronto — For the first time since formation six years ago, the National Ballet Company will provide accommodation for out-of-town children attending its summer school here June 18 - Aug. 4.

"It's the beginning of what we hope will become a residential ballet school in Canada," principal Betty Oliphant said in an interview.

Already there are indications that hundreds of Canadian youngsters, dozens of teachers and a liberal sprinkling of United States dancers will attend this year's sessions, she said. Most promising of these were given scholarships by director Celia Franca.

Besides tall, grey-eyed Miss Oliphant, the National company's ballet mistress, the faculty this summer will include Peggy Van Praagh of Sadler's Wells Theatre Ballet.

One of the prime functions of the National ballet's school is to turn out dancers for the professional company. Miss Van Praagh has for 15 years been ballet mistress and assistant director of the London company.

Miss Oliphant is recognized here and abroad as one of today's leading ballet teachers. A prodigy who at 14 taught dancing to theatre and film stars Jack Hulbert and Jane Baxter.

Eastern Townships Poets

Record Staffman, Poet Himself, Gave Birth To Series On Poets

TENTH OF A SERIES
By CAROL WITTY
Hugh Doherty, an ex-Record reporter now studying in New Zealand, defines poetry as a means of expression.
"If it's appreciated by the reader that's incidental," he claims.
Hugh is probably better known to poetry lovers by his pen-name, "Bruce Brewster", under which he has had 10 poems published in the Record.
He admits his philosophy may be a hard one, but explains that poetry is neither easy reading nor easy writing. As for those who write in what he terms "a fine careless rapture" they're just plain lucky.

"I find that it usually takes a bit of mind-pummeling to produce anything I think is worthwhile. Whether or not anybody else thinks it's worthwhile is quite beside the point," says Hugh.
This red-headed young man whose shy grin and absent-minded manner belie a steely determination, was the Record poetry expert for over a year.
Before leaving for the opposite side of the globe in February he became interested in the fortunes of Eastern Townships poets and completed a series of articles for the Record on Canadian poets living within a 60-mile radius of Sherbrooke.

Hugh feels that poetry, like wine, has to "age" awhile before it is truly appreciated.
"The history of literature," he points out, "has shown that in many cases the golden nuggets shine through only after lying for years under layers of abuse."

His first poem was written out of boredom when he was 15 and in Grade 10 at Sherbrooke High School.

"It was a sticky day in June," he recalls. "Lessons were dull, so I surreptitiously composed a poem asking for rain when I should have been doing geometry." Now 21, he still writes poetry surrepticiously, or at least he did a few months ago when he was a member of the Record staff.

Hugh's first published poem appeared in the Sherbrooke High School annual edition of the Dumbel. That was when he was in Grade 11 and the poem was called "To A Cat".

From that day forward his career as a budding young Canadian poet skyrocketed. After graduating from Sherbrooke High School with a couple of scholarships in his pocket he went on to Bishop's University for an honors art degree. While there he was editor for two years of a literary magazine, the "Mitre". Perhaps that's why it carried over 30 of his poems, he admits.

Hugh was awarded a Rotary Fellowship to study journalism at a university in Christchurch, New

Farm Forum Activities

IVES HILL AND DRAPER'S CORNER

The Ives Hill and Draper's Corner Farm Forum held its final meeting at the Green home on the Compton Road, which was attended by 35. A turkey supper served to finish up the activities of a successful year.

Among the guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Smith and Miss Peggy, from Beebe. Mrs. Smith and Miss Peggy giving several vocal selections accompanied by Miss Elizabeth Green, which were greatly enjoyed. Cards were played at several tables.

Mrs. M. St. Laurent voiced the thanks of the members to Mr. and Mrs. Green for opening their home for the special supper and to Mrs. Allison for preparing turkeys.

In her secretary's report, Mrs. Green said "We end the year with a surplus of $13.09, having taken in $79.17 and spending $66.08 on our activities."

"At the beginning of the season a committee was appointed to bring in a list of possible action projects for the year. Of the five suggestions brought in by the committee, three we accepted and plans made to carry them out."

"First — that every effort be made to prevent the slashing of woodlots. A resolution was written, adopted and sent to John French M.L.A., Hon. Johnny Bourque, Walter Hodgman and the Provincial Office asking for action on this subject. The forum group also accepted responsibility for arranging a woodlot management demonstration. This will be done during the month of April."

Second — A roadside picnic table for tourists is to be set up on Route 22 also to be completed in the spring or summer of 1956.

Lastly — a definite effort to help start new forums. Besides the field work done, one forum was visited by two of our members.

"A further suggestion resulted in the weekly column being written and published in the Sherbrooke Daily Record under the title of "The Voice from the Hill"

"We held a Community Christmas tree, furnishing gifts and candy for the children."

"Two other resolutions were sent to Provincial Office, one asking that a National Farm Holiday be established, the other re-Publicity. Two delegates attended the Co-op Conference and supported these resolutions."

"Supported other farm groups in their effort to maintain farm control of E.T.A.A. also the petition re price of pulpwood. We gave our usual support to Sherbrooke County dance."

"Our former members and shut-ins have been remembered. In the fall, this forum gave its support to the C.S.S. Leadership Forum, held at the Willard Home in East Clifton, by working with the committee and sponsoring one member."

"On March 28th, the forum members enjoyed a turkey banquet. The chairman and secretary were thanked by the members for their leadership during the year."

80,000 members.
While secession talk is in the air, no one seriously believes the south again will attempt to break away from the union and precipitate another bloody war such as that which devastated the south in the 1860s. Yet, indicating the intensity with which the south clings to its traditions, the possibility of secession is being discussed, not by rabble-rousers, but by well-educated, middle-class southern folk.

In this election-year Congress, 100 southern Senators and members of the House of Representatives have issued a manifesto challenging the Supreme Court school decision as a "clear abuse" of judicial power and pledging themselves to use "all lawful means" to reverse it.

ANGERED BY RULING
Public opinion polls indicate the vast majority of southern whites oppose school desegregation. They, as do their leaders in the legislatures and in Congress, regard the court ruling as unconstitutional and are openly angered at what they feel is a northern invasion into the south's private affairs.

Surprisingly, those same polls show that more than a third of the south's 10,000,000 Negroes also favor separate schools.

Paradoxically, the south, in maintaining separate schools for white and Negroes, was following the dictates of a Supreme Court ruling of another day. In 1896, the court said it was constitutional for the states to segregate Negroes from white—as in railroad trains—if the facilities given Negroes were equal to those of the whites.

This was the famous "separate-but-equal" doctrine—and the key word here was "equal." Negro leaders claim the system never really worked, that the facilities provided Negro children never were equal to those of the whites.

They point to reports from the U.S. department of health, education and welfare which state that, on the basis of current expenses for white children, it would cost more than $160,000,000 additional a year to make the Negro schools in the south equal to those for white youngsters.

Other statistics indicate that in 1952 Alabama, for example, spent $165 for education for a white child and $115 for a Negro. Arkansas spent $128 on white students and $102 on Negroes.

Responsible white leaders plead for delay, for more time to make integration work. They say that tradition cannot be altered, a way of life changed overnight, by the stroke of the legal pen.

URGES MORE TIME

Senator J. W. Fulbright, Democrat from Arkansas and regarded as a moderate on the race question, says the south must have more time and points out that some states already were moving towards desegregation before the Supreme Court ruling.

William Faulkner, the Nobel Prize author who lives in the Mississippi delta country, suggested in an open letter to Life magazine that friends of the Negro are trying to push integration faster than southerners could accept it without resistance, and cautioned:

"Go slow, now. Stop for a time, a moment."

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People thinks the time to press the issue is now, when new industry in the south has given the Negro greater economic security and increased opportunities to vote are widening his voice at the polling booth.

At the other extreme are men such as Senator James Eastland, Democrat from Mississippi, chairman of the powerful Senate judiciary committee and long an unyielding foe of racial integration.

Eastland recently described the Supreme Court school decision before a white council rally as "illegal, immoral, dishonest and a disgrace" and said it was "dictated by political pressure groups bent on the destruction of the American system of government and the mongrelization of the white race."

A Negro Washington taxi driver, born in South Carolina, had this comment:

"Many of our people aren't ready for integration. They are ignorant and poorly educated. They don't want to push this thing or first thing you know they're going to have trouble. You get a lot of squabbling and first thing you know you get bloodshed."

Biggest gold and diamond country in the world, South Africa is also one of the richest in uranium.

Miss T. Graham Guest Speaker At Cookshire G.A.

Cookshire — Miss Thelma Graham, of St. Paul's Anglican Church, Sherbrooke, addressed the G.A. of St. Peter's Church at the home of their leader, Mrs. S. J. Bennett. A number of the ladies of the town were also invited guests.

Miss Graham gave a vivid description of her summer's work in some of the northern districts of Saskatchewan, where the Sunday School lessons were brought to the children by "van". She stated that there were two ways of children in isolated districts in the Western Provinces of Canada receiving instruction and knowledge of Christ, either by the Anglican "Sunday Schools by Post" or by volunteers who go out in "vans" in the summer.

In 1954, 660 families in the Diocese of Saskatchewan received monthly Scripture lessons by mail, 160 children participating in this project, and the numbers are increasing each year. In this method, Sunday School papers are sent out to the children by mail from the Anglican Headquarters; these papers are read and many answer the question, and send back their answers for correction. At the end of the session, worthy students have their names put on the honor roll.

In the "Van" method, consecrated young people go out in pairs. They pack their van with some unperishable food, Sunday School papers or religious literature, and go out into the homes, bringing their stories and information and also fellowship and much encouragement for the pioneering families to carry on and to keep up their faith in God.

Miss Graham and her assistant visited 274 families and travelled 25,000 miles on their trip. They visited the homes, looked up the children, held Bible Vacation Schools, and held church services when possible. They found the people hospitable and kind, enduring many hardships, but willing to share their food and homes, and very appreciative of the spiritual blessings received from the "Vanners."

Miss Betty MacRae introduced the speaker and Canon Dunn thanked her for her interesting address. At the close of the evening refreshments were served by the G.A. members, Mrs. Bennett and Mrs. MacRae. The collection taken in at this meeting is to be sent to headquarters for the "Vanners."

CHAPTER NO. 46. O.E.S.
Cookshire Chapter No. 46, O.E.S., held its monthly meeting in the Masonic Chambers, with Sister Gladys Bennett and Brother J. E. Drennan in the East. was one affiliation. One outstanding feature of the membership now is that one mother and four of her daughters are members.

Following the closing of the Chapter, refreshments were served in the lower hall by the Bury members.

Pupils of the higher grades composed the choir, with Mrs. Earl Dawson at the organ. Under the direction of their music teacher, Mrs. Roy Harrison, pupils of Grades 1 to 3, and 4 to 7, rendered two anthems. The lessons were read by Wayne Cook, and Delbert Dougherty, and Mr. Richards gave a brief but interesting address. Mr. Norris also preached a most stimulating and inspiring sermon.

The offering was taken by four members of the Cadets, Delbert Dougherty, Wayne Cook, Jimmie MacLeod and R. Lasenba. In keeping with Palm Sunday, the altar was fittingly adorned with palm fronds, procured especially for the occasion. Among the groups who attended this service were the Cadets of the 7-11th Hussars, Girl Guides and Brownies.

Altogether the young people taking part in this service were a credit to themselves and their leaders, and it was the unanimous opinion of those attending that it was most satisfying and inspiring and hopes are entertained that these joint services

Montreal Actors To Take Part In Stratford Festival

Montreal — Well-known members of the French-speaking theatre have been chosen to take part in this year's main production at the Stratford Festival — a play which naturally combines French and English — Shakespeare's "Henry V."

Ten of Montreal's French speaking performers will be members of the festival company which has been invited to represent Canadian theatre at the Edinburgh Festival next fall, following the summer season at Stratford, Ont.

Montreal's Christopher Plummer, a young Canadian actor who is making a name for himself in New York at the moment, will play Henry V.

Biggest name in French-Canadian theatre, Gratien Gelinas, is joined by compatriots Jean Gascon, Jean Louis Roux, Aime Major, Roger Garceau, Gabriel Gascon, Guy Hoffman, Guy Belanger, Ginette Letondal and Germaine Giroux, who together make up 25 per cent of the festival company.

The experienced Shakespearean actress, Eleanor Stuart, who with fellow Montrealer Robert Goodier has been with the festival since it opened in 1953, believes that Stratford has the chance of establishing theatre in Canada on a national basis.

"The Stratford Festival is really the most exciting thing that ever happened in Canadian theatre," she said. "It has set a standard for our young actors and actresses to aim at."

Miss Stuart, who has acted both in French and English theatre, in Britain as well as North America, will take the part of the Queen of France in "Henry V."

Another Montrealer, Ginette Letondal, thinks that being chosen to play in the festival may be the turning point in her career. Twenty-five-year-old Ginette has played in French-Canadian theatre and in radio and TV, mainly in her home town.

In addition to "Henry V" this year's program will include "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and three farces by Moliere.

Finance Minister's Secretary Busy All Year With Budget Problems

Ottawa. — Mention of the federal budget may cause a tizzy in many offices across the land. But it doesn't perturb the finance minister's capable secretary.

"I've lived through quite a few budgets," explained Doris Bentley in an interview.

Budget night, auburn-haired Miss Bentley admits, is hectic. One task is getting copies of the budget speech ready for distribution. She has never been able to sit through a whole budget speech.

But the budget exposition reverberates nearly all year for this Nova Scotian who has been secretary to two finance ministers since 1946. She's now one of four women secretaries on the minister's staff.

From the autumn until financial reckonings are announced in the spring, she is busy arranging appointments for delegations to the minister.

Not too many individual requests for tax adjustments cross her desk.

And this year — the second year as finance minister for Hon. Walter Harris — there seem to be fewer delegations than in previous years, says Miss Bentley.

Early in March, Mr. Harris and finance experts start regular meetings which continued until the budget was announced.

Then appointments with the minister start all over again — for delegations which weren't too happy about budget announcements.

"There's usually a lull in the summertime," Miss Bentley said with a smile. "And I can relax easily."

But most of the time, "there's never a dull moment," she commented, reaching to quiet a ringing telephone.

Her daily itinerary often includes sitting in a Commons gallery noting questions directed at the finance minister.

She fitted in a bit of globe-trotting while she was secretary to Finance Minister Douglas Abbott.

Between 1947 and 1954 she travelled overseas four times to work on the sidelines of international bank fund conferences, finance ministers' meetings, a NATO meeting and a Commonwealth prime ministers' conference.

The finance ministers' meeting in Australia in 1954 also meant a trip through the South Pacific and visits to the Far East.

Business conferences entail "a fair bit of work" for a minister's secretary, but don't dampen

Miss Bentley's enjoyment of travelling.

A native of Middleton, in Nova Scotia's Annapolis valley, she holidays at home at least once a year.

She chose her career after graduating from Acadia University in Wolfville, N.S., and Simmons College in Boston, Mass.

"There weren't too many careers for women to choose from then."

She came to Ottawa 15 years ago, after working with the Nova Scotia government and becoming secretary to the late premier Angus L. Macdonald.

When Mr. Macdonald was called to Ottawa as navy minister during the Second World War, he brought Miss Bentley as his secretary. She stayed to become "Girl Friday" to his successor, Hon. Douglas Abbott, who became minister of national defence and later finance minister.
