Freedom of speech is fought over and over again

"In our country we have these three unspeakably precious things: freedom of speech, freedom of conscience, and the prudence never to practise either one of them."

Mark Train

Something over thirty years ago, when this scribbler was a lean and hungry student in New York's Greenwich Village, he often attended lectures at Cooper Union on the Bowery because they were free. Amid the motley collection of speakers was Norman Thomas, then approaching the end of a notable career as leader of the American Socialist party and six times candidate for the U.S. presidency. In responding to a question from the audience one night, Thomas dropped the remark that every generation must win its own battles for freedom of speech.

A shattering thought. Most Americans are taught from the day they can pour their own breakfast cereal that free speech is guaranteed them in the Bill of Rights and is therefore inviolate. Thomas (who had been arrested innumerable times for speaking out on unpopular causes and therefore knew better) was saying that free speech is never really won but must be fought for over and over and over again.

Foes sprout like dandelions and always stake the high moral ground so that free speech is never attacked directly but becomes an incidental casualty in the war against sin. The Moral Majority campaigns against obscenity in music lyrics. Two Live Crew goes on trial and MuchMusic bans Mitou's video on the unchallenged assumption that the mere sight of a naked human will somehow injure little children. Huckleberry Finn is withdrawn from reading lists because of its depiction of Jim and The Merchant of Venice because of Shylock. The Taming of the Shrew comes under attack from feminists, American Psycho's publisher is boycotted and Dr. Seuss's little morality tale, The Lorax, draws the fire of lumbermen trying to ban it from Oregon schools.

Free speech, a fundamental right of the individual, is always in conflict with the collectivity and some Quebec nationalists go so far as to claim "collective rights" (whatever they may be) are more important than individual rights. The Supreme Court of Canada, growing more conservative during the Mulroney years, decided parts of Bill 101 violated guarantees of free speech but might be made legal by invoking the 'notwithstanding' clause in upholding the conviction of Jim Keegstra, it ruled that the law against disseminating hatred violated the Charter of Rights but was "of sufficient importance to warrant overriding a constitutional freedom."

The latest enemy is PC — 'political correctness' ('proper conformity' or 'public condemnation'). This particular villain was publicly identified last fall in Newsweek, reached this watchful corner on February 15th and our Op Ed page on April 4th in a piece by Associated Press. On May 4th, even President Bush recognized the rascal in a little-noticed speech at the University of Michigan:

"Ironically, on the 200th anniversary of our Bill of Rights, we find free speech under assault throughout the United States. The notion of 'political correctness' has ignited controversy across the land. What began as a cause for civility has soured into a cause of conflict and even censorship."

Last week, PC reared unwittingly in one of our editorials when a journalist made the terrifying statement that Tadeusz had "abused" free speech as if it was not a right but a privilege which might be revoked for not toeing the line. This week the phenomenon was recognized by Barbara Amiel and a covery story in Maclean's, "Canada's Weekly News Magazine" — over six months behind Newsweek. So much for news.

Free speech is a minefield for PCs. Blacks must now be termed 'Afro-Americans' and Indians 'Native Americans' to avoid racism. Call any female over 18 a 'girl' and that's sexism. Refer to your neighbor's kid as a 'brat' or his grandfather as an 'old foof' and you've committed 'ageism'.

Since 'disabled' has a negative connotation, all those who once were handicapped are now 'differently abled'. Favoring people over animals is 'speciesism'. Admiring physical attractiveness is practising 'lookism'. If you favor the nicest, cleverest people, you are 'elitist' and opting for the company of the intelligent and industrious is discrimination against the stupid and lazy.

In the mind of the true PC, all judgements are rejected and every notion of equal validity — except those held by sexists, racists, bigots, homophobes and male chauvinist pigs. Once these labels are applied, those ideas can not only be dismissed but actively drowned out because members of the majority — the oppressors — must never be allowed to criticize minorities — the oppressed. Sexual, racial and ethnic politics are all-pervasive and draw the line at extending free speech to white supremacists, neo-Nazis and anti-Semites. The only other opinions which can be safely criticized are those held by WASP HAMS — white, Anglo-Saxon, Protestant, heterosexual adult males.

Here in the Townships, it takes no more than a handful of Ku Klux Klan papers in rural mailboxes for thousands to rise in righteous indignation — although the Klan's entire membership here is little more than one twenty-year-old twit. When South Africa's ambassador to Canada was invited to speak at Bishop's University last year, there were howls of outrage, calls for demonstrations and boycotts of the kind that had successfully silenced him elsewhere. Those concerned with public morality believe we are all so delicately formed that any exposure to evil influences will result in our degradation.

The mind of the true PC, however, is so wonderfully free of all values and judgements that every idea can pass through without ever lingering long enough to harden into prejudice.

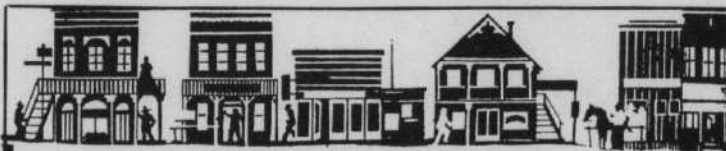

And woe betide anyone expressing an opinion.

Friendship Day: Promoting a sense of community

By Catherine Cheng

LENNOXVILLE — Magic shows, games, antique dealers, arts and crafts, horse-drawn wagons, various types of music and dance, a book sale, a fund-raising garage sale, a brunch, a zoo and about a thousand balloons will all beat to the rhythm of friendship in Lennoxville on Saturday, June 1.

Friendship Day is a compensation for the St-Jean Baptiste celebrations on June 25, says Lennoxville Town Councillor Muriel Brand.

For the second consecutive year, she is organizing this activity "to promote a sense of community."

Instead of spending $500 on a professionally-made 30 inches by 30 feet banner, she said she recruited three women to make one. In doing so, it not only reduced more than half the costs but it also gave an example of bi-cultural team work.

CELEBRATE LIFE

And that's exactly what Friendship Day is all about: blending French and English, the old and young from Lennoxville and the surrounding areas, to "celebrate the quality of life in Lennoxville," says Brand.

The majority of activities will be held in a tent at the corner of Hunting and Speid Streets, in Centennial Park and St. Antoine School area, in the library and in the old Provigo building.

To help orient the public, Boy Scouts will paint footsteps all over the town to direct people to the numerous activities.

To begin the day, a gigantic garage sale will be held at the fire hall starting at 8. The money collected will go towards the purchase of an emergency vehicle for the volunteer fire department.

From 8:30-10:30, the United Church will serve breakfast at the church for a small fee.

At the fire station, local ecologists will be on hand to inform the public on recyclable material since Lennoxville will begin its recycling program June 14.

From 10-4, antique dealers will display and sell various artworks at the old Provigo and Uplands Museum will be opened from noon to 3:30, free of charge.

The Eastern Townships Pipe Band will lead the second annual parade, which will begin at 11. Highland dancers, antique cars, floats, horses, clowns, and the Bishops College School Marching Band will also take part in the parade.

At the Lennoxville pool area, the Optimist Club, local Girl Guides, and parents on the Lennoxville Elementary School Committee will set up canteens. The Lennox-ville Wing of Sherbrooke Hospital Auxiliary will serve lunch at the Curling Club.

Tim Belford from CBC Radio's Quebec A.M. and Victor McQuade from Lennoxville will be Masters of ceremonies at the tent set up at the corner of Hunting and Speid streets from noon till 4.

Children will have the opportunity to ride on antique fire trucks and hay wagons. At Centennial Park, Bishops College students will entertain them with games and face-painting activities. In addition, The Eastern Townships Goat Association will allow children to pet goats, sheep, ducks and other animals.

Muriel Brand, who has been Town Councillor for the past two years, is in charge of the cultural aspects of the community, which includes overseeing Uplands Museum, the Lennoxville library, activities for seniors and youth and special events.

She said she recalls Town Manager Jacques Gagnon saying 'Lennoxville is the biggest small town in Quebec.'

Brand says Lennoxville is 70 per cent English, and is considered a bilingual town — so there's a reason to gather both the English and the French to celebrate Friendship Day together.

Entertainment in the tent (corner of Hunting and Speid Streets)

- 11:00-11:30 — Beauchemin family
- 11:30-12:00 — Parade Review
- 12:00-12:15 — Presentation of Dignitaries and release of new town brochure
- 12:15- 1:00 — Eastern Townships Pipe Band and Highland Dancers
- 1:00- 1:30 — Traditional French music, songs, and dances
- 1:30- 2:00 — Sherbrooke Snow Shoe Club Choir
- 2:00- 2:30 — Estrie Young Singers
- 2:30- — Old time music with fiddlers Eddie Cus-teau, Harold Nutbrown, Scott Lowd, accompanied by Alice and Billy Cameron.

Activities at the Lennoxville Library (theme: Teddy Bears Picnic)

- All day — Booksale
- 1:00- 1:20 — Block Parents in Care Bear Costumes explain program
- 1:30- 2:15 — French story hour with Aline Dumont
- 2:30- 3:15 — English story hour with Aline Rothfels
- 3:30- 4:00 — Magic Show with magician Brent Cairns

Children are encouraged to bring their own teddy bears and to participate in a coloring contest by picking up the pictures at the library.

The Eastern Township Highland Pipe Band will proudly lead the Friendship Day parade at 11 on Saturday.

Horses, clowns, and toys kept last year's audience amused on Friendship Day.

How many Tonys will Tommy Tune win?

By Michael Kuchwara

NEW YORK (AP) — Could Miss Saigon NOT win the best musical prize at the 1991 Tony Awards?

There is real competition between the highly publicized English musical and the American-made The Will Rogers Follies. And it's a horse race for best play, too, a battle between Neil Simon's Pulitzer Prize-winning Lost in Yonkers and Six Degrees of Separation by John Guare.

The results will be televised Sunday on CBS (9 p.m. EDT) during a two-hour special from the Minskoff Theatre. Julie Andrews and Jeremy Irons will serve as co-hosts for the evening.

Traditionally, the odds favor Miss Saigon, a lavish retelling of Puccini's opera Madama Butterfly, updated to the Vietnam War.

Those big musical bundles from Britain have never lost the best musical award, starting with Evita in 1980. Cats took the top prize in 1983. Les Miserables won in 1987, and The Phantom of the Opera picked up the honor the following season.

This year, it could be different. Despite some favorable reviews, including the all-important New York Times, and a $35-million advance sale, Miss Saigon has its vociferous opponents.

The Will Rogers Follies, a Ziegfeld-like extravaganza directed by Tommy Tune, didn't get all raves from the critics either. But the show, which has a score by Broadway veterans Cy Coleman, Betty Comden and Adolph Green, took best musical honors from the New York Drama Critics' Circle and the Drama Desk.

FAIRY TALE

Once on This Island, a Caribbean fairy tale, and The Secret Garden, an adaptation of the classic children's novel, are considered long shots for the best musical prize.

The Actors' Equity battle over British actor Jonathan Pryce and whether he should have been able to re-create his role of the Eurasian pimp on Broadway also could hurt Miss Saigon.

Pryce might be edged out by Keith Carradine who plays the famed Oklahoma humorist and lariat-twirler in The Will Rogers Follies.

Other nominees are Topol, who played Tevye in a revival of Fiddler on the Roof and Paul Hipp, chosen for his portrayal of rock 'n' roll legend Buddy Holly in the recently closed Buddy.

A close contest also looms between Six Degrees of Separation, which opened last June in the small Mitzi Newhouse Theatre at Lincoln Centre, and Simon's Lost in Yonkers.

The Guare play about a con man who dupes several wealthy New Yorkers received the best reviews of any new production last season. It transferred in November to the Broadway-sized larger Vivian Beaumont Theatre in the Lincoln Centre, a move which also made it eligible for Tony consideration.

Lost in Yonkers was a surprise winner this year of the Pulitzer Prize, Simon's first, and also captured the Drama Desk nod for best play. The New York Drama Critics' Circle gave their best play prize to Six Degrees.

CLOSES SHOW

The other nominees are Timberlake Wertenbaker's Our Country's Good, about a group of convicts in Australia who put on a play, and Shadowlands, a drama about writer C.S. Lewis, which closed in April. Both have little chance of winning.

The other category with spirited competition is best actress, with Mercedes Ruehl of Lost in Yonkers going against Stockard Channing of Six Degrees of Separation.

Ruehl, who won raves for her portrayal of an endearing, simple-minded aunt in the Simon play, might just edge out Channing, who plays a gullible East Side matron in Six Degrees.

Their competition includes Julie Harris, who was Danish writer Isak Dinesen in the short-lived Lucifer's Child, and the little-known Cherry Jones, a tough female convict in Our Country's Good.

None of the nominees for best actor in a play — Peter Frechette, Nigel Hawthorne, Tom McGowan and Courtney B. Vance — is a household name, particularly beyond Shubert Alley.

It boils down to a battle between Hawthorne, who played C.S. Lewis in Shadowlands, and Vance, the con artist of Six Degrees of Separation.

There's no contest for the best actress in a musical.

Lea Salonga will triumph for her performance as Kim, the bar girl in Miss Saigon.

SHOWS ABILITY

Her competition: June Angela of Shogun, The Musical; Dee Hoty, The Will Rogers Follies; and gymnast-turned-actress Cathy Rigby for her athletic performance in a revival of Peter Pan.

Another question to be answered Sunday night is: How many Tonys will Tommy Tune win?

The director and choreographer already has collected seven Tonys during his career, including two last June for Grand Hotel. This season, he was nominated as director and as choreographer of The Will Rogers Follies and should add at least one more to his impressive total.

This year's nominations produced surprisingly little controversy among theatre professionals. There are no obvious duds in the best musical competition.

In the past, nominating committees have had to scrape up such now little-known shows as The Lieutenant, Blues in the Night, Leader of the Pack and Quilters to fill the category.

In the acting sweepstakes, only the omission of Nicol Williamson, who plays the ghost of John Barrymore in I Hate Hamlet, raised some eyebrows. But the Tony nominating committee may have been swayed by Williamson's extra-theatrical flourishes.

His antics included leaving the stage when he didn't have lines to say and swatting the young leading man with his sword, an action which caused the actor to walk out of the show.

The winners are picked by 624 members of the theatrical profession and journalists.

The Tonys, first given in 1947, are presented by the League of American Theatres and Producers and the American Theatre Wing. They were named after Antoinette Perry, an actress, director, producer and head of the Theatre Wing.

'Screen goddess' would've been 65

By Michael Miller

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Marilyn Monroe would have been 65 on Saturday, but the occasion has gone practically unnoticed in the town that made her a screen goddess and, ultimately, a tragic figure who took her own life.

As far as Hollywood is concerned, even the legend is dying.

Apart from a Marilyn look-alike contest Wednesday, which attracted only six entrants who were judged by Tony Curtis, Monroe's co-star in the movie Some Like It Hot, the event will pass without any of the traditional ballyhoo that used to mark anniversaries of her birthday or death.

Even her pink marble tomb at the Westwood Memorial Park in Los Angeles, once a shrine to Marilyn worshippers, is now viewed by only a trickle of curious tourists.

"We don't get many visitors to the crypt nowadays, and it isn't mentioned in the tourist books and brochures any more," said a spokesman for the park. "We are not planning anything special for Saturday and I doubt if we'll get any more visitors than usual."

Not a single movie theatre in the Los Angeles area is showing an old Monroe film to mark the occasion, in stark contrast to the 10th, 15th, 20th and 25th anniversaries of her death on Aug. 5, 1962, which Hollywood used as an excuse to rerelease her best known movies such as Some Like It Hot, Gentlemen Prefer Blondes, and How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying.

CLUB STILL ACTIVE

One group that will be celebrating is the 40-member Marilyn Remembered organization, which claims to be the only active Marilyn Monroe fan club.

Its president, piano teacher Greg Shriner, planned to invite the 40 members of the group, plus some Marilyn look-alikes—even a man who impersonates her in drag—to a party at his house.

"But apart from our celebration, and Wednesday's look-alike contest, I don't know of anything else that's happening to celebrate Marilyn's birthday.

"It's a pity because I think Hollywood is ignoring one of its most important stars. People as individuals still remember her, but the movie industry I think has chosen to ignore her.

"This would have been a great opportunity for Hollywood to have honored a lady who graced the screen during its glory days. The fact that it has chosen not to speak for itself," said Shriner.

In addition to being president of Monroe's fan club, Shriner, 43, also claims to have one of the largest collections of Monroe memorabilia, including several of her gowns.

At Wednesday's contest, held at Mann's Chinese Theatre, a Hollywood landmark where Monroe followed an old movietown tradition by placing her delicate footprints in wet cement, Curtis paid tribute to his former co-star, saying, "Marilyn proved that you can make a dream come true.

"She was an inspiration to hundreds of young aspiring actors and actresses who said, 'If she can make it, I can too.'"

Jimmy and Dave share similarities and differences

By Catherine Cheng

ASCOT, SHERBROOKE — Jimmy and Dave Moore share more than just a father-son relationship — their love of the bagpipe has drawn them even closer together.

They've been playing in the Eastern Townships Highland Pipe Band for the past 27 years.

"You always establish a strong bond with your instructor. And all the time we spent together traveling and talking together without the presence of a mother or sisters got us closer," Dave explains.

And father-son combinations in the Highland Band are not uncommon, 66-year-old Jimmy says.

"During all the years I played the pipeband, there have been about four other father-son teams within the band."

UNIQUE BAND

Of the 13 active members — six pipers and seven drummers — one is a woman, two are in Ontario, the youngest is 16, and Jimmy is the oldest. One passive member is in New Brunswick.

Dave, who has been pipe major since 1987, is responsible for teaching his band, choosing the tunes and scheduling public appearances.

Last year, the band played about six times — in Vermont, New Hampshire and in the Estrie region. It will play in Lennoxville's Friendship Day Parade this Saturday.

HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

The first bagpipe band in Sherbrooke was formed by the Royal Canadian Legion. The band was mainly made up of veterans from the World War II. When they disbanded, some members organized another band for the Army/Navy Association in Magog. Some time after, they too disbanded.

In 1957, the Royal Canadian Electrical Mechanical Engineers, Sherbrooke's militia unit, offered the band a place to practice. A friend of Jimmy's invited him to join.

In 1965, the band became "civilian" and no longer depended on anyone for sponsorships. It became known as the Eastern Townships Highland Band. Since then, it has had an unofficial tie with the Army/Navy in Lennoxville.

PURE ENJOYMENT

Both Jimmy and Dave were born and raised in Sherbrooke but have a mix of French Canadian, Dutch, English, Irish, and Scottish blood. They have been playing the bagpipes for "pure enjoyment" and to "promote the Scottish heritage," says Dave.

Dave was eight years old when he first performed in public.

"It was totally unexpected but I wasn't nervous, although I did play a solo."

Jimmy had spontaneously decided to bring Dave to an annual "Gathering of the Clans" that year and surprised him by asking him to play before the crowd. The hardest part was finding a kilt that could fit him, Dave recalls with a grin. "I think I wore a girl's kilt."

He's been going strong ever since.

DIFFERENT ATTITUDES

Although both father and son find personal enjoyment in playing the pipes, they have different attitudes.

Jimmy has a rather relaxed attitude. He gets satisfaction from teaching others to play.

"What I like to do is to take a young person and teach him to play, seeing him stick to it and progress," he says.

Dave, on the other hand, has a more competitive attitude. "The younger generation tends to strive harder and higher. I want to put our name back on the map.

"I found with this group that if I don't set high goals, I won't get an acceptable goal. In theory, you should be able to assemble any amount of pipers and sound like one."

He says his band often reaches that goal.

"I have a great group of guys and girls who have the interest and skill required to want to sound as a team."

In 1989, Dave got his group to participate in the North American Championships in Maxville, Ontario, where 56 bands, totalling 1,200 pipers and drummers, gathered to compete. They didn't win, but it was only a beginning.

"When we're ready, we'll compete again seriously... By getting my group up to these events, they can set their goals accordingly," he says.

RECORD PHOTOS/GRANT SIMEON

Dave Moore was eight when he began playing the pipes. "You either love pipes or you hate them," he says.

His current goals are to play better tunes, play more often as a team, and play more in public.

But mostly he wants to have a great time.

"Any piper enjoys playing, so if he gets a chance to play in front of a lot of people, he'll have a great time, and if the crowd is enjoying it, then it'll increase our enjoyment as well."

In terms of challenge, Jimmy and Dave agree that it lies mainly in "keeping everyone together, in refining everything much clearer, and in memorizing the pieces."

The tunes range from marches to jigs, reels, strathspey, slow airs, and laments.

THRILLS

Jimmy's most thrilling moment was when they played with a brass band from Montreal's Black Watch Regiment to a crowd of 1,500.

David's was most excited when they opened for a Rod Stewart concert in Quebec City during the spring of 1989 — before a crowd of 14,000. It was "quite a thrill," he says.

KEEPING THE TRADITION GOING

Jimmy, a retired switchboard installer for Bell Canada, relaxes at his cottage and dances modern square-dancing. He and his wife have belonged to two dancing clubs for the past 10 years, the Tartan Twirlers and the North Country Swingers, and dance regularly for the public.

Of his six children, only one did not get involved with the Highland Band. Christine teaches the Highland dancers and is teaching her oldest daughter to dance.

Dave's 12-year-old daughter has been dancing with the Highland dancers for the past three years and is also learning to play the pipes. His other girl doesn't show any interest in pipes or dance, but 7-year-old Ryan does.

"It's sad that we don't have more recruiting. There are many people of Scottish descent but kids have so much going for them: sports, television, social activities..." Jimmy says. He says that if they find enough young members, he'll retire.

Jimmy Moore, after having played for 35 years in the Band, says he'll retire when they find enough young members.

Watching people resolve their lives New Canadian movie wins kudos among film critics

By LuAnn LaSalle
WINNIPEG (CP) — It's like being the only round peg on a board full of square holes. Shereen Jerrett is a member of the Winnipeg film group — where the strange and bizarre are taken for granted. Guy Maddin's Tales From the Gimli Hospital, the moody story of two men who share a hospital room during a smallpox epidemic, has become a cult classic.

Maddin has been called Canada's answer to David Lynch, acknowledged master of the weird and creator of the dark and strange Twin Peaks.

We're Talking Vulva by Tracey Traegar, a racy rock video celebrating female sexuality, and Lorne Bailey's The Milkman Cometh, about a man mesmerized by a milk can, have helped cement the film group's image as the home of the strange.

Meet Jerrett, 27, who has made a documentary on women riders appropriately called Horsewomen, and another called Taking a Walk With Dad, about her father.

"I've sure got a lot of teasing about Horsewomen but I feel completely comfortable about my right to do it," says Jerrett, a rider herself.

"Yeah, it is kind of tough sometimes when everybody's thinking you're one of those wacky Winnipeg guys. But I just figure my films will stand on their own."

FOLLOWS WOMEN

Horsewomen, a 55-minute color film, will be shown at the Toronto film festival this fall. It follows seven women from Manitoba, including a polo player, a cattle roper and a jockey.

"It's not my little ponies. It's not romantic," she said in an interview. "It's unusual for a documentary but very emotional."

Jerrett, a member of the film group since she was a high school student, is highly regarded among the 50 or so film-makers in the cooperative.

Her work is among 12 new films released this month by the group.

Despite her straightforward documentaries, Jerrett says she's just as off-the-wall as anyone in the film group.

"I've certainly gone head-to-head with Guy Maddin at parties," she said. "I like to think I'm weird and wacky because I'm not doing anything that anybody else is."

Jerrett's passion is making films about relationships.

"To me it can be a very funny, very beautiful, a very touching sort of thing, watching how people try to resolve their lives and their relationships."

Taking a Walk With Dad is just that.

RECUT FILM

Jerrett recut black and white home movie footage taken by her grandfather Ernest.

It chronicles her father's life from a toddler during the Depression until he was a young man. Her father narrates the film, describing his relationship with his dad.

"You have to resolve your family and where you come from. He has done that and it's not weighing heavily on his soul," said Jerrett, who made her first film six years ago, called The Waltz.

She hopes her work will give people a different perspective on the film group.

"I guess, in a way, this is like a new wave for the film group."

But being a member means you can make anything you want, she said.

Ian McBain, the group's director of marketing, said this crop of films is pretty normal compared with past films.

"This group of films is not weird and wacky. There's something for everybody," McBain said.

Other films include Gerry Turchyn's El Campo, a documentary about a Nicaraguan farming cooperative, and Paula Kelly's Sankes and Ladders, a woman at a job interview.

TORONTO (CP) — A gentle Canadian film about seven elderly women and their young female bus driver stranded in the Quebec countryside has won kudos among film critics in New York and London.

The Company of Strangers opened this month to mostly enthusiastic reviews in both cities, with critics lavishing special praise on the cast of seniors acting for the first time.

Director Cynthia Scott, who won a 1983 Academy Award for her documentary Flamenco at 5:15, also won applause for her graceful handling of the actors in the National Film Board production.

"One of the most exhilarating movies ever made about people who've grown old but remain ageless inside," wrote Joseph Gelmis of New York Newsday.

"The genius of this elegantly simple group portrait of eight women is its transparency: their spirits shine through the dross of old age, and we are fleetingly, but profoundly, astonished by their beauty."

The film meshes the real-life experiences of its elderly stars with a fictional plot in which they are stranded at a deserted farmhouse when their bus breaks down. For much of the movie, they simply talk about themselves.

TITLE CHANGED

The movie's title was changed in the United States to Strangers in Good Company to avoid confusion with the recently released The Comfort of Strangers.

Everywhere else, the film retains its original title.

In London, Geoff Brown of The Times wrote the film "brings quiet joy into a noisy world," while The Observer's critic said "this truthful, affecting, unsentimental movie tells us as much as any film I know about the female experience in this century."

The New York Times said the movie "feels less like a drama than a vacation, and an outstandingly tranquil vacation at that."

Gene Shalit of NBC's Today called it "sensitive, tender, funny and uplifting." He also described Scott's feature debut as "this year's most unconventional film."

Since its premiere at the 1990 Venice film festival, The Company of Strangers has won awards at festivals in Germany and France, plus the attention of audiences during its Canadian theatrical run.

It now is available on home video in Canada.

Entertainment Shorts

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Stevie Wonder says Spike Lee's new movie about an interracial love affair inspired him to record the soundtrack, his first album in four years.

The blind singer has friends describe non-speaking sequences in films. He liked Jungle Fever and produced 11 songs.

"In fact, when I saw (it), I thought it worked so well that I told (Lee), 'You don't need any music for the film; just leave it the way it is,'" Wonder said in an interview published Sunday in the Los Angeles Times.

Much of the music addresses race relations and social conditions that Wonder said haven't improved significantly since he wrote You Ain't Done Nothin' and Higher Ground in the 1970s.

"It's kind of like things have changed, but you look around and there is still so much to be done," he said. "I'm still optimistic, but I feel that something drastic is going to happen before people understand the need to change."

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Sharon Farrell said she and her fellow actors are "just bozos on the same bus."

Farrell, who portrays the vodka-guzzling, part-time hooker Flo on TV soap The Young and the Restless, said she doesn't see why actors get uptight about which roles to do.

"Actors can get highfalutin about what they will and will not do and most are just sitting at home waiting for the phone to ring," she said in an interview in this week's TV Guide.

"What's the big deal? We're all just bozos on the same bus." She's had a bumpy ride.

Farrell's career was in good shape when she appeared opposite Steve McQueen in the movie The Reivers, but shortly after that, while seven months pregnant, her lung collapsed and she nearly died.

She and the baby survived, but her memory was affected. Farrell ran into Andrew Prine at a party and forgot she had been married to him once for two weeks.

Farrell said she went to a psychiatrist, who told her to "just get on with your life."

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Burt Reynolds says he has a personal feel for the characters of Eleemosynary, the play he's directing at the Flat Rock Playhouse.

Rehearsals began Tuesday and the production opens June 4.

Eleemosynary is about communication and three generations of women, Reynolds said. The title is from a Latin word meaning "of, relating to, or supported by charity," he said.

"I certainly identify with the people in the play," said Reynolds.

Murray fan diagnosed with "erotic paranoia"

By Alan Cochrane
Moncton Times-Transcript

TORONTO (CP) — After more than 20 years of singing, performing and travelling, Anne Murray is the first to admit she's led a very sunny life.

But there is one black cloud that seems to return every once in a while.

The cloud began to form early in her career when Robert Charles Kieling, a farmer from Blumenhof, Sask., became one of Murray's biggest fans. His obsession grew as he travelled to shows to see her sing and apparently decided that she was secretly in love with him.

Murray says she hasn't seen Kieling for more than 14 years and still doesn't understand his actions or the motivation behind them.

"We always tried to get him the help he needed," Murray said in a telephone interview.

Kieling's lawyer recently filed an appeal to a Saskatchewan court ruling that had deemed him unfit to stand trial for breach of probation and court orders to stay away from the singer.

Kieling, 54, who has been diagnosed as having "erotic paranoia," apparently believes Murray is in love with him and had followed her for several years.

"I guess he had an obsession," Murray said this week. "And he became blinded by it."

CHARGED STAGE

Murray said Kieling's infatuation with her began about 20 years ago and grew to a point where he had to be restrained. There were times when Kieling would actually charge the stage.

"There were times when I'd be singing on stage and he'd come to the shows and grab me from the audience," Murray said. She said she wasn't really afraid of Kieling, but often wondered if he could actually be a threat or what he might be capable of doing.

During a trial at Swift Current provincial court last March, Judge Bruce Henning suspended the proceedings after questioning Kieling's ability to conduct his own defence and understand the issues.

Charges against the farmer will not be dealt with until a court rules Kieling is mentally fit to stand trial. Until then, he will remain in custody at the Saskatoon regional psychiatric centre.

Meanwhile, Murray says her life as a singer and mother would be just fine if it wasn't for those darn seagulls.

"I think seagulls are taking over the world," she laughed. "They're everywhere. You even see them in the desert sometimes."

Murray's greatest problems with the giant white birds seem to come whenever she visits California.

"I was in this hotel in California and there were sliding doors. I had left my dinner on the table and went out for a minute. When I came back, there was the biggest friggin' seagull you've ever seen, in my room eating everything in sight."

Another time, she was playing golf and a seagull swooped down and stole her camera from the golf cart. "So there I was chasing this friggin' seagull around the golf course trying to get my camera back."

After a battle with other birds, she explains, the camera was dropped and retrieved.

FINISHED ALBUM

Besides the occasional seagull silliness, Murray's life and career seem to be rolling along just fine these days. She's just finished recording a new album which has yet to be titled; her memorabilia museum in Springhill is doing well; her two children are showing musical aptitude and she's getting ready for a tour that will take her through Atlantic Canada, Ontario and various parts of the United States between June and December.

Murray's life and career seem to be just fine these days. Her new album will soon be released.

Many buildings are crumbling in Old Madrid

By Robert Hart

MADRID (Reuters)—The rooftop red tiles and the white facades of old Madrid make a pretty picture, but many of the buildings are crumbling.

In a recent period of 15 days, seven buildings had to be evacuated because they were in imminent danger of falling down, although all were saved and none was officially declared a ruin.

The job of shoring up crumbling edifices falls to the Defective Buildings Service of the Madrid city government, which is currently following up reported problems at a rate of some 600 a month.

"This can rise to about 800 a month in rainy periods," said Fernando Macias Hidalgo, head of the service.

However, he took issue with a statement by deputy mayor Jose Maria Alvarez de Manzano that the centre of Madrid is "like a house of cards."

"There is no crisis," Macias said.

Many of the centuries-old buildings in central Madrid are supported by wooden beams and pillars.

NEED CARE

"Buildings are like living bodies," said Macias. "They have to be cared for. Rain softens them and can cause them to rot. Long periods of dry weather can make them crack or split. Some old buildings survive all this, some don't."

Macias said people must be persuaded their houses are their most valuable asset and must be maintained.

"They take a car in for service but somehow don't seem to give the same attention to their houses," he said.

The Defective Buildings Service has six architects and 20 surveyors working shifts covering 24 hours a day, seven days a week, with two building firms contracted to do repair work.

Spain's economic boom of recent years and Madrid's meteoric rise as a high-flying business centre have perversely helped to undermine its old centre, literally.

Underground construction projects to provide roads, rail links, parking lots and other facilities have caused subterranean waterways to change course and as a result radically alter the composition of the sub-soil.

A jump in property prices has also had its impact.

RENTS LOW

Many buildings on prime sites in the old city centre are occupied by long-term tenants whose rent agreements were fixed decades ago at very low levels.

Property companies who now own the structures would like to find an excuse to pull down a dilapidated building and exploit the valuable land on which it stands.

"Because of long-frozen rents on what are now priceless properties there is no interest in investment to save old buildings," Macias said.

Some parts of the old city centre are listed as having historical or artistic value and are thus protected and cared for by the city government.

But because Madrid is a relatively new and essentially artificial capital, it has no traditional architectural culture like Rome, Paris or London.

King Philip II moved his court to Madrid from Toledo in 1561 to be close to his favorite project — building the giant monastery of El Escorial.

In fact, Madrid has never officially been named Spain's capital. It still clings proudly to the title of "villa" — originally a small, fortified town — and has not formally graduated to the status of a city.

A beautiful site, but....

Touring by bicycle: a great way to see Canada

By Felicity Munn

CP Travel Writer

Got two months off this summer? Want to see Canada from coast to coast?

Feel fit?

Boy, have we got a trip for you.

A 7,275-kilometre, nine-week journey from Stanley Park in Vancouver to St. John's in Newfoundland.

By bicycle.

The cross-country odyssey is offered every summer by Tour du Canada, a non-profit club created to organize the cycling-camping trip.

It was the brainchild of Bud Jorgensen, a Globe columnist at the Toronto Globe and Mail and long-time cyclist.

In 1988, Jorgensen decided to cycle across Canada with his wife and daughter. He soon realized the most sensible approach was to include other people to share costs and hire a driver and truck to carry all the gear.

This year's tour begins June 29 in Vancouver and wraps up on the Saturday of Labor Day weekend in St. John's.

The charge per cyclist is $1,600, which covers just about everything — tenting fees, food, truck and driver.

START PEDALLING

Jorgensen says anyone of average physical fitness can do the trip.

Still, participants are told to log at least 2,000 kilometres by bicycle between late winter and the start of the trip.

The average distance covered daily works out to about 130 kilometres, which Jorgensen says translates into five to six hours of cycling. As much as possible, the itinerary follows less-travelled roads.

There are about 10 rest days during the nine weeks.

"You need a mental discipline more than you need physical fitness, because if you have the mental discipline the physical fitness will take care of itself," Jorgensen says.

"If you get out and log the 2,000 kilometres, you'll be in good shape."

Jorgensen recommends a touring bike — preferably with 18 speeds — rather than a mountain bike which has heavier tires and is not designed for long distances.

ONE DROPPED OUT

Graham Rose, 57, did the trip in 1989.

"It's not impossible for the average cyclist, provided they develop a reasonable level of fitness," says Rose, a marketing executive at General Electric in Peterborough, Ont.

"We had a group of 16 and all but one made it quite comfortably. And this with an age span from 22 to 65."

Margo Csemiczky, a manufacturing assistant at a Toronto-area textile mill, was the trip leader on the 1989 tour.

She says the man who dropped out a few weeks into the trip had signed on only a couple of weeks before the trip began. She thinks he had not been mentally and physically prepared.

"You have to put in a lot of kilometres beforehand," says Csemiczky, 35, now a club director. "You have to be fit."

SPEED NOT SET

Riders pedal at their own speed during the trip. Jorgensen, 51, says the cyclists usually break down into three groups — basically fast, medium and slow.

"You'll find you ride with some people almost every day and there will be others you'll only see at the camp."

As a no-frills tour, accommodation is mainly at campgrounds. Occasionally, usually during rest days, the group stays in youth hostels or in campus dorms.

The trip is very much a cooperative effort. Even before it begins, participants may be asked to help with details.

A group leader, a treasurer to handle the money and a chief mechanic are identified ahead of time from among the people who have signed up. Serving in those capacities is voluntary.

The truck driver, usually a student, is the fourth key position. Cooking duties are shared by all on a rotation system.

WIDE AGE GROUP

Last year, 14 people made the journey. Ages have ranged from 18 to 66 — the latter a Vancouver man who retired one day and set off on the Tour du Canada the next.

Florence Leatham, a nurse in Walkerton, Ont., did the trip with husband Don, a teacher, in 1988, when they were both 49.

"There were some tough days," she recalls. "But it's kind of fun because everybody gets together and complains a bit and everybody knows what you're talking about."

"There's a lot of good things too. You see everything and hear everything and smell everything."

"It's a great way to see the country and it gave us a good idea of what areas we wanted to go back and see more carefully."

SHORTS

More than a race It began as a race back in 1978 — with a 2.4-mile swim, a 112-mile bike ride and a 26.2-mile run — and immediately became a new sport: the Ironman Triathlon, held every October in Hawaii. Honolulu cab driver Gordon Haller won the first race in 11 hours, 46 minutes. Versatile venue The National Archives, located on Constitution Avenue, N.W., in Washington, D.C., are a combination repository, working research center and museum. The Declaration of Independence, Constitution and Bill of Rights are on public display, along with other historic documents.	Affairs of the heart According to the American Heart Association, the estimated cost of cardiovascular diseases in 1991 will be $101.2 billion; hospital and nursing-home services, $64.7 billion; lost output due to disability, $16.2 billion; physician and nursing services, $14.9 billion; and medications, $5.4 billion. These estimates are an extrapolation from "Health Care Expenditures for Major Diseases in 1980," Health Care Financing Review. In The Commonwealth of the Baha- mas, school is compulsory through age 14.

Who selects Saturday night movies?

Q. Who selects movies shown on TV — in particular, on Saturday night? How about some of the old goodies? We don't all have VCRs. — J., Levittown, Pa.

A. There are two types of movie programs — the network telecasts (chosen by network executives) and the telecasts on your local independent stations (chosen by the programming directors of those stations). There's not much you can do about the network telecasts, but you can possibly influence your local stations by writing to them.

Q. What can you tell me about the super anchor — intelligent, adorable, charming Peter Jennings? I think he is by far the best newscaster we have ever had. — G.D., Little Rock, Ark.

A. Intelligent, adorable, etc. Peter Jennings is a Canadian, who joined ABC after working for the Canadian Broadcasting Co. Before becoming an anchorman, he was ABC's correspondent in Lebanon for seven years (during which time he married a Lebanese woman, although that ended some time later) and has had many other assignments for the network. He and his present wife, author Kati Marton, have two children.

Q. After completing the "Gomer Pyle" series, did Jim Nabors and Frank Sutton ever star in another show together where they played brothers-in-law? — M.B.P., Morgantown, W.Va.

A. Nabors hosted a variety program, "The Jim Nabors Hour," in '69 and '71 that included a regular segment called "The Brothers-In-Law," with Jim and Frank Sutton involved. Karen Morrow played Frank's wife and Jim's sister.

Q. Is the theme to "thirtysomething" available in record stores? — B.R., Racine, Wis.

A. Not at the present time.
Q. Please explain why Peter Horton, who plays Gary on "thirtysomething," left the show. Will we be seeing him in another show or maybe a movie? — J.O., Erie, Pa.

A. Horton's ambition has long been to direct, and he decided to give that profession a shot. At the present time, he has no plans to resume acting.

Q. Do you know if they are ever going to put out the complete episodes of the miniseries "North and South" on videotape for people to rent or buy? — F.S., Chicago

A. ABC tells me that, as of now, they have no plans to do so. That could, of course, change in the future, but don't look for them in stores presently.
