

TRACING A MURDERER.

A man standing one day, with a kind of unoccupied air, a few steps from the door of the telegraph office, on 2nd street, St. James's. What was remarkable about him was that there was nothing remarkable about him at all—no peculiar appearance, no ordinary size, no ordinary complexion, with an ordinary face, and especially an ordinary eye. He stood with his hands in his pockets, and he had not taken the trouble to pull them out; and he seemed to be neither thinking of, caring about, nor looking at anything.

They were referred to. They varied but a few minutes. "Let me see," said the miner, who had a general view of the case—"let me see. Why, of course, you'll lose, stranger. 'Twasn't me!" "You're a good fellow," said the other, "and he took his time getting dinner ready—which was at 12."

Public Opinion.

The services were of a most solemn and impressive character, and for the first time in Canada the Metropolitan was witnessed. The Order was also the first to be held by the chief Bishop of our Canadian Church, and he will be long remembered as the first to have presided over the services, and to have taken the lead in the chanting of the psalms and the reading of the Gospels.

The Volunteers.

Sir,—I quite agree with you—the great evil of the Volunteer System is the money given to the Captains of Companies and the Lieut-Colonels of Battalions for doing nothing. I know of one or two cases, like the one you mentioned, where the arms are kept in a nursery, and I know, too, that some Colonels do not write a dozen letters in the year, and yet are allowed $3 per Company for stationery! But I hope we are on the eve of a change.

The Firemen's Gathering.

Sir,—I was greatly pleased, a short time since, while reading a paragraph in The Star, to learn that our gallant firemen had lost none of their old-time energy and enthusiasm, and intended this year treating the citizens to a round of sports and games surpassing those of former years.

The Royal Canadian Academy of Arts.

The Editor of The Star: Sir,—When the late Mr. Tolly occupied the editorial chair of The Star, scarcely a week passed without his calling attention to the urgent need for the establishment of a public gallery of Paintings among us, where our citizens could pass a pleasant hour and gratify their taste by the contemplation of works of art.

Summer Resorts.

ST. JAMES HOTEL, THREE RIVERS. This old well established and popular Hotel is without question the best in the city. Under the management of Messrs. Riendeau & Co., the Hotel has been completely renovated and furnished in the most modern style.

Bay View House.

Ferry Beach, NEAR OLD ORCHARD. Read What is Said: BY MRS. H. R. STOKW. (REV. M. J. BAYARD). The Bay View is the most beautiful and desirable house in the city. It is situated on a beautiful peninsula, and is surrounded by a park of the most charming scenery.

Another Soldier of Fortune.

Quebecers will remember him. Sir,—As a number of people appeared interested in the simple story of the life of Henry Melver, I ask a little more of your space to give what I know of the history of another, but far less remarkable, soldier of fortune who lived in the same period.

Dr. O'Donovan.

The name of the Daily News correspondent in prison at Merv is Dr. O'Donovan. I read this in an exchange the other day and it struck me as a name which I had heard of in Canada who knew "Dr. O'Donovan," yet a few words about his career may not be without interest.

What Habit Can Do.

Sir,—On Thursday, I was coming down Bleury street, and I saw one of the horses car of the track. There were four horses attached, and they pulled the car with a great deal of noise.

Adaptation of Food.

Sir,—You have from time to time written a good deal about the adulteration of food. But after all our inspection of food is not good. The States of New York, however, show us the road to travel if we wish to have the adulterated article.

French Cooking.

When the English desire their food with highly spiced sauces and hot pickle juices, in order to give it a taste which is not only palatable, but also healthy, they use delicate vegetable essences and savory herbs.

Answers to Correspondents. L. W.—The fare from Montreal to Belleville is $2.50.

J. H. G.—Where can I get dynamite cartridges for blasting out stumps? Ans. Apply to Hamilton Explosive Co., 100 St. James street.

J. B. M.—Please give the full address of one good reliable printer in Montreal. Ans. L. A. Gagnon & Co., 100 St. James street.

D.—Please give me the name of some house in Dublin, Ireland, where they have Irish quills such as are used in making pens. Ans. W. Do not know of any.

W. K.—Please give the address of some responsible person in Montreal, as I have about a ton and a half of hand saws for sale.

E. F.—Is there any person who stores furniture and would receive on consignment a quantity of one lot? Ans. We know of no person who makes a specialty of storing furniture. You had better advertise.

Operator.—To whom should I apply for a situation on the Grand Pacific Railway? With the same likely to be an opening on the road for station agent? Ans.—If you can get a good recommendation to A. B. Stikney, Winnipeg.

W. P.—Can you give me the address of one or two reliable firms in Montreal, who do the painting and other work in Montreal? Ans. H. A. Nelson & Son, E. B. Edy & Co., Hull, P. Q., and the Montreal Paint Co.

H. B.—I saw in your issue of July 4th an account of a Toronto Jew hoping to head a colony of Jews to the North West. I am a Jew and I am proud to see that you have written on both sides of the paper. Newspapers cannot on both sides of a question. Write on both sides, and the merit of your communication does not rest on having it copied.

think there is a good deal to recommend the European custom, and there is a good deal to condemn in our own. The one is the civilized custom, the other is a half savage one.

THE Conservative papers are poking fun at Mr. Huntington. The Mail calls him "Mr. Blak's ape," and the Herald "Lucius Smith" in a way which is painfully suggestive of political anger rather than argument. But it would be interesting to know if Mr. Huntington's eloquence was engaged on the Conservative, instead of the Reform, side; if the Conservative papers would not cackle so much over the "new story," or try to bring ridicule on a man of whom impartial testimony speaks as an orator far above the average. It would be just as well for our contemporary to remember that when it is putting a pin into a ruff, it is not driving a spike.

Bad cigarettes are made of stumps of cigars that are found in the streets, while valerian and tincture of opium are used to a large extent in their manufacture. They are doctored with all sorts of refuse. In Canada, we believe that cigarette making is on the increase, and it is just as well for the smokers to know that bad cigarettes are even worse than bad tobacco. The bad cigarette is generally rolled up in cotton paper and that is manufactured from filthy scrapings, rag pickings and like abominations. It is the lime, used in bleaching this stuff, that causes the injury to the throat and nose, of which confirmed cigarette smokers so often complain. Rice paper is the best for cigarettes, but rice paper is expensive, and in order to get cigarettes rolled in it, a good price must be paid. As cigarettes are the first things, in the way of smoking, at which our boys try their "pretence hand," it is just as well for them to know that the stuff they take for tobacco may be the offal of the gutter, and the "paper" they put into their mouths may be from the soil pipe or the ash heap. It is not a pleasant reflection for the smoker. For the boy, beginner it must be particularly repulsive, but people only half realize these things after all.

WE are promised a new health by-law in Montreal. The promise does not come too soon; the only question now is will it be far-reaching enough? Will it provide for infectious diseases, fuming of householders who willfully neglect to repair defective drainage, the regular cleaning of the streets, the ventilation of sewers, the cleaning of the "alms," the collecting of the tin cans, the filtering of the water we drink, the building of free public bath houses, and in fact the thorough overhauling of the sanitary condition of the city? If it does this, it will be well. No doubt, the New Health By-law cannot enforce all the provisions we have mentioned, because they are not all law, but there is a demand that every one of the reforms we have quoted should be law, and if they were the NEW HEALTH BY-LAW would be hailed with satisfaction if it was empowered. There are few towns on the continent more favorably situated for draining than Montreal, and yet with all our By-Laws and all our resolutions we are by no means as well off, in sanitary matters, as we should be. Offensive smells offend the sense in most of our back thoroughfares; our work people have no bath-houses; our water is impure; our regulations for fighting infectious diseases are not perfect, although they have improved, and altogether there is plenty of room for serious work.

Fifty persons have been drowned in the Dominion since the fourteenth of last month. We take this item of news from a contemporary. But side by side with this somewhat startling statement we may place an incident which is too suggestive to be overlooked. The Ontario "Pioneer" tells us that "Miss Cornelia Bradley" went to bathe at a place called "Accommodate Court House." She could not swim, and suddenly she found herself out of her depth and carried away by the current. Her companions gave her up for lost. Two young men, however, took a boat to search for her, and sailed out on the ocean. It was a wild chance, but yet they tried. Half-mile and then a mile from land they pulled away, and in the distance they saw what they took to be the dead body of Cornelia Bradley. But they were mistaken. Miss Bradley had learned the art of floating although she could not swim, and thus she saved her life by simply resting on the water, inhaling the air and extending her arms. No doubt it required presence of mind to do all this, but practice begets confidence and if the fifty persons who were drowned in the Dominion since the fourteenth of last month had learned the art of floating there can be little doubt but most of them would have been saved. The art of floating is, in some cases, even more valuable than the art of swimming. Some swimmers do not know how to float, and swimming tires and exhausts. In the case of Miss Bradley if she had known how to swim but not how to float she would probably have been lost. The lesson is not without its moral.

THE Conservative papers say that Mr. Blak's "failed" at St. John; and the Reform papers say that he had a "magnificent" success. The Conservative papers say that there were about "1,500" people present; and the Reform papers say there were between 4,000 and 5,000. The Conservative papers say that the audience did not "enthusiasm"; the Reform papers say that special precautions had to be taken to decelerate the "hurricane of applause."

THE deadlock at Albany is ended by the election of Mr. Lapham, an Administration Republican. The White Eagle of Utica is plucked clean.

THE party papers are trying to find out which side is responsible for our lack of immigration this far. It were more sensible if they continued to promote immigration in the future.

IT is pleasant to see absent Canadians remembering their country, and in that light the gift of $2,500 by Sir John Rose to the Dominion Rifle Association is invested with special grace.

THE Ontario Plaindealer says now that Ohio has become a great State, in population, resources and national reputation she should pay her Governor $6,000 a year and make other improvements. Our Buckeye cousins are behind the times. Here in Quebec we give our Lieutenant-Governor $10,000 and do not mind other little expenses scattered all over the Civil List.

WE would like to see our Chief of Police do something to make his men look smarter. There can be no question about their behavior, but they do not look so smart as they might. Their trousers do not appear to fit them well, and in general, there is a want of taste in their appearance. Now that the contract for clothing has been given out why not, too, have the trousers the same color as the coat? A little taste displayed on the men's clothing would make a great change.

OF the continent of Europe men are outside their coats and sip their drink in presence of the said. They enjoy a cool lemonade or take iced cream, and yet they seldom seem "under the sun." Here men speak into their beards, and their drink like cows at trough, standing, printed, to their snark out again. If men must be so dressed, they should be dressed in a more becoming manner.

When a child is left without parents in this Province the seven nearest relatives of the orphan meet and appoint a tutor and a sub-tutor. The tutor and sub-tutor are guardians of the child's property, and they have all a guardian's authority and responsibility. If the child is to inherit a handsome fortune, it is educated; expenses are incurred and the tutor or sub-tutor manages everything; they order what they please and the law sustains them. It is a simple old custom and one well worthy of the heroic ages. It was a law founded on the belief that the next-of-kin was the best friend, and that "blood is thicker than water." In primitive times such a law must have worked well, but this is a money-grabbing age, and men will not only sell their kith and kin, but their very souls for the "filthy lucre." When the parents of a child die now-a-days, that child requires some other guardian as well as the "tutor" selected by the child's relatives. This age has developed unnatural tendencies, and not only will the uncle rob the nephew, but the son will rob the father. The tutor may be an excellent man, but, in the interest of the minor, we see no reason why he should be allowed unlimited power to spend the minor's money. And yet he does, and when he presents his bill to the Judge all the accounts are sworn to, in a bulk, by the tutor himself. They may be all true, but yet keeping our eyes on the age in which we live, we would rather see each particular account sworn to, by those who received the money if possible. There is a looseness in the affairs of minors which requires to be looked after, and parents especially may well make a note of the fatality which toy pistols have brought about and register a promise that they will lock the stable door before the horse has gone.

NOTE AND COMMENT. Unpleasant as Mr. Gold's journey to Brighton may have been to himself, it has been a perfect success to his countrymen, and they have made the most of it.—London Truth. How many sins are committed from want of social tact! What far-reaching evils arise from slight causes! How can the Irish help viewing the contrary force in Ireland as unjustified and galling! The commander of the forces at Kilmahain, Dublin, allowed a certain sum for entertaining. Not once during the past season was the hospitality of the Royal Hospital afforded to British troops. It would be a good idea to put General Leard in command of the Charybdis and send her on an expedition to the North Pole. If we could get the pole we might cut it up in sections and distribute it to the various nations of the world. PROTECTION FOR MINORS. When a child is left without parents in this Province the seven nearest relatives of the orphan meet and appoint a tutor and a sub-tutor. The tutor and sub-tutor are guardians of the child's property, and they have all a guardian's authority and responsibility. If the child is to inherit a handsome fortune, it is educated; expenses are incurred and the tutor or sub-tutor manages everything; they order what they please and the law sustains them. TOY PISTOLS. Thirteen deaths by toy pistols in one week in the United States! Many a little skirmish known in history can show no bigger record of "killed," and if the same proportion continues during the year, many a famous battle which has altered the destiny of nations can point to no larger roll-call of those who were "muzzered out" on such memorable days. The world is started by the one, but the world heads not the other. The one is like an avalanche, the other like denudation, but the slow and sure may be as destructive as the mighty, and the record of the one, at the end of a year, may be just as full as the record of the other. But even for one week, thirteen deaths is not a poor offering to the thirst for dangerous toys. It is a proof that Young America girls in chance, and the boys of this period will stake their all on the hazard of possession. It is just as natural for Young England to want a toy pistol as it is for their both children of imitation and cry for what papa or brother Tom possesses in the toy shop. Like the other members of his family, Young America sees no reason why he should not be "in the shoot," and his young aspirations soar to play the "hop-scotch" or marble. Luckily for ourselves we in Canada are somewhat of more moderate habits, and we have, as a necessary sequence, less proportionate deaths by chronicle than our enterprising neighbors across the line. And in some respects it may be just as well to continue so, and parents especially may well make a note of the fatality which toy pistols have brought about and register a promise that they will lock the stable door before the horse has gone.

THE COMMERCIAL TREATIES QUESTION. The friends of commercial treaties here are decidedly of opinion that a temporary truce in the negotiations with England would not be a disadvantage for either country. The French Government intends asking the Legislature for powers to prolong the present treaty with a country if the prospect be favorable for concluding a treaty, the delay will not be dangerous to either country. CHRISTMAS. Christmas, or Christa, also Vishnu, is one of the most popular of all the Hindoo Deities. An immense number of legends is told respecting him. He is represented as the son of Brahma and Mats, and is usually called the "Savior of the world." He was born in a manger, became incarnate as soon as he was born, he was incarnate by a chorus of devotes or angels. His birth place was Mathura. He was cradled among shepherds. Soon after his birth he was taken to the city of Vrindavan, where he was reared by his foster mother, Yashoda. He was a simple and unassuming child, and his life was spent in a life of devotion and love. He was a simple and unassuming child, and his life was spent in a life of devotion and love. THE RIFLE SHOOTING OF THE FUTURE. A preliminary trial of the conditions under which the prizes to be presented on the national rifle Association, are to be shot for, about the middle of the month, by members of the London Rifle Brigade. It will be remembered that Mr. Mullen's gift was made with the object of bringing about a competition at Wimbledon more adapted to the existing methods of warfare than the present system of rifle contests, and that with this object the Council of the National Rifle Association have arranged a competition at the beginning of the month, at Wimbledon, which will be a trial of the conditions under which the prizes to be presented on the national rifle Association, are to be shot for, about the middle of the month, by members of the London Rifle Brigade. MARRIAGE INSURANCE. One thousand people—men and women of marriageable ages—form themselves into a club. Each member of the club undertakes to give $1 to every other member who marries. Thus the members of the club receive $1,000 when married, and between husband and wife $2,000. A start in the world is secured, and all looks rosy. Such is the latest idea in the insurance business in the United States. A central office does the correspondence and collecting, about ten or fifteen per cent. covers the expenses, and the plan has, in many cases, worked fairly well. But it has its drawbacks as well as its advantages. Jake and Annie are engaged. They join a marriage insurance club. They must be certain time in the club before they can be entitled to its benefits. Meanwhile, other members of the club get married. Jake and Annie have to give up their shares. They are as good as dead. They must pay. Even if they do not marry, they must pay. Even if they do not marry, they must pay. Even if they do not marry, they must pay.

ETIQUETTE DEPARTMENT. Mrs. F. F. says:—I am in the habit of going to the seaside every summer; it is necessary to call upon all my acquaintances before leaving. It would be almost impossible to pay this mark of civility to the families at whose houses you visit; however, I usually contrived the correct thing to visit your more intimate friends and neighbors before going away.

JOKE, WRITES.—A fine piece of salmon was sent to my house the other day, and as there was no card or address attached, and as we had no idea of the course to be taken, we were obliged to eat it. I was very much surprised to find that it was a piece of salmon, and not a piece of wood. I was very much surprised to find that it was a piece of salmon, and not a piece of wood. DEMOISELLE CANADIENNE, writes.—An article headed Canadian versus American girls, which the writer related the Canadian girl had with a "Leading Canadian" on the relative merits of the American and Canadian girls. The "Leading Canadian" advocating the superior qualities of the American girl, and the "Canadian" advocating the superior qualities of the Canadian girl. It is a very interesting article, and one which should be read by all who are interested in the subject.

THE position which the British Government is taking with respect to the Prince of Wales' debts is plainly the proper one. On behalf of the Prince it is claimed that the debts pressing upon him have been incurred in his capacity as the representative of Her Majesty, and not in his own private or public capacity. The claim is, perhaps, founded, but it stands to reason that the Prince, as a young man, should be held responsible for his own debts. The Prince of Wales' debts are plainly the proper one. On behalf of the Prince it is claimed that the debts pressing upon him have been incurred in his capacity as the representative of Her Majesty, and not in his own private or public capacity.

THE orange-pled ordinance, which has worked so well in other cities, is now a law here, Mayor Groat having signed it yesterday. The ordinance provides that every person who shall throw any refuse, or any other substance, "any fruit or vegetable or other substance" which when stepped upon by any person is "liable to cause him or her to slip or fall" shall be subject to a fine of from one to ten dollars. Fruit and vegetable debris are required to be kept in a receptacle, and a copy of the ordinance posted up, and the police are required to enforce it.—N. Y. Tribune.

THE word assassin does not imply a necessary moral wound. A man who kills another man makes a cowardly attack with intent to kill. President Garfield has been assassinated, and Garfield is an assassin. This is the correct way of looking at the matter. The word assassin, which eastern intemperance has derived from the word assassin, is derived from the word assassin, which eastern intemperance has derived from the word assassin.

THE Rifle Shooting of the Future. A preliminary trial of the conditions under which the prizes to be presented on the national rifle Association, are to be shot for, about the middle of the month, by members of the London Rifle Brigade. It will be remembered that Mr. Mullen's gift was made with the object of bringing about a competition at Wimbledon more adapted to the existing methods of warfare than the present system of rifle contests, and that with this object the Council of the National Rifle Association have arranged a competition at the beginning of the month, at Wimbledon, which will be a trial of the conditions under which the prizes to be presented on the national rifle Association, are to be shot for, about the middle of the month, by members of the London Rifle Brigade.

MARRIAGE INSURANCE. One thousand people—men and women of marriageable ages—form themselves into a club. Each member of the club undertakes to give $1 to every other member who marries. Thus the members of the club receive $1,000 when married, and between husband and wife $2,000. A start in the world is secured, and all looks rosy. Such is the latest idea in the insurance business in the United States. A central office does the correspondence and collecting, about ten or fifteen per cent. covers the expenses, and the plan has, in many cases, worked fairly well. But it has its drawbacks as well as its advantages. Jake and Annie are engaged. They join a marriage insurance club. They must be certain time in the club before they can be entitled to its benefits. Meanwhile, other members of the club get married. Jake and Annie have to give up their shares. They are as good as dead. They must pay. Even if they do not marry, they must pay. Even if they do not marry, they must pay.

OUR PARIS LETTER. Parisian Gossip.—The Senate and Education.—Paris on the eve of the Garfield shooting.—A New Cure for Lunatics and Idiots.—The Government has been again defeated in the Senate; as usual, the shadow that has fallen across their Chamber door is Jules Simon, who boasts of his devotion to the Republic—by leading the Monarchists to attack it on every possible occasion.

THE HISTORY OF A PARISIENNE.—By Octave Feuillet. Philadelphia: T. B. Peterson & Brothers. The object of this work is to prove the evils of the manner in which marriages are arranged in France. It aims to show how an accomplished, beautiful and amiable girl may be seduced by a man who is not only a cynic and depraved husband, into a kind of moral monster, capable of anything and believing in nothing. The story should prove a lesson to parents who trust their daughters without consulting either the taste or inclination of their children, or the character of their future sons-in-law. As the author concludes: "The moral of this only too true story is that parents are not to be made to make any, but men make many; and this is a fact which mothers ought never to forget." The story is told in Feuillet's usual easy style, and has been ably translated from the French by Charles Ripley.

UNBELIEF IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY as contrasted with its earlier and later history, being the Cunningham lectures for 1880. By John Cairns, D.D. New York: Harper & Brothers, 1881. For sale by Dawson. In this course of six lectures the author has made some valuable contributions to the history of the conflict between Christianity and unbelief in the first Christian centuries, drawing particular attention to such features as contrast with later manifestations; the second traces the origin and development of the post-Reformation unbelief in the eighteenth century, and the third traces the history of unbelief in the eighteenth century, which is the culminating point in the warfare against Christianity. This brings the author to the main subject of the course, which is the history of unbelief in England, France and Germany, noting its various national and other peculiarities, and pointing out the results of this conflict in the present century. The lecture is devoted to a consideration of the attitude of unbelief in the present century. In reviewing this conflict the author has directed his observations upon the history of unbelief in the eighteenth century, and the results of this conflict in the present century. Both Nun and Gowing agreed that the symptoms were not generally such as accompanied a fever of the brain... "You alarm yourself needlessly gentlemen," he observed...

"Come, gentlemen, in less than an hour your ladyship will sleep... "What hope?" he said... "Not hope," replied Rawley, blandly...

"I never deceive," replied Rawley. "The time I state will soon pass—then judge me... "True—true..."

"And now," said Rawley, rising with a smile... "I must take my leave... "What paper?" you demanded in enigmas...
