Lévesque: Italian magistrate set traps

MONTREAL (CP) — One of two Canadian sisters being held in Rome on suspicion of smuggling heroin says the Italian magistrate investigating the case has tried to trap them during interrogation sessions.

In a telephone interview from Rome, Micheline Lévesque said Judge Francesco Misiani has tried to mislead her by making false statements during private cross-examination sessions.

Misiani "always tries to make us contradict ourselves," said Lévesque, 53, from her apartment in a religious order where she and her sister, Laurence, 56, are being held under house arrest.

Misiani has said he hopes to decide this week whether charges will be laid against the sisters whose home is in Jonquière, Que., 200 kilometres north of Quebec City.

Micheline, a teacher, and Laurence, a retired school board administrator, were arrested last Jan. 7 at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport after customs officials found 6.5 kilograms of heroin, estimated to be worth $5 million, in the freshly-glued bottoms of two suitcases. Italian law carries sentences ranging from between four and 25 years for conviction of heroin smuggling.

During one interrogation, said Micheline, Misiani stated falsely that Laurence offered details that contradicted a previous statement by her.

Misiani would also say that Micheline had made a particular statement in previous testimony.

NOT RIGHT

"I would say, 'No, that's not what I said.'"

Misiani could not be reached for comment.

Micheline said she has heard that the judge told two reporters he was disappointed with the latest testimony given Friday by the sisters.

Micheline said she was not alarmed by Misiani's statement that their testimony does not stand up to scrutiny and that there are substantial differences with testimony given by Sylvie Roy, Micheline's daughter, during a one-day closed hearing conducted by Misiani Sept. 10 in Montreal.

"He wants to preach falsehoods in order to find out the truth," said Micheline.

She added that before the sisters left for India on vacation, her daughter bought two suitcases for her from a "supposed travel agent."

Restricting ads aimed at children illegal, court rules

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Court of Appeal ruled Monday that a provincial law barring advertising aimed at children under the age of 13 is illegal.

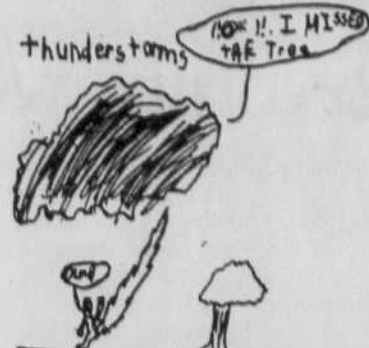

In a 62-page ruling, the court said sections of the Quebec Consumer Protection Act dealing with children's advertising violate freedom-of-expression guarantees in the federal Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

The court said "it is not up to the government to decide what people must not know in commercial matters," said Justice Maurice Jacques, who made the ruling with Justice Valder Kaufman. Justice Claude Flerand upheld the sections of the law.

"The line must be drawn and the time to do so is now," wrote Kaufman.

The law affected "children un-

Several MPs spent summer on freebie fact-finding trips

By Robert Fife

OTTAWA (CP) — Some MPs may have spent their summer barbecuing steaks at the cottage or gladhanding on main street, but others were busy travelling the globe at someone else's expense on self-defined fact-finding missions.

According to House of Commons records, a number of MPs went on expense-paid trips to Bulgaria, China, Spain, France and England. Others are still in London, Cyprus and Finland.

The influential Canada-Israel Committee appeared to be the big spender this summer. It picked up the tab for flying three separate delegations of MPs to Israel during July and August, including the costs of hotels, food and entertainment.

Shira Herzog-Bessin, executive director of the Canada-Israel Committee, refused to reveal details on the cost of the trips which involved 12 MPs from all three federal parties.

The cost of a round-trip commercial flight from Toronto to Tel Aviv is $1,199.

Some MPs who went to Israel were divided on the merits of accepting free trips paid for by an organization with a vested interest in promoting that country.

Montreal Conservative MP Vincent Della Noce said he was disappointed because the organizers didn't let him talk to Palestinians living in refugee camps on the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

SAW ONE SIDE

"I just saw one side of the fence, and I was very disappointed that these guys tried to brainwash me and abuse the little intelligence that I have," Della Noce said.

Newfoundland Liberal MP Bill

Rompkey, who went to Israel with a different delegation, said he wasn't surprised that MPs were only shown the Israeli side.

"We didn't get to see the Palestinian refugee problem but, on the other hand, the trip was sponsored by the Canada-Israel Committee and I think we all knew before we went what kind of a trip it was going to be," he said.

A delegation of eight MPs is in London at the expense of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association. Another delegation of three MPs is in Cyprus at that government's expense, and Conservative MP Robert Corbett is in Finland, courtesy of the Canada Scandinavia Friendship Group.

Most of the trips taken this summer were by individual MPs, sponsored by such diverse groups as the Chinese People's Institute of Foreign Affairs, the Bulgarian Agrarian party and the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development.

Information on the trips was obtained from the Clerk of the House of Commons under new rules which require MPs to register free trips they take abroad.

Iranian arrested on explosives charges

PARIS (AP) — About 1,000 supporters of France's neo-fascist National Front defied a police ban Monday and staged a demonstration in central Paris to protest terrorist bombings.

Meanwhile, French authorities announced they arrested an Iranian after they found a cache of explosives, detonators and a machine-pistol during the weekend in a forest east of Paris.

Uniformed officers stood by during the National Front's demonstration in the Place de l'Opera but took no action. The protesters dispersed peacefully after about a half-hour.

Police issued an order forbidding the demonstration, called to protest five bombings that killed eight people and wounded 164 in the last two weeks.

"We protest against the impotence and the inactivity of the forces of order in the struggle against terrorism," National Front leader Jean-Marie Le Pen told protesters.

Le Pen's party, which won 35 seats in the National Assembly in elections last March, has demanded stronger steps from the rightist government of Premier Jacques Chirac, including reinstatement of the death penalty and expulsion of many Arab immigrants.

VISAS NEEDED

The government's anti-terrorism program put into effect last week includes expanded visa requirements, use of soldiers to assist border police and increased security in public places.

Responsibility for the bombings has been claimed by the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners, which is demanding the release of Georges Ibrahim Abdallah and two other convicted terrorists.

Police are seeking four of Abdallah's brothers and five other people believed to belong to his group, the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Factions. All four brothers and several of the others have appeared in Lebanon and denied any involvement in the bombings.

French authorities said 25-year-old Ali Abdollahzadeh Khosh Akhlagh was charged with illegal possession of explosives and association with criminals following the weekend discovery of an arms cache outside Paris. But police did not make clear whether they believe there was a connection with the recent bombings.

Third violent death suspected in Miramichi

NEGUAC, N.B. (CP) — Another teenage girl has been found dead in the Miramichi region, where people have been living in terror since a 13-year-old girl was raped and stabbed to death in August.

At noon Monday, a resident found the body of a teenage girl in a gravel pit a few hundred metres beyond the eastern end of this town on the north shore of Miramichi Bay.

RCMP said she is believed to have died late Sunday or early Monday and foul play is suspected. They declined to release details of the suspected cause of death or to speculate on whether the girl had been sexually assaulted.

If foul play was involved, she would be the third Miramichi resident, and the second teenage girl, to die violently since June.

Police refused to speculate about any possible connections to other cases at this time.

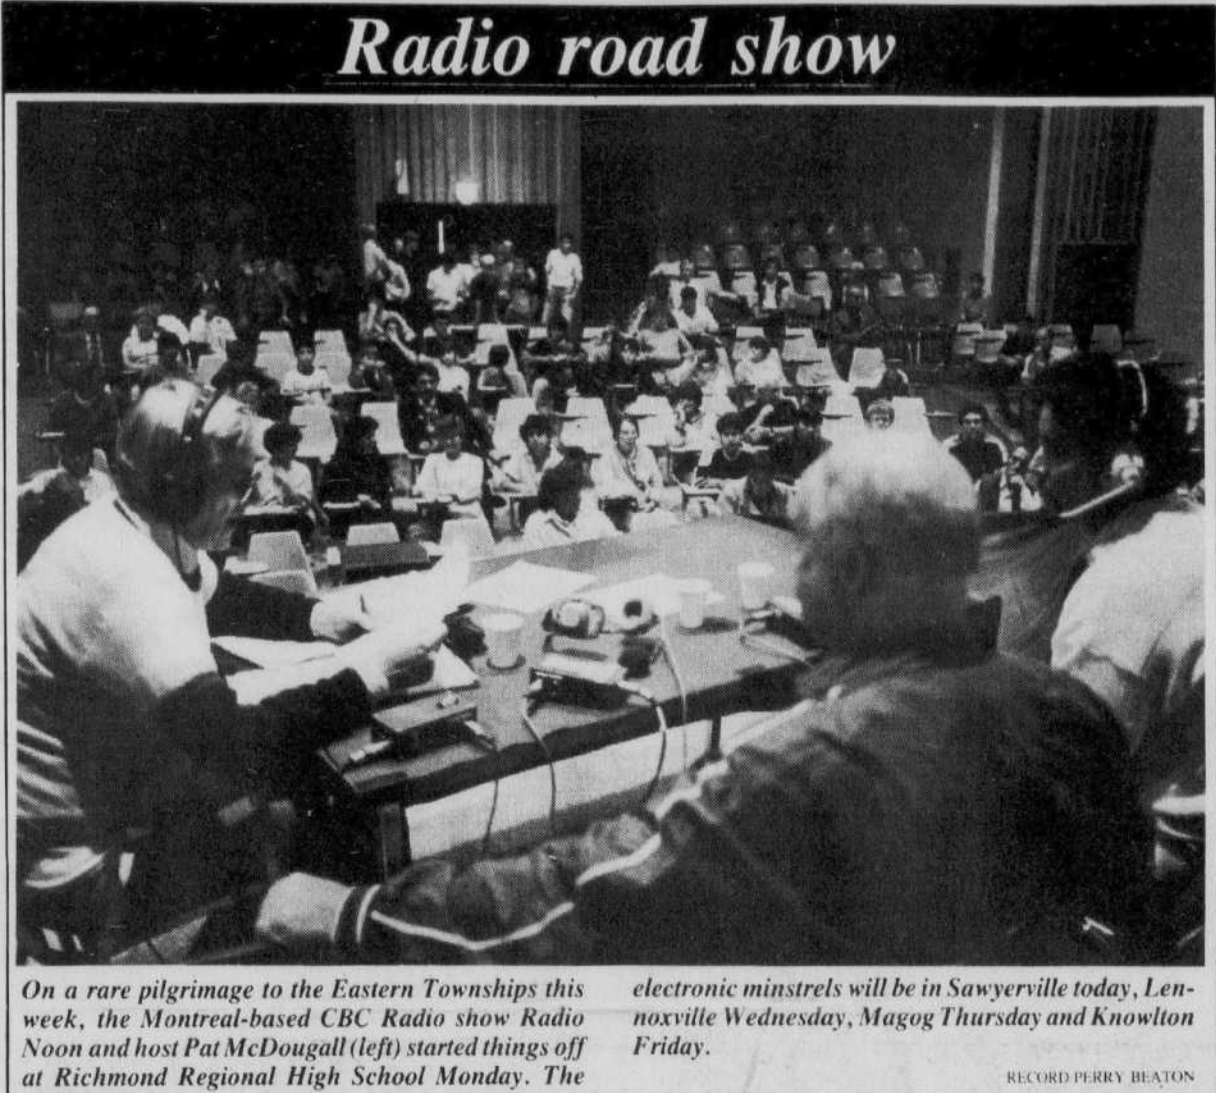

RCMP Sgt. Dave McCord said investigators are waiting for positive identification of the victim, but she is believed to be from the area.

An autopsy will be performed today in Saint John, he said.

People in the Miramichi region have been living in fear since Tara Prokosh, 13, was raped and stabbed to death Aug. 11 beside a fishing camp at Lower Newcastle, about 60 kilometres west of Neguac. The girls had been riding bicycles along the Russellville Road near Prokosh's home when they were attacked.

That assailant is still at large.

Last June, robbers beat John Glendenning, 66, to death in his home at Black River Bridge and severely injured his wife Mary, 62. Three Miramichi men have been in jail since June awaiting trial on second-degree-murder charges in the Glendenning killing.

On a rare pilgrimage to the Eastern Townships this week, the Montreal-based CBC Radio show Radio Noon and host Pat McDougall (left) started things off at Richmond Regional High School Monday. The electronic minstrels will be in Sawyerville today, Lennoxville Wednesday, Magog Thursday and Knowlton Friday.

'Old boys' lining up behind Davey?

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister Pierre Trudeau and exiled leadership contender Jean Chrétien are lined up to help boost sales of Senator Keith Davey's controversial new book containing critical passages about Liberal Leader John Turner.

Marc Lalonde, who tangled with Turner over the party's Quebec wing this spring, and John Roberts, another failed leadership contender, are also scheduled to attend an Oct. 21 event roasting Davey at a Montreal hotel, Angel Guerra, a spokesman for Stoddart Publishing said Monday.

Turner will be invited.

Davey, meanwhile, said Monday he will have nothing further to say on the book — or the feud that has erupted between him and Turner — until after the book is formally launched in early October.

"Sorry. Nothing until the 6th of October. Zero."

But Quebec MP Jean Lapierre says he does not believe the veteran backroom strategist is acting alone.

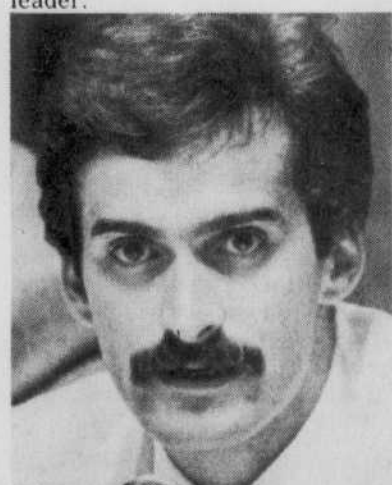

"I would hope that I have enough respect for Keith Davey that he is not doing it in isolation," said Lapierre, Turner's former youth minister and one of the new breed Turner has selected to help shape a new Liberal party for the next election.

"Otherwise it's political suicide."

Asked whom he thought might be supporting Davey, he replied: "Maybe they are really the old boys network, but that doesn't frighten me at all."

Davey has been sniping at Turner for several months as the party gears up for an automatic secret-ballot review of Turner's two-year-old leadership at its national convention here in late November.

He stirred up the pot 10 days ago by saying Trudeau was "very, very concerned" about Turner's proposals for a constitutional accord with Quebec, then outraged many Liberals last week with his comment that their ultimate loyalty must be to the party, not the leader.

Jean Lapierre... political suicide.

He fuelled the fire with an allegation in his book that Turner, during the 1984 election campaign, backed down on plans to reject Canadian involvement in the Star Wars anti-missile program after checking with U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz.

Turner has denied the specific allegation about Star Wars, but appeared Monday to leave open the possibility he discussed other issues with Shultz, a personal friend, during the campaign.

ON THE ROAD

"I'm in touch with him from time to time, but I really can't recall any precise subject that I raised with him during the election campaign. We were on the road."

Turner and Davey have not spoken in several weeks, but Guerra, Stoddart's marketing representative, says the two will meet at a national Liberal caucus Oct. 1.

"I guess that's the first time he's going to face Mr. Turner, in the caucus, and what he told me was he's going to lay it on the line — where he stands, what he meant, what all the comments in the press have been about."

Some Liberals have said Davey is angry at being edged into the background after almost 25 years as the party's chief organizer. Earlier this year, Turner appointed Senator Michael Kirby and Quebec caucus chairman Raymond Garneau to handle the job.

or about one-quarter of the industry's $1 billion in annual sales in Canada.

Government lawyers submitted about 20 U.S., Canadian and foreign studies indicating advertising is harmful to children.

But the court said the research had not clearly determined that advertising was harmful, only that advertising has an effect on consumers' choice.

The lawyers also claimed children's advertising is "commercial speech" and should not be accorded the same protection as freedom of political expression."

But Jacques said the Charter of Rights and Freedoms does not make that distinction.

"Citizens' economic decisions are as important, if not more so, than artistic or cultural decisions."

der 13 today, so why not 14 or 15 or 16 tomorrow. Toys in this case, perhaps something else (another freedom) in another."

The appeal was launched by Irwin Toy Ltd., a Toronto-based toy manufacturer, which was told by Quebec Superior Court in 1982 that Quebec had the right to ban advertising directed at children under the age of 13.

The Appeals Court ruling applies to all types of advertising directed at young children.

An aide to Justice Minister Herbert Marx said Marx will meet government lawyers and officials of Quebec's Consumer Protection Office today.

The government can ask the Supreme Court of Canada to grant it permission to appeal the ruling.

While Jacques Bouchard, president of advertising agency BCP

Creativite et Strategie, said agencies in the province could rake in an extra $10 million annually because of the ruling, other groups denounced it.

Claude Robillard of the consumer protection group Association co-operative d'économie familiale said low-income earners can expect pressure from their children to buy products if commercials aimed at kids are allowed.

"The parents could go into debt or they might make their children cry because they won't have the money to buy the toys," said Robillard.

But Irwin said revenue from toy advertising will allow television stations to provide quality programming to French-speaking children.

He estimated about $250 million in toys are sold in Quebec annually.

New CBC structure would shift costs to user, says consumer group

By Bill Anderson

The Canadian Press

The rallying cry for a staunchly Canadian broadcast system appears to have won wide support for a federal task force report issued Monday, but a spokesman for a consumers' group says it is the ordinary television user who will pay most of the costs.

The CBC, private broadcasters, independent producers and union groups were among those expressing approval of the report. A strong CBC and a resolutely Canadian private system is needed to save the country from cultural annihilation at the hands of the American entertainment industry, it said.

But David McKendry, a spokesman for the Consumers' Association of Canada, said the report "is headed entirely in the wrong direction" and proposes tax increases on video products and increases in cable fees to accomplish its goals.

Under the measures suggested, a CBC news channel and a channel called TV Canada — to be run by a consortium of public broadcasters — would be funded by a basic cable rate tax increase of about $12 a year.

In addition to this tax — which is structured to escalate to $21 a year within three years — the task force has proposed putting the main U.S. networks on a scrambled tier that would require an unspecified extra payment and a converter to receive clearly, McKendry said.

SEES ANGER

"Those are the stations most people buy cable to get. I don't think they're going to put up with this."

Under the proposals, the tax of eight per cent on the basic cable fee would drop to five per cent, but the tax on other cable services would increase to 10 per cent.

Also suggested is a further tax of at least five per cent on sale or rental of all videotapes and audio tapes, and sale of all video cassette recorders and satellite dishes — a measure which the task force says would have raised about $110 million in 1984.

Gerald Caplan, a former New Democratic Party campaign strategist Prof. Florian Sauvageau, said the proposed changes would cost about $175 million in the first year and about $270 million when the news network is in full operation. In addition to the tax changes, government revenue and advertising on the news channel would pay for the costs, Caplan said.

DELIGHTS JUNEAU

CBC president Pierre Juneau said he was delighted the report called for an end to budget cuts at the corporation. The report also showed the fallacy of a number of arguments used by CBC-bashers to cite the inefficiency of the corporation, Juneau said in a telephone interview from Quebec City.

He said with these "half-baked ideas and myths" now debunked, "The problem has to be squarely faced.... We've got to make up our minds that more (Canadian production) is needed, and there is no faked solution to that — it requires more resources."

In Ottawa, Communications Minister Flora MacDonald hinted the Conservative government may be ready to change its course with respect to the CBC.

The Conservatives cut $75 million in 1984 from CBC's $800-million-plus budget and followed with a spending restraint program. But MacDonald said Monday a culturally strong broadcast system "can't be done by any of us without some expenditure of monies," and she will move to bring in new broadcast legislation before the next election, expected in 1988.

David Bond, president of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, said his group will meet today with MacDonald and tell her they support the task force recommendations and that she should "go for it — we're behind you."

Boy stable after liver transplant operation

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Four-year-old Gabriel Bruce, the subject of a rare appeal by doctors who feared he would die soon without a new liver, received an organ Monday during an eight-hour transplant operation.

"The procedure went well," the head of the surgery team, Dr. William Wall, said after the operation was completed.

Gabriel was in critical but stable condition in intensive care, a normal situation after such a transplant, a University Hospital spokesman said.

The youngster received the liver of a three-year-old from Joplin, Mo. Circumstances of the child's death were not disclosed.

Doctors travelled Sunday to Kansas City where they performed tests on the donor organ to establish the blood type and tissue made it suitable for transplant. The operation began shortly after they returned.

Gabriel was given no hope of survival without a new liver after his was seriously damaged last month by hepatitis. He has been on the highest priority list for a donor organ since Aug. 27.

Gabriel's doctor said a week ago the boy was "down to hours." But the youngster, his body bloated by toxic fluids that a healthy liver processes, had done "amazingly well" to survive until a donor organ was found, Dr. Morris Jenner said.

The boy's mother, Phyllis Bruce, grandparents Ann and Daniel Bruce and aunt Shirley Bruce have been with him since he arrived here about two weeks ago.

Zellers should be taken to court — Lise Bacon

MONTREAL (CP) — Cultural Affairs Minister Lise Bacon said Monday she hopes the Quebec Justice Department will take court action against Zellers Inc. for posting bilingual signs in its stores in suburban LaSalle and Pointe-Claire.

Bacon said she's waiting for a report on the matter from the Commission de protection de la langue française, a body established to investigate complaints about possible violations of Bill 101, the French Language Charter.

"Usually the minister of justice sues people for violation of the law," Bacon said. "Bill 101 is there to stay, and people have to abide by the law."

A Zellers executive said the company favors the posting of bilingual signs in areas where English is current.

The St-Jean Baptiste Society has called for a boycott of Zellers stores because of the signs, which have been the subject of recent articles in French-language newspapers.

Carole Richard, speaking for Justice Minister Herbert Marx, said last week of the St-Jean Baptiste complaint, "There are more urgent emergencies to settle."

The usual procedure to follow, she said, is for the commission to investigate a complaint and submit its report in six months or a year.

Both LaSalle and Pointe-Claire are in the western tip of Montreal Island where the population is about half English-speaking and half francophone.

Reagan speech provokes negative Soviet response

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviet foreign minister will give a "very negative" response today to Monday's speech by U.S. President Ronald Reagan to the United Nations General Assembly, a Soviet official indicated.

In a 37-minute speech at the opening of the current session of the world body, Reagan said the U.S. will push on with Star Wars research and he repeated several criticisms of the Soviet Union.

Reagan said he told Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev the U.S. would share research on Star Wars, the U.S. space-based anti-missile project expected to cost hundreds of billions of dollars if it can ever be built.

Reagan criticized the treatment of civilians in Afghanistan, where the Soviets have an estimated 115,000 troops, and what he called the Kremlin's insistence on supporting Marxist-Leninist insurrections around the world.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze did not applaud after Reagan's speech.

Signalling the line Shevardnadze will likely take in his speech before the General Assembly today, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir Petrovsky predicted Reagan's statements about Star Wars and other global issues would cause a "very negative attitude" among Kremlin leaders.

At a Monday news conference at the Soviet UN Mission, Petrovsky said arrested U.S. reporter Nicolas Daniloff, a Moscow correspondent for U.S. News and World and Report charged with spying, could be freed "very rapidly" if the Reagan administration takes the right course.

Polluters will clean up their act

MONTREAL (CP) — Environment Minister Clifford Lincoln announced Monday that two multinational chemical firms will spend $42 million between them in an attempt to eliminate most of their toxic wastes that currently end up in the St. Lawrence River.

The companies — Tioxide Canada Inc., located in Tracy, about 65 kilometres downstream from Montreal, and NL Chem Canada Inc. of Varennes, 20 kilometres northeast of Montreal — produce mainly titanium dioxide, a substance found in paint, plastics and paper.

The firms said they hope by 1991 to eliminate 85 per cent of the level of contaminants they currently flush into the St. Lawrence.

MTC drops mischief charge

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal transit commission has dropped a mischief charge against a man who smashed the headlights of a bus when its driver refused to move from the middle of the street where he was blocking traffic.

Earl Warren, a 30-year-old owner of a maintenance company, said he took his frustrations out on the bus on Sept. 11.

He phoned the transit commission a few minutes later to confess to the crime. He was subsequently charged with public mischief.

Spend money on birth control

MONTREAL (CP) — The federal government should spend as much effort and money in television advertising for birth control as it devotes to improving Canadians' health through the Participation program, a federal panel on fertility control was told Monday.

Ottawa "should be co-ordinating a whole program on sexuality and contraception," Sandra Golding, the director of a community clinic for young women, told reporters after the closed hearing.

"There's a tremendous amount of ignorance about these issues."

Robber makes serious gaffe

QUEBEC (CP) — A 27-year-old man who broke into a jewelry store made one mistake — he gave his name and address beforehand to his victim.

Police said René Lévesque — no relation to Quebec's former premier — promised he would make a purchase the day after he visited the shop.

The store was robbed that night and Lévesque, who had given the jeweller his correct identity, failed to return the following day.

The jeweller provided police with the address of Lévesque's apartment, where they found the stolen jewelry store in a refrigerator.

Crown ponders Lortie appeal

QUEBEC (CP) — The Crown is studying whether to appeal the ordering of a new trial for former Canadian Armed Forces corporal Denis Lortie on charges of slaying three people in a 1984 submarine-gun attack on the legislature.

Michel Auger, assistant to the chief prosecutor, said Monday that the Crown has 60 days to decide whether to appeal the Quebec Court of Appeal ruling to the Supreme Court of Canada.

A three-judge appeal court panel ruled unanimously last Thursday to grant the former army supply clerk a new hearing on charges of first-degree murder in the deaths of the three provincial government employees.

OMA harder on child abuse

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ontario Medical Association has told Prime Minister Brian Mulroney its 18,000 members support his plans to introduce stronger laws to deal with child and drug abuse.

Mulroney mentioned the plans in a Vancouver speech a week ago.

Let privates handle airports

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal Transport Department should get out of the business of operating airports and let the private sector do the job, says a report released Monday by Transport Minister John Crosbie.

The airports could be run either by local authorities or by a Crown corporation where there's no support for local operation, says the report.

Zundel returns for appeal

TORONTO (CP) — After 1½ years of relative obscurity, Ernst Zundel returned to the lime-light Monday to appeal his conviction and sentence for publishing anti-Jewish literature.

His sports jacket bulging with the bulletproof vest he usually wears in public, Zundel impassively took notes in the prisoner's box while his lawyer argued his case before a panel of five justices of the Ontario Court of Appeal.

Suspect changed appearance

TORONTO (CP) — The man suspected of killing Helmut Buxbaum's wife changed his appearance substantially after the fatal shooting, a police constable told an Ontario Supreme Court jury Monday.

Around the time of the murder July 5, 1984, the millionaire businessman was trying to raise large amounts of cash to allegedly pay off the killer he hired, Wayne Harris of Peel Regional Police testified.

Parts hammered into shape

EDMONTON (CP) — Critical parts on trains used on the Mindbender roller-coaster at West Edmonton Mall were hammered into shape because they didn't fit, maintenance chief Bill Keur said Monday.

Keur, maintenance supervisor for Triple Five Corp which owns the mall, told an inquiry the wheel assembly on the car involved in a June 14 accident which killed three people had been hammered into shape.

New party says no gays

CALGARY (CP) — A new federal party opposed to homosexuality and abortion, and calling for an overhaul of Canada's welfare and education systems, has begun a membership drive in Alberta.

The Christian Heritage Party hopes to field 50 candidates in the next federal election, interim leader Ed Vanwoudenberg told a news conference Monday at the start of a week-long tour of several communities.

RCMP slacking off at Aryan site

CAROLINE, Alta. (CP) — The RCMP weren't doing their jobs when members of the Canadian Jewish Defence League and a white supremacist group confronted each other, defence league president Meir Halevi said Monday.

Halevi and Terry Long, Canadian leader of the Aryan Nations church, taunted each other Sunday over a barbed wire fence surrounding Long's land near the west-central Alberta community of Caroline.

B.C. wage may be lowered

VANCOUVER (CP) — The hourly minimum wage in British Columbia, already the lowest in Canada at $3.65, may be either lowered or eliminated, says Premier Bill Vander Zalm.

A decision on whether to decrease, increase or abolish the minimum wage will be made following a government study, the premier said.

Fishermen await charges

ANTIGONISH, N.S. (CP) — A decision will be made later this week on whether charges will be laid against northern Nova Scotia fishermen who defied the end of herring season and dropped their nets Sunday.

Federal fisheries officers took fish samples from more than 50 vessels on their arrival Monday morning to wharves in nearby Pictou, Lisimore, Arasaig and Ballantynes Cove.

The department extended the season for three days until noon Saturday even though the annual quota for the southern Gulf of St. Lawrence had been filled.

Have licence or clam up

HALIFAX (CP) — The federal government has awarded the first permanent offshore clam licences, a move that will make economically strapped Cape Breton home to a new multimillion-dollar offshore fishery.

Fishery Investments Ltd. and Pursuit Fisheries Ltd. each won two licences Monday to fish for 30,000 tonnes of Simpson's surf clams. The quota is to be divided equally between the two companies in three years of fishing the Banquet Bank off Cape Breton, Fisheries Minister Tom Siddon announced.

Radioactive space junk could fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nuclear graveyard 100 kilometres wide and 1,000 kilometres above Earth is filling with debris from worn-out satellites that could collide some day and allow radioactive pieces to fall into the atmosphere, an expert in space junk says.

"The threat posed today is not serious at all, really," said Nicholas Johnson, author of a study to be published soon. But, he said, one-third of the 6,000 objects known to orbit Earth pass through the graveyard region and that the danger of collision increases as more waste is placed there.

Leaflets bear Waldheim initials

NEW YORK (Reuters) — Austrian President Kurt Waldheim's initials have been discovered on a package of wartime propaganda leaflets urging that Jews be killed, the World Jewish Congress said today.

The leaflets were sent to the German army intelligence unit in which Waldheim served during the Second World War, the congress said.

The congress added that another document it found showed that Waldheim's intelligence unit at the headquarters of Army Group E in the Balkans was in charge of the propaganda unit that printed the leaflets.

The Jewish group said the leaflets, now in a U.S. military archive, contained such statements as: "The Jews prepared this war. Jews got it onto our backs. Jews do not want it to end... Enough of the Jewish war, kill the Jews, come over."

Armand or Arm and Hammer?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Armand Hammer and Arm and Hammer have been mistakenly connected for decades, so it's only right that the globe-trotting industrialist should finally own a piece of the baking soda brand.

Hammer, the 88-year-old chairman and chief executive of Occidental Petroleum Corp., announced Monday that his company will form a partnership with Church and Dwight Co. Inc., the company that makes Arm and Hammer products.

Prisoner drove with teeth?

FRISCO, Colo. (AP) — A prisoner with his hands cuffed behind his back stole a patrol car and raced over 100 kilometres the wrong way down Interstate 70 before crashing, deputies said.

"I have no idea how he did it. I wish we knew," said Summit County sheriff's Lieut. James Doughty.

"Strictly a guess would be he either was sitting sideways or drove with his knees."

"His teeth are another possibility."

Group to bolster Lebanon army?

METULLA, Israel (AP) — Israeli troops by the hundreds massed along the border with Lebanon on Monday, and an official said they are ready to push into South Lebanon to crush an offensive by Shiite Moslem guerrillas.

The Israeli preparations are aimed at bolstering the South Lebanon Army, a force of 1,000 Lebanese militiamen who patrol an Israeli-designated buffer zone in southern Lebanon stretching 10 to 15 kilometres north of the frontier.

The militia, Israeli-trained and Israeli-financed, has lost 16 men in recent weeks to attacks by pro-Iranian Shiites of the radical Hezbollah faction which seeks to dislodge the remaining Israeli presence in Lebanon.

Rockets disrupt breakfast

MAARAKEH, Lebanon (AP) — Four rockets were fired at the headquarters of the French contingent serving with the UN peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon today as troops were having breakfast, officials said. No casualties were reported.

Lt.-Col. Patrick Dureau, operations officer at the French headquarters in this tiny village east of the port city of Tyre, said one of the 107mm rockets hit the wire fence of the officers' mess at 6:40 a.m.

"Several troops and officers having breakfast were blown off their seats by the impact of the blast, but none suffered any injury," Dureau said.

Combustion Engineering union won't meet office workers

Sherbrooke cathedral holds strike service 'that this problem be solved'

By Philip Authier

SHERBROOKE — A special mass will be celebrated today (Tuesday) at St-Michael's Cathedral to pray for a swift end to the 12-week-old labor dispute at the Combustion Engineering plant.

The mass, set for this evening at 7 p.m., follows a weekend of prayers said in most of the city's Catholic churches. The intention, read aloud, called for spiritual help to create a "sane" labor climate, not only at the Combustion plant but all over the region.

The follow-up comes today. Both regular masses at the cathedral will be devoted to the cause as well.

LAY PEOPLE

Workers, while invited to the masses, are not the ones who organized them, Sherbrooke diocese Archbishop Jean-Marie Fortier told The Record Monday. It was a group of lay (non-ordained) people who came up with the idea and Fortier approved it.

According to the archbishop, prayer days are not a new idea in the Catholic faith, although they are not often organized for labor conflicts.

"It's to pray our Lord to bless these people, managers and employees, in order that they may find a way to resolve their problems," said Archbishop Fortier, this year celebrating his 25th year as a bishop.

He noted that people can pray for whatever they want from the Lord. This evening though, they will do it together.

The archbishop is wary of taking sides in the dispute.

"I know that there is a strike, I know that there is a question of closing Combustion Engineering in Sherbrooke but I'm not very well aware of this situation," he said. "That is why I cannot back the management or the workers. But we ask our Lord to give us his grace that this problem be solved as best as possible."

OTHER NEWS

There is little else to report on the dispute between Combustion's 450 workers and management, except that a group of non-unionized office workers, who stand to lose their jobs along with the strikers if the multi-national company closes down the plant, have formed a survival committee.

The committee wants to discuss the strike with the workers but according to their spokesman, Gerald Lapointe, the office workers are having trouble getting an appointment with the union.

Lapointe said union president Normand Dubuc told him late Monday that he had to check with his superiors about having the meeting.

This is the second time the survival committee has tried to meet with the union and it feels frustrated, Lapointe said.

"I take it as a refusal because we were in a hurry and he (Dubuc) has no date to offer," Lapointe said.

Lapointe, a general foreman at the plant, said he does not see the survival committee acting as an intermediary between the workers and management. Rather, he said, the committee wants a dialogue.

So does the provincial Ministry of Labor. A spokesman said Monday that Yvan Blain, the man Labor Minister Pierre Paradis has delegated to get the two parties back to the bargaining table, has now talked to both groups.

But Blain's report will remain secret until it is presented to Paradis. The spokesman refused to even speculate on how the discussions were going, except to say Paradis remains confident the closure can be headed off.

About 600 people will lose their jobs, including 110 office workers, if the Roy St. plant closes. Combustion Engineering has already closed four other plants this year and says the Sherbrooke plant could be next. The strike started July 4 with talks breaking off last month.

Workers are after 10 and nine per cent pay increases over the next two years while management is offering 4.5 and four per cent.

Jeffrey mine hires workers; trend may continue

ASBESTOS (SM) — A small bit of good news came last week to this depressed mining town. JM Canada Inc., which operates the Jeffrey open-pit asbestos mine here said it has hired back 15 miners to replace others who have retired or died.

According to company spokesman George Olney, the workers were called back last Monday "as a replacement for people who had retired or who had died." Olney also announced that by October 20, the mine plans to rehire another 10 millworkers to help bag surplus fibre.

"We have a surplus of group-seven short fibre, and we are hoping to have a market for it in the months to come," Olney said.

Olney said company officials are hoping that the recent closures of other asbestos mines which produce short fibres such as Carey Canada in East Broughton last April, will help create demand.

A rumor circulating around Danville and Asbestos recently has been that JM Asbestos would hire up to 200 miners this fall. But Olney said that possibility "is still a rumor."

He said the company is still studying the feasibility of expanding the mine to get at more fibre. But he would not say how many people could be hired or when work would start if the project is approved.

Citizen will appeal Superior Court loss in the case of the Birchton poles

SHERBROOKE — A man who says Eaton Township Mayor Bertrand Landry should be kicked off council will appeal a Superior Court verdict handed down last week ruling the claim was unfounded.

Johnville citizen Léopold Maheux went to court after Mayor Landry and his two sons installed light poles at a new baseball park in Birchton in 1984.

Maheux said the mayor violated conflict of interest rules in the Quebec Municipal Code by doing the work, although evidence showed the Landrys received no benefit from the work, which Mr. Justice Paul-M. Gervais described as an example of "volunteer" activity.

The judge ruled that no actual conflict had taken place and that the mayor had shown no ill will in his actions.

Maheux's lawyer Marcel Després said Monday he will go a step further and take the case to the Quebec Court of Appeal. "There are several reasons for the appeal," Després said. "The Court of Appeal had already decided on a similar case in 1977, and so the law was applied badly by the learned judge."

The lawyer said it may take as long as two years for the appeal court to render a verdict.

Battle pits town lawyer against Wales Home worker

Taxes, candidates' backgrounds at issue in race for Richmond's mayoralty

By Stephen McDougall

RICHMOND — At least two local men intend to become mayor of Richmond following November's municipal election, replacing stalwart André Lupien, who decided last month to retire from politics.

The two are only beginning to make their political platforms known. So Richmond voters will have to make their choice based largely on small-town personal contacts, and at least in part on the two men's strikingly different work backgrounds.

Longtime resident Nelson Murphy was first to announce his intention. Only 29, he is running with the idea of placing "a typical, average person as mayor", rather than have a "professional" get elected.

An orderly at the Wales Home for the aged, Murphy revealed his position on some of the issues he feels will be debated during the campaign in a recent interview.

He wants council to save the old police station on Craig Street, which it has proposed to demolish. "I would propose putting moderate amounts of money to help renovate it. It is an historic site as far as I am concerned, and should be kept."

TO RECONSIDER PLAN

As well, Murphy wants the town to "reconsider" its plan to move the police station to the new town hall, and refurbish the fire hall. The project will add two and one half cents to each resident's $100 evaluation. "We are paying enough taxes, 20 per cent more, for the rebuilding of the downtown core. Another project will only add to our tax burden."

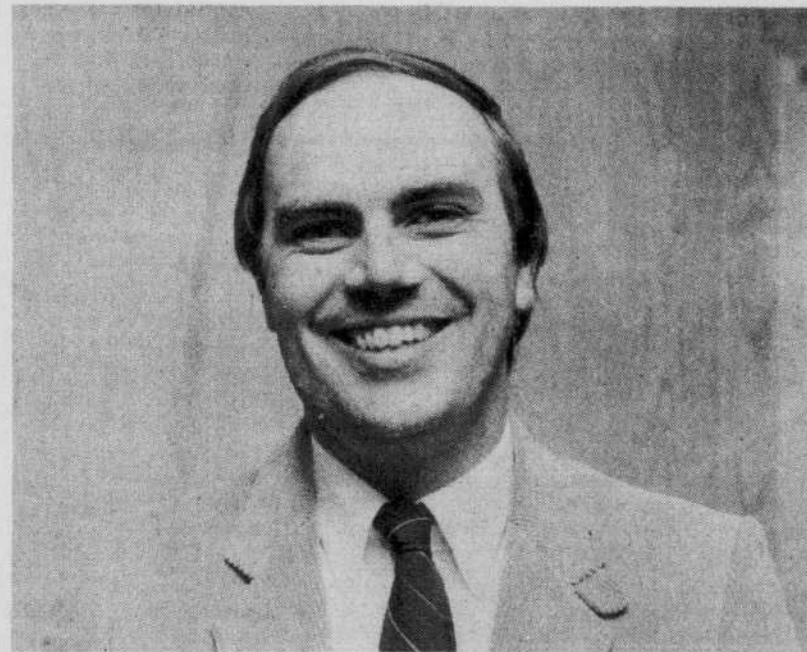

He also hopes to "get the town involved" in the management of Richmond's outdoor skating rink, which has been kept going with only private donations, and set up a better recreation department to offer more leisure and recreation activities for the residents.

As mayor, Murphy says he would improve snow removal services on Main Street. "Most of the time the snow is pushed aside but not removed. That makes the narrow Main Street even narrower in the winter."

Murphy also wants to offer more bilingual services for residents, to ensure that English-speaking residents can be served in their own language.

Murphy believes that by not being a professional he will have more time to devote to town affairs, will be able to attend meetings regularly and be a more effective decision maker.

His opponent is the town's lawyer, Marc-André Martel, who has offices in Sherbrooke.

"Certain businessmen here wanted Martel to run," Murphy said.

Marc-André Martel says that as a lawyer he can do 'a better job than someone who just wants to experiment.'

Townships talk

COWANSVILLE (JM) — Maurice Potvin found out the hard way that bargains can turn out to be very costly.

The St. Hyacinthe area farmer and trucker and his companion, Françoise Bousquet Hébert, of Beauce, attempted to bring 37 cases of United States liquor into Canada on Nov. 9, 1985.

But the half gallon jugs were seized in Philipsburg. Customs officials and the RCMP rated the purchase price at $3,500 in American funds and assessed duties and excise taxes of $3,300.

The fines were so heavy Potvin called his wife to help him bail his truck out. He had $2,000 in cash, she brought five $1,000 bills and customs gave them $200 back. Potvin pleaded guilty to the attempted smuggling charge under the Customs Act when federal prosecutor Serge Champoux withdrew a charge of attempting to corrupt a customs agent.

Hébert pleaded guilty to the customs infraction, they were both fined $1,000 and costs. They were allowed six months to pay the fines and costs.

Needless to say, the liquor was decanted in a sewer at customs. Had they managed to bring it into Quebec legally they would have had to pay an additional $2,200 to the Quebec Liquor Board for the mixed lot of 355 Imperial quarts.

COWANSVILLE (JM) — Claude Talbot, of Cowansville, was shown the clemency of the court when he appeared for sentencing on charges of breaking and entering and theft of $500 from Sam Stone's Hotel in Bromont, and theft of Dr. Noel Etienne Monast's Porsche in Cowansville during the summer of 1985.

Talbot, employed as a bartender at Stone's, closed up one evening and got a ride to Cowansville where he closed another bar. He then stole the Porsche, went to Bromont and stole the cash and took off towards Montreal.

Talbot got involved in a high-speed chase with the Laprairie municipal police and lost control of the car damaging it severely. He fled on foot only to be caught by the police.

Talbot underwent treatment for drug and alcohol problems at the Malaric Centre near Trois-Rivières. Claude Provencher, head of La Boussole, a Granby clearing house for alcohol and drug users, told the court Talbot had been an exemplary patient at the centre and wished to be able to share his experiences with others in an attempt to dissuade them from using either drugs or alcohol. Defence lawyer Claude Hamann said his client deserved a chance. Crown attorney Henry Keyserlingk asked for a jail term citing the gravity of the offences, but noted the stolen cash had been recovered.

Judge Claude Leveillé reserved his sentence for three days then placed Talbot on three years probation, ordered him to perform 120 hours of community work by giving seminars on drug and alcohol abuse, then ordered him to effect $1,000 in restitution to Dr. Monast within one year.

COWANSVILLE (JM) — The Crown said it had no proof to offer and was convinced Mahlayon Woodard had no criminal intent when he was arrested with Alexander Martin in West Bolton last spring. Judge Claude Leveillé read Woodard charges of conspiracy to commit a crime, burglary, and robbery with violence.

"Fine, he is a professional, but can he guarantee he will be there for the town when he is needed? A professional, especially a lawyer, cannot guarantee that. There are a lot of hours to put in this job, almost 40 hours a week."

Lawyer Martel dismisses criticism that he will be unable to fulfil his obligations as mayor because he has little time. "It is easier to be mayor as a lawyer than not. As a lawyer, I am versed in all the municipal and civil laws needed as a mayor."

"I can do a better job than someone who just wants to experiment," Martel added. "Besides, as a lawyer, I can create some of my own work hours better than someone who has an hourly job. And in the eight years that I have been a member of the chamber of commerce and other organizations, I have never had problems attending meetings, even with my office and practice in Sherbrooke."

"As a lawyer, I am well known here and am one of the easiest people to find."

NO ONE GROUP

Martel also dismisses criticism that he will favor the wishes of the business community over other groups in town. He has been actively involved in the chamber of commerce, and admits that some of its members had asked him to run for mayor.

But he adds: "No one group is going to push me. As mayor, I will remain autonomous and objective. I will be willing to listen to anyone," he said.

Martel says he wants to put his efforts into creating new industry and jobs for the town.

"When I see the town's population fall from 4,800 to 3,500 in the last few years, I think it is time to get more jobs and attract people back," he said in an interview.

"This town has industrial potential. If Bombardier in Valcourt takes off with this project for (manufacturing) a car, we could get some industry here that can service this project. It could even service the Hyundai plant in Bromont."

Martel has made no promises to actually create jobs or lower taxes if more industry settles here, but he said it could be a possibility. "I want to work with council to promote the town and administer its finances. If we get industries in here, we could start to bring taxes down."

Richmond taxpayers have had to face a higher tax burden since the town built a dike and water-pumping system two years ago designed to prevent flooding that has plagued the downtown core since the last century. That project, along with sewage and drainage work, cost the town $1.3 million and raised municipal taxes an average of $130 per year.

"I don't see any further tax increases now, and we will do all we can to prevent future ones if I am elected. But there is one one that I know who can promise no tax increases ever," said Martel.

BRING INDUSTRY

Unlike his opponent, Martel has

Changes made on paper...

Public Works Canada has added a home-made English version to a set of temporary signs directing users through the Sherbrooke federal building, which is undergoing extensive renovations. The change brings the signs into line with the Official Languages Act, which requires that all federal communications with the public be in both English and French. The Commission of Official Languages, federal watchdog over language policy, ordered the bilingualization following a complaint received from a Sherbrooke woman in late July but processed in August. Similar French-only signs put up by the post office in the Couture St. building were corrected earlier. "Both problems are now solved," said Claude Sarasin, the commission's Quebec representative.

Dangle the carrot

It's time to do Johnny a favor and get him away from the television screen.

A Quebec Court of Appeal decision made Monday says a provincial law barring advertising aimed at children under 13 is illegal. The 62-page court ruling says sections of the Quebec Consumer Protection Act dealing with children's advertising violate freedom of expression guarantees made in the federal Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

The decision says despite 20 U.S., Canadian and foreign studies indicating advertising is harmful to children, the evidence is simply not enough. The research, the ruling says, had not clearly determined advertising is harmful, only that it does have an effect on consumers' choice.

No kidding. But the problem goes beyond this. Even if advertising cannot be proven harmful, it certainly does have an effect on consumers' choice and who knows better than parents.

The appeal was originally launched by the Irwin Toy company. In 1982, the toy company was told by Quebec Superior Court the province had the right to ban advertising directed at children under 13. But not anymore.

Now Irwin and other toy companies can do as they please and push violence-oriented toys down Johnny's throat. As in the past, there won't be any soft-selling tactics and toy manufacturers can be more ruthless as ever as they dangle the carrot, or G.I. Joe, in front of Johnny's eyes.

Toy companies aren't known for being subtle. They go straight for the jugular and lure kids with all kinds of schemes like the old favorite "all the kids on the block have one", catchy tunes or slick special effects.

But it isn't really the child's jugular the toy companies are aiming for. They want the jugulars with the cash — the parents and they do it the best way they know how — through the kids.

Something the toy companies don't always see, or don't always want to see, is that parents aren't always able to give their children the toys they would like. Low-income earners are pressured by their kids too, and often can't afford to buy the toys their child wants.

A representative from a consumer protection group estimates approximately $250 million in toys are sold in Quebec each year. That's a startling one-quarter of the industry's $1 billion in annual sales across the country.

All of this leaves only one answer to the problem — turn the T.V. off. If kids aren't subject to the low blows made by advertising companies, then maybe they won't succumb to peer pressure as easily and maybe their parents will be able to hold off buying that $70 Transformer until Christmas.

Granted, television isn't the only medium which directs a large part of its advertising to children, but it is perhaps the most common. Children seem to watch a lot more T.V. these days than anything else. Turning the set off is an easy way to say no to a child's demands. Besides, there are other activities besides watching the tube. Maybe your child can even learn to read.

One last irony from the toy companies: Irwin says revenue from toy advertising will allow television stations to provide quality programming to French-speaking children. If toy companies are controlling the programs as well as the advertising, that's just one more reason to tune out.

Divorce can be rough on children

By Sheryl Ubelacker

TORONTO (CP) — Nine-year-old Susan clings to her mother and refuses to play with other children. Seven-year-old Billy has nightmares and a paralyzing fear of the dark and monsters.

Both are among the 30 per cent of children who suffer intense emotional reactions years after their parents have divorced, a psychiatrist told the annual meeting of the Canadian Pediatric Society on Sunday.

Some children faced with the separation of their parents are more vulnerable than others and physicians should watch carefully for signs of depression or withdrawal from family members or friends, Dr. Bonnie Robson told the opening session of the five-day meeting.

Pre-school children experience the greatest distress and have the most difficulty coping with the loss of a parent, said Robson of the C.M. Hincks Treatment Centre for emotionally disturbed children in Toronto.

"These children understand, primitively, that their parents no longer love each other (and) are no longer living together," she said.

"They feel that if this can happen to their parent they too can be abandoned."

A young child may regress to an earlier stage and develop eating, toileting and sleep problems, she said, advising that the custodial parent should maintain routines and discipline to foster a sense of security.

DENIES SEPARATION

Children aged 6 to 8 may inwardly deny the separation, but appear to be adjusting well. However, Robson said an outward appearance of acceptance may be masking a profound sense of loss.

Many children feel guilty, believing they were responsible for the separation. Robson said parents should explain why they're no longer living together and that neither is rejecting the child.

Repeated or continued bouts of unexplained illness and refusal to go to school could be attempts by the child to get the parents back together, she said, noting that some children retain fantasies of their parents reconciling 10 years after separation.

The ravaging effects of apartheid on Africa

The government of most African states in the Southern Africa region have openly declared their support for effective international sanctions against South Africa and some of them have already suffered from reprisals carried out in retaliation by the Pretoria regime under various guises.

This situation will require constant vigilance by the international community which will also have to consider what further measures need to be taken against South Africa in order to prevent it from acting in a hostile and war-like manner.

The apartheid regime is determined to impose a Pax Pretoriana throughout the region in order to dominate all the states in southern Africa. It is, in fact, a sophisticated counter-insurgency strategy which requires all the states to surrender to the will of the Botha regime and cease all forms of support for the struggle of the black South African and Namibian people.

As the African liberation struggle intensifies and the Botha regime feels more insecure, it will increase its attacks against independent African states and engage in more extensive acts of destabilization. It is particularly important that information about these developments is widely publicized so that it can make it easier for moral, political and material aid be provided to the African states concerned.

In this context, apartheid's secret war against independent African states needs to be made known to international public opinion, which is unaware about both its nature and scale. The enormous and growing dangers of this war situation needs to be pointed out and, particularly, the clever use made of surrogate forces by the Pretoria regime, especially in Mozambique and Angola all in order to give the false impression that they are genuine national political groups with legitimate demands.

SURROGATE FORCES

The fact that such information has so far not been made known widely enough is already resulting in extensive support being provided to UNITA from abroad and especially from the United States. This shows the extent to which the struggle of the people of Namibia is being counteracted with support for South African surrogate forces operating to destabilize the sovereign and independent State of Angola.

This case, more than any other, demonstrates the enormous price paid by independent African States and their peoples when they discharge freedom in South Africa and Namibia. It is indeed remarkable that direct assistance is forthcoming from a major western power to support South Africa's regional power ambitions which involve the destabilization of Angola and the continued illegal occupation of Namibia.

Despite the enormous danger of such direct external intervention on the side of the Pretoria regime, it appears as if vital decisions have been taken at the highest level not only to protect perceived western interests in southern Africa but to help make Africa safe for South Africa. If this is the case it may well mean that certain western powers, due to their specific global view of world events, may be prepared to intervene even more directly in the future to help bolster the apartheid regime when it comes close to facing defeat.

The potential dangers of the conflict being internationalized in such a way are very clear and whilst some may be inclined to dismiss it as highly improbable, it is important to recall how far western policy has often been stretched in the past in order to protect and defend the apartheid system in South Africa.

Even if all the likely dangers inherent in the growing apartheid war against the African states are not spelled out in detail, it is still of great importance that information about the current situation be widely disseminated, particularly in those countries from which the Pretoria regime is able to secure extensive support.

Letters

Working towards a just solution

Dear Editor:

I have wanted to write this letter for some time now but have always put off the job. As this 'Year of Peace' is drawing to a close, I want you to know how much we at the Social Justice Committee commend you for your allocation of space to Peace Initiatives.

We have been in existence for 12 years and often notice a reluctance on the part of the media to cover topics and issues thoroughly or regularly that are vital to better informing readers at large. We hope that you will have received enough positive feedback locally to make this a permanent and prominent feature of The Record.

The SJC is a non-profit group working towards a more just, peaceful and equitable world. We rely on public participation and cooperation from all sectors of society. Primarily we are involved in public education with anglophone Montrealers, although requests often come to us from the outlying regions, including the Sherbrooke area. Teachers, church people and students from the townships have borrowed simulation games, bought Bridgehead products, done research, etc. through our resource centre and office. Copies of Pigeon Hill newsletters, their announcements, copies of your column are on display along with material from other NGOs (non-governmental organizations).

It is important that groups like ours and the Pigeon Hill Centre exist, but it is equally important that relationships develop with groups that have access to larger and less homogenous audiences. Your collaboration is indeed helping to achieve a more informed public debate on peace issues and is actively (albeit slowly) encouraging public participation in the democratic process.

Kind regards,

$25 to restore sight

Dear Editor:

Thanksgiving is that special time of the year we pause to give thanks for family friends, food and all the other blessings we as Canadians enjoy.

How fortunate we really are that in spite of setbacks or adversities, that may from time to time affect some. In the main, we can be thankful for the availability of the necessities of life such that we may participate in the activities of our choosing and to enjoy the sight of all scenic pleasures that Canada has to offer. People in other parts of the world are not as fortunate.

On this day in history

Neptune, eighth planet from the sun, was discovered by German astronomer Johann Galle 140 years ago today — in 1846 — within one degree of a position predicted earlier by two scientists from France and Britain. Neptune was the first planet discovered through theoretical calculations.

Also on this day in:
63 BC — Roman emperor Augustus Caesar was born.

I read an item recently, quoting the World Health Organization, which indicated that there are 40 million blind people in the world — mostly in the developing countries. People unable to be productive due to lack of vitamins, unclean water, lack of education as to proper health care. About one half of these people are curable blind people that due to lack of funds or availability of nearby medical help continue in their helpless way.

Fortunately there are some fine organizations in the world that are giving help to try and eradicate these problems, and I am thankful and proud that one such organization is a Canadian based one, headquartered in Calgary, Alberta, that this year has as their objective the treatment of one million eyes, and the restoring of sight for 100,000 curable blind people. God bless them and may their work prosper with the help of all Canadians.

For a donation of only $25, which is tax deductible, sight can be restored to some individual in the 17 countries in which they now have 70 projects in motion.

For everyone awareness their name and address is: Operation Eyesight Universal, P.O. Box 123, Stn. "M", Calgary, Alta. T2P 2H6.

Dear Editor:

I feel a few words of congratulations are in order for the organizers and participants of Brome Fair which I feel might be of interest to your readers.

The day was hot, the highways were jammed, the parking lots were filled and the landowners were smiling. It was Sunday, Aug. 31 and the second day of Brome Fair, 1986. It was the first year in a long time that I remember good weather and nothing helps a fair better than sunshine.

Not only were the visitors all gussied up in their summer-Sunday best, but the animals were scrubbed spic and span by their proud owners, who all seemed to be enjoying the camaraderie of Brome Fair weekend. As one farmer commented, "The nice weather sure helps keep the animals clean."

The building that housed the various breeds and colorful plumages of poultry is always a favourite among the young and old, and the area where the rabbits are kept bring rapturous smiles to the youngsters. One large white fluffy rabbit was a most popular attraction and I'm certain there was more than one child who would have loved to have taken one home.

The sheep judging was another popular event and I was fascinated to see the owners lead the sheep around with one hand under their necks to guide them, however some didn't seem to want to go in the same direction as their owner.

Clydesdales, Belgium Drafts and Percherons were just a few of the horse breeds that took part in the midday parade that is said to be the largest horse and wagon parade in Eastern Canada. Beautifully groomed and with their elaborate harnesses, they made a most impressive sight as they pulled their owners in various shaped wagons. Following this horse parade was a parade of the cleanest, polished prize cows led by their families. All in all a wonderful afternoon of entertainment for the whole family.

Our rumbling stomachs signalled that it was lunch-time but the question was what to choose, as there were enough food concessions to satisfy anyone's cravings. We opted for the fresh boiled corn and the steamed hot-dogs, following by a huge ice cream laded with nuts and candy...

The game area was sheltered by canopies, which gave a brief respite from the sweltering sun and is always a popular spot. One game that I hadn't seen before was the Knock the frog into the basket, which I thought was hilarious. My brother-in-law did just that and won a small stuffed dolphin. (they certainly don't give anything away).

The Artisan and Craft buildings are always interesting to browse through and if I had more money my Christmas shopping could have been completed with the wide assortment of original arts and crafts. My only purchase was naturally books from the Brome Historical Society, which provide excellent reading.

In my estimation the fair was the best one yet and all the organizers and participants deserve a high round of applause. Only dedication and hard work could ensure such a successful event. BRAVO!

Sincerely,

This is good news for all

Dear Editor

If someone is praying for me to believe, repent and be saved, I already believe the teachings of the scriptures and it would be a great privilege to be among those who will be preserved alive through Armageddon into the New World without ever dying.

There is not the slightest possibility that I will ever go to heaven. I will not be among the 144,000 made up of the apostles of Jesus Christ and other faithful servants of Yahweh who will have the heavenly resurrection. (Revelation 14: 1-7) This planet was created to be the perpetual home of the human race and this is where most of Yahweh's people will live forever in paradise and where the dead will be brought back to life.

I think we should study all the scriptures to get an accurate knowledge of the truth and not just pick out one or two verses that we like the sound of. With too much emphasis on the theme that all sins will be forgiven, some may get the mistaken idea that they can go on being part of Satan's world and still live through Armageddon because no matter how covetous, dishonest or immoral they are, all their sins will be forgiven anyway. This is unscriptural. "For if we sin willfully, after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation." (Hebrews 10: 26, 27)

When Satan and his angels were thrown out of heaven they did not go to Sheol or Gehenna. (Revelation 12: 7-9) They were cast down to this earth where Satan is the (false) god and ruler of this world. "But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost: In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not." (2 Corinthians 4: 3, 4) It is Satan and his demons who are the unseen spiritual influence behind the racial, religious and political turmoil that makes up so much of the news today.

During his earthly ministry, Jesus Christ did not try to reform Satan's world or be any part of it. It can never be reformed any more than the world before the flood. He taught publicly and from house to house telling the people about his Kingdom which will replace Satan's system after Armageddon and which will rule this planet forever in peace and prosperity. This is good news for all those who will qualify for life in the new World.

Yours very truly,
GEORGE HALL

Farm and Business

Grain war hurts Canadians and Australians

By Clyde Graham

The Canadian Press

Mick Charles, who grows wheat, oats and barley on his 3,400-hectare farm, is deeply worried about plunging world grain prices and an escalating trade war.

"There's going to be a lot of farmers going broke," Charles said in an interview.

He's singing the same blues being sung by other farmers when they gather in curling rinks, grain elevators and small-town coffee shops across rural Canada.

The only difference is that Charles's farm is in Australia, about 560 kilometres southwest of Sydney.

Charles is president of the Australian Grain Council, which represents that country's grain farmers. He stopped in for a courtesy call at the Canadian Wheat Board office in Winnipeg on his way home from an international farm meeting in Washington.

The governments of Canada and Australia have been leading a common campaign against high levels of farm subsidization in the United States and the European Economic Community.

DECLINE STEADY

Price support programs and other farm subsidies in the United States and Europe have contributed to a steady slide in world grain prices. The global price of wheat is at a seven-year low and still falling.

Last spring, Canadian Wheat Board Minister Charlie Mayer arranged a meeting in Whistler, B.C., of the five major grain exporters — Canada, Australia, Argentina, United States and European Economic Community — to discuss deteriorating market conditions.

Canada is the world's second largest wheat exporter after the United States. Australia and the EEC are third or fourth, depending on the year, and Argentina is ranked fifth.

In August, Australian officials called together 14 farm exporting countries with low levels of farm subsidies, including Canada, to come up with a common front against the American and European programs.

It's not surprising Australia and Canada would play that role. The parallels between farming in these countries and the trade problems they face are striking.

LITTLE SUPPORT

Farmers in both countries receive relatively low levels of government support.

Both are sparsely populated countries exporting the bulk of their grain production — a sharp contrast to the United States and the European Economic Community, where more than half the annual grain production is consumed domestically.

Charles said both Canadian and Australian farmers are trying to make a living selling grain on markets that are being flooded by surpluses.

There's little hope for a quick change in the world market.

Improvements in the use of farm chemicals and fertilizers coupled with new, high-yielding grain varieties have boosted the ability of poorer countries to grow their own food.

China, the most populous country in the world, is near self-sufficiency. India, with the second largest population, is exporting food.

RECORD HARVESTS

In developed areas, such as the European Economic Community, governments have propped up prices in order to encourage higher production. The result has been a series of record global harvests.

In the last 26 years, total world production of wheat, rice, corn and other grains has doubled to 1.66 billion tonnes.

But that doesn't mean everyone in the world has enough to eat. Countries where hunger still takes its toll have been forced to cut food imports because of the recession of the early 1980s and mounting foreign debts.

Charles said that in Australia, as in Canada, grain prices are so low farmers are beginning to wonder if it's worth their while.

"A lot of farmers can't produce at that level."

He said a key to solving the current crisis will be to inform taxpayers in Europe and the United States about the heavy costs of subsidizing agriculture.

In Canada, taxpayers pay about $31 dollars in subsidies for every tonne of wheat grown. In the United States, it's about $97 and in Europe, a whopping $116.

Charles said there has to be a push by ordinary Europeans and Americans to change policies that are causing so many problems for farmers Down Under and in the Great White North.

Quebec changed dramatically since Levesque

By Dennis Bueckert

The Canadian Press

Gone are the days of self-pity or futile anger — Quebec in the 1980s is getting down to business.

Businessmen and economists agree that the social climate in the province has undergone a profound change since the days when separatists reigned and head offices fled.

Tangible evidence of the new mood can be seen in many areas — from Montreal's current construction boom to the Quebec government's improved credit rating. It is seen in the success of the Montreal Exchange and in the flood of Quebec companies going public for the first time.

It is seen most of all in the attitudes of Quebecers, who are no longer leaving in droves for Ontario and the West but are staying home to build up their own economy.

"In the past 10 years there has been a dramatic change in the values of the Quebec population in general, and among youth in particular," says Jean-Paul Letourneau, executive vice-president of the Quebec Chamber of Commerce.

WANT MONEY

Pollster Allan Gregg, chairman of Decima Research Ltd. of Toronto, says Quebecers' preoccupation with politics is being replaced by their interest in business and making money.

Letourneau adds that in the past four or five years, Quebec has turned out more graduates in business administration than any other province.

Quebec Chamber of Commerce figures show the province has gained 10,000 new businesses annually in the past four years — those figures are net, after failures have been subtracted.

Probably the most concrete evidence of the new dynamism in Quebec is the construction boom in Montreal. Statistics from the city's development office show that commercial construction in the region at the beginning of September was up by 45 per cent over the previous year.

The residential sector is even stronger, with construction so far this year about 54 per cent higher than at the same point last year. And property values in some areas have doubled in 12 months.

The situation could hardly present a sharper contrast with that of 10 years ago, as the Parti Quebecois began implementing its controversial language policies and preparing for a referendum on sovereignty-association.

Statistics Canada figures show the net outflow of Quebecers to other provinces in 1977-78 totalled more than 46,000. The population hemorrhage continued at an average rate of nearly 27,000 people annually over the next five years, and was accompanied by the departure of numerous corporate head offices.

Royal Bank of Canada economist Reza Ghaeli predicts that in 1986, for the first time in a decade, Quebec will experience a net inflow of population from other provinces.

Not surprisingly, there was jubilation in Montreal when Ultramar Inc., recently announced it was moving its head office back to the city, after having left for the Toronto area in 1979.

CUTS INCOME TAX

Ultramar president Jean Gaulin said the return was based on business, not political, considerations but he did acknowledge the decision was made easier by cuts in personal income tax introduced by Finance Minister Gerard Levesque in last May's budget.

Gaulin said there used to be a 10 per cent difference in the marginal tax rate between Quebec and Ontario, and now it is only five per cent.

Letourneau says Premier Robert Bourassa has done much to improve the climate, but he also notes that the ground was prepared by the Parti Quebecois.

For example, he said, the PQ requirement that business contracts be in French led many large companies dominated by anglophones to put francophones on their senior staff.

On top of that, the exodus of anglophone businessmen and managers created opportunities for francophones who moved into the vacated positions, where they were quickly recognized as a "new breed."

Former Parti Quebecois Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau made a substantial contribution with his Quebec Stock Savings Plan, which allowed Quebecers generous writeoffs for money they invest in eligible Quebec corporations.

The plan, launched in 1979, is credited with bringing more than $2 billion in new money into Quebec companies.

And Gregg warns that if francophone businessmen feel the federal government and the rest of the country are preventing them from reaching their goals, there could be a revival in politics and Quebec nationalism.

Red ripe tomatoes are perfect lately

A welcome recipe for late summer when tomatoes are so plentiful.

Tomato Juice
4-5 lbs. ripe tomatoes (Beefsteak preferred)
1 green pepper
½ bunch celery (including leaves)
several sprigs fresh basil
2 cups water
1 large onion, chopped
5-6 peppercorns
¼ cup salt
1 carrot, chopped
sugar to taste
½ cup fresh parsley

Wash and cut tomatoes, removing any soft spots. Put in a large kettle with all the other ingredients except the sugar. Bring to a boil, reduce the heat and let simmer until all the vegetables are very soft. Be sure to stir occasionally. Put through food mill or sieve. Return to heat, add sugar to taste and any other seasonings you fancy. Bring to a boil; pour into sterilized jars and seal. Cooking time about 2 hours.

This juice is thick. It can be served as juice, used in tomato aspic or served as soup. For a special soup for brunch, thin with beef bouillon with a dash of sherry.

Old Fashioned Tomato Relish
(a jar would make a nice gift)
24 ripe tomatoes, peeled
12 medium onions
3 green peppers
3 tablespoons salt
2 tablespoons crushed red pepper
1½ cups brown sugar
2 cups vinegar
1 tablespoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon ground cloves
1 tablespoon mustard

Chop vegetables and combine with remainder of ingredients. Bring to a slow boil and simmer until mushy and juice has thickened (about 3 hours). Stir occasionally to prevent sticking. Pack in hot, sterilized jars and screw lids down very tightly. Tighten lids again when cooled.

Are cucumbers overflowing

Kay's kitchen korner

BY KAY TAYLOR

your garden? Here is an idea!
Yield 1 quart.

Marinated Cucumbers

1 cup cider vinegar
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon salt
1 tablespoon celery seed
1 medium red onion, thinly sliced
4 cups cucumbers, peeled and thinly sliced

Combine all ingredients except onion and cucumbers, bring to a boil. Add onion and cucumbers. Fill quart jar with the mixture. Refrigerate overnight before serving. The marinade may be "recycled" by adding more cucumbers. Keeps indefinitely in the refrigerator.

This one is wonderful on a hot day.

Cucumber Lime Mold

9 oz. lime flavoured gelatin (3 pkgs small)
1½ teaspoon salt
2½ cups boiling water
2 tablespoons vinegar
cherry tomatoes
1½ pints sour cream
2 cups cucumbers, pared, seeded and finely chopped
¾ cup scallions, chopped, or Bermuda onions cucumber slices.

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water in a large bowl. Stir in the vinegar and chill until slightly thickened. Blend in sour cream; fold in cucumber and onion. Pour into a 2 quart mold which has been lightly oiled and chill for 4 hours or until firm. Unmold onto lettuce leaves and garnish with slices of cucumber and cherry tomatoes.

Many Asians still don't want baby girls

By Roger Crabb

SEOUL (Reuter) — Millions of abortions and horrifying tales of female infanticide continue in many parts of Asia where one of the worst tragedies that can befall a family is the birth of a baby girl.

Confucian tradition and religious taboos still weigh heavily on Asian society, despite rapid economic development and increasing sophistication of the region's products and services.

In China, the home of Confucius, the communist government officially dismisses the centuries-old prejudice against girls as feudal.

Yet the preference for sons rather than daughters among the country's 800 million peasants is so deep-rooted that China has had to amend its one-child-per-family policy in some areas despite fears of a population explosion.

In South Korea, too, where ultra-modern factories turn out cars and video players for the eager North American market, the government is still battling the country's Confucian legacy.

Alarmed at the growing number of abortions among women expecting baby girls, Seoul has just banned all pre-natal sex tests.

PUSH GOVERNMENT

Feminist and civil rights organizations in India have petitioned their government to take a similar step, so far in vain.

They say the clinics which offer sex tests are pandering to families who do not want a girl. The campaigners want the government to restrict the tests to medical institutions under proper supervision.

"We are living in a country with a strong sex bias against women," said Sushila Gopalan, general secretary of the All-India Democratic Women's Association. "The test is another cross an Indian woman has to bear."

Both China, which has a mushrooming population of more than one billion, and India, with an even faster growing population of about 750 million, have legalized abortion as an instrument of birth control.

An estimated 8.89 million abortions were performed in China in 1984, and latest figures for India show almost two million in 1980-81.

Female infanticide — the killing of little girls after they are born — is widespread in northern India although no figures are available, Gopalan said. One widely used method was suffocating the baby with a wet towel, she added.

Though China last year angrily denied allegations that infanticide was rife in rural areas, official media do publicize individual cases.

ATTEMPTED MURDER

A man from the city of Kaifeng was accused of attempting to murder his three-month-old daughter by sticking pins and bamboo splinters into her head after his wife suggested they try for a boy.

"This case shows that the attitude which honors males and despises females is deeply rooted in the minds of a minority," the China Health News commented.

In more affluent Asian societies, the old taboos seem to be slowly dying. A spokesman for the social-welfare department in bustling Hong Kong, for example, said higher living standards and education had helped change parental attitudes toward girls.

Many Chinese in the British colony now claim to have no preference for baby boys although there is a lingering need for a male heir to carry on the family name.

In South Korea, where living standards are also soaring, the government plans to upgrade the social status of women and expand their job opportunities so that they can win recognition as more valuable members of society.

But in Asia generally there is still a long way to go. The prevail-

Even in modern times, many young Asian girls are lucky to have such a good relationship with their parents as this one apparently has.

ling boys-first attitude was starkly illustrated last year when reporters found impoverished peasant women offering babies for sale at a market in Shenzhen, ironically one of China's economic showcases just across the border from Hong Kong.

The going rate was $540 US for a boy and $325 for a girl.

Cup and saucer shower

On Sunday afternoon, several relatives and friends assembled at the Laura Leggett home in Beebe to honor her daughter Beth with a cup and saucer shower on the occasion of her approaching marriage. Seasonal floral arrangements adorned the rooms.

Seated at a table, well laden with prettily wrapped packages, assisted by the prospective groom Richard Gagné, she opened them and read aloud the sentiment expressed on the card, while the groom-to-be made a note of article and donor. Among the beautiful gifts with cups and saucers, was a book which the future bride asked all to sign with name, address and phone number.

Beth was in a knitted pink wool suit, with pearl earrings and necklace, gift of her mother. She wore no corsage but her mother Laura Leggett and grandmother Dolly Woodard were each presented with a corsage made by Beth.

The gifts were arranged on a table by great-aunt Mildred Woodard to be viewed.

The special fruit cake was made by grandmother Dolly Woodard, with icing in white, the trim was lilacs and yellow daisies done by Laura Simon and Rachelle Taylor of Waterloo also brought a beautifully decorated cake.

Lunch consisted of assorted sandwiches squares, pickles, olives, coffee, tea or punch. Joan Hands of Westmount poured and Muriel Hall assisted with the serving. Beth expressed her thanks to all for the lovely afternoon.

Ann Couture and Lisa Tremblay of Newport, Vt., school pals of Beth, along with relatives and friends from Westmount, Waterloo and the Three Villages attended. A very pleasant afternoon was spent.

Beth Leggett and Richard Gagné plan a January 1987 wedding to be held in Montreal.

Baby shower

A baby shower in honour of Gwen O'Brien took place on September 2 at the home of Mrs. Elsie Royea, Knowlton, with 17 guests attending.

In the form of a money shower, it was a complete surprise to Gwen. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Muriel Cooke and Sylvia Davis. The special shower cake beautifully decorated in pink and white was made by Elsie for the happy occasion.

Are all males sex maniacs at university?

Dear Ann Landers: You were right when you said a lot of Western Illinois University students would reply to the girl who insisted that all she wanted was a hug from her fellow (male) students and was unable to find even one who was willing to settle for just a hug.

I, too, went through the problem of wanting to find male friends and finding nothing but sex maniacs. I discovered that I was seraching in the wrong places. As soon as I stopped looking in bars and at fraternity parties, I found several male friends and very good ones.

The right places for me were: at work in the cafeteria, in the library, and social activities sponsored by the university.

When the guys needed dates, they would ask us. On graduation day we hugged and cried, and vowed to keep in touch. We have. We exchange Christmas cards, attend each other's weddings, and send birthday cards.

My advice to anyone who wants a good friend of the opposite sex is to look under you nose. The people you spend every day with don't want to risk a lifetime of friendship for one night of passion. — A WIU grad.

Dear grad: Your letter could have come from any of a number of campuses. Thanks for sharing some concepts that are mature, sensible and practical.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a career woman in my 50s. I travel on my job, usually with younger employees, and we often have dinner together. It's a source of great embarrassment to be asked if I would like the senior citizen's discount. If I wanted a discount I would ask for it. Why don't restaurants put up a notice saying, "Senior citizen's discount available to eligible parties who request it?"

It bothers me terribly to be reminded that I look older than I am.

— Still Feelin' Young

Dear Feelin': Only an insensitive jerk would ask a person that question, especially in the presence of others. I recommended that the sign be posted in establishments that hire morons.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a problem with my 72-year-old financially well-to-do father. To put it simply, for the past 18 months he has been a "sugar daddy" to a woman in her early 50s. My mother has Alzheimer's disease and has been in a nursing home for the last six years. She has been little more than a vegetable for at least two years.

In 1985, father gave his friend (a mill worker) approximately $20,000. He has given her more than $25,000 since January.

Last fall, I consulted a psychiatrist about this situation. She was reassuring, said my father was lonely and guilt-ridden and allowing this woman to manipulate him financially because it was a "release." If and when mother died, she explained, my father would find someone stable, mature and intelligent, like my mother.

The professional's evaluation calmed me for a while, but now I am becoming anxious again and it doesn't really make sense. This is not the first woman Dad has given money to. A woman he met when mother first began to act peculiar took him for an $18,000 car and a mink coat. I can't believe he is in his second childhood because he is extremely competent in business and highly respected for his acumen.

My sister and I want our father to have an active social life, but we hate to see him being taken for a sucker. Do you have any suggestions about how we might deal with this problem? — H.M. (North Carolina)

Dear H.M.: There's no fool like an old fool unless it's an old fool trying to act like a young fool.

Unfortunately, there is little you and your sister can do without appearing to be trying to salvage your inheritance. Accept the fact that your father's taste leaves something to be desired but he is a big boy and entitled to do as he pleases with his money. Apparently, he feels as if he is getting amply compensated or he wouldn't continue with such monkeyshines.

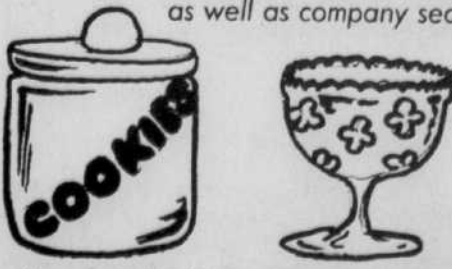

Dear Ann Landers: No twin has ever become president of the United States nor have I ever heard of a twin who was a great inventor or the winner of a Nobel prize. Is this because the brain material must be divided between two people and each twin has half as many brains as he or she normally would have? I am — Not A Twin, Happily.

Dear Hap: Well, I AM a twin (happily) and so far as I know both my sister, Dear Abby, and I have enough brains so that we are able to get along in the world, even though we haven't won any Nobel prizes.

Foundation of God Stands Sure

"Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his; and, Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." (2 Timothy 2:19)

Perhaps you have wondered about the many Christians who do not seem to make even good neighbours? And, what about all the different teachings about religious things?

When Paul wrote to Timothy there were similar problems. False teachers and erroneous doctrines were plentiful. One group denied any hope of resurrection, "saying that the resurrection is past already" (2 Tim. 2:18). The faith of some was greatly shaken by these attacks. Careful teaching of the truth was being lost to subtle diversions and outright heresies concerning Christ. But God sent a comforting message: "the foundation of God standeth sure".

In context, the "foundation of God" means that which is established or founded by God, distinct from all things of men. In this text, the foundation of God is those people God knows. They are, in a figure, the people He has built from nothing, and without anyone's help, not even their own efforts. Because of God's work, the faith of these believers in Christ is solid.

What is the evidence of God's sure work? The text tells us it is as a seal. In eastern lands it was common to make an inscription on the door posts of a building as a memorial of its construction or a testimonial about the owners and their beliefs. God explains that His children likewise have a distinct, recognizable seal.

First, "the Lord knoweth them that are his". This is much more than an acquaintance. It means God has always loved His people, always will. On the other hand, God takes no special knowledge of anyone else. It cannot be that a person is known of God and yet does not ever become aware of it. This leads to the second part of God's distinct seal:

Second, those known of God will confess the Lord Jesus and "depart from iniquity". There will never be a lack of people who say they are followers of Christ and appear to do religious and other deeds for Him. But if you look carefully, there is something "not right" about their life.

Iniquity is unrighteousness, or

Religious Texts

By Rev. Ronald B. Stewart

'not-right-ness'. The people who only seem to be Christians fail the test of "departing from iniquity". They will not separate from sinful attitudes, practices or even wrong beliefs. Their emotions are often explosive, not Spirit-controlled. They have fear of superstition greater than fear of God. Or, they desire to be every man's friend alike, not recognizing that there are enemies of God and compromising situations that must be separated from because of God's truth, love and holiness. False teachers are one example of those who will not depart from iniquity. (note Matt. 7: 21-23)

Of course, people can be evangelized without God's children being as one of them. Infiltration has never been successful in combat against sinfulness, as Lot's case tells us (Gen. 19). God's way is a holy separation: pleasing to Him, profitable for you and invitational to souls yet in their sins (2 Cor. 6: 14-18; 1 Pet. 1: 13-16).

There is encouragement in 2 Timothy 2:19 for every faithful Bible teacher and student. Family members may prefer the paths of unrighteousness. Church members may fall away. But the foundation of God stands. His people will persevere.

There is encouragement for every soul in 2 Tim. 2:19. For believers, they have God's sure seal: they are known of Him, and separated unto Him. For anyone without Christ, there is the certainty that a faithful company of God's people does exist. This text gives us two identifying characteristics of the genuine believer confessing Christ: known of God, departed from iniquity.

Dominion Day celebration at Bury Baseball game, sports and dance held by Athletic Association --
High School Results announced for Lower Grades

Bury, Que., July 7 — The Dominion Day celebration and sports here was a splendid day of enjoyment and a great success. Favored with fine weather the crowd was in a holiday mood, and no untoward incident, accident or unpleasantness marred the day. The refreshment booth of the W.I. and the stand of the Boy Scouts did good business. The day's doings opened with a baseball match between Lingwick and Bury. The visitors had much the best of the game, the final score being, Lingwick 18; Bury 8. After lunch the afternoon sports opened at 1:45. The various events were run off without a hitch and the winners were as follows:

100 yard dash — 1st Percy Armstrong; 2. Roger Downes, time 11.5 sec. Pole vault — 1. Everett Rudd, 7 ft. 10 in.; 2. Thomas MacDonald, 7 ft. 8 in. Boys, 5 to 8 yrs. — 1. James Robertson, 2. Bill Cook, 3. Billy Provis. Girls 5-8 yrs. — 1. Tiny Burns, 2. Ethel Ward, 3. Lena Lizotte. Quarter mile open — 1. Percy Armstrong, 2. Winston Prangley, 3. Gene Anderson, time 58 1-5 sec. Boys, 9 and under 12 — 1. Sidney Bailey, 2. Elmer Kerr. Girls, 9 and under 12 — 1. Yvonne Evans, 2. Brenda Groom. High Jump — 1. Percy Armstrong, 4 ft. 9 in.; 2. Winston Prangley, 4 ft. 7 in. Broad Jump — 1. Percy Armstrong, 18 ft. 6 in.; T. Lapalme, 17 ft. 9 in. Hurdle race 150 yards — 1. Percy Armstrong, 2. Winston Prangley. Baseball throw — Webb 254 ft.

One mile, open — 1. Clifford Gaulin, 2. Arthur Atkins, 3. Gene Anderson. Girls 12 to 14, 100 yards — 1. Marjorie Scowan, 2. Alice Marshall. Boys 12 to 14, 100 yards — 1. Eric Bailey, 2. Arthur Winslow. Ladies' race, 50 yards backwards — 1. Arlene Savaria, 2. Julia Lapointe. Ladies, 100 yard dash — 1. Alice Marshall, 2. Arlene Savaria. Potato race horseback — 1. Jimmie Lasemba, 2. Gene Anderson, 3. Willis, 4. Philip Edgerton. This race afforded a good deal of amusement, one horse exhibiting a strong desire to go home at the end of each run down the course.

The Bury Brass Band played at intervals during the afternoon and were to have given a performance during the evening but something wrong with the electric wiring gave them no lights on the band stand, which was not rectified until too late to be of use.

The day closed with a dance at the Town Hall which was largely attended. The Bury Athletic Association is to be congratulated and commended for establishing this annual event which is all to the good of the community at large.

Celebration of Dominion Day at Hatley

Usual successful Parade, Band Concert, Sports Meets, Ball Game and Dance enjoyed at Hatley — Ladies served lunch on Village Common to 600 people.

Hatley, Que., July 14 — It is becoming the custom for many from other places to visit Hatley for the Dominion Day celebration, because they meet their old friends from all directions. Others are drawn by the jolly parade, the ever potent charms of the band, the opportunity for a delicious lunch at a low price, the ball game, sports and other attractions. Some who this year visited the village for the first time were greatly struck by the attractiveness of the spacious common with its fringe of historic maples, and expressed the opinion that the spot is ideal for an undertaking of this nature.

The glorious day lent its cheer to the large crowd which early assembled around the common and along the route to be followed by the parade, which presently appeared, led by the mayor riding a black horse and carrying a large Union Jack. He was followed by a detachment of soldiers and Miss Canada, John Bull and Uncle Sam. Then came the Ayer's Cliff band, under the direction of Mr. F.A. Johnston, fancy cars came next, that of Miss

Birch, in red and white, very daintily, carrying off the first prize, while Miss Doris Leavitt, cleverly representing a bird-cage, secured second. Mr. L. Lobb, with decoration of red, white and blue was third. Following these were the fancy teams, Mrs. Harold Yertaw carrying off first prize with a patriotic design; Mrs. Bryan, second, with a very striking black and tangerine, and Mrs. Foote, third, also with her, white and blue.

Fancy floats followed, first place being deservedly won by the Japanese float; second, by representing Massawippi camp life, and third by the United Church.

Many people think there is no part of the parade more attractive than that furnished by the children, and this year there were more entries than usual in this division. Prizes were presented to Master Robert Whitcomb, pony and racing sulky; Morton and Donald Bowen, yoke of calves; Margaret Moulton, dog-cart with dolls in mauve and white; Stanley Whitcomb and Charlie Moulton as clowns on ponies; Robert Eardley-Wilmot as a little green elf driving (as two white rabbits) Yvonne and Oscar Laflamme; Iris Benoit, Annabel MacDougall and Cecily Eardley-Wilmot, as Indians with pony; and Billy and Patsy Pidduck, with cart and doll's carriage, decorated with daisies and white. Three fancy bicycles brought up the rear and were judged equal, they were ridden by Arthur Hall, Madeline Moulton and Lillian Foote.

Cookshire happenings

Row of tenements destroyed by fire

One of the most destructive fires in Cookshire occurred last Friday afternoon, resulting in the row of tenement buildings on Pleasant Street, owned by Mr. R.H. Pope, demolished, and the rendering homeless of about 35 people.

The fire, which from all accounts started in the home of Mr. John Wilson in the centre of the block, was first discovered about 3 p.m. Within a short while the entire upper storey was burning fiercely, and a half hour after the fire was discovered the whole block was ablaze. The fire apparatus was on the scene promptly and the streams from four lines of hose were soon playing on the fire. It was soon seen that the whole block must go and the principal energies of the volunteer firemen were directed in saving the house of Mr. Felix Dumont, adjoining the tenements, from igniting. At one time it looked as though this house would go too, and a salvage corps was put to work, soon clearing out the house of everything valuable, but fortunately the blaze was kept within bounds. The home of Mr. L.H. Martin at the other end of the tenements, was in no danger, although the windows were boarded up to prevent accidents and the house occasionally soaked with water. A great deal of the effects of the dwellers was saved, although one or two lost mostly everything. Of the six families who tenanted the block, the principal sufferers are Mr. Graham, who saved very little, Mr. Steve Willard and Mr. J.H. Wilson. Mr. D. Downing lost considerable but was insured.

Mayor Gauthier had charge of the volunteer firemen and did his duty well. The men worked well and although there was some confusion at first, as can be expected where there is no perfect organization, the work of fighting the flames was carried on steadily and, after a while, systematically.

Improving the odds

It's a sign of bad luck if you take two finesse and lose them both. East won the second diamond trick with the ace and returned a trump. South took the heart ace, reached dummy with a high club and finessed the 10 of hearts. West won the queen and played back a trump. Declarer later misguessed the location of the spade queen and was set.

It was certainly a tossup as to who had the queen of trumps, but there was another element to the problem. Any missing five cards of a suit will divide 3-2 more often than not — in fact, 68 percent of the time. If they do in this case, the contract can be assured by refusing the trump finesse. Instead, declarer should cash his second high heart. If the queen does not drop, he should then play out the high clubs. Eventually West will come on lead with the heart queen and be forced to lead the spade suit for the declarer, allowing the contract to be made.

What if East originally held Q-x-x-x in hearts? South can still force out the queen of hearts, pick up the other small heart and then try to guess the location of the spade queen to make the contract. The important thing is that he has taken his best play to make his bid.

There is a strong likelihood that in the year ahead you will be more independent than you have been in the past. This is admirable, but don't unwisely dissolve alliances that have proven advantageous.

She had been told they were to celebrate her son Warren's birthday. Instead her complete family and several other relatives were awaiting her arrival to help celebrate her "special" birthday.

A most delicious buffet supper was served complete with the traditional birthday cake, which was a masterpiece in the shape of a dial phone, made and decorated by daughter-in-law Linda, assisted by another daughter-in-law Janice. "Hello, is Mom Home" was inscribed at the top, while the letters on the dial spelled "Happy Birthday". Daughters Janet, Shelley and Trudy were responsible for the lovely decorations in pink, blue and white.

The centerpiece on the head table was a large bouquet of white mums and pink and blue carnations. The other three long tables were centered with vases of pink and white silk carnations.

Seated at the head table with the guest of honour were her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Marsh, sisters-in-law, Mrs. Marjorie Willard and Mrs. Veronica Bean, brother-in-law Royce Deacon.

If your money isn't growing at the rate it could, you need a Gain Plan.

THE GAIN PLAN: Daily Interest Investment Savings Account.

Making the most of one's savings.

That's rule #1 for the smart investor.

And in a nutshell, that's the reason for The Gain Plan. Scotiabank makes it easy for you to invest... in a savings account... one that earns high interest. Every day.

As a rule, the interest rate on daily closing balances of $5,000 or more will equal or exceed the rate you'll find on our 30-day Term Deposits. In other words it's high. On balances of $10,000 or more... it's higher. $25,000 or more... higher still. So the more you invest, the more you gain.

And interest, at a rate determined by your daily closing balance, is paid monthly on the total amount on deposit in your account.

The Gain Plan is simple and straightforward. You enjoy attractive interest rates without locking up your funds and without the inconvenience of periodically rolling over Term Deposits, GICs and Treasury Bills. Plus, you retain the flexibility of a savings account. Transactions can be made over the counter at your Scotiabank branch or at any Scotia Cashstop®/Trans-Action™ machine. Two cheques or withdrawals a month are complimentary.

And you can watch your investment grow with your Gain Plan Passbook or if you prefer, you can arrange to receive a monthly statement.

At Scotiabank, we believe it's in your best interest to make your savings work even harder. So, if you want your money to grow at the rate it could, invest in The Gain Plan. Your financial game plan should include it. And Scotiabank is where you'll find it.

Remember, you have everything to gain.

*Interest will not be payable on daily closing balances under $5,000.

Mario Tremblay retires at 30

Injury in Sherbrooke last fall was the beginning of the end

By Alan Adams

MONTREAL (CP) — Veteran right-winger Mario Tremblay could still tell a few jokes as he fought off tears while announcing his retirement from the National Hockey League Montreal Canadiens after 12 seasons because of a shoulder injury.

Tremblay, 30, looked around a crowded news conference at the Forum on Monday and spotted former linemate Mats Naslund, the Canadiens' pint-sized forward.

Tremblay recalled that when Naslund joined the Canadiens in 1982-83, many people thought the speedy Swede was too small for the NHL. Naslund, said Tremblay, more than proved them wrong.

"And I told them 'Wait until the other half arrives from Sweden,'" joked Tremblay. "They think he's dangerous now."

Tremblay was a hard-nosed forward not afraid to tangle with anybody. When he recalled the Canadiens-Quebec Nordiques rivalry, Tremblay paid tribute to two of his rivals.

"I'll miss Dale Hunter and Michel Bergeron," said Tremblay, who fought Hunter several times and had many shouting matches with Bergeron, the Nordiques' fiery coach.

On a serious note, Tremblay said he was anxious to start his 13th season with the Canadiens, but his shoulder prevented him from returning.

MISSES 24 GAMES

Tremblay separated his right shoulder in Sherbrooke last September and missed the Canadiens' first 24 games. In March, he broke a collar bone and doctors told him in August that it hadn't completely recovered and he would have to miss the Canadiens' training camp for the first time in his career.

"I am retiring today because of my shoulder injury," said Tremblay, who received a noisy five-minute standing ovation when he was introduced at a Canadiens-St.

Louis Blues pre-season game which Montreal won 4-3. "There was no sense for me to keep trying."

"If my shoulder was well, I would be on the ice. It is the right time to start a second career."

Tremblay, who will become a hockey analyst for a French-language radio station that covers the Canadiens, joined the Canadiens during the 1974-75 season, when he scored 21 goals and 18 assists.

In 852 NHL games, he had 252 goals and 327 assists and 1,043 penalty minutes. In 101 playoff games, he had 20 goals and 29 assists along with 187 penalty minutes. He was on five Stanley Cup teams.

Tremblay said he still hopes to benefit from a revised pension plan that is part of the collective agreement between the NHL Players' Association and team owners.

Under the plan, Tremblay would be eligible for $250,000 at age 55 if he would have played an as yet unspecified number of games this season.

Along with Bob Gainey and Larry Robinson, Tremblay was one of three players left from the Canadiens Stanley Cup winning teams of the late 1970s.

Mario Tremblay... Will miss Bergeron and Hunter.

Big Habs vs. Little Habs in Sherbrooke tonight

Players won't be taking it easy—Ganchar

By William Harris

SHERBROOKE — It's just an exhibition game. Why get all sweaty? After all, they're really all on the same team, right?

Not quite. As Perry Ganchar explains, tonight's annual match-up between the AHL's Sherbrooke Canadiens and the NHL's Montreal Canadiens has taken on a slightly different flavor this year.

"We're all friends, but we're all fighting for jobs as well," says Ganchar, who became Sherbrooke's captain last winter when Kent Carlson was traded. "I certainly won't be out there trying to hurt anybody, but if I have a chance at a good, clean hit, I'm going to take it."

Ganchar, who started training camp in Montreal but was sent back to Sherbrooke last week, sees tonight's game (7:30 p.m. at the Palais des Sports) as a chance to show the Canadiens' top brass something he didn't show them while with the big club.

NOT ENOUGH

"I got better every day I was in Montreal, but I would have had to be outstanding to stay there," he comments. "They have so many young guys in camp, you can't even afford to have a bad shift."

It's frustrating at times, but that's why they won the Stanley Cup last year — all that depth."

Ganchar says he was disappointed when sent down. He would have liked to get an NHL exhibition game under his belt. But he does feel he'll get a call this season if he works hard and plays well.

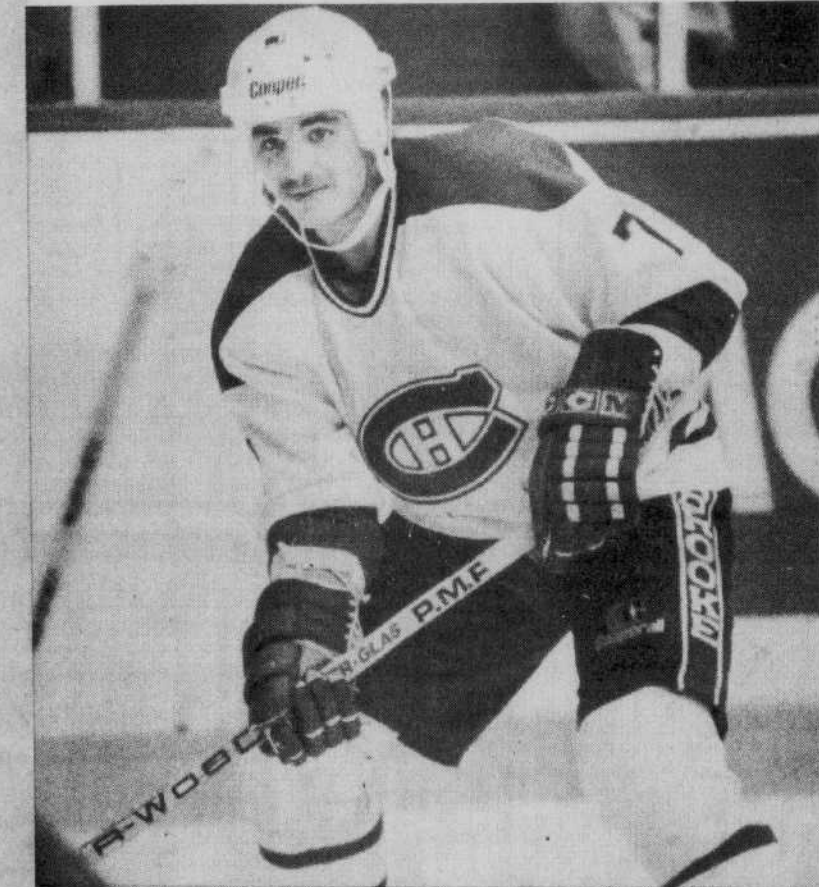

"One thing about the Montreal organization is that if you want a chance, you'll get one," Ganchar observes. "Seeing guys like Claude (Lemieux), Gaston (Gingras) and Randy (Bucyk) do well is encouraging for players in the minors. It shows us guys do get called up, and that we're not just wasting our time here."

"But for now, they want me to be a leader in Sherbrooke."

TINY TOTS

And just how does this year's Sherbrooke squad look? Talented — but small.

"We've got just as much depth as before, but I think we're a little bit lacking in the size and strength department," Ganchar says. "Once the regular season starts it could be tough for a few games while we get our feet wet. There are only four or five familiar faces from last year. The majority of the rest are rookies."

Perry Ganchar... "If I have a chance at a good, clean hit, I'm going to take it."

Stick-happy hockey player fined $500

EDMUNDSTON, N.B. (CP) — A Rimouski hockey player who attacked a fan with his stick last March was fined $500 Monday for assault with a weapon.

Jacques Mailhot, 24, was also placed on probation for a year and suspended from playing hockey in New Brunswick for a year.

It was the second time Mailhot, team "policeman" for the Rimouski Mariners, has been convicted of assaulting a fan with his stick during a hockey game in New Brunswick. The earlier conviction occurred in Campbellton in 1985 for hitting a woman during a melee that cleared both benches and involved several fans.

The latest incident occurred on March 4 during a Republican Hockey League playoff game between the Edmundston Eskimos and the Mariners.

After angry words, Mailhot hit spectator Andre Harton repeatedly with his hockey stick.

Prosecutor Andre Picard said Harton suffered a possible frac-

"Mailhot's role as a hockey player has been and is that of a 'policeman' but surely this doesn't include enforcing on spectators," Picard said.

Defence lawyer Pierre Ouellette said Mailhot has a four-year-old child to support and is not a person who presents a problem on the streets.

"He is aware his behaviour was unacceptable and is repentant," the defence lawyer said.

Last Maple Leaf scoring champ dies

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Gordie Drillon, 71, the last member of the Toronto Maple Leafs to hold the National Hockey League scoring title, died this morning at his home in Saint John, N.B., after a lengthy illness.

Drillon won the scoring title in the old six-team NHL during the 1937-38 season with 26 goals and 26 assists in 48 games.

The Moncton, N.B., native started his career as a junior and joined the Leafs as a 22-year-old in the 1936-37 season, remaining one of the league's top scorers until he left Toronto in 1942.

Bears start slow but come on strong later

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Defence usually sets the tone in the National Football League's oldest rivalry. The Chicago Bears' 25-12 victory Monday night over the Green Bay Packers fit the pattern. Chicago's defence did the crucial work in the Bears' 15-point fourth quarter with a blocked field goal, a safety and an interception.

Dan Hampton blocked Al Del

Greco's 52-yard field goal attempt to preserve a 13-12 Chicago lead. Steve McMichael followed with a disputed sack for a safety that put the Bears up 15-12, and Dave Duerson's interception led to Kevin Butler's final field goal.

"Hampton's block was great, the sacks were great, everything was great," Chicago coach Mike Ditka said after the 132nd Bears-Packers meeting. "We have to give them credit. They play us tough."

Del Greco, who kicked field goals of 22, 46, 45 and 50 yards, lined up for the 52-yard attempt with 8:16 left in the game and the Packers trailing by one point.

"We probably shouldn't have tried that, but he was hot," said Green Bay coach Forrest Gregg.

Teams want to delay final soccer match

SHERBROOKE (CTP) — Representatives from the Univestrie (Sherbrooke) and Luso-Star (Mont-Royal) soccer teams don't want to hold the final of the Ligue nationale de soccer du Québec Wednesday night as planned.

The two teams have lodged a complaint with officials of the league asking that the final be played Sunday night instead.

Univestrie head coach Georges Laurent says his team needs an entire week to recuperate from their Sunday victory against Aurore-Rosemont that ended in a free-for-all.

Wanting to postpone the game "also goes for Luso Mont-Royal who represent the Portuguese community and who would not be able to draw many spectators Wednesday night. Sunday they will be able to have many more supporters at Jarry Park," said Laurent.

The first ever final in the brief history of the league promises to have lots of action in a sudden-death match between two teams that played in the Coupe des Gouverneurs earlier this year (which was won by Luso Mont-Royal).

"This will be our revenge," said Laurent, who is anxiously awaiting the decision whether the two teams can play Sunday.
