Charges and countercharges continue in storm over SIU

OTTAWA (CP) — Charges and countercharges continued to fly Tuesday in the storm surrounding the powerful Seafarers' International Union and federal and provincial politicians.

In the capital, Labor Minister John Munro made another attempt to untangle the web of innuendo that surrounds him. Liberal party money managers said they kept SIU money from reaching Finance Minister John Turner and the attorney-general of Ontario said he will not allow the SIU to prosecute a member of the provincial legislature.

In British Columbia, meanwhile, a former judge who once investigated the Canadian shipping industry said trustees appointed to watch the union in the early 1960s were not tough enough.

Mr. Munro, who became the focal point of the SIU storm when it was alleged—and later disproved—that he solicited campaign funds from the union, took issue in the Commons about an exchange that occurred Monday in the Ontario legislature.

The labor minister said the exchange between Solicitor-General George Kerr and Stephen Lewis, leader of the provincial New Democratic Party, demonstrated how misinformation can be dangerous.

Mr. Lewis asked Mr. Kerr on what grounds he was asking for a royal commission to investigate the SIU, as reported in a Toronto newspaper.

Mr. Kerr replied that there was "some exaggeration to the story" and said the Ontario government is not "demanding a probe." He said he told the reporter that his department had been asked in a letter from federal Justice Minister Otto Lang if there was any reason to call a public inquiry.

He said a reply would be made later this week and, while he had no objection to tabling copies of the letters, he thought he first should ask the federal authorities involved.

Mr. Munro, in raising the exchange in the Commons, said it suggests that MPs "have been basing some of their interventions in this House on misinformation."

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, who has been leading off the daily question period for several days with shots at Mr. Munro's alleged links with the SIU, rejected the minister's contention.

"At no time have I based any interventions . . . on any assumption that the Ontario government had asked for an investigation by the federal government," he said.

MATTER DROPPED

The exchange ground to a halt when Commons Speaker James Jerome (L—Sudbury) agreed with a suggestion by NDP House Leader Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre) that Mr. Munro had no point of privilege and the matter should be dropped.

The disclosure that the SIU tried to donate $200 to Mr. Turner's campaign before the July 8 election came from Senator John Godfrey, chairman of the Liberals' national finance coomittee since 1968.

Senator Godfrey said his political instincts told him to turn back the cheque, dated June 18 and signed by SIU president Roman Gralewicz.

It was sent to party headquarters in Toronto with a letter asking that the money be used in Mr. Turner's re-election campaign in Ottawa-Carleton. Mr. Turner denied Monday that he received SIU funds.

Senator Godfrey said he thought it "outrageous to suggest any cabinet member could be influenced by a $200 or $500 donation."

Robert Welch, Ontario attorney-general, here for the provincial cabinet's third meeting in a series outside Toronto, said he would not accede to the SIU's request to prosecute Morton Shulman, the MPP who first raised the possibility of SIU connections with the Trudeau government.

SAID THANKS

Dr. Shulman (NDP—Toronto High Park) had told the legislature that Mr. Munro said "thanks a million" when Mr. Gralewicz told him in a telephone conversation last spring that the union was donating $500 to his campaign fund.

SIU lawyers have said Dr. Shulman violated the Protection of Privacy Act by disclosing some of the conversation, but Mr. Welch said Tuesday that Dr. Shulman was speaking as a privileged MPP and thus is not liable for legal action.

T. G. Norris of Pitt Meadows, B.C., a former provincial appeal court justice, said from his home that trustees appointed over the SIU in 1963 fought among themselves and apparently ignored a suggestion that they report to Parliament.

Mr. Norris, in a CBC radio interview, said the trustees were not tough enough.

Appointed in 1963 by then prime minister John Diefenbaker, he led a royal commission that investigated the shipping industry and later recommended the SIU be put under the trusteeship, which ended in 1968.

Mr. Norris said any new inquiry, suggestions for which generally have been rejected in Ottawa, must have tough commissioners and tough trustees.

Federal-provincial meeting

Tax dispute may boost oil prices

OTTAWA (CP) — A smouldering dispute over resource taxation that eventually may be settled only by higher domestic oil prices was brought into sharp focus at the federal-provincial meeting of finance ministers that ended Tuesday.

The closed sessions failed to solve the issue, however, creating only a shaky solidarity among the provinces against federal plans to take a bigger share of oil revenues. The oil-consuming provinces do not want higher prices for consumers.

Finance Minister John Turner and his provincial counterparts—notably from oil-rich Alberta and Saskatchewan—have been feuding at long range ever since Mr. Turner brought down his Nov. 18 budget.

Heart of the dispute is a budget proposal to stop resource companies from claiming provincial royalties as a deductible expense before paying federal taxes. A royalty is a payment for using a non-renewable resource.

The three westernmost provinces claim the extra tax burden for the companies will cause exploration activity to dry up. Premier David Barrett of British Columbia said drilling for new natural gas in B.C. will stop entirely if no word is received within 14 days about federal intentions to moderate their position.

Mr. Turner insists the federal government has already made concessions to the provinces, that they provoked the dispute themselves by raising royalties and that it is they who must yield.

BACK TO LEADERS

The issue now will be tossed to a meeting of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers sometime early in 1975. No date for a meeting has been set, but a spokesman for the prime minister's office says it is under discussion.

No one wanted to talk about the possibility that domestic oil prices will be raised, but there was general agreement that taking more from consumers would be an effective way to get more money for both levels of government and still leave funds for company exploration programs.

Pressed repeatedly at a concluding news conference about the possibility of increased oil prices, Mr. Turner would say only: "It's an option." But he pointed out there are several other options including provincial exploration incentives or reduced provincial royalties.

A price increase would depend upon a decision by Prime Minister Trudeau and the premiers, he said.

Representatives of the oil-producing provinces also refused to comment directly on price increases, but they agreed it would help solve the problems.

One finance minister strongly opposed to higher oil prices was Ontario's John White. An increase would be "the worst of all possible solutions" for oil-consuming Ontario.

'NOT ACCEPTABLE'

"This is a solution that would not be acceptable to us," he said after the meeting.

There was no indication Mr. Turner will yield any ground.

Emphasizing at the news conference that the meeting "wasn't a bargaining session," he said there is "no way that I can accommodate this issue of deductibility (of royalties)" as the provinces want.

He repeated an earlier statemen that royalties no longer fairly represent an economic rent for resources and said they have become a form of disguised tax. And the federal government has never allowed provincial taxes to be deducted as a business expense, he said.

Mr. Turner also rejected Alberta and Saskatchewan suggestions that he was distorting the tax split by not counting an export tax on crude oil sold in the U.S. which is used to subsidize eastern refiners, and indirectly consumers, who must import crude. The result is a two-price system with the Canadian domestic price of $6.50 a barrel for crude about $5 less than the world price.

Mr. Turner argues that this tax is a "diminishing phenomenon" that will bring less and less revenue to the federal coffers as Canada continues to reduce its oil exports.

He also said the Nov. 18 budget moved back significantly from earlier federal proposals for increased petroleum revenues, and would take only 18 per cent of production profits rather than 23 per cent, as proposed earlier this year.

NO APPEAL

A number of alternatives to the budget proposal were offered by the provincial finance ministers during the two-day meeting, none too appealing to Mr. Turner.

Quebec's Raymond Garneau proposed a formula for rolling back the federal share of the resource tax.

Saul Cherniack of Manitoba proposed the federal tax plans be held up until after a meeting of the first ministers. Mr. Barrett, who doubles as B.C. finance minister, had a similar proposal for a moratorium, an idea that found broad support among the other premiers.

Mr. Turner rejected the proposal as "a one-side ceasefire" and indicated he had no intention of mothballing the budget provisions.

Neither was he sympathetic to Mr. Barret's suggestion that a public inquiry be held into resource tax policies. Mr. Turner said Ottawa has agreed to show the provinces the data it used to calculate its budget proposal, but he refused an inquiry.

"Every time I meet him he calls for an inquiry into resource taxation."

Toronto consumer fights egg policy

OTTAWA (CP) — A Toronto consumer has started an action in the Federal Court in which he seeks a declaration that Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan and the Canadian Egg Marketing Board have failed in their duty to the Canadian people.

Michael Carson, an officer of the Ontario Anti-Poverty Coalition, filed the writ in the Federal Court but no date has been set for a hearing.

He alleges that the minister and the egg board, through incorrect and negligent calculations, deprived Canadians of the right to buy eggs at a reasonable price.

Through their policies, said Mr. Carson, the board collected 28 million eggs and then destroyed them.

Burmese troops clash to recover body of U Thant

RANGOON (AP) — Burmese troops and police hurling tear gas today recovered the body of U Thant, the former United Nations secretary-general, from 3,000 students and Buddhist monks guarding it on the campus of Rangoon University.

After five days of inaction, President Ne Win sent security forces on to the campus three miles outside Rangoon at 2 a.m. They broke through the main gate with a crane, drove back the students and monks with tear gas and broke into the small brick tomb in which the students on Sunday had interred the body of the former international leader.

Thant, a political foe of Ne Win and a follower of former premier U Nu, died of cancer in New York Nov. 25. His body was brought to Rangoon Dec. 1 for burial, but thousands of students and monks seized the coffin from the funeral procession Dec. 5 and took it to the university campus.

The students said the government, in ordering Thant buried in one of Rangoon's less-important civilian cemeteries, was not showing proper respect to the country's most famous statesman.

But foreign observers interpreted the action as an expression of opposition to Ne Win's authoritarian regime, which has been in power since a military coup 12 years ago.

Hundreds of thousands had visited the campus to pay homage to Thant and donated more than $100,000 for a permanent mausoleum. In an apparent effort to avoid bloodshed, the government made no move to retrieve the body until Tuesday, when lines of trucks filled with troops parked near the campus.

There were no reports of casualties, but many students and monks were dragged into police vans and taken off.

Disposition of the body was not immediately announced. It was believed that it would be entombed at the assigned site near the Shwedagon.

NB prison break ends after chase

DORCHESTER, N.B. (CP) — Four Dorchester penitentiary prisoners took two guards hostage at knifepoint Tuesday night in an escape that ended early today after a high-speed chase in eastern New Brunswick.

At one point in the chase, an elderly man was robbed after his home was broken into. No one was injured in the escape.

An RCMP spokesman in Moncton said four prisoners at the minimum-security farm camp of the penitentiary overpowered two guards.

The hostages and the prisoners left in a car owned by one of the guards. The subsequent chase involved more than 15 cars, including those of the RCMP and Moncton city police.

At one point, an unidentified man was robbed of $160 and then bound after four men broke into his house in the Indian Mountain area near Moncton. The two guards also were left tied up at the house.

RCMP said the four men made their way to a nearby farm and stole a second vehicle. This was stopped at Rogersville, N.B., and the four prisoners captured.

They were indentified as Charles Morris Sargent, 25, of Gagetown, P.E.I.; Lewis Stephen Allison, 19, of Perth-Andover, N.B.; Lawrence Nelson Pillard, 18, hometown unavailable; and Russel Eldon Phalen, 31, of Pictou, N.S.

Sargent, Allison and Pillard were serving sentences for breaking and entering and theft; Phalen for manslaughter.

Three of sextuplets surviving

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — The three survivors of Charlotte Lange's sextuplets still cling to their fragile grip on life.

Infants Jason Wesley, Brian Walter and Jolene Rene maintained their stable condition today and their medical prognosis remained guarded, said a nursing supervisor at the Valley medical centre.

Two other of the children—Corey William and Kelly Irene—died within five hours of each other Tuesday. The girl died of respiratory and heart failure and the boy succumbed to respiratory complications, doctors said.

A third infant, John, died four hours after Mrs. Lange gave birth to the sextuplets within a 45-minute period Sunday. They were three months premature and ranged in weight from one pound 15 ounces to 2½ pounds.

Mrs. Lange, 26, gave birth to quadruplets Nov. 23, 1973, after taking a fertility drug called Pergonal, but all four died.

Terrorists shoot 5 Mexican police

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico City's police department vowed today to avenge the death of five of its men gunned down by 15 stocking-masked terrorists who raided two local banks and made off with $200,000.

Two other policemen wounded in the robberies Tuesday were reported in serious condition.

A police spokesman said no arrests had been made, and the department had no clues to the identity of the bandits.

More than 30 policemen have been killed in Mexico City this year in clashes with terrorists, but this was the largest casualty toll in one clash.

Three women were reported among the 15 masked persons who pulled up to the Banco de Comercio and the Banco Nacional de Mexico on opposite corners in an industrial district and opened fire with rifles on police stationed outside.

Two officers were killed instantly and three others died soon after in a hospital.

NOTES LEFT

The gunmen grabbed $200,000, scattered notes in the banks signed "Commando Alfonso Rojas Dias, 23rd of September Communist League" and escaped in two black automobiles.

The 23rd of September group, best known of Mexico's urban terror groups, has claimed responsibility for many robberies, murders and kidnappings. The group is named after the date of a 1971 clash with the army in northern Mexico.

The bank robberies were the first guerrilla move since the killing eight days ago of Lucio Cabanas, Mexico's best-known rebel leader, who was shot in a battle with troops. But police declined to speculate whether there was any connection between his death and the bank raids.

Pleau was found guilty by Judge Armand Sylvestre of sessions court of conspiracy to extort the money from Laurier Leduc, manager of a Bank of Montreal branch in suburban Anjou.

Mr. Leduc had testified he was forced to get the money after several armed and masked men invaded his northend home, took away his wife and children and threatened them all with death

TV licence

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Radio-Television Commission was asked Tuesday to cancel its licence to a cable television company in Bagotville, Que., because the company broke conditions of a contract regarding distribution of FM stations over its network.

Ultra-Vision Tele-Cable Enrg., operated by J. H. Duchesne Ltd., continued to distribute FM broadcasts until last Oct. 4 despite repeated notices from the CRTC through administrative agencies that it was contravening the terms of its licence, Marcel Dery, chairman of the rival Video Dery Ltd., told the commission.

Railway

MONTREAL (CP) — The joint negotiating committe for 18 railways unions announced Tuesday the ratification of a new contract with 11 railway companies.

About 100,000 workers are affected by the contract.

Women

MONTREAL (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang said Tuesday that he gives preference to women over equally-qualified men when making judicial appointments.

Air Canada

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada said Tuesday any comment on contract negotiations for the supply of aviation fuel to Air Canada in the Atlantic region would be premature.

Accord

MONTREAL (CP) — The Pan Canada Foundation called Tuesday for a meeting with another English rights group in an effort to organize a unified front for a battle against Bill 22, the province's controversial language legislation.

The law makes French the province's official language.

The foundation's board of trustees Tuesday replaced Nadine Ralston as chairman and decided to seek a meeting with the Quebec Coalition for Human Rights and Liberties.

Sugar

MONTREAL (CP) — Both "speculation" on world markets and "espionage" exist in the sugar refining industry, a witness said Tuesday at the trial of three companies charged with conspiracy to fix prices and lessen competition between 1960 and 1973.

Edwin Burgess, 56, marketing vice-president for Atlantic Sugar Refineries Co. Ltd., admitted his company showed a profit during those years although it absorbed freight rates not paid by its competitors.

"But profit in the sugar industry is often made in speculation on world sugar markets," Mr. Burgess told Mr. Justice Kenneth Mackay of Court of Queen's Bench.

NYSE volume reached a moderate 15.69 million shares.

The NYSE's broadly based composite index showed a gain of .83 at 35.53.

Much of the gain was posted in the early part of the session in what brokers described partly as a delayed reaction to the Federal Reserve's reduction of its discount rate late last Friday.

analysts said the reduction helped fuel expectations that President Ford might propose some new expansive economic measures in his address scheduled for Wednesday night.

The rally reached its peak at midafternoon, with the Dow up more than 17 points. Prices then settled back toward the close.

Analysts said the news that retail sales declined faster on a seasonally adjusted basis in November than they had the month before at least partly explained the late softness in the market.

Auto stocks were strong on the news that the President would meet with top management and labor officials in the industry later this week. General Motors was up 1⅛ to $30½ in active trading. Ford Motor 1⅝ to $32 and Chrysler ⅝ to $7⅝.

The so-called interest-sensitive issues also gained.

Federal National Mortgage was up ¾ to $16¾, MGIC Investment ⅜ to $7⅜ and Household Finance ⅜ to $12⅝.

Oil, oil-drilling and service, and drug issues also were strong.

Simplicity Pattern climbed a point to $8¾. The company said a strike that began Sept. 1 at its Niles, Mich., plant was settled and full production resumed.

King's Department Stores, the NYSE volume leader, was up ¼ to $5 in trading that included a 200,000-share block at 4⅞.

On the American Stock Exchange, the most-active issue was American Agronomics, up 2 to $12⅞.

UK economy drifts downward

LONDON (CP) — The decline in Britain's once-majestic economic grandeur gathered momentum in 1974 as shaken treasury officers prepared for a furious fight to arrest the nosedive in the new year.

The downward drift of British power, for nearly a century the envy of the world, has been taking place with frequent bumps and alarms since the end of the Second World War.

But 1974 will likely be remembered as the year when a final shuddering crash at times seemed inevitable. That it was avoided is a monument to British ingenuity and financial wizardry.

And if, during the next 12 months or so, the economy can be raised to a steady course it will undoubtedly stand as one of the country's most prodigious achievements of the decade. But the task facing the Labor government and its advisers is singularly forbidding.

Britain entered 1974 with industry on a three-day week because of a national coal strike and an international energy crisis.

BACK TO FULL-TIME

It enters 1975 with industry back to full-time working but in the red by the equivalent of about $13 billion. The country itself has a record balance of payments deficit of nearly $10 billion for the year, the lowest growth rate of all developed countries, one of the most uncompetitive economies and a standard of living declining at one of the fastest rates in the Western world.

A change of government to the Labor party of Prime Minister Harold Wilson from the Conservatives last February brought an end to the miners' strike by giving the union the wage increases it demanded.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey then introduced three budgets in the space of less than eight months in a desperate attempt to cool inflation, now raging at an annual rate between 17 and 20 per cent, and at the same time keep the unemployment rate below 2.5 per cent of the labor force.

The situation when he took office last March was one of the most serious to face any chancellor during this century.

WOOS UNIONS

Healey's first objective was to woo the trade unions which had rebelled savagely against income controls imposed by the former Tory government. The ceilings were quickly removed and a social compact between the unions and the government was forged.

Although it still is too early to say how the compact will work, its central feature is a voluntary agreement by the unions to restrict wage claims generally to no more than increases in the cost of living.

Within weeks, the chancellor introduced his first major budget, adding the equivalent of $1.4 billion in taxes, falling mainly on the middle classes and industry, and introducing $1.5 billion worth of food subsidies.

The budget was a fairly orthodox attempt to curb inflationary demand pressures and ease the rocketing price of food, an essential part of the over-all consumer price index, with government aid. At the same time, rigid controls were maintained on price increases allowable to companies, and dividends and profits were kept under strict limits.

It had little effect.

Exports increased at the unusually-low rate of only seven per cent a year while imports shot ahead to an annual rate of more than 15 per cent. The squeeze on profits meant that companies' liquidity, that is, their bank balances, cash and the like minus short-term debts, fell by $10 billion in the first six months compared with the same period in 1973.

Living standards, defined as personal wealth, fell back to 1972 levels and the stock market plummeted toward levels not seen in the dark days of the Depression. Total production actually dropped by one per cent from the previous year, sterling was at an all-time low and the real value of new capital projects fell by 2.3 per cent from 1973.

Inflation reached an annual rate of nearly 20 per cent and the London Business School, one of the top forecasting bodies in the country, predicted that "Britain is entering a three-year period of extremely slow growth with a high rate of inflation."

In fairness to the Labor government, most observers concede that Britain's present problems are partly a result of the general world recession and the sky-high price of raw-material imports, especially oil, and largely the outgrowth of past Tory policies which inflated demand far beyond the capacity or willingness of British industry to produce.

DEFICIT MUST DROP

Healey argued that there was little he could do to improve the lot of the ordinary Briton unless the payments deficit was first reduced. To do this exports would have to be increased. But how was this to be accomplished when Britain's main trading partners were also in recession and unable to buy her products? In the meantime, he announced Britain had negotiated a $2.5-billion foreign loan to help finance the deficit rather than raise taxes further.

A survey by The Financial Times then showed business confidence had sunk to its lowest level in 30 years, a malaise that has been developing since 1962. Pressure was growing on the tiny minority government and in July Healey brought in a mini-budget, looking forward to a fall election, with cuts in sales taxes and more food subsidies this time providing a mildly inflationary effect.

Those measures did little for the economy but they did help return a majority government in the October general election. The chancellor borrowed another $1.2 billion abroad and prepared yet another budget.

REVERSE STAND

In it, Healey reversed his previous tough attitude to business, gave it an immediate cash injection of the equivalent of $3.68 billion, through tax relief and the removal of price controls, and set up a $2.3-billion loan fund for industry.

The action brought a little relief and a lot of confusion. The immediate reaction of the key manufacturing sector? It plans to reduce investment by a whopping 10 per cent in 1975, an almost unheard-of phenomenon in a country already producing far below its potential.

The British government now is pinning its hopes on the new year bringing a sharpening in the recent decline in import prices as perhaps the most crucial weapon in their fight against inflation and the payments imbalance. It is one of the more realistic hopes in an otherwise chaotic situation.

Urges over average weighting

A Toronto-based investment firm is recommending that portfolios contain an above-average weighting in Canadian steel stocks.

Wood Gundy Ltd. says in a recent investment review that for 1975, slower rates of economic growth point to an easing of the tight steel supply situation in Canada, with only a marginal increase in domestic steel consumption.

While real rates of growth in the economy are expected to reach about three per cent next year, demand for steel may level off as steel users reduce their in-house inventories to more normal levels.

"Despite this, we expect the Canadian steel producers to be operating at close to capacity, with steel production expected to rise five per cent over 1974 levels.

"With this increase in domestic production, steel consumers can be expected to switch from premium priced foreign steels to the more moderately priced Canadian product."

Wood Gundy says it expects steel imports in 1975 to drop by close to 15 per cent, or some 400,000 tons, reflecting the projected increase in domestic production.

"Clearly, the case for Canadian steels in 1975 is built on imported steel prices remaining above domestic levels," the firm says, adding that a strong argument can be made here.

INFLATION LOWER

Canadian steelmakers benefit from both modern equipment and captive sources of supply for raw materials which have kept rates of cost inflation below those experienced in other countries.

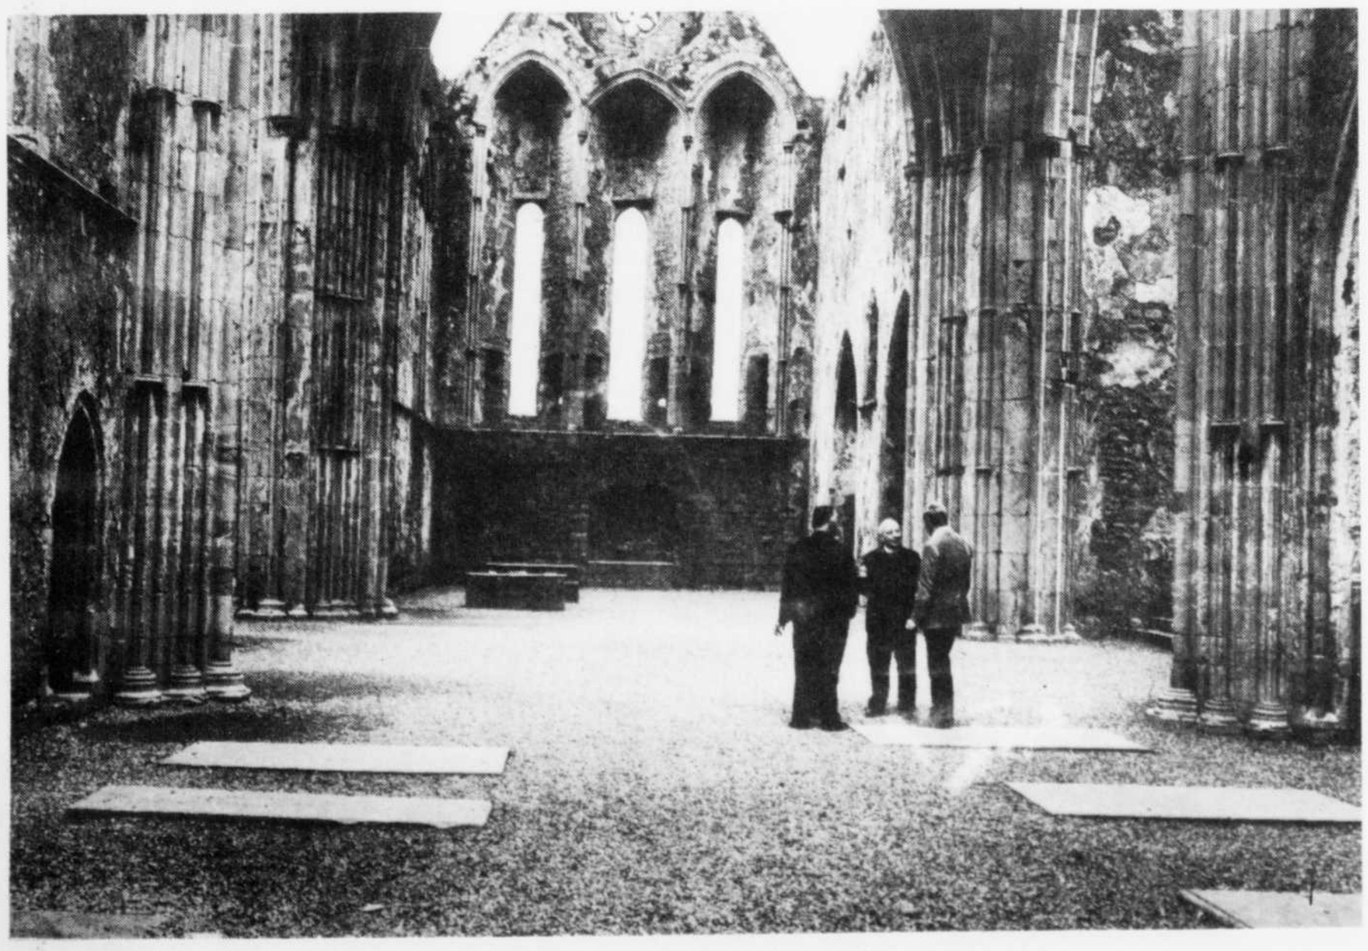

As a result, Canadian domestic prices are the lowest in the world, and by a wide margin, Wood Gundy says.

Base prices in Canada are as much as 15 to 20 per cent below those prevailing in the U.S. While Japanese domestic prices are close to the Canadian average of $220 a ton, its steelmaking costs are about this figure and are only recovered through a heavy emphasis on exports, which in September had reached an average price of $350 a ton.

"With such a wide spread between Canadian and world prices, and even with weakening world demand in 1975, the cost structure of the international steelmaking community will keep prices above Canadian levels.

"This will allow domestic producers the flexibility both to increase production and maintain operating margins as costs increase in 1975."

Wood Gundy recommends Algoma Steel as its first choice for medium to long-term commitments and says Steel Co. of Canada is also attractive. Dominion Foundries and Steel is rated as A this time.

BOB PASSMORE
... new Lennoxville alderman.

New alderman at Lennoxville

LENNOXVILLE (BP) — A new alderman sat in on his first town council meeting officially Monday night in what was a short open meeting but a lengthy committee session.

Robert Passmore fills the vacancy made by the resignation of Doug Patrick in seat 2 of the municipal council. He was voted to the seat unanimously last Thursday during a special meeting for that purpose. Several other names were brought forth at that meeting. He was sworn in later that evening.

While a new face appeared on the scene, the council was posed with another resignation. Elbert 'Buzz' Sutton, the town foreman who has worked for the town for 17 years, quit his job last Wednesday for undisclosed reasons.

That move follows a meeting on Tuesday morning between the foreman and the mayor and his aldermen, concerning roads maintenance and water works. Mayor Cecil Dougherty stated Sutton wasn't willing to give orders to one man on the town crew. The foreman apparently went home after the meeting and didn't return the following day, when he gave his leave.

Sutton's job has been filled by acting-foreman Donald Davidson, a 16 year employee on the town crew. He was formerly assistant foreman.

Other business covered in the public segment included a look at present fire insurance coverage on buildings and the appointment of lawyers to study the police labor agreement.

Now that evaluators have completed their work for the town, the council started to look at the insurance on town-owned buildings. Proposals were made to allow for higher coverage on most of the structures, while only one or two were given lower.

A motion was made and carried to have the law firm of Langlais, Monty, Pepin, Fournier, Landry & Bellavance study the proposed 1975 police labor agreement. The current contract expires at midnight Dec. 31.

A letter suggesting that Mrs. Norma Siddiqui be nominated for the vacant alderman's seat. It was noted the letter was too late in arriving, but that her name was brought up during the nominating proceedings.

Council closed the open session and went into committee meeting at 8:45, to talk with town lawyers, auditors and evaluators about two proposed tax by-laws. The service tax and compensation tax by-laws took up the rest of the night's attention and the matters at hand were almost completed.

The adjourned meeting from the regular monthly session was again adjourned until next Monday, when the by-laws will hopefully be passed through council.

Oddities in the news

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Three-year-old Katy Enright wants a recount in the race for neighborhood balloon-flying champ.

Katy and 16 other children launched balloons Sept. 21 with messages attached asking the finders to notify the children where their balloons came down to determine the longest flight.

Neil Bronaugh, 7, was declared winner just before Halloween for a 325-mile flight to Cumberland, Md. His prize was a pumpkin.

But this week, Katy received her balloon back—from Mr. and Mrs. Armand Bourgeois of Moncton, N.B.—more than 1,300 miles away.

She told her parents she would like a yoyo as her prize.

NEW YORK (AP) — An unknown driver has inadvertently enriched New York City by $85.

A driver dropped a coin in a parking meter, but instead of a dime, his deposit turned out to be a $2.50 gold piece, dated 1912, which is roughly the same size as a dime.

The city decided Tuesday to sell the gold coin for $85, its current market value, a city official said.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Nearly three years of student protests, lawsuits and haggling ended Tuesday when the artichoke was recognized as the official mascot of Scottsdale Community College.

COMMUNITY SERVICE AWARD — Mrs. Silas Davis, centre, a resident of Derby, Vermont was presented Saturday with the Community Service Award by the local Lion's Club. On the left is N. Lewis, guest speaker, and on the right is King Lion George Fuller who made the presentation.

Derby Lions Club gives community service award

DERBY (IH) — Mrs. Silas Davis, a resident of the Village of Derby, was honored Saturday evening by the presentation of the Community Service Award at the Christmas party of the Derby Lion's Club held at the Border motel, attended by approximately 50 men and women.

As the couples arrived, the ladies were each presented with a Christmas corsage of red and white carnations and ribbons by Mrs. Michael Marsh and Mrs. Steve Marsh while the menfolk greeted everyone.

A happy hour took place before the serving of dinner in a private dining-room. The atmosphere of Yuletide was carried out with garlands in gold, holly fastening each loop and a decorated Christmas tree.

The head table was centered with arrangements of red carnations and white mums centered with red tapers, a gift of Spates Florist. This was later sold by tickets and claimed by Kermit Smith.

George Fuller, King Lion, invited all to join to repeat the Pledge of Allegiance, the Lord's Prayer, and he proposed the Lion's Toast. Also, Mr. Fuller introduced the head table, Mrs. Davis, her husband, Mr. Davis, Norman Lewis, guest speaker, and Mrs. Lewis; Norman Messier, Past president, and Mrs. Messier; Michael Marsh, secretary, and Mrs. Marsh, also noting in attendance the new members of Lions who joined in November and their wives, Dick and Sue Barry, former residents of Derby Line, who had travelled some 200 miles to be at the party.

Mr. Fuller also voiced appreciation to Art Judd and Steve Marsh, who had planned the party, Kermit Smith for his participation, Bob Darby, for his contribution to the evening, and a special thanks to Lionesses who provide delicious food for the twice a month supper meetings.Dinner served by the management was a choice of seafood platter, steak or roast turkey.

Mr. Fuller presented the award to Mrs. Davis. In his remarks he noted her to be the outstanding citizen of the 1974-75 year for she collects trading stamps and coupons. This went towards equipment for a new kidney treatment at the Burlington Hospital. With the construction of the new hospital in Newport, she collected and sold over 200,000 Betty Crocker coupons and over 50,000 trading stamps and other coupons to be able to furnish Room 312 at the new hospital. She also furnished linens and so forth.

Now she is working to assist the Town of Derby's Morgan and Holland Ambulance service by acquiring walkers for disabled, mattresses and other items needed by the department.

"Mrs. Davis gives her time with no compensation to herself," were the words of Mr. Fuller. He also presented her with the newly designed Derby Lion's Club banner, she being the first to receive one. After the presentation was made it was followed by hearty applause of the entire room.

Mrs. Davis replied with words of appreciation for the honor the Lion's had conferred upon her.

Art Judd introduced Mr. Lewis, a notable speaker, who was up to his usual high standards and kept everyone laughing with his "Tales of Vermont" and presented humorous introductions and comments of several of his friends present. So greatly enjoyed was the entertainment that Mr. Lewis was presuaded to tell yet another tale of the "Gores."

In appreciation of his contribution to the fun and laughter evening, Mr. Fuller presented Mr. Lewis and his wife, Barbara, each with a Fun gift. Similar fun gifts were presented to other Lions again causing much merriment. Another gift was presented to Mrs. Lisa Flanders of Rock Island, the noted organist and vocalist at the Border motel.

Mr. Judd gave to each lady present a number and with the lucky one several lovely gifts were claimed by them.

The evening continued with dancing to Lisa's music making it a grand evening for all.

The Lions work hard all year to raise money to carry out their service to the community projects, but once a year they relax and have fun and this is at the Christmas party.

LDSB holds monthly meeting

LENNOXVILLE (BP) — The regular meeting for December of the Lennoxville District School Board was held last night, passing through a long agenda in good time.

Following adoption of November's minutes, 15 items arising from those minutes were handled. At the present time, taxpayers have no time when they can make their complaints or suggestions to the commissioners. A motion was made and carried that in the future, time will be allotted before business arising from the minutes for such discussion.

Tenders were sent out for a link fence at Sunnyside Elementary in Stanstead. It was noted that those who have answered stated that construction could not be started until next spring. It was decided to hold the matter until then.

Two meetings have been held by the study committee concerning the present state of Coaticook Elementary. The body is collecting more information and hope to come up with suggestions and-or a solution soon. The items being looked at include projected enrollment for '75-76, alternative bus routes for 44 students, estimated cost of upkeep on the building in the future and classification of pupils according to age level and mother tongue. The next meeting of the committee will be held on Jan. 6.

The matter of posting the board's financial statements has been a problem in the past. Town secretaries in 85 municipalities have been sent statements and asked to put them on their respective notice boards for their citizens to see. School principals have also been asked to do the same on their school's bulletin boards.

It was decided that it is the duty of each school principal to contact Alexander Galt Regional guidance counsellors for any testing or other jobs in their field.

The LDSB also decided to use the services of a QAPSB arbitrator, instead of hiring one themselves for a considerable amount of money.

The proposed schedule for caretaker requirements which would be implemented as of Jan. 1, 1975 was held over to committee discussion. The policy concerning alcoholic beverages in the schools was taken up and passed. The clause, to be added to the present policy, states that any request for the use of facilities where alcoholic beverages will be served must be presented to the council of commissioners or the executive committee for approval at least 30 days before the event.

In the director general's report, it was mentioned that the LDSB has been approached by the social welfare department and asked to integrate some of the youths at the Cecil Butters home. Hugh Auger said he feels there is a possibility of providing some form of education out of the realm of the ordinary small class. The matter will be pursued.

Secretary general John Haffenden noted in his report that all personnel will be receiving a 6 per cent cost of living bonus before Christmas. He also said he had received recently written approval from Quebec for the 1974-75 budget. The LDSB will be submitting 117 names for tax sales to the municipality this year, he told the commissioners.

A finance and budget committee will be formed in the near future, consisting of executive and committee members.

An article from a magazine was shown to the members last night entitled 'Back to basics in the schools'. The commissioners will try and set up a system to evaluate their own school programs and have joint meetings between administrators and board members.

Secretary general Haffenden stated that finances were doing well, after a large portion of this year's taxes have been paid in the last month and a half.

A letter from the director general of the Laval school board concerning that board's proposals on Bills 22, 71 and 27 was presented. It was decided that interested members could receive copies and study such proposals. The Ayer's Cliff school committee also sent a letter to the LDSB stating their views on the recent workshop held. They said they found it beneficial and listed several points which could be used to improve future workshops. All the local school committees have been asked to do this, but the Ayer's Cliff group was the first to do so.

Commissioner Dr. James Ross handed his resignation to the LDSB last night, following his recent appointment to the post of president of the Regional Health and Social Welfare Council. Dr. Ross feels that both the new position and school board duties, along "with being a doctor in my spare time", would not be fair to him or the LDSB. His resignation is effective Dec. 31.

At the January monthly meeting, the commissioners will have the job of replacing him with a new member to hold the position until June, when the term expires. Three ways can be used to seek a new commissioner. The present commissioner is asked for a suggested replacement, the school committee, in this case the Sherbrooke one, will be asked to help select a candidate or any commissioner may present a person to replace the leaving member. The council of commissioners will then choose their replacement from those recommendations made.

PROBE AUTO PRICES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Hubert Humphrey, chairman of the joint economic committee of the two houses in the United States Congress, says auto companies will be investigated to learn why they resist cutting prices when sales are slow. The Archbishop Returns

Hardly has the West heaved a sigh of relief over the six-month reprieve on Golan Heights when another Mediterranean crisis has appeared on the horizon. Archbishop Makarios is returning to Cyprus on Friday, and his return cannot but spell trouble. The anodyne statements from Athens notwithstanding, it is known that Greek Premier Karamanlis was unable to persuade the archbishop to accept a compromise over the island's future, and indeed at a huge rally on Athens' Constitution square the archbishop said he would not agree to "the creation of conditions for partition in Cyprus." This implies a public rejection of the plan proposed by Glefkos Clerides, who has been the island's acting president and who, after negotiations with the Turks, proposed the division of the island into federated regions. The archbishop said no, the Turks have put their forces on alert and the Greek-Turkish volcano of emotions threatens to erupt again.

The Turks do not trust the archbishop. They do not want to live in a centralized Cyprus state and they suspect the archbishop's attachment to the island's independence: The archbishop's guerrilla war against the British was fought, after all, for the idea of the island's reunion with Greece.

The archbishop, who abrogated the 1959 agreements that had set up an independent Cyprus with stiff safeguards for the Turkish minority, would now be hard put to it to accept a solution that would give the Turkish Cypriots even more than what they secured in 1959. And the Turks would hardly want to go back to the 1959 provisions that proved so inadequate and resulted in two massacres of the Turkish population.

Yet there is no time now for procrastination. About one half of the Greek Cypriots are in refugee camps, and it is reported that their farms are being worked by immigrants from the Turkish mainland. It is a situation that makes nobody happy. The Turkish Cypriots do not like the Turkish army either. The army, as most armies do, is now behaving more like an army of occupation than liberators. The Turkish community is thus being swayed more towards Cyprus and less towards Ankara. However, the memory of the massacres that the United Nations force was supposed to prevent is still too fresh to be easily discarded. When it comes to the stark issue of physical safety, the Turkish Cypriots will be ready to swallow their pride and rely on the Turkish troops rather than trust once again to Archbishop Makarios who, during the last months of his reign, had surrounded himself with a private Communist force of thugs.

The patient work of Mr. Clerides, who was on the verge of agreement in his negotiations with the Turkish Cypriot leader Rau Denkhtash, may thus be undone. The disappointed hopes of the Greek-Cypriot refugees, who believe that the archbishop who brought them independence in 1959 could now save them again, might then turn into a deep bittterness completing the work of devastation that began when the Greek-Cypriot right-wingers under the fanatic Nikos Sampson overthrew the archbishop's government and set in motion the tragic train of events.

There is still hope that Premier Karamanlis can exert some pressure on the archbishop, but emotions in Greece, too, are running high, and the Greek government, plagued by inflation, the problems of monarchy and of NATO, will hardly be in a position to set itself against the prevalent wind of blind nationalism.

Opinion from the French-language press

Ottawa Le Droit: Things are definitely not going well for the Israelis.

The generous sympathy they have been getting for so long is changing, not into antipathy because they don't deserve that, but into a well-reasoned sympathy. . . .

The first rebuff Israel suffered was the permission granted Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO), to speak at the United Nations. . . .

It is true that regional similarities accounted primarily for the support the PLO got from Third World and socialist nations but it is also true that this support does not deny Israel's right to exist as a sovereign state.

One must conclude from this first rebuff that Israel did not succeed in persuading anyone . . . of its repugnance to the idea of direct negotiations with the PLO.

No matter what their votes on the pro-Palestinian resolution, Israel's best friends recognized the national rights of the Palestinians and expressed the desire of seeing Israeli-Palestinian talks take place.

This does not appear to please Israeli leaders in the least but they will have to take this step if they ever hope to reach a fair and long-lasting peace with their neighboring enemies.

Canada has, for once, taken a stand on the issue in that it has spoken out in favor of a settlement reached through Israeli-Palestinian talks which would recognize the "legitimate interests" of the Palestinians while guaranteeting the survival of Israel. . . .

It is obvious that Canada does not favor the imposition of an external peace in the area. The protagonists themselves must seek peace and evolve mechanisms permitting them to achieve it.

The second rebuff suffered by the Israelis came when UNESCO rejected an Israeli motion to admit that country into the European group despite the fact that the United States and Canada, without being part of Europe proper, are members.

Israel is not banned from UNESCO but it is a Middle Eastern country, not a European one. —Jean-Louis de Leseleuc (Nov. 27)

Trois-Rivieres Le Nouvelliste: Quebec Immigration Minister Jean Bienvenue is following the lead of his Ottawa counterpart . . . by refusing to adopt humanitarian measures towards the Haitians living in Canada who are about to be deported to their country.

Mr. Bienvenue told us, quite candidly, that this is beyond his jurisdiction. . . .

Here was a chance for Quebec to give itself an active role in the area of immigration but Mr. Bienvenue chose instead blindly to deliver himself to the federal government.

This action on the part of the Quebec immigration minister is disappointing and does not inspire confidence in the creation of a real Quebec immigration policy.

We can only applaud the reaction of Camil Samson, Parti Creditiste member in the national assembly . . . who insisted Quebec take action because "Quebec cannot, on humanitarian grounds, ignore this debate."

Yet Mr. Bienvenue could find nothing better to say than: "The federal government did its best on this issue."

Robert Andras did not do as well as he could have and the provincial minister's argument leaves a void and a flagrant lack of humanitarian consideration.

It seems to us that testimony heard in this case is more eloquent than the legalistic attitudes of the provincial and federal governments. There is a very real possibility that at least some of the Haitians deported could be imprisoned, tortured or killed. . . .

In the name of human dignity, can a government lock itself into such an inexcusably intransigent position?

It is even more interesting to note that Liberal party members recently asked the federal government to reconsider. We are forced to believe that the immigration minister failed to hear the party members' voices. Or is it that the Liberal caucus ignores the wishes of party membership? —Rejean Lacombe (Nov. 28)

Montreal La Presse: Every taxpayer knows from experience that truth-telling is not a universal virtue among politicians.

Few politicians have the guts to tell the truth, especially when it could tarnish their political images. . . .

It is in this light that Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa said last week that "the current government is so aware of the needs of Quebec farmers that within the last 4½ years it has increased the agriculture budget by 100 per cent."

The mind boggles.

There is one thing we do know—the 1970 agricultural budget was $82 million or two per cent of a $3.9-billion provincial budget, and this is nothing to boast about.

If we also remember that in the last budget, announced in March, 1974, the agriculture allotment was $115 million or 1.7 per cent of a $6.6-billion provincial budget, then the increase is actually a decrease. . . .

This is hardly higher than "4½ years ago."

Mr. Bourassa, an economist by training, long ago learned the art of adjusting figures but it takes a certain amount of bad will to treat Quebec farmers as if they were 19th-century illiterates. . . .

Cattle raisers in this province are often forced to sell cattle at one half or even one quarter of their cost so these subsidies are scarcely better than tips.

Despite this situation Agriculture Minister Normand Toupin had the gall to tell a farmers' convention last week that they will have to "increase their production if they want their revenues to increase."

Even the slowest of minds can see that to sell 100 animals at a loss instead of 50 means only increased losses, not increased profits. . . .

When a cabinet minister fails to respect the intelligence of citizens, they fail to respect him. . . .

Farmers no longer have faith in the agriculture department and this would still be true even if the minister were replaced. . . . It is the Bourassa government that does not respect agriculture.

Agriculture in this province will be only what the farmers and citizens make of it because the current government has demonstrated that it acts only under extreme pressure.—Ivan Guay (Nov. 30)

Quebec Le Soleil: The family unit has been so affected by scientific and urban progress that we no longer hesitate to speak of the "break-up of the family."

These changes have necessitated a total revision of all legal aspects involving the family unit and revision of all aspects of the civil code which pertain to it.

The civil code revision bureau did not want to ignore this difficult question and after long studies it has finally released its report on the status of persons and families and ideal laws for the Quebec family of the future.

The report says: "We now admit the family is not disappearing; rather it is changing and adapting. It still retains its essential function to integrate its members into society, to prepare children for society and to stabilize relations between man and woman."

In our view, the report is aimed at proposing solutions to increasing and changing problems facing families today.

The report also aims at adopting existing law to meet the new needs of families.—Paul Lachance (Dec. 2)

ON THE WATERFRONT

Mission to Seoul

Jack Anderson's Washington Merry-Go-Round

SEOUL — I flew to South Korea on a Christmas mission to seek the release of 12 religious leaders who have been jailed for antigovernment activities. President Park Chung Hee agreed, after a two-hour discussion, to give my appeal "careful consideration."

I came here at the urging of Christian leaders who asked me to make a personal appeal to the tough South Korean leader for clemency. They explained that I am well-known in Korea. Therefore, they thought I might have some impact on President Park. He listened attentively to my case for clemency, frequently nodding his head affirmatively.

He stressed that the imprisoned Christians had not been arrested for criticizing the government but for violating the law. Many vocal critics openly denounce his regime, he said, yet they "are not sent to jail."

Only those who violated the law, meaning emergency security measures, were arrested, he said. He had to weigh my plea for clemency, he explained, with his duty to enforce the law and to protect his country from subversion.

Opponents charge that the emergency measures were imposed for the sole purpose of stifling dissent. President Park vigorously denies this and swears his devotion to democracy.

As evidence that he is confronted with a grave national emergency, he cited an alarming North Korean military build-up, the discovery of an infiltration tunnel under the demilitarized zone, almost daily incidents along the truce line and acts of subversion within his country.

He has been marked for assassination himself by the North Koreans. In 1968, a team of North Korean commandos slipped across the buffer zone and into the outskirts of Seoul in an unsuccessful attempt to attack his offical residence. Only three months ago, an assassin fired a volley of shots at him and succeeded in killing his wife.

President Park contended that nations sometimes must adopt emergency measures when their security is threatened. Even the United States suspended the civil rights of Japanese-Americans on the West Coast and threw them into concentration camps after the bombing of Pearl Harbor.

The South Korean leader's aides showed me documentary evidence of the threat against their country. Across the 38th Parallel, North Korea has been massing men and weapons for a possible resumption of the Korean War. A total of 813 fortified gun positions have been spotted inside the North Korean half of the demilitarized zone in outright violation of the truce agreement. Some of the larger guns could bombard Seoul itself.

The military build-up has been accompanied by a propaganda barrage which has now reached 800 hours of broadcasting beamed against South Korea. This also violates an agreement that the two Koreas would not defame one another.

The propaganda is designed to support an underground effort to overthrow the Park regime and replace it with a government that would be acceptable to North Korea. Then, the Communists promised to work for a "peaceful unification" of Korea. Whether the North Koreans achieve unification by peaceful or military means, of course, they will settle for nothing less than a Communist-controlled Korea.

U.S. intelligence not only has confirmed the military build-up but the underground operation to subvert the Park regime. Unquestionably, North Korea is developing and directing an underground organization inside South Korea. Communist agents are infiltrating the country, some by secret landings on the long coastline, but most through the large Korean community in Japan. The Communist agents, of course, are doing their utmost to bring down President Park. The Park regime, therefore, suspects all dissidents of Communist connections.

Korean religious leaders have assured me that the jailed Christians are anti-Communist but, admittedly, also anti-Park. It is also admitted that they violated the emergency laws, subsequently suspended, by participating in anti-Park agitation.

The Christian activists contend that Park has turned South Korea into a dictatorship and that they are fighting for elementary freedom. One of South Korea's most respected clerics, the Rev. Kim Joon Gon, President of the Korean Campus Crusades for Christ, told me earnestly: "I pray that somehow the imprisoned religious leaders will be released."

He conceded, nevertheless, that the church has far more freedom in South than in North Korea. "In the United States," he said, "you have 100 per cent religious freedom. In South Korea, we have 80 per cent religious freedom. In North Korea, they have zero percentage."

He also said the activists represent only a small fraction of Korean Christians. He described them as "liberation Christians," who believe the church must side with the oppressed and work to change society.

The majority of Korean Christians, he said, agree that the church must side with the oppressed but believe it must keep out of politics. It is difficult, he admitted, "to draw the line between religious action and political action." But he said the majority would draw the line at violence.

As the Rev. Kim reminds, Jesus Christ was the Prince of Peace.

One good dollar deserves another

By Don Oakley

A familiar and effective way of bringing home the nation's economic situation is to compare the value of the dollar with what it was in some other, presumably more prosperous, year.

According to one recent analysis, for example, in the lifetime of half of all Americans—those born since 1946—the value of the dollar has shrunk by 60 cents. At this rate, the "1946 dollar" will be worth only 16 cents in another 28 years.

To put it another way, to have the same purchasing power as today's "40-cent dollar," a personmaking $7,200 today would have to earn $18,000 in the year 2002. A $30 pair of shoes will cost $75. The average family's weekly food budget will rise from $62 to $152, and son on.

It could happen sooner than 28 years if the present rate of inflation were to continue unchecked.

The dollar would look even more minuscule, however, if we were to compare it with its 1939 counterpart, as we used to do back when inflation was a minor, and some thought a necessary and welcome, factor in the economy.

But how many people would like to return to 1939? For all the ravages of inflation, most Americans are far better off than they were in 1939, or 1946 for that matter, the "40-cent dollar" notwithstanding.

This is not to minimize inflation, which has grown to such dimensions that, as President Ford has warned, it threatens the future of all of us. It is merely to point out the fallacy of using the shrinking dollar as the only yardstick to measure where we have been and where we seem to be going.

A television set costs more than it did 10 or 20 years ago. But it's a better and more reliable set. Thirty years ago there was no television industry at all,which has given employment to tens of thousands.

For the price of three or four modern key-start, self-propelled lawnmowers, you could have bought an automobile in 1939. But many people didn't have a yard to cut back then, if they had a pushmower, much less a house on that yard filled with all kinds of appliances. Much of what we consider necessities today were undreamed of luxuries not many years ago.

Again, this is not to minimize the threat of inflation. But there is no going back to the 1939 dollar or the 1946 dollar or even to the 1973 dollar.

What is important is that we take the steps needed to maintain and safeguard the nation's basic economic strength so that the 1975 dollar or the 1990 dollar or the 2002 dollar, whatever they may be "worth" in terms of some other year, continue to enable more and more Americans to afford the good things of life.

Putting new life in old porn

The porn is no longer green. In many parts of the country, revenues at dirty-book stores, hard-core movies houses and even topless night clubs and massage parlors are a third of what they were a year ago, reports Newsweek.

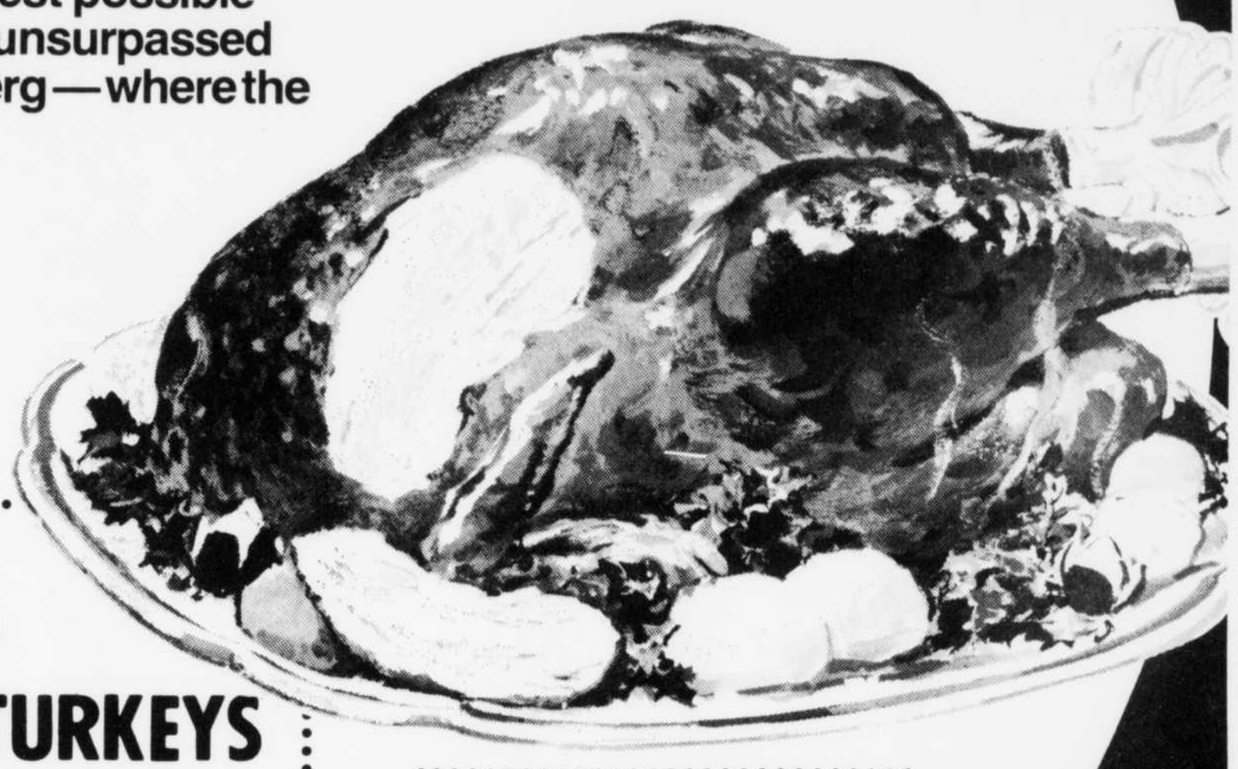

The reason seems to be the one that many predicted would come into operation when and if pornography became freely available. Commented a movie theater owner in San Francisco, as quoted by the magazine:

"I suppose the general population gets bored with porn after a while. I know I do."

What to wear to the richest race

Go Western, young fashionwise!

By Helen Hennessy
NEA Women's Editor

RUIDOSO, N. M. — (NEA) — It's the world's richest horse race, with a purse that totals one million dollars, and what to wear for the event which lasts about 21 seconds has become a million dollar question.

The answer is: Western. It's at New Mexico's Ruidoso Downs, at the all-American Futurity Quarterhorse event, and every conceivable type of Western wear was conspicuously on parade.

That very American original, the Western boot, finally came into its own. Comfort and durability are important credentials in bootwear, no matter how difficult they may look to wear. They were worn by men, women and children in hundreds of styles which combine color, heel shapes, toe design and stitching pattern. There are some with intricate hand-tooling costing $600, but these are strictly not for the stables.

Shirts feature pointed front and back yokes, button-down pockets and pointed collars. Saddle stitching and embroidery has carried over from the denim work shirt into the Western dressy shirt, and these provide a touch of elegance to the blue jean. Exquisitely detailed shawls, in a host of shapes, are not only fashion right, but necessary for evening in the New Mexico mountains.

The layered look here did not refer to clothes — it was layers of turquoise and silver Indian jewelry in oversized tribal necklaces, stone-set chunky bracelets worn with narrow silver bangles and multiple rings. Large horsemen's buckles and bolo ties, again in silver and turquoise, seemed a standard for men, as did the tall crown wide hat with roll brim.

Telecasting the race has greatly affected the upswing of western apparel sales. This year consumers will spend an estimated $8 million for boots, $2 million for hats, $7 million for Western dress clothes, $6 million for jeans and shirts, and $1.4 million for English riding apparel.

Responsible for the telecast of the All-American Futurity is Thad M. Sandstrom, a broadcasting executive in Kansas. It was a quarter horse named "Our Milda Ruth" that first sparked the idea for the All-American telecast. Named after Sandstrom's wife by her uncle, the mare was purchased by the Sandstroms. They then came into contact with enthusiastic quarterhorsemen who wanted to know why the world's richest horse race wasn't on television.

It is now carried coast to coast on over 170 stations, and the people who attend the million-dollar event dress accordingly. In three short years it has become a showplace of Western fashion unparalleled anywhere in America.

A necklace of seven massive turquoise stones overlaid with silver leaves and set in silver is one of the most unusual pieces of jewelry worn at the million-dollar all-American futurity quarterhorse race in Ruidoso, N.M. While most Indian jewelry is symbolic in motif, the illustrated necklace seems to be a mixture of Navajo and Apache, and is purely decorative.

Fashion and Beauty Tips

Crowning Glory

The style for oily, baby-fine hair is a simple, chin-length blunt cut. Layers only tend to accentuate limpness and oiliness.

Zoo News

Wear a tiny turtle, minature mouse or undersized bullfrog on a short, fine chain around your neck to show your fondness and fashion sense for the animal kingdom.

Cold and Dry

If you think your skin gets drier and flakier during winter months, you're right. Low temperatures, cold winds, outdoor humidity plus overheated living and working conditions contribute to dry winter skin.

Clearly Ruled

A fashion accessory for your desk at home or work is clear lucite ruler with your name or initials added for extra dash.

Proper Rest

Sleep is very important to beauty. If you have a cold or some respiratory trouble remember to elevate your head and chest while sleeping.

Button Up

Metal buttons with tunnel backs are hard to keep on because they cut most thread. Try putting a small piece of a drinking straw through the tunnel and sew through both.

Sitting Pretty

Feminine, sheer evening dresses and outfits call for more delicate body movements and positions. You can't sit in a flowing evening dress as if your were wearing jeans.

Recycled

A clever use for the plastic rings that hold six packs of soda together is to join them with pretty string or cord to form an ecologically sound tote bag for large shopping items.

Camouflage

Good evening look for hiding a figure problem: long, black satin skirt, gored to just graze the body, never cling. Couple it with a white satin top in an easy wrap style to give you a smooth profile.

Evening Shine

Avoid carrying a lot of makeup in a big clumsy purse for special evening occasions by using a multipurpose face cover. A soft plummy color can be used to shadow lids, shine lips and blush cheeks.

Alexandra Rebekah Lodge has meeting

On Dec. 3rd, Alexandra Rebekah Lodge held its regular meeting in Bury with the Noble Grand, Sister Annie Morrison in the chair. The meeting opened in the usual way and owing to the stormy night and many members ill, 13 members were present.

Reporting on sick members, all were pleased to know that Sister Lottie Matheson has left the hospital after a long stay following surgery and will be a guest at the home of her daughter in Lennoxville for awhile. Sister Myrtle Jacklin voiced her thanks for fruits and juices from the lodge after her stay in the Hotel Dieu Hospital, also Sister Helen Groom for Birthday Greetings.

Our Sect, Sister Christeen Matheson was away for this meeting and Sister Winnifred Buchanan acted protem and also reported all bills paid and a good balance on hand.

A special meeting is planned for in March to complete the plans for the U.N. pilgrimage for youth.

A committee was appointed to buy Christmas gifts for five special children in our area.

The next meeting will be held on Dec. 17 at 7:30 p.m. instead of 8 p.m. This will be the Christmas meeting and there will be an exchange of gifts.

After the meeting a social time and a game of cards will be held down stairs in the hall, each member to invite several guests of their choice. Lunch will be served and the "Lucky One" will win a turkey for Christmas.

The drawing for the evening was won by Bro. P. Jacklin.

Lodge closed in ritual form after a very good meeting.

Ann Landers

Please help wallflowers

Dear Ann Landers: Will you please lend a helping hand to some folks who would rather die than admit they need it? I refer to the over 20 and 30 group (both men and women) who have been wallflowers all their lives.

Suddenly they get asked out, or get enough courage to invite someone to accompany them, and they turn into babbling idiots or nervous wrecks.

My tall, handsome, painfully shy, 23-year-old cousin just went on his second date. He couldn't think of a thing to say to the girl and felt like a complete fool. The evening ended with him driving his car over her bicycle which was lying in the driveway. Now he figures he's such an awkward jerk that he won't ask her out again.

I know a 33-year-old career gal who was so nervous on her first date (yes, I said first) that she ate part of her dinner napkin — thought it was a piece of bread. For months, she refused to accept another invitation with a man.

Please give these people encouragement, Ann. Tell them all they need is a little practice. And there are more of them than you think. — Friend To The Lonely

Dear Friend: What these lonely people need is (1) brains enough to ask the right questions (everyone loves to talk about himself), and (2) a sense of humor.

I was no wallflower, but I once cut up and ate a lace doily under a meringue dessert, thinking it was coconut. When I realized what I had done, I apologized openly to the hostess, announced that the doilie was delicious and everyone, including the hostess, thought it was hilarious.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a good friend who is my age (55) but she is so vain she refuses to wear glasses. I know her eyesight is not good, but she tries to bluff her way through. When we shop together she always asks me to read the price tags. What really galls me is the way she snatches my glasses off my face when we are in a restaurant so she can read the menu. (She never asks, just reaches over and takes them.)

Mrs. Bat-Blind's head is larger than mine and she bends my frames all out of shape. I can feel my blood pressure mount when she does it. Please tell me how to deal with this woman without looking like a sorehead. — Glassed In

Dear G.I.: The next time Mrs. Bat reaches for your specs, catch her hand before she gets to the. Say, "Sorry, if you need glasses, get some of your own. You've bent my frames out of shape for the last time." Then offer to read the menu to her.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 15-year-old boy who is worried about my dad. Seven years ago, he went to a place for alcoholics and stayed there for several weeks. When he got out he didn't touch liquor for two years. Then he began to have "just a few" because he was sure he could handle it.

Now he's in terrible shape again, the same as he was seven years, but he won't go for help. Mom and my brothers have tried everything to get him to see the truth. Can you say something that might help? — His Son

Dear Son: There is no way an alcoholic can "have a few" and handle it. Your dad should never touch a drop.

If he refuses to get help, your mom should join Al-Anon and you kids should join Al-Ateen. Look in the phone book under Alcoholics Anonymous and ask for details.

Curling Club Invitation Day

The Ladies' Lennoxville Curling Club held a most enjoyable Invitation Day on Wed., Dec. 4, when rinks from Magog, Danville, the Border, Granby, Windsor Mills, North Hatley, Sherbrooke and Drummondville Celanese participated.

Holiday season decorations were displayed throughout the Club, including a beautifully trimmed Scotch Pine Tree, which gave the occasion a festive atmosphere.

The morning games were won by the Danville rink comprised of Skip M. Currie, M. MacAllister, M. MacDonald and H. Heath, after which sherry was served by Mrs. J. Turpin, assisted by Mrs. G. Herring.

A delicious luncheon, convened by Mrs. P. Tinker, followed, at which time the President, Mrs. S. Rowe, welcomed all those present and introduced the Skips, who were seated at the head table.

In the afternoon round of curling, Skip R. Parent and her Celanese rink comprised of E. Bouchard, R. Galaise and T. Godue, emerged the winners.

Tea was served following the presentation of prizes.

Mrs. D. Brazel, Match Committee Chairman, was in charge of the draw.

Dr. Lamb

X ray shows fat around heart

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I just had a yearly chest X ray and it was described as unremarkable. The report then said there was a prominent right pericardial fat pad. What does this mean and what should I do about it?

I'm 60 years of age, 5-foot-4, and weigh 165. I know all about dieting, but am never successful at it.

DEAR READER — To paraphrase Mark Twain's remarks on stopping smoking, you know all about dieting, you have dieted so often to lose weight.

You are on the right track about what that pericardial fat pad means. One of the places fat accumulates is on membranes, like the membranes between the intestinal loops. The pericardium is simply a membranous sac around the heart. You have an accumulation of fat there.

This does not mean the fat is in the heart muscle or even that there is fat in the arteries to the heart muscle. It is a reflection of your weight problem. It is true, though, that people who have obesity problems tend to have more health problems. The way to eliminate the fat pad is to eliminate all of your excess fat.

The key to being successful, when you know all about dieting, is consistency. You might find that a good well-balanced diet that isn't too strict will help over a long period of time. For help, you can write to me at P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019, and ask for my booklet on losing weight. Send 50 cents to cover costs.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 15 years old and starting high school. I like sports and all of the sciences. I plan to become a doctor. I'm doing well in everything except sports. No matter how hard I try, I'm still no good. I do all of the warm-ups and exercises required to the utmost of my ability. I even work out at home, on my own time, lifting weights, jogging, and stuff like that. I'm still no good, no matter how hard I try. Am I leaving something out, or is something wrong with me physically?

DEAR READER — We all have various levels of ability in different fields, sometimes called talent. One person has a musical talent and can play instruments or sing with ease, another has an inborn art talent.

The level of one's inherent ability determines whether it is easy or hard to do something. The same applies to sports. You can improve your ability by proper training. Some people have muscle fibers that have a quick twitch, and others a slow twitch. These differences are important in tasks involving speed.

I suspect that a great deal can be done to improve an individual's coordination, speed, and responses. A person low on talent may need special physical-type training as analogous to special reading classes for youngsters with handicaps in reading. Not much is done about it because the emphasis is on the individual who already has a talent that can be developed.

In any case, being a slow learner in the sports field does not mean there is anything wrong with you physically. It means sports achievement will be much harder for you.

France has high infant mortality

PARIS (CP) — France's infant mortality rate is still high compared with that in other European countries.

The present rate is 21 in 1,000 births, about twice as high as in the Scandinavian countries and The Netherlands.

Nevertheless, remarkable progress has been achieved since 1950 when 52 of 1,000 infants died within a year, not including the stillborn.

The infant mortality rate fell to 28.2 per thousand births in 1965 and to 24 in 1970.

Early this year the national health department initiated an infant health care program that should permit France to catch up with other European countries.

The program concentrates on improvements to public and private maternity centres, training of medical and non-medical personnel and increased vigil in cases of risky pregnancies.

The program is intended to eliminate the shortcomings in the care of pregnant women and newly-born children that were revealed in 1972 in a national study by the National Health and Medical Research Institute.

STATISTICS VARY

Researchers determined that the following factors affected infant mortality, premature birth and hypotrophy: age of mother, family economic and social status, education, living conditions, working conditions of the mother and immigration.

They found that infant mortality rises with the age of the mother. The rate is 42 in 1,000 births if the mother is over 40, 13.3 if she is between 30 to 39 and 6.8 if under 20 years of age.

The rate is higher than average among immigrant women and among uneducated mothers.

The incidence of premature births was highest among mothers under 20 and over 40, immigrant women and laborers.

Hypotrophy was linked to habitual smokers. About 10 per cent of women who smoked regularly gave birth to underweight children.

The study also revealed that many women whom medical specialists consider risky cases do not visit a doctor during pregnancy.

These visits often permit diagnosis of any danger to the pregnancy.

In Sweden, where the infant mortality rate is the lowest in Europe, prospective mothers must make 14 visits to the doctor during pregnancy. In France only four visits are compulsory but the situation is complicated because there is a shortage of medical facilities in several regions.

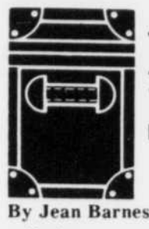

There is also a shortage of obstetricians. There are only about 1,000 of them and it is estimated that 3,000 are needed.

Popular Desk

The "Resolute" desk presented to President Rutherford B. Hayes in 1878 by Queen Victoria remained in the White House and was used by every president including John F. Kennedy. It is now on exhibit at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

Artist Marian Teall makes sunflower using scraps of fabric and yarns. She stitched this design on a 48-inch square burlap canvas.

TODAY'S TREASURES

Yarns and fabric scraps make tomorrow's heirlooms

By Jean Barnes

Perhaps no craft is ever lost as long as our desire for creative expression revives it or adapts it to present day use.

Marian Teall, a gifted and versatile artist, is one of those who is reaching into the past to create heirlooms for future generations to cherish and perhaps use as inspiration for their own creative expressions.

Although she has a varied background of artistic endeavor, she began stitchery about three years ago and "it was exactly right for me," she said.

She has an instinctive eye for good design and her home is filled with treasures from yesterday and today. She loves gardening, both inside and outside and it is from this environment of green, growing plants that her stitchery pictures are conceived.

Her canvas might be a discarded wool blanket from the Salvation Army or a piece of burlap. Her "brushes" are needles in a variety of sizes and her "palette" is yarn and scraps of fabric. With these she creates wall hangings of beauty and importance.

The first step in planning a piece is to select her subject. "I like to use natural forms and make several sketches of things I find." The beginner, however, could use color photographs which are found in nature magazines or Audubon prints. "You will have to simplify them by taking the strong lines of the picture and dividing the prints into large areas."

Marian keeps her generous supply of yarn in old-fashioned dry-goods store cabinets which have glass front drawers. "When I start a piece, I get out swatches of fabric and hanks of yarn and pick out what looks good together."

She plans only the big general areas. "Then it influences me to do things to it. I don't draw it out." She suggests tearing fabric swatches so that edges have an "organic" look instead of being rigid. "Don't overplan," she emphasized.

One sunflower design was started from the center which is of brown tweed upholstery, padded and beaded for added dimension. Petals are almost like a patchwork of applique scraps, sewn with heavy wool yarns. Usually, she uses only four or five different stitches, varying them in size and kinds of yarn which offer a variety of shading and texture.

Texture is important to her. "I'd like to combine macrame, bobbin lace and stitchery so that you come out with a new kind of craft."

According to Marian, "Stitchery ought to look like you want to feel it."

Cavett to change networks

NEW YORK (AP) — Late-night talk show host Dick Cavett says he will go to work for another network when his contract with ABC expires Dec. 31.

"I hope you will continue to watch wherever I show up," Cavett, 38, told a studio audience who attended a taping Friday of his ABC-TV show scheduled for broadcast Jan. 1.

Cavett did not name the network he plans to work for or give a reason for the change.

ABC had no comment on Cavett's announcement, a spokesman said.

A spokesman for CBS-TV confirmed that negotiations were in progress with Cavett but added it was not definite that he would join the network or what type of program was being discussed.

Cavett, who has been the star of his own ABC talk show since 1969, began his show business career as a comedy writer for Jack Paar when the latter was the star of NBC's Tonight show.

NEW YORK (AP) — Apple's Way, a Sunday night series about an Iowa family, is being cancelled by CBS-TV in February and replaced with a musical variety show starring Cher Bono, the network said Sunday.

Her new weekly show for CBS, Cher, will start Feb. 16, preceded Feb. 9 with a hour-long musical special in which she also will star, CBS said.

Apple's Way, which first appeared last spring as a mid-season replacement series, will have its final show on CBS Feb. 2.

It was the fourth series cancelled by CBS during the 1974-75 season. A total of 13 series, including an ABC variety show starring Sonny Bono, have been cancelled by the network since the season began in September.

TAFT, Okla. (AP) — Television star Redd Foxx turned over $10,000 to this tiny eastern Oklahoma community for a start on a swimming pool so the children "won't have to go 10 or 12 miles to go swimming in the summer."

Foxx, star of Sanford and Son, came to this predominantly black community Sunday.

The townspeople said they will ask the state legislature to change Taft's name to Redd Foxxville, Okla.

All eyes will be on Stratford's new artistic director

OTTAWA (CP) — All eyes and ears will be turned to Stratford, Ont., next summer to see what Robin Phillips does with the long-running and highly successful Stratford Festival.

Phillips gained a whiz-kid reputation in English theatre before his appointment last summer to succeed Jean Gascon as artistic director of the festival dedicated to the works of William Shakespeare and other prominent playwrights.

His appointment sparked controversy because no Canadian theatre director seemed ready or willing to take on the job of heading the country's oldest and biggest professional theatre. But fears of what Phillips might do to the festival faded with the attractiveness of his initial plans.

He recruited directors, actors and other artists from regional professional theatres across the country to serve as his associates at Stratford, and plans to make the Avon Theatre and the Third Stage equal in prestige with the main Festival Theatre on the banks of the Avon River.

TOUR IN FEBRUARY

Phillips' first two productions, Shakespeare's Two Gentlemen of Verona and Comedy of Errors, start a national tour in Winnipeg in February before moving to the Avon Theatre for the summer.

In the Stratford Festival, opening in June, other Shakespeare works to be seen are Measure for Measure and Twelfth Night. Also scheduled are Bertolt Brecht's Trumpets and Drums and Arthur Miller's The Crucible.

The surprise announcement was Phillips' plan to produce George Bernard Shaw's Saint Joan. Many thought this was a steal from the Shaw Festival's book at Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., but Phillips said he does not feel barred from Shaw's works, and Saint Joan is best suited for the Festival Theatre.

The Shaw Festival also has a new artistic director for 1975 in veteran actor Tony van Bridge. He assumes directing duties for a year from Paxton Whitehead, the most Shavian of Canadian actors who took a year's leave of absence to act elsewhere.

PYGMALION SCHEDULED

The Shaw Festival will produce Pygmalion, perhaps best known today in its musical-comedy version, My Fair Lady. Later in the 1975 season the Shaw Festival will produce Shaw's Caesar and Cleopatra.

A third play by a contemporary of Shaw will be mounted in the main theatre. Two smaller productions are expected to be shown again at Niagara-on-the-Lake Court House, where the Shaw Festival had its origins.

Canadian theatre really came to life in 1974 with the Canada Council's touring office in full operation for the year. Through its travel subsidies for performers and its touring management more live Canadian theatre was seen by more people in big cities and small towns across the land than ever before.

Leading the parade was a Toronto Workshop Productions drama, Ten Lost Years, based on a book of recollections of The Great Depression by Barry Broadfoot of Vancouver. After providing a hit in Toronto, it played 78 performances in 42 centres ranging from Ottawa to Manitouwadge, Ont., Estevan, Sask., and Vancouver.

The Canada Council spends $1 million a year on its touring office, covering musical events as well as drama and comedy on stage. Anne of Green Gables, the Charlottetown Festival's musical comedy now in its 10th year, was still as big an attraction as ever.

The touring office also brought productions to Canada from abroad, including the Comedie Francaise from Paris, and England's National Theatre touring production of The Hollow Crown.

Most regional professional theatres now can be counted on to do at least one new Canadian play a season. Canadian playwrights also found growing markets for their works in Canadian universities, which prescribe them for studies in drama and Canadian literature.

OTTAWA (CP) — Helene Baillargeon-Cote of Montreal, well-known for her CBC television children's show Chez Helene, was one of four judges named to the citizenship court Monday by the secretary of state's office. The others are Victor Cardoza of Digby, N.S., and Dorothy Petrie and Georgia Kapelos, both of Toronto. Mrs. Baillargeon-Cote's French-English TV program ran from 1959 to 1973.

The Olympiad game was over and the Unlucky Expert rushed up to us with his tale of woe.

He started, "I guess I am the only declarer in the entire continent who didn't make four hearts on board twelve."

"I guess you are," we replied. "What happened?"

"West opened the six of diamonds," was the first part of the reply. He continued: "I saw no reason to hop with dummy's king. Nobody leads away from an ace against a preempt. My queen won the trick and I promptly slapped the jack of spades on the table. East thought a while and played low so West won with the queen. He led back a trump and there was no way for me to avoid the loss of three spades and a diamond."

For once in our lives we have to sympathize with him. We doubt if anyone else anywhere in the world was faced with that low diamond lead.

However, we think that he should have run off all seven trumps after winning that first trick and see if East and West would have found the right discards.

News briefs

PRISONERS FREED

TEHRAN (Reuter) — The Shah of Iran granted amnesty Sunday to 102 political prisoners sentenced to jail by army courts. An official statement said all would be freed today to mark United Nations Human Rights Day.

12 DEAD IN COLLISION

CAIRO (AP) — Eight children and four adults, refugees returning from Cairo to their homes in Suez, were killed Sunday in a collision between a car and the truck they were in, sources said.

RUMOR HURT ON ROAD

ROME (Reuter) — Italian Foreign Minister Mariano Rumor received minor injuries in a road accident while on his way to Ciampino to fly to Paris for today's European Common Market summit conference, police said. They said Rumor and two others in his car who were also injured were taken to hospital by the minister's police escort. No other details were available.

ZOO GIFTS ARRIVE

HONG KONG (AP) — A chartered airliner carrying two white rhinoceroses for the Peking Zoo arrived here from London Sunday. The rhinos, a male and a female, are gifts from the London Zoo, reciprocating for two giant pandas the Chinese gave the London institution this year.

PLOT DEFUSED

DAMASCUS (Reuter) — Palestinian commandos planted explosive charges in an Israeli bus in the Negev Desert town of Beersheba Sunday, but the bombs were discovered shortly before they were due to go off. The Palestinian News Agency (Wafa) said an Israeli military expert defused the bombs.

FLOOD KILLS SIX

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — Six persons drowned Sunday when flood waters from a cloudburst washed several cars off the roads and overturned them near the small mining town of Carletonville. Thousands of dollars worth of damage to crops was caused by the floodwaters.

VOTE DOWN TAXES

BERN (Reuter) — The Swiss people overwhelmingly refused to pay higher taxes in a weekend referendum. Thirteen of the country's 22 cantons voted against the government proposals for more revenue to reduce a big deficit in the projected federal budget and to avoid a possible economic recession.

SOVIET ADMIRAL DIES

MOSCOW (AP) — Vice-Admiral Nikolai Kuznetsov, the commander of Soviet naval forces during the Second World War, has died at age 72, Tass reported Sunday. Kuznetsov's career featured disputes with dictator Joseph Stalin, who in 1947 took away his job as navy commander. After three years as commander of the Pacific fleet, he was reinstated in 1950. He retired in 1956.

NEW YORK (AP) — Gordon Lightfoot sang to a sold-out house at Avery Fisher Hall in Lincoln Centre here Sunday after he had performed an abbreviated show Friday because of electronic feedback.

Jack Kirland, associate general manager of concerts at the hall, said the Canadian singer's audience for four shows over the week-end totalled 12,000.

Kirkland said Lightfoot's first show lasted one hour 35 minutes but that, without an intermission, his second show was 20 minutes shorter because of a faint ringing Lightfoot heard from his amplifier.

An audience reaction that Lightfoot had walked out was, Kirland said, "a general misunderstanding."

Lightfoot was not penalized for the briefer show, he added.

WATERLOO, Iowa (Reuter) — Housewife Marva Drew, 51, has just finished typing every number from one to one million.

It took five years and 2,473 pieces of typing paper to accept the challenge of her son, Daryl, now 23, who came home from school one day and said a teacher had told the class no one could count up to one million.

OMAHA, Neb. (Reuter) — Police officials are trying to find a solution to the problem of how women on the force can use the new sauna planned for police headquarters.

The women are demanding equal use of the sauna—but its only door leads from a men's lavatory.

There is no way of connecting the bath with their own shower room.

A pistol range stands between.

Unions for soldiers in some countries

BRUSSELS (AP) — In some West European countries, a soldier in trouble with his sergeant now can do more than just complain to others in the barracks. He can take his troubles to a union.

Lec Heyvaert, a Belgian warrant officer with 23 years service, is also vice-president of Syndic—a union that claims adherence of 26,000 Belgian officers and soldiers comprising more than half the professional force in a country that is moving gradually toward a wholly professional army.

Heyvaert's superiors allow him 1½ days off a week for union business.

Although Heyvaert says he believes strongly in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) defence pact.

He also says that "civilians who pay us to defend their freedom owe us a debt in the civilized world.

"That debt is paid in money. We want to be paid like other people, no more but no less."

He said morale in the Belgian Army is low because Belgian soldiers get less pay than their Dutch neighbors. The union is demanding the same pay as the national police, extra money for overtime and the right to consult with commanders at all levels.

The military unions of Western Europe generally do not claim the right to strike, but they do hold street demonstrations—in uniform.

LUNS AGAINST IDEA

Joseph Luns, the NATO secretary-general, has told reporters he sees unions as a danger to military discipline. But the official view is that allied forces are each under national demand and it is up to each country to handle its own domestic problems.

Military unions seems to have gone farthest in Luns' native Holland, where there are 11 separate organizations.

West Germany has bigger armed forces than any other West European country except France. Of its 495,000 personnel, 170,000 belong to the Federal Defence Union.

Although it is not actually permitted to negotiate wages, it works with the civil servi8e unions to demand better pay and working conditions.

West German conscripts recently got a raise to $2.20 daily. This is little by U.S. standards, but generous compared with the old European tradition that allowed the soldier only a few pennies a day.

9 pound salmon turns clock back

LONDON (CP) — A nine-pound female salmon has turned the clock back 141 years in the River Thames. The fish, found in the fresh-water intake of a power station, is the first of its breed caught in the Thames since 1833.

Salmon spawned in the river until the end of the 18th century when pollution began to poison the water. In the last 15 years, the pollution trend has been reversed, at a cost of L100 million ($240 million) and today the fact that a salmon has made the 50 miles up river from the sea is seen as a milestone in pollution control.

A special salmon trophy is to be awarded by the Port of London Authority to the Thames Water Authority, the public body now responsible for pollution control in the tidal Thames.

The discovery of the fish is of great significance to water authorities all over the world, who look to the Thames as a leader in the field of pollution control and the reclamation of an industrial river.

Doing own shades saves dollars

By Joanne Schreiber

Take a look at your lampshades.

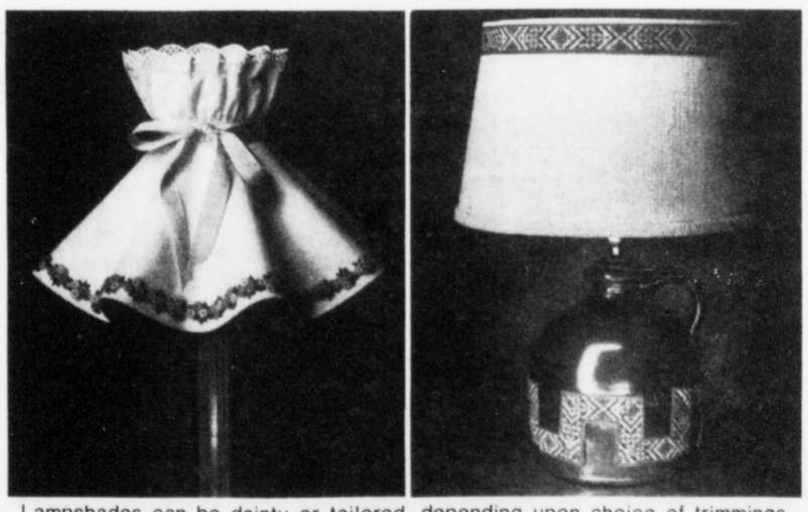

Are they dingy, dirty, dented? If so, they can drag down the looks of a whole room. It's an easy matter to refurbish a shade and add a crisp, fresh decorating note to your home.

A good, fabric-covered lampshade from a custom lamp shop is an expensive proposition. You have two inexpensive approaches to your lampshade problem: you can either buy an inexpensive shade and decorate it with laces and trims or you can strip the covering from your original frame and recover it with new fabric.

All sorts of trimmings are available to decorate your lampshades. The experts at St. Louis Trimmings suggest peasant braid for a tailored burlap shade, brightly colored gimp braid for a drum shade, ribbon and eyelet for a boudoir lamp and venice lace with pearl-studded metallic braid for a formal shade. You can even recreate the Tiffany era with deep silky fringe at the bottom of the shade.

If you plan to make your own fabric cover, test the fabric first, by holding it to the light to see the effect of the light on the texture or pattern. Lightweight, firmly woven cottons are appropriate almost anywhere. Burlap is a good choice for a boy's room. Taffeta or faille may be used in a formal living room setting. If you select a patterned material be sure the pattern is repeated elsewhere in the room and use a plain trim. A plain fabric may take a decorative trim, but that, too, should be repeated for a coordinated effect.

It's easy to cover a lampshade. Basically, it's done like any other kind of slipcover: pin-fitting, stretching and smoothing for perfect fit. The wire frame must first be bound with white twill tape, so that the fabric may be stitched to the binding.

Lampshades can be dainty or tailored, depending upon choice of trimmings. Cover them yourself or add custom touches to store-bought shades.

Quebec Olympic Lodging 1976 opens head office in Montreal, Magog to be site of terminal

MONTREAL (CG) — The inauguration of the offices of "Quebec Olympic Lodging 1976" was held in Montreal on Monday 2nd.

This is the agency which under Bill 28 will exercise supervision, ensure coordination and provide information with regard to lodging during the 1976 Olympic games.

At the beginning, the territory covered by this bill was limited to approximately a 50-mile radius but through an amendment it was enlarged and now includes the counties of Brome-Missisquoi, Stanstead and Sherbrooke.

Presently a campaign is in progress with the purpose of finding suitable accommodations for visitors in private homes as well as camping grounds, motels and hotels.

The ultimate goal is to obtain over 100,000 accommodation units. This inventory will be computerized and video terminals will be installed at key locations in Montreal and elsewhere in the Province to help visitors.

Plans are to install a terminal in the City of Magog as it is a focal point for travellers.

The tourist industry is fast becoming number one in "La Belle Province" and Magog is in a very fortunate geographical location. It is hoped that efforts will be redoubled in order that Magog becomes one of the prominent tourist areas of the Province.

Marcel Dionne setting merry pace for Red Wings, happy under coach Alex Delvecchio, things humming

NEW YORK (CP) — If Detroit Red Wings ever attain a measure of the greatness they enjoyed in the days of Gordie Howe, Sid Abel and Ted Lindsay, Marcel Dionne will probably be leading the way.

"I'd say he's our key player and naturally we're rebuilding around him," says Alex Delvecchio, coach and general manager of the Red Wings.

Dionne is a much happier player this season since Delvecchio convinced him that he belonged in Detroit. The 23-year-old centre was named team captain and assigned Abel's old No. 12 on his uniform.

In the last couple of weeks, Dionne has been a whirlwind trying to snap the Red Wings out of a slump that dropped them into fourth place in the Norris division.

Dionne has 13 goals and 25 assists for 38 points, tying him with Bobby Clarke of Philadelphia for seventh place in the National Hockey League scoring race.

A ONE-MAN SHOW

Dionne was a one-man show against New York Rangers in Detroit Nov. 20, when he scored three goals and assisted on a fourth but the Red Wings bowed 5-4. Last Thursday night, Dionne had three goals and an assist in a 6-4 victory over Boston Bruins.

Although Detroit has won only four of its last 19 starts, the club has three wins and a tie in its last five games. And the Red Wings are only a point behind third-place Pittsburgh.

The 5-8, 184-pound centre from Drummondville, Que., got off to a fine start this season. But on the road things started going wrong for the team.

"I had a big letdown. We went to Atlanta and we lost 10-1 and then we had a six-game road trip and got only one point. From that point on we had a few injuries and the team just collapsed. Now it seems that we're starting to pick up again."

Dionne was the No. 1 amateur draft choice of the Red Wings in the 1971-72 season and set a scoring record for a rookie with 77 points. He blitzed enemy nets for 40 goals and 50 assists in 1972-73 and led the Red Wings in 1973-74 with 24 goals and 54 assists for 78 points.

But he was unhappy under coaches Johnny Wilson and Ted Garvin, who sometimes set him down when he didn't show the potential they felt he had.

Marcel said for a couple of years he kept hearing that he would be traded. Then Delvecchio came on the scene and he turned Dionne into a positive thinker with a future in Detroit.

Catfish Hunter and Nolan Ryan top list of hurlers in AL for 1974, nine 20-game winners

NEW YORK (AP) — Nine American League pitchers had 20-victory seasons in 1974 with Oakland A's control ace, Catfish Hunter, and California Angels fireballer Nolan Ryan leading the honors list released today by the league.

Hunter, the AL Cy Young Award winner, led the league with 25 victories and had the skimpiest earned-run average among regulars with a 2.49 mark. He also led the world champion A's to the team pitching lead with its 2.95 ERA, well ahead of Baltimore Orioles' 3.27.

Ryan, who pitched the third no-hitter of his career during the season, pitched a league high 332 2-3 innings and, in the process, struck out 367 batters, thus becoming the first pitcher in major league history to surpass 300 strikeouts three years in a row. He fell only 16 strikeouts shy of his own record of 383 set in 1973.

Ferguson Jenkins, the native of Chatham, Ont., with Texas Rangers, runner-up to Hunter in the Cy Young balloting, also won 25 games while Ryan, Steve Busby of Kansas City Royals, Luis Tiant of Boston Red Sox and Mike Cuellar of Baltimore won 22 apiece, Jim Kaat of Chicago White Sox and Gaylord Perry of Cleveland Indians each won 21 and Wilbur Wood of Chicago won 20.

Cuellar, with his 22-10 record, had the best winning percentage, a .688 mark.

WHA players to pick All-Star teams for tilt

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Team ballots for next month's World Hockey Association all-star game at Edmonton are going out this week, the WHA announced Monday.

The league said players will pick east and west teams for the Jan. 21 game, despite the league's new three-division format.

Players for the eastern all-star team will be selected from New England, Cleveland, Chicago, Toronto, Quebec, Indianapolis and Michigan.

Vancouver, Edmonton, Winnipeg, Minnesota, Houston, San Diego and Phoenix will be represented on the western team.

Vancouver Canucks counting shutouts

It's been suggested by some National Hockey League observers that when goalie Gary Smith gets tired of the work load, Vancouver Canucks will begin to slump.

But as long as the Canucks do as good a job as they did Tuesday night in helping their lanky netminder, he shouldn't have to worry about the work load and can keep busy instead counting his shutouts.

Smith had to make only 19 saves to record his fifth shutout of the season Tuesday night, backing the surprising Canucks in their 18th win, a 3-0 decision over California Seals.

In other NHL games Tuesday, Boston Bruins beat Kansas City Scouts 6-2, Montreal Canadiens defeated Minnesota North Stars 5-3 and New York Islanders edged St. Louis Blues 3-2.

Paulin Bordeleau scored twice to help the Canucks widen their Smythe Division lead to 15 points over second-place Chicago Black Hawks.

After just 29 games, the Canucks now are only seven wins away from breaking their club record of 24 wins in one season set in their first year in 1970-71 and matched last season.

At Minnesota, a three-goal flurry by the Canadiens sent North Stars goalie Cesare Maniago to the showers in the second period.

Maniago took himself out of the game after he misplayed a routine shot by Montreal's Murray Wilson, allowing a goal that gave the Canadiens a 4-2 lead.

"Please leave me alone," said a frustrated Maniago after the game. "I don't want to talk about it."

Maniago slammed his stick to the ice and skated past the North Star bench and ignored an attempt by coach Jack Gordon to keep the goalie in the game.

STAYED CLEAR

"I certainly wasn't going to tackle him," said Gordon. "This game can be tough on goaltenders. The other poeple might make mistakes and not be noticed. Everybody sees the goaltender . . . the last line of defence."

Rookie Pete LoPresti finished up in goal for Minnesota, which lost its sixth straight game and dropped three points behind third-place St. Louis in the Smythe Division. The Canadiens' win put them two points ahead of Los Angeles in the Norris Division.

Rookie goalie Glenn Resch was the star of the Islanders' win over St. Louis, holding off the Blues when they outshot New York 17-10 in the second period while the Islanders extended their lead to 3-1 with a goal by Jean Potvin.

At Kansas City, Don Marcotte opened the scoring with his 11th and 12th goals of the season and Phil Esposito chipped in his 22nd and 23rd for the Bruins who handed the expansion Scouts their 21st loss in 27 games.

Expansion plans back-firing on pros

TORONTO (CP) — Alan Eagleson says professional hockey is about to pay for its lackadaisical approach to expansion, inflated salaries and the demise of several minor leagues.

The executive director of the National Hockey League Players' Association will appear later this week before the Senate committee on banking, trade and commerce which now is studying the Combines Investigation Act—also known as Bill C—22.

"In the last few weeks some 140 professional hockey players reported they are without work," Eagleson said this week. "They are players who, in the last two years, have belonged either to an NHL or a WHA team.

"About 30 of them are former NHLers and 110 are from the WHA."

Eagleson identified defenceman Arnie Brown as one of the unemployed along with goaltender Gerry Gray and forwards Real Lemieux and Danny Schock.

REAL 'GO HOME'

In the case of Lemieux, Eagleson said the NHL's Buffalo Sabres told him to "go home, because they had no further need for his services."

"Then there's Arnie Brown, formerly with Toronto Maple Leafs, New York Rangers, Detroit Red Wings, New York Islanders and Atlanta Flames.

"One day the Flames called him in and told him he had a year left on his contract but they wanted him to play in Omaha. They had no room for him at Atlanta and no NHL team was interested in him.

"He refused and asked if they would release him if he made his own deal with an NHL or WHA team. They agreed and he signed with Michigan Stags (of the World Hockey Association). . . .

"Gerry Gray, who belongs to the (NHL) Islanders, was shipped to Indianapolis (Racers of the WHA) and told one day: 'Sonny, you're out of work; good luck.'

"Or take the case of Dan Schock (brother of Pittsburgh Penguins captain, Ron Schock). He was traded to Philadelphia Flyers by Boston Bruins for Mike Walton. They shipped him to Richmond (of the American League) where he scored 48 goals two years ago and 23 last year.

"The owners of the Richmond team, which is co-sponsored by Philadelphia and Washington Capitals, called him in and just let him go.

Eagleson lists expansion by both the NHL and WHA as contributing to the closure of minor pro leagues, thus depriving many still young players of an opportunity to perform.

". . . You'll find that every time one of the big pro leagues expands, one of the farm teams is being forced out of business. Just think of Boston, Cleveland, Portland, Jacksonville and the rest."

Eagleson also offered some suggestions that no doubt he'll present to the House committee this week.

"The most important step would be consolidation of the existing product after making some adjustments," he said. "The World Hockey Association should cut down to eight strong teams from 14.

"Then it could compete with the NHL.

"As for the NHL, if they had any brains they'd do some of the following:

"First, move California Seals out of Oakland and place them in Denver or Seattle where they would draw fans. Then the Washington and Kansas City (Scouts) franchises should be reviewed and adjustments made to either help them or return their money.

"What's the sense of having beautiful buildings and no fans. If the NHL wants to expand, it should do something for the new teams—like being allowed to protect only 10 players (instead of 15).

"I think it's ridiculous to see such players as (John) Van Boxmeer of Montreal Canadiens, Chuck Lefley and Claude Larose of the same team until they were traded to St. Louis (Blues), sitting in the stands while Washington and Kansas City are dying for talent."

San Diego's Andre Lacroix gains grounds on leaders in WHA scoring race, Bobby Hull, Larry Lund tied

LOS ANGELES (CP) — A productive week has moved former World Hockey Association champion Andre Lacroix of San Diego Mariners into the thick of this year's scoring race.

Lacroix, who led the league in 1972-73 with 124 points for Philadelphia Blazers, picked up seven assists to bring his season's totals to 23 assists and 34 points, five back of the leaders.

Bobby Hull of Winnipeg Jets picked up only one assist in three games and dropped back into a tie for the lead at 39 points with Larry Lund of Houston Aeros, who had three assists during the week.

The week was Hull's most unproductive of the season. He was on the ice for five opposition goals, giving him a minus four for the week, but leaving him with a season record of plus 25.

TOPS IN GOALS

Hull continues to lead in goals with 23, while linemate Ulf Nilsson is tops in assists with 27.

Serge Bernier of Quebec Nordiques had three goals and three assists during the week to move into a third-place tie with Frank Hughes of Houston and Nilsson at 35 points.

Only eight points separate first and 10th place in the scoring race.

After the business meeting adjourned, Mrs. N. Pierce conducted the devotions, which were in keeping with the season and opened with the singing of a Carol, after which Mrs. W. Robinson read the Christmas story from St. Luke's Gospel.

Mrs. Pierce read a beautiful Christmas story which told of the birth of Jesus and the origin of the gifts, gold, frankincense and myrrh and what they meant. She closed with an appropriate prayer and the beautiful carol "Silent Night" who sung by all.

Correspondence read by the secretary, Sister Luella Brady, included thank-you notes for gifts and sympathy cards and a donation to the Lennoxville Library. Christmas greetings were read from Sister Ruby Pegg of Ottawa and Sister Madeleine Dezan, District Deputy President of District no. 6.

Bills were read and referred and a donation was made to the Tiny Tim Fund.

Sister Helen McElrea, convenor of Ways and Means, reported that more donations had been received for the Phantom Food Sale and urged that names be solicited for the card marathon which will begin early in the New Year. The report of the trustees was given by Sister Vada Cleveland.

Sister Pat Robinson and Sister Gertrude Beattie will be responsible for Christmas cheer for the shut-ins.

The meeting closed in ritual form. A social hour ensued and refreshments were served. The table decor included pink and green candles whose soft glow pervaded the hall. The hostesses were Sisters Margaret Wells, Jessie McKee and Grace Stafford.

The annual Christmas party will follow the next regular meeting on December 18th. A gift exchange will be held.

Oil shale comes into its own

Following last winter's severe oil shortage, the Federal Energy Administration has now turned its attention to the oil shale industry. Authorities say that as many as 700 billion barrels of petroleum may be extracted from shale deposits in the Rocky Mountains where the Paraho Development Company is currently expanding its production facilities.

PANORAMIC Parachute Creek in Colorado has been the site of oil shale mining since 1922 which experts believe to be one of the richest shale deposits in the country. Some industry spokesmen fear, however, that accelerated mining may cause severe environmental problems before scientists can prevent the possibility of surface water contamination and land scarification.

VERTICAL kiln is used by Paraho at Anvil Points, Colo., to crush shale into particles and then superheats them to separate oil from the pulverized rock.

ENGINEER Harry Harris inspects crushed shale at Anvil Points before it is transported to the kiln for processing or "retorting" as it is called in the industry.

SAMPLES of shale oil products from Anvil Points plant are a far cry from the bituminous shales first processed 300 years ago to produce medicinal oils.

Phillis in Dillerland

Getting a big ha-ha-HAAA out of life No. 2

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — For a lady who is (The World Almanac says) 57 years old, Phyllis Diller acts completely unlike her age. She looks, talks and behaves more like a teen-ager.

Maybe that's because her second life, that of the comedienne, is less than 20 years old. She began her career as a funny lady in the late '50 s. Before then, as she says, she was just another housewife.

Today, as an institution, she is hardly just another anything. And a visit to her home is like sliding down the rabbit hole into Phyllis' version of Wonderland.

There's a huge painting in the hall. You notice something odd about it. Then you realize it is on its side.

"Only way I could fit it in the space ha-ha-HAAAAA," says Phyllis.

She leads the way into what she calls her Hope room. It is dominated by a huge chest. Naturally, a Hope chest — ha-ha-HAAAAA. The room — the whole house — is furnished in immaculate taste, baroquish, lots of antique furniture, plants, flowers, tapestries, bric-a-brac.

The hostess is in soft pink and blue, with a floppy pink hat.

"The hat?" she says. "It's better than a wig."

But the teen-ager in her comes out quickly. You notice she is wearing braces on her teeth, something few 57-year-old ladies sport. She explains that she always had a malocclusion and is in her third year of wearing braces to correct it.

Romping around the place is her dog, a mite of a Llasa Apso named Phearless. A lady in Corsicana, Texas gave Phyllis the puppy.

"I'd never been a dog person before," she says, "but now I go to a BUTCHER, an honest-to-God butcher with knives and BLOOD on the floor like there should be."

One of her grandchildren, a toddler named Paul, popped into the room. He was just back from kindergarten.

"I think I have SOMETHING for you, Paul," said Phyllis.

"I already got it," said Paul.

She wanted to show me her closet. I went along, figuring I'd humor her because how sensational can a closet be? But Phyllis' closet is a C*L*O*S*E*T!!! Rows on rows of her peculiar brand of dresses, hats, feathers, shoes. Everything in its place. Temperature-controlled.

"I'm a hat person, as you can see," she said. "But if you don't have hair, you tend that way — ha-ha-HAAAAA."

Next year, 1975, will be her 20th anniversary in show business. She said that San Francisco, the city where she started, may declare her a national monument. If they don't, somebody should.

She says her dream had always been to be a success with music. She studied the piano for 17 years, went to the Sherwood Conservatory of Music in Chicago.

"My DREAM was music," she says. "I never thought of comedy. For years I thought I was NORMAL. I was funny in living rooms and at church affairs.

"It was my first husband who insisted I become a comedienne. Was that a GOOD IDEA! About the only good idea he ever had. That and the kids — ha-ha-HAAAAA."

Her love of music is still with her and currently she's enjoying herself with what she calls her new concert career. She's done nearly 30 so far. In a turn something like Jack Benny's, she appears with local symphonies. She plays the piano seriously, then recites a prayer she wrote which has been set to music by Alvin Mills.

"My Prayer" goes: On this happy day... On this happy day... we are thankful... For our blessings... And we pray... For renewed belief...In ourselves... And each other... And hope... This bond of love... Will expand... To envelop... The entire universe.

When she decided, back in 1955, to give professional comedy a whirl, she had to start at the bottom.

"It was tough," she says, "for me, a person of innate GOOD TASTE, to have to start at the bottom, with the fags and the dikes and the cheap rooms."

But she did and she persevered and now she picks and chooses where she wants to perform. She enjoys her new concerts more than anything but that's not where the big money is.

"Clubs are still the beefsteak," she says. "I used to take anything that even MENTIONED money, but no more. Now I take the kind of job that's one show a night, if it's the same audience. If the audience CHANGES — as they do in Las Vegas — I'll do two or three shows a night. I just do the choice things, but I'm still on the ROAD 10 months a year."

She says her goal is to turn into a kind of Woody Allen performer, making her own movies. Comedy movies, of course.

"When I go to the movies," she says, "I only want to see comedy. Porno is COMPLETELY boring. So is violence. Why go to a movie and be UPSET for a week. Same with television. I want to laugh — ha-ha-HAAAA!"

Singer Cleo Laine is something else

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Last summer, I went to the Hollywood Bowl to see Hank Mancini. He was great, as always, but I came away captivated by his costar that night. Before then, I had never even heard of Cleo Laine.

She is, very possibly, the greatest pop singer in the world. She can do things with her voice that make Barbra Streisand sound like a rusty hinge. She is utterly thrilling.

I made a point to see her again, on her next West Coast visit, and to spend some time with her. She and her husband, John Dankworth, who is a brilliant musician and her conductor, were on a whirlwind visit, but gave me some time.

Cleo Laine is a gracious, beautiful woman. Her father is a Jamaican, her mother "an English lady." Her real name is Clementina Campbell, but when she started her career, her husband thought that was too long for a marquee.

"I'd always been called Clem," she says, "so we changed that to Cleo and found Laine somewhere. It's been a lucky name."

She has only recently — late 1972 — tried her wings in the U.S. Well-established in England, she had enough there, with her career, her home, her two children.

"Besides," she says, "I didn't want to come here and just be another singer. I didn't necessarily want to be better, but I certainly wanted to be different."

So, she waited, she says, until she had "eliminated all the influences" on her. Now, she feels, she is herself and has a recognizable style.

She and John both felt that she should start her American career in the concert field.

"I didn't want to be a cabaret singer," she says.

So, she began at Carnegie Hall, which automatically set her apart. And that's precisely where she belongs — apart.

"When you roll a stone down a hill," John Dankworth says, "you don't always get an avlanche. We've rolled the stone down. Now we'll have to see what happens. In a year, we could be so big, we'd have to spend all our time here."

CLEO LAINE: Move over, Barbra.

That could very easily happen. Pick up one of Cleo Laine's three RCA albums for their musical treat of the year.

The occult fad is sweeping along. Movies and TV shows about the occult are doing well. Wondering why, I asked an expert.

I can't tell you the expert's real name, however. The reason is that he's an occult moonlighter (naturally) and by day, he's a professor of philosophy at a Los Angeles college. He calls himself David Farren in his occult life, however, and it is as David Farren that he has written a book called "Living With Magic," all about witchcraft.

Farren believes that the occult and show business are natural allies. Nowhere else can you tell a spooky story as well as you can on a movie screen. He just feels that they go to two extremes — the Bewitched extreme on one hand. "The Exorcist" extreme on the other.

Hints of Nfld. oil boom continue

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Ever since Eastcan Exploration Ltd. struck gas off the Labrador coast this fall, there have been hints of an oil boom for Newfoundland.

However, a conference on the possible impact of oil development held at Memorial University was warned that if such development proceeded too rapidly, the only boom in store for the province could be the sound of the economy exploding under the stress.

Experts from Canada, Norway and Britain exchanged viewpoints and information on the consequences of oil and gas developments, especially in the North Sea area off the United Kingdom.

The question of how to control the rate of oil and gas development dominated panel discussions.

Rapid development, it was said, would pose threats to a relatively underdeveloped economy such as Newfoundland's and could also destroy the province's traditional way of life.

CAUSED CONFLICT

Political economist Max Gaskin of University of Aberdeen, outlined the conflict which occurred when an easy-going area of Scotland suddenly found itself with a high-powered oil industry.

"The geography of the oil discoveries in Scotland is such that the impact of the offshore operations is falling on areas of the country least prepared to withstand it," Prof. Gaskin said.

The oil had been discovered off a section of Scotland where population was sparse and the economies relatively underdeveloped.

"This means that labor availability is not very great; infrastructure such as local government capable of providing housing is not fully developed, and social services that had existed are not up to demands now being placed upon it," Prof. Gaskin said.

CITY HARD HIT

He said that even in a place like Aberdeen, a city of 250,000 with many necessary services and labor markets, great stress had been put on social and economic situations.

Industries which had settled in Aberdeen before the oil strike now found themselves drained of workers and the inability to provide housing was causing many social problems.

Prof. Gaskin said officials were not prepared for the speed of development from the first oil strike to the introduction of affiliated construction and service industries.

Prof. Gaskin suggested that many of the difficulties experienced in Scotland were due to the fact that "things were happening so fast authorities were often merely reacting to a situation, rather than being in control."

NOT WITHOUT HOPE

But the situation is not hopeless, said Prof. A. Jackson, an anthropologist with University of Edinburgh.

For instance, the Shetland County council had been reasonably successful. Councillors explored the islands to find out which would be the area of minimum impact and found one area, which they zoned for industrial development.

"They received a couple of million pounds from the oil companies for local industrial development and this will be increased over the years," Prof. Jackson said.

The anthropologist noted this would be particularly significant in terms of Labrador, especially the town of Makkovik, 50 miles from one of the gas discoveries.

"What are 300 or so people there going to do during this period of exploitation of the gas and oil reserves?" he asked.

Prof. Jackson said the Scottish situation was similar to the Newfoundland situation in that "we have a population dependent on traditional activities such as fishing, knitware and crofting, or tenant farming—a very small industrial base."

It was this kind of area which was least prepared to handle such a development.

Ted Anderson, chairman of the Makkovik Community Council who attended the seminar, agreed.

ASKS ABOUT FISHING

He wanted to know how many local people would likely be employed in future offshore exploration and development, and whether there would be a viable fishing industry for the 350 residents of the village once the oil boom passed.

While there were no immediate answers for Mr. Anderson's questions, the experts agreed these concerns should be central to any study of development potential.

Cabot Martin, legal advisor to the provincial mines and energy department, said the differing views on the rate of development were at the crux of jurisdictional discussions between the province and Ottawa.

"The province wants the development to go slowly, while Ottawa wants a faster pace of development," Mr. Martin said.

Mr. Martin said that the provincial government at present does not recognize federal production permits. Eastcan Exploration had only the province's permission to explore. He said production guidelines would be based on Norwegian experiences.

O. Kvinnsted, editor of a Norwegian oil industry publication, said that in Norway there were strict legislative controls. Certain areas were out of bounds to oil companies and any proposed construction site which will employ more than 100 people must first receive permission from the central government.

Mr. Kvinnsted suggested that the federal and provincial governments try to keep a similar rein on oil development, letting it proceed only when it was determined the best move for society.

Steve Millam, director of energy resources for Newfoundland, said the discussion of development may be entirely academic in Newfoundland's case.

"Ice conditions off our coast and weather conditions generally will keep such development to a minimum," Mr. Millam said.

Drilling operations off the coast are often halted by ice conditions, including icebergs that lumber about the northern seas.

False Alarm

A cable received by the United Press headquarters in New York on Nov. 8, 1918 from its president, Roy W. Howard, in Brest, France, set the United States off on a national celebration of the "False Armistice." Mr. Howard, learning later that his "scoop" could not be confirmed, sent a second cable to his New York office explaining the error but it was impossible to convince anyone that the war was not over. The armistice ending the war was actually signed Nov. 11th, three days later.

Between Indian feuds and rating worries

Nakia has it tough keeping it gentle.

By Dick Kleiner

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — (NEA) — Every television program has its own peculiar problems but one of the producers of ABC's new Nakia series thinks his problems are unique.

George Sunga has to sit in on Indian tribal councils to gain permission for the series to shoot on Indian ground. Sometimes this permission doesn't come easily.

"I was visiting a Pueblo tribe," Sunga says, "and I got caught in the middle between two feuding factions — the Red Eyes and the Black Eyes. They used our attempt to film at their pueblo as the basis for a civil war."

Worrying about Indian wars is only one of the headaches the Nakia company faces as it shoots its ABC series in and around Albuquerque. At the moment, of course, the biggest concern is the ratings.

I was met at the handsome Albuquerque airport by a chauffered car and, for a few minutes, I thought that this company was sure in solid with the local authorities. The car was a sheriff's vehicle and the great crest of Davis County was gleaming on the car's doors.

But then I learned that Albuquerque is really in Bernalillo County, and Davis is a pure fiction. So are the cars. They're just props.

Nevertheless, the driver, who looked very sheriffish, heard I'd just arrived from Hollywood and wanted to know what I knew about the ratings. When I reached the company, they clustered around me, bombarding me with rating questions.

At the show's production office, coproducer Sam Strangis was on the phone as I came in to pay my respects.

"Twenty-two?" he was saying. "Does that mean we're still the top ABC show on Friday and Saturday night? It does? That's great!"

He hung up, beaming. And everybody in his office, the associates and the secretaries, laughed and jumped up and down and hit each other on the back.

The day I visited the show they happened to be shooting a scene in a downtown Albuquerque parking garage. Everyone hastened to assure me that was unusual, that 80 per cent of the show utilizes the beauty of the Southwest. The parking garage could have been anywhere.

The show's star, Robert Forster, seemed less concerned about ratings than anybody else. He was still worried about making the show what he wanted it to be. He had had one series — Banyan — which wasn't very good.

"Banyan was never what I wanted," Forster said. "If this one isn't what I want I'll walk away after 13 weeks. No problem."

What does he want Nakia to be?

"I want it to be gentle," he said, "and full of character. Not violent. Not cops and robbers. I laid down the ground rules — gently but firmly — in my first conversation with David Gerber, when the series was first considered."

Forster's wife and three of their children are back home in Rochester, N.Y. He has one son with him here. He says if the series goes then the family may move here for the duration.

They were setting up for a shot in the garage. Forster called over, "Am I safe for 15 minutes?"

The assistant director said he was.

"Good," Forster said. "I'll be back. Have to pick Bobby up from school."

It's that kind of company here and that kind of life for the actors. The one who seems to find time hanging heaviest on her hands is Gloria DeHaven. Forster and his costar, Arthur Kennedy, are usually busy.

"I'm the cover set," she says. "If it's raining and they can't go out on location, they shoot the office scenes with me. So that means I have to be around, just in case the weather turns bad, but most of the time I'm not needed.

"I have one friend here in Albuquerque, aside from the company. A lot of the time I'm left with nothing to do."

Inactivity is not the problem for Forster. He works hard, day after day, and they all seem to blend together. He could be working anywhere. He really hasn't had much opportunity to explore this interesting city and its equally interesting environs.

Coproducer Sunga, who scouts for locations, does most of the exploring. He is astounded at the variety of scene he can find within an hour's drive from Albuquerque.

He's also astounded by the nature of the people who live here.

It's amazing how nice people are," he said. "One day my car got stuck in the mud. And literally every car that came along stopped and the driver offered to help me. That would never happen back home in Los Angeles.

"The people are so nice — I'm going bananas."

The problem then isn't here. Forster thinks the reason the show's ratings have been lower than hoped is that the scripts do not exploit the leading character's Indian blood more. He says he's going to try to see that future ones do.

"I have to make my objections and my suggestions gently," he says. "If I'm too strong, it kills my point about gentleness."

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The Garden State Parkway in New Jersey was the first highway to use automatic toll collectors on Nov. 19, 1954, The World Almanac recalls. Recently one eastcoast parkway has discontinued automatic toll payment because of increasing violations. Most American turnpikes collect tolls by ticket at exit booths.

Soybean's popularity rises as economy falls

By Gaynor Maddox

Beef cattle love them. But in the United States not enough citizens have learned to use them in cooking to enjoy eating them. What are they? Soybeans, that remarkable protein-packed bean.

We produce three quarters of the world's supply and keep half for feeding animals. The rest we export and that constitutes 85 per cent of the world's soybean supply.

Europe is our largest buyer, then Japan. Japan uses soy in sauce, bean cakes and noodles. That takes about a third of their imports. The rest goes to feeding animals.

All this indicates that man prefers red meat fattened on soybeans to eating protein in bean form — even today in the face of inflationary prices.

The meat industry accepts soybeans as a protein challenge. But it does not foresee soybeans taking over the protein market.

David H. Stroud, National Livestock and Meat Board president, says: "The soy bean burger is looming as tough competition on the horizon. It looks and feels like meat. It even may almost smell like meat. That's our challenge. But meat as a source of protein and other nutrients is a more flavorful and desirable product."

Europe wants more meat, too, as its economy adds more affluence to many of its citizens. Therefore, soy protein is important but the protein imported from the United States still will go more and more into feeding cattle, experts say, than into soybean casseroles.

Japan, also, is turning more and more to beef. Japanese still want their traditional soy sauce and bean curd. But more and more they are demanding beef steak and roasts.

Experts report that only about 3 per cent of the world's soybean production currently is used as human food. But that per cent is gradually increasing. Many

Demetria Taylor, food expert and editor, reports a mild increase in use of soybeans as a direct food. "They taste a lot like other hard beans and peas. Flavored intelligently, they are quite acceptable. I see them as a salvation in these times of skyrocketing meat prices."

Lil Stuckey, one of the most reliable of food advisors, a home economist and author of several cook books, recalls their use during World War II. "We grew them in back yards and taught people how to use them. We fed them to the Army. So soybeans as direct protein food have a reliable history in the United States."

Miss Stuckey worked with other experts on preparation of a list of beef and textured soy granules seasoned with spices. Their recipe for stuffed Greek Burgers is very popular with several otherwise beef-oriented families.

"The Proteins for Pennies Cookbook" by John Woods is a new guide to getting more eating pleasure while being thrifty with soybeans. He was raised in Texas where soybeans are a major crop. He recalls that one of his favorite childhood memories was coming home to find a tasty pot of soybeans on the stove. (The book is published by Peter H. Wyden, $6.95.)

"The Proteins for Pennies Cookbook" contains many recipes from his home background. It contains much valuable information about how to cook them, how to sprout them for fresh food and how to combine them with other foods into highly pleasant dishes. He is one man eager to offset the prevailing American preference for beef.

Sausage platter perfect for holidays

Combine sausages and apricots and serve over rice for holiday treat.

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

It's time for tree-trimming parties and Christmas carol rehearsals. A quick dish that stays hot in a chafing dish proves an easy way to keep the holiday spirits in high gear. A sausage-apricot combination can be prepared in advance and kept hot in the chafing dish. Serve with rice or noodles and a salad. Cheese and fruit for dessert, plus coffee or hot chocolate, make this a perfect winter offering — whether you live in Alaska or Hawaii.

SAUSAGE-APRICOT SKILLET

- 2 packages (8 ounces each) sausage links
- 2 medium onions, cut in 1/2-inch wedges
- 2 green peppers, cut in small chunks
- 1 can (30 ounces) apricot halves, undrained
- 2/3 cup water
- 2 tablespoons vinegar
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch

Fry sausages in skillet over low heat for 12 to 15 minutes or until well-browned on all sides; turn frequently. Remove sausages, drain on paper towels. Saute onions in drippings until lightly browned. Add green peppers and saute 1 minute longer.

Drain apricots, reserving syrup; add syrup and water to onions and green peppers in skillet. Combine vinegar and cornstarch; stir cornstarch mixture into liquid in skillet. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Add browned sausages and drained apricots; simmer just until ingredients are heated. Transfer to chafing dish. Makes 6 servings.

Cheese adds zip to onion souffle

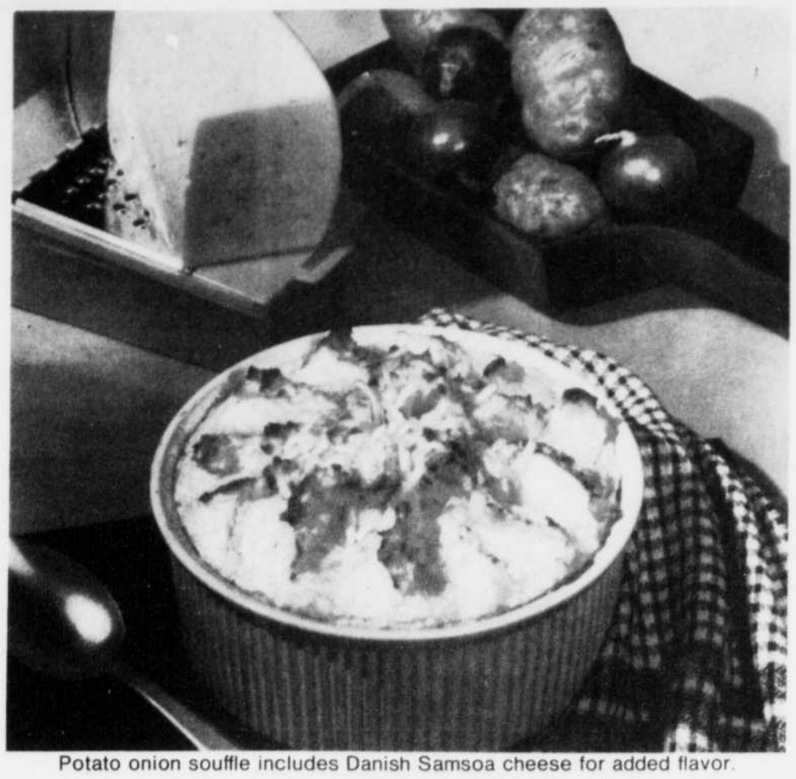

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Those who turn to poultry as a means of creating varied dishes at less cost often overlook the succulent duck. Roast duck is available frozen whole throughout the year and makes an attractive, tasty entree. Next time you look for something different in the protein line at the supermarket pick up a duck. Roast it with a meat and apple stuffing and serve garnished with additional spiced apple rings.

ROAST DUCK WITH MEAT AND APPLE STUFFING

- ½ pound lean ground beef
- 1 (4½ to 5 pound) duckling
- 1½ teaspoon salt
- 1 egg
- 1 jar (7-ounce) applesauce
- ¾ teaspoon ground marjoram
- Generous dash pepper
- 2 cups day-old bread crumbs
- ¼ cup chopped cocktail peanuts
- ¼ cup chopped parsley
- Spiced apple rings or apple wedges
- Parsley

Brown ground beef in heated skillet, crumbling meat with fork as it cooks. Drain; set aside. Rinse cavity of duckling with cold water. Drain and pat dry with paper towels. Sprinkle cavity with ¼ teaspoon salt. Thoroughly prick duck skin with tines of fork. Beat egg slightly. Blend in applesauce, marjoram, remaining 1¼ teaspoons salt and pepper. Mix in beef, bread cubes, cocktail peanuts and parsley. Spoon mixture into duck cavity. Close cavity with skewer or by sewing. Truss duck. Fold back wings to secure neck skin. Place on rack in roasting pan. Roast at 425 degrees for 20 minutes. Remove from oven. Discard fat from roasting pan. Reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees. Roast 1 to 1½ hours longer, pouring off fat occasionally, until done. Duck is done when juice from thigh pierced with tip of a sharp knife runs out clear. Serve garnished with spiced apple rings or apple wedges and parsley. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Potato onion souffle includes Danish Samsoa cheese for added flavor.

Plenty of crunch in this pots de creme

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Chocolate lovers will enjoy a homemade pots de creme using a quick, simple recipe. This one has a short cooking time so it fits right in with recent reminders to economize on fuel. Cocktail peanuts are added for an extra crunchiness. Spoon into individual containers for serving when the Peanut Pots de Creme is thoroughly chilled.

PEANUT POTS DE CREME

- 1-1/4 cups light cream
- 1 package (4-ounce) sweet chocolate
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 3 egg yolks, beaten
- 1/3 cup chopped cocktail peanuts
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Combine light cream, chocolate and sugar in top of a double boiler. Heat over simmering water, stirring, until chocolate is melted. Beat in egg yolks. Continue to cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens to the consistency of a thin pudding (about 3 to 5 minutes). Remove from heat. Stir in cocktail peanuts and vanilla. Pour into demitasse cups or half-fill teacups. Cool and then chill at least 2 hours. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Friendly card club

AYER'S CLIFF — The Friendly Card Club held their annual Christmas banquet in the Canadian Legion Hall on Friday evening, Nov. 29, which was catered to by the Ladies Auxiliary. The dinner was cooked and served by Comrades Thelma Piercy and Lillian Sharman assisted by Miss Shelly Ann Sharman.

A delicious and bountiful turkey dinner was served to eleven members and one guest. Much praise was passed on to the cooks as the guests lingered around the table enjoying a delicious dessert, tea and coffee.

The hall was beautifully decorated in the Christmas motif and the table was centered with a decoration and lighted red tapers. Soft music in the background of Christmas carols added to the atmosphere.

Following the dinner, cards were played at three tables and prizes won by Mrs. C. Libby, 1st, Mrs. Jessie Taylor, 2nd, and Flora Astbury, consolation.

Prize for high score for the year was won by Mrs. Fern Dezan and low score Mrs. Millie Wheeler. Punch was served during the card games.

There was an exchange of gifts from the lighted Christmas tree when Shirley Piercy acted as Santa Claus.

Much missed in the group was our friend Mrs. Ruth Waite who is still a patient in the Sherbrooke Hospital and a gift is being sent to her. Mrs. C. Libby replaced her as a guest.

All were pleased to have Mrs. Jessie Taylor back as she had been missed very much by the members, having been confined to her home for several weeks following an accident when she fell and fractured a bone in her leg.

Change of pace entrees

It's always nice to have a low-calorie entree around to help cut down on calories during super-rich holiday eating. Many families revert to soups and salads for a change of pace. Here are three filling potato soups that range from 90 to 130 calories per serving. Serve with a salad of crisp raw vegetables, lettuce, or fruits, with a low-calorie dressing or no dressing.

- 4 cups chicken broth
- 4 cups chopped Romaine lettuce
- 3 anchovy fillets, rinsed
- Juice of ½ lemon
- Salt and pepper
- Croutons
- 1 teaspoon Parmesan cheese

Cook potatoes with the garlic in olive oil over low heat until potatoes are limp. Add the chicken broth and chopped lettuce. Cover and simmer for 15 minutes. Add anchovies and lemon juice and simmer for 2 or 3 minutes. Puree the mix in the blender or food mill. Add salt and pepper to taste. Serve hot or chilled garnished with croutons and Parmesan cheese. - 1 cup chicken broth
- 1 teaspoon tarragon
- 2 cups low-fat milk
- Salt and pepper
- Watercress
- Small cooked shrimp

Cook potatoes and onion in butter until limp. Add watercress, parsley, artichoke hearts, chicken broth and tarragon. Cover and simmer for 15 minutes. Add milk and simmer 1 minute. Blend soup or put through a food mill. Add salt and pepper to taste. Serve hot or chilled garnished with watercress and small cooked shrimp. Has 133 calories per serving. Makes 4 servings.

GARDEN SALAD SOUP

- Salt and pepper
- Sliced radishes

Cook potatoes and green onions in butter until onions are limp. Add cucumber, lettuce, chicken broth and dill. Cover and simmer gently for 15 minutes. WI meeting

MELBOURNE RIDGE — The Dec. meeting of the M.R.W.I. was held at the home of Florence Roster, with the second half of the roll-call as hostesses.

The meeting opened by repeating the Collect in unison. Three guests were welcomed.

The motto was 'May the ancient miracle of Christmas make us one with all mankend and bring the abiding love and peace for which the whole world longs.'

The roll-call was to make a Christmas corsage to be judged. It was answered by 22 members and there were 15 lovely corsages shown and judged. Our three guests did the judging. First prize was won by Shirley Nelson and second by Myrtle Johnston.

The minutes were read and approved.

The correspondence was thanks from a member for sympathy extended, thanks from Hazel Johnston for sunshine box and thanks from Violet McMorine for flowers sent to her on her birthday.

Treas. report was read.

Convenors reports were:

Agriculture — Shirley Nelson read an article on cows gall stones. They are reported to be nearly the same value as gold at the present price.

Citizenship — Marg Smith reported buying the gifts for member's children and making the candy bags.

Health and Welfare — Dianna Taber read a letter of thanks from the Dixville Home and also an inspiring story of a new Canadian titled 'Our first Canadian Christmas.'

Cheer committee — Dorthy Johnston reported sending sympathy cards and sunshine basket. A gift will be sent to Jeff Delarey who had an operation and one to a member's husband when he returns from hospital. Cards were signed by everyone for two sick friends.

Pennies for friendship were collected.

Home Economics — Ena Frank reported that she had asked Mrs. St. Cyr to give a demonstration in February.

It was decided to send Mrs. Dorothy Ellis a thank you Christmas gift for her kindness to our W.I. while she was here.

Florence Roster as chairman of the program committee, read the new program drawn up for 1975-76. It was approved.

Christmas gifts were passed on to all members and children and a pleasant social time was spent. A delicious casserole and salad meal was served.

The next meeting will be announced.

Fidelity Rebekah Lodge

AYER'S CLIFF — Fidelity Rebekah Lodge No. 33 held their regular meeting in the Lodge Hall on Monday evening Nov. 18, with Sister Madeline Dezan acting as Noble Grand.

There were no bills or communications for this meeting. It was reported that information was still being gathered concerning their project.

The annual Christmas Party was held at the meeting on Dec. 2nd. Members and their families were invited to attend and there was the usual exchange of gifts and treats for young and old.

The members served lunch on Nov. 30 for the Sheep Breeders who held their annual meeting on that afternoon.

Reports were given by some of the members who had attended the District meeting in Rock Island on Saturday Nov. 16, that an enjoyable evening was spent there.

The Round Robin was passed and Sister Ellen Thompson had the Cross.

The meeting was closed in form, and all adjourned to the lower hall where lunch was served.

CBC gets new corporate symbol

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC introduced a new corporate symbol Monday night—an expanding C which will appear on all English and French TV networks, stationery, equipment, and eventually CBC buildings across the country.

Along with the visual symbol, the CBC introduced a new sound symbol for radio use, composed by Francois Morel of Montreal. The exploding C was designed by Burton Kramer and Allan Fleming of Toronto, creators of the snake-like CN logotype used by Canadian National Railways.

CBC President Laurent Picard said in a statement the state-owned broadcasting system needed new symbols—both sound and visual—to identify all its facets, including English and French AM, FM, and TV networks and its Northern and international services.

"The over-all program is designed to establish and maintain a clear and consistent identity for the CBC everywhere and in everything it does," he said.

The visual symbol was to be first used before the late evening English and French television news Monday. The sound identification was to be used on the French radio networks Monday night, and on the English networks Tuesday morning.

The symbol centres on the letter C, surrounded by segments of the letter expanding in all directions. When reproduced in color, the C—which Mr. Picard said stands for Canada, expanding in every direction—will be red and the segments will spread out through tones of orange to yellow, all on a blue background.

The search for and adoption of the symbols took about two years. The visual symbol was approved in January, and since then the CBC has been working towards its introduction with as little disruption of operations and services as possible, the CBC said.

Before they were seen or heard on the networks, the symbols were introduced by CBC executives at an Ottawa reception.

In Montreal and Toronto

Internationally known conductors taking over symphony orchestras

OTTAWA (CP) — New conductors of international repute will take over leadership of the Montreal and Toronto symphony orchestras in 1975, after a year in which the country's music scene was mainly a holding operation, waiting for better things to come.

Financial constraints brought on by inflation and determination by the Canada Council to hold the line on major arts grants in 1974 resulted in a year in which there were not the creative new developments that marked 1973.

But after coming close to financial collapse a year ago, the Montreal Symphony embarked on a program of taking concert music out of its home in Place des Arts and into places where people gather, including shopping centres.

Rafael Fruhbek de Burgos, who built the National Orchestra of Spain into a leading symphony in commercial recordings, succeeds musical director Franz-Paul Decker next fall.

LED BY GUESTS

In Toronto, the orchestra has worked for almost two years under guest conductors, following the death of Karel Ancerl, former leader of the Czech Philharmonic. Now a new English conductor, Andrew Davis, has been engaged to take over full-time duties next fall.

The Toronto Symphony toured Europe in 1974 under guest conductor Kazimierz Kord. The Vancouver Symphony went to Japan in 1974 and still hopes for a tour of China, postponed last summer when the Communist regime there went through internal re-examination of Western music.

The Vancouver Radio Orchestra toured Manitoba, Alberta and the Northwest Territories in May and June, ending with eight performances in Ottawa.

New music flourished in 1973 and some spilled over into 1974. The Canadian Opera Company produced Heloise and Abelard by Charles Wilson of Guelph, Ont., and Hamilton Place, a new $8-million performing arts centre in the steel city, was opened with a modern Mass composed by Galt MacDermott of Montreal.

GOES ON TOUR

A soft rock version of Hamlet by Cliff Jones of Toronto, produced for the CBC in 1973, was converted this year into a stage production by the Charlottetown Festival. It is going on tour in 1975, having achieved hit status under the title Kronborg: 1585.

The Canadian Opera Company ended its 25th anniversary season with the appointment of veteran bass Jan Rubes as touring director. Early in 1975 he and the Canadian Opera touring company move into the Festival Theatre at Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., to work on new touring programs designed to reduce their dependence on one-night stands.

Les Jeunesses Musicales, an international organization dedicated to fostering musical youth, also celebrated its 25th anniversary in Canada in 1974.

And new organizations came into being. The Canadian Chamber Orchestra was formed for a six-week period at the Banff Centre school of fine arts, and will perform again in July and August, 1975. In the new year the Toronto Symphony will form a Toronto Youth Orchestra.

ALL SUNG

Plans have been announced in Ottawa for the fifth annual Festival Canada, now to be devoted almost entirely to opera and lyric song. During July three popular operas—Mozart's The Magic Flute, Verdi's La Traviata and Offenbach's Le Belle Helene—will be produced in the 2,300-seat opera house of the National Arts Centre.

Music at the Stratford Festival is expected to be expanded with the appointment of Robin Phillips as artistic director and Raffi Armenian as musical director. Armenian last summer conducted Gian-Carlo Menotti's The Medium, with world-famed contralto Maureen Forrester in the title role.

Miss Forrester, noted especially for her recitals in German lieder, is expected to make her Metropolitan Opera debut in New York in 1975.

Legion Ladies Auxiliary meet

STANSTEAD (IH) — Thirty members of Stanstead Frontier Auxiliary Branch, Royal Canadian Legion, gathered at the Memorial Home in Stanstead, on Tuesday evening, December 3 for their annual Christmas party.

At banquet style arranged tables, Mrs. Joyce Jarvis and Mrs. Ruby Simpson, Sr., of Rock Island, catered to serve a sumptuous family style turkey dinner which left nothing to be desired and for dessert a choice of lemon, pumpkin or chocolate pies they had made. The tables were decorative in Christmas motif. The women of the Auxiliary were the guests of the Senior Branch members.

Later, the business meeting took place with the president, Mrs. Vernice Middleton presiding for her last meeting, for in January the president elect, Mrs. Doris Belanger, will be in the chair.

Routine reports were heard and correspondence given attention. A thank you note was read from Robin White for his Auxiliary bursary.

Mrs. A. Roy, Mrs. D. Belanger, Mrs. Clara Wesselink and Mrs. R. Sheldon completed plans for the Children's Christmas Party on December 14 at 3:00 p.m. at the memorial Home. This is for youngsters up to the age of 12 years who are children of Veteran or Auxiliary families.

It was announced that in the evening the adults Christmas party for Legion members and their guests will take place with Reg Sayer's orchestra in attendance. Santa Claus has been contacted and will be at both the afternoon and evening party. Those attending the evening party should bring a gift for exchange.

Mrs. Minnie Sheldon and Mrs. Louise Rolleston are conveners for the catering of a small Christmas party the evening of December 15.

It was announced that the installation of officers for both the Senior and Auxiliary will be at 7:00 p.m. at the Legion Memorial Home with a party to follow. It was agreed the refreshments will be coffee, donuts and cheese.

The meeting closed with a prayer by the chaplain, Mrs. Geneva Lyons.

Mrs. Doris Belanger, on behalf of the Auxiliary members, presented Mrs. Middleton with a gift in appreciation of her leadership as president the past two years. Mrs. Middleton responded with words of thanks and continued support to the Branch work.

Mrs. Aileen Roy and Mrs. Louise Rolleston were Santas to distribute the gifts from a table gaily decorated with a Christmas motif cover and centered with a small tree and Santa Claus.

The next gathering will be on January 7 with the hostesses to be Mrs. Gladys Chartier, Mrs. Geneva Lyons and Mrs. Enid Cooke.

That's Entertainment a smash hit

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — The smash musical hit That's Entertainment and the success of the Grand Hotel in Las Vegas helped Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer gain its highest net income and gross revenues in the company's 50-year history.

Figures released Monday by MGM showed gross revenues of $237,548,000 for fiscal 1974 compared with $154,520,000 for the previous year. Net income was $26,837,000 compared with $9,267,000 in fiscal 1973. Income per share rose to $4.58 from $1.56.

"We have achieved our objective of becoming a diversified entertainment company with an expanded earnings base," said Frank Rosenfelt, president and chief operating officer of the company.

CHICAGO (AP) — Indian musician Ravi Shankar was released from the hospital Monday after recuperating from apparent exhaustion.

A hospital spokesman said Shankar, 54, a sitar player, had undergone tests to determine if he had suffered a heart attack. The results were negative.

Shankar was admitted Wednesday while on a concert tour here.
