DAYS TO GO

Rates drop again but prices rise

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada's trend-setting bank rate fell more than four-fifths of one percentage point Thursday to 13.34 from 14.17 per cent a week earlier.

The decrease followed by a day the announcement by the five major chartered banks of a cut in their prime rates — the level charged their best corporate customers — to 14.75 from 15.75 and 15.5 per cent. Other borrowers pay one to five per cent more.

However, most experts were cautious in their assessment of the developments, noting that declining interest rates in Canada reflect plummeting rates in the U.S. as an economic recession takes hold.

Thursday's bank rate decline — the fifth consecutive weekly fall — is the second biggest drop since the March 10 introduction of a floating rate. Last week, it decreased 1.23 percentage points.

The dollar, which usually weakens as interest rates drop, has been hovering about the 85-cent level all week. But dealers say trading is light as people await the outcome of the May 20 vote on the future of Quebec.

The dollar closed Thursday at 85.01 cents U.S., down from Tuesday's weekly high of 85.29 U.S. but comfortably close to the 85-cent level.

Meanwhile the consumer price index increased 0.6 per cent in April from a month earlier, Statistics Canada said today.

The rise was only half the March increase and brought a correspondingly lower annual rate for the index — a common measure of inflation — to 9.2 per cent from 9.3 per cent.

Higher transportation and housing charges were largely responsible for the increase.

Prices for fuel oil and some other liquid fuels showed no change in April from March, but gasoline rose 1.6 per cent.

Economists have predicted a 10-per-cent rise in consumer prices this year, mainly on the assumption that the federal government and Alberta will agree to higher oil prices after July 1.

Canada's annual inflation level of 9.2 per cent is appreciably lower than the U.S. annual rate, now 18 per cent.

In Statistics Canada's survey of prices in 15 cities, increases ranged between a low of 0.3 per cent in Montreal to a high of 1.1 per cent in St. John's, Nfld., and Calgary between March and April.

In Montreal, the increase was lower than the national average mainly because the retail sales tax was removed from textiles and furniture and transit fares went down.

The high increase in St. John's, Nfld., was due partly from increased electricity charges and higher prices for tobacco products; the same increase in Calgary reflected, among other things, higher food prices for selected items which were marked on special in early March.

Higher prices for some new car models, coupled with increased expenses for automobile operation and maintenance, were recorded in all cities.

Townships' gas: 3-year wait

It will be 1983 before the spur to the natural gas pipeline will be built in the Eastern Townships region under a federal energy plan announced Thursday by Energy Minister Marc Lalonde.

The total length of the pipe will be 1,535 kilometres, at a cost of $300 million, key to Ottawa's plan to replace imported oil with cheap natural gas. Gas pipelines would be extended deep into Quebec and oil refineries would shift more of their production to fuels such as gasoline that can't easily be replaced by natural gas.

The government's aim is to cut oil use to 10 per cent of energy needs for homes, industry and business. Industry and business now depend on oil for 25 per cent of their energy and homes for 40 per cent.

Lalonde said these measures would stretch oil supplies and reduce the need for expensive imports, which the government estimates would triple to 660,000 barrels daily unless consumption patterns change.

Despite Canada's position as a net energy exporter, with its gas and electricity sales to the United States, conservation is a necessity and industry is leading the way with its aim of cutting 23 per cent from energy use per unit of production between 1975 and 1985.

Questioned about his timing in announcing $2.7-billion in investment in Quebec just five days before the referendum, Lalonde said Ottawa "is not going to stop governing just because Premier Levesque happens to have called a referendum."

He said the federal cabinet received the NEB recommendations on the Quebec and Maritime pipelines late in April and wanted to release them soon after examining them.

Once the pipeline is built, Quebec would have to spend $580 million to expand its gas distribution. Outside Montreal, almost none of the province is served.

No forces widen lead

PQ may contest result

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque raised the possibility for the first time Thursday night that if he loses the Quebec referendum he might contest the result because of heavy federal government advertising during the campaign.

"I will ask legal advice if need be," he told reporters at a news conference following a rally.

He said: "I think that one way or the other, they (the federal government) should be contested morally, without any decision of the courts, because six million witnesses have seen them dishonor themselves."

The premier has been attacking the federal ad campaign all week, but he had never before hinted he might seek legal advice on whether to challenge the referendum results.

The federal advertising campaign is the subject of a case before the Quebec referendum council, a judicial body created to rule on such matters.

Asked about the premier's comments, Quebec Liberal Leader Claude Ryan described them as poor tactics. He said Levesque realizes he is losing the campaign and is becoming reckless.

Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin, reached in Montreal, theorized that Levesque had been pushed to make the statement by the arrival Thursday, 10 days ahead of schedule, of old-age pension cheques mailed to Quebecers along with a federal health and welfare department anti-alcoholism pamphlet.

INCLUDES SLOGAN

The pamphlet includes the anti-drinking slogan "Non Merci," the same slogan used by the no forces in the referendum campaign. Ottawa has said the reason the cheques are being sent early is because of a possible postal strike.

Morin said he saw the move as an attempt to buy the votes of the elderly.

He made the comment without having talked to the premier and said he hadn't been aware of what Levesque told reporters earlier. But Morin said the cheque incident "pushed the premier to the edge of his patience."

Campaigning in the Quebec City region, Levesque denounced Trudeau's recurring promises that a no vote in the referendum will be the signal for rapid, sweeping constitutional change. He said Trudeau had mocked Quebecers and spouted political fiction by making that promise.

He had also "mocked democracy" in his vague statement that the 74 Quebec Liberal MPs would somehow "put their seats at stake" to push for reform.

Trudeau's hint that he and his colleagues might resign if English Canada doesn't accept reform within Confederation is "draped in melodramatic cynicism," he said.

POLL: 49% TO VOTE NO

MONTREAL (CP) — The latest opinion poll on the Quebec referendum, released today, indicates growing support for the pro-federalist forces with 49 per cent of respondents saying they will vote no next Tuesday, while 37 per cent say they will vote yes.

Fourteen per cent of respondents, interviewed by telephone between May 4 and 9, refused to answer or were undecided about granting the Quebec government a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association with the rest of Canada.

The results show a striking polarization between language groups.

Forty-five per cent of French-speaking respondents said they would vote yes, 40 per cent no, and 15 per cent were undecided. By comparison, 93 per cent of people whose mother tongue is English said they would vote no, with only two per cent voting yes and the rest undecided.

Oui headquarters in Bedford sports a Canadian flag among all the SovAss signery; nobody could explain why.

Noyan Loyalist heritage affects refspirit

By NELSON WYATT

NOYAN — If it weren't for all the Oui and Non posters dotting nearby Bedford, you would be hard pressed to know that the sovereignty-association referendum was even taking place here.

A peaceful hamlet bordering the Richelieu River and a stone's throw from the United States border, Noyan's hardy townfolk seem to chat more about the year's crops and their rich Loyalist heritage than they do about the upcoming vote. "It's quite a topic of conversation," says Wendy Pearson, the town secretary, "but it's very low key around here. People are taking it very much as an individual matter."

However, it's not as though the federalist and the SovAss forces were waging a neck-and-neck battle within the town limits. Two houses display large Oui banners, one of them belonging to the local Yes committee man, and a Noyan councilman has a red, white and blue "Mon Non est Quebecois" poster tacked to his garage door. In nearby Clarenceville, the posters number about the same and down the road in Venise, referendum ads don't seem as prominent as a row of weathered posters designed to drum up support for Tory Heward Graftey and Liberal Andre Bachand for last February's election.

Noyan mayor Donald MacCallum, who lives in a magnificent stone house that was home for seven generations of his ancestors, says that because of the village's remoteness, the two camps in the sovereignty association battle are more prone to confine their meetings to larger centres like Bedford and Marieville.

Though he notes that the referendum battle has apparently split one family into two sides, with two sons going for the Yes and the rest going No, MacCallum notes that the primary way that the population in Noyan is divided is numerically. About 372 anglophones and 322 francophones have staked out land in the town, with the population increasing to around 3,000 in the summer months. Many of the families are descendants of the 400 Loyalist families that settled the area and it's a fact the residents are proud of.

"We're all good friends here," says MacCallum, a unilingual anglophone who has drawn plenty of support from his francophone colleagues during the 30 years that he's served as mayor. "We get along well here."

Though he says his wife went to the recent Yvette rally in Montreal, most people just attend the meetings in Bedford and keep track of what's going on in the referendum by TV and newspaper. He bemoaned the fact that little local news found its way into the regional press and oddly enough, echoed the contention made by Rene Levesque in Sherbrooke the day before that the Gazette is of more interest to people based in Toronto.

But there is no bitterness if a neighbor has chosen to support a side contrary to the status quo. As we drive past a house emblazoned with one of the town's two Oui banners, MacCallum says, "That's Paul Cousteau. He's a nice enough fellow but he's just on the wrong side. We're good friends." When it comes to provincial representation, MacCallum says the MNA in Iberville, the county to where Noyan was annexed in the last redistribution of electoral districts, is doing a good job. But the provincial member that comes in for the most praise is the late Jean-Jacques Bertrand. Bertrand was an old friend of MacCallum's and the mayor says the English elementary school in Clarenceville and most of the paved roads were the fruits of his labors.

He remembers also Bertrand's son, Jean-Francois, who is now a PQ backbencher. Recalling how the former premier used to pass through Noyan to pick up his son at school in the United States, MacCallum found it interesting that the younger Bertrand should be the one to organize students in a march on the Plains of Abraham earlier in the campaign. "He called that the second battle of Quebec," MacCallum points out, "but it was actually the third one. They won the second one."

The young are also of interest to a local horticulturalist checking out the stock at the KMK greenhouses. He says that when he was younger, during the depression, he was a member of an organization that sought a better deal from the government. But, adds the declared socialist, the youth of today, with the exception of the francophones are much more conservative and don't seem to be following that path. Asked what he thought of Rene Levesque's sovereignty association plan, the man shrugs. "If he wants to separate, why

Ottawa, postal union far apart

OTTAWA (CP) — The likelihood of a national postal strike next week grew Thursday after release of a conciliation board report containing serious differences between government and union representatives appointed to resolve the dispute.

Key recommendations of conciliation board chairman Germain Jutras were accepted with reservations by union representative Jacques Desmarais but were rejected by government conciliator Pierre Mercier as costly and chaotic.

Jutras proposed no fundamental changes to the now-expired contract between the post office and the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

But he recommended a one-year agreement with a sweeping set of increased financial benefits and a special system to clean up a backlog of 30,000 unsettled grievances—comprising of alleged contract violations by the post office—dating back as much as four years.

Submission of the report to the Public Service Staff Relations Board put the postal workers in a legal position to strike at 12:01 a.m. EDT next Friday.

Postal union president

Jean-Claude Parrot, scheduled to hold a news conference today, has said the conciliation report might lead to fresh negotiations but stressed the union will strike if necessary.

Key recommendations by Jutras included acceptance of the government's last wage offer, a one-hour mid-day meal break with half of it paid, and increases in overtime pay, boot and glove allowances, night and weekend shift differentials, vacations and restrictions on use of part-time workers. All of these had been rejected by government negotiators in contract talks.

Jutras, a labor lawyer from Drummondville, Que., said his recommendations are meant to tide the parties over until the post office becomes a Crown corporation as promised by the government. That step would free managers and workers from heavily restricted bargaining rights.

However, in describing relations between the two sides he said: "The parties distrust each other, refuse to talk to each other and refuse to negotiate seriously."

Desmarais said he found the Jutras report acceptable as a package but disagreed with some points.

These seniors say Trudeau's 'fear campaign' has caused them to lose faith in federalism.

'We've watched them get ahead'

Senior group backs Yes

By CAROLE TREISER

A lifetime of taking a back seat to the English in the work force is the main reason a group of Sherbrooke senior citizens is giving for voting yes in the referendum.

"Even though we are bilingual, we always had to watch the unilingual anglophones get ahead. And then they would ask for your help, because they couldn't understand French. Now do you understand why I'm voting yes?", one woman said.

Ten unaffiliated seniors organized themselves yesterday to announce how they'll vote in the referendum. And they're all voting yes.

"We've always felt we were Quebecois and not Canadian," Mrs. Juliet O'Bready Graham said. "Our whole lives through. What do I have in common with people in the other provinces? There's a different language, lifestyle and culture."

"And in Ontario, they don't even have a culture," another added.

All said they considered the economic future of Quebec under sovereignty-association, and like Rene Levesque, they concluded when "he started his fear campaign among the elderly". One man pulled out his pension cheque along with a pamphlet urging him to say "non merci" to boozie.

"They sent me my cheque two weeks early in order to try to get their referendum message through to me." None are fearful they would lose a portion of their pensions in a sovereignty-association. They charged that Ryan and Trudeau assumed that their capacities have been diminished by age and they would fall prey to fear tactics.

"That's not happening with seniors up to age 70. But those in their seventies and eighties who are more cloistered may be falling for the trap," Gerard Gobeil said.

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and Ontario Premier William Davis displayed solidarity Thursday, both expressing their determination to bring about constitutional changes following Tuesday's vote in Quebec on sovereignty-association.

Trudeau emerged from an hour-long meeting with Davis to say "we're both determined to see change after the referendum."

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec's Indian leaders are sticking to their recommendation that their people abstain in Tuesday's referendum despite a change of heart by the Inuit, Chief Andrew Delisle said Thursday.

"We don't consider ourselves citizens of Quebec," said Delisle, president of the Confederation of Indians of Quebec and chief of the Caughnawaga Mohawk reserve near Montreal.

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Federation of Labor accused the federal government Thursday of interfering with a post office conciliation report to ensure mail delivery of pro-federalist referendum material.

QFL secretary-general Fernand Daoust said Ottawa arranged to delay release of the report on post office negotiations from May 7 until today to allow for distribution of the controversial pamphlets before a possible national strike by postal workers.

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec Press Council said Thursday that Nouvelles Tele-Radio, a broadcast service of The Canadian Press, did not act in bad faith when it issued an erroneous report March 30 on an internal memo at The Gazette.

MONTREAL (CP) — Andre Raynaud, finance critic for the Quebec Liberals, predicted Thursday that "severe restrictions" on capital, business and tourism could be necessary if Canada refused to share its currency with a sovereign Quebec.

FORT CHIMO — An overwhelming Yes vote in a little-known referendum held this week gave Makivik, the corporation overseeing Inuit economic development in Northern Quebec, a mandate to represent Inuit in negotiations with both federal and provincial governments.

Makivik represents the majority of Quebec's 5,500 Inuit.

QUEBEC (CP) — Georges Forest, who led the court battle for official recognition of the French language in Manitoba, says a vote in favor of Quebec independence would mean "cultural suicide" for francophones outside Quebec.

"I'm here to support a no because otherwise we'd have no reason to survive," Forest told a news conference Thursday.

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and Ontario Premier William Davis displayed solidarity Thursday, both expressing their determination to bring about constitutional changes following Tuesday's vote in Quebec on sovereignty-association.

Trudeau emerged from an hour-long meeting with Davis to say "we're both determined to see change after the referendum."

Lennoxville, force arrive at staffing compromise

By NELSON WYATT
LENNOXVILLE — Town council and the local policemen's brotherhood have reached a truce in the current dispute over whether the municipal department would be maintained.

After a meeting held Tuesday afternoon, the town agreed to hire a part-time policeman to fill in for constables during the vacation period and to seek a replacement for sergeant Russell Wells who retired on April 5. The meeting was attended by mayor Cecil Dougherty, police committee chairman Duncan Bruce, town legal adviser Guy Landry, police union representatives Richard Roy and Peter Martin and Federation of Quebec Municipal Policemen's Brotherhood president Guy Marcell. It was held at the request of the town, say union spokesmen, following the filing of grievances by the police union. The union contended that the town had violated article 24.01 of the lawmen's collective agreement, which specifies that two men must be in the patrol car when it is on the road. With Wells' retirement, the force was cut back to seven men and this meant one man less per shift.

Though police did patrol for a while with only one constable on the day shift, the union launched the grievance when no replacement was sought. Rather than hire another constable immediately or put another man on overtime to maintain the department's strength, police committee chairman

Bruce ordered Chief Leo Hamel to immobilize the squad car when only one man was working and to tell the man on the shift to refer citizen complaints to the QPF Sherbrooke detachment. This system was tried for four days and was deemed unsatisfactory when it was found that the understaffed Sherbrooke QPF had a slow response time in answering calls and were doing no preventive patrolling in the town.

The police department is seeking as Wells' replacement, a part-time constable who has completed a CEGEP police course and basic training at Nicolet. The union has agreed to withhold their grievances for three weeks but will present them for arbitration if the posts are not filled by June 3. The policemen's brotherhood has also agreed to patrol with one man per car for the next three weeks during the day but any extra men assigned to fill in at night will be paid overtime.

"We're making the concession of only having one man on patrol to acquire an acquired right," concluded police brotherhood president Richard Roy.

The Lennoxville police have recently been the subject of a study by the Quebec Police Commission, brought in by the town to determine if taxpayers were getting their money's worth out of the force. The force was last studied in 1974, when it was recommended that it be maintained at a strength of eight men.

Sherbrooke Hospital launches campaign

H. GORDON GREEN speaks to the Sherbrooke Hospital Foundation during the official 1980 campaign launching last night.

'The best tractor poops in the furrow'

SHERBROOKE (JD) — Farmer-sage H. Gordon Green was the speaker, the occasion was the kickoff of the Sherbrooke Hospital Foundation's 1980 fund-raising campaign, and the audience was in the mood for Mr. Green's barnyard humor.

The Ormstown farmer, a long-time Star and Family Herald contributor and now CBC columnist, sang the praises of longevity, backing up his claims with the comment that his oldest son is 43 and he himself received his first pension cheque three years ago, the day his youngest daughter was born. "... and I wouldn't have stopped but Pampers got up to $4 a box," Green quipped. Things may take more time at his age, he added, but that didn't mean they weren't just as enjoyable. He told the story of the young bull and the old bull on a hillside, watching as a herd of young heifers were loosed from the barn. "Let's run down and breed us a heifer," says the young bull. "Let's walk down and breed 'em all," the old fellow retorts.

In the midst of laughter, Mr. Green changed the pace dramatically, tearing into the entire North American economic structure which he said was based on waste and doomed to stay that way. "like a dinosaur stuck in a tar pit."

North American excesses are based on cheap, plentiful oil, the Third World's cheap manpower and natural resources and the ability of our society to sell finished products back to them, Green said. He slammed agribusiness, scolding today's claims that the average North American farmer feeds himself and 50 others. "In my father's day, the average farmer fed himself and eight others, but those eight were fed on solar energy alone — horses pulled our implements, wood heated our houses and ran our steam threshers. Our houses were heated with coal oil and a little coal went toward making the few simple implements we needed."

Mr. Green said there was something immoral about wasting oil which should remain in the ground for future generations, wasting it on an oil-based agriculture which included pesticides, herbicides and fertilizers. "The best tractor is the one that poops in the furrow."

He said he's been heartened by the words of futurists who say the future of this continent is in smaller towns and cities, such as those found in the Eastern Townships. Modern technology has made it possible for someone to do a job from home without having to commute to the city, Green said.

PROGRES DE MAGOG SOLD

MAGOG (JKH) — Progres de Magog, the 10,000-circulation weekly newspaper has new owners: Jacques Parent and Jean-Louis Langlois. The two businessmen have acquired a majority interest in the publication while former owner France Saint-Martin MacGillivray will remain as secretary-treasurer of the company, which acquired the weekly and the printing business.

SHERBROOKE (JD) — In the 13 years since it began operations, the Sherbrooke Hospital Foundation has raised more than $1.5 million for expansion and improvement of the hospital — and that's not including this year's $150,000 objective.

This year's campaign contributions will be used to upgrade the hospital's kitchen and food services, which have remained essentially the same since the new hospital was built in 1948. Dr. James Ross, the hospital's director of professional services, told a press conference at yesterday's campaign kickoff.

Savings in preparation, improvements in quality and more controls on serving will add up to an annual cost-cutting of about $50,000, Dr. Ross said. Other funding from this year's campaign will go toward new laboratory equipment for more sophisticated testing, and to the hospital's prolonged care unit.

The unit provides hospital support for former patients who still require prolonged care. Once released, they may be placed in one of a chain of homes across the Townships which can then call on the hospital to provide the medical

Suspect opts for jury

SHERBROOKE (JKH) — Neil Buzzell of Magog, charged with causing bodily injury through criminal negligence in the shooting Tuesday night of his sister, Shirley Buzzell Hope, chose trial by judge and jury in sessions court in Sherbrooke Thursday.

Buzzell appeared before Magistrate Laurent Dube and was represented by Me Michel Durand. Hearings continue today.

Buzzell is accused of shooting Mrs. Hope with a 12-calibre rifle, wounding her in the head, hand, and legs. Mrs. Hope was able to escape to neighbours, who contacted police.

COWANSVILLE: FIRST STEP HAS BEEN TAKEN

COWANSVILLE — "The first step has been taken," says Jean Leduc, Cowansville's economic development officer concerning a visit of official McDonnell-Douglas this week.

He said this was the town's first contact with the manufacturer of the F-18A. "We were much further along with General Dynamics; in fact we'd reached the stage of an option to purchase the necessary land," Leduc continued.

McDonnell-Douglas visited several other sites in the Townships and their officers will narrow down the possible location of a future plant," Leduc said. "I don't expect them to make a firm decision in the immediate future. Once the selection has become more limited, they will meet with appropriate municipal authorities to consolidate information on precise details."

He said the local meeting was positive. "But we always allow companies to announce their decision to establish in Cowansville, thus avoiding raising false hopes amongst the available labor force," Leduc explained. He could not reveal the types of products to be supervision necessary to ensure the patient receives needed care in an optimum, home-like setting.

"The 1980 campaign is well underway — $35,000 has already been collected towards the objective of $150,000 and of significance just recently, the Lennoxville Blitz, carried out on May 12, realized the sum of $9,504, which is $3,000 more than the blitz last year," said Dr. Ross.

The past year has seen the hospital's programs develop in the fashion planned, he added.

"The Department of Family Practice continues to grow and has developed a well-organized Family Practice Teaching Unit in conjunction with the University of Sherbrooke Medical School, to teach and train medical students and residents in the setting of a community hospital, in which setting the vast majority of them will be practicing in the future."

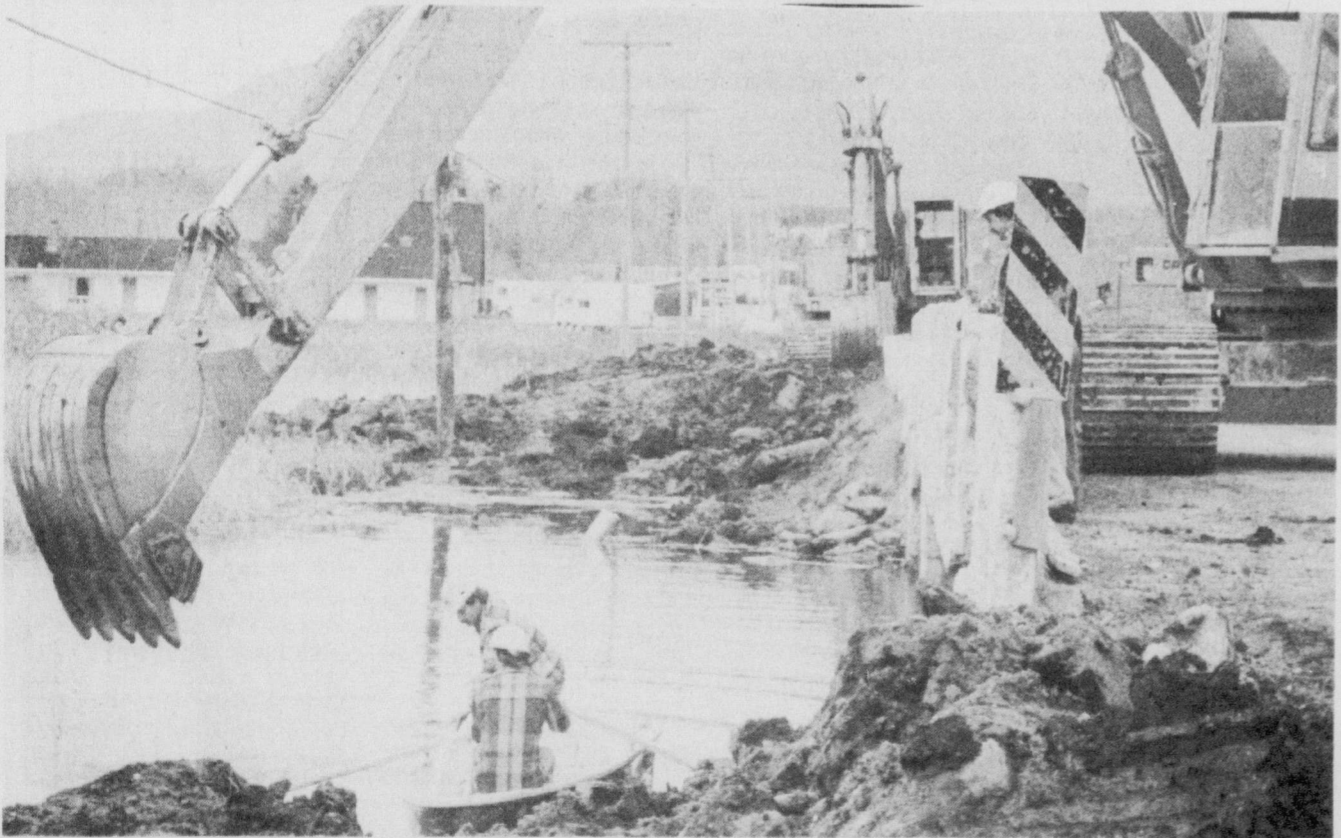

Dr. Raymonde Vaillancourt, Chairman of the Department of Family Practice, has been very active in organizing and developing her department towards these goals. The Sherbrooke Hospital is also continuing to improve its close affiliation with the medical school, involving doesn't he say so?"

The Noyan area is primarily an agricultural zone, with lush and productive farms bordering the roads. Most are concerned with grain corn, the rest with dairy cattle and the bulk of the competition here seems to be over who has the tallest silo, not which side will win the referendum. Noyan was where the first American killed on Canadian soil — a spy called Captain Remember Baker — fell during the American revolution. It is the birthplace of two members of Robert Borden's wartime cabinet, one of whom is the namesake of Cochrane, Ontario. Though the federal presence has also been felt there in the referendum campaign with pension cheques arriving two weeks early with "No, thanks" notes in them, MacCallum concludes that Claude Ryan's forces will be victorious Tuesday night. "If Levesque had held the referendum two weeks after the debate in the national assembly, he might have won it, though."

And what of Noyan if there is a Yes vote on May 20?

"I don't think it will change much. The French are human beings like everyone else and we'll continue to live together like we always have."
"We're friends," he concluded.

Canadian freedom permits peaceful Quebec discussion

At this juncture in time it would perhaps be a useful exercise to examine briefly the type of society we live in. Quebecers are privileged to live in a country which permits serious debate in a climate of freedom and tolerance.

How many countries in the world have a system of government which (a) would permit a question as explosive as the referendum question to be placed before the electorate; (b) would permit the debate on the vote to take place in a climate of free speech, free press and relative tolerance?

It is not surprising in such an emotional climate that we have recently witnessed isolated incidents of violence, anonymous threats by letter or phone and occasional verbal lapses by people who should know better. What is surprising is that these excesses are few and largely confined to the lunatic fringe which exists in any society.

The referendum question has temporarily divided families, working companions and friends. There is nothing in our collective history which would lead to the conclusion that these divisions and family quarrels will be permanent. All evidence points to the likelihood of a quick healing of wounds. Most Quebecers will be going on with their lives in a normal fashion on the morning of May 21st.

In my view, predictions of post referendum violence are ignorant assumptions which don't reflect the Quebec or Canadian reality. Thank God. The Cross-Laporte affair, the only recent incident of kidnapping and assassination of public figures in this country, was so outside our experience that the trauma to our collective psyche has not completely disappeared after 10 years.

In many countries of the world, explosions, kidnappings and assassinations are a way of life. We need only compare our record to that of our neighbors to the south to put things in a proper perspective. As to the isolated attacks on committee offices, distasteful propaganda and verbal abuse, we need only compare the present campaign to a typical Quebec election of the 1950's to see that we live in a healthy democracy. In France, Breton and Corsica autonomists plant bombs on a regular basis and the movement for Occitan autonomy appears to have painted over half the signs in the south of the country. To all those who feel slight twinges of uneasiness and paranoia in the present emotionally charged climate, I say: Pause and reflect a minute, things are not so bad, they are even damn good.

It appears that the results of the referendum will be close. We would do well to remember that whatever the result, a great many Quebecers will feel themselves to have lost an important debate. Some of our fellow citizens will be bitterly disappointed. To the victors

I say, be tolerant and considerate in your attitudes. It will not be a time for crowing. To the losers I say, all will not be lost. The social, political and cultural fabric of Quebec society will continue to evolve, as it has evolved, in a democratic climate, with at least some consideration for all legitimate points of view. This has been our tradition and I see no reason why it should not continue.

To both winners and losers I say, the constitutional debate will not end on the evening of May 20th. It is likely to be with us for our respective lifetimes, so let us continue to discuss together with serenity.

To those who can see no good in Canada I say the following: Canada is a country where a healthy French-speaking society has flourished in Quebec. Canada is a country where free speech and a free press are strong traditions. Canada is a country where the Parti Quebecois campaigned and came to power as a normal occurrence. Canada is a country which permits a free debate and vote on an issue which would be proscribed in many countries.

To those who see the Canadian experience as all good, I say the following: Canada is a country where the French-speaking minorities in other provinces have been robbed of their legitimate rights and in some cases doomed to assimilation and disappearance by an intolerant English-speaking majority. Canada is a country where for too long French-speaking citizens suffered discrimination in the job market and in the receipt of basic services for reasons of language — and often in the past — religion. Canada is a country where too often the advantages of sharing two of the greatest western cultures have been seen as a disadvantage.

I will be voting no on Tuesday. I am happy with my decision and undeterred by those who will say that, as an anglophone, I am either a part of a foreign establishment, conditioned by such an establishment, ignorant of the "real" Quebec or of its aspirations or other similar nonsense. On the other hand, I don't get too excited by comments of this nature during a political campaign. After all, the nature of a political campaign tends to the inflammatory.

In voting no I am exercising my constitutional right according to my own judgment. Surely this is what democracy is all about. The comments of others on my personal decision appear to me a bit superfluous.

Have a Happy May 20th. As you go to the polls, do so with optimism. Whatever the result, nothing will change overnight and things might even get better.

GEORGE MacLAREN

One option

Editor: With the referendum getting too close for comfort, everyone is talking about the outcome of the vote and speculating as to what will happen if the Oui or the Non wins. There is one country which stands to win the most from the outcome and therefore is very interested in the happenings in Quebec at this point in time. If the Oui vote wins, which will inevitably end in Quebec separating from the rest of Canada, either the association or without, over one-hundred years of endeavour and compromise will be washed down the drain, and the United States will slowly pick up parts of Canada piece by piece. Some politicians from the Prairie provinces have already indicated that if Quebec separates they will follow suit — and where does the separation of Quebec leave the Maritime provinces? Out in the cold or more likely and advantageous to both, becoming part of New England. The Maritimes and New England have always had much in common and now that the Maritimes may have valuable resources, they are even more attractive to the United States. Economically, Quebec would have a very difficult time on its own and would most likely be absorbed by the U.S., while Canada's last post — Ontario — would finally have to admit defeat.

While this is not a totally undesirable solution, is it what we, as Canadians, really want. If we are proud of our Canadian identity we must emphasize what makes Canada great instead of emphasizing its differences. One only has to visit another country for a period of time to realize the love one has for one's own. As in the case of those visiting Russia for the 1976 hockey series. On returning home, Montrealers, both French and English speaking, cheered and cried and sang their national anthem when the plane landed at Dorval airport. Sometimes politicians can make us lose perspective, and we get out of touch with the things which make this country dear to us. The P.Q. has done a lot for Quebec and it is true that changes still need to be made, but unless we want to give up entirely on our country and become one giant North America, we have only one option for the 20th of May.

SANDRA WARREN, Westmount

Editor: I would like to thank you for your excellent article on "X"; permit me, however, as the author, to add my point of view concerning the "lack of objectivity" of the play.

Actually, a reading of the play leaves one with the impression that both sides have been treated equally; true, some passages took on a more, shall we say, biting style when the transition was made from written to verbal form, but that could not have been enough to tip the scales in favor of the yes option.

Editor: For those people who feel that this referendum is of little consequence, let me say this:

In light of what Pierre Trudeau said yesterday in Montreal, there will be no negotiation with a yes vote, and in light of the fact that I believe the partisanship of the audience largely dominated by the yes supporters while we played in Sherbrooke gave the impression the yes characters' arguments were superior to those of the federalist camp. The "no" propaganda was certainly not as well endorsed by the public; which does not mean it was not intelligently articulated. When I write a scene that calls for a liberal to exclaim that he is proud to be Canadian and feels at home in Calgary, I do it with the intention of picturing a sincere "no" partisan explaining his love for Canada, a feeling I can respect even without sharing it personally. But when that line is delivered to an audience largely supporting the "yes" option, it produces snickers and sneers! Whenever in the play a federalist attacks the referendum question for being tortuous and dishonest, an audience of nos will nod its approval while an audience of yesses will be rolling in the aisles. Granted, the yes side, on the night of the premiere, were given more opportunities to expose their views in the National Assembly. The original text ran for nearly three hours and some cuts had to be made; we realized after the play's first showing that some "no" arguments had been too much shortened and that situation was immediately corrected.

use in the next 48 hours your best French to convince any neighbor who is naively voting yes that a yes victory Tuesday spells out Quebec's doom.

Mr. Levesque is spelling out a self-fulfilling prophecy when he says that a yes-vote loss will lead to bombs and is ridiculed. He himself created the characters from a text in which there were no indications of how the roles had to be played, and though some of his remarks in the National Assembly are rather incongruous, they are no less so than the ones muttered daily by the Shaws and Ciaccias of our political scene. Everybody agrees that there aren't enough Reed Scowens or Victor Goldblooms in the legislative assembly. But I invite you to listen to all his arguments and you'll notice that some are far from ridiculous. All of the characters depicted by guns in the hands of disappointed radical yes supporters. After the referendum, in the event of a No win, we will all have to work hard to defuse and disarm this mentality which has been sanctioned by an irrespon-

Mr. Ride also have the distinction of speaking fluent French, while some French characters are barely able to mumble a single phrase of English. I would never indulge in ridiculing the English population in any way, especially in a play whose message is a cry for solidarity between the tenants of the two options. Paul Longpre in La Presse said he came out of the theatre not knowing whether I was a federalist or an independentist. I feel he may have exaggerated a little bit, but it was my desire to create a balanced play, or rather a kind of journalistic report. I do not believe in didactic theatre to express my opinions. I believe people are intelligent enough to make their own choice.

I must inform you that the result of the vote last Sunday, on our first showing in the old King's Hall in Compton, was a first victory for the no, 46 to 39 with 5 rejected ballots; the atmosphere during the play was beautifully balanced, with both sides supporting their respective champions generously... nobody felt his option had been put down... one of the actors lost a $20 bet... une soiree tres interessante, quoi!

In closing, I would like to express the Theatre Entre Chien et Loup's most sincere gratitude for your (and Nelly's) generous coverage of our activities. I await with pleasure our meeting again, at the theatre or elsewhere, when dog and wolf bark and howl at the moon...

Editor: Since the majority of the population watches television each day, I am asking your readers to assist me with a research project. The question - "What do you think of the commercials you are subjected to in a day's or a week's TV viewing?"

I am looking for honest reactions to commercials -

(each one individually rated local and national) - whether you find them informative, offensive, done in good taste or poor taste, entertaining or an insult, also whether the commercial makes you, as an individual, buy the product or keep away from it, and any other comments or reactions you might have to the commercials you see. Ideally, I would like a

Editor: This month the parents of Quebec are being lured by both the federal and provincial governments. We have received our family allowance cheques ten days earlier than usual. In the federal envelope, in what I suppose some will consider a clever bit of strategy, there was included a pamphlet on the front page of which were the words, "No thanks" is an answer! - "Non merci" ca se dit bien!

Editor's note: Mr. Danaher is former Union Nationale candidate in Orford County in the 1976 provincial election.

Out of hand

Editor: What did we fight for? It seems things have gotten out of hand, these past few years. Our love and unity has got lost along the way. My Dad lost a leg and was gassed in the First Great War. My husband and I were in the second war, he was in 5½ years, 3½ spent overseas, I was in the R.C.A.F. 3 years. We gave the best part of our lives for our country and province we were born in, and love. Now we are expected to give all this up. Not on your life. Come on, all you vets, speak up. I have nothing against the French people; we have always gotten along fine. I have a lot of French relatives. Let's pray.

Last resort

On April 25, we petitioned the "Conseil du Referendum" to order the Chief Electoral Officer to place a special polling station in the hospitals and permit patients to vote in a place other than their domicile. Our petition was refused as the Referendum law did not permit such a procedure. On May 3rd, we appealed to Premier Levesque to provide for ambulance services for those patients who could only vote if transported to the polls in this matter. He has ignored our request.

We feel it extraordinary that special provision has been made for prisoners to vote in a place other than their domicile while the law has made no such provision for those who are hospitalized on the day of the referendum.

As a last resort, in an attempt to remedy this defect in the law, we appeal to hospital auxiliaries, service clubs and other people of goodwill to volunteer to the hospitals in their counties to assist patients who, in the opinion of their doctors, can be transported safely to the polls.

Some hospitals have already responded to our request, and are making it possible for volunteers to render the service. We hope others will follow.

Editor:
The month of May has always been a month to look forward to. It holds the promise of balmy weather, new life springing forth from the ground and thoughts of vacations, and stuff like that. This May is without a doubt a little different from those in the past. Those who live in this province are being given the difficult and sensitive responsibility of voting in a referendum which will have a profound effect on our future. Some people have made the decision not to vote at all. Others are deeply committed and active in the support of the option which they favour. We can thank God that we live in a democratic society where such open dialogue can take place, and should pray that this spirit will continue. We must recognize that there are sincere Christian people on both sides who are grappling with the implications of the Gospel. It is not a time for name-calling and bitterness, but a time for serious and well informed discussion leading to everyone's exercise of their vote on May 20th.

The long-standing roots that many Eastern Townshippers have in Quebec naturally prompt people to cherish a rich heritage and a history of good relationships with French and English speaking neighbours. As we all know the Gospel calls us to live in freedom and brotherhood with our fellowmen. Whether the majority choose to remain within a federal type of structure, or to declare sovereignty, life will go on, and there will be unrest which will no doubt give rise to conflict. Remember friends that the peace that Jesus gives to the world will not fully come until the coming of the Kingdom of God. It is so much wishful thinking to imagine, in this world, a society without conflict.

But we don't resign ourselves to conflicts, we can do our best to turn them into positive and fruitful experiences, striving to show respect for others. More than any others,

Christians are called upon to show in the way they talk about and treat others that the dignity of individuals and the search for a consensus on essentials can be maintained in spite of differing opinions and interests.

As Quebecers we are being given a Yes or No option, as Christians we are being given the option of hope or of fear. May I suggest that we adopt the Gospel attitude of hope. The future has never been all that certain for the people who chose to follow God's leading. The Old and New Testament are full of examples of small scattered groups of faithful men and women adjusting to a whole variety of political ideologies. They stood firm when the going got rough, they went on making a tremendous impact on the societies in which they found themselves. They didn't fear, they loved. They also knew ultimately that their hope didn't lie in this world, they lived their lives in the light of eternity.

My prayer is that we will face the days, and months ahead with confidence, not necessarily that God will help "us" win a victory, but that He is always present to bring about renewal and recreation in our personal, social, community, and political life.

Yours in His Service,
(Rev.) DOUGLAS C. WARREN,

In praise of Galt...

To the Editor:
Let me start by saying this letter is in praise of Alexander Galt Regional High School.

Ever since Galt first opened, practically all the feedback my husband and I have received has been negative - so negative, in fact, that it was with serious reservations this past fall that we decided to send our eldest child there. (He is bilingual so there are other options open to us.) After SEARCHING OUT positive opinions, we decided to give Galt a try.

For sure, there were growing pains at Galt and, for sure, there are still some problems - problems that most, if not all, large high schools have encountered and, hopefully, are on the road to solving. Nevertheless, despite the problems, we have been so very impressed by the positive aspects of Galt that I feel moved to put in a good word for those teachers who are working hard to make it a great school.

Our uncertainty in September has changed to a really favourable impression that has steadily grown throughout the year and was clinched when I recently attended "Galt On Review." This review presented a broad range of subjects and projects that included construction, art, sports, music, science and French Social Studies, to mention a few. What I saw convinced me that there are a lot of very dedicated and talented teachers at Galt. Also, it was clearly obvious that there is lots of first-rate ability amongst the students - from welding, at one end of the spectrum, to high academic achievement, at the other. The infectious enthusiasm displayed by the large number of students who either participated in the Review, or attended it, was really impressive. And the show, itself, was absolutely TERRIFIC! A great time was had by all.

There is another positive aspect of a Galt education that is seldom mentioned; that being a student population that embraces a real diversity of backgrounds... unlike most suburban, city and private schools which tend to serve children of a very similar economic and social background.

Strikes and other school-related problems always make headlines. I think it's high time some really nice things were written about Galt. They are there, and there are plenty of them.

Editor:
The Canadian Grenadier Guards, LCol R.M. Fletcher, CD, Lieutenant-Colonel Commanding, will be holding a regimental reunion at the Armoury in Montreal June 6-7-8.

While the regiment has drawn most of its strength in two world wars from the Montreal area, other areas of Canada supplied hundreds of reinforcements. And, of course, many former Montrealers are now living in other parts of the country.

Although the reunion will mark the 65th anniversary of the mobilization of the 60th and 87th Battalions in World War I and the 40th Anniversary of the 1st Battalion (22CAR) in World War II, the program is not restricted to those who have seen active service. The reunion committee Chairman, Capt. G.M. Forgarty, himself a veteran of World War II, invites the attendance of all Grenadiers past and present, as well as those who served with attached units and other battalions closely associated with the Regiment.

A turnout of several hundred is expected, with many former Guardsmen travelling from overseas and from all parts of Canada and the United States for this event.

Scheduled for the reunion are a "Smoker" evening, a regimental dinner, a memorial service and an open house.

Further details are obtainable from: GUARDS REUNION COMMITTEE P.O. Box 294, Station "B" Montreal, Que.

As our reunions take place only once every five years, we have some difficulty maintaining contact with our former members between events. Therefore, any help you can give us in publicizing this event would be greatly appreciated.

Years of federal employment lead to Yes vote

HULL, Que. (CP) — Pierre, employed as a French teacher in the lower echelons of the federal bureaucracy, says he will vote yes in the Quebec referendum.

Graying and bespectacled, he agrees to discuss his decision, if he isn't identified.

"You can be anything you want in the civil service," he observes, "just so long as nobody finds out about it."

It becomes quickly apparent that working in Ottawa is a kind of purgatory for him and that he would like nothing better than to join the Quebec civil service.

The Parti Quebecois government has promised to absorb all of the 130,000 federal employees in Quebec. About 30,000 of them live in the Outaouais region — across the river from Ottawa — and they have been offered jobs in the area to run the mechanics of the proposed economic association between Quebec and English Canada.

"The only risk a federal employee runs in voting yes is that he will one day be the boss," says Jocelyne Ouellette, who represents this region in the PQ cabinet.

DOESN'T BELIEVE

Pierre can't imagine how Quebec would re-employ him and 800 other French teachers sprinkled through the Ottawa bureaucracy.

"It's rubbish," he says of the PQ promise, but it won't stop him from voting yes next Tuesday.

Seven years in the civil service have made a "sovereignist" of this former Montrealer hired by the federal government early in its up-and-down campaign to make the civil service bilingual.

"Neither our identity nor our language is respected here," he complains. "We're continually having to demand our rights instead of being guaranteed them."

After years of costly bilingual programs, correspondence, even between francophones, is mainly in English. Pierre blames Quebecers' failure to fulfill their career ambitions on their inability to use their language.

"There's just no way you can be creative in the other man's tongue."

Of the few francophones who have reached the top rungs, he charges, many are incompetent.

"I often wonder if they were chosen because they pose no threat to the English or if the people who chose them weren't equipped to judge their competence."

Although the Public Service Commission has lifted its ban on political activity by federal employees for the duration of the referendum, few civil servants appear to be playing a visible role in the campaign in the Outaouais.

"Old habits die hard," says Roger Lamothe, an immigration department employee who has yet to decide how he will vote. "Civil servants are trained to be discreet and not show their colors in public."

"I think a lot of them would vote yes if it weren't for the fact that their own jobs are on the line. Unfortunately the PQ hasn't given any details of how it would take all those thousands of people under its wing."

Lamothe says federal employees are cynical when it comes to politics. They may feel discriminated against but they doubt sovereignty-association is the cure.

"When you work in government, you know how slowly the wheels can turn," he says. "You start to feel suspicious of people who come around offering magic solutions to your dilemma."

WILL CONVICTS GET FEDERAL VOTE ?

MONTREAL (CP) — Next Tuesday, about 3,500 men and women in Quebec's provincial jails and federal penitentiaries will be able to do something no other prisoners in Canadian history have done — they will be allowed to vote.

Besides allowing convicts to vote in the sovereignty-association referendum, the Quebec national assembly has amended the electoral act to let prisoners vote in future provincial elections. And Ottawa is considering allowing convicts to vote in federal elections.

Dennis Finlay, a spokesman for the federal Correctional Service says that Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan and former solicitors-general have "mentioned in speeches that they are considering the possibility."

He said Kaplan feels that giving prisoners the right to vote is a form of rehabilitation.

All prisoners who were Quebec residents for a minimum of 12 months prior to April 15 can vote in the referendum. Quebecers in jail in other provinces cannot, nor can prisoners currently imprisoned in Quebec who normally reside outside the province.

BANS MEETINGS

Neither side in the referendum campaign has been allowed to set up prisoners' committees for a yes or no vote.

PQ government ready for job

Negotiations represent task

OTTAWA (CP) — Should Quebec and the federal government ever find themselves negotiating sovereignty-association, they will have to discuss the future of everything from the village post office in St. Jean de Matha to Mirabel International Airport.

The federal government, its agencies and services are omnipresent from the minute Quebecers rise and turn up the thermostat to burn more subsidized oil, put on tariff-protected shoes, ride to work on a Canadian National Railways commuter train, eat a lunch of federally regulated chicken and finally lie in bed watching the 10:30 p.m. Radio-Canada television newscast.

The Quebec government believes it can administer many of these services and programs more efficiently, more in tune with the needs of Quebecers, than Ottawa.

But first, it must win the May 20 referendum and receive a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association with the remainder of Canada. Then, the other nine provinces and the federal government must be convinced to join Quebec at the negotiating table.

Prime Minister Trudeau and most premiers have refused in advance to enter such negotiations but Quebec Premier Rene Levesque says Canadian politicians will talk if the Parti Quebecois wins the referendum.

Trudeau said in 1977 the federal government would have to negotiate with Quebec if the people of that province clearly demonstrate they want independence.

CRITICIZES QUESTION

He considers Tuesday's referendum question too ambiguous to show if Quebecers genuinely want independence. However, a second referendum may be conducted to ask the independence question.

Among the topics that would have to be discussed at the sovereignty-association negotiating table are:

Crown corporations: Federally owned Air Canada, Canadian National Railways, Teleglobe and Canadair Ltd. are all based in Montreal. Would they and their several thousand employees be moved out of the province and would their services still be made available to Quebecers?

Banking: Levesque wants Canada and a sovereign Quebec to share a currency. But would English-Canada agree? Could Quebec lay claim to a portion of the assets of the Bank of Canada and would it accept part of the $65-billion public debt?

Transport: The National Harbors Board administers Quebec's largest ports at Montreal, Quebec City, Trois-Rivieres and Sept-Isles. The transport department administers 70 smaller ports, owns Dorval and Mirabel international airports near Montreal and Quebec City's airport. Presumably, Quebec would want to gain control over these ports and airports.

St. Lawrence Seaway: Ships moving Western Canadian grain from the Lakehead would have to traverse a sovereign Quebec on what is now a waterway administered by Canada and the United States.

Social assistance: Many programs such as family allowance are jointly financed by the Quebec and federal governments. Ottawa alone finances programs for natives and war veterans. Levesque has promised all such programs would be continued in a sovereign Quebec.

Pensions: While the federal government provides the universal old age pension, Quebec opted out of the Canada Pension Plan to run its own.

Defence: What would be the fate of Canadian military installations in the province? Would a sovereign Quebec join NATO and NORAD?

Education: The federal government provides financial assistance to post-secondary institutes, minority language training and adult retraining.

Immigration: This is a joint responsibility now. Would there be a free flow of residents between Canada and a sovereign Quebec? Would Quebecers retain Canadian citizenship?

Post office: Would there be a shared post office?

Monarchy: Would Quebec remain in the Commonwealth as Levesque once suggested and would the Queen disappear from any shared currency and stamps?

Taxation: For the Quebec government, perhaps the most fundamental goal is for the province to gain all taxing powers.

Culture: The federal government finances such key cultural agencies as the National Film Board, Canadian Broadcasting Corp., Canadian Film Development Corp., Canada Council and the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission. The Quebec government tolerates these agencies and likely would welcome their departure from the province so truly Quebec replacements could be created.

Industrial aid: The federal government tries to encourage the growth of industry through agencies such as the regional economic expansion department, Federal Business Development Bank, Export Development Corp., Canadian International Development Agency, Canada Development Corp. and the Foreign Investment Review Agency.

Tariffs: The federal government currently imposes import quotas on such goods as leather, footwear and textiles to protect Quebec industries.

Energy: The federal government pays subsidies on oil and natural gas, sets gasoline prices and regulates the flow of Western Canadian oil and gas by pipeline to Montreal. It also regulates the nuclear industry and interprovincial and international corridors for the transmission of hydroelectric power.

Agriculture: The federal and Quebec governments jointly set quotas and pay subsidies on such commodities as dairy products and poultry. As well, the federal government pays crop insurance benefits, stabilization payments on several products, funds the Farm Credit Corp. and provides access to Western Canadian feed grains.

Bread: The federal government's two-price wheat system keeps down the price of bread in times of high wheat prices. Would this continue in a sovereign Quebec?

Trade: The federal government regulates anti-dumping, patents, copyrights, trademarks and other programs related to consumer affairs. Would a sovereign Quebec belong to preferential trade organizations such as the Commonwealth, Canada-U.S. auto pact and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT)?

Fish: An agreement would be necessary on access by Quebec fishermen within the 200-mile Canadian limit.

Public servants: Levesque says he would find jobs for the more than 100,000 public servants, soldiers and other federal employees living in Quebec.

Federal property: Who would own federal office buildings, national parks, canals and harborfronts in Quebec? Would English Canada have the right to claim any so-called national treasures within Quebec museums? Would Quebec have the right to claim federal property outside the province?

Le Directeur général des élections du Québec

May 20

Ref: First chance to vote on Confederation

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebecers were never consulted on whether they wanted Confederation and the May 20 referendum will be their first crack at it, says Premier Rene Levesque.

Wrong, says Claude Ryan. Quebecers had their say in the first election to the Canadian Parliament and the Quebec legislature in 1867 when a majority voted for pro-Confederation candidates in both places.

Be that as it may, there was no referendum — a type of consultation rarely resorted to by the provincial and federal governments in Canada.

The 1890s and early 1900s saw unsuccessful attempts by three western provinces to introduce referendums in the legislative process as a means of giving voters a direct say in the passing of laws.

Saskatchewan and Alberta never got far with this plan. In Manitoba, the Initiative and Referendum Act of 1916 was ruled unconstitutional because it deprived the Crown, in the person of the lieutenant-governor, of its power to sanction or veto laws.

Nevertheless, between 1890 and 1920, there were provincial referendums on prohibition of alcohol everywhere but in New Brunswick.

There have been only two national referendums. Neither dealt with constitutional issues, but both generated great emotional and social heat.

One was the 1898 federal referendum on prohibition which Ottawa ruled inconclusive because of a low turnout. The other was the conscription plebiscite of April 27, 1942.

For many, it boiled down to a vote on conscription, yes or no, despite Prime Minister Mackenzie King's assurance that all he wanted was a mandate to impose conscription should the need arise.

SAME CONTROVERSY

Quebec's referendum question today has spawned the same type of argument, with federalists contending that, while the government claims to be seeking no more than a "mandate to negotiate," it really boils down to a matter of yes or no to independence.

Parti Quebecois supporters have referred on occasion to the two Newfoundland referendums of 1948 as a kind of democratic precedent for their undertaking.

While Newfoundlanders were consulted via referendum on whether they wanted their province to enter Confederation, Quebecers are being asked whether they want to pull out.

After narrowing down the possibilities from three to two in a first referendum June 3, 1948, a slim majority — 52.3 per cent — of Newfoundlanders favored Confederation over going it alone in a second vote taken July 22.

One foreign referendum often mentioned in the course of debate on the Quebec referendum is the 1976 vote on Britain's continued membership in the European Economic Community. Unlike several other countries which held referendums before joining the EEC, Britain joined first in 1973 and went to the voters later, in the face of agitation for renegotiation of the terms of entry or outright withdrawal.

The referendum took place June 5, 1975. A whopping 67.2 per cent favored continued membership, with 32.8 per cent in favor of pulling out.

Jewish community uneasy as bloc vote likely

MONTREAL (CP) — "What if Israel had a referendum and the Jews were split on the issue?" a Jewish Montrealer mused. "The minority Arab vote would decide. "It makes you think about how French Quebecers must feel."

The speaker, who asked not to be identified, said he would still vote no in the referendum next Tuesday. But he expressed the nervousness of many Jewish Quebecers about voting as a bloc against the government.

The uneasiness has been accentuated by Premier Rene Levesque's pointed remarks that a majority of francophones favor the yes option, even if opinion polls predict a close vote overall. The implication is that French votes will be cancelled by the massive vote against sovereignty-association by the 20 per cent of Quebecers whose mother tongue is other than French.

The premier has not referred to Jews in particular. But the remarks have upset some members of the Jewish community, which has largely viewed Parti Quebecois ambitions as ethnocentric.

Joel Pinsky, an organizer for the no campaign, says Levesque's French-majority statements have in fact helped the no side.

"Levesque is insinuating there are two types of Quebecers, giving the lie to what he has told us before — that we are all Quebecers," said Pinsky, a lawyer and chief organizer in the predominantly-Jewish riding of D'Arcy McGee.

The riding in west-end Montreal is perhaps the most predictable in the province when it comes to the referendum vote.

Almost everybody there is English-speaking and more than three-quarters of the 42,000 voters are Jewish — the highest concentration of the 110,000-strong Jewish community in Quebec.

D'Arcy McGee gave the fewest votes of any riding to the victorious Parti Quebecois in the 1976 Quebec election. And in a provincial byelection last year, Liberal candidate Herbert Marx took 97 per cent of the vote.

Predictability aside, the riding's no campaign has enlisted 1,200 volunteers — the largest organization in the province, Pinsky says.

There are, to be sure, a few renegades in D'Arcy McGee — for example, David Levine, the losing PQ candidate in the last byelection, who serves as an aide to Economic Development Minister Bernard Landry.

"Quebec is changing, evolving," says Levine, a doctor by profession. "We really believe that a sovereign Quebec will provide a new dimension which a stagnating North American society needs."

"It could pose so many new challenges to the Jewish community, and it would be good for Canada."

Henry Milner, head of the yes committee in the riding, agrees.

A junior-college teacher, Milner says he can sympathize with the progressive policies of the Parti Quebecois because he's a socialist, and sympathize with the nationalist aspirations of French-Quebecers because he's a Zionist.

He's mustered about 20 volunteers to campaign for a yes vote, some of them from the 150-member Committee of Anglophones for Sovereignty-Association which he founded last year.

Fitness is fun.
Try some.

A good choice and a good deal for all Canadians!

The CF-18, a good choice and a good deal for all of us in Québec and Canada!

The Government of Canada has chosen the best fighter aircraft for our defence needs—the CF-18. And this choice offers Québec important economic advantages for today and for the future.

A good deal for our security. The CF-18 is tough, modern and reliable. It is adaptable. Because of its superior technology, its versatile design, and its wide range of military capabilities, it will accommodate new technologies and continue to respond to changing defence needs. These lasting advantages make it the choice for Canada.

A good deal for the Québec economy. In choosing the CF-18, Canada has successfully negotiated an agreement that will bring great benefits to our businesses and industries. We're getting far more than 137 fighters. The binding agreement with McDonnell-Douglas calls for new investments and purchases for manufacturers in many sectors, marketing assistance for exporters and transfer of new technologies to Canada. It means growth. In all, over $3 billion in contracts will be awarded to businesses across Canada in the next fifteen years, and that will create thousands of new jobs.

The aerospace and electronics industries, key sectors in the Québec economy, will receive 60% of this business. Their status within the North American aerospace industry as a whole will improve dramatically as a result of the CF-18 agreement.

A good deal for Québec businesses. The CF-18 contract creates unusual and challenging business opportunities for Québec. A great number of Canadian business and industries, large and small, will participate in the wide range of projects generated by the McDonnell-Douglas contract.

Now, it's up to you to meet the challenge. Take full advantage of these opportunities. Canadians are depending on YOUR initiative and dynamism. All of us in Québec can share in the rewards.

It's a good deal!

Well-travelled teacher visits

For three years, Jim Hoch used his teaching skills and flair for language in Japan where he taught at Nagoya Gakuin Junior-Senior High School.

Born and educated in Victoria, British Columbia, Jim graduated from the University of Alberta in Edmonton with a Bachelor of Education degree, majoring in French as a Second Language and minoring in Latin and German.

In 1976, he was appointed a missionary to Japan by the Division of World Outreach of The United Church of Canada. After six months of language study in Tokyo, he undertook a three year teaching assignment in Nagoya.

Jim is a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, Edmonton, and his parents live in Blaine, Washington, where his father is a Lutheran minister. Besides his interesting hobby of collecting old records, he learned to play an ancient oriental reed instrument while in Japan.

Jim plans to study Near-Eastern archaeology at the University of Toronto in the fall of 1980.

He will be making local appearances as follows:

Sat. May 17th: 7:30 p.m., Emmanuel United Church, Cowansville;

Sun. May 18th: 9:30 a.m., East Farnham United Church; 11 a.m. Emmanuel United Church, Cowansville; Mon. May 19th: 7:30 p.m., Centenary United Church, Stanstead;

Tues. May 20th: 2:30 p.m. Wales Home, Richmond. Public invited as well;

Wed. May 21st: 10 a.m., with the Quebec-Sherbrooke Presbytery Executive meeting at Quebec Lodge on Lake Massawippi.

BIRCHTON — After the President, Mrs. Arthur Rogers, led the saying of the ACW Purpose in unison, Mrs. Basil Prescott took charge of the Devotions, saying that in the Referendum we must accept God's purpose in guiding us to voting for our Country's welfare, that we must do much meditating, which is the keynote to liberty, and closing with an applicable prayer.

The President, Mrs. Pat MacKinnon, expressed thanks to all who had helped in any way, to make the Garage Sale a very successful one, socially and dollar-wise, and to those who had prepared the Church for the first 1980 meeting next day.

Interesting and inspiring reports were given on the annual meeting in Danville, an invitation was read from the Cookshire U.C.W. to their evening meeting on May 14, which was readily accepted; Welfare, nine boxes, reported by Mrs. G. Latewood, to have been

A MESSAGE TO THE PEOPLE OF QUÉBEC

On March 20th, 1980, the Assemblée nationale du Québec passed the official wording of the question that will have to be answered by the people of Québec on the day of the referendum. Because the Government of Québec wants to ensure that the people are fully informed in this matter, it hereby publishes the full official text of the question:

“The Government of Québec has made public its proposal to negotiate a new agreement with the rest of Canada, based on the equality of nations;

this agreement would enable Québec to acquire the exclusive power to make its laws, levy its taxes and establish relations abroad—in other words, sovereignty—and at the same time, to maintain with Canada an economic association including a common currency;

no change in political status resulting from these negotiations will be effected without approval by the people through another referendum;
on these terms, do you give the Government of Québec the mandate to negotiate the proposed agreement between Québec and Canada? Yes. No.”

Brutal beating ruins couples' Hawaiian vacation

VANCOUVER (CP) — Roger Clapham recalls that as he was slipping into unconsciousness, he was being kicked in the face, head and back by a tight circle of eight to 10 attackers.

"They were so frenzied that they were kicking each others' ankles by mistake," he says. "I was in no pain — it was the end."

The gang attack on Clapham and his wife Anne happened in a supervised state park on the Hawaiian Island of Kauai, next to the luxurious Kauai Resort Hotel, during their first Hawaiian vacation.

It has prompted the couple to launch an international crusade from their home in Aldergrove in the Fraser Valley "on behalf of all those innocent people who have been beaten up, raped and murdered on their Hawaiian dream vacations."

The Claphams are convinced that crime is swept under the rug to protect the islands' $2.5 billion-a-year tourist industry and that violence against tourists is far greater than records indicate because many victims return home immediately after they are attacked, too frightened or disgusted to lay charges.

They want tourists from all over the world to write Hawaii Governor George Ariyoshi and describe any violence they have encountered on the islands. They have sent a 17-page open letter to the governor, illustrated with a family snapshot, to major newspapers in Canada, the United States, Japan, Australia, New Zealand and the United Kingdom.

Hobert Duncan, the governor's press secretary, said in a telephone interview from Honolulu Wednesday night that Ariyoshi will reply to the Clapham's letter when he returns from Europe and has a chance to read and consider it.

However, he noted that each county in Hawaii has its own police force and its own prosecutors and that under the U.S. system of government "no governor can tell the judiciary what they can or cannot do."

"Obviously, what happened cannot be condoned. We're not brushing this off in any way. The governor — within his powers — has taken action."

Honolulu police chief Francis Keala says part of the reason tourists are attacked is that those who come to the islands from relatively crime-free countries such as Japan tend to overlook danger signals that would alert another person.

The much-advertised aloha spirit that gives Hawaii much of its charm leads many women to let down their guard and is a contributing factor in many rapes, says Paula Chun, director of the Sex Abuse Treatment Centre in the state capital.

Clapham and his family were attacked while sleeping in their tent on the fifth night of a camping holiday at Lydgate State Park in January.

"My wife, covered in blood, was able to flee through the underbrush with the three terrified children. She states that she never expected to see me alive again."

"They repeatedly tried to smash my body against a tree whilst holding my wrists. I was able to struggle free four or five times, but each time they caught up with me, beat me to the ground, and kicked me furiously until I was able to crawl and stumble away again."

Finally, after his last strength had been exhausted: "They quickly formed a tight circle around my body and methodically kicked me in the face, head and back until I lost consciousness. I clearly remember my body going limp. I was in no pain — it was the end.

"The police arrived at that point. I believe that I would otherwise have been kicked to death."

Clapham says he has been left with permanent injuries — the right side of his face is partially numb, his right cheek bone split from top to bottom, his right eye aches at times and a fractured vertebrae has yet to heal."

Two of his attackers ran directly into the arms of the police but were released after questioning. Clapham said, because his glasses had been knocked off and he could not identify them.

The call for spy trials has been made before by hardliners like Khalkali and some of the members of the Islamic Republican party that dominates the new Iranian parliament that is to decide the hostages' fate late next month.

Flyers blow out Islanders to tie series

PAUL HOLMGREN
...nets hot trick

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Paul Holmgren conceded that none of his three goals Thursday night was a classic National Hockey League effort. But Holmgren and Philadelphia Flyers were ready to take what they could get in an 8-3 victory that evened their best-of-seven Stanley Cup final with New York Islanders at 1-1. "We weren't trying to run the score up by any means," said their veteran playing coach and centre, Bobby

Clarke, who had a goal and three assists. "We just took what was there. We got ahead, and they had to open up, which gave us more chances." Bob Kelly, Bill Barber, Brian Propp and Tom Gorence also scored for the Flyers. Butch Goring had two goals and Bryan Trottier one for the Islanders, who have home ice for the third and fourth games Saturday and Monday nights. The Islanders suggested their failing dated to the first period, when Goring scored the game's first goal at 3:23 and then hit the post on a power-play break-in shortly after.

"We started off well with the 1-0 lead, but everything seemed to go bad after Goring hit the post," said New York coach Al Arbour, who started Smith in goal and switched to Glenn Resch with the score 6-2 after two periods.

Two doors down, Clarke said much the same thing.

"We started shaky. They scored first and then hit the goal post right after that."

With the game in no doubt as the Flyers scored three unanswered second-period goals, the high sticks and other chippiness that were prevalent soon became the commanding aspect of the game.

Pete Peeters faced 23 shots in goal for the Flyers, while Smith and Resch were tested 31 times.

ARBOUR: THEY'RE GOING TO GET IT BACK

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Coach Al Arbour of New York Islanders served notice Thursday night that if National Hockey League's officials won't curb Philadelphia Flyers, his team will.

"If they want to play like that, if they want to be spear-carriers, they're going to get it back the same way," Arbour said in the dressing room after his team lost the second game of the Stanley Cup final 8-3.

Referee Wally Harris handed out 84 minutes in penalties, with Flyers taking 50 of those minutes, but Arbour claimed Harris missed a lot of calls.

"They played very chippy," he said of Philadelphia. "They were using a lot of their sticks."

"We've got a tough team. If they want to play like that, hey, we'll play like that."

Billy Smith, the Islanders' hot-tempered goaltender who is noted for brandishing a quick stick in defence of his crease, had another complaint about the officiating, this time about a goal.

Smith was adamant that Paul Holmgren of the Flyers kicked in his second goal of the night. Holmgren scored three times, but while Smith conceded that his own play was poor, he insisted that this particular goal should not have counted.

"The fifth goal was definitely a kick-in," he said. "Watch it on instant replay."

"I was lying down there, I'd made the save and he kicked it in. I was watching his feet."

FLYERS HAPPY
A happier mood prevailed in the Flyer locker-room. It was a banner night for Paul Holmgren.

Outdoors BY REAL HEBERT

Forest fires: Be careful in woods

In the weeks and months which are to come, our forests and underbrush will be invaded by nature lovers: the campers, the strollers, the bird watchers, the berry pickers.

All these people will contribute to the traffic in these wilderness places, a traffic which is greater each year. Well, why not, we all have the right to ramble or to spend several days in the wilds and to derive the maximum enjoyment from nature.

Unfortunately, the more traffic there is in the woods the more the risk of forest fire is increased. This is why at the beginning of the new summer season it's a good idea to remind lovers of the outdoor life to be extremely prudent when they go through the woodlands and not involuntarily start fires with camp fires, or cigarettes, cigars or pipes.

Choose safe places to make your campfires, and before leaving the campsite make sure that your fire is out. As for cigarettes, cigars and pipes, you should also be sure that they are out before you throw them on the ground.

Every year we have inestimable losses caused by forest fires due to the negligence and carelessness of forest users. It is our responsibility to preserve our green forests by being extremely careful.

Controlled hunting in parks and reserves

The forms for moose hunting (controlled) in parks and reserves of Quebec are now available in all the offices of the Department of Leisure, Fish and Game. Township offices are located in Sherbrooke, Granby, Victoriaville, and Megantic.

The completed form should be returned to the address indicated on the form, before May 31. The drawing will take place by electronic computer during the month of June, and the winners will be notified by post.

Moose hunting in parks and reserves is very popular and each year about 18,000 hunters hope to be lucky.

Here are the dates for the hunting season in parks and reserves next autumn:

- Laverendrye: September 20 to October 19
- Mont Tremblant: September 22 to October 24
- Mastigouche: October 4 to October 24
- St. Maurice: September 20 to September 30
- Chibougamau: September 13 to September 30
- Portneuf: September 16 to October 17
- Laurentides: September 13 to October 17
- Matane: September 20 to October 18
- Deniere: September 21 to October 19

For moose hunting outside provincial parks and reserves we have no dates as yet, but we will supply them as soon as we do have them.

There is a rumour that the rules for moose hunting will be changed this year once more. Remember last year the hunt had already undergone certain modifications, that were far from pleasing to hunters, and caused a lot of ink to flow in the newspapers. As soon as we are advised of such changes, we will let you know what they are.

Deluge delays golf

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Heavy rains that wiped out first-round play Thursday at the Colonial National golf tournament will work to Tom Watson's advantage.

Watson, the outstanding player in the game and shooting for the richest prize golf has ever offered, developed the physical problem on the practice tee after playing in Wednesday's pro-am.

Indy: Can Sneva avoid trouble?

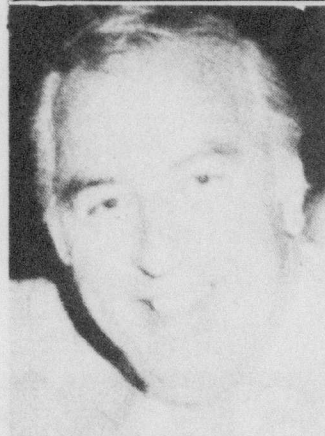

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — If Tom Sneva can stay out of trouble for two more days, Vern Schuppan figures he'll have his third start in the Indianapolis 500.

"Fortunately for me, they got another car and put Tom in it," said Schuppan, who turned a lap at nearly 188 miles an hour in practice Thursday, plenty fast enough to make the 33-car starting field. "But if he has another accident, I'll probably lose my ride again."

CFL teams get additional Canadian

JAKE GAUDAUR
...roster costs up

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Football League will not tamper with the controversial designated import rule, league commissioner Jake Gaudaur announced Thursday.

However, the league decided to add one more Canadian for the 1980 season, increasing rosters to 19 non-imports and 15 imports.

Gaudaur said the addition will add $270,000 to $300,000 in roster costs for each team.

The designated import rule, called discriminatory by those who feel it gives import quarterbacks an unfair advantage over Canadians wanting to play the position, was recently before the courts and was discussed by Parliament in Ottawa.

Gaudaur defended the decision, reached by CFL executives in closed morning sessions during their semi-annual meeting, saying the league is concerned the rule is perceived to be discriminatory.

However, "We came to the conclusion that it is not desirable just to change the rule so it would be perceived to be something that isn't,"

he said.

SHOULD BE POSITIVE

"The judgment made was that if we do anything, it should be something positive and something that was defensible."

In allowing teams to increase their rosters, Gaudaur said the executives had to be aware that teams in the larger cities are better able to absorb the greater related costs than those in smaller centres. Almost half of the CFL clubs are struggling to remain solvent.

"Clearly, we're limited by the financial aspect," he said, adding that rules which over-extend club finances could jeopardize the league's future.

He said executives didn't consider the case of quarterback Scott Mallender in deciding to retain the designated import rule.

Mallender, last year's outstanding Canadian university football player, was signed by Ottawa Rough Riders this week after being released by Toronto Argonauts without a tryout.

Gaudaur said he will discuss the issue Tuesday in Ottawa with federal Sports Minister Gerald Regan, who has expressed concern on the matter.

The commissioner also announced that this year's Grey Cup will be held in Toronto.

Miller proposes freeze

NEW YORK (AP) — If management is willing to accept a two-year freeze on its demands for free agent compensation, the lingering major league baseball contract dispute may be headed for settlement.

That is the essence of a bold offer made Thursday by Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players' Association, in an effort to reach an agreement with Ray Grebey and the negotiators for the club owners.

Miller said the two sides are close on a number of issues — close enough for him to make this proposal. If agreement can be reached on those peripheral issues — health and safety, pensions, minimum salaries, etc. — in the next few days, the players will withdraw all of their demands in the areas of free agency and the reserve clause and participate in a two-year joint study of the question.

Jack Billingham has a new lease on his baseball life, but in a way it seemed like old times.

"I'm 37 years old and I felt like I was 21," Billingham said after making his first start with Boston Thursday night — he previously pitched for Los Angeles Dodgers, Houston Astros, Cincinnati Reds and Detroit Tigers — and hurling five effective — if inelegant — innings as the Red Sox whipped Cleveland Indians, 6-2, in American League action.

"Any time you join a new team it's like that," Billingham added. "You want to impress them."

And there was Billingham's old colleague Tony Perez, one day past his 38th birthday, driving in the runs just like he did when they were team-mates in Cincinnati for six years.

Thursday's baseball schedule consisted of only five games. Elsewhere in the American League, Toronto Blue Jays nipped Seattle Mariners, 1-0, and Chicago White Sox downed Milwaukee Brewers 6-4.

In National League action, Pittsburgh Pirates edged San Francisco Giants 3-2 in 12 innings, and San Diego Padres shaded St. Louis Cardinals, 2-1.

MOLINE, Ill. (AP) — It appears no one will run the race in which sponsors had promised every one would finish first.

The First Annual Rosie Ruiz 26.2-metre run was called off on Wednesday. Radio station WQUA announced it was cancelling the event after the American Cancer Society, a co-sponsor, withdrew support, apparently at the suggestion of lawyers.

The race had been scheduled to feature a lone runner who would begin a 9½-kilometre run from Rock Island to neighboring Moline where, at a point 26.2 metres from the finish line, all the entrants were invited to jump in and finish.

Strong field makes Preakness a toss-up

BALTIMORE (AP) — There are no superstars this year in U.S. thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown, so the Preakness Stakes on Saturday remains a tossup.

"I definitely think it is a stronger field than the (Kentucky) Derby," says trainer LeRoy Jolley in sizing up the Preakness, which he will try to win with sensational filly Genuine Risk.

"It shapes up as a tougher race than the Derby," agrees Riley Cofer, trainer of Jaklin Klugman, who finished third when Genuine Risk became only the second filly ever to win the Kentucky Derby. "It's got tougher horses in it."

"There are the two horses from the Derby (Genuine Risk and Jaklin Klugman)," Jolley said Thursday. "And there is another who has shown he's at his very best — Colonel Moran, and another, Codex, who is coming off three bang-up races in California."

Genuine Risk is the early favorite, at 9-5. "This is a super filly," said Tommy Kelly, who trains the speedy Colonel Moran. "She won the Derby and she has a good shot at them all." The third leg, after the Preakness, will be the Belmont Stakes.

Kelly's colt is listed at 3-1 behind Codex, 2-1, and Jaklin Klugman, co-owned by actor Jack Klugman, at 3-1.

The other four three year olds entered for the Preakness on Thursday are outsiders who have never won a stakes race. In fact, Bing has failed to win a race in eight career starts. The others are Samoyed, Knight Landing and Plucky Luck, a gelding which was made a supplemental nominee for $10,000.

If all eight go to the post at 5:40 p.m. EDT, the 105th Preakness will be worth $250,600, with $180,600 to the winner. Each starter will carry 126 pounds except Genuine Risk. She gets a five-pound sex allowance.

CTV will televise from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. Genuine Risk, owned by Mrs. Bert Firestone and ridden by Jacinto Vasquez, joined Regret (1915) as the only fillies to win the Derby. Her eighth victory in nine career starts would make her only the fifth filly and first since Nellie Morse in 1924 to win the Preakness.

Trainer Wayne Lukas thought he had entered Tartan Stable's Codex in the Kentucky Derby but was told in the winner's circle at the Santa Anita Derby that he hadn't. He was nominated to the Preakness and Belmont Stakes and it was decided the Tuesday after the Derby to send him here.

The field in post position order is Knight Landing, Samoyed, Codex, Colonel Moran, Genuine Risk, Bing, Jaklin Klugman and Lucky Pluck.

A's drop Pirates 3-1

ST. JEAN (MG) — The Sherbrooke Athletics appear ready for revenge upon St. Jean Pirates after last night's 3-1 win on the road. The Pirates, QMJHL fans will remember, beat the A's in the semi-finals last season.

Bernard Boutin tossed a three-hitter en route to his first win while first baseman Jean Grenier slugged a home run and two doubles to lead Sherbrooke offensively. Mario Ruel took the loss for St. Jean.

"I threw all kinds of balls, mixed them up," said Boutin after the game. "But I threw a bad one when (Gilles) Lagueux hit it over the fence." Boutin gave credit to his teammates for a solid performance.

The win leaves the A's atop the standing at 2-0 while St. Jean is 2-2. Sherbrooke returns to St. Jean Saturday and comes home for the home opener Sunday against Grand'Mere at refurbished Amedee Roy Stadium.

THE MYSTERIOUS VISITOR

The sun was no longer bright and temperatures were falling.
Maybe it would be tonight
that the stranger would come calling.
Could be if I sat very still
I'd see him on my window sill.
It would be the very place
to watch him paint in frosty grace.
Would he be small and dressed in green or would he be taller than I've ever seen?
Would he carry an easel and a brush?
How and why did he work in such a rush?
My eyes were heavy as these thoughts came to mind
Then with a start I awoke to find that with the dawn.
My visitor had come and gone.
I had been right, I could tell,
for painted with delicate care
were shining leaves and a silver bell.
Who was this shadow bold
that stole through the night and in spite of the cold
painted the windows before the dawn's light.
Was he guided from above?
Was his brush the wing of a dove?
Look there! Down in the corner almost lost a tiny signature Jack Frost!

DOODLINGS OF A SOBBUSTER

Seems to me a better world this would be if four times five were seventeen and nine plus nine were three; -- and perhaps it would help nations to agree,
if all the fishes in the sea were oysters.
Anyway things don't seem right as they are.
Now if cows were cats they would be "consumers" (instead of "producers") --- and that-- is what producers need more of-- is "consumers," and with our ability of increasing pace, -- maybe-- we can also shorten space and (sooner or later)
put the world in a different place,
(close to Jupiter) for instance-- and then drill
up for oil instead of down-- but this I doubt.
Man's behaviour has always been his own dilemma which keeps him in constant forlorn as he migrates together to form a mass-- and then tries to get out of his own sticky-mess by claiming it would be clever if everyone could be reborn-- and start all over again from the finishing-line
and live one's life over-- only backwards.
He blows a smoke-screen which increases pollution which he corrects by putting a tax on tobacco--which generates an anger at himself, so, he chases himself up a tree-- there -- (after binding himself to a limb) he starts yelling, "I am Free! I am Free? -- I was born with a birthright to be Free!"
Then he ties the knots tighter as he tries to go farther -- then faster -- then farther and faster than that; -- everything is always brighter other than the exact spot he is at.
This plunging and sputtering seeking ever this elusive "green-pasture" which lies lost in "The-Forest-of-Myth" -- he calls "Progress" -- and this Progress he protects with things he calls "Laws.;" ---No one has the right to stand in the way of Progress--nor--to take The-law-of-the-land in his own hand -- for the law to be properly applied must first have an interpretation.
Someone--(anyone)-- who can pass the "exam" and get a certificate --- (for a fee)-- will put in short and simple words, of how the interchangeableness of circumstances may enhance one's chance of being within "The Law" in the first place and contributing to Progress without even knowing anything about it at all -- but all this takes a lot of doing and fussing --- and more fees.
Of course there is "The Referendum" -- which everyone can vote on and win. --- but even if one does win a Referendum one is still face-to-face with the very same problems one was trying to run-away-from.
Isn't it wonderful that God can (and has) provided a "SAVIOUR" for man, in spite of his stupid behaviour?

My age is eighty-three and my grammar is ridiculous
but there is none more blessed than me, for in the midst of all this confusion (plus my own stupidity)---when I lay myself down to sleep tonight
-----I won't be hungry.
And after thanking God---
Canada, -- I thank you very much,-- I never had it so good
---I stand "on-guard" for thee!

LORD OF THE RING

Three roses land at his feet
He acknowledges them with a smile
They're out of place and yet their grace
Will linger for a while

The anthem plays, the sun beats down
He stands proud and composed
The roar goes up he turns to face
The gate no longer closed

And then time stops, two beats are heard
One of hoofs, one of his heart
Like thunder growing louder
Another duel of life now starts

The dust swirls high breath comes in gasps
The sweat of beast and man blends
And just one thought, why are they here
Where one must meet his end

Salty lips and bruises,
"Oles" now loudly sound
Then the deadly thrust and tho it's unjust
The mighty beast goes down

He takes his bows to clapping hands
Majestic, like a king
And amidst the falling flowers stands
Once more Lord of the Ring

UCW meeting

KNOWLTON (KT) — Unit 3, U.C.W. met in the church hall on May 7, at 1:30 p.m. with Mrs. Lillian Godefroy presiding and Mrs. G. LeGallais the hostess.

The meeting was opened by repeating The Purpose in unison. In the absence of Mrs. Badger, Devotions were conducted by Mrs. Rhoda Northrup on the theme "Forgiveness", closing with The Lord's Prayer said in unison and the taking and dedication of the offertory.

The minutes were then read and approved and in answering the Roll Call, ten members reported visits and cards sent to shut-ins. The treasurer's report presented by Mrs. Stern, showed a satisfactory balance.

Under Business, May and June showed a busy calendar for the members. They were invited to join the A.C.W. at St Paul's Church on May 13 and on that evening there would be a lecture at Knowlton Academy on Nutrition. May 27 will be the U.C.W. Friendship Night when each member of the organization will bring along a lady not active in the U.C.W.

On June 2, the General

U.C.W. will meet at 11 a.m. At the close of the General meeting, the members of unit 3 will hold a short meeting.

The Summer Sale and Tea is to take place on June 14.

It was agreed that Mrs. Mary Pille would write to the unit's new special patient and inform her as to who will be sending her cards and letters. With regard to correspondence, Mrs. Stern had received a letter from Operation Eyesight, a project of Unit 3, with a request for used eye glasses and for frames. A copy of the letter will be sent to the schools.

Members took more Phentex, and both used stamps and Campbell's soup labels were turned in for respective projects.

Following adjournment of the meeting on motion of Mrs. Beakes, hands were joined and the Mizpah Benediction was repeated in unison.

Mrs. LeGallais served a delicious tea. Mr. Dennis Dwyer joined the group for a short time and a delightful hour of friendly fellowship was enjoyed by all. Miss Miller shared some of her experiences in meeting and welcoming the newly arrived sponsored family to Canada, and more items were promised to help in establishing them in their new home in this community.

FOR THE REFERENDUM
A DIFFERENT
BALLOT-PAPER

This ballot-paper is different in content because, for a referendum, you must answer a question. This question, has been adopted in French and English by the Assemblée nationale, has also been translated into 8 native languages.

Our role is to keep you well informed.

For further information, please dial toll free: 1-800-463-4378

Here's the voting procedure to follow:

Using a black lead pencil which will be supplied to you, make a cross (+), an x (X), a check mark (V), or a dash (—) in the square of your choice. Make sure you keep mark within square.

After you have voted, fold your ballot-paper; show the deputy returning-officer his initials upon the back of the ballot-paper; detach the counterfoil; then place the ballot-paper into the ballot-box yourself.

Le Gouvernement du Québec a fait connaître sa proposition d'en arriver, avec le reste du Canada, à une nouvelle entente fondée sur le principe de l'égalité des peuples;

cette entente permettrait au Québec d'acquiescer le pouvoir exclusif de faire ses lois, de percevoir ses impôts et d'établir ses relations extérieures, ce qui est la souveraineté — et, en même temps, de maintenir avec le Canada une association économique comportant l'utilisation de la même monnaie;

aucun changement de statut politique résultant de ces négociations ne sera réalisé sans l'accord de la population lors d'un autre référendum;

en conséquence, accordez-vous au Gouvernement du Québec le mandat de négocier l'entente proposée entre le Québec et le Canada?

The Government of Québec has made public its proposal to negotiate a new agreement with the rest of Canada, based on the equality of nations;

this agreement would enable Québec to acquire the exclusive power to make its laws, levy its taxes and establish relations abroad — in other words, sovereignty — and at the same time, to maintain with Canada an economic association including a common currency;

no change in political status resulting from these negotiations will be effected without approval by the people through another referendum;

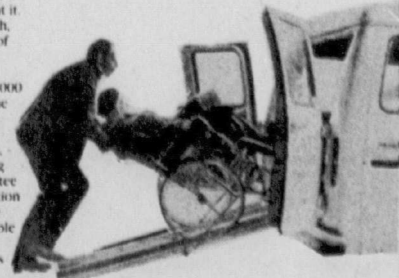

on these terms, do you give the Government of Québec the mandate to negotiate the proposed agreement between Québec and Canada?

help them to help themselves

Nobody enjoys being sick. But when it's over, at least one can forget about it. When you're chronically ill, though, or handicapped, or old and in need of care, there's no forgetting. We shouldn't forget either. In Québec there are more than 60,000 patients asking for help, asking us, the strong, to lend them a little of our strength. We should remember them always, but especially during the fund-raising campaign for the Provincial Committee of Patients. We have a special obligation to support such an organization, one which helps so many ill and old people to improve their lives, which helps them to find ways to use their talents for the benefit of society. These people still have a role to play, if we give them the chance. They need our help, if they are to help themselves. Please be generous.

Television networks geared for coverage

MONTREAL (CP) — Moments after the last ballot is cast in the Quebec referendum Tuesday night, television networks will set their sophisticated machinery into motion to provide the first-ever live coverage of a Canadian plebiscite.

The CBC, planning one of the most extensive coverage broadcasts, says it expects about five million Canadians will tune in to its four-hour program.

TVA, the private French-language network, says it will put even more effort into covering the referendum than last February's federal vote. The network has no fewer than seven producers working on its referendum show, which it expects will be watched by 1.5 million Quebecers.

As in any election, each network will flash the latest vote results as quickly as possible on TV screens across the country and try to proclaim a winner before its rivals.

Referendum '80

Nevertheless, with the use of specially-programmed computers — which will show how various regions are voting compared with previous provincial and federal elections — CBC, CTV and TVA say they should be able to call the result about an hour after polls close at 7 p.m. EDT.

reactions at such diverse places as downtown Montreal, Quebec City, James Bay, Ottawa, provincial capitals and Washington.

CBC television coverage will have its nerve centre in Studio 45 at Maison de Radio-Canada in Montreal. Three key players behind the scenes are (from left) executive producer Dave Knapp, director Bill Matthews and senior producer Arnold Amber. They are seen with the model of the set.

FED INTO COMPUTERS
Results from Quebec's 110 ridings will be fed into network computers within minutes after they are counted.

The CBC and its French-language network, Radio-Canada, will hook their computer into an electronic map in their spaceage Montreal studios, which will give a visual indication of how different regions of the province are voting.

CTV's five-man anchor team will be headed by Lloyd Robertson and Harvey Kirck.

In addition, Air Canada will be given access to the CBC's computer, enabling the airline to broadcast progressive results to passengers travelling on trans-continental and trans-Atlantic flights.

PONDER RESULTS
CTV, which plans to end its referendum program at 9 p.m., will also have reporters sending in reaction from various regions of Quebec and other parts of the country.

MODERATE PANEL
Radio-Quebec, the province's educational TV network, plans a more moderate panel of four: Political scientist Leon Dion, Robert Lussier, former vice-president of the Parti Quebecois, federal Liberal MP Celine Hervieux-Payette and John Trent, a university professor who helped draw up the Quebec Liberal's beige paper on re-noved federalism.

And, of course, there will be the regular array of talking heads in the networks' studios — political analysts, politicians and assorted experts assigned to ponder over the results and speculate on what they augur.

Another panel will feature senior journalists from three foreign publications: Le Monde, The Observer and Business Week.

Ontario-based Global Television says it will cover the referendum on an intermittent basis, beginning with an expanded edition of its evening news.

Even though the referendum result may be known by 8 p.m. EDT — the hour polls usually close in general elections — the networks will try to keep viewers glued to their television sets for a good time longer.

Radio-Canada will have no less than three panels for analysts — including Bourassa, Bourgault and Senate speaker Jean Marchand in addition to economists and cultural pundits.

Veteran journalist Peter Desbarats will then give hourly updates live from Montreal and the network will interrupt regular programming when the situation warrants.

There'll be mobile teams of journalists posted at the Montreal auditoriums where thousands of yes and no supporters will gather for celebrations.

Other teams will check out public

And for those tired of watching television, CBC-Radio will have a special edition of Cross-Canada Checkup starting at 9 p.m. to give listeners a chance to give their reactions to the referendum.

Single parent is not necessarily super-parent

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Shrugging off the super-parent syndrome is one of the most difficult things newly divorced or separated parents must do, say members of a group of people who have lived through the experience. It's also a symptom not limited to the spouse who has custody of the children. Linden Roberts of Moncton, president of the local branch of Parents Without Partners, says many parents react to their marriage breakup either by refraining from disciplining their children or by trying to adopt both mother and father roles to make up for the split. Roberts and Mary Almskog, another member of the group, say the lack of discipline causes a feeling of guilt that isn't good for either the parent or the child. In the discipline instance, says Roberts, the parent is afraid that the child will hate him or her if the parent doesn't give in. "And the children recognize and play on it." The solo parent also tries to secure his child's love by adopting the super-parent role. "Then, all of a sudden, you realize that you are only one parent — not two — and you conclude that you will be the best mother or father you can be, and hope the family will still be a happy one," adds Almskog. NEEDS NEW VALUES Loneliness — especially for parents who are left with custody of young children — and financial stress are the second and third most common problems, they said. "When the children are young, they go to bed early, leaving the parent alone with the television set and four walls," Roberts explained.

"The single parent probably consumes more books, magazines and TV shows than any other group, since it takes a while before they're willing to start out again." "Even getting back into the dating scene can be a difficult and lonely experience," adds Almskog. "The single parent had been used to doing things as a couple, and when he or she starts dating again, they find that the rules out there have changed. They have to question their values and consider what they really want."

Techniques help tension sufferers

Tension and anxiety are normal reactions to events in our lives which threaten our well-being. Such threats can come from accidents, financial troubles, problems on the job or in the family. How we deal with these pressures has a lot to do with our mental and emotional health, according to the Canadian Mental Health Association. During Mental Health Week, May 4th to 10th, the Association conducted a major education campaign to help people deal with tensions and anxieties. Here are eleven recommendations from the Canadian Mental Health Association:

Talk it out. If something is bugging you, let it out. Talk over your worries and concerns with someone you trust — husband or wife, father or mother, family doctor, clergyman, teacher or close friend. Talking relieves the strain and helps you bring problems into perspective.

Run away for a while. Don't spend all your time worrying about your problems. Escape for a while into a book, a movie, a game. True "escapism" can be overdone, but occasional breaks will help you see things more clearly.

Work off your anger. Give your emotions a rest by switching to physical activities. Dig up the garden. Clean out the garage. Start a building project or hobby.

Give in occasionally. If you find yourself getting into frequent quarrels, stand your ground only when you're sure you're right. Make allowances sometimes for the fact that the other person might be right. It's easier on your system to give in now and then.

Give something of yourself. Doing things for others can take your mind off your own problems. And you'll have a feeling of satisfaction and accomplishment.

Tackle one thing at a time. If your work load seems unbearable, do the most urgent jobs one at a time. Put all the others aside for the time being.

Don't try to be perfect. There are things you like to do best, and things that give you the most satisfaction. Give yourself a pat on the back for those you do well, but don't try to get into the Guinness Book of World Records with everything you do.

Ease up on your criticism. Don't expect too much of others. Try to remember that each person has his own strengths, his own shortcomings.

Don't be too competitive. Often cooperation is the best approach. When you give other people a break, you often make things easier for yourself, too. If they no longer feel threatened by you, they stop being a threat to you.

Make the first move. Sometimes we have the feeling that we are being left out, slighted or rejected by others. This could be just our imagination. If you make the first friendly move, very often others will respond.

Have some fun. Too much work can be harmful. Old-fashioned play is essential for good physical and mental health. Everyone should have a sport, hobby or outside interest that provides a complete break from the work routine.

Remember: The more you know about stress, the better you cope.

Ann Landers

Amorous couple poor tenants

Dear Ann Landers: I am an unmarried male, 25 years old. Recently I bought into a housing arrangement and replaced my cousin as an occupant and owner. My roommate, and old friend, rents a room from me and shares the bills in this small, crowded, two-bedroom place.

Before I moved in, my roommate's girlfriend was spending three days and nights a week here. She continues to do this. I keep erratic hours. Sometimes when I come home in the morning, after my roommate has gone to work, I find his girlfriend sitting in the kitchen wearing a bathrobe. (She works the night shift and lives in another county.) I have also on occasion found the front door unlocked. The girl has no key.

Another annoying problem: I am afraid to get out of bed at night and go to the kitchen for a drink of water because they make love on the couch, or on the floor in the kitchen — wherever they happen to be when the mood hits them. I have been reading your column since I was ten years old and know you give good advice. Please help me find a way out of this mess. — Headache In Louisiana

Dear Headache: Talk to your roommate like a Dutch uncle. Tell him he must restrict his amorous activities to the bedroom or move out. Get tough and stick to it.

You say nothing of a lease, so I assume there is none. Meanwhile, have a key made for Miss Passion-Flower before someone walks into your apartment and strips the place.

Dear Ann Landers: I couldn't resist passing on this bit of idiosyncrasy. The advertising copy reads: "If you want your dog or cat to be socially acceptable, this company has come up with a new cologne and deodorant for pets. The cologne is made from the finest imported perfume oils, and the deodorant is the roll-on variety. Apply these substances once a week, and your favorite dog or cat will never be accused, even by its worst enemy, of suffering from pet odor." Ann, dear, since we dogs perspire only on our feet and tongue, are we supposed to lick this stuff or step on it? — Tau II, S.R. Calif.

Dear Tau: I don't have the foggiest notion. Why don't you write to the president of the company and ask him?

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from "Berkeley Reader" hit home. She was the high-school girl whose aunts were angry with her mother for giving her a Sweet 16 party the same week her father died of cancer.

On June 11, my 19-year-old son died in an accidental drowning. His sister was scheduled to graduate from high school on June 14. Like the Berkeley mother, I, too, felt it would be inappropriate to have a party with a big cake, congratulations and laughter, the day before her brother's services. But after some soul-searching I decided it would not be disrespectful to try to be happy so soon after our devastating loss. I knew her brother would have wanted us to go ahead with the party — and we did. It was a huge success. Please print this letter for her and others who may face a similar decision in the future. — Another One

Dear One: I'm with you, dear. Life is for the living.

Dear Ann Landers: Please help me out of this mess. I had the flu and begged my boyfriend Bob (age 17) to take my cousin Belle to a big party he had been looking forward to. (Belle is loud, fat and never had many dates.) Well, Bob and Belle got along just great. Now he is seeing her, and I'm out in the cold. Please tell me how to get him back. — A Big-Hearted Dummy

Dear Dum: If Cuz was able to latch on to Bob so easily, your relationship wasn't as solid as you thought. Leave him be and fish in other waters. He might swim back one of these days, but don't put any nets out.

Archbishop hosts party

Monsignor the most Reverend Jean-Marie Fortier, the Archbishop of Sherbrooke hosted a bash for the press Wednesday night for the tenth year. This time journalists showed their appreciation with a gift of a ceramic lamp.

A gift for Sherbrooke Hospital

Dr. James Ross, Director of Medical Services at Sherbrooke Hospital, examines part of the $1,500 arthroscope which was presented to the hospital Tuesday by the Sherbrooke Hospital Ladies' Auxiliary to mark Hospital Week. The instrument which is used to

tee, and Margaret Charlebois, chairman of the fund. Hospital Week is being observed at the hospital by gifts of flowers to patients and by performances by choirs from Galt and Marymount Schools.

Suds get watered down

LONDON (CP) — What bloomers' cheer! The pub owners of Old England are cheating on the beer.

Brits do love their pint. And in Britain, where four in 10 men aged between 18 and 24 are labelled as heavy drinkers in an official survey released in April, watering down the revered brew is downright unforgivable.

The Institute of Trading Standards Administration has discovered that a band of naughty pub landlords dilute their beer with as much as 20 per cent water. But instead of donning a sheepish grin, the owners have latched on to a trusty scapegoat — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

The last Tory budget sent the price of beer and spirits soaring. A pint in the local pub now costs about 45 pence ($1.25).

Since beer prices increased in March, says institute spokesman Peter Green, so did watering down the beer.

Squirrels

In the winter the squirrels gather thousands of acorns. They store them in their tree. When warm spring comes, they go out to find something to eat. Then they go back to the tree.

The Storm

All afternoon the humid tenseness had indicated a storm was brewing. Just before twilight the wind rose. Soon, as the clouds became darker and heavier it began to rain. The steady pitter-patter on the roof increased to a hard downpour.

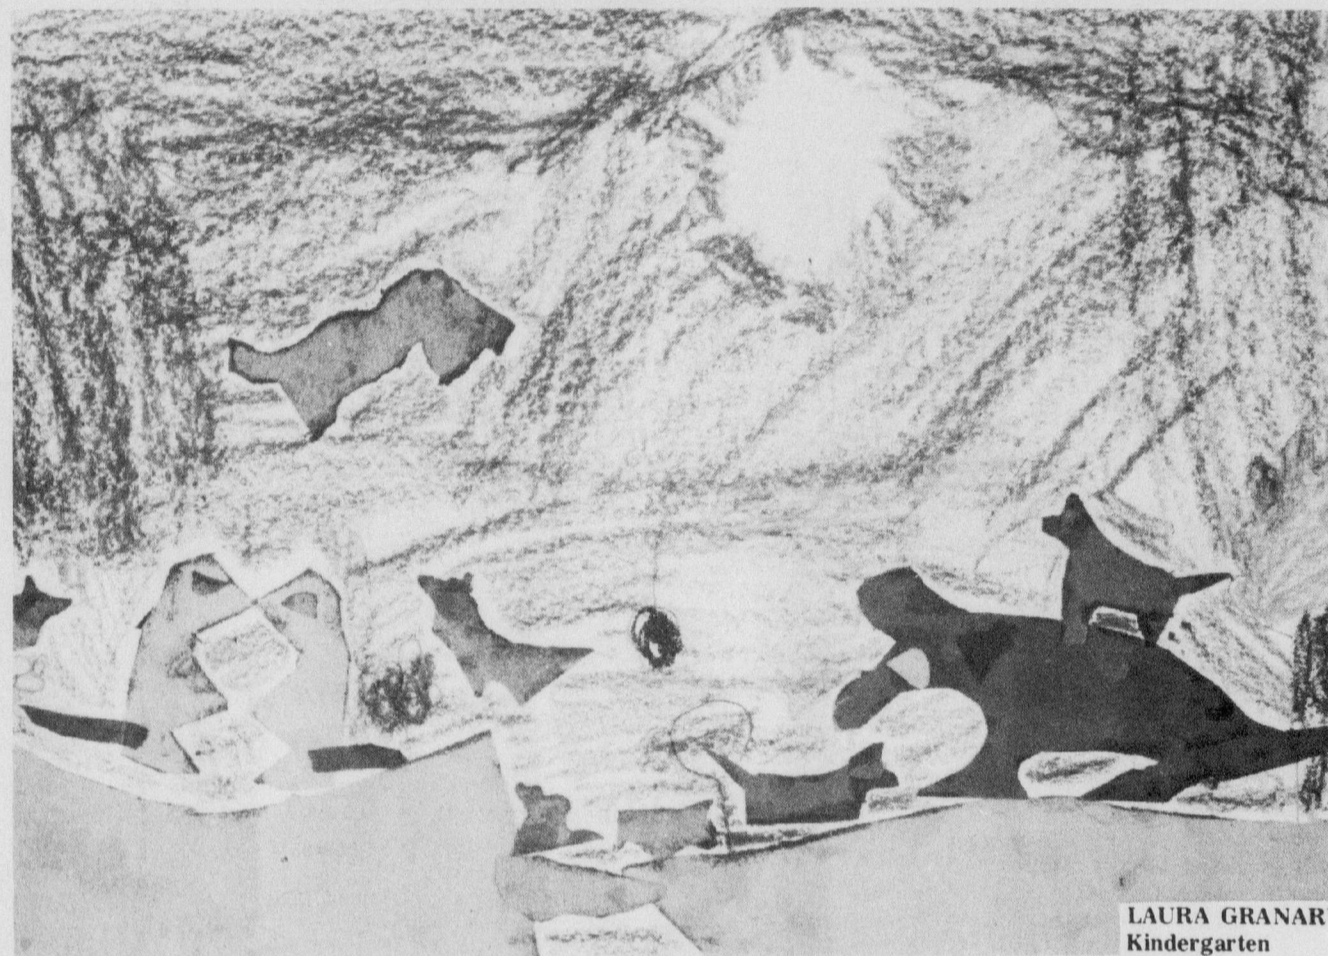

Whipping the rain madly across the valley the wind would gust. Trees rocked, twigs snapped, buildings creaked and groaned under the pressure. Streaking through the sky, lightning blazed up a mass of boiling clouds fringed with a tint of bronze.

At dawn the sun revealed flooded banks and blown over trees. The fresh and warming up air assured the fineness of the days to come.

THE PENCIL POUTS

Hi, I'm Roy's pencil. He writes with me every day and I hate it! My worst enemy is Junior. He eats me up. Every time my lead breaks Roy takes me to Junior. Oh! Yeah! Junior is an enemy to all pencils. He's a pencil sharpener. I get shorter every time I go to Junior. Soon I'll be only one inch tall.

THE BICYCLE BLABS

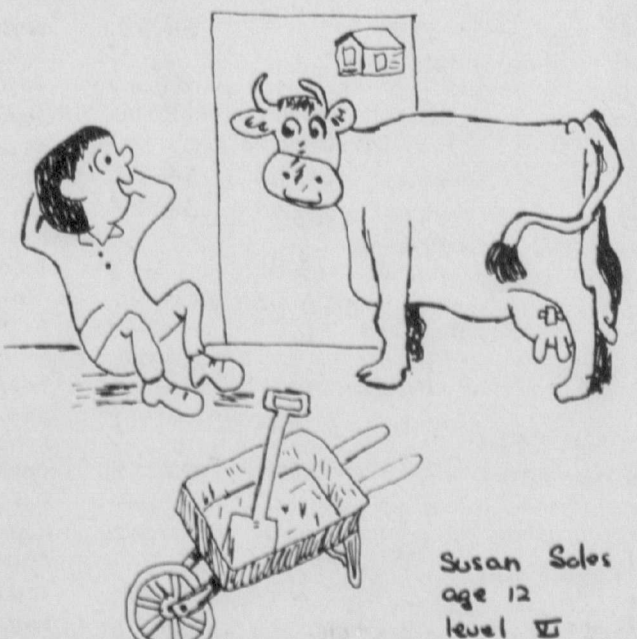

Hi, I'm Jackie's blue bicycle. She sometimes forgets to put me away. One day she forgot to put me away and it rained. My beautiful coat of blue was ruined with rust. My seat was all wet. When she came out she put me away.

One day she washed me. She took an SOS pad and scrubbed me. I felt good after that. Then she pumped my tires. After that she rode me. Now that she doesn't forget, I'm very proud of her.

Printemps

Dans la saison du printemps
Les fleurs poussent et le fleuve court.
Les enfants jouent à la balle molle.
Les jours de hockey sont finis.

En avril, il pleut dehors.
Et les garçons mettent leurs bottes.
Les oiseaux volent au nord.
Les marmottes vont dehors.

Mars, avril, mai et juin
Sont les mois des grenouilles
Dans les rivières.

Il fait beau
Dans mon pays.
Les oiseaux chantent haut
Cet après-midi.

Les bourgeons sont ouverts.
L'eau coule dans la rivière.
Le neige a fondu; fini l'hiver!
Et poussent jolies fleurs et plantes vertes.

Les arbres sont grands.
Devant chez nous.
Les branches se mélangent
Et les petites feuilles poussent.

Le printemps est chaud.
On se promène dans les bois.
Le temps est si joli, si beau:
Mai est le nouveau mois.

Au coin du feu,
Nous chantons: "Au Clair de la lune".
Nous sommes heureux.
Vive la Nature!

Dufferin Heights Golf Club News

DUFFERIN HEIGHTS (IH) — Friday evening, May 9, the semi-annual meeting of the Ladies Dufferin Heights Golf Club officially opened the 1980 season of golfing activities.

The meeting was held in the Club House where Kathy Alger, the president presided and welcomed the large number of women present, including several new members.

The report of Judy Philip, secretary, and members of the executive showed them to have been busy the winter months preparing for an active season ahead. Thanks were also given the autumn committees for projects after the September annual meeting.

Muriel Martin will again be convener for the Friday night couples golfing which was so successful last season.

Mrs. Alger announced the staff this year is Mrs. Elaine Boisvert, the cook, assisted by Debbie and Pat Wintle. Graydon Schoolcraft and Paul Perreault are in charge of bar facilities.

The House committee is Barbara Wintle, Deryl Williams and Rita Cloutier. Mrs. Wintle said the ladies lounge is being decorated and brought attention to the new drapes in the main lounge.

In September Charity Henderson suggested and was named chairperson of a "How to do" book. She and her chosen committee prepared it since and at this meeting Charity reviewed the contents pertaining to rules in golfing, duties of a captain and other details. This book was accepted by the attendance and has been placed in the ladies lounge to be referred to by the golfers.

Dorcas Pocock agreed to convene the wine and cheese party to be held at the Club house on September 13, and Arlene Probyn will convene the casserole supper on October 11. Both were recipients of several volunteering to assist them.

Mrs. Alger reminded all of the second annual auction at the Club on June 21 and the annual steak barbeque supper on June 28.

Rachel Pellerin, vice-president and chairlady of the Match committee said her committee is composed of Nancy Denney, Carol Rever, Gesle Griesves, Bev Dyer, Linda Armstrong and Sue Norrie. Mrs. Pellerin said the matches will be much as before. Mrs. Rever is in charge of the afternoon league arrangements. Marion Hall, CLGA representative gave her report of the meeting held this spring and spoke about the new rules. Several gave an order for the new rule book now available for 75 cents. The ladies golf got underway on May 13 with the get-acquainted League team scramble. During dinner several signed to play on the Afternoon, Sunset and Ladies league.

The pin rounds start on May 24. The meeting was adjourned, sherry was served by the House committee, after which a delicious dinner was enjoyed.

The men's club got underway under the presidency of Norm Wintle, the evening of May 10 with Three-man selected shot and on May 24, the 20th annual Early Bird will be played.

Both men's and ladies clubs have a full and varied schedule for the 1980 season on the course, plus several social events. May 11, a Mother's Day roast beef dinner was served in the evening, which was largely attended.

The bidding and the opening lead were virtually automatic. Most players, upon seeing a strong hand appear in the dummy, lose interest in the contract and hope for a change of luck in the future. West, Mark Molson of Montreal, one of Canada's most successful tournament players didn't think about the future. He concentrated on breaking the game contract and found an elegant solution.

Declarer ducked the heart lead in dummy and won East's jack with the queen. At trick two South led a spade to North's king. The 10 of diamonds was then covered by the queen and king and Mark won the ace.

Now Mark found the only play to defeat the contract. He knew that declarer had the 10 of hearts because East had played the jack at trick one. If East had both the jack and 10, he would have played the lower of his touching honors.

Mark decided that if South had begun with exactly Q 10 doubleton of hearts he could smother South's remaining heart honor. Consequently, Mark played the king of hearts. It didn't matter if declarer ducked or not. Mark's jack of diamonds was the entry to his established heart suit.

If you need a particular holding to defeat a contract, play for it.

Oswald: "The late Hy Lavinthal invented the suit preference signal almost fifty years ago. Basically, you play a high card to show desire for a high-ranking suit and a low card to show desire for a low-ranking suit."

Alan: "It usually is used when you are leading and in such circumstances is easy to read. When following to partner's lead, it is secondary to the more important signal of high card for come-on and low card for shift."

Oswald: "Here is a good example of it in operation by experts. East is allowed to hold the first heart with his king. He returns the jack and after South ducks the jack at trick two, West overtakes with the queen in order to lead back the ten spot which South has to win."

Alan: "South, who has chucked two clubs from dummy on the hearts, proceeds to run diamonds. On the third diamond East chucks a spade and South a club. On the fourth and fifth diamonds, East continues to chuck spades. He knows that West has played the ten of hearts and reads it as a suit preference signal to show strength in spades. West would have led the eight of spades if he wanted to show club strength."

Oswald: "Now the best South can do is to cash the ace-king of clubs and be down one. Without the suit preference signal East might have chucked a club with disastrous results."

Your Birthday

May 17, 1980

This coming year you are apt to be more content with a small group of intimate friends with whom you have much in common than you will with a large circle of acquaintances. The quality of the relationships is important, not the quantity. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Do more listening than talking if you're around persons who have something worthwhile to say. What you hear you'll later find useful. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending your copy of Astro-Graph Letter, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Focus your efforts on situations that could shore up your financial security. There are several constructive steps you can now take. CANCER (June 21-July 22) You have the gift to take charge of situations and get them on the proper path. You know how to handle others without stepping on any toes. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Goals can best be achieved today by operating in a manner so as not to call too much attention to yourself. Go about your business as unobtrusively as possible. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Friends appreciate you today. They know your concern is genuine. Your sincerity in dealing with their problems will not be readily forgotten.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It will not be easy to avoid being the center of attention today. You'll handle yourself in a way others will want to imitate. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Lessons you've learned from experience will be used wisely today. Mistakes you've made previously are not apt to be repeated. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In business or commercial matters your instincts are a shade sharper than usual today. Follow your hunches; you'll chalk up a profit. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your diplomacy and tact are your greatest assets with friends. Situations that could prove testy will not have a chance to develop. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Tasks you know need immediate attention should be given priority today. You'll have no peace of mind you put off work that needs doing.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You don't need a lot of people around you today to thoroughly enjoy yourself. A secluded rendezvous with your special person offers more excitement than a large crowd. ARIES (March 21-April 19) Normally you're outgoing and upbeat. Today, however, you could be surprisingly temperamental if you let little frustrations get to you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Even though you may think you can't afford to have fun, there will be some pleasant surprises that should make this a red letter day. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph Letter, which begins with your birthday. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Success is not likely to elude you today. You are both ingenious and persistent. In addition, you are not apt to exaggerate obstacles. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Speak well of others today even if a companion tends to criticize. You'll win allies, but he or she won't. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Do it on your own instead of seeking assistance from persons who won't take what you hope to achieve as seriously as you do. The job doesn't call for jokers. ACW Meeting

AYER'S CLIFF — The regular meeting of the St. George's ACW was held in the Parish Hall on Thursday May 2, preceded by a delicious lunch, served by Mrs. John Ashworth.

Mrs. Ritchie Harrison, chairperson, opened the meeting by leading the members in prayer. The minutes of the April meeting were read by the Secretary, Mrs. L.F. Ounsworth, and Mrs. Galen Vanece read the correspondence which consisted of several thank-you letters.

Mrs. Wally Browning read the Treasurer's report in the absence of Mrs. Royce Martin.

It was decided to pay for membership of the choir in the Royal School of Music, birthday money for our adopted child in Mexico, Miriam Hernandez Barrera; a wedding gift to a member's daughter, and the bill for the painting of the ceiling and upper walls in the Parish Hall, as well as all the paint. Members will complete the painting.

The roster for the Rummage Sale held on May 3 and 4 was: Friday evening: Mrs. John Ashworth, Mrs. Joseph Shulver and Mrs. Russell Quinn and on Saturday morning: Mrs. Joseph Shulver, Mrs. Ritchie Harrison and Mrs. Joyce Ounsworth.

Mrs. Wally Browning and Mrs. Ritchie Harrison talked of the ACW Biennial meeting at the Cathedral in Quebec City, held on Wednesday and Thursday, May 14 and 15.

At the close of the meeting, members sorted rummage until eleven p.m., before wishing everyone a weary goodnight.

SCOOPS

by Doug Sneyd

This week I am able to show you a picture of the two stamps to be released on June 6th next. These are to commemorate "O Canada". They will be issued in sheets of 16 stamps. Why, is anyone's guess. I see the post office is not going to issue any First Day Covers with the full panel of 16 stamps and I have had no requests for them. However, I have ordered two from the man who services my covers, so if any of you want a sheet on First Day Cancel, phone me and one will be put aside for you. There have been 60,000,000 of the stamps ordered. That means 30,000,000 of each so there should be plenty for everyone.

I had a phone call to say that the government had found a way to tease people on the French-English question. The latest pair of stamps has the name in Latin only, therefore one cannot say it was only in English or only in French. Maybe they have something there. One thing we do know is that they put both stamps out in a 17c denomination.

Pleased to note that several took me up on my special offer of Plate Blocks of Canadian Stamps. The first one took over $50 worth, while others took about the same amount and now have a real nice showing.

Few in this area collect the stamps of Australia and New Zealand, let alone Norfolk Islands or Falkland Islands. In fact, I believe the right thing for me to do is send them off to the companies who are willing to pay far more for these wholesale than I have been selling them to you collectors.

In the future if you want these, then you will have to pay at least twice as much for them.

If any of you have been looking for a complete set of the Olympic coins, that is the complete series of 7 sets in a nice case with lock and key. I have such an item for sale. The true retail price of this set is $50, plus $17.95 for the case. I can let you have the complete item for much less if you are really interested. I do not wish to split it up as it is so nice the way it is.

Haven't seen any coins from the mint as yet nor stamps from Great Britain, but am sure this week I will. As for the regular new coins for 1980, we have trouble getting any from the banks as they do not make any money on them and Brinks charges them $12.50 to bring any from Montreal out. I have now ordered some and will have to pay the charges but at least I am told I should have them in about three weeks.

One of the boys from the Dixville Home has an idea — he wants to collect stamps. Someone told him I would show him how it was done. I have done a bit for him and suggested he use one of his writing books from school to put them in 'til he could get an album. I gave him a packet of hinges and he has done quite well with what he has for stamps. If any of you have an old Canadian album or some used Canadian stamps that you do not want, send them along to me and I will see that he gets them. I have a call from him about three times a week at the moment, so I am sure he will be pleased. Let's see what you can come up with.

When ordering your stamps or supplies for the balance of this month, ask for my free gift. I won't tell you what it is going to be, but I will say this, the larger the order the more it will be worth or maybe two or three items will be included. All items will be something that will fit into your collection of stamps. Don't delay as I find that true collectors, work at their hobby all year around now. One time it seemed like a winter sport, but now with so many beautiful stamps issued all the time, they have to keep up to save money as shortly after some of these new issues appear the price seems to go up on many items.

If you need to get in touch with me just phone 849-4958 or write me at P.O. Box 83, Dixville, Que., J0B 1P0.

Card Party

MASSAWIPPI (IH) — The newly renovated Community Hall in Massawippi opened its doors to the public for the first time since renovations started some two years ago, when a card party was held, sponsored by the Stanstead County Horticulture Society, on Saturday evening, May 10.

Before the games, everyone viewed the changes and the beautiful work-area in the kitchen, and everyone agrees the community is most fortunate to have this fine hall.

Progressive 500 was played at 22 table, prize winners being: Ladies 1st, Mary Hartwell, consolation, Hilda Nelson; Men's 1st, Stewart Nutbrown, consolation, C. Caswell. Nine no trump winner, Murray Gilbert, Skunk, Priscilla Keet. Mrs. George Butler donated a lovely hand-made cushion which was raffled and won by Mary Wilson.

Door prizes were claimed by Ron Clark, Meryl Nutbrown, Raymond Shepard, Stewart Nutbrown, Eva Clark, Erema Taylor, Rod McLeod, Fred Keet, and M. Woodman.

A gift of $10.00 was donated by Archie Moulton for the May 24 card party, a gift much appreciated by the Society.

The refreshment committee were Janey Webster, Ida Little and Lorraine Harrison, who were assisted in serving by Mabel Riches, Irene Johnston, Bea Thompson and Jane Little.
