Flag splits PCs; election foreseen

Rhodesia's Ian Smith retreats

SALISBURY (AP)—The crisis over Rhodesia eased today after Prime Minister Ian Smith retreated from his threat to proclaim independence for the white-ruled East African territory.

Bowing to a stiff warning from Britain's Labor government, Smith said in a television interview Thursday:

"The British government's moves of the past week have upset everything and I can see no prospect of independence by Christmas as I had hoped."

Smith also told the Rhodesian Parliament he would not regard the expected "yes" vote in a referendum next Thursday as a mandate for a unilateral declaration of independence from Britain.

Parliament approved Smith's motion "that the House takes note of the attitude of the British government toward the independence issue and rejects any policy based on the result of the referendum. . . ." It then adjourned until Feb. 23.

But Smith remained adamant in his opposition to British demands for a constitution assuring ultimate control of Rhodesia by the black majority.

"We are not prepared to be so weak as to see everything the European has built up over the last 60 years sold down the river," he told Parliament.

Supply debate in sixth day

Political time bomb ticks away

OTTAWA (CP) — A political time bomb is ticking away as the Commons enters the sixth day of tense debate on interim supply today.

Unless the measure is passed within a few days, the government will run out of spending authority to pay its employees and ordinary bills and a winter election will become almost inevitable.

Conservative MPs have taken advantage of the debate to criticize the government on a wide variety of issues and they showed no signs of slowing down Thursday. Many members of other parties are entering the debate to discuss pet subjects with voter appeal back home.

The supply debate is blocking Commons action on the new flag recommended by a Commons committee, the long-delayed Canada pension plan, the $125 minimum wage labor code, redistribution of seats, constitutional amendment and other top issues.

SUGGEST DESIGN

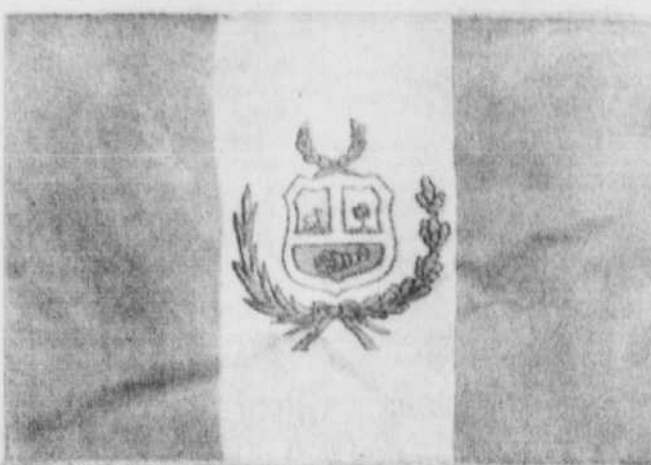

The atmosphere was electric Thursday as the 15-member flag committee recommended a design with a single red maple leaf on a white field with a red bar at each side.

About 15 minutes before the Commons met at 12:30 p.m. EDT, the Ottawa Citizen hit the streets with a front-page story by Grant Deachman, Liberal MP for Vancouver Quadra, summarizing the committee report and injecting the MP's personal observations.

The story was headlined: "MP Tells Inside Story of Flag Committee."

Conservative MPs protested angrily that Mr. Deachman, one of seven Liberals on the committee, had shown contempt of Parliament, violated the secrecy rules of the flag committee and "leaked" a major news story on the instructions of the government.

"A deliberate . . . disgraceful performance," charged Donald MacLennan (PC — Cape Breton South).

PERUVIAN FLAG — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker compared the new flag design, chosen by the Commons committee, with the flag of Peru which is shown here. He called the Canadian design "almost entirely a replica" of the Peruvian flag, except for the maple leaf which was replaced in the middle by a coat of arms in the flag of Peru.

US foreign 'posture', not 'policy' stressed

NEW YORK (CP) — The day is gone, says President Johnson, when "all we need to do is smash a button and determine everybody's foreign policy."

Communism is just like the neighborhood tough guy, says Republican challenger Barry Goldwater. "Let him push you around and eventually you'll have to fight."

The two statements point up fairly well the part foreign policy has played in the campaign for next Tuesday's presidential election.

Both candidates have tended to shy away from setting up their foreign policies on specific issues.

But on the broad question of the United States' posture with respect to the Communist world, the differences have been deep and heated.

This despite the fact that at times both candidates have appeared to be presenting the same general aims.

Both insist that they want above all to maintain peace; to in Viet Nam and Cuba; that it keep the United States strong and prevent Communist expansion by selling it wheat.

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — We can't go on like this. Almost without exception this was the cry from members of Parliament as the flag committee gave birth in a swirl of political controversy to a new design for a Canadian flag—a single red maple leaf on a white background with a vertical red bar at each side.

In most cases the widespread pessimism seemed to mean that another federal election cannot be far off. January or April were the months on which betting centred.

The flag committee's report, introduced in the Commons by committee chairman Herman M. Batten (L. — Humber — St. George's), was accompanied by two politically important developments.

In one, Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, who had rejected the single-leaf design as unacceptable on the eve of the committee reporting, was in direct conflict with his chief lieutenant, Leon Balcer. The Trois-Rivières MP issued a statement on behalf of the 10 Quebec Conservative MPs calling for adoption of the proposed Canadian flag without delay.

In a second, Grant Deachman (L.—Vancouver Quadra) came under fire for an article which revealed the committee's flag design choice before the committee report was presented in the Commons. He was one of the 15 committee members who were bound by secrecy.

MAY TRY AGAIN

The Conservatives immediately served notice they will propose a privileges committee investigation of Mr. Deachman's breach of the secrecy imposed on the flag committee's deliberations six weeks ago. An attempt Thursday was ruled out of order but a further effort was forecast for today.

The significance of such a move lay in the fact that motions of this kind are debatable and take precedence over all other business.

This precedence of debate extends to the government request for spending authority to pay November and December bills. The Conservatives have forecast a long debate on this interim supply request, now before the Commons.

It is estimated the government must have this authority by Nov. 10 if it is to meet payrolls and contract payments due Nov. 15. Without Commons renewal of its spending authority, the only other way for the government to get funds would be to send Parliament home and pass a governor-general's warrant for the money as has been done in the past.

SEE $7,000,000 SKIING GAIN

By DAVID SLABOTSKY (Record Staff Reporter)

MAGOG — The new Eastern Townships Autoroute may be open to traffic for the ski season, said autoroute authorities yesterday, if frost-free weather continues for another three weeks.

If it opens as scheduled, the Eastern Townships stands to make $7,000,000 from the ski industry in the 15-week duration of the season.

From this total $2,800,000 would be retained by ski interests and $4,200,000 would be taken by outside interests.

In an interview in Magog yesterday, Charles Messara, assistant manager of Orford Ski Area said that if the autoroute is opened, half a million skiers could be expected, each one spending $14 per ski day (Mr. Messara quoted the estimate figured by the Canadian Amateur Ski Association).

The C.A.S.A. also estimates that 60 per cent of each ski dollar goes to interests not connected directly with skiing, said Mr. Messara.

Official autoroute opening is scheduled for July, 1965. It is vital to this area that the autoroute be open to traffic for the ski season because the increased volume of skiers there were 251,000 last year and only 350,000 would be expected this year without the autoroute) will enable the region to start building seriously for 1967, he said.

There are seven major ski areas in the Eastern Townships, said Mr. Messara, and all of them are putting their profits back into the ski operation as a whole, improving slopes, putting new equipment into operation, providing better ski chalets. These improvements and maintenance operations are a year-round effort, he said, and give an impetus to local indus-

Latest Indonesia invasion collapses with surrender

SUNGEI RAMBAI, Malaysia (AP) — Indonesia's latest invasion of the Malaysian mainland collapsed today when 25 shaken guerrillas meekly surrendered less than 36 hours after they landed.

A strong Commonwealth task force hunted for a half dozen other guerrillas still believed at large from a force of 56 men who landed by boat Thursday near this village on Malaysia's southwest shore.

Malaysian police rounded up 25 other invaders Thursday.

It was Indonesia's third raid of the mainland since August.

A foreign ministry spokesman said Malaysia planned to protest to the United Nations. Australia, whose troops went into action against the Indonesians for the first time, said it would report the action to the international organization.

In Jakarta, the capital of Indonesia, a foreign ministry spokesman denied knowledge of the invasion.

Malaysian authorities expressed surprise at the landing area chosen by the Indonesians. It was within easy striking distance of a big Commonwealth brigade force outside Malacca. About 1,000 soldiers were in the area, said in Malacca, Malaysia, that about half of 60 Indonesian guerrillas who landed on the mainland's southwest coast early yesterday were seized and the rest pinned down in the swamps. This official picture was issued by the British Central Office of Information in London today.

About Television

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Dinah Shore's first daytime Special for Women, on ABC Wednesday, turned out to be more of a soap opera with Perry Mason overtones than a serious treatment of the problem of the molestation of children.

The hour-long story, called Child in Danger, was a routine court room drama about the trial of a haggard, worried, feeble charged with hurting a 10-year-old girl in a park playground. Things looked pretty bad for him when even his lawyer—played by Nina Foch—was repelled by his ugly crime. But in the end it turned out he was innocent. In a courtroom confession the little girl admitted she made up the story to avoid a spanking for tearing a new dress.

And the worried fellow, it turned out, was acting that way because he felt he was responsible for his own 10-year-old daughter's death in an automobile accident.

Along this rather familiar trail, cast members delivered little lectures to parents about warning and educating their children in this area. Miss Shore suggested that parents write to the FBI for special coloring books which would explain the danger to children.

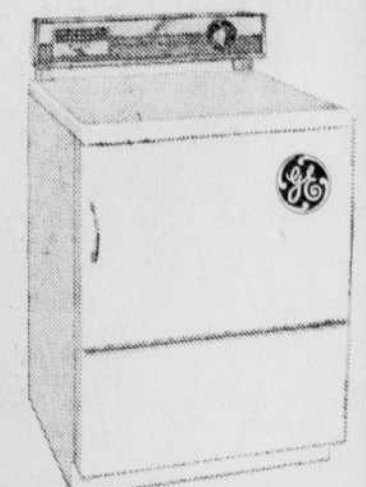

Despite the billing and the trimmings, however, the show was really just a rather unappetizing entertainment show.

Pleads guilty to his part in caisse robbery

One of the three men suspected of the hold-up of the Notre Dame de Ham caisse populaire in the early hours of Tuesday morning, Andre Lafreniere, 25, of Ville St. Michel, yesterday pleaded guilty in Sherbrooke Court of Sessions to a charge of armed robbery.

His sentencing was postponed until November 26.

The reason given for the postponement was that the investigation had not yet been completed, said Court Clerk Jean-Marie Grogere yesterday afternoon following Lafreniere's appearance at court. Judge Turmel presided.

A Lennoxville man, in his mid-fifties, who had come before the Court on a number of other occasions for drunkenness and disturbing the peace appeared before Judge Turmel yesterday in Court of Sessions and was reprimanded for his recent and past behaviour.

Gordon Hart who had been arrested some time in the early hours of yesterday morning was charged with entering a private dwelling in a state of drunkenness and therein disturbing the peace. In pronouncing sentence Judge Turmel said, "I'll give you one more chance but you must realize that if this continues... I sentence you to the same fine as previously, $20 and costs." He was given 15 days to pay the fine.

A Notre Dame de Ham man appeared in Sherbrooke Court of Sessions yesterday on charges of breaking and entering, theft, and entering a private dwelling in a state of drunkenness. He pleaded guilty to all.

SERVICE WITH A SNIP — With a snip of the scissors yesterday Sherbrooke Mayor Armand Nadeau opened an auto inspection service that will give free car check-ups to motorists for the next two weeks. Beside him is Jacques Verreault, deputy minister of transport and communication, and Pierre Mercier, director of publicity for that department.

The inspection centre will be in operation daily at the Sherbrooke Shopping Centre. (Record photo by Charles Catchpaugh)

Free auto inspection offered by Quebec government apparatus

The Quebec department of transport yesterday opened an inspection service that will give Sherbrooke area motorists free auto check-ups during the next two weeks.

The inspection service, sponsored by the Quebec department of transport and communications, will be given at the Sherbrooke Shopping Centre from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. during the week and from 9 a.m. till noon on Saturday, officials said.

The check-ups take about seven minutes and include checks on brakes, wheel alignment, steering, and directional signals, according to Gaston Villeneuve, of the department. Such a check-up would cost a motorist a minimum of five dollars elsewhere, he says.

The inspection service is given on a voluntary basis, he says. If the motorist's car is in good condition it will be given a sticker to show that it has passed inspection. If his car has defects the motorist will be invited to have them fixed at a garage and then return for a further inspection he says.

There is nothing compulsory about this, says Mr. Villeneuve. The inspection is voluntary so that no motorist will be given a traffic ticket or forced to make repairs on his car if it doesn't pass inspection, he says. The department has two sets of inspection apparatus with which it has set up the temporary inspection centres in about seven Quebec cities this year. Cost of each set is about $5,000. The check-ups are carried out by teams of mechanics and technicians in co-operation with the Quebec Provincial Police.

The purpose of the inspection services is to familiarize people with auto check-ups. The department may eventually initiate compulsory bi-annual check-ups. For this, department officials say, over 100 such inspection centres across the province would be needed.

MAGOG — (Staff) — The Eastern Townships Autoroute will be officially opened July 12, 1965, having cost 70 million dollars for a total of 80 miles stretching from Montreal to Omerville.

These facts were released here yesterday at a press conference held by Provincial Minister of Roads Bernard Pinard and president of the Quebec Autoroutes Authority Guy Poliquin.

The autoroute will have five toll gates, situated at Chambly, Marieville, Granby, Waterloo and Orford. It will cost the motorist $1.50 to drive from Sherbrooke to Montreal.

This highway system will be paid for in 35 years, said Mr. Poliquin, including the cost of maintenance, but the construction itself will be paid for in 30 years. Mr. Poliquin said it is not yet known if the toll will be maintained after equity has been reached.

The path of the autoroute has necessitated the construction of three junction arteries, said a press communique from the autoroute authorities, for a total length of nine miles.

The Saint Luc junction, four miles long, will link St. Jean and Saint Luc to the autoroute. The St. Alphonse-Adamsville junction, four miles, will link Adamsville and Sutton to the autoroute. The West Shefford junction, one mile, will connect Bromont, Sutton and Brome Lake to the autoroute.

According to estimates made by the Quebec Autoroutes Authority the cost of this project will be divided in the following manner: Montreal to Omerville, 70 miles, will cost $60,000; Omerville to Rock Island, 21 miles, will cost $10,000. But the Omerville-Rock Island extension will not be completed until 1967.

In addition to the excellent facilities this autoroute will provide for motorists, other roads will be improved, said Mr. Pinard. Route 1 is being repaired and the Chamby bridge complex is presently under study. Millions of dollars will be spent improving routes 2 and 11, he said.

The Eastern Townships Autoroute has been built to permit the de-centralization of industry, which the government is working for, and to provide first class roads for the province, said Mr. Pinard.

"Now you can see that the government was sincere when in 1960 it promised something spectacular in the way of roads," said the minister.

"The government was convinced," he continued, "that our citizens backed the prime minister and his cabinet when they decided to undertake this project."

The taxes being paid by the people of Quebec are being invested in this province for the good of the people of Quebec.

The taxes are working for you," he said.

CANADIAN CLUB SPEAKER — Dick Bird of Regina, Saskatchewan, will address a dinner meeting of the Women's Canadian Club of the Eastern Townships, Monday, November 2, at the Le Baron Hotel, at 7 p.m. Mr. Bird's topic will be A Canadian Naturalist in the Field. An eminent cinematographer - naturalist, Mr. Bird is an associate of the Royal Photographic Society of Great Britain, a fellow of the Zoological Society of London and is one of the only four Canadians to have been awarded a Fellowship in the Photographic Society of America. For over 45 years Mr. Bird has travelled the world producing motion pictures for news, travel and informative sources, including a series for the Walt Disney Studios. Mr. Bird has received official recognition from the Saskatchewan Minister of Natural Resources. "No single individual has done more for the cause of conservation in Canada than Dick Bird," he said.

ONE OF BIG FOUR — Alcoholism ranks among the four major health threats, with cancer, mental illness and heart disease.

Used 2,000 tons of dynamite to blast

According to a press release from the Quebec Autoroutes authority it will have required 2,000 tons of dynamite to blast the Eastern Townships Autoroute through the rock of the mountain country found in this region. A total of 3,650,000 cubic yards of rock were moved.

It has been calculated that if all the dynamite used during construction of this toll road had been shipped in a single movement, it would have been necessary to employ a train hauling 50 freight cars.

If all the rock had been excavated at the same place the operation would have produced a 100-foot-deep hole stretching 1,000 feet wide by 1,000 feet long. The volume of this rock is equivalent to the space occupied by a 30-storey skyscraper measuring 500 feet wide by 500 long.

The work required the moving of 8,750,000 cubic yards of dirt which would have created another 1,000-by-1,000-foot hole, 250 feet deep, had it all been dug on the same location.

Construction of the Eastern Townships Autoroute required the erection of 69 structures which, were they to be placed end to end, would represent a 4 1/2-mile-long alley with a 24-foot wide surface. Workmen had to lay 9,200,000 square yards of sod, the quantity needed to cover 20,000 lots measuring 100 feet by 50 containing single-unit houses or, the entire grassy area of a city of 100,000, living in an area of 25 square miles.

To get all this work done, in addition to the laying of 2,700,000 square yards of bituminous concrete, a total of 34 main contractors and 475 sub-contractors shared 76 contracts and the labor of 2,500 men who, all told, supplied 8,000,000 man-hours of work.

In less than 18 months, some 8,000,000 man-hours of work were required on the construction sites of the Eastern Townships' Autoroute. Figuring

ESKIMO ART — Claude Lafleur, left, director of the art gallery at the University of Sherbrooke, and Mrs. Therese Lavallee, sales official for Eskimo art, admire one of the 200 pieces of sculpture on display this weekend at the gallery. The show also features prints, such as the one shown

Exhibit of Eskimo art is opened

Over 200 sculptures, and 60 prints, as well as drawings and clothing are featured at the University of Sherbrooke art gallery's display of Eskimo art. The wealth of exquisite pieces on show include several pencil drawings which, according to sales official Mrs. Therese Lavallee, are being shown for the first time.

Doors are open for the exhibition from noon to 10 p.m. today, Saturday, and Sunday. The art pieces all come from Povungnituk, a small Eskimo village near the Hudson Strait in far northern Quebec, and are produced by about 30 artists, says Mrs. Lavallee.

Their art is marketed by a co-operative set up eight years ago. Mrs. Lavallee, sales manager for the organization, is reimbursed by the provincial government for her work.

The art pieces depict Eskimos, often in hunting scenes, and animals such as polar bears, and snowy owls.

The most pronounced feature of the sculptures and prints is the fullness, or roundness of the figures. Often as wide as they are long, they lean toward the spherical in shape. They suggest the constant struggle against cold and starvation. For the more closely an object approaches the spherical the less is its proportionate surface area. Thus, in cold climates, less of its heat is lost.

The plumpness of men and animals so lovingly depicted by the Eskimos suggests the full stomach, or delivery from starvation.

One of the exquisite prints at the exhibition, entitled Geese, depicts a sleek, thickly-feathered bird with its plump, yet graceful neck turned to watch another goose in flight above it. The neck of the flying goose is curved into the wind at a 30-degree angle to the axis of its body. The body of this goose, too, is plump, and appears too heavy to be supported by the wings. The wings, like the body, are oval rather than elongated and suggest the constant Eskimo penchant toward the compact.

Flag issue may force new election

Failure of the special Commons committee on the flag issue to achieve near-unanimity of a design for a national flag for Canada places parliament back in the position it held prior to the appointment of the study group.

The alternative design proposed by the committee — replacing three maple leaves by a single leaf and the substitution of red for blue in the vertical bars — will do nothing to placate the opposing factions. Neither side made any substantial concessions during the committee study.

Prospects for any major progress on vital measures are dim indeed if any attempts are made for an early implementation of the committee report.

Both major party leaders seem determined to bring the argument to a head. Prime Minister Pearson has declared that Canadians will have a new flag by Christmas. This means that he must resume the debate without delay.

And the debate probably will be long and boring judging from the declaration of Opposition Leader Diefenbaker that his party will oppose the maple leaf design to the bitter end.

Beliefs growing in many quarters that another federal election is imminent are strengthened by the prospects of the flag debate bogging down House procedure.

Faced with a choice between applying closure, the only way apparently open for adopting the new flag before Christmas, and an appeal to the people, the Prime Minister might adopt the latter course.

He could appeal to the people on the same platform that gave Mr. Diefenbaker his overwhelming majority in 1958. The Government, he could argue, has an impressive program but cannot apply it because of its minority position. It must be given a clear mandate to effect its proposals.

To continue the present position in the House would only lead to chaos, he could tell an electorate already weary by a plethora of elections.

And it might work.

UNICEF: children to help children

Tomorrow night residents of Eastern Townships communities will be visited by an odd variety of individuals, dressed as clowns, witches, goblins, ballet stars or almost anything imaginable as Canadian youngsters enjoy the traditional fun of dressing up, visiting friends and neighbors and collecting the customary Halloween treats.

But many of the wee visitors will carry with them UNICEF collection boxes in which the householders will be asked to place coins for UNICEF.

This year half-a-million Canadian children are expected to provide more than half-a-million dollars to help fight hunger, disease and ignorance amongst the world's less fortunate children.

UNICEF, the United Nations Children's Fund, is a crusade for children by children and actively participates in 116 of the countries of the world.

It is not a charity.

It is a two-way street.

Any local government wishing UNICEF assistance to fight hunger, disease and illiteracy, applies in writing to the International body.

Having surveyed its own needs, it requests aid in specific areas such as disease control, milk processing plants, mother and child clinics, school equipment. But for every dollar expended by UNICEF the local government is expected to provide $2.50 in buildings, personnel and local products.

To accomplish its work, the fund needs the financial assistance of intelligent world citizens.

Coins dropped in the Halloween boxes tomorrow night, collected by youngsters from your own neighborhood, make possible a fairer, more equitable future for the children of the world.

Speedy power transfer in Britain

The almost uncanny speed with which British Labor Leader Harold Wilson took over the post of Prime Minister following the defeat of the Conservatives in last week's British general elections offers a marked contrast to the delays which frequently mark a change of power in this country and certainly is startling when compared with the two months which elapse between the elections and inauguration of a new government in the United States.

Within a few hours after it was ascertained that the Labor party would hold a slight majority in the new House of Commons, Sir Alec Douglas-Home, then Prime Minister, handed in his resignation to the Queen. Barely another hour elapsed before Mr. Wilson took his oath of office and announced the backbone of his cabinet.

In Canada, both at the federal and provincial levels, the Premiers of the day seem reluctant to step down, preferring to cling to their remaining vestiges of power until the last possible moment.

Frequently, especially if the election results have been fairly close, a defeated government leader will cling to his post until the time limits for contestations and recounts have expired.

These dilatory tactics are disturbing to the general welfare of the country.

Changes in government generally create a degree of economic uncertainty, with business being restricted until the policies of the incoming administration are ascertained.

It is only fair to the people as a whole that this transition period be as short as possible.

The sooner a new government can take office, the sooner it can begin the application of its ideas and the sooner the life of the country can return to a degree of normalcy.

Other papers say:

What becomes of BNA Act document

Last week the Federal Government shared in the praises given the Dominion-Provincial Conference which agreed on a formula for amending the constitution in Canada.

The formula was an accomplishment. It has been described by that authority on the constitution, Dr. Eugene Forsey, as "a bipartisan achievement in which both Conservatives and Liberals can legitimately take pride." But the formula does not end the discussion.

Now the Government is under criticism for uncertainty or secrecy over the fate of the actual constitution. Instead of pride, it brings from Mr. Stanley Knowles, NDP, the protest, "Parliament deserves better than this at the hands of the Government."

(The Ottawa Journal)

Mr. Knowles feels he was deceived in that Government replies in the House had indicated that conferences with the provinces would discuss not only the amending of the constitution but its actual disposition. The British North America Act now is lodged in a tower of the British Parliament Buildings in London. Mr. Knowles was joined by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker in wondering whether the Government would have the BNA Act taken to Canada and passed as a Canadian statute in Parliament.

Mr. Knowles' first shock was the statement of Justice Minister Fawcett that the conferences with the provinces had not discussed the final disposition of the constitution. Mr. Knowles said he had been assured on three occasions that this would be done.

The second shock for Mr. Knowles and others was that the Government either did not know what it would do about the constitution or declined to tell.

Mr. Fawcett would go no further than to say the Government proposed an act "to amend in Canada the constitution of Canada." But there is nothing in that to say the BNA Act will be lodged in Canada. In fact, the Minister of Justice said that it was "interesting and important" to consider whether there should be placed before the Canadian Parliament a bill to give formal sanction to the BNA Act as the Canadian constitution.

This error drove us into a trap. The newspapers of the other provinces wrote that if

French Canada says:

Wagner doth protest too much; Russians, Chinese add confusion

Trois-Rivieres Le Nouvelliste: Solicitor-General Claude Wagner's report apparently has ended the series of incidents surrounding the Queen's visit to Canada. Despite the exaggeration of certain episodes by politicians, observers and even government officials are concluding from it that this trip should never have been made. It is even surprising that Prime Minister Pearson is not deposed by his own party for having allowed such an unfortunate event. . . .

Mr. Wagner has gone to much trouble to show that not one drop of French-Canadian blood ran in the streets of Quebec City. The nightsticks two feet long that crashed down on the faces and shoulders of the students and journalists had this particularity: they did not cause blood to flow. Police techniques have made progress. . . .

Mr. Wagner had proclaimed (at the time of his appointment to the cabinet) that he would attack the underworld and that it would get the treatment once he stepped down from the bench. The only ones he has found to attack as underworld types are school children. . . . He has made himself the advocate of those who dole out truncheon-blows.

His report is too absolute to satisfy anyone. It seems partisan and that will not serve to reassure the calm, sincere population of Quebec. He will have to offer more than the haughty disdain he heaps on the journalists who were the object of his men's truncheon attacks. . . .

Newspapers have been accused of having created a climate of fear at the time all these events took place. But didn't the 1,200 bobbies Mr. Wagner used to keep Quebec City under his heel also contribute to that climate? Mr. Wagner should therefore examine himself before accusing the journalists of throwing the population into a panic. The report is long enough, but it is very incomplete. (Oct. 23)

Montreal Le Devoir — Mr. Levesque said of the Wagner Report on the Queen's visit that "the press had prepared the ground for a riot." This statement calls for many reservations. First of all, the report did not establish definitely that there was imminent danger of a riot. . . .

Even supposing that there was real danger of a riot, could all responsibility be thrown on the newspapers? This explanation can be only part of the truth. Because if Quebec was ready for a riot that day, it was first of all due to the presence of the Queen, whose visit was inopportune in the circumstances. . . .

For more than six months prior to the event, its inconveniences had been pointed out. . . . The competent authorities therefore had all the time necessary to reconsider an unfortunate decision. . . .

This error drove us into a trap. The newspapers of the other provinces wrote that if the French-Canadians did not welcome the Queen warmly, English Canada would be more uncompromising towards Quebec's requests. On the other hand, if the welcome had been enthusiastic it would have been concluded that Quebec was satisfied and this would have hurt our requests.

Mr. Pearson has said the Royal Visit showed many Canadians our divisions and our discords. These are the real causes of what happened, even if certain newspapers amplified or exaggerated the discontent. And Mr. Pearson and Mr. Lesage know these difficulties.

In staying away from Royal

Visit events, the population of Quebec acted with logic and dignity. It thus underlined our complaints about the federal system. It is not the fault of the Queen, who did not come on her own initiative, but it is principally that of the two prime ministers that she came here at a badly chosen moment.—Paul Sauriol. (Oct. 23)

Quebec Le Soleil—After the Kremlin coup d'état, the international situation still is a little confused. Everything that's happened indicates that Soviet policy will continue along the lines set down by former premier Khrushchev. The speech by his successor as Communist party secretary, Leonid Brezhnev, during the reception given the latest Soviet cosmonauts is meant to reassure the world, as are some earlier statements. . . .

Peaceful coexistence, the unity of international communism, fidelity to Marxism-Leninism, policies meant to increase the well-being of the Russian people—these seem to be the principal policy points of the new Brezhnev-Kosygin partnership. But observers nonetheless continue to ask questions: For the new tone of Soviet policy could indicate an attempt by the Kremlin to renew its grip on the satellite countries and a parallel attempt to restore good relations with Peking. That is the tactic one would expect, but it seems difficult for the Russians to succeed in re-establishing the previous monolithic structure of things. . . .

It is quite obvious that the promise Mr. K. made in 1960 —when he said the Soviet Union would surpass the United States very quickly—was extremely ill-advised. . . . The absurdity of the (Soviet) system is apparent even to Soviet economists. . . . Moreover, the internal problems of the satellites, like those of the Soviet Union, are heightened by the frontier problems. The frontiers have always been badly defined in the wake of wars, especially in the Balkans. These facts make it seem doubtful that Marxism-Leninism will do any better under the new regime than under the old. (Oct. 21)

Sherbrooke La Tribune — Communist China has exploded its first nuclear bomb. In a divided world, it is necessary to talk tough to be heard. So the Peking leaders thought the noise of a nuclear explosion would allow them to have their say on the international scene.

In their efforts to construct nuclear arms, the Chinese are seeking, no doubt, to boost their military power. But they're also after a psychological goal. It is certain that in fact they want to impress not only the Western world but also the group of nations faithful to the orthodox line laid down by Moscow. . . .

The atomic club now has five members. Experience has shown that it is impossible to stop any nation that possesses the necessary money, material and techniques from building at least one nuclear bomb and a good many others if it so desires.

Will this increase in the ranks of the club go on? We're inclined to think so. Several other nations, for reasons of prestige and to satisfy the vanity of their leaders, look forward to shooting off their little bombs at the first opportunity. So long as national pride is satisfied by experimental explosions, we have nothing to fear. But there's nothing to assure us that things always will be this way and that some one state will never choose to explode its bomb on foreign territory rather than on its own. (Oct. 21)

Ottawa Le Droit—The question can be asked quite legitimately: Are the English-Canadians going to be less civilized, less generous, less liberal than the Russians, the Poles, the Czechs and the Slovaks, the Austrians, the Bulgarians, the Hungarians, the Indians, the Romanians? The question can be asked because in these countries two or more languages have equal status from an educational point of view while not always being considered official languages. But, everyone knows, this is not the case in Canada, except in the province of Quebec. . . .

Outside Quebec, the French-speaking groups are peacefully working, in order and legality, for the defence of what they properly consider as elementary rights guaranteed by the spirit, if not the letter, of the British North America Act. Nothing will be gained by provoking the French minorities indefinitely. Why then act as though wanting them to become aggressive? . . .

Why do we have to use examples of other countries? As has often been said to English-Canadians of good faith and good will, we are only

Hubert H. Humphrey

One-time flaming liberal

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — Senator Hubert Horatio Humphrey of Minnesota has been dubbed the happy warrior of the American election campaign and it fits.

The Democratic vice-presidential candidate, once a flaming liberal in the American connotation of the word, has simmered down to a political temperature where a lot more people can digest him.

President Johnson, after a lengthy period aimed partly at injecting some suspense into an otherwise cut-and-dried nominating convention, chose the South Dakota native as his running mate at the risk of alienating southern Democrats.

The honor fell on a man who eight years earlier, bitterly disappointed at being passed over by Adlai Stevenson, had said: "I've come to like the Senate too much to want to spend my life waiting for somebody to catch cold."

If, as expected, he and President Johnson are elected next Tuesday, he stands a heartbeat from the presidency.

Humphrey, a rounded figure with 170 pounds or so draped on a five-foot, 11-inch frame, is the brightest light in the campaign—a man whose natural inclination to talk 24 hours a day is backed by a quick wit, an intellect and a genuine adoration of politics.

KEY CAMPAIGNER

President Johnson has used him as such, with Humphrey darting back and forth across the country to belabor the Republicans.

But the Humphrey of today, at 53, is a mellow, more cautious — and more valuable — man than the youngster of 37 who sought a Senate seat after two terms as mayor of Minneapolis.

One of his first national acts was to head at the 1948 Democratic convention a drive for a tougher civil rights plank than the hierarchy wanted. Humphrey won but laid the basis for the South's enduring dislike.

He was passed over for the vice-presidency in 1956. In 1960, seeking the presidential nomination, he was crushed early by John Kennedy.

But as Democratic whip in the Senate, he put into play some hard-earned lessons in conciliation and did a good job in easing legislation through.

Humphrey's father was a druggist and the senator took his university education in Minnesota by degrees, taking time off during the depression to earn more money and to wed Muriel Fay Buck, who is a seasoned campaigner in her own right. They have a daughter and three sons.

Avoid violent debate on premature report from flag committee

OTTAWA (CP)—For a few moments Thursday afternoon there was a good chance that the Commons flag committee report wouldn't see the light of day and the House would be thrown back into the kind of turmoil that prevailed during the celebrated 1956 pipeline debate.

In those days of motions of closure, points of order, questions of privilege and challenges to the Speaker's rulings, no one—least of all the government—ever knew what would happen as each day's sitting of the Commons began.

The government might have its business all neatly lined up for a day, but the Opposition as a whole or any minor party could raise a point and make it so dramatic that the whole day's business was sidetracked.

Such was the atmosphere when the House met Thursday afternoon. A few minutes earlier, members bought the Ottawa Citizen at its usual time in the House of Commons cafeteria. There, spread over the top of the front page, was a first-hand report of the committee's proceedings by committee member Grant Deachman, Liberal MP for Vancouver Quadra.

MEANT TO BE PRIVATE
The committee had met in private and there was no official word—nor was there supposed to be—on the proceedings until the committee report was tabled and officially made public.

When the quorum bells finished ringing and Speaker Alan Macnaughton called order in the Commons, the first order of business was "presenting reports by standing and select committees." But at that point Donald MacInnis (PC—Cape Breton South) jumped up with a question of privilege, which takes precedence over all other House business. He complained of a slight to the House by publication of Mr. Deachman's report.

At that point, the proceedings hung by a slim thread. Questions of privilege are frequently raised—sometimes several times a day—to air a grievance. But rarely does one get any further unless the member raising it moves a formal motion for House action. Such a motion could be to send the case to the Commons committee on privileges.

COULD HAVE DELAYED
And such a motion is debatable, if it is in order. A debate could have been precipitated Thursday which would have lasted at least until the dinner adjournment and possibly until 10 p.m. All that chairman Herman M. Batten (L—Humber-St. George's) of the flag committee could have done then would have been to wait his turn.

But Mr. MacInnis did not end his statement of complaint with a motion. Speaker Macnaughton ruled the House should proceed with its program. And so the flag committee report was tabled.

But there probably will be a lot of fireworks on the incident for weeks to come.

Mr. Deachman later explained that when he wrote the article for The Citizen, and for a number of other newspapers published outside Ottawa, he didn't expect copies to reach members' hands before the flag committee report was tabled.

Open Halifax winter fair today

HALIFAX (CP)—Competition for prizes valued at about $45,000 will begin today as the second annual Atlantic Winter Fair opens its nine-day run here.

Mary Lou Farrell of St. John's, Nfld., Miss Dominion of Canada, will assist Agriculture Minister J. W. Akerley of Nova Scotia in the official opening of the giant industrial and agricultural fair tonight. She will leave Nov. 3 to compete in the Miss World contest in London, England.

President Don Oland of the Atlantic Winter Fair attributes a big increase in the fair's entry list to "the interest aroused by last year's exhibition coupled with the quality connotation attached to it."

The list has climbed to 2,450, more than double last year's figure. The horse show registration has increased by 55 to 187 and entries in the heavy horse division number 38 more than last year.

Other big increases have been recorded in the beef and vegetable divisions.

"With participation in one fair under their belts exhibitors are proud now to be able to say they are coming back," Mr. Oland said.

At convention in Bedford

Sunday school needs discussed

BEDFORD—(Special)—There was an excellent attendance at the Sunday School teachers' convention held on Saturday Oct. 24 in the United Church hall. The conference was for Sunday School teachers of all denominations in the Clarenceville, Bedford and Brome area, representatives being present from Brome, Noyan, Iron Hill, Clarenceville, West Brome, Phillipsburg, Mystic, Stanbridge East and Bedford.

Rev. Peter Macaskill, pastor of the Bedford Wesley Church, opened the meeting with prayer and a Bible reading.

The leader of the conference was the Rev. Anthony C. Capon, M.A., General secretary of the children's special service mission and the Scripture Union of Canada, who comes from St. Anthony's, Newfoundland.

Rev. Alan Cameron of Clarenceville and the Rev. J. Davidson of Brome attending the meeting.

Keen interest was taken in the various items on the excellent program, which opened with, "Know yourself, know your children". Points brought out were: the biggest single influence a teacher has on a child, is through the kind of person the teacher is rather than through his teaching; the need of teacher's interest in class was stressed, as children are keen to understand one's attitude regarding church and religion; it is important that teacher spend adequate time on preparation of lesson material, that classes may be interesting and not bore children; children should enjoy Sunday School and associate Jesus Christ with happiness, Christianity should not be presented in a heavy and dull manner; at the present time, some Sunday School material is written by people who do not understand or know children.

Visual aids are of great help, as children, especially the younger ones, absorb more by showing than telling, the simplest aids are the best, black boards used for drawings are of great help.

VALLEY WEAVERS GUILD

The Valley Weavers Guild visited Mrs. Weidenfeld, a master weaver who now resides in Waterloo. Mrs. Weidenfeld came to Canada from Germany where she studied the art of weaving for eight years and has her certificate as a master weaver.

When coming to Canada she brought along two very primitive looms, one an upright on which she makes rugs and floor runners, which with wall hangings are her specialty.

These very different rugs are made from raw wool in its natural clipped form. Many are made in natural colors, while others are in various colors; for these she dyes the wool and for the most part uses natural dyes.

She also does other types of weaving too, but specializes in these wool rugs and runners.

This very different type of work was most interesting for the visiting group. Mrs. Weidenfeld also demonstrated her spinning ability. Her spinning wheel, also brought from her native country, was a most compact little item compared to the Canadian wheel.

About 14 enjoyed the hospitality of this very efficient weaver and came away with a new friendship and many worthwhile ideas.

Previous to this visit the regular monthly meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Arthur White, Sherbrooke, with 12 ladies present.

Mrs. Ernest Johnston, president and welcomed four new members. Mrs. Howard Smyth and Mrs. John George of Milby and Mrs. Marchand and Mrs. Emond of Sherbrooke, bringing the membership to 15.

Many phases of work were under discussion and the president demonstrated the making of fringe and a four sided braid.

Also displayed were place mats and a catalogue bag by Mrs. William Vanhorne, and a double weave place mat, made in Scotland by Mrs. Hubert Johnston. Mrs. White had some beautiful weaving and handicrafts she had collected on her overseas tour.

One Sure Way to Happiness.

Many young people, frantically running in pursuit of happiness, are never going to capture it. "Nothing makes it more unapproachable," says Canadian author, June Caldwell, "than trying to find it." ...But there is a 5-step way that has worked, and June Caldwell tells you what it is! Don't miss this article in the November Reader's Digest, now on sale everywhere.

Mrs. Harold Hunting invited the members to her home for the November 5, meeting and at the close the hostess served a lunch.

For and about Women

Holt-Philip marriage

The marriage of Kathleen Audrey, daughter of Mr. A. J. Philip, Town of Mt. Royal, formerly of Windsor, and the late Mrs. Philip, to Mr. Douglas Philip, son of Mr. and Mrs. Osborne Holt, Magog, took place recently at St. Patrick's Church, Sherbrooke.

Mrs. Rosario Moisan officiated at the double ring ceremony. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Laurette Codere Brunelle. The altar was adorned with white button poms and the sanctuary was decorated with white multicolored gladioli and chrysanthemums.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of white peau de soie of original styling, the bodice having elbow length sleeves with a round neckline, which featured chintilly lace applique at the waist. The skirt with soft pleats at the back fell into a chapel length train. She wore a single strand of pearls, a gift of the groom. Her veil in chapel length, of silk tulle, was held in place by a rose of peau de soie. She carried a cascade of white gardenias, with sprigs of Scottish heather.

Miss Patricia Philip, twin sister of the bride was maid of honor, and wore a gown of autumn gold peau de soie fashioned on lines similar to the bride's gown. She wore a matching butterfly bow in her hair and carried a bouquet of gold and bronze baby chrysanthemums with sprigs of bitter sweet.

Mr. Stephen Trew was best man for the groom and the ushers were Messrs. John Philip and Gerald Holt, brothers of the couple.

Mrs. Holt, mother of the groom, was in a suit of teal blue silk with a black satin hat and accessories, and a corsage of pink sweetheart roses.

At a reception held for 60 guests, the bride's table was centred with a three tier wedding cake, flanked by white aster chrysanthemums.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Holt left for a trip to New York State. For travelling the bride chose a brown and white wool tweed suit, a brown hat and accessories, and wore a yellow orchid corsage.

Ruth Millett 'Wolf' outfoxes self

"My husband persists in making a fool of himself by playing the dashing Lathario at every party we attend. He paws all the women guests and, when I complain later, he says I'm jealous."

These words are from a wife who is fed up with her husband's juvenile antics. She is not jealous, just ashamed He makes her look just as absurd as he is, since she has to put up with his foolishness or create a public scene.

That, I think, is a fairly typical reaction from a woman married to a man who thinks he is irresistible to women and is forever making a pass at some other woman in front of his wife.

Yet, I'll bet there isn't a married wolf living who would concede that his wife's objections might spring from shame, rather than jealousy.

So I don't see much hope for this wife being able to make her husband understand how she really feels.

He'll mark her attitude up to jealousy, because that is flattering to his ego. And it would be awfully deflating to admit to himself that she is really ashamed for him and for her self.

Nor is there much chance that time will change him. Men of that type just seem to get worse and worse as time goes on. More and more, they need to assure themselves that they are irresistible to women.

It's just a question of whether his wife loves him enough to put up with him as is, or whether she doesn't.

Only the wife herself can answer that question. But if any "playboy" husband happens to read this column I have some words of warning to him.

Don't be surprised and shocked if one day you "play" yourself right out of your marriage.

Twelve to contest mayoralty, council races

4,000 eligible to vote in Magog elections

CHARLES CATCHPAUGH
(Record correspondent)

Monday, November 2nd, Magog's 4,000 eligible voters will cast votes for a mayor and council to serve over the next three years.

Nomination deadline was last Monday afternoon, and left three candidates contesting the mayor's post. Defending his office, Mayor Ernest Simard, who resides in Magog East has made a definite play for English votes, noting that he is opposed to separatism, and shall as always work for the minority's equal rights. He is demanding that Magog interests be protected, and that increased efforts be made to gain industry.

Former mayor, Maurice Theroux, who is seeking the mayor's seat for the sixth consecutive time, won three of the past five elections, and held office in 1948-49, and from 1956 till 1962. Mr. Theroux says he is contesting this election at the request of a ratepayers' petition. He noted, the 980 who signed the petition is a greater number of votes than realized by Mr. Simard in the last election. Basing his platform on carefully controlled administration, and closer co-operation between all municipal elements, Maurice Theroux said, "I am asking for more understanding between Magog's various organizations and groups."

Girard Laurendeau, a newcomer to the city's municipal election arena, former president of the Magog Chamber of Commerce, and owner of a print shop and stationery store in Magog, has a campaign based on greater community progress. Largely supported by the city's businessmen, Mr. Laurendeau's platform is aimed at providing greater progress and prosperity for Magog, and the candidate's most publicized slogan is, "I am only concerned over Magog's future!"

Although the campaign has been quiet, observers note that in the past, Magog's voting public is apparently again divided into supporting groups, largely determined by district locations, which find Mr. Simard alone in the east end of Magog, and the western sector split between his opponents. Ernest St. Jacques, a masonry contractor, who heads up the community's public works department, and represents Ward No. 2, was returned unopposed. Gerard Page, who has publicly threatened to withdraw from municipal politics on several occasions was also unchallenged, and to the surprise of many, will again represent Ward No. 5.

Recognized as a staunch supporter of Mayor Simard in several keenly fought council deliberations, Mr. Page is employed by the Dominion Textile Company Limited in the local factory.

Magog's only English language representative on the municipal council, H. Malcolm Standish, representative in the community's largest section, Ward No. 1, is being challenged by former alderman, Oliva Hamel. Mr. Standish, a former army major, successful businessman and authority on electricity, has over the past three years taken charge of the city's hydro plant. Often standing alone, demanding what he considered right for the city and his ward, Mr. Standish's role in municipal politics over the last term can only be described as trying.

Questioned on his intentions for the next term, if elected, Mr. Standish said, "I'll only be content working for what I think good for the city!"

An equally determined man, and owner of a trucking and contracting firm, Oliva Hamel held the Ward No. 1 seat prior to the last three years. A polite, mild mannered man, Mr. Hamel is insisting that to have a successful functioning council, there must be more harmony, and said publicly at his nomination, "I will if elected, work for greater directive collaboration in the city!"

Three candidates are looking for votes in Ward No. 3. Julien Lagare, a barber, is being opposed by a general contractor, Gerard L. Longpre, and a former painting contractor, now retired, Edouard Lacasse.

"I want to complete the work I've started," Mr. Lagare has said, while Mr. Lacasse has said, "I'm ready to give the city three years!" Gerard Longpre, has said, "I want to do something to increase industry here."

In Ward No. 4, the councillor holding office for the greatest number of years, Armand Pouliot, foreman with the Dominion Textile Company, simply notes, "I hope to continue my endeavour with the council for good city administration." Mr. Pouliot's opponent, Gaston Huot, a shoe store merchant, has gone on record as saying, "I'll give my complete co-operation toward bringing more industry and benefits to Magog."

Armand Gagne, a carpenter, and present representative in council for Ward No. 6 stated, "I shall continue to work for the city's good."

News flashes from around the world

NEW YORK (AP)—Talk of a U.S. steel price rise died today, apparently spied by disapproving word from President Johnson.

But the question remained: Was it a pre-election lull on the part of steel leaders who have warmly argued for a boost recently, or has the president—given glowing profit reports—given them enduring pause?

The Johnson point that steel profits, anemic two years ago, now are swelling rapidly was underscored Thursday when Bethlehem Steel Corp., the No. 2 U.S. producer, reported that July 9 producer earnings had jumped 105 per cent from year earlier, rising to $36,300, or 76 cents a common share.

99th birthday
MANSONVILLE — (Special) — Congratulations are being extended to Mr. Volney Atwell, who on November 3, will celebrate his 99th birthday.

QUEBEC (CP)—Reports that Quebec's attorney-general, Rene Hamel, 54, is about to be named a Superior Court judge gained strength Thursday as the result of a brief cabinet meeting.

It was reliably reported the July 9 producer earnings cabinet meeting had been called to accept his resignation as attorney-general but it lasted only a few moments.

CAIRO (AP)—Sudan got a new civilian government today, but President Ibrahim Abboud remained chief of state and his power appeared only slightly diminished.

Everyone will benefit from the increased revenues, he said, not only those who have interests directly or indirectly with skiing. There will be half a million people spending an average of $14 a day, and when you have that much fresh capital in circulation everybody wins, he said.
It is imperative that everyone in this area start planning immediately for 1967, he said. The ski areas of this region have been increasing steadily in the last few years and no one wants to miss the boat in 1967. To take advantage of the great number of tourists Expo '67 year will bring, the region needs as much money as possible as early as possible, and if the automobile opens for the ski season it will be a step in the right direction.

In the 1962-63 season there were 4 ski stations serving 193,000 skiers; Jay Peak, Sutton, North Hatley, Mount Orford. For the 1963-64 season there were five stations, with the addition of Mount Echo, serving 251,000 skiers. This year there are seven, he said, with the additions of Bromont and Glenn Mountain.
The Laurentian ski areas put a ceiling on their expansion programs, said Mr. Messara, but the Townships ski areas are doing no such thing. Mount Orford, he said, will have invested over $4 of a million dollars to accommodate skiers this year.

Skiing is the major winter tourist attraction in this region, he said, and everyone stands to gain if the automobile is open to the skiers.

these on an average salary, it would mean that a whole town with a 10,000 population could have lived conveniently on this revenue for at least one year. The total area of the Eastern Townships' Autoute, from Montreal to Oremville, including the right of way, reaches almost 11,000,000 square feet, or more than 3,100 acres.
In comparison, all the land to be used by Expo '67 will not exceed an area of 934 acres.
If the various structures, bridges and overpasses built on the Eastern Townships' Autoute, were placed end to end, they would reach a total length of 4.5 miles, or about six times the length of Mercier bridge.

Country Notebook

By WALKER RILEY

We have had an item on beef for the past two weeks. And at the risk of going overboard on the subject, here is another. Let's just call it a series.

But I had no sooner sent the "Notebook" off to press last week when a very interesting report came to my desk. It forecasts that by 1980 Canadians will be consuming, in total, just twice as much beef. And 1980 after all is only sixteen years away. It is worth a moment to think about it.

Who will raise the extra 2½ million slaughter animals? Where will we find the extra 11 million acres of land for forage production, an area almost equal to all the improved land in Quebec? Who will finish these animals? Where will the calves come from?

The report doesn't attempt to answer these questions, but it does make some predictions which may help individuals fit themselves into the picture. It assumes such things, of course, as that no atomic bomb will have dropped, that we will still want to eat beef and can pay for it, and that we won't be yet drinking soybean milk.

Here are the highlights:

— In 1980, population of Canada will be 27,000,000.

— Each Canadian will eat 95 lbs. beef and veal — an increase of 24 lbs. (U.S. citizens now eat 100 lbs., Argentinians 200 lbs. per year.)

— 2.3 million more slaughter animals needed.

— 7.9 million more beef cows.

— Dairy cows numbers will not change.

— Therefore, total veal consumption will remain steady. Per capita consumption will drop to 5 lbs.

— Slaughter cattle will go to market a month sooner but slightly heavier.

— No significant change in exports or imports.

— 11 million more acres needed for forage.

— 4 million more acres needed for grain.

The full report is in the August issue of the Economic Analyst, a publication of the Economics Branch, Canada Department of Agriculture. If you want a copy, I assume you can get one without charge by writing for it to the above address. The significant thing to me is that dairy cows numbers will not change, but beef cows will more than double.

Last week, I was wondering where all the dairy bull calves went. This same report gives a partial answer. There are 3 million dairy cows in Canada. One million calves go for veal each year. Allowing for a calf crop less than 100 per cent, for half being heifers, it looks as if almost all the bull calves end up as veal.

What would happen if half these bull calves were raised as beef steers instead? It would take care of one quarter of the forecast increase in demand. It is worth a thought as a second enterprise on a dairy farm?

Now, just to be impartial, let's talk about milk. At the annual meeting of the Na-

Bulbs will give spring beauty

By JOHN BRADSHAW

The spring flowering bulbs such as tulips, daffodils, hyacinths, crocuses and the like are such versatile flowers.

They not only provide a gay array of flowers for almost half the outdoor gardening season but they can be easily forced into flower indoors to brighten up our homes when the ground is frozen and winter holds sway.

They're easy to force into flower because the blooms are already formed inside the bulb when you get them from your bulb dealer.

Forcing doesn't mean that you use high temperatures to obtain the flowers well ahead of the normal flowering season out in the garden.

TEMPERATURE

What we really do is to give them the same cold temperature treatment in the beginning to allow them to form their roots and then we give them spring temperatures well in advance of normal to bring on the foliage and flowers.

Not all of the spring flowering bulbs will force well indoors and so check your bulb catalogue carefully and select only those marked suitable for this purpose.

Such bulbs must be of top quality and must be round and plump. At this season of the year your bulb dealer will no doubt have some good buys because the planting time is drawing to a close.

At the time you pick up your supply of bulbs at the bulb dealer you may as well obtain suitable containers and the correct soil mixture. Best results are always obtained by growing the bulbs in soil in clay flower pots or bulb pans.

EXCEPTION

Hyacinths are the exception to this rule and can be grown in either soil or water.

Growing them the latter way is not always successful and I'd recommend that you grow most of your hyacinths in soil and just try a few bulbs in the special glass containers using water.

The ideal soil mixture for forcing would consist of equal parts of top soil, humus and sand. One of the commercial African Violet soil mixtures would also be satisfactory.

Home gardeners who wish to force in quantity can set the bulbs in deep wooden flats, give them the necessary period in the dark and cold temperature and then move them to any desired container when the bulbs first start to show color. This is the way the professional flower grower does it, with the bulbs receiving no setback because of the transplanting.

CONTAINERS

The most suitable containers for the average person to use are the clay bulb pans which are wide at the top and shallow in depth. They are not a bit like the taller and narrower clay pots we use for most house plants.

In planting your bulbs cover the drainage hole of the bulb pan with several pieces of broken clay pot to ensure adequate drainage.

Next cover the broken pieces with peat moss, compost or some other form of humus, one inch in depth.

Then place enough of the soil mixture in the pot so that when the bulbs are set in place their tips will be about one inch below the top of the pot.

Fill enough soil around the bulbs and firm so that the tips are just visible above the surface of the soil.

The bulbs should be set fairly close together but make sure they don't touch each other. Half an inch apart would be the correct distance.

In firming, pack the soil well around the bulb to make sure there is no air space left.

Once the potting up is finished be sure and mark each pan as to the color and variety. Then give them a good soaking with water at room temperature.

The best way to do this is to stand the pots in a partially filled sink, pail or pan until the surface of the soil becomes completely moist.

DARKNESS

All the hardy bulbs must have a period in darkness and cold so that they can develop the strong root system before top growth is started.

The average person is so impatient to see results that he doesn't leave the bulbs in the cold and the dark for a long enough period.

Ten to twelve weeks is the minimum period before you can safely bring most of the bulbs into the light.

The Doctor Says

DISCHARGED TB PATIENT IS ON ROAD TO RECOVERY

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT M.D.

Q—My husband was recently discharged from the hospital recovering from tuberculosis. Can the children and I still catch it from him?

A—In most states it is illegal for a person with contagious tuberculosis to live in a house where there are children. For this reason I feel sure your husband would not have been sent home unless his disease was no longer contagious, even though further treatment is required to complete his cure and minimize the danger of a relapse.

Q—My husband is 80 years old and has always had good health but in the last few months he has been unable to control urination. Is there some simple remedy he could get for this? He refuses to see a doctor.

A—The most likely cause of this condition is an enlarged prostate. Although this makes it hard to start the flow of urine it also leads to overdistention of the bladder and passing of urine day or night. There is no medicine for this condition but it can be relieved by removal of the prostate. Since he can't do this by himself, he'd better summon up his courage and go to a doctor. The operation has been greatly improved in recent years. If he chooses to neglect this disease it can only get worse and may damage his kidneys through persistent back pressure of the urine.

Q—How effective is Sparteine in combating fatigue? Is it harmful?

A—Potassium and magnesium aspartates (Sparteine) cause a slow but steady decrease in chronic fatigue. Its effectiveness cannot be judged until you have taken it for at least two weeks. Then you yourself are the best judge of how effective it is for you. This is strictly a prescription drug. Side effects include nausea, abdominal discomfort and diarrhea but these can usually be controlled by adjusting the dosage.

Q—How soon can an adult play all sports after having an operation on his lumbar vertebral disk? What things can't be done after this operation?

A—In the early weeks after this and most other major operations moderate exercise such as walking or swimming is advisable, taking care not to become over tired. After four or five months there should be no reason why you can't indulge in any sport to which you were formerly accustomed if you work into it gradually and it doesn't make you uncomfortable.

Q—A letter of thanks was received from Mrs. Weyland, also one from the social service secretary Mrs. Westman, Danville. A receipt was received from Mrs. Dunkley for pledges and from Mrs. Burrows for freight expense. Mrs. Stewart Laurie, of Westmount, wrote acknowledging 12 pounds of old nylon for the Grenfell Mission.

It was decided to send the usual contributions to the Maple Mount Home at Cookshire.

The Christmas bales have been sent to Harrington Harbour, Labrador. Church calendars were sold. Mrs. Weyland reported on the Thank offering. The Corporate communion will be celebrated on Sunday Nov. 22nd.

The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Worth Fishop on Nov. 17.

LADIES GUILD
The regular meeting of the Ladies' Guild was also held at the home of Mrs. MacKay.

A donation was gratefully received. The work committee turned over $25 to the guild treasurer.

The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Worth Fishop on November 17th.

Lunch was served by the hostesses.

START NEW MINE
The discovery of a reef containing more than 100,000 tons of payable lead-zinc ore in Auckland province, New Zealand, is leading to the establishment of the first mine of this type there.

Do-it-yourself

Some simple steps silence squeaky floorboards

Squeaking floors are more annoying than they are dangerous. Only occasionally does a noisy floor indicate any structural weakness.

In most cases a few simple repairs will cure the condition. Floors that squeak and groan every time you walk across them indicate loose boards in that location. Possibly the finished flooring has pulled away from the sub-flooring or that the latter has pulled away from the joists—or it could be a combination of both. (The joists are the heavy beams which support the floor. The finished floor boards are generally nailed at right angles to the joists.)

The obvious solution is to tighten up the loose boards that are causing the squeak. If the floor is located over an unfinished basement the task is relatively easy.

First locate the offending boards from below. Have someone walk across the floor above while you observe in the basement. Each board should be stepped on. Mark the areas that seem to be giving trouble.

Thin wooden wedges driven between the joists and the floor boards will generally end the squeaking. If the noise persists, use a reinforcing block—a piece of 2x4—nailed to the side of the joist and pressed firmly against the underside of the floor.

There are times when this remedy won't work. There also are instances when you can't get to the floor from below. The procedure is the same in each case—attack the problem from above.

Attack From Above
Again, locate the loose boards. Drive a pair of 3-inch finishing nails into the board. Drive each nail in at an angle. Each pair should form a V with the points crossing.

Locate joists by tapping. Sound will be solid, not hollow.

Bishop's Gaiters could wrap up Eastern OSLAA championship on Saturday against Macdonald Aggies Bishop's University football Gaiters return to action Saturday at 1 p.m. for their last league game. With a win over the visiting Macdonald College Aggies, the Bishop's gridgers can wrap up another Eastern OSLAA championship.

Playing in a three-team division this year, the Gaiters have recorded a trio of top-sided victories, crushing the St. Patrick's College Gaels 40-1 and 38-0, and downing the Macdonald Aggies 37-8.

Much to the dismay of his opponents Coach Bruce Coulter has come up with a slightly revised lineup which seems even stronger than the one he used early in the year. Mike Sommerville, a perennial all-star, has moved into a halfback slot, while Clem Chapple has teamed up with Brock Thomson to form a powerful full-back duo.

One of the advantages of the new formation is that it enables Sommerville to become a pass receiver on nearly every play. The speedy Ontario lad justified Coulter's manoeuvring last Saturday as he caught five passes for 71 yards against St. Pat's, including two touch down strikes.

All-star selectors will have great difficulty this year in choosing non-Gaiters for any position. Bishop's has come up with a valuable discovery in freshman Willie Mitchell, who has guided the locals to five wins so far this year, two coming in exhibition matches.

The only loss sustained by the Gaiters this fall was a 27-20 defeat at the hands of the Notre Dame de Grace Maple Leafs.

No such thing as a 'nothing game' says Ottawa Coach Frank Clair as they prepare for Argos tomorrow

Though fans and some players have come to view games played late in the season when final standings have been decided as "nothing" games, Frank Clair of Ottawa Rough Riders couldn't agree less.

There isn't any question left as to who the Eastern Football Conference champions are, but there's still a tough playoff set to get through and Clair, Ottawa coach, is hoping to hone his sagging Riders back into winning form Saturday when they meet the Argonauts in Toronto.

Ottawa is firmly in second place behind Hamilton Tiger-Cats while Toronto is just as firmly in last place behind Montreal Alouettes.

"I don't think there is such a thing as a nothing game," said Clair Thursday in an interview.

"The next game" is the sudden-death eastern playoff semi-final against Montreal Nov. 7 in Ottawa to decide which team enters the two-game, total-point final with Hamilton starting Nov. 14 in Ottawa.

The game will be broadcast on the CBC television eastern network starting at 3 p.m. AST. The final game of the regular schedule in Montreal Sunday, will be on the CTV eastern network, also starting at 3 p.m. Hamilton coach Ralph Sazio says he may go to his bench for the game against Montreal.
