THE SARAH MAXWELL MEMORIAL

If the evidence in to-day's Star is typical of what is to come this community is not unappreciative of the heroic self-sacrifice of Sarah Maxwell, a name that should go down to posterity with those of Florence Nightingale and Grace Darling, all of whom in saving others were perfectly oblivious of their own danger. The letters published to-day are all worth reading, if one would form an accurate idea of the sentiments of the people, and when we say the sentiments of the people we mean the sentiments of old and young, for many of the gifts while given in the names of their children are given by mothers and fathers, who have their own boys and girls constantly exposed to danger.

These gifts are a thankoffering for the Divine love that inspired Miss Maxwell. They are a message of encouragement and a basis for hope. Toronto asks the question if Montreal has the spirit to rise to the occasion.

The letters published to-day and to be published in The Star in the next few days will answer this question. When the Star first made the announcement that it intended presenting when completed to each of the first one hundred child subscribers, a beautiful portrait of Miss Maxwell, we underestimated the feelings of the people, and on Saturday raised it to 250. We now raise the number to 1,000. We beg to acknowledge the kind offer of The Standard to issue a Special Memorial Number, containing group pictures of the public school children who are subscribers to the fund, together with a beautiful portrait of Miss Maxwell, poems by teachers and prose by prominent clergymen, and to present to each of the children subscribers a copy of The Standard Memorial Number. The Standard is in a position to make a beautiful memento of this Memorial Number, and we are glad to acknowledge the spirit of its publishers.

"Greater Love Hath No Man Than This That a Man Lay Down His Life for His Friends"

2ND INSTALMENT OF ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

Dear Mr. Editor.

My mother has been reading to me about poor Miss Maxwell, and the little children who were burned at school, and all about the fire. Miss Maxwell was kind and good to save all those little children. I am so sorry she died, I hope the gentlemen will put up some Fire escapes at school. Don't you? I expect they feel very sorry for the poor little children and wish they had made some fire escapes. I have only got 10 cents, and I am sending that to you to help buy a memorial for Miss Maxwell. If I get any more cents I will send them to you. I wish I had more money I would send it all for Miss Maxwell. I hope you will get enough money to buy a very nice memorial.

BATTLING NELSON IS LAYING FOR GANS

Special to the Montreal Star.

New York, March 4.—Battling Nelson, who returned from Europe yesterday, said:

"Did I come back to this country to fight? No. There is only one lightweight on this side or in the world that I want to fight, and he is afraid of me. Now understand, I am not hungry for fight with Gans. It's just this way, he got a rotten decision over me, and it's the only mark against me. I want to wipe it out and show the public that I can lick this fakir any time we start.

"I won't fight anybody else. If Gans is afraid to fight me I am through with the game. There are only two lightweights in the ring now who will draw in a championship battle. If we can't get together, I am not going to chase around fighting dubs. I will fight him on any fair terms. I won't agree to a bonus, because I am a better drawing card than he is, and he hasn't any right to one. If he will make 133 pounds ringside and fight to a finish he can cut the money any way he wants to and make any kind of side bet he wants. That is, so long as I get as much for winning, if I win, as he gets if he wins. That's all there is to the dope on Gans—any time he is willing to make a reasonable offer I will be with him strong."

Professor Korn, of the Munich University, has greatly improved his apparatus for transmitting photographs over telegraph wires. He has succeeded in sending photographs and sketches six or seven inches square in this manner from Munich to Nuremberg, a distance of 100 miles, in from ten to fifteen minutes.

TORONTO FEELS HURT AT DURNAN'S DEFEAT

Toronto, March 4.—Toronto scullers are dissatisfied with the beating of Edward Durnan, in the match with Towns for the world's sculling championship. Up to the time previous to the race, all Toronto were confident that Durnan would defeat Towns, and the report that the Canadian had been beaten was received with much surprise.

The admirers of the Toronto "wellder of the ash" believe that the heat and other climatic conditions of Australia had much to do with the defeat of the champion. At first Toronto sportsmen were on the point of cabling Durnan to remain in Australia, for the purpose of arranging and rowing another match for $5,000. It was seen, however, that the Canadian would be severely handicapped by the climate. Mr. "Lol" Solman, however, offers to back Durnan against Towns for the sum of $5,000, the race to be pulled off on Toronto Bay. Expenses will be supplied liberally.

No word has yet been received from either Durnan or his party, but it is believed he will sail for home March 11th.

Express Hockey.

The staff at Bonaventure depot of the Canadian Express Company met the clerks of the manager's office of the same company, at the Victoria rink in a very fast and exciting game of hockey. The manager's office again proved their superiority over the different departments they have met this season, winning by the close score of 2 to 1.

MAY TRY HARD TO BEAT WANDERERS

As things stand now, Shamrocks and Montreal seem to be determined to mix matters up if they can in the question of the Championship of the Senior Hockey League.

At the last meeting of the League, there was some informal talk between the members of the Montreal Executive and Mr. McGee, of Ottawa, about the possibility of getting Shamrocks to agree to cancel the match on Wednesday next here with the Wanderers, and allow Ottawa to play off their match with Montreal.

At any rate, the last thing heard was a sort of a tacit agreement, that as Mr. Rolly Elliot the president of the Montrealers' Club was to go to the Ottawa - Wanderer match, to which Mr. McGee promised to get him admission, they would talk the matter over then, and try to devise means of getting the Shamrocks to give up their date next Wednesday for the benefit of the Montrealers and Ottawas.

This, however, does not seem to suit the Shamrocks at all, for one of their principal officers comes out with a plain and definite statement to-day,—that not only are the Shamrocks opposed to the giving up of their date on Wednesday, but they have determined, if possible, to do what the Montrealers have threatened to do, and that is to import two or three very fast forward men to fight against the Wanderers, and, if it can be done, beat them.

The plan has gone so far that they have actually written and wired to the managers of the Pittsburg and Soo hockey teams, to lend them a couple of men to whom they will pay a pretty good remuneration for the time that their services are required here.

The gentleman in question who made the statement said:

"We are in the hole as it is, and we might just as well be two or three hundred dollars further in the hole on the chance of making a good gate. For a couple of hundred dollars we ought to be able to get two or three good men to help us out on our forward line against the Wanderers. We are trying very hard to get them, and we are now in communication with McSwiggan and others for that purpose.

CONSTIPATION
CLOGS
THE BOWELS

No other cause produces so much sickness as constipation, and therefore it is dangerous to allow the bowels to become clogged up. Bad blood, dyspepsia, headaches, biliousness, boils, pimples, and piles, are all caused by constipation.

Avoid all of these troubles by the use of nature's remedy for all diseases of the stomach, bowels and blood. It acts on the bowels and promotes their free and regular action, curing constipation and all troubles which arise from it. It has been on the market for over thirty years so you are not using a new and untried remedy. B.B.B. has cured thousands of others and will cure you. Mr. B. Woodcock, Nashwaak Bridge, N.S., writes: "For over two years my wife was troubled with constipation. She tried several physicians but could get no relief, but after taking three bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters she was completely cured and is to-day in good health. My wife and I cannot speak too highly of B.B.B.

LACHINE WON FIRST IN MOUNTAIN RACE

The Emeralds had a bad day for the first open steeplechase they have held for a long time, but that did not discourage them a bit, and there were quite a number of people to see them start, if for nothing else than to see Ald. Tom O'Connell, who for years has been such a familiar figure on the lacrosse field, handle the pistol.

He got them off pretty well, but it was hard work climbing up the hill. That was nothing, however, to the gully, which was as slippery, if not more so than the Park Slide during the slipperiest day of its existence.

The men were permitted to undress in big M. A. A. A. club house on Peel street, and that made things fairly pleasant at the start.

After they had once managed to clamber up the gully, things went fairly well, and when the first three reached Lumkins, which was the finish, as in years gone by, before the Athletic Club House, which has now gone to wrack and ruin, was built, there was quite a little crowd of admirers to welcome them.

The three first men in and the winners of the Club Cup, the first gold medal presented by Alderman O'Connell, and the second gold medal known as the Kensington, were:

1. A. Young, Lachine, 19 min. 51 2-5 sec.
2. J. McCuaig, Montreal, 19 min. 54 2-5 sec.
3. W. Sauve, Lachine, 20 minutes.

There were no less than fifteen entries, which is a goodly number for such a trying race as that over the mountain, and for such a day as Saturday.

Alderman Tom O'Connell was starter, and the other officials were: Messrs. Smith, Lachine; Goodwyn, Holly; Bergevin, St. Jacques; Hooblin, Emeralds; and Bowie, Montreal.

President Benson of the Emeralds, and Mr. Lumsden, a celebrated veteran of the mountain, flagged the course.

FENCERS DO NOT FAVOR EITHER UNION

The other night, in M.A.A.A. committee rooms, there was a meeting of representatives of the different fencing clubs in the city, with reference to the forming of a Canadian Amateur Fencing Union. Dr. T. P. Shaw and Mr. Miller were present, representing the M.A.A.A., and McGill Fencing Clubs respectively, together with Prof. Nobbs, Mr. Brown and Mr. Desbarats, of the organizing committee.

Mr. Desbarats read a letter from the Toronto Y.M.C.A. Fencing Club, saying they supported the movement.

Dr. T. P. Shaw moved, seconded by Mr. Miller, that a Canadian amateur fencing union be organized upon the lines suggested by the organizing committee.

The question of holding the championship meet was then discussed, and it was resolved to adopt such rules and regulations as would enable any club or individual to enter whether of the C.A.A.U., or the Federation, provided their amateur status as fencers be satisfactory to the Canadian Amateur Fencing Union.

Montreal Swimmers Won.

The Montreal Swimming Club which has won many championships in the Aquatic world, added another to its long list at the M. A. A. A. Bath by defeating the Beaver of that Association by a score of 6 to 5 in a very fast and exciting game of water polo. The game started by Crowdy, M. A. A. A. securing the ball, and after a little fast play with the aid of McLean, scored M. A. A. A. 1; M. S. C., 0. This piece of work put new life into both teams and it did not take the boys from the Island long to even up. The Beavers scored two more before half time and the second half started with them in the lead. Zimmerman secured the ball and made a quick pass to Moore, who passed to Smyth the crack shot of the M. S. C. team which made the score M. A. A. A. 3; M. S. C. 2. The play now became faster than ever, both teams distinguishing themselves by performing feats which would have made a fish jealous. After a series of end to end play in which the M. S. C. scored 3 goals, and the Beavers 2, the time was called, 5 minutes given for rest, during which time Capt. C. McLean, had to leave to catch a train. Kennedy was forced to drop out owing to cramps. Wilson and Smythe went off to even up and the overtime play commenced. Zimmerman secured the ball, held it while Crutchlow sat on his neck for the space of 2 seconds and after breaking loose passed to Cathercole, who scored. It was a pretty piece of play and the M. S. C. certainly deserved their victory, the score was 6 to 5. Overtime 3 minutes. The following is the list of players and officials.

M.S.C. (6)		Beavers, (5).

Alexandras Defeated Evergreens.

In a fast and exciting game of hockey played on the St. Lawrence rink, the Alexandras defeated Evergreens by a score of 1 to 0.

The game was rough at all times and looked very much like the Ottawa-Wanderer match. The features of the game was the stopping by Powers, in goals, for Evergreens, who saved the score from being piled up by Alexandras. The line up and officials were as follows:—

Alexandras (1).		Evergreens (0).
W. Gillespie	Goals	J. Powers
J. Hale	Point	P. McGrath
C. Penk	C. point	J. Scully
W. Brown	Rover	W. Currie
E. Marnell	Centre	W. Rodden

West End Meth. hockey team defeated Montreal West in a fast game of hockey, played at Montreal West, by the score of 5 to 1.

Military circles have been convulsed over a case of discipline that recalls the problem of the irresistible force meeting the immovable obstacle. An officer ordered an enlisted man to go to church and the man refused. The officer had no right to give the order, but the enlisted man had no right to refuse. This extraordinary situation has been solved by transferring the enlisted man to another post as a mark of disapproval, and sending the officer to another post on temporary duty.

CURLERS VISIT CONVIVIAL LACHINE

Two rings from Montreal and Thistle journeyed to Lachine Saturday, on the invitation of the president of that club. Two games were played in the afternoon and two at night.

After the play the curlers dined, and the visitors were delighted with the hospitality of their rivals.

Following are the scores:

Bankers' Hockey League.

By the unexpected defeat of the Molson's Bank Hockey team on Tuesday by the Quebec-Union combination, first place in Section A. of the Bankers' League has been won by the Eastern Townships-Toronto team. Section B. has been won by the Bank of Montreal, last year's champions, without a defeat.

It now remains for these two teams to play off. As the Eastern Townships-Toronto team have only suffered one defeat, and that in the early part of the season, the play off between the two sections for the championship and Lord Strathcona Cup should furnish a close and well-contested game. Arrangements are now being made for this game, and it is expected to take place some time next weeks. The standing of the league is as follows:—

Section A.

	Won.	Lost.	Pts.
Eastern Townships-Toronto	5	1	10
Molsons	4	2	8
Quebec-Union	3	4	4
Sovereign-Ottawa	1	5	2

Section B.

	Won.	Lost.	Pts.
Bank of Montreal	4	0	8
Royal-Imperial	2	2	4
Commerce	0	4	0

Food Poisons.

90 Per Cent. of all Diseases the Result of Undigested Putrefying Foods.

Men of affairs, women of society and children with active brains are too often sedentary in their habits, giving little time to exercise. To this evil is added that of high and irregular living—as a result, the stomach cannot stand the demands made upon it. The abused and overtaxed stomach does not properly do the work of digestion, food taken in ferments and the poison permeates the whole system. The body loses in weight and becomes a prey for the attack of whatever disease it may encounter.

Did it ever occur to you how busy that stomach of yours is? It only holds three pints, but in one year you force it to take in 2,400 pounds of material, digest it and prepare it for assimilation into the blood. No wonder it rebels when overworked. We crowd it with steaks and pastry, irritate its juices with spices and acids, and expect the stomach to do its work. It can't do it.

All over the inner layer of the stomach are glands which secrete the juices necessary to digestion. The entrance of food into the stomach is the signal for these glands to do their work. The more the food, and the more indigestible, the greater the demand upon them and upon the muscles of the wall adjoining.

Think of the tons of high-seasoned game, sweetmeats and appetizers crammed into this little four-ounce mill, and then wonder, if you will, why you are dizzy or nauseated or constipated. Don't blame your stomach or curse your fate that you should be born so unfortunate. Blame yourself and apply the remedy.

First, get a small package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, taking one after each meal and at bed time. They are not a medicine, but a digestive. Your stomach is worn out and needs help, not medicine. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will do the work that the stomach fails to do. There's enough power in one grain of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to digest 3,000 grains of ordinary food, so you needn't fear that anything you eat will remain in your stomach undigested.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will rout the poison because they remove the cause—food fermentation. They are nature's own cure for dyspepsia. The host of troubles dyspepsia is father of cannot be numbered, for a healthy stomach is the source of all health.

Seize your opportunity before worse conditions confront you. Send to-day for a free trial package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They will bring your stomach relief. F. A. Stuart Co., 83 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Wanderers' Win Stunned Ottawa

Champions Played Opponents Off Their Feet in Stirring Hockey Struggle and Retained Title of Leadership in League.

Special Staff Correspondence:

Ottawa, March 4.—After years of waiting, and a score of disappointments, the thing has been done at last. Ottawa has been defeated at home by a team of the same league. It was not an accidental defeat. It was defeat administered by a team playing better hockey. The size of the score, Wanderer 10, Ottawa, 6, leaves little doubt as to the merits of the teams, and at this day the mere statement that any team has gone into the Capital, and severed ten times against that wonderful bunch of athletes, is in itself an eloquent story. It was a feat that was unexpected, so unexpected that previous to its performance no wild dreamer could have so drawn upon his imaginative faculties as to have predicted that the Wanderer lot would have gone to Ottawa and trimmed the terrible Senators at home. Yet that was what really happened on Saturday night, in Dey's rink, and the score—let it be repeated to dispel doubt—was Wanderer 10, Ottawa 6.

The general impression held previous to the match, was that Wanderer would try hard, and that Ottawa would win: indeed this impression gained ground to such an extent that it almost seemed to be a useless trip for Wanderers to make. It did seem that Ottawa would soundly thrash Wanderer, and then would follow a home and home series, such as was played last year.

So we poor humans thought, and so it happened that this was the occasion selected to show the constant error of human judgment. Ottawa was wrong, and the sharps and experts, and such people as talk knowingly of form, class and condition of ice, were wrong, too, and wrong to such an extent that the championship now rests with Wanderer, and Ottawa falls back from the promising position of a threatening candidate to the group of also-rans that go to make up the E.C.H.A. field, trailing after the leader.

A GENUINE SURPRISE.

It was a genuine surprise. To some it proved joyful, but it brought no cheer to Ottawa supporters and in the dying minutes of the match, that ear piercing screech from thousands of throats, which shrilled so exultantly in the early period, was stilled to the silence of the stupefied. But while the big crowd was silent, not all in the rink were silent. No, indeed, the faithful four hundred who had followed the team from the Metropolis, were ready, and their yells stirred the last minutes.

Surprising, well rather. Wanderer went to Ottawa in the position of a modern David going to meet a modern Goliath.

It is doubtful if this new David had the confidence of the ancient one, but it is certain that the newer Goliath had all the swagger and boast of the older chap, whose story should stand as an everlasting reminder that over-confidence is often fatal.

It looked like the old story all over again. Ottawa, sure of victory, overlooked some fundamental principles, principles that belong to all games; they were caught napping, and, being rudely disturbed, tried to recover lost ground by brainless tactics. Wanderers surprised Ottawa by sticking to the task in hand all the time, and, instead of fading away, held out during the game, showing in the end more reserve strength than the Senators. Wanderer men played the very best game that club has played since its rebellious inception, and if the team does nothing for years to come, the players can rest their laurels on the memory of a gallant victory won in Ottawa.

MADE PACE FOR OTTAWA.

Not only did Wanderer men stick to their task, but they cut loose and made the pace for Ottawa, and while the home lot were busy seeking to get to the "marked" men, others, unthought of and practically despised, were doing the real work. Without desiring to say a word in disparagement of Ernie Russell, it is highly probable that the poor exhibition he gave last winter in Ottawa, March 17 was the day, had something to do in Saturday's result. In the final of the famous series, Russell was a fifth wheel and his services were of little value. On Saturday Ernie Russell played a game that Bowie could well be proud of. Russell took a leaf out of Bowie's book and jumped for the proper spot near the goal, with the result that six tallies are credited to him alone. Not only did Russell loom large on the score sheet but he earned his goals, and a brace of them were taken after dashing, dodging runs.

Ottawa seemed to want to get at Hod Stuart. They did land Hod, and that gentleman left a gory souvenir in Dey's Rink to mark where he fell. He was "got at" early, probably after half a minute's play, but that nerved Stuart to his work, and he played the best game of this season, fully earning the high compensation given for his services. Stuart worked harder than in any previous game, and his work was truly useful. Not only did he work hard, but he played with keen judgment and proved adept in missing things. The crowd did not like Stuart, and he was frequenntly called "quitter," but his play was beyond cavil.

CALLED STUART "AFRAID."

It is quite true that he avoided occasional punishment, but I have always liked the player who has sense enough to avoid the cracks he can see. At one time the Ottawa rooters showered a chorus of hooting on Stuart's head for throwing away the puck rather than take a chance. In the last minutes of the match Alf. Smith cried out: "You're afraid to go down." But the score was built up by good work on Stuart's part, and by remaining away from trouble he was of greater value than a pugnacious miser, who would have spent most of his time in the timer's box.

The Wanderer lot worked well as a whole, and the individuals were up to the mark. The play was usually of the two men combination variety, and the useful feature of the team's play was the hearty assistance given by the defence. Both Stuart and Patrick went out with the puck; repeating tactics that have become familiar here since introduced by Kenora Thistles. There were only two lifts in the match Pulford being the first man to try the game. Patrick was the pick of the fourteen men, and it is the general opinion that his scoring play in the close of the first half was the turning point of the match. Patrick scored the seventh goal and sent Wanderers a point ahead, and the manner in which he went through the defence had a chilling effect on Ottawa hopes. Patrick's game was his season's best. The good work of Stuart and Patrick, backed by heady work displayed by Hern in goal, rounded out the Wanderer defence in fine style. The men aided the forwards grandly and showed readiness to jump into attack at al ltimes. This style of game was adopted also by Ottawa, but final results showed that Wanderer was more adept.

WANDERER FORWARDS GOOD.

The Wanderer forwards were steady and useful throughout; Russell sometimes rose to brilliancy, but on the whole their forte was steadiness rather than showiness. The pick of the line was Johnson, this despite the array of goals credited to Russell. Johnson worked with vim and life. He checked bravely and covered both wings on the follow back play. It was certainly the best game Johnson has yet played. The tall Wingman dashed back after Ottawa forwards, proving himself speedy on the heavy ice, and showing ability to catch the other fellows after a break away. Johnson showed ability to check as Ottawa forwards checked. He blocked in a useful way and his strength in this direction gave opportunities to his fellows. Glass played a similar style of game, his checking being of great benefit. Blachford was slow in the first half, but he worked hard during the second half, evidently having decided to save himself for the second thirty minutes.

Of the Ottawa line the Smiths were first, Alf and Harry trying gamely throughout. Alf particularly fighting to the very last. Harry Westwick was up to the standard, but Shore was not prominent. However, Shore worked with determination and he was always in the game.

On the defence Harvey Pulford played his usual game. Baird wanted to rough it all the time, but he was often eluded by the quick footed Wanderer lads and did not often reach the man.

A DIRTY INCIDENT.

It was a hard, rough match. The ice was heavy and on the slower surface it was easier than usual to reach the man, consequently there was a great deal of bodying and the boards often crashed from the impact of a victim. Apart from the incident in which Harry Smith figured and some of Baird's tricks, it was not a dirty game to the extent that some of the previous meetings have reached. The Ottawa men played hard, but their opponents stuck with them and it is probable that they gave as much as they took. The one bad incident was that in which Harry Smith reached his stick to Stuart's face, cutting the Wanderer man. Wanderer players showed good stuff in sticking at their task. Occasionally there were signs of timidity, or it might better be said that players showed good judgment in remaining away from impending trouble. There was a wide range of difference between the Wanderer team which won Saturday and that which almost a year ago suffered defeat, but won the championship and the cup. They looked cheap champions then; the gallant work of Lester Patrick alone standing out from the worse than mediocrity displayed by a majority of his fellows. On this later occasion Patrick shone as he did on the former, but he was well supported this time, and with a complete team working in unison to the same end there was a wonderful change from that year-old tale.

It is not probable, perhaps, that everybody expected to see a repetition of last season's final, but a great majority did expect to see a clear cut defeat administered to the Wanderers.

HAD LEMONS FOR WANDERER.

One group of Ottawa enthusiasts were so confident that in their cheerfulness they brought a parcel of lemons to the rink. First Lester Patrick was called over and was presented with a sample of the tart fruit, the presentation being accompanied by a roar of laughter. The group tried to lure other Wanderer men over to repeat the performance, but the lemons remained unpresented.

It was said in the foregoing that Ottawa had ignored a fundamental principle, a principle of games, and the big things of life, too; they seemed to have underrated their opponents. Added to that primary error they added another of seeking for individuals with the apparent purpose of spoiling such particular usefulness as those individuals possessed. The result was that unwatched players did irreparable damage. By the time that Ottawa had awakened to a realization of this, the game was lost, and not all the valiant rushes, nor all the dash and brilliancy of a worthy end struggle could hope to overcome the big lead that had been established by the strangers. The end was that the Ottawa men were in that state during the closing minutes of the match of being played literally off their feet, even that human machine, Alf. Smith, was run down.

That was the greatness of the Wanderer performance, they wore down their opponents, forced the battle against Ottawa and drove the Senators to decisive defeat.

NATURE CLAIMED TOLL.

It must be said for Ottawa that the men tried their best in the face of impending loss, but Nature had claimed the toll and fagged legs and weary muscles could not move tired bodies. The case of the Ottawa men must have been a hard one even early in the game, because the men were sent out for the second period under the whip of stimulants, but thirty minutes of stiff hockey is too much for the supposed bracing which comes from the precious stuff that the vinters sell. It is altogether true that the other lot was jaded, too, but they were held up with the wonderful stimulous of a solid lead, and clung on until the last tap when tired victor and weary vanquished retired to a much needed rest.

A word must be spoken for the officials, Mr. Quinn and Dr. Cameron. They handled the game splendidly and their efficiency and care had a deterrent effect. It is quite true that one very serious offence was committed, but it was promptly and sharply punished. Its effect was to compel Ottawa to play short handed at a time when they probably expected to be at work driving Wanderer under the lash. It was a stupid performance and the punishment extended far beyond the mere ten minutes of banishment. It is worthy of note in this connection that the early boast of the local guardians of the peace was not carried out, no officer stepped on the ice to apprehend the man who assaulted Hod Stuart. However, no officer was needed, and the game was played to a strenuous, but not unduly rough, finish. Mr. Quinn and Dr. Cameron performed their parts with judgment and promptness highly commendable.

Below are given the details of the teams, officials, penalties and a summary of the scoring:

CROWD OUT EARLY.

Wise people made an early start for Dey's rink, and that was well, because such persons as were not favored by the possession of a scarlet-red ticket entitling the holder to eighteen inches of timber space, were compelled to take chances in the rush. The rush was early and an hour before play began the unreserved parts of the rink were stuffed full—the word stuffed is used advisedly—while yet the chief seats were bare. When the unnumbered seats were used up there yet remained outside a crowd of considerable proportion. This crowd was watched by a force of policemen, and occasionally broken up. It has been said that because of the dissatisfaction following the failure of the general public to obtain seats that an effort would be made to rush the building and storm it for admission. In preparation for such a contingency there was a big force of policemen sent to the rink. Furthermore, it was quietly hinted that if there were any signs of trouble a hose would be turned on the crowd. This hint proved useful and the crowd outside was orderly, while that inside of the big building was well behaved, even under stress of excitement.

Inside there was a crush that could only be suffered by enthusiasts of the sternest variety. Daredevil lads and men, too, scaled out to points of advantage, as far as seeing went, but places of considerable danger otherwise, and from the altitude of a beam gazed on the crowd and the struggle.

Even the roof windows were made use of, gallant lovers of the game climbing the semi-circular covering to seize a lighting space and chance a forty foot drop to the ice below. It was a crowd hockey mad, but then the city had been hockey crazed for a couple of days.

OTTAWA HOCKEY CRAZED.

Earlier on Saturday that fact was quite evident. In the Russell the politicians were overlooked, and any one who could talk intelligently upon the subject of Canada's winter pastime was of more importance than a Cabinet Minister. The Russell became a headquarters for speculators and cardboard slips were hawked about to such an extent that it seemed there were being more seats offering than there are places in the rink. On the question of tickets there was a great deal of talk, and from the number of tickets offered it seemed that the speculative element had got the better of the people who wanted to see the game for sport's sake. It was impossible to move about the place without having some one sidle up and whisper: "Want a ticket for the match?" If any sign of curiosity was given there would be an immediate production of a little bunch of cards. From the busy bell hops to the deft, smooth-voiced sellers in the grape department, all seemed to be overflowing with tickets. In the liquid place the bright hued cards were temptingly placed on the glass shelf, so that they who ran might read. It was quite evident that there were tickets aplenty, but dare suggest that a ticket was wanted, and one might be lead to believe from the price that admissions were as scarce as water in Montreal. Four dollars was the modest request for a location close to the sky line, and it is an actual fact that $33 was asked and given for three really good seats. At that rate, hockey tickets looked better than Cobalt as an investment, but it was evident that a chap needs must have been inside somewhere before hoping to realize such loan-shark interest on his money.

A SLUMP IN PRICES.

At night there were a number of seats yet unsold, and in the neighborhood of the rink there was a slaughtering of prices, so that some of the tourists from Montreal fared well in the closing sale.

When the question moved from tickets during the day, it always shifted to betting. It is really wonderful how money seems to hang in air in Ottawa. A hasty canvass of the crowd revealed thousands of dollars of Ottawa money, but the red and black was marked a prohibitive favorite across the board and there was little doing. All in sight was Ottawa money. Later, when the Wanderer special arrived an effort was made to lure the supporters of the champions to loosen up. It didn't look a promising investment; probably every man who thought of taking a chance at all remembered that final match in Ottawa last winter when the Wanderer team was compelled to hike to the timber limits, in so far as the actual result of the game itself was concerned; at that it was truly a barren victory for Ottawa. Really Wanderer against Ottawa in the Capital looked a poor selection, and it was evident that the visitors thought so too, because very little Wanderer money was shown to combat the many offers made. From betting on the result the market was next featured with double and triple the score offers. Many of these were taken up, and on that line quite a bit of Capital money moved. However, it was not much, and the people who went a begging with Ottawa money should be thankful to-day that their pleadings were rejected, because if all the Ottawa money offered had been accepted it would have been a tremendous strain upon the resources of the plungers to cash out.

REFEREE ARRIVED LATE.

This is a long digression from the match proper, but it was the fore part of the game, and just sent out as a warning about the fellow who will be along to-day telling of the great coup he made by accepting Ottawa betting offers.

At the rink the crowd was all seated and ready for the beginning of the performance at the set time, but there was a delay. This time Mr. Percy Quinn was the delinquent, but the fault was not his. The slippery rails set back the train an hour, and Percy's inner man required some consolation, with the result that it was well after 8.30 o'clock when he arrived at the rink.

Meanwhile both teams had appeared and had been welcomed. At that time the ice was in good condition. It had been raining early in the day, but the afternoon turned cold and a snowfall gave the early March weather a more wintry appearance. The ice was fast at the beginning of the match, but the temperature inside the building rose as the hours grew, and the half time ice was sticky and heavy. During the second period the surface was changing to water, and the final minutes were played in slush and pools that seriously interfered with the progress of the puck.

It was just short of nine by some seven minutes when Percy Quinn and George Cameron jumped out and the whistle screech summoned the gladiators. Percy spent a couple of minutes exchanging greetings, and then called the fourteen to mid-ice and announced his intentions

Wanderer had to defend the goal with Stuart, the latter taking a pass from the wing for a score.

Glass and Russell worked in the next combination, Russell getting the net.

Stuart was off for taking a clip at Harry Smith, but got back in time to furnish chief aid to Ernie Russell, the latter's shot reaching the twine.

Alf. Smith was the whole tip in the next performance, and beat out Hern after a minute's play.

GLASS SCORED SHORT GOAL.

Pud Glass nailed the puck after the face, and in thirty seconds of play found the goal.

Glass signalized his feat by a trip, and went off, and while he was resting with the timers, Harry Smith made a nice run and scored.

It was now evident that Ottawa was gone. The men tried gallantly to wear down their opponents, but the latter had a great moral force behind them, and with a comfortable lead of three goals, looked good. It is true that there now remained twelve minutes of playing time, but three goals represented practically the impossible on such ice. Westwick went off for a trip. Russell received a clip in the nose and the game was called until he cleared his nostrils of blood.

A lamp over the Wanderer goal became extinguished, and the play was stopped to allow repairs. A ladder was secured and Alf Smith bravely mounted it, but events proved that Smith is a better amateur hockey player than an amateur electrician, and he had to give way to a man who professed to know how to do it. In the course of time the lamp was set aright and the play was resumed. Ottawa attacked Wanderer and forced back the tiring champions. Pulford lifted for the first time in the match, evidently not having enough steam to try another run. Stuart attempted to respond, but the puck slipped away and Hern had to block a shot. The struggle ended when Blachford broke through and after a scrimmage in front of the Ottawa nets, carried off the puck and slammed it through.

In the play after Baird ripped Blachford and went off.

WANDERER PLAYED DEFENCE.

Both Smith boys tried to break in for another score, but their efforts were fruitless. Wanderer men stayed close to the nets and preferred to make a defence game of it. There were several lively scrimmages. Once Hern was knocked down and the puck lay in front only a few inches out. Cecil Blachford proved the man in the emergency, and a quick swipe sent the rubber sliding out of harm's way. The groups were yet struggling in front of Wanderer net when time expired. Then the teams cheered each other and made for their rooms.

Harry Smith and Ernie Russell met, and shook hands. Then each dropped his stick and it seemed that there was trouble in store. However, what did happen caused a laugh. Each stripped his jersey and handed it to the other, and the pair left the ice, the Wanderer man wearing the three-color Ottawa shirt and the Ottawa man wearing the red band Wanderer jersey, and that proved to be the last incident of a stiff struggle which had ended in such an unexpected manner and with such an unlooked for result.

SMITHS IN OTTAWA SCORE.

The battle for the fourth goal was in progress when Harry Smith got back. Then he and Alf made a snappy run, the last of the play being when Alf. passed to Harry and the latter fooled Hern with a side drive.

Now, with the score even, it was thought that Ottawa would begin to break in and drive Wanderers to the fence. Russell went at Pulford and sent the big fellow down for the second time. But Ernie had been too quick with the stick, and was benched. With Wanderer short-handed, Harry Smith ran the gauntlet and drove a lovely side liner for a goal.

Ottawa was now one to the good, and it looked as if things would begin to break their way. On the play, so far, honors had been fairly even, but it seemed as if some of the Wanderer men were fighting shy of work in close quarters. At this time both of Ottawa's wings were working finely, and the Wanderer defence was being continually peppered from either side. However, the defence showed strength in breaking away occasionally, so that each goal was being alternative attacked.

Stuart and Pulford clashed, each side, then half-circled Baird and snicked the disc past Lesseur.

Stuart and Pulford clashed, each mixing in with the other, and both went to the side. Each came back before anything was added to the score. The pair met again and Pulford drove his stick to Stuart's ribs, and was penalised. With Pulford on the side Stuart tore down the line, and elected the proper moment to pass to Russell, the latter's ten foot shot being true. Wanderer had evened the score.

There was a hard run of attacks both ways after this. Pulford returned, and as he did so, Baird was caught swiping, and was chased. He, too, had returned, when Harry Smith jabbed Stuart and went to the side.

PATRICK'S TIMELY RUSH.

Lester Patrick took the management of a brace of good rushes. Finally, he carried the puck from his own goal, single-handed, slipping through the forwards. He eluded Pulford and Baird, and Leseur ran out. Patrick dodged the goal tend and slapped the puck to the net, sending the champions one ahead.

Play went to half time without any change in the score.

Shore was first to show in the limelight in the opening of the second period, but his shot was blocked. Johnson went back and Baird hooked him cleverly. Hern blocked a stiff one and Patrick cleared. Russell accompanied his team mate, getting into positon in the nick of time. A quick pass and a shot and Wanderer had again scored.

Glass went to the side for a trip, and in his absence Alf. Smith drove from the side for a score.

Westwick was punished for a trip. Blatchford sailed along and worked in

What Ottawa Has to Say About the Defeat of its Wonderful Hockey Team

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, March 4.—The defeat of the Ottawas came as the greatest surprise here in sporting circles for many years, in fact, there was not a supporter of the team who ever dreamt of the Wanderers beating the locals on their own ice. What was worrying the majority of people here was how they were going to get tickets for the home and home series game, and there was considerable talk about a big excursion to Montreal for the game down there. Any man here who would have come out and picked the Wanderer team to win would have been considered a fit subject for examination as to his sanity. Officers of the Ottawa Club, in fact had already been besieged with requests for tickets for the home and home series. What makes the defeat all the more felt here is that it meant that Ottawa cannot hope to get a look in for the Stanley Cup for a year at least and possibly two. The team members don't attempt to explain their defeat, but acknowlege that they were squarely beaten. Quite a lot of people here were handing out compliments like "Serve them right," etc., on account of the way the club treated the public as regards tickets for the match. So confident were local enthusiasts that they were betting that the Ottawas would double and even triple the score on their opponents. Many wagers were also made at 3 to 1 on the Ottawas, and Wanderer backers demanded big odds. There was not a great deal of Montreal money in sight around the leading hotels, but some pretty stiff wagers were made at the rink during half time, when the score stood 4 to 3 for Wanderers. Ottawa enthusiasts were still confident that the locals would win and put up money willingly to this effect. One wager was made at the Russell of $135 against $75 that Wanderers would win the championship. Its safe to say that never did a more surprised and disappointed crowd leave Dey's Rink. The Ottawas had been decisively beaten and beaten on the merits of the play.

The game was almost the one topic of discussion on the streets and in the hotels to-day and any one who was not in attendance was eager to know "What happened to the Ottawas." Did they go to pieces, or were some of the team out of the game. These were the questions heard everywhere.

All kinds of opinions were expressed Some insisted that the officials were bad, others that the Ottawas did not play their usual hard game on account of warnings given by the police. Some went as far as to say that the Ottawas were all in during the last 15 minutes.

One sport waxed eloquent and stated that the only way the Ottawas would ever again be a serious factor in the running would be to infuse some young blood into the team. Quite a number of people support this view. It is practically certain that Pulford will not line up after this season. He is said to have told a number of friends of his intention to retire. There was much comment here on the big improvement in the Wanderers play.

The Ottawa Journal says: The unexpected happened, and to-day Wanderers are champions of the Eastern Canada Hockey League. The Ottawas were beaten Saturday night on their own ice and decisively beaten, and it was the pretty general verdict of those in attendance that the best team won. The score of 10 to 6 just about indicates the play of the teams.

TREMENDOUS CROWD AT STAR BULLETINS.

Thousands Hung Upon the Lips of the Man Who Read Out the Reports.

If the Wanderers had been in Montreal Saturday night, they would have been surprised and pleased at the fact that they had so many friends as were assembled in front of the Uptown Branch of the Star office during the time the Ottawa-Wanderer match was being played in Ottawa.

There have been many great crowds in front of that office on various occasions, but the crowd on Saturday beat everything that was ever seen, not barring election nights.

It extended on St. Catherine past Metcalfe street, and across Peel street down as far as the lane that runs back of Alexander's.

It was a most excited and enthusiastic crowd also. In fact, never, either in the case of hockey or lacrosse matches, has a crowd at a buletin board in Montreal shown so much excitement.

The most remarkable part of it all was that the unpleasant weather did not seem to have the slightest power to turn any of the crowd away.

The plan of having a member of the Star editorial staff read out the report of the match as it came direct from the rinkside at Ottawa over a direct wire again proved to be exceedingly popular, and the four or five thousand people gathered literally hung upon the speaker's lips.

HOW JOHNSON SHOWED THEM.

Some of the friends of the Wanderer team went to Bennett's Theatre, in Ottawa, in the afternoon, and there a ventriloquist gave what he claimed was an exhibition of what Johnson would do at night, by putting down one of his puppets at full length on the stage. When Johnson was told of this he gnashed his teeth and said: "I'll show them."
And show them he did.

MANY FAINTED IN OTTAWA.

Quite a number of people fainted during the match in Ottawa on account of the close atmosphere, the excitement and the pressure of the crowd.

Not only ladies, but men had to be taken out of the rink.

"ALL ABOARD FOR KENORA."

Wanderers Ready and Anxious to Battle for the Stanley Cup.

Like conquering heroes, the Wanderers have marched triumphantly back to Montreal, and also like conquering heroes they are much battle scarred, but still with a thirst for battle. The thirst must be immediately slaked, so with this end in view Mr. Guile, of the Wanderer executive, filed a challenge with Mr. William Foran, who is representing the trustee of the cup. The challenge was accepted, and a wire was promptly despatched to Kenora, urgently advising an early date for a match. Wanderers expect to board a train for the West on Thursday next, if the answer is favorable.

HOW THE DETECTIVES WATCHED.

Mr. George Guile, of the Wanderers, who was acting as timekeeper for his side, tells of how the Ottawa detectives were watching for rough play.

He had a detective sitting on each side of him, and they told him they were there to prevent assaults.

When the first assault on the part of Ottawa occurred, he asked them why they did not jump in and act.

"Oh, we did not see it," was the reply.

Mr. Guile then advised them to turn their backs to the ice for the rest of the match.

THE TORONTO GLOBE AND OLD AGE PENSIONS.

The Toronto Globe approaches the subject of Old Age Pensions in an attitude of friendly philosophy. It says that "if every productive worker received the value of his services to the community" there would be no need to pension him. He would have enough to provide for his own old age. From this the Globe deduces the eminently logical conclusion that those who demand old age pensions for workers need not base their plea upon charity but upon justice.

With all this we heartily agree. It is because the workers are robbed of their earnings—to put it bluntly—that they are so often left naked to their great enemy, poverty, in their old age. If they were not robbed they would have plenty to spare. They could have surrounded their lives with reasonable comfort and even luxury; they could have provided for the thorough education of their children; and they could have laid something by for "a rainy day," and the sunset of life.

But it is precisely because the workers do not get what they earn that some scheme must be devised for making it up to them. It is not enough to be philosophical about it, and admit that they are robbed and that their claims to a pension would be based upon justice and not upon charity. We must be aggressive about it, and get them that justice. They have suffered long enough. There have been a great plenty of learned books written to show that they have suffered unjustly, and that, because of this injustice, infinite injury has been inflicted upon successive generations. Their descendants to the third and fourth generation suffer because of the wrong done their fathers.

To-day, however, the wage-earning classes are seeing more clearly than ever before that the power to force restitution lies in their own hands. They have practically captured the Liberal party of Great Britain, and are dominant in this Parliament. They are still a mighty power in Germany, although collision with the spirit of national patriotism—or "jingoism, as you like to call it—has weakened their relative influence. They have been very near to dominance in France ever since the fall of the Second Empire. They are a force so dreaded by the predatory interests in the United States that the Republican party is trying to appease them lest they elect a Bryan or a Hearst to the Presidency.

Consequently the time has come when some practical steps must be taken to redress the wrong. The Globe points out that Old Age Pensions are expensive and that they may discourage thrift. Expensive to whom? If they are expensive to the wealthy classes who have fattened upon the productive labor of the wronged classes, then so much the better. They will then constitute a sort of rough justice. They will be a form of restitution. They will come in reality out of the very wealth of which these poorer men have been slowly robbed through their toilsome years. As for discouraging thrift, that is an insulting quibble. Does it encourage thrift to tell a man that, work and save as he will, he will go hungry in his old age? Can thrift only be encouraged by keeping the worker's nose to the grindstone, or swinging over his back the terrible whip of possible want in his declining years? If so, let us—in the name of Christian charity—let thrift go unencouraged!

But the Globe, which is in touch with people, knows that there is another side to this question. It closes its philosophic article by saying that against these objections "must be weighed the peace that would come with the removal of the harrowing and constant fear of want with approaching age, a fear that is responsible for a large measure of human inconsideration, meanness, treachery, and crime. When the Canadian Parliament takes up the question in a practical way there will be an interesting conflict of opinion, and the decision will be of vital moment to the future of the Dominion."

Of vital moment it will be. It will decide whether Canada is to be one of the few countries in the world where an intelligent effort is made to do a partial, though tardy, justice to the working classes. Other nations are moving because of the political goad which the newly risen labor power is enabled to thrust into their flanks. Canada must move very soon, or fall far behind the head of the procession. In a subsequent article the Globe gives—as we presume it is in duty bound to give—considerable credit to Sir Richard Cartwright's Shylock system for the selling of annuities to poor people who cannot afford to buy them; but it betrays its knowledge of the futility of this scheme, expressing the hope that "it may evolve into a system of universal old age pensions." As a matter of fact, it would be more likely to block the way to them if once established. The working classes would then be told that they had been given their pittance, and that they need not growl for any more. But if they growl loud enough now, they will get a real pension and something like real restitution.

COURTNEY ON CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

Mr. J. M. Courtney, C.M.G., deputy minister of finance under several administrations, and now enjoying a well-earned retirement, is in almost the best position in the country, to give us an inside and yet a disinterested view of the best way to manage our Civil Service. He knows the service from the bottom up. He knows all its excellences and all its weaknesses. He knows where it fails through its own fault, and where it is crippled and baffled by the "spoils system."

Consequently his address to the Ottawa Canadian Club on the subject on Saturday afternoon was of particular value. For the "spoils system," he has nothing but condemnation. That positions in the service—even the outside service—should be within the gift of politicians and "patronage committees," not only makes it fairly certain that we will get about the worst men in these important offices, but is a perpetual discouragement to ambitious and energetic work by the men in the service who might otherwise hope for promotion. It is as if all the best positions in any business house were always to be filled from the outside, giving the members of the staff nothing to work for.

Mr. Courtney's idea is that the service should be put in charge of an independent commission, who would have a staff of examiners and sub-examiners, and that all appointments and promotions should be by merit solely. He would bar party politics out of the service altogether. He would abolish patronage. He would make the life hardly worth living for any mercenary who is in politics merely for what he and his friends can get out of it. He would also restore the superannuation system and pay the civil servants better salaries. Deputy Ministers now get four thousand a year, and handle millions of dollars.

With the majority of Mr. Courtney's ideas there will be general sympathy. Patronage ought to be abolished, and every place in the Civil Service should be open to members of the service who deserve it. They should be well paid; and they should be as independent of the pettifogging little member of Parliament as is a judge. But how are we going to make them really independent of the Ministers? And how are we going to make the Ministers independent of the members who support them?

THE DOMINION PARLIAMENT AND PROVINCIAL RIGHTS.

The spirit which inspires the proposed Ontario legislation penalizing companies that seek, under the shelter of Dominion charters, to escape provincial jurisdiction, is not wholly without friends at Ottawa. The 'Open Sesame' of escape consists in having local works declared "for the general advantage of Canada." Of the right of the Dominion Parliament to enact legislation of this kind there seems to be no doubt. It is well therefore that the provincial protest against the removal of provincial companies from provincial jurisdiction has met with a sympathetic reception by some members of the Federal Houses.

The presence of this spirit in Parliament has been thrice exemplified this session. Twice the Senate has held over bills for further consideration on account of the presence in them of a "general-advantage-of-Canada" clause. One of those, the act respecting the Joliette and Brandon railway company, has passed the Committee of the Upper House, probably because it is practically a branch of the Canadian Pacific, which is under Federal laws. The other, which respects the Huron and Ontario railway, has been held over temporarily and in the meantime the Ontario Government will be consulted. But the most striking instance of the strength of this federal consideration for provincial rights is the withdrawal of a bill introduced to incorporate five citizens of Toronto as the Owen Sound Bridge and Terminal Company. This bill proposed to declare for the general advantage of Canada a company which proposed to build a bridge, to construct a short line of railway and to connect that line with the G. T. R., the C. P. R. and other railways in the locality, and to operate vessels on the Great Lakes. This bill met with opposition in the Railway Committee and was in consequence withdrawn by the promoter. No reason was given by the promoter, but a brief discussion in the House made it appear that the reason was regard for provincial rights on the part of the Committee of the House.

This would indicate that Mr. Whitney is not fighting his battle single-handed. There is an appreciation of the righteousness of his cause at Ottawa which should give him an easy victory.

The career of Dr. Oronhyatekha reads like a romance. A full-blooded Indian, who attracted the attention of the Prince of Wales—now King Edward—when he visited this country in his youth; then "he went to London to see the Queen," as the old song has it, and became a Rhodes scholar at Oxford before Rhodes; returned to Canada and speedily developed as one of the greatest leaders of men and organizers of success we have ever had in the Dominion—a "red" Sir John Macdonald. Long before he became so well known in connection with the Foresters, the temperance people knew him as a fascinating personality and the possessor of a brilliant mind. He completed the chain of romance by marrying a great-granddaughter of the mighty Tyendinaga. He was by far the most conspicuous representative of his race since the burial of the tomahawk, and goes to prove the truth of the estimate of the Indian as a man of keen intelligence and great powers.

WELL-KNOWN JESUIT DIED SUDDENLY

Father William J. Doherty Passed Away Yesterday Morning at St. Mary's College.

Father William J. Doherty, a member of the Society of Jesus, died suddenly in St. Mary's College, Bleury st, yesterday morning.

During the announcements which are always made after the Gospel at 9 o'clock mass at the Church of the Gesu, Father Devine said that Father Doherty would preach the usual Sunday night sermon in English. After the Elevation, the same priest returned and made the unexpected statement that Father Doherty had died.

Father Doherty had not been in the best of health for a couple of months, but when he arose at 4.30 o'clock yesterday morning he did not appear to be ill. He was in the confessional in the church at 8 o'clock and after that complained of a severe pain in the chest. As a result he retired to his room. After taking a simple remedy Father Doherty said he would rest for a while, and found the priest dying. While infirmary went to Father Doherty's room and found the priest dying. While the worshippers were attending 9 o'clock mass, Father Doherty passed away.

Father Doherty was born in St. John, N.B., in 1844, and after a promising course graduated at Fordham University, N.Y. He entered the Jesuit order in 1863, and continued a higher course of study in philosophy and theology for the ensuing fourteen years, in which branch of work he later identified himself. In fact, for the last thirty years as college professor and as missionary, Father Doherty has led an active career, and died almost in the midst of the work to which he had devoted his life.

Father Doherty had been noted for his sermons on subjects of complex and controversial theology. He was not what would be termed a popular preacher, but his sermons were always deep and sound. Father Doherty was well versed in the higher branches and at various times occupied chairs of rhetoric, mathematics, physics and philosophy. His last position as such was in 1898 when he was professor of philosophy at Georgetown University. After returning to Montreal Father Doherty was rector of Loyola College, Drummond street.

The funeral service will take place to-morrow morning at 8.30 o'clock, and the burial will afterwards take place at Sault aux Recollet.

The Late Mr. J. P. Flynn.

There passed away on Sunday Mr. J. P. Flynn, who for the past thirty-four years has been an employee of the corporation of the city on Montreal as a street inspector. Mr. Flynn had charge of such inspection work as street numbers, dangerous sidewalks, and was often called into court in cases affecting the city. He kept an accurate record of the state of the weather, which was of material importance in deciding disputed points about many actions against the city. Death was due to an attack of la grippe, with complications. The funeral will take place Tuesday morning at 8.30 from 177 St. George's street.

With a little more practice the American citizen may be able to produce a joke every few minutes.

When the C. P. R. trains go through the mountains with an engine in front and nothing behind, what happens to the poor engineer who has to ride with only his back to the locomotive?

The British army officer who told the House of Commons that married men are braver than bachelors may also explain it by hinting that the married ones don't care whether they are killed, anyway.

Appendicitis is on the decrease in Montreal. Have all the appendices been cut out, or have the doctors found a disease that pays better?

We don't object to Canada copying the States in some things, but there is no good reason why we should indulge in a railroad wreck just because they are fashionable in the States.

Any one who has ridden over it knows that the Chicago & Alton was crooked even before Mr. Harriman got it.

Every man is bound to have peculiar views. Some, for instance, have been hugging the fond delusion that they know how to play hockey in Ottawa.

She was only a substitute teacher, still she should have known better.

"Suppose," said she in the mental arithmetic lesson—"suppose Mary has five oranges and Gladys gave her eleven more. Then, if Mary gave Winifred six, how many would she have left?"

There was a long pause.

"Well?" she prompted, impatiently, "it is easy enough."

"Please, teacher," spoke up the smallest girl, "we always do our sums in apples."

A circus looking for human freaks might try and find a man who once travelled on an American railroad train that wasn't wrecked.

ONE FELT JEALOUS.

"Why don't those two American duchesses like each other?"

"They both pride themselves on their business ability, and one bought her husband much cheaper than the other did."

A Meal in a Moment

Bovril will do it for you

A meal prepared with the help of a chafing dish has a great fascination for many.

But the woman who uses a chafing dish and hasn't tried what the addition of a few drops of Bovril will do, has yet to find out how delightfully piquant and appetising, a chafing dish preparation can be made.

Not only does "Bovril" add to the richness and taste, but also very materially to the nourishing qualities, and that's best of all.

The "Unpardonable Sin" in Office Organization

CERVANTES, the famous author of Don Quixote, might well have been talking about business when he said:
"When the head aches, all the members partake of the pain."

The head and front of office system is the letter file, and when the LETTER FILE goes wrong, the entire office is confused and upset!

There are lots of ways in which your office detail might be out-of-date and unprogressive and yet not vitally interfere in the conduct of your business.

Not so with your letter files. If these are antiquated—IF IT TAKES YOU TEN MINUTES TO FIND A LETTER YOU OUGHT TO FIND IN TEN SECONDS; if your attention meanwhile is taken away from important business matters—then your filing method is costing you FAR MORE IN ACTUAL DOLLARS AND CENTS THAN A NEW ONE OF LATEST "OFFICE SPECIALTY" CONSTRUCTION!

The IDEA upon which our organization is based is to devise THE SIMPLEST SOLUTION for any office filing problem.

We have specific printed matter that tells what these "Office Specialty" ways are.
May we mail this printed matter to you?

SURPRISED VICS BY CLOSE MATCH

Quebec Made Great Struggle Against Local Team, Being Defeated by 7 Goals to 6.

After a hard struggle, Victorias defeated Quebec by the narrow margin of one goal before a small, but enthusiastic crowd at the Arena Saturday night. If the result had been decided on the merits of play it would be very much in favor of Quebec. The Victorias played their old reliable game, but Quebecs showed better form than in any previous game this season.

The play was clean as far as hockey goes, excepting in the second half, when Victorias showed a tendency to rough it, but Desse Brown, had his eyes on the guilty ones who were quickly penalized, with the desired effect. Quebecs showed they have the material to make a first class team, and certainly have a great find in their new goalkeeper, who though inexperienced, fooled even the invincible Bowie several times.

Left alone on the defence he would, time and again, rush out to meet the Vics forward line and nearly always succeed in putting the puck in safety. Quebecs attribute their loss to the unfortunate accident which happened to McDermott, which necessitated him going off for repairs, Russell Bowie scoring three goals during his absence.

CURED BY CUTICURA

"Our baby had a yellow crust on his head which I could not keep away. When I thought I had succeeded in getting his head clear, it would start again by the crown of his head, crack and scale, and cause terrible itching. I then got Cuticura Soap and Ointment, washing the scalp with the soap and then applying the Ointment. A few treatments made a complete cure. I have advised several mothers to use Cuticura, when I have been asked about the same ailment of their babies. —Mrs. John Bovee, Pine Bush, N. Y."

HORSE MEAT TRADE MUST BE STOPPED

Antwerp Is Asked to Put a Check on Importation of Worn Out Geegees From England.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Brussels, March 4.—The Minister of Agriculture has addressed a communication to the municipality of Antwerp requesting them to take measures to put an end to the "Horse Meat Sausage Scandal," which is agitating the United Kingdom and the Continent, much as the Chicago dressed beef scandals agitated the United States a year ago. The minister requests the municipality to put a stop to the abuses resulting from the importation of old and worn out horses from England. These animals, the communication states, are killed in Belgium and turned into sausages and then labelled and sold as "Best Brand Sausages."

Mr. Baerts, the chief veterinary inspector of the Belgian Government, is authority for the statement that in the past a very considerable trade in horses has been done with England. During the nine years from 1897 to 1906, no fewer than 100,000 horses were imported from England into Belgium for the purpose of being sold for human food. As soon as a boat containing these "Butchers' Horses," arrives in port the master has to report to the harbor authorities how many horses he has on board. As soon as the animals are disembarked evidence has to be produced that they will be taken direct to a public slaughterhouse for immediate killing, or to a private stable where they must be destroyed within a week. Upon this evidence the horses are duly marked or branded for importation by means of a metal plate attached to their neck. The Government veterinary surgeon also hands to the purchaser of the animal a permit which has to be given up to and signed by the mayor of the place where the animal is slaughtered within a week after the arrival.

The mayor at once sends the said permit to the veterinary surgeon whose duty it is to inspect the meat and organs emanating from the slaughtered animal. Both the metal plate and the certificate of slaughter have to be sent by the mayor to the veterinary surgeon who granted the original import certificate at the port of entry within ten days of the date stamped on the last named document.

AN ACADEMY OF MEDICINE.

First Organization of Its Kind Completed in Toronto.

Toronto, March 4.—Organization of the "Academy of Medicine, Toronto," is practically completed after an agitation extending over several years. The new association will have its headquarters in the Ontario Medical Library Association building, in Queen's Park, but plans have been made to raise $50,000 among the members of the profession in Toronto, and a big structure will be erected. This is the first academy to be formed in Canada. The object is thus set forth: "The advancement of the art and science of medicine with its collateral branches, the promotion and maintenance of an official library and museum; professional improvement; the cultivation of harmony and good feeling among the fellows, and the promotion of the corporate influence of the profession in its relation to the community."

ANNUAL MEETINGS HELD.

Conservatives of Lincoln, Niagara, and East Elgin Organized.

St. Catharines, Ont., March 4.—At the annual meeting of the Conservative Association of Lincoln and Niagara, the following officers were elected: President, David Allan, Grimsby; vice-president, James A. Keyes, St. Catharines; secretary, H. O. Loughlin, St. Catharines; treasurer, M. V. Keating, St. Catharines.

Mr. A. Lancaster, M.P., announced the formation of a Dominion Conservative Association. To effect such a purpose, groups of counties have been formed. The local group comprises: Lincoln, Welland, Haldimand and Wentworth. Resolutions of appreciation of the services of E. A. Lancaster, M.P., and Dr. Jessop, M.L.A., were passed.

Aylmer, Ont., March 4.—The East Elgin Conservative Association held its annual meeting here on Saturday. Officers were elected as follows: President, James L. Thayer, Aylmer; vice-president, Geo. E. Miner, Yarmouth; secretary, E. A. Miller, Aylmer.

Resolutions of confidence in the Ontario Government and in Mr. R. L. Borden, leader of the Dominion Conservatives, were adopted.

World Gossip

HYDRAULICS IN THE KLONDIKE.

An interesting phase of the development which is going on in the gold fields of the northern part of the continent was described in conversation with a Star reporter at the Windsor Hotel yesterday by Mr. Benjamin R. Wheeler, of Seattle, who spent a considerable portion of last year in an extensive trip through the Klondike, and especially the Bonanza Creek district. This development is the introduction of hydraulics on a large scale.

"Of course, the working of the mines in the most modern and up-to-date way," he said, "pre-supposes the combining of a large number of claims and the acquiring of extensive tracts of ground. This has been done very generally in the Bonanza Creek district, most of which is now controlled by a syndicate. This association has already installed a number of dredges, and is to instal several more as soon as they can be got from the factories. But there is one great drawback to the hydraulic system, and that is the lack of water for the purpose of working the hill and bench claims, which require a great deal. So far there has been a sufficiency of water only for a short period of the year."

Mr. Wheeler went on to state that efforts were now about to be made on a very large scale to get control of the water supply by means of dams and that this special syndicate had in view the damming of Bonanza Creek, which would hold the water back for two miles and preserve the spring freshet. Reservoirs are also to be constructed, as well as ditches from rivers that are at the right level. One such ditch is fifty miles long.

"This ditch gives one some idea of the enterprise of the miners of the Klondike," continued Mr. Wheeler, "when it is considered that it will be about fifty miles long, and will have a capacity of about ten thousand miner's inches of water. It runs from the Twelve-mile river to the Bonanza creek district. Of the fifty miles eleven are to consist of steel and wood pipe, about fifteen miles will be of flume, and the rest will be ordinary ditching. There are a number of depressions along the way to be crossed, and this will be done by means of inverted siphons. About five miles of the ditch were completed by the end of last season, at a cost of about half a million dollars. They expect to have it in operation by 1908."

ILLNESS AT PANAMA.

The first thing the average man says about Panama, if he devotes his conversational energies to that theme, is that it has a very unhealthy climate. This is an almost universal opinion, the expression of the general notion of Panama as a country whose principal inhabitants are typhoid, smallpox and cholera. It was probably in the same way that Canada was once upon a time believed to be the particular home of icebergs, Esquimaux, and Polar bears.

Dr. Arthur L. Monk, of Louisville, Ky., who spent Saturday in this city, told a Star reporter that the reports about the health conditions of Panama were grossly exaggerated. In fact, he stated that, far from being the death-trap it is so often represented to be, the conditions in Panama amongst those who are engaged on the canal would compare very favorably with that of any body of laborers in the whole country.

"Of course," he said, "this pleasant result is obtained only at the cost of ceaseless vigilance, and only those who like myself have been engaged in the work can have any idea of the completeness of the system of health protection, and the care and energy with which it is carried out."

Speaking of the diseases with which the doctors of the zone have especially to contend, Dr. Monk made the rather surprising assertion that the disease which carries off by far the largest number of people on the isthmus is not typhoid or yellow fever or smallpox, or any of the diseases popularly supposed to flourish there, but pneumonia. It seems that this disease is an easy first, with malaria second.

"It is principally among the colored workers that pneumonia is most destructive," said Dr. Monk, "and, in fact, they are almost exclusively affected by it. The reason for this probably lies in the manner in which they live. They only half nourish themselves, as they provide their own food, and they do not know how to protect themselves properly in the matter of clothes. They come home from work with their clothes soaking from perspiration, and they keep these wet clothes on till they chill. The result is colds, and frequently pneumonia."

Dr. Monk states that abstracting from pneumonia, the death rate of blacks and whites is about the same. Smallpox, typhoid and malaria are kept down by ceaseless precautions, and smallpox especially has caused very little trouble. Malaria comes after pneumonia on the death list, but it is by no means epidemic. There has been very little typhoid.

ANOTHER FRUIT PEST.

Bermuda is just now having a serious time with the fruit-fly, according to Mr. S. H. Wilbur, of that island, who is at present visiting in this city. It seems that this fly deposits its egg in the fruit, and that the larvae in developing make it unfit to eat. In this way a considerable quantity of fruit is destroyed.

"A number of different ways of exterminating it have been suggested," said Mr. Wilbur, "but so far none of them have been acted on to any great extent. Some have advised the importing of an enemy of the fly that would destroy it, but, though efforts have been made to obtain such an enemy, they have so for been unsuccessful. Parasites and beetles of different kinds have been sought, but they never seemed to make good. Besides, even if an effective parasite were found, it is always doubtful whether or not it would stand transportation, and if it would not, on reaching Bermuda, find some enemy of its own that would keep it busy protecting itself."

"What then do you recommend?" was asked.

"I really think that the only thing to do is to destroy the fruit for a few seasons. This fly needs fruit for the development of its larvae, and besides it attacks only certain species of fruit. If then these were systematically destroyed the insect would soon be exterminated. This may seem a rather costly way of going about it, but it could be done on account of the small size of the islands and the limited fruit culture. Besides, whatever the cost, something has to be done to kill the pest."

UNDERWEAR

HAPPENINGS AT McGILL.

The elections to office in the McGill Science Undergraduates Society were held Friday. Out of four men proposed, the presidential office went on a ballot vote to L. B. Kingston, '08. Nominations had been made early in the week.

This society was re-organized two years ago from a purely nominal body. It has become one of the most active and influential organizations in the University. Under its auspices many addresses of a practical nature have been delivered by eminent men before the science students. Its value too has been felt in bringing the students of the faculty together in a spirit of greater fellowship.

The executive for next year is as follows:
Secretary, R. B. Stewart, '09.
Treasurer, H. S. Johnston, '09.
Reporter, D. L. McLean, '09.
Representative from the Sophomore year, C. Ryley.

Saturday night saw the closing up of the campus rink as far as the hockey and skating club are concerned. Handicapped by lack of funds they have decided to put no more work on it, and unless the weather keeps very favorable that portion of the McGill students popularly known as "rink fussers" will have to seek some other recreation.

The students of the Sophomore year met Friday afternoon to make a final choice of the class pin which is to be their year symbol. The discussion of the continuation of the "Annual," which is issued annually by the third year was discussed, ending in resolution that the "Annual" board should be elected as soon as possible, so that it might be ready to start work immediately on the opening of the next session.

This year's Annual will probably appear in the course of the next two or three weeks. It is a book replete with all kinds of information regarding undergraduate life at McGill; and is the most valuable souvenir of college life which can be secured. It is dedicated to Prof. E. Rutherford. It is under the following management.

Business board—D. R. Shewan and Geo. Shanks, medicine; F. E. Hawkins and W. R. Shanks, arts; O. M. Stitt and C. F. Bristol, Science; Miss Ross and Miss Sanuvalle, R.V.C.

Editorial board—W. L. Tracy, M.A., and G. B. Murphy, B.A., medicine; A. G. McGougan and W. F. Steedman, arts; J. B. Parham and G. M. Pitts, science; Miss Boyl, R. V. C.

An interesting meeting of the Mining Society was held Friday night in the Chemistry and Mining Building. Prof. J. Bonsall Porter lectured on the summer courses in mining, with copious illustrations by lantern slides. Quite a number of the students in mining and metallurgy were present.

The Literary Society held its regular meeting Friday night, having as subject for debate the resolution that "Physical Culture should form a compulsory part of University Education." One member opened the argument for either side and then he meeting was thrown open for discussion. Prof. Leacock also read a short paper.

Death Closes Adventurous Career.

The death occurred recently at the Richmond Hospital, Dublin, of a man who had an adventurous and chequered career. He was known as Captain John Kirwan, at one time a Fenian leader. When a boy he enlisted in the army, but some years later he joined the Dublin police force. After a brief service he resigned to become a soldier in the Papal Brigade. Returning to Ireland, he threw himself into the Fenian movement, and was soon known to the authorities as one of the Brotherhood in County Dublin. In 1867 an attack took place on the little police barracks at Stepaside, at which Kirwan was wounded. He was afterwards arrested, brought before a magistrate on a charge of high treason, and committed for trial. One evening his guard left him for a brief period, and on his return his prisoner was gone. Though every port in Ireland was watched for a long time afterwards, he succeeded, after some exciting adventures, in getting to the United States, where he joined the army, and rose to the rank of captain. Some years ago Kirwan returned to Dublin.

Last Lecture at McGill.

The last lecture in the series of popular lectures given by the members of the staff of McGill University will take place at 8.30 this evening in the chemistry building at McGill. The subject will be "The Transformation of Matter," and the lecturer Prof. Rutherford, whose researches into radio-activity have made his name known in scientific circles the world over. This will be Prof. Rutherford's last public appearance before leaving for Manchester.

Montcalm Did Good Work.

Quebec, March 4.—In her work on the ice bridge the steamer Montcalm used over two hundred tons of coal, but her performance was a good one and it is hardly likely the bridge will again take this winter, so that there will be no drawback to the opening of navigation from this source. The ice is very strong up the river near St. Romuald, and residents of the south shore there are staking out a roadway to be used for crossing to the north shore.

FORMATION OF PEARLS.

FORMATION of fine, natural pearls by means of artificially controlling the growth of parasites that prey upon oysters, is a new method of production pointed to as the result of recent research in Oceania by M. Seurat," asserts a French writer. "He made a special study of the formation of fine pearls. His conclusions shed new light upon a question hitherto rather obscure. The origin of the pearl is the subject of a Hindoo legend, which attributes this beautiful formation to the fall of a drop of dew into the bosom of an oyster gaping in the sun. Scientists have long believed that the pearl results from a secretion consequent upon irritation of the mollusk's nerves by some foreign substance, like a grain of sand, lodged within it. The Chinese and Japanese for a long time, and the French recently, have worked on this theory in the manufacture of so-called natural pearls. They introduce into the heart of the oyster a minute, hard body, around which another gradually comes to model itself. But it is now generally admitted that these secretions are not pearl, but merely mother-of-pearl."

KING OSCAR OF SWEDEN.

King Oscar of Sweden is expected to abdicate shortly in favor of the Crown Prince, who is now acting as Regent. The Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf has already been four times "acting King" of Sweden, and he is the only heir to a throne in the world who has had so many opportunities of seeing what real kingship is like. He will be 49 next April, and has three sons, the eldest being married to the Duke of Connaught's elder daughter. He has military leanings, and is an ardent admirer of the "strong man" policy in kings. One of the best tennis players in Europe, he has played with great skill in international tournaments at Stockholm. The abdication of King Oscar will probably take place on June 6, which is His Majesty's golden wedding anniversary.

LORD MAYOR OF DUBLIN.

Mr. J. P. Nannetti, Nationalist M. P. for the College Division of Dublin, has just been re-elected Lord Mayor of Dublin for 1907. Mr. Nannetti has been all his life a working compositor, and he is now the foreman printer of the Freeman's Journal. He is the only chief magistrate in the country who dons a workman's white apron at one period of the day and the rich mayoral robes and chain of office at another. In addition to his Parliamentary and Mayoral honors, Mr. Nannetti is a member of the Dublin Corporation, the Dublin Port and Docks Board, and the Dublin Trades Council. He is reputed to have been a sworn Fenian in 1867, and trusted in the inner ranks of the Fenian organization. He has now somewhat moderated his views which are still, however, strongly revolutionary. He has been a member of Parliament since 1900, when he defeated the Parnellite candidate for the College Green Division. He is the first Labor representative to act as host at the Dublin Mansion House. He is of Italian extraction, as his name indicates, and was born in 1851.

A CANDID PEER.

Lord Newton, who is draughting a bill for the reconstruction of the House of Lords, is a very candid Tory peer with a penchant for upsetting the equanimity of the Upper Chamber. He had no sooner been promoted from the Lower House, where he sat for thirteen years as the Hon. Thomas Wodehouse Legh, than he proposed that the House of Lords should sit during winter and rise early in July, so that its members might spend the summer in the country, but the hunting world was against him. In the Commons he won a reputation for repartee. One night he was speaking at portentous length on the army estimates when, at a dramatic pause in his speech, another M. P. took the opportunity of saying, "If the honorable member has quite finished, I will show the House that his contention is ridiculous and his arguments are absurd." "Then for the sake of the House," said Mr. Legh, "I will go on." And he did go on—for nearly an hour. Naturally, this sort of thing did not make Mr. Legh too popular in the House, and when he was captured by brigands in Turkey, one of his fellow M. P.'s remarked spitefully, "When they've kept him two days they'll pay to get rid of him."

THE EARL OF AYLESFORD.

The Earl of Aylesford, who has basked in the fierce light of publicity owing to the litigation over the panelling of his dining-room, is of an exceedingly retiring disposition. Outside his love for the typically English sport of archery he has few interests. He is exceedingly proud of his picturesque title of "Lord Warden of the Woodmen of Arden," a society of archers, which, with the exception of the Royal Company of Archers, is the oldest body of toxophilites in the kingdom. Packington Hall, the residence of the Earl, which contains the much-discussed dining-room, is situated on the outskirts of the forest of Arden, so familiar to all students of "As You Like It," and the descendants of the herd of black deer mentioned in that pastoral play still browse in Packington Park. The cedars of Lebanon in the park are of authentic origin, the seed having been specially brought over from the Holy Land.

POLITICAL OFFENDERS.

From independent Russian, German, French and English sources come heart-sickening accounts of systematic tortures practised in Russian prisons upon "politicals" with the object of compelling them to betray their friends and supporters. For a long time such tortures have been reported from various prisoners all over the empire, but the worst atrocities seem to be habitually perpetrated in the prisons of Poland and the Baltic Provinces. In Riga, for instance, a special chamber has been fitted up with all the instruments of torture known to the inquisition of old. Rubber sticks, long pins, pincers, a rack, and so forth, are used in the process of making the victim "confess," and all this not only by permission of the higher local authorities, but frequently even in their presence and under their personal guidance. Such things as knocking out the teeth, tearing out the hair and pieces of flesh are in ordinary usage.

PUPIL DRIVEN TO SUICIDE BY TEACHER

Lad of Sensitive Nature Takes to Heart Repeated Corrections and Drowns Himself in Seine.

Paris, March 4.—Full details are now published of the sad story of a schoolboy who recently committed suicide by throwing himself into the Seine, because he had been unable to learn his lessons and was punished by his teacher. The week before he killed himself he had been reprimanded by one of the teachers for not having brought his note book to school in which he should have written out his lesson. He had made up for it by writing his lesson on a loose sheet of paper. This did not satisfy the teacher who tore it up and sent a note to his parents, as if the boy had not attended the class.

A few days later when the boy again failed in some trifle a note was given to him to take to his parents, in which it was stated that he would not be allowed to return to school unless he had learned 25 lines in addition to some other work which he was to do. The boy did not dare show this note to his father and left home the following morning as if he intended to return to school. He apparently wandered about all the morning on a fiercely cold day, and was seen shivering and standing about by other schoolboys. He returned home to luncheon and said nothing to his parents.

After lunch he pretended once again to go to school, but secretly took his little dog with him and went to the Seine. He loitered on the banks all the afternoon and must have fingered the note a good deal in his hands as he stood by the riverside hesitating whether he should show it to his father or drown himself in the river, as it was found crumpled in his pockets and soiled. He was very fond of his little sister, and the last thing he wrote was a sort of testament by which he gave her all he possessed. It was written as follows, probably shortly before his fatal plunge:—

"Dear Sister,—I give you all that is mine—my watch, my photographic camera, my toy box—to do with them as you like. Accept a thousand kisses from your fond brother, who wishes you happiness all your life. Amen."

His happiness was over, though it cannot be said that he was driven to despair by his father, who was very kind to him, and scarcely ever said a word when he brought bad notes from school. The boy was of a very refined and nervous temperament and any punishment made him suffer severely.

RICH GIFTS FOR THE LOUVRE.

Moreau-Nelaton Collection Is Now Upon Exhibition.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Paris, March 4.—For three generations the Moreau-Nelatons have been wealthy and enlightened patrons of painting. The present head of the family, M. Etienne Moreau-Nelaton, himself an artist of much talent, has just given to the Louvre the cream of the collection begun by his grandfather, Adolphe Moreau, a stockbroker, and the rooms in which it has been placed have just been opened and visited officially by the President of the Republic.

The collection consists entirely of nineteenth century French works, and chiefly of representative examples of Delacroix and Descamps. In paintings by the latter, the Louvre had hitherto been not only less rich than the Wallace collection, for instance, but remarkably poor, and the present donation is, therefore, particularly welcome.

Troyon, Daubigny, Diaz, Millet, Fromentin, are also well represented in the collection, which further includes some fine specimens of the "impressionist" school. Manet's "Dejeuner sur l'Herbe," for instance, and the "Pont d'Argenteuil," and "Etretat," by Claude Monet and several important Sisleys.

The German Emperor has two secretaries employed in little else than supplying the royal table with magazines, newspapers and books. Those passages to which His Majesty's special attention is to be called are marked with a green pencil. Harnessing the Sun.

"Harnessing the Elements," is the subject of an article in St. Nicholas for March, by George Ethelbert Walsh, in which he says:—

Electric power from sunlight appears more wonderful than harnessing the streams or wind. Yet we know something of the vast heat of the sun.

Solar engines for operating pumps have been in use in different parts of the earth for several years now, and their value in warm climates, where the number of days of clear sunshine averages high, must steadily increase. One of the most successful of these solar machines is located near Los Angeles to irrigate fruit land. An automatic stand carrying great reflectors follows the course of the sun as regularly as the best telescope ever made, and the sun's rays are thus reflected on a central point, where the boiler of a small engine is located. Within an hour after sunrise the heat of the sun raises the temperature of the water to the boiling point, and thus creates steam; and the pumping machinery begins its day's work and keeps it up until sundown.

The power of the sun for heating has only been faintly appreciated by scientists in the past, but the prediction is made now that if all the coal should give out we would soon be able to run much of our machinery from the power of the sun. With five hundred mirrors properly arranged to focus the rays upon one point, a temperature of more than a thousand degrees has been obtained. This almost equals one-fifth the highest temperature recorded by the electric furnace, which is considered to be the most powerful heating apparatus ever discovered. As there is no limit to the number of mirrors that may be employed, and as the intensity of the heat increases in proportion to the number of rays reflected by the mirrors, it is conceivable that a temperature may be obtained in time that will surpass anything ever dreamed of in the past or present.

Hitching the sun to run electric motors for furnishing light and power for use houses and factories is the very latest achievement of the modern work of harnessing the elements to do man's work, and one square yard of sunshine in the tropics may represent, on the average, one horse-power.

CHAMBERLAIN HAS GONE TO RIVIERA

Will he Return to Public Life is Frequently Asked.

PHYSICIANS ARE HOPEFUL

They Assert Tariff Reform Leader May Be Back at Westminster in Six Months.

By Special Cable from our own correspondent.

London, March 4.—Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain has left Highbury for the Riviera. Will he ever return to public life? The question is asked, not without a touch of anxiety even by those tariff reform leaders who are supposed to be in Mr. Chamberlain's closest confidence. The truth is that Mr. Chamberlain's illness has been from its start last July, and still is, very much of a mystery.

Radical prints, such as Reynold's Newspaper, have openly asserted that he had a bad stroke of paralysis and would never again be capable of sustained effort. Even the reputable Ministerial organ, the Daily Chronicle, published recently a blurred photograph of him shuffling painfully along in the grounds of Highbury, resting on a stout stick in each hand, his eyes covered with blue goggles, and Mrs. Chamberlain piloting him along, the whole impression being confirmatory of Reynold's assertions.

Yet Mrs. Chamberlain, Mrs. Austen Chamberlain, Miss Chamberlain, Mr. Austen Chamberlain himself and Mr. Neville Chamberlain have flatly, indignantly and repeatedly denied this and all similar stories, which they deem malicious. There has, they assert, been no stroke, no complications of any kind. It is a bad case of gout attacking the wrist, ankle and eyes. His brain has never been affected in the smallest way. His gout is so much better that he now walks, writes and reads, though of course with prudence.

There is no reason, and in this his doctor completely agrees, why Mr. Chamberlain should not in time be back at Westminster speaking and leading the party with a vigor equal to anything in his recent career. Yet even Chamberlain leaders and men continue to doubt. Why, they ask, if Mr. Chamberlain is progressing so well and is so keenly concerned in the progress of the great movement which depends so largely on him, is no one except Mr. Jesse Collins allowed to see him. His counsel would be invaluable, why withhold it? To which the reply is, "A man of Chamberlain's indomitable spirit must be all or nothing. He cannot go half steam ahead. The doctors refuse him permission to engage in any public affairs because they know complete rest is the only way of securing so much of complete recovery as is conceivable for a man 70 years of age. Even his bitterest opponents admit that British public life sadly misses Mr. Chamberlain's piquant and vivifying touch."

Mr. Balfour has in the last few months shown a strong grip on colonial points of view on the problems to come before the Colonial Conference in April, such as defence, colonial representation in Imperial affairs, and the preference. Lord Milner also stands, only a little in the background, as a sane Imperialist with a great record for strong colonial sympathies. Lord Curzon, who has a great name and record, also announces that he will return to the Commons this coming autumn. It is quite possible, then, next autumn to see a Balfour-Chamberlain-Milner-Curzon-Lansdowne combination on a strong constructive policy by which the union of the Empire would be pursued on a basis of co-ordinate and completely self-governing states and British social and industrial reforms would be secured with the aid of a revenue tariff and mutual preference.

The Brigg by-election is only one of the many signs that with such a powerful combination facing them in Parliament and in the country the work of disintegration of the curious Whig-Radical-Socialist-Labor amalgam which now holds the reins of power would proceed with surprising rapidity.

WINDERMERE.

CANADA FOR HER RIGHTS.

Present Unfair Postal Arrangements Will Be Abrogated.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, Ont., March 4.—The American postal authorities now en route to Ottawa will, on Wednesday, discuss with the Canadian postal authorities the whole question of postal relations between the two countries. The United States postal department was notified some months ago that the postal arrangement in respect to the delivery in Canada of second and third class matter would be abrogated on May 7. Canada has been carrying 10,000 tons of newspapers and periodicals from the United States to every 1,000 tons sent from this country, and insists upon a new arrangement upon more equitable basis. The Dominion will probably be represented at the conference by Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Postmaster-General; Dr. Coulter, Deputy Minister, and Mr. William Smith, secretary of the department.

WARM DEBATE EXPECTED.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, Ont., March 4.—Work is being rushed at the Printing Bureau on the report of the Royal Commission in Insurance, and it is expected that the printed volumes will be in the hands of the members by the end of the week. A full dress debate will, in all probability, occur in the House next week. In order to bring the matter up some one will probably move that the recommendations of the commission be considered, or else the draft bill may be introduced. Just what turn events will take it is hard to say, but if Liberal members intend to make good threats made in the House they will move to have the land transactions of Conservative members referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, in which event it will be up to Mr. Fowler to make his counter charges against the Cabinet Ministers, and thus the fat would be in the fire.

The Late Charles McLean.

At a general meeting of the Shipping Federation, held at their board room on Saturday, a resolution of regret at the loss to the Executive Council in the death of Mr. Charles McLean, and of condolence with the family of the deceased, was passed, and ordered to be sent to the family and placed on the minutes of the Federation.

THE Sarah Maxwell Memorial

Readers of The Star all over Canada will be gratified at what they read in to-day's issue, from the boys and girls, in whose tender hearts and the hearts of whose parents there is a deep and live sympathy for the martyred Sarah Maxwell and the little ones who perished around their tried and trusted friend.

The sympathizing boys and girls, aided by their mothers, their fathers and other relatives and friends, will, it is very evident, not let the tragedy pass from the public mind without giving evidence of their sorrow in some imperishable form.

Subscriptions are coming to The Star from Ottawa, Quebec, Kingston, Cornwall, Brockville, Guelph, Toronto, Belleville, Peterboro, Arnprior, Carleton Place, Lachute, Huntingdon, Prescott, Montmagny, Sherbrooke, Lennoxville and a thousand country places, as well as from thousands of girls and boys in Montreal.

It would be remarkable if the out-of-town subscriptions should outnumber those from the city of Montreal. It depends upon those who are in sympathy with the movement. The public are cautioned against unauthorized canvassers whom they do not know or whom they may suspect. Anything sent to the Star Office or handed to a friend or neighbor will reach its destination. The question as to the form of Memorial will be discussed in future issues, and the wishes of the subscribers as far as they may be disclosed will be respected.

Acting on the advice of prominent citizens, our contemporary, the Standard, has offered to publish a memorial number and to make it not only a thing of great beauty and wide interest, but such a souvenir as will stimulate support of the cause. Our desire is that the memorial to Miss Maxwell may be something of credit to the city, credit to Canada, and credit to those cognizant of the bravery and heroism of her who had no thought for herself, and all thought for the helpless little ones in danger.

CIRCULATION BULLETIN.

Another Thousand Milestone Passed.

As will be observed by the table on the editorial page, the circulation of the Star has overtaken and passed the 62,000 mark, and figures to-day indicate another substantial rise for this week.

MONTREAL SABBATH UNDER SABBATH LAW

It was not evident to the ordinary observer that there was any special difference between the manner in which yesterday's Sabbath was observed, and the previous ones. Yet yesterday found new legislation in force, including the Lord's Day Act, a Federal measure, and the Sunday Observance Bill, a Provincial enactment.

Members of the Provincial section of the Dominion Alliance and the City Alliance, when seen to-day, said that no special provisions had been made to observe the manner in which the Acts were carried out on the first Sunday. Those seen said that they had seen the sale of newspapers on the streets, and had noticed that cigar and candy shops were open, and expressed the emphatic opinion that such things are against the spirit and letter of the law.

Rev. J. Edgar Hill, president of the City Alliance, said that he had observed the selling of newspapers, and that while proceeding through the streets had noticed that shops for the sale of cigars and candies were open. He had seen, too, a place where exhibitions by picture machines and phonographs are usually given, was open and running as on week days.

"We did not make any effort to see how the Act was observed," said Dr. Hill. "We will work with the Civic authorities. We will meet them as soon as a conference can be arranged for, and it is probable that as soon as that shall have been done the future plans will be discussed. It is not intended to ask for such measures as will prove too stringent or inconvenient. The Provincial Bill seems to be a satisfactory one."

Rev. Robert Johnston, said that there had been an informal meeting of The Lord's Day Alliance this morning, at which the matter had been discussed informally. He explained that no special provision had been made on Sunday to see how the law had been carried out. He expressed the opinion that matters had been about as usual.

"They sold papers on the street, and cigar shops were open," said Rev. Mr. Johnston. "That is certainly against the provisions of the law."

BUILDING INSPECTOR ORDERS ALL SCHOOLS TO PUT ON FIRE ESCAPES AND MAKE OTHER IMPORTANT REFORMS

The lesson of the Hochelaga school fire is bearing fruit. The reports of the staff of the Star as to the absence of means of escape from the various schools, or the majority of them, came like a rude shock to the public, who assumed that the law was being carried out. The inspection of the Catholic schools by City Building Inspector Chausse was made before the Prefontaine St. school fire, and the Protestant schools have been visited by him since. The conditions that he discovered prove that the warnings of the Star were in no way exaggerated, and he has taken measures to bring about an immediate enforcement of the law, issuing a drastic and imperative notice to the heads of all schools.

After an inspection of the various schools in the city, both Catholic and Protestant, was completed a report showing how schools, in the future, must be provided with fire escapes, was made by Inspector Chausse.

The report says that many schools are practically without any fire escapes. The report, which has been sent to the heads of the schools, lays down the following drastic rules which schools must follow in the future in order to protect the lives of scholars.

"Rule 1.—Fire escapes must be installed in all schools and colleges in each and every flat above the ground floor.

"Rule 3.—Ceilings must be completed [in fur]nace rooms, must be completely encased in brick.

"Rule .—Ceilings must be completed in fire proof material in order to lessen the danger of fire spreading.

"Rule 4.—As it has been found that in certain schools doors opened in an outward direction, all doors, in the future must be so constructed that they will open outward. This will lessen danger in case of fire.

"Rule 5.—All gas lights must be encased in a manner that it will be impossible for fire to be caused by them."

Speaking of the above reforms Mr. Chausse said: "When these new methods of fire protection are installed in all the schools and colleges it will be found that the safety of scholars will be greatly augmented. I may say that it is the intention to see that these rules are strictly enforced. I have sent copies to the above to the principals of all schools and colleges. It ought to be said that there is a feeling among the heads of all the schools that every precaution should be taken to lessen the danger of fire in such buildings.

"There is to be a meeting of the Fire Committee when these new regulations will be discussed. I have no doubt whatever but that the committee will approve of the instructions which have been sent. Many of the schools will need considerable remodelling in order to submit to the new order of things. The law, however, must be complied with."

MONTREAL'S WATER SHORTAGE ACUTE

Pump Again Working Badly, Aqueduct Frozen, Supply Short—Action Demanded.

The recent breaking down of the Worthington pump has caused a considerable amount of dissatisfaction to a large number of citizens, those principally affected being in the neighborhood of Sherbrooke and Prince Arthur streets from Park avenue east to City Hall avenue. On Rivard, Colonial avenue, Park avenue, St. Urbain, City Hall avenue, St. Dominique, and many other streets, people have been obliged for a considerable time to carry pail after pail of water from the nearest points where it is obtainable, and throughout the entire day and greater part of the evening the spectacle in these districts presents a picture of village life with the villagers carrying their pails of water from the point where hangs "the old oaken bucket" to their domiciles. The loss of time and the inconvenience resulting from such a state of affairs is the cause of a great deal of complaint, and it is a cause for surprise that the city authorities have not acted with promptitude in this matter, and relieved the citizens from inconvenience before this time. To the south of this district already mentioned the water is coming in spasms, and as a rule very weakly, so much so, that in several cases the supply is not nearly equal to the demand.

A few energetic people, some with an eye to the pecuniary returns, and others actuated by a philanthropic motive, have taken matters into their own hands, and are distributing water, by means of barrels placed temporarily on sleds, and are making the rounds of the district supplying as much water as their limited carrying capacity will allow.

The second and third storeys of the buildings are affected to a greater extent than the ground flats, though the latter have not escaped the miniature water famine.

However, the principal complaint is in regard to sanitary effects, and the flushing of closets. Especially is this a matter of grave importance where the children are concerned. Complaint after complaint is being made in this direction, and it is suggested as a remedy that hydrants should be arranged in the affected districts to allow the citizens to secure the water as they wanted it. However, the authorities have awakened to the fact that it was time something was accomplished to relieve the situation, and to-day about twenty of the city watering carts have been put in commission and water is being supplied to those in need of it as rapidly as possible.

"The fact is that citizens cannot get a normal water supply until the ice has gone and there is more water in the river." Such were the uncomforting words to-day of Mr. Janin, superintendent of the Water Department.

"What is the cause of the water pressure being so bad again during the two past days?" was asked.

In reply Mr. Janin said that the big Worthington pump, which broke down last week, had to be stopped and repaired again both on Saturday and Sunday. This had resulted in the water in the reservoir getting low again. So long as the water was low in the reservoir the water pressure must be unsatisfactory. In certain parts of the city, practically no water could be got when there was little water in the reservoir.

Assistant Superintendent Lesage said: "The fact is that citizens are using more water than we can pump. The shortage of water is largely caused by there being very little water in the aqueduct. In addition to this the ice in the aqueduct is very thick. This also prevents a satisfactory volume of water coming to the pumps. Then we have had to suffer owing to the pump breaking down."

CHAIRMAN CLEARIHUE EXPLAINS.

Ald. Clearihue, chairman of the Water Committee, said: "The Water Committee is receiving some hard criticism because they have not succeeded in getting the new pump installed which the City Council bought so long ago. The pump was bought from John McDougall Co., of this city. The arrangement was that the pump must be delivered February 1, 1906. It has not been delivered up to the present date and the outlook is that we shall not get it for some months yet. For this the Water Committee is blamed. But let me explain matters a little, and we shall see if the blame is laid at the right door.

"On June 4th last, after repeated efforts to get the company to deliver the pump, the Water Committee passed a resolution ordering that a notarial protest be served on the company for delay in delivering the pump. This protest was duly served, but it did not result in the pump being given to the city. The excuse was that the company was doing its utmost to get the pump completed. Now a fine of $25 a day is to be imposed on the company for every day that it is behind in the delivery of the pump. We shall see if the City Council will stick to this agreement, and impose the fine. For my part, I shall insist that the fine be imposed. It is too bad that the city was not in possession of the pump long ago. If the company had kept to its agreement the city would not have been short of water last week when the big Worthington pump broke down.

"It will be remembered that when the City Council decided to give the contract for the pump to the McDougall Company I fought to have an English firm, which was the lowest tenderer, given the contract. My advice was not taken, the McDougall's got the contract, and in consequence we have the present condition of affairs in regard to the water supply."

ELEVATOR STOPPED.

The city fathers had a striking demonstration to-day at the City Hall as to just how poor the water pressure was. The elevator at the Civic Palace is propelled by hydraulic power. At about 10 a.m. two aldermen and a boy got on the elevator on the ground floor to go to the third storey. They never reached their destination by the hydraulic lift. When the elevator, after sundry valiant efforts to start got half way up to the first floor it went on strike, and would budge no further. The elevator man conveyed the intelligence that there was not sufficient water to take the machine any higher. One of the aldermen said certain things under his breath. The elevator man turned the handle of the elevator and did his very best to remedy matters, but all to no avail. What made matters still more distressing was that the machine refused for a time either to ascend or descend. The aldermen were practically imprisoned. Finally the elevator man persuaded the elevator to go down. When this was accomplished the aldermen went back to the ancient method of ascending by the stairs.

It was explained by Ald. Clearihue that owing to the lowness of water in the aqueduct the city was only able to run one of the turbines at the wheel house. If the water were higher four turbines could be run. This would result in the city having plenty of water.

MR. ROBERT HOWE'S REPORT.

At the meeting of the City Council to-day the Underwriters will submit the report of Mr. Robert Howe, expert, in regard to the water supply situation in the city.

The report says:

"Owing to the recent breakdown of one of the steam pumps the total pumping capacity, with the aid of the auxiliary turbines, was for a few days reduced to 25 million gallons, a shortage from the actual consumption of 9 million gallons; in consequence of this large deficiency the reservoir was not only practically emptied, but the supply was insufficient to reach the higher levels of the city. The resumption of the disabled pump increased the supply by 9 million gallons per day, but such additional quantity, added to the other sources of supply, is only equal to the city's daily requirements, without yet being able to refill the reservoir and thus provide a reserve for any emergency, such as the occurrence of a conflagration or of another breakdown. Such conditions demand the immediate completion of the new pump, which is now only partly erected, although guaranteed to be in commission one year ago, and also necessitates immediate steps being taken to furnish additional steam pumping capacity, so as to provide for the requirements caused by the expansion of the city and to act as reserve in case of accident.

"There is no reason why the pump now under construction should not be completed and in working order by the 1st of May next.

"Boilers.—The present boiler capacity is practically only sufficient to furnish the necessary power to the pumps in existence, and when the new pump now being erected is in commission, further steam power will be required in order to operate it and provide the necessary reserve. It is thus imperative that steps be at once taken to provide additional boiler capacity before next winter.

"Pump house and boiler house buildings. As frequently pointed out, these buildings are of inferior construction, ceilings and walls being lined throughout with inflammable wood sheathing, and all lighted by coal oil lamps. Any accident causing the destruction of these buildings would result in leaving the city almost if not entirely without water for an indefinite period. It is therefore necessary that such improvements should at once be made to the buildings as will remove the danger now existing, of their being destroyed by fire.

"Such improvements and the substitution of safely installed electric light, in lieu of the present coal oil lamps, should be effected before the 1st May next.

"The 24-inch main on Notre Dame street east.—This main was cut to allow an extension of the C. P. R. property some years ago, and attention has since then been repeatedly called to its present condition, which impairs the protection intended to be afforded by that circuit. So soon as the weather permits the necessary connection should be made, in order to complete the circuit and secure the full value thereof.

It is expected that the City Council at its meeting to-day, will refer the above communication to the Water Committee for an immediate report.

New York, March 4. Messrs. Kenneth Molsen and A. Weiss, of Montreal, sail for Europe to-morrow on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse.

FIRE ESCAPES FOUND ON FEW SCHOOLS

The Need for Enforcing the Law Regarding Fire-Escapes is Now Most Apparent.

The feeling is growing in Montreal that it is necessary to take immediate action to insist upon the law being carried out as to the placing and maintaining of fire escapes on schools and similar institutions. The investigation already made by the Star, since the fire at Hochelaga, has demonstrated that not only in the lack of any external stairways, or galleries, but in the absence of any special protection against fire, other than fire drill in some instances, the day schools of Montreal are places of daily peril instead of those places of safety that parents supposed they were.

It is like an oasis in a desert to come across an institution where the chances of fire appear to have been taken into intelligent consideration and means of escape provided for. In one institution cited to-day it will be seen that the Lady Superior takes a view of external fire escapes which would perhaps agree with that of most experts. This lady does not regard them as something to be directly used by small children, themselves, but as affording ready means for assistance from outside to get to them and save lives, in case the internal stairways and other means of exit were cut off. As is pointed out, in a building filled with smoke, the inmates might easily find their way to the galleries or external fire escapes, remain for some time in comparative safety, and would certainly not be suffocated while waiting rescue from the firemen, or other outside assistance.

HAVE FIRE ESCAPES AND BELIEVE IN THEM.

St. Urbain Academy, on upper St. Urbain street, an independent school for girls, under the direction of the Sisters of the Congregation, has every precaution against fire. The house is not, properly-speaking, a boarding school, yet about a dozen young ladies board there. The main object of the institution, however, is to attend to the educational wants of over two hundred pupils who come each day.

The building is well situated, with ample space on either side and at the back. Two fire escapes on the outside of the building, one at the rear and one on the south side, can be easily reached from the various school rooms. Besides this, there are several stairways inside the building, leading directly to doors which open outwards to the yard, from which egress to the street is easy. Wide corridors give ample space to marshal the children and lead them out should the necessity ever occur. Hot water heating is used, one furnace being at the rear, and the other near the front, while there are three exits in between. Besides the inner and outer staircases, there are on the flat in which the sleeping rooms and some of the class rooms are situated, three balconies, reached by broad doors, which are easily opened from the inside. Should a fire start the pupils could easily be led out to these balconies where they would be in safety for a considerable time, and would be free from any danger from suffocation. Even should one of these balconies be reached by fire before help came, there is but a drop of ten feet to another platform some eight feet below from which it would be possible to reach the street level without serious danger.

In addition to the staircases and balconies the sisters have provided their schools with hose and stand pipes. Rev. Sister St. Cornelia, superior, when asked whether there was any fire drill practised in the institution, replied in the negative. She declared that the sisters instructed the pupils as to what was to be done, and the habit of obedience to the sisters was so strong that they depended on this to secure the safety of the pupils in time of danger. She referred to the manner in which the pupils at Williamstown had quietly followed their teacher when she took them during the night to pick up their clothing and march downstairs while the building was being consumed. The nun marched backwards keeping an eye along the line and all went quietly down the stairs to safety.

Commenting on fire escapes, Rev. Sister St. Cornelia expressed the view that while they might not be of great use to the pupils themselves, as the little ones might grow nervous, they could certainly serve a useful purpose should it be necessary to remove the children and the inner exits be cut off, because men could come up and carry the little ones to safety.

CANVAS CHUTE ESCAPE. FIRE EXTINGUISHERS.

The Visitation Academy, conducted by the Sisters of Notre Dame, is on Craig street, between Panet and Visitation streets. It is a four-storey building, with cut stone front and brick side and rear walls. There are about 120 day scholars, girls, attending this institution, and there are twenty-three rooms, of which seven are used as class rooms. The others are music room, chapel, cloak rooms, dormitories, etc. The corridors are wide and the staircases appear to be ample. On every floor Babcock and tubular fire extinguishers are placed. On the top floor there is a Universal fire escape, a canvas chute rolled up in a chest, which can be moved about on wheels. When required for use it is moved to a window, and the bag or chute lowered, and the children dropped safely down the tube. There are no outside fire escapes, because they have been regarded as encouragements for burglars, but the lady superior expressed herself as quite willing to have external stairways put on the buildings if required, or make any further alteration in the way of safety that was found desirable. The small children in the kindergarten classes were on the ground floor.

DID NOT FIND ANY FIRE ESCAPES THERE.

Ald. Yates, chairman of the Fire Committee, and Chief Benoit, made an official inspection of Aberdeen School to-day. They reported that the school was not supplied with fire escapes. In all other respects, however, the school was found to be in excellent condition. The scholars numbered 1,300. A test showed that the entire number could vacate the school in three and a quarter minutes.

Funeral of Late Mr. Charles McLean.

The funeral of the late Charles McLean, senior member of the firm of McLean & Kennedy, took place this afternoon, and was very largely attended. Members of the Board of Trade, Shipping Federation and Corn Exchange were especially numerous in the cortege. The funeral left the house on Fort street at 2.30 and proceeded to Mount Royal Cemetery.

FARMERS KEPT AWAY FROM TIMBER LIMITS

Winnipeg Wood Merchant Makes Serious Charge Against Dominion Government.

Winnipeg, Man., March 4. — "One of the main causes of the wood shortage in Winnipeg this winter," said H. J. Comlins, who has been in the city for years in the wood business, "is the fact that the Dominion Government has given nearly all the timber limits along the main line of the Canadian Northern, between here and the Rainy River, to its friends, and have refused permits to farmers. They have, by their action, driven hundreds of settlers away.

"The farmers, when they saw the notice in the papers that they could cut on Government lands, started to secure a supply. Now the agents of the Dominion Government have stopped them and have confiscated their wood. In addition, they tell the settlers that it is the Manitoba Government who is responsible, and are endeavoring to turn votes against the Conservative candidates.

"Many of the limits have not been touched for three or four years," added Comlins. "wood was so scarce that the settlers went on some of these deserted limits, but this wood also has been confiscated and returned to the owners. All of the settlers have paid their fees for permits to cut, but there is none to get without going thirty or forty miles away. If there is not a change I predict there will be another wood famine next winter."

SCORED JOHN MITCHELL.

Torontos Socialist Candidate for Mayor Dissects His Views.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Toronto, March 4.—Trade Unionists who do not accord with the views of the Socialists and the so-called "ruling classes" were vehemently denounced at a crowded mass meeting of Socialists of many stripes in the labor temple yesterday afternoon. Of those present about four-fifths were foreigners.

Joseph Lindal, the Socialist candidate for Mayor, at the recent civic election, occupied the chair. Among those who came in for denunciation was John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers, who was roundly score for his views expressed in "Organized Labor," a book which he has recently published.

DELMAS OBJECTS TO PLAY THAW'S VICTIM

Jumps Away From Jerome Who Rehearses Tragedy in Court for Dr. Evans' Benefit.

New York, March 4.—Dr. Britton D. Evans, the New Jersey alienist, was again placed upon the witness stand as soon as Thaw was called to the bar to-day.

In resuming his cross examination of Dr. Evans, Mr. Jerome asked:

"Doctor, reverting to the night of the shooting of Stanford White, does the fact that the defendant walked deliberately away without excitement after the shooting appear to you to be an important fact in determining whether the defendant was insane?"

"Yes, based on all the facts and the somewhat dramatic manner in which he acted. The fact that he walked deliberately away without any effort to escape, indicates to me that he did not know he had done anything wrong or that should make him shrink from his fellow men or from the officers of the law."

Witness said that the fact that Thaw told the fireman who seized him "he ruined my wife," indicated "that this one thought, which had weighed down upon him—which had been devouring his soul was still with him, it was in the forefront of his thought."

"You believe that Thaw was reasoning on a false, delusional premise?"

"I believe his reason was dethroned, yes."

Dr. Evans was unable to understand the exact relative positions of Thaw and White before and at the time of the shooting, so Mr. Jerome acted the scene out for him.

"We'll imagine Mr. Delmas is the victim," he said, turning suddenly, and Mr. Delmas dodged. The judge and jury laughed. Mr. Jerome described Thaw's passage down the roof garden, his turning to the left and walking 25 feet to the table where White sat with his head in his hand.

"Then he turned deliberately and calmly and shot Stanford White dead. Does that fact show that he knew what he was doing?"

"No," replied Dr. Evans, "his calmness does not show he knew, but might indicate that perhaps he did."

"Then he walked down to the table calmly and turned quietly, does that show anything?"

"It shows he was acting in an abnormal manner."

When Thaw told the policeman that he had shot White and when ordered to go to the station house, he said "all right," Dr. Evans declared, "there had been a readjustment of his mental processes, and he knew that White had been shot and that he did it."

"Are insane persons deterred by fear of punishment?" asked Mr. Jerome.

"A great many are."

"That is all," said Mr. Jerome, and the long cross-examination of the alienist was concluded.

Dr. Charles Wawner was then called.

LINER FOUNDERS BUT ALL HANDS ARE SAFE

Yokohama, March 4. — It develops to-day that the report that the passengers of the Great Northern Company's steamer Dakota, which went ashore off Shirahama, in the Bay of Tokio, at six o'clock on Sunday night, were taken off by the steamer Omimaru, which was sent to her assistance by the agents of the company, was incorrect.

The Omimaru returned here last night without the passengers, having been unable to get alongside the wreck owing to the heavy seas which were running. She reported that the Dakota was deserted and was dangerously sunk by the head. All the passengers and crew were landed at Nogima Light House. They lost all their baggage. Ten bags of mail were saved.

There is no fear of a strike, the prospects for amicable settlement of all the points in question being excellent.

Funeral of Late Jacob Henry Joseph

The funeral of the late Mr. Jacob Henry Joseph took place yesterday morning from the family residence, on Sherbrooke street, at half past eleven. The funeral was of a strictly private character, in deference to the wishes of the deceased gentleman. There was a brief service at the house conducted by Rabbi DeSola.

PRICE OF HARD COAL WILL TAKE A JUMP

Coal Companies Have Issued Notice of Increase on April First.

Special to the Montreal Star.

New York, March 4. — Notice has been given by the anthracite community of interests to independent producers that there will be increase in price of coal to consumers within a short time. The opinion prevails that the advance will come about April first. Coal companies contend that the cost of mining has increased greatly in the last ten years and that at present prices it is impossible for companies to realize a fair return on their money. In most places, they assert, the coal now lies very deep and is exceedingly expensive to mine. The cost to keep the mines free of water is also said to be enormous.

ANOTHER SLUMP CARRIES THE HILL STOCKS LOWER

Break of About 8 Points In Two Stocks From Saturday's Highest

BOTH COAL AND STEEL WERE QUIET LOCALLY.

Lots of Interest In the Fight for Proxies But No Trading In the Market.

Although the all-absorbing topic on the "Street" is the Steel and Coal battle, the trading in those issues amounts to next to nothing.

Coal was on the easy side, and after 50 shares had sold at 67 it went off to 66½. The only sale of Steel was 10 shares at 22.

Lower Ludd around 30, and of the Southern issues Rio sold at 46 to 46¾, and Mexican 53.

There was a sale of 125 shares of Canadian Pacific at 181, and there were some deals in Detroit around 77.

The weakness in Wall Street seems to be throwing a wet blanket over the local list, and besides that money keeps tight.

HILL STOCKS DIP.

The Hill stocks continue very sick in Wall Street. Northern Pacific broke to 137¾, a decline of 8 points from Saturday's highest, while Great Northern opened three points down from Saturday's highest, at 155, and then broke to 154.

The slump in these issues affected the rest of the market and the only two issues to show any real strength were Reading and Anaconda. Amalgamated was firm.

SOO LINE.

DOMINION STEEL.

In connection with the readjustment of the wage schedule at the head of the Dominion Steel Company, the following official statement was given out: "Owing to change in conditions it became necessary to re-adjust the wage schedule at the open-hearth department and the blooming mills. This was done very carefully and with a full consideration for the interest of every employee in these departments. Under the new schedule there will be no reduction in earnings of any of them from average earnings for the past year. Some men will earn more and it is possible that the earnings of all may be materially increased." The rail mill schedule is also under consideration."

Bar silver in London is unchanged at 32 pence.

TWIN CITY FIGURES.

The Twin City Rapid Transit Company's earnings for the third week of February amounted to $106,277, being an increase over the same week last year of $10,733, or 11.45 per cent., and an increase of $24,218 over the corresponding period of 1905.

BANK STOCK'S DECLINE.

The Bank of Hamilton stock dropped 4 points to 209 to-day, its lowest figure since 1904, while Imperial dropped from 220 to 217½. The Canadian bank stocks nearly all appear to be gradually adjusting themselves to a level which will give a higher investment return than they have given for some time.—Toronto Star.

THE STEEL AND COAL BATTLE.

Mr. J. H. Plummer, president of the Dominion Steel Company.

$650,000 GOLD FOR CANADA.

A shipment of $650,000 gold was made the other day from New York to Canada. The N. Y. Summary makes this stab in the dark

"Presumably the gold was for 'window-dressing' in the February report."

TOTAL IS NOW $340,090,000 !

There is no let-up to the Cobalt deluge

Last week 14 mines were incorporated with a total capitalization of $10,750,000. Which brings the total capital of all mines up to $340,090,000.

ANOTHER BANK IS COMING.

The Sterling Bank of Canada, which started business in Toronto in May last, will open a branch in Montreal on the 1st of April next, that institution having taken premises in the Standard Building, St. James street.

4 PER CENTS WENT SLOWLY.

London, March 4.—Only 70 per cent. of the Grand Trunk Pacific issue of 4 per cent. debentures has been subscribed.

TWIN CITY'S SURPLUS GAIN.

An Increase of Nearly $6,000 Was Shown In January.

Twin City's net statement for January shows an increase of over $11,000 and a surplus gain of not quite $6,000. The comparative figures for three years are as follows:

	1907	1906	1905
Jan. gross.	$456,837	$407,865	$351,121
Expenses	243,597	209,161	196,015
Jan. net	$213,240	$202,346	$155,806
Charges and tax.	115,258	109,708	97,325
Jan. sur.	$98,482	$92,638	$58,481

$4,100,000 BONDS TAKEN.

The Rio de Janeiro Tramway Light & Power Company received a cable advice that the balance of the issue amounting to $4,100,000 had been underwritten by a strong international syndicate composed of prominent banking houses in London and on the Continent. The $5,000,000 of bonds originally issued were taken by the syndicate which had been formed abroad in the autumn.

HANSONS GET WINNIPEGS.

$1,500,000 Bonds Taken by the London Firm of Coates.

Hanson & Fergusson of Montreal, on behalf of Wm. Coates & Son, of London, Eng., bought Winnipeg's new debentures. The tender of Coates & Son is £97 5s 9d for each £100 of $1,504,506 4 per cent. debentures of the city.

In addition, Coates & Son will pay accrued interest to date of delivery subject to bonds being issued in sterling, delivery and payment in London.

The offer is considered a particularly good one in Winnipeg, and relieves the financial stringency which threatened serious results to the progress of the city, it having been reported that Winnipeg was unable to finance longer than a month ahead.

SALES ON LOCAL EXCHANGE.

The record of transactions on the Montreal Stock Exchange for the past week shows a total of 12,665 shares in the general list, along with 734 bank shares and bonds to the par value of $94,000.

This compares with a total of 12,996 shares in the general list for the preceding week along with 428 bank shares, and $160,000 worth of bonds.

ROCKEFELLER'S DIVIDENDS.

He Has Received $74,294,000 From the Standard Oil Co.

The statement recently issued to the effect that Mr. Rockefeller's income was never more than $20,000,000 a year, does not harmonize with the announcement that he is worth less than $300,000,000.

The Standard Oil Co. over the last nine years, has disbursed to stockholders $371,477,700. Based on Mr. Gates' statement that Mr. Rockefeller's holdings of Standard Oil are equivalent to 20 per cent. of the capital of $100,000,000, Rockefeller's income within the period in question from Standard Oil stock alone was $74,294,600.

From 1898 to 1907 inclusive the Standard Oil Co. will have paid to stockholders approximately $400,000,000, of which John D. Rockefeller's share, based on his alleged holdings of 20 per cent., will be $80,000,000. The interest on this sum would run the total close to $100,000,000.

The following table gives the disbursements of the Standard Oil Co. over a series of years, and John D. Rockefeller's share based on his alleged holdings of 20 per cent.:

Year.	Rate	Amount	Rockefeller's share.
1907	*15	$14,750,000	$2,950,000
1906	40	39,200,000	7,840,000
1905	40	39,200,000	7,840,000
1904	36	35,280,000	7,056,000
1903	45	43,123,000	8,624,600
1902	45	44,100,000	8,820,000
1901	48	47,040,000	9,408,000
1900	48	47,040,000	9,408,000
1899	33	32,340,000	6,468,000
1898	20	29,400,000	5,880,000
Total		$371,423,000	$74,294,600

It is generally believed that Mr. Rockefeller holds over 50 per cent. of Standard Oil.

BIG COBALT DEAL REPORTED.

It was rumored around the local "street" to-day that an American syndicate has bought control of the Kerr Lake from the Jarvis crowd for $3,500,000.

LOCAL UNLISTED STOCKS.

In the unlisted department to-day, the sales were 500 Green Meehan at 102½ to 106, 500 Nova Scotia at 41, 100 Illinois common at 40, and 300 Trethewey at 170 and 169. A feature was the rise in Peterson Lake from 51 on Saturday to 65 to-day.

TO INCREASE THE CAPITAL.

Toronto, Ont., March 4. — At a meeting of the directors of the Lake George Mining Company, it was decided to increase the capital stock from $600,000 to $1,500,000 in $1 shares. The shareholders will receive two and a half shares of the new stock for every share of the old stock

FIGHT FOR CONTROL OF COAL STOCK, HOLDING COMPANY INTERESTS GETTING BETWEEN 40,000 AND 50,000 SHARES

But Mr. Ross and Friends Claim Safe Majority for Meeting on Thursday—If Well Enough Mr. Z. A. Lash Will Launch the New Scheme to Shareholders.

What promised to be a keen fight for the control of the Dominion Coal Company has ended, from surface indications, in the anti-administration party accumulating proxies for some 40,000 to 50,000 shares.

Leading Coal interests claim, however, that if there is a show of hands at the annual meeting next Thursday, Mr. Ross and his friends will have a substantial majority in voting power.

The contest for proxies was an active one, and the interests in favor of the Holding Company plan developed unexpected strength.

The now familiar red proxy on which the names of Sir William Van Horne, Mr. H. F. Dimock and Mr. Z. A. Lash, the famous corporation lawyer, appeared, was extensively circulated and largely signed.

On the black or Ross proxy, appeared the names of Mr. James Ross, Mr. R. B. Angus, Mr. F. L. Wanklyn and Mr. James Reid Wilson.

The general hustle for proxies was apparent to all of the people on the "Street," and the only picturesque feature lacking in the contest was the active buying of stock in the open market.

The present chapter, now being unravelled is unquestionably the most interesting of all the many interesting chapters of the Steel-Coal fight, and apparently the future will develop several events of importance in the battle between the two concerns.

The Holding Company Idea.

Some time ago, or just before the departure of Mr. James Ross for Europe, there was, as the Star stated at the time, a valiant effort made to settle the dispute between the two concerns, and avoid what promised to be a tedious and costly campaign in the courts of Nova Scotia and before the Privy Council of England.

Mr. E. R. Wood, of Toronto, had two long interviews with Mr. Ross in the latter's office, and among other things a Holding Company was suggested, the plans of which varied somewhat from the present ideas, as it was proposed early in negotiations to issue a collateral trust bond.

Nothing tangible was accomplished before the departure of Mr. Ross, and nothing more was heard of the Holding Company idea until the announcement of the project in these columns.

It appears, however, that prominent men identified with both concerns had been busily working out a plan which they might present to the shareholders of the two companies.

Senator Cox, a director of both Coal and Steel; Sir William Van Horne, a Steel director and an ex-Coal director; Mr. H. F. Dimock, a director of both concerns, the largest shareholder of Steel common, and one of the largest shareholders of Coal, and Mr. Z. A. Lash, director of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and the Canada Life, the latter concern a heavy holder of Coal stock, are the men who are known to be the sponsors for the Holding Company idea as it now stands.

They submitted their plan to Mr. J. H. Plummer, Senator Forget and other Steel directors, and it met with hearty endorsement and the promise of support.

Mr. Ross's Friends Object.

But the plan did not please Coal leaders like Mr. Ross, Mr. Wanklyn, Mr. Angus, Mr. James Reid Wilson and others. They are said to be willing to meet the Steel Company and discuss a settlement, but not through such a project as has been suggested. Their argument is that the Coal Company is now firmly established on its feet.

They point out that it does not owe a dollar, that it has a surplus of 12 per cent. on the $15,000,000 capital, and that the outlook is extremely bright.

They say, in addition, that the company's interests will best be served by permitting it to work out its own destiny as a separate concern.

Then came the hustle for proxies and a clever move by the powers in control.

It was suddenly announced last week that the Coal directors would meet next Thursday morning, a few hours before the annual meeting, to discuss the question of paying a dividend on Coal common.

It was generally believed on the "Street" that there would be no dividend on Coal for at least a year, and to say that the announcement came as a surprise is putting it somewhat mildly.

It was the object, of course, to make the Coal shareholders satisfied with conditions as they exist at present, and it seems likely now that a dividend at the rate of at least 4 per cent. per annum will be declared at the directors' special meeting.

The Gathering Next Thursday.

There is just a bare possibility that the Holding Company project will not be put before the Coal shareholders at Thursday's meeting, as the checkerboard is still out, and a few more moves may be made in the interval.

But if present plans are preserved, and his health permits, Mr. Z. A. Lash, of Toronto, will attend and will lay the Holding Company project before the gathering.

Mr. Lash will point out the advantages of the plan as the one best suited to settle the differences of the companies and obliterate the lawsuit that will end in heavy financial loss to one of the two concerns.

The plan, as stated in these columns before, calls for the retirement of Dominion Coal stock in exchange for 5 per cent. bonds guaranteed by the Dominion Steel Co., and also a bonus of 20 per cent. preferred stock.

If 6 per cent. is earned the extra one per cent. goes towards this preferred stock. Anything over 6 per cent. earned is divided equally between the Coal preferred and the Steel securities.

This is the bare outline of the project that will get the support of from 40,000 to 50,000 shares.

Mr. Ross' friends hail it as a plan that will bolster up the Steel Company at the expense of Coal.

The ensuing argument, if the plan is launched at the meeting, will be interesting in the extreme, and the shareholders will get a clearer insight into the underlying elements of the struggle than they have ever obtained before.

There are 150,000 shares of Coal common and 30,000 shares of preferred, 180,000 shares in all.

It is believed that well over 140,000 shares will be represented at the meeting.

The Leaders In the Fight.

Loyalty to Mr. Ross, and the deep conviction that they are acting in the best interests of the Coal Company, makes it unnecessary to dwell further upon the motives of Mr. R. B. Angus, Mr. Wilson, Mr Wanklyn, and others in opposing the plan.

A word as to the Holding Company leaders.

Senator Cox crossed swords with Mr. Ross the moment that the trouble with the Steel Company occurred. So did Sir William Van Horne.

Both gentlemen expressed intense displeasure at the fact that as Coal directors they were not consulted when Mr. Ross threw down the gauntlet to the Steel Company.

Sir William Van Horne stated that Mr. Ross was both morally and legally wrong, and in a stiff letter to the Dominion Coal president he resigned from the board.

Senator Cox talked of resigning, too, but evidently held on for just such an emergency as has now arisen.

The Senator is deeply interested in the Bank of Commerce, which loaned a great deal of money to the Steel Company in its dark days, and is also interested in the Canada Life and other Western concerns which are holders of Dominion Coal.

Mr. Z. A. Lash, famous as one of Canada's greatest corporation lawyers, and the legal adviser of Mackenzie & Mann, is also a director of the Bank of Commerce and the Canada Life, and is a personal holder of Dominion Coal stock.

Mr. E. R. Wood, the first man to talk of the Holding Company, is Senator Cox's "right arm."

Mr. H. F. Dimock is a brother-in-law of Mr. Henry M. Whitney. Mr. Dimock, is, as stated before, a big holder in both concerns, and will come to the meeting armed with several proxies from Coal holders in Boston.

There is a good deal of stock on the Boston register of the Coal Company, and some of it is personally owned by Mr. James Ross.

Lots of Action To-day.

There was plenty of action to-day, especially in the Coal camp. The hustle for proxies continued, and before noon there was a meeting of the Dominion Coal executive. Mr. W. D. Matthews, a Toronto director, was present.

The advertisement in the papers stating that "a body of shareholders holding over 40,000 shares are dissatisfied with the manner in which the affairs of the Coal Co. have been administered," and calling for proxies, caused a stir on the "Street."

The advertisement stated in conclusion: "Any shareholder who is in sympathy with this movement is invited to support it, either by being present in person at the meeting, or by signing and sending a proxy to the undersigned, which will be effective even though a previous proxy may have been given."

Incidentally the charge was made that an inspection of the list of shareholders had been refused, and that the notice was published as the only way of informing the shareholders generally of the action proposed.

Mr. F. L. Wanklyn's Reply.

Mr. Wanklyn, the vice-president of the Dominion Coal Company, being asked if he had seen the advertisement in this morning's papers calling for proxies for the annual meeting of the Dominion Coal Company, on 7th March, in the names of Sir Wm. Van Horne, H. F. Dimock and Z. Lash, K.C., stated that he had read the advertisement in question, and all he had to say in reply was, that the advertisement in his opinion was quite unnecessary, because incorrect. The list of shareholders has never been refused to any one entitled to see it, and doubtless those who framed the advertisement were well aware of their rights in this respect.

"The shareholders of the Dominion Coal Company who place its interests before those of any other company will doubtless attend the annual meeting on 7th March, or if unable to do so will give their proxies to some one whose interests are identical with their own. The Coal Company has reason to believe that proxies have been, and will be, sought in support of a movement originated in the interest of another company, with whom the Coal Company is at present in litigation. The affairs of the Coal Company have been administered solely in the interests of its own shareholders, and with no regard to pressure from other interests. The Coal Company is quite confident the shareholders will approve of everything that has been done."

THE STEEL AND COAL BATTLE

Mr. F. L. Wanklyn, who will preside at the Dominion Coal meeting.

Market Irregular And Unsettled

From the Special Correspondent of the Montreal Star on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Chicago, March 4.—This market was irregular and unsettled. It sold lower early, reacted some from the bottom only to weaken again. The average trader is bearish, but the consensus of opinion is that wheat would do better as soon as the present liquidation is at an end.

Those who have claimed that C. M. Schwab, the steel man, was interested in wheat despite his denials, think they have a confirmation of their theory owing to the presence of Schwab's confidential man, who was in Chicago on Friday and spent the day with people closely connected with the Pringle house. No one was aware of the fact that the smart-looking little man who was around the wheat pit during the morning had anything to do with Schwab, but it leaked out this morning the Pringle house "put" 6,000,000 bushels wheat in the last three days, and on Saturday brought "put" on bushels on 2,000,000 more. The big operations in "puts" are construed as meaning that the big line of wheat held by the New York bulls is being liquidated through the privileges. Instead of through the open market and Pringle is the only man to do it easily without the trade becoming suspicious, as he is a big trader when in the market and the crowd are not afraid of him. There was 5,000,000 bushels of wheat unloaded through the daily and weekly "puts" on Saturday, the Pringle house having "downs" on over 2,000,000 bushels. Valentine had 1,000,000 bushels, and there was easily 2,000,000 bushels of daily and weekly "downs" in the hands of other traders.

WHEAT QUIET AND WEAK.

The Liverpool spot wheat market closed to-day quiet in tone. No. 1 northern Manitoba, 6s 6½d to 6s 7d; No. 2 northern 6s 5½d to 6s 6d.

Options on wheat steady. March, 6s 5d; May, 6s 5¼d; July, 6s 2¼d.

The Paris wheat market closed steady. March, 23 45; July and August, 23 15.

Valuable Hints To Canadian Producers

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, Ont., March 4. — Some valuable hints to Canadian producers and shippers, as well as to importers, are contained in a report to the Trade and Commerce Department by the agent at Leeds. He notes the arrival of a consignment of Canadian Baldwin apples packed in boxes of 125 apples each, which were marked as being far ahead of New Zealand fruit. They brought from $1.44 to $1.56 per box. Canadian bacon and hams are reported to be in good demand, as is also hay of the proper quality at $20 to $24.50 per ton. He says that Canadian pig iron, if of more uniform quality would command 50 per cent. higher prices; as it is, it sells for 110 shillings per ton, as against 54 to 60 shillings for Middlesborough. Swedish, however, sells for 130 to 200 shillings.

In the matter of the cutlery trade, he says: "I am informed that a very large amount of German cutlery, razors, etc., is shipped here from Germany marked Sheffield, and is then exported to Canada as 'Sheffield goods.'"

HAY, GRAIN AND FLOUR.

HAY—There is no change to report in the local hay market.

English advices received to-day all report a weak feeling, and in most cases shipments are the cause of exporters losing money.

New York is doing fairly well, owing to embargoes, and probably when these are lifted the New York market will suffer a setback.

Montreal is barely steady at old quotations, with hardly any demand: No. 1, $13 to $14; No. 2, $11.50 to $12.50, and $10.50 to $11 for clover mixed.

OATS—The market for oats in the West is easier at slightly lower prices, which however, are still too high for the Montreal market. Quotations on spot, 43 to 44c for No. 2, 42 to 43c for No. 3, and 41 to 42c for No. 4.

CORN—The local market for corn is firm at 56 to 60c, ex store.

BARLEY — There is a good fair demand for barley, but the offerings are light. Values, 52 to 54c per 48 lbs., ex store, for feed grades.

FLOUR—The local flour market is steady, but the demand is not very active. Prices remain unchanged.

Manitoba grades, $4 to $4.10 per bbl. in bags for strong bakers', and $4.50 to $4.60 for patents. Quotations on Ontarios are $3.75 to $3.85 per bag, and $1.80 to $1.60 for extras.

MILLFEED—The market for millfeed is firm, and supplies on spot are small. Bran is quoted at $21, and shorts at $22 per ton.

HAD SURE THING.

(Detroit News.)

Harriman is right when he says he wasn't speculating. It is the people who buy his stocks who are doing the speculating.

CHEESE STOCKS AT ENGLISH PORTS SHOW DECREASE

A Reduction of 74,400 Boxes During Month of February.

BUTTER MARKET ACTIVE AND HIGHER.

Fresh Eggs are Now Commencing to Arrive in Large Quantities and Prices Will Be Lower.

Cheese stocks in England, as declared on the 1st instant, show a considerable decrease during the month of February, being as follows:

	March 1st.	February 1st.
London	112,000	164,000
Liverpool	75,200	78,600
Bristol	52,000	71,000
	239,200	313,600

Decrease—74,400.

The local cheese market continues to be very firm for the small balance of cheese remaining unsold.

Stocks have now become so small that there is hardly any market at all, and what is still being offered for sale is held at top prices.

The decline in price in the Liverpool cable, as reported on the Board of Trade last Thursday, was incorrect, the quotations given being for American cheese, which prices were nominal, there being so few Americans offering. The Liverpool cable to-day reads: "American white nominal, 65s; colored nominal, 67s; Canadian white, strong, 66s; colored strong, 68s." The prices of Canadian cheese, therefore, show no alteration, but are, if anything, firmer. A cable from Bristol reports Canadian cheese strong at 67s to 70s

In Montreal holders are asking 13¾ to 14c, but business is rather on the quiet side.

The total amount of cheese reported as being received on the Board of Trade last week were 32 boxes, against 130 boxes for the week ending February 23rd.

BUTTER. — The butter market is much firmer, and with a rapid reduction in the stocks in store, prices have advanced from ½ cent to 1 cent per lb. over the figures asked a week ago.

From present indications there will be no butter to spare by the time the new make is offering, for the demand from all the large towns is very pronounced, which together with the large consumption locally had caused dealers to demand an advance in their prices; the most noticeable feature of the situation is the scarcity of choicest butters, and buyers requiring same have to pay top figures. Quotations to-day are for choicest, 26 to 26½c; choice, 25½ to 26c; other grades, 25 to 25½c as to quality.

Receipts of butter reported on the Board of Trade to-day were 212 packages.

The total receipts of butter last week were 934 packages, against 1,031 packages for week ending February 23rd.

RENDERED VERDICT WITHOUT RETIRING

Jury in Court of King's Bench Declared James Jackson Guilty of Highway Robbery.

James Jackson was brought up for trial in the Court of King's Bench today, before Mr. Justice Lavergne. The complainant was one Simon Pierre, who stated that on the 21st of January he had been set upon by two men, Jackson being one of them. The latter held him by the throat while the second man went through his pockets. In the box complainant said that he had been almost choked to death. Constable Charland had pursued Jackson for several blocks and had fired two revolver shots before he brought the prisoner to a standstill.

After hearing the evidence the jury, without retiring to their room, rendered a verdict of guilty.

The case of Alexander Currie was next called. After the swearing in of jury and the examination of a couple of witnesses the case was postponed until the afternoon session. It is alleged that on November 10th Currie and another man were fighting on Craig street, when Special Constable Dick interfered and tried to stop them. Currie turned, with a revolver in his hand, and fired at Dick, the bullet entering the latter's thigh.

Big Profits in Hotel Business.

Toronto, March 4. — How profits are made in selling an hotel business, apart from the property, was shown at the License Inquiry Saturday, in connection with the Haly House. W. R. Memberry, who owned the property, bought the business for $20,000, sold it four months later for $40,000 after refitting it, making a total profit of $15,800, or nearly $4,000 per month. The property itself originally cost him $12,000,000.

The hotelmen's Christmas Charity Fund was also under investigation.

BITTER FIGHT FOR LONDON COUNCIL

Municipal Reformers Made Big Gains in Spite of John Burns.

London, March 4. — London was in the throes of an election, Saturday, for membership in the County Council that exceeded in bitterness the Parliamentary election of 1905.

The Progressives who are supported by the Liberals and who have been in power for the past twenty years, claimed a renewal of their mandate for the services they had rendered, and declared also that the present was a unique opportunity for further improving the condition of the people of London by effecting equalization in the rates of taxation of the ground landlords, who as a result of the unprecedented combination of the last County Council, which was Progressive, and the Liberal Government, own practically the whole of London.

Municipal Reformers, with whom the Unionists have associated themselves, have been most active in accusing the Progressives of extravagance and Socialistic tendencies that have led to excessive rates and have published cartoons suggesting that the Progressives are the friends of the Trusts.

John Burns, President of the local Government Board, who is an ex-County Councillor, but who did not seek re-election, issued a manifesto in which he describes the campaign of the municipal reformers as the "most vulgar and most disgraceful that ever has discredited British public life;" and in which he exhorted the electors not to surrender London to the greed of monopolists and speculators, and the municipal reformers have claimed that the defeat of the Progressives would be a serious blow to the Liberal Government.

The outgoing council consisted of 83 Progressives, 34 Municipal Reformers, and one Independent.

According to the returns received the Municipal Reformers have gained 43 seats and the Progressives and the Labor party one seat each. The Laborites or Socialists played an unprecedented part in the election by fighting for seats against both the Progressives and the Reformers.

HOW ONE MONTREALER HAD PROFITABLE TRIP.

Paid No Railway or Carfare and Made Ten Dollars.

One close fisted sport of Montreal has been heard to remark that seeing out-of-town games is an unprofitable pastime, unless luck follows your hand, when placing the bills, but hark to the adventures of a Montrealer whose case might easily be duplicated.

He wanted to see the game and had a ticket for the match. The time for the departure of the last train of the C. P. R. was close at hand. He flew to the station. Engine puffing impatience. There was no time to buy railway tickets, and a wild leap brought this gentleman into a carriage, the last to entrain.

The lack of tickets did not trouble this traveller. He had the money safely tucked away in his hip pocket; so much for the railway fare and so much on the Wanderers. The miles were fast eaten up. Station after station was passed. The conductor, or some like official came round with a lantern to examine the tickets. He did not examine that of our friend. To tell the truth, this adventurous Montrealer stepped onto the platform at the Central Station at Ottawa, without having peeled off any of the bills set aside for fare. A car was handy. Time was limited, and the individual hailed the conductor and asked if he was going to the rink. He was. Let it be mentioned that colors signify in which direction the car is going in the Capital. No big "Wellington" or "St. Catherine" poster. The visitor talked to the conductor of the Ottawa car. The conductor talked back. He held forth on the virtues of the Ottawa players. He offered to bet our friend any amount from a dollar to his month's wages. The offer was not accepted.

The car drew up near the portals of the Arena, not Dey's Rink. The conductor had not asked for a ticket. The happy passenger alighted.

He saw a man with an enormous banner pinned on his breast which said: "Ottawa." He thought our Montreal friend was green.

"Bet you two to one Wanderer don't score," bawled he.

"Done," said the Montrealer, as he planked down a "ten spot." As he was promptly paid at the end of the match, his experiences rather contradict the statement of the close fisted one to the effect that out of town matches are unprofitable.

HANDICRAFTS GUILD EXHIBITION OPEN.

An interesting exhibition, which opened on Saturday, is being held in the Art Gallery during the next two weeks, under the auspices of the Canadian Handicrafts Guild, consisting of Canadian handicrafts, and intended as an object lesson to the public as illustrating the sort of work throughout the Dominion which the Guild is reviving and encouraging, teaching as well, to what practical purposes this work may be applied. For instance, side by side with the homespun exhibits are tailored suits and handsome mantles of the materials made by the best costumers and tailors in the city, illustrating the use of the material, as well as of the fine hand-made embroideries and laces.

In the South Gallery, the handicraft cottage is arranged, consisting of four rooms fitted out with hand-made furniture—which branch of the work, by the way, is a new departure with the Guild this year, being as yet in the experimental stage. The rooms, a dining-room, bed-room, den and sitting-room are arranged suitably for a summer cottage, the hangings, floor coverings, ornaments and so on being also all hand-made. Arranged at the sides of the gallery are examples of pottery, stencil-work, brass, Indian work in beads and baskets from the East and West, the bead-work being largely applied to electric light shades. In the main gallery there is an exhibit of basket work made by a crippled protege of the Guild; homespuns, Doukhobor work, tweeds, lovely lace work done by the Irish and English immigrants in the West; Syrian embroidery and work representative of all the races of the Dominion.

In the Elgin Gallery there is a beautiful collection of laces, fans and miniatures loaned by Her Excellency Lady Grey, as well as some very lovely examples of Battersea enamels loaned by Mrs. Hanbury-Williams; while near the door in the South Gallery a number of fine enamels are to be seen, the work of Mr. and Mrs. Eastlake (the latter will be remembered as Miss Emily Bell, the Canadian artist).

To Represent the Bishop.

The Lord Bishop of Montreal, Dr. Carmichael, has appointed the Rev. Lewis Evans, D.D., Dean of Montreal, to be his commissary during his absence from the diocese. Dean Evans's address is 15 Hope avenue, Montreal.

THE CHURCHES WERE THRONGED AND HUNDREDS WERE TURNED AWAY FROM MEMORIAL SERVICES TO MISS MAXWELL

At Christ Church Cathedral Rev. Dr. Symonds Preached Eloquent Sermon in Memory of the Heroine of the Hochelaga School Disaster---Rev. Dr. Jekill Honored Memory of Miss Maxwell at St. Mary's Church.

Standing room was at a premium, and hundreds were reluctantly compelled to turn back from the doors of Christ Church Cathedral last evening, when the memorial services for the late Miss Sarah Maxwell, the heroic principal of the Hochelaga Protestant School, who gave up her life for the little children under her charge.

Naves, aisles, transepts, all were crowded, and chairs were placed wherever practicable, while hundreds stood throughout the service, and so eager were the people to hear the sermon, that many stood in the porches throughout the service.

Rev. Dr. Symonds, who conducted the service, chose lessons and hymns relating to heroic deeds recorded in the Bible, where men gave up their lives to save others.

Rev. Dr. Symonds also announced that the congregation of Christ Church Cathedral will erect in the church a suitable memorial to Miss Sarah Maxwell, who had been a devoted member of the congregation. It was desired that the contributions should not be limited to heads of families, but especially that it should come from all sections, and especially from the children. He hoped the response to his invitation to contribute would be both general and generous, so that a suitable memorial to the young heroine would be erected.

Taking for his text, St. John, ch. 15, 13 and 14:

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

Rev. Dr. Symonds recalled that this was part of Christ's farewell to earth. Those to whom it was addressed did not understand, for it was sometimes difficult to understand Christ's purposes, and it was only on the dawn of the great day that they would fully understand. As he left his disciples, however, Christ laid upon them this maxim and command, that they should love each other with a love that knew no bounds but those of life. He had previously said that he who is too anxious to save his life shall lose it, while he who is ready to give it up shall find it. That is the whole theory of Christianity, unity and self-sacrifice. Jesus taught it, and He practised it, and the world with all its selfishness had bestowed upon him all honor. In this age which is said to be so skeptical and luxurious, never was the Saviour more exalted because he went about doing good.

A CALAMITY AND A HEROINE

The congregation need not be told why he uttered these considerations on this occasion. A great calamity has fallen upon the city, one that was unforeseen, one that nobody believed could ever have happened. Our sympathy goes out to the parents of these little children who lost their lives. May they receive all spiritual comfort in the dire disaster which has overwhelmed them.

"In the midst of the calamity that befel us last Tuesday, there stands out the figure of the principal of the school, a woman whose duty it was to teach and whose career as teacher had been most honorable. She was not an officer of the army, trained to war's alarms, nor the captain of an ocean steamer, who knows he must be prepared for sudden emergencies. She was what we call a weak woman, without any reason to expect or to be prepared for disaster. And yet no leader of a forlorn hope ever stood at his post more faithfully, more determinedly than did she. Under these circumstances it is only fitting and right that we should commemorate this heroic sacrifice, here in this parish of which Sarah Maxwell was a faithful and devoted member.

"I desire in the first place to say a few words about the catastrophe itself. Such events, and they have been very frequent of late in many parts of the world, are to some people a shock to faith. They say to themselves: Why did not God interfere to prevent this dreadful thing? I do not wonder that the question should be asked in many a heart. And yet, dear brethren, hard as it may sound, it is a blessing, even though sometimes a blessing in disguise, that this world is governed by unchanging laws. Any other system, so far as we can see, would lead to unutterable confusion. If, for example, in one railway accident out of ten God certainly interfered, do you not think that such an interference would only encourage carelessness and foolhardiness?

"All discovery, all science," he continued, "rests upon the conviction of that steadiness of law. Since law works regularly, we are able to know the laws of nature and to conquer them by adapting ourselves to them. In Japan, where earthquakes are frequent, people build their houses accordingly. In Canada, owing to our long and cold winters, our greatest danger is always from fire. Against this danger, and especially in public buildings where many poeple are crowded together, it is our duty to see that all possible precautions are taken.

"It is not for me to say whether or not this was the case in the Hochelaga School. That is a question which ought to be investigated most thoroughly by the proper authorities. Only let us beware lest we are unjust. Perhaps, I do not say it is so, it is not my intetnion to hint that it is so, but it is possible that the public at large have part of the burden of responsibility to bear. For we must remember that if large bills are brought for building expenses the complaint of extravagance is heard.

"We hear on all sides that the teachers are insufficiently paid, yet the people are prone to complain if called upon to pay more taxes.

"All attention must be paid not only to our schools, but to the factories, where crowds congregate to carry on their work, and to other large institutions which are used as working places or places of gathering by many people.

TO HONOR THE HEROINE.

"I now come to the object which has gathered together the congregation this evening.

"We commemorate an heroic deed, and one which will never be forgotten in the city of Montreal. The greatest asset of any country is the lives of its heroes. All peoples who have had any spark of magnanimity in them possessed a roll of their famous men and women.

They have told to their children the stories of those who have sacrificed life or home or wealth for the good of others, in order that they may gather from them inspiration to like deeds. This was preeminently the case with the Hebrews, from whom we have derived our religion."

After speaking of Israel's heroes and of the spirit of self-sacrifice that was the keynote of their lives, he said: "Of such was the brave woman, who, by faith, laid down her life last Tuesday. The more closely the sad story of that fire is studied, the clearer it sets forth the extraordinary bravery and devotion of Miss Maxwell. It was not a case of tremendous excitement, as in some great charge in war. It was in loneliness, surrounded with none but helpless babes, in the full consciousness of danger that death in ghastly form was looked at face to face, braved and conquered.

"There is a famous picture by the late Sir Noel Paton, called 'Death, the Gate of Life.' Death is opening the door of Heaven to one clad in the armor of a knight. That half of the figure of death, which is turned to the world, is represented as a grisly skeleton. That is how death presents itself to our worldly imagination. But the other half, which is towards Heaven, is an angel of light, and inexpressible love beams from His countenance.

"I can imagine it was thus that death may have appeared to Miss Maxwell. At first some moments of human fear, but no sign of shrinking, and then the terror of death passing into a kind of joy—the grisly skeleton, the fierce enemy, when faced and challenged, tranformed to the angel of light.

"But we shall not reap the full benefit of the lesson contained in this act of heroism if we confine our admiration to the act alone. Great acts are the climax of a series of small ones. No great crime is committed without several previous smaller offences. A house does not fall all at once, but shows breaks and cracks that warn of impending danger. So heroism is not a sudden inspiration, not the effect of a romantic feeling but the climax of a life well spent in doing the small things."

The preacher referred to the dramatic and romantic features of the martyrdom of saints in olden times, and continued:—

"There was no romance for Miss Maxwell in the situation of last Tuesday—nothing but terror, a heartrending anguish for the lives of others, until her own was ended. Behind the great deeds of the world lie innumerable little ones. Behind these again lie the qualities of our characters and the motives by which we have been swayed. You cannot be a coward in the little things of life and a hero in the great things.

FAITHFUL IN LITTLE THINGS.

Look at Miss Maxwell's life. Faithful she was in the little things, or what we call the little things, of life. The daily round of the teacher's life is one of quite exceptional wear and tear. The life of every true and conscientious teacher is a life of heroism, poorly, not to say meanly, rewarded. Miss Maxwell knew what weariness, exhaustion and nervous strain meant day after day. She was no hireling, performing the routine work of the school, but a true shepherd of the little lambs committed to her charge. 'The hireling fleeth,' cried the Saviour, 'because he is an hireling. . . . but the good shepherd layeth down his life for the sheep.'

"There was more than this," continued the preacher. "There was a home life that was beautiful, full of consideration, unity and love. These things exist to-day in many homes, particularly where there is a measure of dependence of the various members of the family. Shall we not remember these things and set them off against the corruption that is in the world which sometimes fills us with forebodings of evil to come?"

"Behind both the school and the family life there was the religious life—what we call the hidden life of the soul. She was a true disciple and follower of Christ. And it was of Christ that she learned both to live and to die. For, dear brethren, though we glory in the cross of Christ, let us remember that the death of Christ is not to be isolated from His life.

"Our city is going to commemorate this act of permanent bravery by some permanent monument. Every one feels this is right and good. The influence of such memorials is very great. We, too, here in this church, upon which Carah Maxwell has conferred honor, shall perpetuate her memory.

"[illegible]here are other memorials than those of marble and brass. Better and [illegible]er still is the memorial of imitation. Now," concluded the preacher, "when our hearts are moved by sympathy and admiration, before, as so soon must be the case, the impression upon us fades away, let us resolve that the best fruit of the life that has been laid down shall be found in our own lives. The life that has for its motive the good of the world, the life that is laid down for the world or anyone therein is not a lost life, but a life that is found. It is as true to-day as ever, it is the supreme truth of life that via Crucis via Lucis. If we try to avoid it and live unto self, we find at last that life has been vain and empty, and death without hope. For this was Christ's way, and to those only who follow in His footsteps is the promise given: Where I am, there also shall my servant be."

Take up thy cross and follow Christ,
Nor think till death to lay it down,
For only he who bears the cross
May hope to wear the glorious crown.

IN SIGHT OF THE HOCHELAGA RUINS

The Remarkable Memorial Service to Miss Maxwell at St. Mary's Church.

St. Mary's Episcopal church was crowded to the doors yesterday by those who took part in the memorial service to the late Miss Maxwell and the sixteen pupils who lost their life in the fire last week. The church is situated only a few yards from the point where the tragedy was enacted.

The sermon was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Jekill, pastor of the church. His text was taken from Rev. 2, 10, and Isaiah 40, and he opened with a passage from Job, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand in the latter days upon the earth." Before the general thanksgiving, the clergyman stated that the parents of the children who were saved from the flames desired to offer their thanks to God. Absolute silence prevailed, and for the space of several minutes the entire congregation were wrapt in prayer and meditation.

The preacher said, "Over and over again since last Tuesday the cry has gone up to heaven from grief-stricken hearts: 'O, God, Thou Who rulest over all, why are we thus stricken? Why have these little ones been so ruthlessly plucked from our homes?' And if we have asked this question in the spirit of prayer and faith, ere this the quiet answer has come to us: 'Be still and know that I am God.'"

Regarding the criticisms, which have been made in regard to the work of the fire brigade at this fire, the Rev. Dr. Jekill, spoke as follows:

"We have heard on many occasions criticisms upon the fire brigade and others, for not putting forth greater efforts to save the lives of those endangered, but, for myself I can say, that I believe everyone of the brigade from the officers down, made every endeavour, and exerted all their strength, to save from the devouring flames those who were in the school. Of course, we cannot deny that there was some delay before the fire apparatus arrived on the scene, but once there the men did everything in the power of human beings. It was only when that hell of fire and smoke made it impossible for any further efforts to be made that the endeavors to save life ceased. I say candidly that those men who showed so much courage on not only this occasion, but on others, did not shirk their duty at the time of the school fire.

"However," said the minister, "we should remember that though God has sent this calamity upon us, and, although it will, difficult as it may appear, bring strength out of weakness, yet, we know it cannot be said that the Almighty willed this disaster. God rules and guides this great universe of His by laws. We call them the laws of nature, but, nevertheless, they are the laws of God. In our observance of and regard for these laws our safety lies. We cannot violate them without runnning great risks. In the case of the recent tragedy," he continued, "the origin of the fire is and may, perhaps, always remain a mystery; but how the flames were able to do their terrible work with such fearful rapidity and completeness is only too clear. The building gave every facility to the swift work of destruction, while every hindrance was found in the way of escape. In other words, the laws of God, were collided with, and the awful penalty of such collision fell upon innocent victims.

"In this case an awful price had to be paid to bring about a recognition of God's regulating principles. The sacrifice of innocent life overwhelmed us, but through this sacrifice disasters of a greater magnitude may have been averted. Your dear children and their brave teacher died, like the Divine Saviour, to save others."

The preacher then paid a glowing tribute to the life and work of the late lamented principal of the school, Miss Sarah Maxwell.

"In the death of the heroic Principal of the Hochelaga School, there passed to her final reward, one of the sweetest lives that has ever blessed this world. To know her was to love her, and everybody loved her.

"Her death was but the natural expression of her life—a faithful obedience to what she regarded as the sublime voice of duty, which was to her the voice of God. She could not leave that burning building while one of her flock was there. It would have been a contradiction of her whole nature and being to do so. Brave as she was gentle, heroic as she was sweet and pure, her name and influence shall live amongst us and amongst our children long after her frail body shall have mingled with its kindred dust."

"If Grace Darling, risking her life upon the angry seas to save poor sailors from a watery grave, and Florence Nightingale, regardless of her own safety, ministering to the fever-stricken soldiers, amidst the horror of the Crimea, thus won for themselves the undying admiration of a grateful people, surely Sarah Maxwell, laying down her life in the flames to save her little children, has won for herself a name worthy, not only to be perpetuated in marble and brass, in poetry and prose, but to live throughout the ages in the hearts of our children and their posterity."

REV. DR. SHAW WRITES ON FIRE-ESCAPES.

Rev. Dr. William Shaw, chairman of the Protestant Board of School Commissioners, has sent the Star the following letter:

Sir,—I am often asked why did the Protestant School Commissioners refuse to provide fire escapes for the schools. The following brief statement will show that they have never to this hour refused to do so. An esteemed and influential colleague has urged me to publish this statement to allay, if possible, public feeling on this question.

The following are facts: In December, 1902, a notice was received from the building inspector similar to others received years before calling on us to provide fire escapes for the schools. We were of opinion then, as most of us are still, that they would prove with small children more destructive of life than helpful, and that broad corridors, ample exits and fire alarm drill would be much preferable. Look at any building supplied with fire escapes in this city in the shape of light, open, iron stairs, very likely made treacherous by a little ice formed unseen from drippings from the roof, and will any one say that fifty or one hundred children could be thrust out of an upper window on these without terrible loss of life? It would try the nerve even of many adults to use them under the excitement of a fire. For boarding schools at night they may be necessary, but not for day schools open between 9 and 4, where there are several hundred persons moving about who should detect the first scent of smoke. However, the notice from the building inspector was respectfully considered and referred to one of the aldermen on our board, who reported that our view seemed satisfactory at the City Hall, though the civic officer concerned could not, of course, formally condone any departure from the law, and so the matter rested.

Next, last December a similar notice came to the board. Our former views were re-affirmed, and this notice was referred in a similar way to one of the aldermen, who, I consider, used all reasonable diligence to confer with the building inspector, although in our January meeting he was able only to report progress. Subsequently he arranged with Mr. Chausse to visit several of the schools, including that at Hochelaga, before reporting on the question, but was for a time hindered by pressure of municipal duties. Had he brought word to us in February, saying that the civic authorities can allow no departure from the exact requirements of the law, nor any substitute for fire escapes, however excellent, such as fire alarm drill, we would certainly at once have complied with the civic requirement, whatever our private opinions might be. We were not contumacious; we never refused to carry out the law. On the contrary, now that the same alderman has reported to us that there can be no relaxing of the law, we have taken steps at once to provide fire escapes of such form as will most wisely meet the needs, while the full benefit of frequent fire alarm drill will also be secured.

It is not a policy of severe economy that has led us to this position. The splendid equipment of our schools, generously providing for our scholars, with the exception of such a defective suburban structure as that at Hochelaga, for whose erection no one on the present board is responsible, will corroborate this. There is not a man of us but what would spend any amount rather than that one of these little ones should perish. We feel more poignantly than any citizens, except the relatives of the martyr, Sarah Maxwell, and of those innocent little victims, the terrible calamity which has befallen us; but in our administration we have sought in all good faith and without any negligence, which we have regarded as the best means of securing safety, and no one commissioner is more responsible in this matter than another. We are sustained in our policy by other cities, for example, Toronto, where the fire alarm drill is regarded with so much favor as a means of safety.

I know that in the painful public feeling which is now so natural and intense there are many charges and recriminations involving the fire department, the civic authorities and the school board. Some of these are just, and some unjust. I do not pronounce upon any of these, except to say that where there can be improvement in the administraton of the school board or its officers, it will certainly be peremptorily insisted upon, and everything possible will be done to prevent a repetition of the recent terrible disaster. But in the matter of fire escapes, it is evident no culpable negligence attaches to the commissioners.

WILLIAM I. SHAW.

The members of the Board of School Commissioners are as follows: Rev. Dr. Shaw, Rev. James Barclay, W. W. Stephens, Ald. H. B. Yates, Ald. H. Turner and Ald. I. H. Stearns.

Hamilton Pays for Troops.

Toronto, March 4.—It cost the city about $3,000 to have the soldiers from Stanley barracks here at the time of the street car strike. After considerable delay the cheque has just been paid by the Hamilton authorities. It represents the difference in the regular pay, which is paid by the Dominion Government, as usual, and the special service pay, to which they are entitled when on active duty.

Warrant Out for Engineer.

New Haven, March 4.—In the evidence already presented to him Coroner Eli Mix has made a preliminary finding to the effect that Engineer William E. Fisher, of the New Haven "Gray's" special train, in that he disobeyed orders, is responsible for the wreck on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad early on Saturday at Waterbury, when the special collided with a regular passenger train from New Haven, resulting in the death of at least three persons, and the injury of more than twenty guardsmen. Fisher could not be found after the wreck, and a warrant has been issued for his arrest.

WELL KNOWN LAWYER DEAD.

Mr. C. C. Robinson, of Toronto, Dies Very Suddenly.

Toronto, March 4.—Mr. Christopher Conway Robinson, a well known lawyer, died suddenly of heart failure. He was one of the best authorities in Canada on railway legislation. He was associated in the preparation of the Railway Act passed by the Legislature last session, and was counsel to the chairman of the railway committee. Some years ago he appeared in a case at Ottawa and successfully maintained his opinion in the face of great authority. He had also been solicitor for York County Council.

He was the third son of the late Hon. J. B. Robinson, Lieut.-Governor of Ontario, his mother being Mary Jane, daughter of the late Justice Hagerman. He was born March 17, 1857, and was thus almost 50 years of age. Educated at Upper Canada College he was called to the Bar in 1885. He practised at Aurora and Toronto Junction, and served as reeve at Aurora.

As a Conservative in politics he served as president of the North York Association, and in 1882 ran for the Legislature. In 1890 he ran again as an "Equal Rights" candidate. He contested a Mayoralty election in Toronto, but was unsuccessful. He belonged to the Masonic order, to the United Workmen, and the Sons of England, and was a member of the Anglican communion.

Mr. Robinson leaves a wife and four children.

RUSSIAN DEPUTIES GATHER.

Flocking to St. Petersburg for Opening of Parliament.

St. Petersburg, March 4. — The deputies to Russia's second parliament are streaming into St. Petersburg from all directions in readiness for the opening session at noon to-morrow. Only 495 of the 524 deputies will participate at the opening session. Twenty-nine have not yet been elected.

The present composition of the lower House is as follows: Monarchists, 90; Moderates Octoberists, 36; Polish Nationalists, 43; Progressives, 29; Constitutional Democrats and their adherents, 92; Left party, 192; indefinites, 13.

As had been anticipated there is a general disposition on the part of opposition parties to avoid as far as possible to invoke immediate dissolution. At the same time, opportunity will be given the hot-heads to vent their hostility on the Ministers and the Government, although the danger of a few rash actions precipitating a calamity is recognized.

Skipper Blames Lighthouse Board.

San Francisco, March 4. — The steamer Roanoke, the first boat to reach the steamer Corona when the latter was wrecked at the entrance to Eureka harbor yesterday, has arrived here. Captain Dunham blames the United States Lighthouse Board for the wreck. There have been four steamers wrecked on the Humboldt reef during the year, and Captain Dunham declares that all might have been prevented if the lighthouse board had had the channel properly marked.

Mr. Solomon Enters Transvaal Cabinet

Pretoria, Transvaal, March 4.—Edward Solomon, president of the Nationalists, has joined the Cabinet as Minister of Public Works. Gen. Smuts becomes Colonial Secretary and Minister of Mines, and De Villiers takes the portfolio of Minister of Justice.

Pays Penalty for Murdering Aunt.

Ossining, N.Y., March 4.—Frank Furlong, who killed his aunt, Mrs. Margaret Keeler, in New York city, in 1904, was put to death in the electric chair in Sing Sing prison to-day. Furlong was 21 years of age.

Train Wreck Victim Buried.

Cobourg, Ont., March 4.—The funeral of William Hitchins, the Dominion Express messenger, who was killed in the wreck at Mountain Station on Friday, was held here Saturday.

KING EDWARD GOES SOUTH.

Starts for Biarritz and Will Later Take a Cruise.

London, March 4.—King Edward started for Biarritz this morning. He will spend the night in Paris. After about three weeks' stay at Biarritz His Majesty will go aboard the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert, and will cruise in the Mediterranean with Queen Alexandra. Their Majesties will return to England towards the end of April.

In the meanwhile Queen Alexandra will entertain in London and at Sandringham her sister, the Dowager Empress of Russia, who will arrive here from St. Petersburg on Thursday, and remain in England a week.

Broke Bread With the King.

Canadian Associated Press.

London, March 4.—Among those present at the King's dinner party on Saturday were Lord Strathcona and Lord Mount Stephen.

Power Company Winning on Merits of Its Commodities

Messrs. Mark Fisher, Sons & Company, the large wholesale woollen merchants, who supply a great portion of the tailoring trade throughout Canada, have placed order with the Montreal Light, Heat & Power Company for the supply of light and power for their commodious new building, now nearing completion, at corner of Victoria Square and Craig street. Messrs. Fisher's new building, which comprises nine floors and basement, will be one of the most imposing structures in the city. Nothing has been left undone to make the building thoroughly up-to-date in all its appointments. Current will be taken from the Power Company's mains for some 800 incandescent lamps, and the building will be equipped with the latest type of electric elevators. Prior to contracting with the Power Company, Messrs. Fisher & Sons contemplated the installation of a private steam or suction gas plant to supply their requirements in light and power, but abandoned the idea upon the advice of their consulting engineers.

What Peary Has Accomplished.

In his article in Harper's for March, Commander Peary gives an interesting summary of just what his expedition has accomplished, and states his belief that the reaching of the pole is now comparatively simple.

"It seems proper also to note that the result of the last expedition of the Peary Arctic Club has been to simplify the attainment of the pole by fifty per cent.; to accentuate the fact that man and the Eskimo dogs are the only two mechanisms capable of meeting all the various contingencies of serious arctic work, and that the American route to the pole and the methods and equipment used remain the most practicable for attaining that object.

"Had the winter of 1905-6 been a normal season in the arctic regions, and not, as it was, a particularly open one throughout the northern hemisphere, there is not a member of the expedition who doubts that we should have attained the pole. And had I known before leaving land what actual conditions were to the northward, as I know now, I could have so modified my route and my disposition of sledges that we could have reached the pole even in spite of the open season.

"The main results of the expedition may be summarized as follows:

"First. The attainment of the 'highest North,' leaving a distance of 174 nautical miles yet to be conquered this side of the pole, narrowing the unknown area between my highest and Cagni's to less than 371 nautical miles, and throwing the major remaining unknown arctic area into the region between the pole and Behring Strait.

"Second. The determination of the existence of a distant new land northwest of the northwestern part of Grant Land, probably an island in the westerly extension of the North-American archipelago.

"Third. The distinct widening of our horizon as regards ice and other conditions in the western half of the central polar sea.

"Fourth. The traversing and delineation of the unknown gap in the coast-line between Aldrich's farthest west in 1876 and Sverdrup's farthest north in 1902.

"Fifth. The determination of the unique glacial fringe and floeberg nursery of the Grand Land coast.

"Another expedition following in my steps and profiting by my experience not only can attain the pole, but can secure the other remaining principal desiderata in the central arctic sea, namely, a line of deep-sea soundings from the north shore of Grant Land to the pole and the delineation of the unknown gap in the north-east coast-line of Greenland from Cape Morris Jesup southward to Cape Bismarck. This work can be accomplished by an expedition absent for the same length of time as the last one, and without a greater expenditure."

An enterprising German has patented a device for fitting phonographs to doors. As the customer enters the door of a shop, a voice will call out: "Flour is cheaper to-day." "New consignment of special quality mincemeat just received, try some," and similar invitations.

Special Notice.

Better Than Spanking.

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W. 88, Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night. 41 2 law eow

A CURE FOR INDIGESTION

The Trappists Phosphated Wine of Cinchona Bark is something which will cure you permanently, which will make your digestive organs stronger and healthier than ever they were, which will give you an appetite and zest for food that'll surprise you.

The Phosphorus and Cinchona are two powerful remedies and their combination in this wine is the well guarded secret of the monks who make it. The curative effects of this wonderful preparation have made the wonder of many a doctor. It is a fact that it has never failed to have effect in cases of indigestion, no matter how severe. After a few doses, the symptoms will disapear and all the digestive functions will take up their natural course. Do not suffer from indigestion any longer, but take at once the Phosphated Wine of Cinchona Bark made by the Trappist Fathers. It is for sale at all drug stores.

FATAL CAVE IN OF COAL AT LACHINE

Collapse of a Coal Heap Kills One Man and Injures Two More.

One man killed and two seriously injured. This was the outcome of a falling in of coal in a bin at Lachine on Saturday.

The men were laborers at the works of the Dominion Wire Company, and had been working at a tunnel in a coal bin, when an upper portion gave way and buried them four feet deep in coal. A squad of between thirty and forty men was immediately turned on the work of excavating, and in a minute or so the three men were removed from the hole.

One, Ernest Malone, 25 years of age, single, who came from Cote St. Paul, was dead when released. Malone had commenced work for the company only a few hours previous. The other two, Nikolo and Hzisloy Coplos, Greeks and brothers, one twenty-four and the other twenty-eight years of age, both boarding in Lachine, were found to have been pretty badly injured.

The injured men were removed to the General Hospital, where, on examination, it was found that the condition of Nikolo Coplos was so serious that his recovery is doubtful. His injuries are mostly internal. The other brother, whose injuries are external contusions, is progressing favorably.

The condition of Nikolo Coplos was reported to day as being much improved.

Coroner McMahon held an inquest at Lachine, Saturday night, into the death of Malone, and after hearing the evidence the jury returned a verdict holding Ernest Delisle, who was foreman over the men, responsible for the accident, for having allowed them to tunnel so far under the pile, but adding to their verdict that he could not be held criminally responsible.

RECORD RUN FOR EMPRESS.

Ireland Beats the Britain's Figures by Over Three Hours.

The Canadian Pacific Royal Mail steamship Empress of Ireland, which sailed from Halifax on the previous Sunday morning at 1.15, arrived at the Bar Light at Liverpool at 7 a.m. on Saturday.

Allowing four hours for difference in time, she made the run from Halifax to Liverpool in six days, one hour, and forty-five minutes, or just three hours and fifteen minuter faster than her sister ship, the Empress of Britain, on her last trip. This is the record.

DYNAMITE'S DIRE WORK.

Explosion Kills Tunnel Watchman and Injures Many Workmen.

New York, March 4. — A round-up of tunnel employes and a canvass of the neighborhood revealed the actual damage wrought, when, a few minutes after midnight on Saturday, several hundred pounds of dynamite exploded at Homestead, N.J., and shook the earth for miles around.

George Johnson, a watchman, is missing, and is supposed to have been blown to atoms. Four persons were severely injured and twice as many slightly hurt; the plant of the Pennsylvania Railroad contractors was wrecked; one house was torn to pieces; four hundred houses lost their windows, and a half dozen homes and Gevernaud's silk factory were otherwise damaged.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., March 4.—Two men were killed and five badly burned by an explosion of gas in the Woodward mine of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Company at Kingston on Saturday evening.

Charges Against Mgr. Montagnini.

Paris, March 4.—A semi-official statement says that the contents of the documents used in the prosecution of Abbe Jouin, charged with uttering seditious words from the pulpit, confirm reports that Mgr. Montagnini, the expelled secretary of the Papal Nunciature, was active in trying to prevent the visit of King Alfonso to Paris. Further, the documents give Mgr. Montagnini's instructions to the Parisian clergy, in consequence of which, it is said, Abbe Jouin uttered the incitements to sedition for which he is being prosecuted.

CHARGES DENIED AT ROME

Rome, March 4. — Authorities of the Vatican deny with emphasis the charges contained in the semi-official statement issued in Paris.

Ship Subsidy Bill Passed.

Washington, March 4.—The ship subsidy bill was carried by eleven votes in the House after a three hours' struggle. Only four steamship lines are to be subsidized under the measure in the form finally agreed upon, and all of these are to sail for South American points. The annual subsidy for each of these lines is to be $300,000 for a monthly mail service, or $600,000 for a fortnightly service, excepting the Argentine line, which is to have $400,000 for a monthly service, or $800,000 for a fortnightly service.

A New Use for Detectives.

"The 'shadow' is one of the most potent forces in the service of those who deal in millions," says David Ferguson, in "The 'Shadow' in High Finance," in the March Everybody's. "This shadow is no airy, flimsy thing, but a hard-headed, cold-blooded, patient, persistent, silent detective, highly trained in all the tricks of his craft, but specially developed along two or three lines. He is used chiefly to watch men and to get information. That sounds simple and commonplace enough, but it defines an occupation that has caused numberless heartbreaks, has thwarted vast ambitions, and brought about financial tragedies; while on the other hand it has served to multiply the great hoards of the masters of high finance."

IN LABOR CIRCLES.

The Board of Management of the Montreal Trades and Labor Council have decided to demand radical changes in the civic by-laws in connection with fire escapes and fire-fighting apparatus.

They will ask the City Council to amend the law so that it shall be the duty of the owner of any building over thirty feet in height constructed or used, or intended to be used, as an apartment house, hotel, hospital, seminary, place of amusement, or office building and the like shall be properly equipped with the latest design of fire escapes. Demands will also be made that any buildings within thirty feet of a combustible building must be provided with automatic iron shutters or wire glass in fireproof sash and frames. More powers will also be asked for Building Inspector Chausse and others connected with his department.

TRUE BILLS RENDERED IN KING'S BENCH.

The following true bills were rendered by the Grand Jury in the Court of King's Bench on Saturday: Guiseppe Aniello, shooting with intent to kill; Albert Lussier, discharging a loaded firearm at Emma Lussier, wife of Louis Lussier; James Jackson, robbing Simon Peter of $2; Alexandre Currie, discharging a loaded arm at Charles Dick; J. Arthur Marcoux, stealing money from the London & Lancashire Fire Insurance Company. After the return was made the Grand Jury was dismissed by Judge Lavergne.

Twelve members of the Petit Jury were sworn in and the trial of Adelard Vezeau was proceeded with. Vezeau is an old offender. On December 5th last he stole a horse and rig from Mr. J. O. Levesque, a commercial traveller. After hearing the evidence, the jury retired, and upon a few minutes' deliberation, they returned a verdict of guilty. Vezeau's criminal career dates as far back as 1886. During that time he has spent no less than twelve years in the penitentiary, and forty months in jail for various misdemeanors.

LONDON HORSE SHOW TO BE UNPARALLELED

Stable Room Will Be a Discount in the Metropolis This Summer—Many American Entries.

Special to The Montreal Star.

London, March 4. — The world-wide interest in the great International Horse Show, which is to be held at Olympia, in the summer is steadily increasing in volume.

A keen sense of rivalry is developing, especially between English and American horse breeders, and although the entries do not close until May 1 next, it is probable that the original estimate of 2,000 horses will be exceeded. Every horse will be a picked specimen, and in nearly every case will be a former prize winner.

Only a small percentage of the animals will be able to find box accommodations at Olympia and consequently Mr. Frank P. Euren, secretary of the Hackney Horse Society and manager of the show for the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the Continent is receiving all sorts of applications from owners of stables in London, who are anxious to let boxes for exhibits.

Not only is Mr. Alfred T. Vanderbilt sending over his entire stable and many vehicles as widely heralded, but Mr. E. T. Stotebury, the Philadelphia banker, will exhibit his magnificent trotting mare for which he paid the record price of $25,000 at Madison Square Garden. His animals will also include the famous pair of trotters, Preferred and Referreed, valued at about $30,000.

Mr. R. P. McGrann, Mr. J. W. Harriman, Mrs. Gerken, Mr. Patterson, Mr. Watson, and Mr. James G. Marshall are among other important horse breeders who are bringing horses across the Atlantic.

It has now been decided to include heavy draught horses in the show. This extension of the classes has caused some interesting new American entries, some of which will greatly enhance the spectacular effect of the show.

HIBERNIAN EUCHRE. The entertainment committee of Division 10, Ancient Order of Hibernians, will hold a progressive euchre, to be held in the hall, corner St. Denis and Lauriер ave., Wednesday evening next, 6th instant.

Design by May Manton.

5024 House Dress or Nurse's Costume.

FOR MORNING WEAR.

The gown that is made with waist and skirt joined by a belt is the most practical and altogether satisfactory one for the busy woman's morning, let her occupation take what form it will. Whether she be housewife or nurse or in whatever way she may be employed, so long as that employment keeps her at home, she will find such a dress as this one an invaluable addition to her wardrobe. As illustrated it is made of percale, simply trimmed with banding of the same and completed with a plain collar, but gingham, chambray and linen, also the thinner lawns and batistes are appropriate, while for colder weather light weight wool can be used, although washable fabric is always to be preferred for dresses of this sort. The style is so simple that laundering involves no difficulties whatever, and perfect neatness is assured, while dainty touches can always be found in the collar and belt. There is a waist that is finished at the front after the manner of the shirt waist and that includes shirt waist sleeves, and there is a six gored skirt, the two being joined by a belt. The waist closes at the front and the skirt slightly to the left side. For the medium size will be required 10½ yards of material 27, 8 yards 32 or 6 yards 44 inches wide.

A May Manton pattern, No. 5024, sizes 32 to 42 inches bust, will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper on receipt of ten cents. (If in haste send an additional two cent stamp for letter postage, which ensures more prompt delivery.)

Slowly he came back to them. "Yes, it is I." The words seemed to come from some far distance. "I couldn't wait. I came for my answer, Iola. I thought I could persuade you better. I have it now. I have lost you! And"—here he turned to Dick—"oh, my God! My God! I have lost my brother, too!" He turned to depart from him.

"Barney," cried Dick passionately, "there was no wrong!" There was nothing beyond what you saw!"

"Was that all?" inquired his brother quietly.

"As God is in heaven, Barney, that was all!"

Barney threw a swift glance round the room, crossed to a side table, and picked up a Bible lying there. He turned the leaves rapidly and handed it to his brother with his finger upon a verse.

"Read!" he said. "You know your Bible. Read!" His voice was terrible and compelling in its calmness.

Following the pointing finger, Dick's eyes fell upon words that seemed to sear his eyeballs as he read, "Whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her, hath committed adultery with her already in his heart." Heart-smitten, Dick stood without a word.

"I could kill you now," said the quiet, terrible voice. "But what need? To me you are already dead."

When Dick looked up his brother had gone. Nerveless, broken, he sank into a chair and sat with his face in his hands. Beside him stood Iola, pale, rigid, her eyes distended as if she had seen a horrid vision. She was the first to recover.

"Dick," she said softly, laying her hand upon his head.

He sprang up as if her fingers had been red-hot iron and had burned to the bone.

"Don't touch me!" he cried in vehement frenzy. "You are a devil! And I am in hell! In hell! do you hear?" He caught her by the arm and shook her. "And I deserve hell! Hell! Hell! Fools! no hell?" He turned again to her. "And for you, for this, and this, and this," touching her hair, her cheek, and her heaving bosom with his finger, "I have lost my brother—my brother—my own brother—Barney. Oh, fool that I am! Damned! Damned! Damned!"

She shrank back from him, then whispered with pale lips, "Oh, Dick, spare me! Take me home!"

"Yes, yes," he cried in mad haste, "anywhere, in the devil's name! Come! Come!" He seized her wrap, threw it upon her shoulders, caught up his hat, tore open the door for her, and followed her out.

"Can a man take fire into his bosom and not be burned?" And out of the embers of his passion there kindled a fire that night that burned with unquenchable fury for many a day.

XV.

THE SUPERINTENDENT'S METHODS.

The Superintendent was spending the precious hours of one of his rare visits at home in painful plodding through his correspondence. For it was part of the sacrifice his work demanded, and which he cheerfully made, that he should forsake home and wife and children for his work's sake. The Assembly Convener found him in the midst of an orderly confusion of papers of different sorts.

"How do you do, sir?" The Superintendent's voice had a fine burr about it that gripped the ear, and his hand a vigor and tenacity of hold that gripped the outstretched hand of the Assembly's Convener and nearly brought the little man to the floor. "Sit down, sir, and listen to this. Here are some of the compensations that go with the Superintendent's office. This is rich. It comes from my friend, Henry Fink, of the Columbia Forks in the Windermere Valley, British Columbia, you understand," noticing the Convener's puzzled expression. "I visited the valley a year ago and found a truly deplorable condition of things. Men had gone up there many years ago and settled down remote from civilization. Some of them married Indian wives and others of them ought to have married them, and they have brought up families in the atmosphere and beliefs of the pagans. Would you believe it, I fell in with a young man on the trail, twenty years of age, who had never heard the name of our Saviour except in oaths? He had never heard the story of the Cross. And there are many others like him. At the Columbia Forks the only institution that stands for things intellectual is a Freethinkers' Club, the president of which is a retired colonel of the British Army, a man of fine manners of some degree of intelligence and reading, but, I have reason to believe, of bad life. His is the dominant influence in the community, if we except my friend, Mr. Henry Fink, or, as he is known locally, 'Hank Fink.' Hank is a character, I assure you. A Yankee from the Eastern States, the son of a Scotch mother. Has a cattle ranch, runs a store which supplies the scattered ranchers, prospectors, and miners with the necessaries of life, and keeps a stopping place. Is postmaster, too. In fact, Hank is pretty much the whole village. He has lived in that country some fifteen years. Has a good Canadian wife and a flock of small children. He is a rara avis in that country from the fact that he hates whiskey. He hates it almost as much as he does Colonel Hicks and his Freethinking Club. When I visited the village, for some reason or other Hank took me up, the Scotch blood in him possibly recognising kinship. He gave me his store to preach in, took me all about the country, and in a week had a mission organized on a sound financial basis. His methods were very simple, very direct, and very effective. He estimated the amount each man should pay and announced this fact to the man, who generally acquiesced. I didn't probe too deeply into Hank's motives, but it seemed to give him considerable satisfaction to learn that Colonel Hicks was filled with indignant and scornful rage at the proposal to establish a Christian mission in that remote valley. It grieved the Colonel to think that after so many years of immunity they should at last be called upon to tolerate these particularly offensive appendages to an effete civilization. I noticed that Hank's English always broke down in referring to the Colonel. Well, we sent in Finlayson a year ago this spring, you remember. Strong man, good preacher, conscientious fellow. Thought he would do great work. You know Finlayson? Well, this is the result." Here he picked up Hank's letter. "This would hardly do for the Home Mission report," continued the Superintendent, with a twinkle in his keen gray eyes:

"Columbia Forks, Windermere, B.C.

"Dear Sir,—I take my pen to write you a few lines to let you know how things is goin'. Well, sir, I want to tell you this station is goin' to the devil. (Judging from what I saw of the place, it hadn't far to go.) Your preacher ain't worth a cuss. I don't say he ain't good for some people, but he ain't our style. (Mr. Finlayson would doubtless agree with that.) He means well, but he aint eddicated up to the West. You remember how we got the boys all corralled up nice an' tame when you was here. Well, he's got 'em wild. Couldn't reach 'em with a shotgun. He's throwed hell fire at 'em till they got scart an' took to the hills till you can't get near 'em no more'n mountain goats. So they have all quit comin'—I don't count Scotty Fraser, for he would come, anyway—except me an' Monkey Fiddler an' his yeller dog. You can always count on the dog. Now, sir, this is your show, not mine. But I was born an' raised a Presbyteryn down East, an' though I haven't worked hard at the business for some years, it riles me some to hear Col. Hicks an' a lot of durned fools that has got smarter than God Almighty Himself shoofin' off against the Bible an' religion an' all that. (We needn't read too closely between the lines at this point.) Send a man that don't smell so strong of sulphur an' brimstone, who has got some savey, an' who will know how to handle the boys gentle. They ain't to say bad, but just a leetle wild. Send him along, an' we will stay with him an' knock the tar out of that bunch of fools.

"Yours most respeckfully,
"HENRY FINK."

"P.S.—When are you comin' into the valley again? If you could arrange to spend a month or two I'll guarantee we will have 'em all in nice shape.

"Your respeckfully,
"HENRY FINK."

"I don't think you can count much from the support of a man like that," said the Assembly's Convener; "I don't think he shows any real interest in the work."

"My dear sir," said the Superintendent, "don't you know he is the Chairman of our Board of Management, a most regular attendant upon ordinances and contributes most liberally to our support? And while these things in the East wouldn't necessarily indicate a change of heart, they stand for a good deal west of the Great Divide. And, at any rate, in these matters we remember gratefully the word that is written, 'He that is not against us is on our part.'"

"Well, well," said the Assembly's Convener, "it may be so. It may be so. But what's to be done with Finlayson? And where will you get a successor for him?"

"We can easily place Finlayson. He is a good man and will do excellent work in other fields. But where to get a man for Windermere is the question. Do you know anyone?"

The Assembly's Convener shook his head sadly.

"There appears to be no one in sight," said the Superintendent. "I have a number of applications here," picking up a good sized bundle of neatly folded papers, "but they are hardly the kind to suit conditions at Windermere. Numbers of them feel themselves specially called of God to do mission work in large centres of population. Others are chiefly anxious about the question of support. One man would like to be in touch with a daily train service, as he feels it necessary to keep in touch with the world by means of the daily newspaper. A number are engaged who want to be married. Here's Mr. Brown, too fat. No move in him. Here's McKay—good man, earnest, but not adaptable, like Finlayson; won't do. Here's Garton—fine fellow, would do well, but hardly strong enough. So what are you to do? I have gone over the whole list of available men and I cannot find one suitable for Windermere."

In this the Assembly's Convener could give him no help. Indeed, from few did the Superintendent receive assistance in the securing of men for his far outposts.

Assistance came to him from an unexpected quarter. He was to meet the Assembly's Convener and some members of the Committee that evening at Professor Macdougall's for tea. The Superintendent's mind could not be kept long away from the work that was his very life, and at the table the conversation turned to the question of the chronic difficulty of securing men for frontier work, which had become acute in the case of Windermere. Margaret, who had been invited to assist Mrs. Macdougall in the dispensing of her hospitality, was at once on the alert. Why could not Dick be sent? If only that Presbytery difficulty could be got over he might go. That he would be suited for the work she was well assured, and equally certain was she that it would be good for him.

"It would save him," Margaret said to herself with a sharp sting at her heart, for she had to confess sadly that Dick had come to the point where he needed saving. She had learned from Iola the whole miserable story of Barney's visit, of his terrible indictment of his brother and the final break between them, but she had seen little of him during the past six months. From that terrible night Dick had gone down in physical and in moral health. Again and again he had written Barney, but there had been no reply. Hungrily he had come to Margaret for word of his brother, hopeful of reconciliation. But of late he had given up hope and had ceased to make inquiry, settling down into a state of gloomy, remorseful grief into which Margaret felt she dare not intrude. He occasionally met Iola at society functions, but there was an end of all intimacy between them. His only relief seemed to be in his work, and he gave himself to that with such feverish energy that his health broke down, and under Margaret's persuasion he was now at home with his mother. Thence he had written once to say that his days were one long agony. She remembered one terrible sentence. "Everything here, the house, the mill, my father's fiddle, my mother's churn, the woods, the fields, everything, everything shrieks 'Barney' at me till I am like to go mad. I must get away from here to some place where he has never been with me."

It required some considerable skill to secure the Superintendent that evening for a few minutes alone. In whatever company he was, he was easily the centre of interest. But Margaret, even in the early days of the Manse, had been a favorite with him, and he was not a man to forget his friends. He had the rare gift of gripping them to him with "hooks of steel." Hence, he had kept in touch with her during the latter years, pitying the girl's loneliness as much as his admiration for her cheery courage and her determined independence would allow him. When Margaret found her opportunity she wasted no time.

"'I have a man for you for Windermere,' were her opening words.

"'You have! Where have you got him? Who is he? And are you willing to spare him? Few young ladies are. But you are different from most.' The Superintendent was ever a gallant.

"'You remember Mr. Boyle who graduated a year ago!' Her words came hurriedly and there was a slight flush on her cheek. 'There was some trouble about his license at Presbytery. That horrid old Mr. Naismith was very nasty, and Dick, Mr. Boyle, I mean—we have always been friends," she hastened to add, explaining her deepening blush, "you know his mother lived at the Mill near us. Well, since that day in Presbytery he has never been the same. His work—he is on the Daily Telegraph, you know, takes him away from town, from Church and that kind of thing, and from all his friends."

"I understand," said the Superintendent, with grave sympathy.

THE LAST OF THE
Boys' Norfolk Suits at $3.97

As we anticipated, a vigorous demand set in on Saturday for Boys' Norfolk Suits, prompted by our sale of manufacturers' sample suits at less than cost. And on every hand we remarked solid appreciation of this wonderful offer, which took our customers by surprise.

If you haven't already brought your boy come with him on Tuesday, the last day of this sale. The inducement is a very strong one—

BOYS' NORFOLK SUITS, of finest imported tweeds; made up in a splendid manner and worth from $5.50 to $7.00, for $3.97

First Floor.

New Patterns in Flannelettes

The new Blouse Flannelettes, which are arriving in great quantities, are most bewitching both in patterns and colorings. For instance, we have just opened a case of them, which come in rich shades of navy, cardinal and sky, and would make up as handsomely as expensive French blousings, and they're very moderately priced; one range at 15c yard, the other, a better quality, at 20c yard.

Again, we have a new range of patterns in the staple Flannelette used for night shirts, pyjamas, etc., at 10c, 12 1-2 and 15c yard.

LEONARD SCOTT,
186 Bourgeois street.

Editor Star,

I see in to-night's Star that it is mentioned about a Memorial in honor of Miss Maxwell's great bravery and devotion. I would like a white marble statue of her, with a child in her arms, and I would like it to be placed on Dominion square. I know the children would all like to give towards it, and you yourself said you would make up any shortage towards a suitable memorial, so there should be plenty of money to get something worthy of her.

Please find enclosed money order for one dollar.

DOROTHY SHIELDS,
Lansdowne School.

Editor Star,

Enclosed find the sum of $1 towards the Sarah Maxwell Memorial from a sympathetic pupil of Riverside kindergarten and her little sister.

MARION MAY and LILLIAN BOAZ,
330 Bourgeois St.

Editor Star,

I enclose 25 cents for the Maxwell Memorial Fund. I was pleased to see the Star taking such a great interest in Miss Maxwell's heroic work. I was a pupil in Miss Maxwell's class a couple of years ago, and will never forget her and the noble example she set to us all. Would be delighted to have a portrait of Miss Maxwell.

Jessie Allan attends the Commercial and Technical High School; the others the Lansdowne.

RALPH ALLAN.

Editor Star,

My father and mother have read to me out of the Star that you are making up a subscription for a Memorial to Miss Maxwell, who so nobly lost her life saving the lives of her dear school children. Many a Victoria Cross has been bestowed by our King and Quen for valor on the field which does not show anything like the bravery of Miss Maxwell on such an occasion. I enclose one dollar from my brothers and sister.

Yours truly,
WILLIAM J. (11 years), JAMES F. (9 years), FLORENCE (7 years), and BABY HOGAN (2 months.)

Mr. Editor:

I enclose my mite. I think every child ought to give something for the Memorial for brave Miss Maxwell.

We four little children of Lachute Mills want to add our mite for the memorial for dear Miss Maxwell, who so bravely died for the dear little children. Enclosed is $1.00.

ERNIE SAUNDERS (9 years), DORA B. (8 years), STELLA C. (2 years) and J. B. BARLEY (Little Jackie), 9 months.

Editor Star:

I have been reading the account of the Hochelaga School fire in your paper, and feel very sorry for the poor little children and their teacher. I admire her heroism so much that I want to give something towards her memorial, and enclose a dollar. Father thinks that it would be nice to have a statue in the school grounds, so that the children can all see it and remember her bravery, and be inspired by it to act nobly.

MARY PHILLIPS (10 yrs old),
The Rectory, Hawkesbury.

Editor Star:

Please find enclosed from my sister and I $1.00 for the memorial to Miss Maxwell. We are very sorry for Miss Maxwell; also her dear mother, who is left alone.

Editor Star,

Enclosed please find 50 cents for Miss Maxwell's Memorial.

CLARA M. PASK, (aged 4)
North Bay, Ont.

Editor Star,

Three little girls form the old country send a dollar towards the subscription for dear Miss Maxwell's mother, ANNIE, ENA, and NELLIE REID.

729 Notre Dame St., West.

Editor Star,

Enclosed find $1.00 from HOPE and EDNA GALLAGHER, 46 Arlington Ave., for the Miss Maxwell Fund.

Editor Star,

I beg to enclose cheque for $5.00 for the Fund. In the natural desire to perpetuate the memory of a noble and heroic woman there is some danger lest the most appropriate object of the fund which you propose should be lost sight of, namely, adequate provision for those nearest and dearest to the deceased.

At the same time the legitimate desire to commemorate Miss Maxwell's name might be not inappropriately fulfilled by a plain stone let into the wall of the school over which she presided, with some suitable inscription.

M.

Editor Star,

At the meeting of this lodge last night all the members were unanimous in eulogizing the bravery and self-sacrifice of the late Miss Sarah Maxwell, and as descendants of the race that have produced a Grace Darling, we are proud in our sympathy to be bereaved to think that there are still those who would sacrifice their lives for others, as this brave Miss Maxwell has done.

Enclosed will find the sum of $[illegible] as a contribution on behalf of children of our members, two of whom lose their lives and others were rescued.

With best wishes for the success of the Memorial Fund,

B. T. SELLARS,
Secretary Yorkshire Lodge
Sons of England Benefit Society.

Editor Star,

Enclosed please find $5.00 for the Maxwell Memorial Fund. It is good of the Star, as usual, promoting the cause of humanity in our city. Surely in this sad case the mother will be considered and for a lasting tribute to the noble martyr a wing in her name to the "Children's Memorial Hospital" would be a fitting memorial.

MRS. M. H. GAULT.

Editor Star,

Enclosed find $1.00 for the "Sarah Maxwell Memorial" from

RITA MANCANTELLI,
Toronto.

Editor Star,

Please find 10 cents enclosed. I would like a photo of Miss Maxwell.

Pupils of the Fairmount School.

Editor Star,

Will you please take this fifty cents for Miss Maxwell's Memorial Fund. We are all so sorry for Mrs. Maxwell and all the little children, and we do hope you will get a big lot of money.

WILLIE, POPPY and LILLY ATKINS
Lachine Locks.

Editor Star,

I was very much pleased to see your suggestion of the school children subscribing to a ten and twenty-five cent fund, for some recognition of Miss Maxwell's heroism in the late fire. All honor to her memory. My two little girls speak a lot about the children being burned, through hearing us speak of the lamentable affair, and would like you to accept 25 cents from each of them to help along the memorial for their noble teacher.

SHERBROOKE.

Editor Star,

My mother having read the Star for father and I, all about the fire, and we feel so sorry for Miss Maxwell and all the poor children that were burned, and we are so pleased to know she will have a memorial, for she deserves one. I am sending one dollar towards it, and if you get a subscription for her mother we will do all we can for it.

ELIZABETH CALLERY,
Aged 9 years,

The number of subscriptions coming into The Star Office for the Sarah Maxwell Memorial is so large that it is necessary to continue the acknowledgments in future issues of The Star.

SAYS CIVIL SERVICE NEEDS OVERHAULING

J. M. Courtney Makes Some Notable Suggestions for Improvement

CRITICIZES WHOLE SYSTEM

Would Divorce It Entirely From Politics and Remove the Present Act From the Statutes."

Special to the Montreal Star.

Ottawa, March 4. — Mr J M Courtney, who was deputy Minister of Finance, from shortly after Confederation until last summer, when he retired, delivered a striking address before the Canadian Club of Ottawa, on Saturday on the subject of the "Canadian Civil Service."

After his long years of experience Mr Courtney is convinced that the conditions surrounding the service are far from what they might to be. He recommends among other things:

1. That promotions to important posts

in the outside service, such as postmasterships, and collectorships, should be made from the service.

2. That the remunerations to all important offices of the Crown from ministers down, should be increased.

3. That the old act under which superannuations were granted be re-enacted.

4. That the whole service should be utterly divorced from politics and appointments on a probationary basis made as a result of competitive examinations.

5. That the present civil service act should be removed from the statutes.

After a few preliminary observations, Mr. Courtney said:

GLANCES AT CONDITIONS.

"Now at this point I think it would be as well to look at the present condition of the Civil Service. The members of this great army, forming the machinery by which the work of the Government of the Dominion is accomplished, work in obscurity. No one knows—very few care, how the work is done. If the work is successfully performed and creditable the praise is given to the Government. If, on the other hand, something happens, then a department is blamed. It happens from the very nature of things. Suppose, at the present moment that public ownership of the railways was an accomplished fact, what would the press and the country have said about the fuel famine and the break-down of transportation facilities in the North-West. The press would have pounced on the officials hard and fast if the lines in operation were state-owned. But again, besides the working in obscurity there is a hopelessness in the condition of the Civil Service that is appalling.

"If a boy of eighteen is placed in the Civil Service in a large department at Ottawa, what has he to look forward to? Your chairman (Mr. P.B Taylor, manager of the Crown Bank in Ottawa), if he had remained in the Civil service would in all probability be still a second class clerk in the Savings Bank Branch of the Post Office Department. If any other boy were placed in the customs outside service at Toronto, could he by any possibility rise to a collectorate in any part of the Dominion? Can any junior become a city postmaster? There is nothing that any junior in the outside service can attain, even if he had all the knowledge of all the spheres. Now, if you please, we will contrast this state of affairs with the state of affairs existing in another world, with which I am tolerably well acquainted—the banking world.

GIVES SOME INSTANCES.

"Mr. Clouston, Mr Walker, Mr Holden, Mr. Stikeman, Mr Wilkie, Mr. Coulson, Mr Burn all won their way up to their respective general managerships from the junior ranks. The present manager of the Bank of Montreal came here from London. He had previously been in Brockville and Montreal. His predecessor came from Halifax. Accountant after accountant had left the Bank of Montreal here to take up the position of manager elsewhere. The same thing may be said of the other banks in Ottawa. Mr Gill, Mr. Harvey, Mr Blakeney, Mr Boulton, Mr. Broderick, Mr Finnie, all won their positions, just as a soldier of France may become a field marshal so a bank junior may become a general manager. Only lately did the accountant of the Bank of Commerce, Mr. Ireland, leave Ottawa to take the position of manager at Sydney. Imagine a vacant Collectorship of Customs at Sydney. Would any able surveyor be sent to fill the position? There has lately been vacant the position of postmaster at Kingston, and we are informed by the papers that after an interval the patronage committee, not the member, have selected an alderman to fill the vacancy. Naturally, if men have to remain to the end, doing the same work as they started out to do at the beginning, the pay can only be given for the worth of the work.

"A railway mail clerk at sixty, if there be such a man, for owing to constant travelling their nerves give way and they have to be retired at a comparatively early age, cannot expect more pay than a young man of twenty-five, and so there is no prospect for the mass and no hope. All this is beginning to tell, and it is no secret that large numbers of young, enterprising, able men, especially in the West, are leaving the service, to the great loss of the state. Now how is the service being renewed? I find no fault with the able gentlemen forming the Civil Service examiners, they are doing their utmost, but their work as Civil Service examiners is but an incident of their lives. They have other occupations.

INFLUENCE OF POLITICS.

"They are all, I am sure, desirous to get good recruits to enter the service, the influence of politics. They do not th incidence of politics. They do not pass candidates unworthily, but the benefit of every doubt is accorded. Nor does it follow that the best of successful candidates are appointed to the service. It is only necessary to pass the examination, such as it is, and vacancies as they occur are filled generally by the appointment of those having influence. I do not think now, considering the many openings in Canada, that there is any desire on the part of desirable youngsters to enter the public service. I have taken some pains in examination of the list of passed candidates at the entrance examination in November last, and I find that examinations were held at seventeen points; that 349 candidates succeeded and that the numbers varied from one at Sault Ste Marie, three at St. John (two of whom were women), three at Windsor, three at Edmonton, and so on up to 193 at Ottawa. Now of the successful candidates an inordinate number were women—6 out of 8 at Kingston, 117 out of the 193 at Ottawa, and in reality more, as the initials not Christian names, are given for twenty-seven of the candidates. Now if so many of the candidates are from the one sex it would seem that there is no great desire, as I said before, on the part of men to seek public employment. I do not for one moment wish it to be understood that I object to women clerks. I was the first official who employed assistance of that character; and for many divisions in the public service women are admirably adapted.

"I have mentioned the obscurity attending public work, the hopelessness attending it, the lack of desire to enter the service, and for a few moments I would like to draw attention to the emoluments of the service. Parenthetically, I consider the remuneration paid to Ministers of the Crown to be a disgrace to the Dominion. But to the Ministers are granted fame, honor and publicity. The name of a prominent Minister is constantly before the public, when he speaks thousands listen to him, honors await him. There may be some compensation for an insufficient wage.

AS TO THE REWARDS.

"But what of the officials? Are those who daily and hourly endeavor to make of the business of the Government a success sufficiently rewarded for their efforts? The report of the Public Works Department, showing an expenditure of $10,000,000, has lately been laid before Parliament. The chief officer of that department, with all the responsibilities, gets $4,000 a year. The Deputy Minister of the Interior, on whose shoulders are thrown the settlement and development of the North-West, the Deputy Minister of Finance, with a turnover of cash of $1,000,000 a day to regulate; the Auditor-General, who has to pass on all the revenues and expenditures, all are paid just $4,000 a year. The secretaries, chief clerks, heads of branches, accounts, and all the leading officials are generally inadequately paid. We have lately seen the law clerk of the Department of Railways and Canals enter the service of Mackenzie & Mann.

"We have seen an official of the Department of the Interior enter the service of the Grand Trunk Pacific at more than double the salary the country paid him, and since this paper has been written two other most capable officials, Messrs. Bain (Customs), and Stewart (Interior), have left the service. In my old Department Mr. Baker left to enter the service of the Canadian Pacific; Mr. Chipman became the Chief Commissioner of the Hudson Bay Company; Mr. Ross became the general manager of the Metropolitan Bank; Mr Henderson, of the Insurance Branch, went to New York, and is now one of the chief actuaries of the Equitable Life. Others have left to strike out for themselves. In my own case, although perhaps I ought not to say so I have had more than one very tempting offer to quit the service. I suppose I was a fool, but there was a great fascination in being behind the scenes and helping to shape matters to the best interests of the public, and I had frequently been laid up with illness.

FAVORS SUPERANNUATION.

"But there is another great disability now attendant upon the service and that is the deprivation of superannuation. I wish to say here most emphatically that I consider the repeal of the Superannuation Act to have been most unwise. The action was hasty, ill-considered, perpetrated without sufficient knowledge of the subject, and whilst it may have been a small saving to the Treasury it certainly does not add to efficiency. Perhaps here and there superannuation may have been strained, but it gave a stability to the service which more than outweighed any small disadvantage. I trust the Act will be soon re-enacted. These are the days of pensions—the churches give pensions, the railways, the banks give pensions.

"Politicians talk of old age pensions, and even the state which has deprived the civil service of pensions, has granted pensions to the warriors of the Headquarter Staff and Permanent Corps, and not only to them but to their widows and orphans. All this at the instance of the same Government who introduced the bill to repeal the Superannuation Act. Not to be outdone by the militia, the North West Mounted Police have been accorded the same treatment. The pensions to judges have been revised and in certain instances judges are permitted to retire on their full salaries, and, to wind up this part of the subject, although the act was repealed, ministerial pensions were sanctioned. If I might be permitted a remark, I might say that I regret the unconditional repeal. I think under certain circumstances the man who has spent himself for his country should be placed beyond the necessity of seeking his daily bread.

RETAIN CAPABLE MEN.

"Now I have tried to show, however, imperfectly, what is required from the men who daily and hourly have to carry on the machinery of the Government in this fair Dominion. I have pointed out the obscurity of the work and how little is the reward. In this country, with its boundless resources and with the great developments that will constantly take place, one of the greatest problems to be faced is how to attract able men to the service of the state, and how to retain their services. The present method is, I think, played out. We talk perpetually about the national spirit. The hon. the Minister of Railways and Canals described the Intercolonial Railway as a factor in cementing the provinces together and building up a nation; and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in a recent speech in impassioned terms spoke of a living, breathing Canadian nationality, yet with this high ideal and aim we continue to manage our civil service in the narrowest sectional manner. Under existing conditions could anyone resident at Ottawa ever be appointed collector of customs, collector of inland revenue or postmaster? Could any French Canadian become collector of customs at Toronto.

"The whole service should, in my opinion, be utterly divorced from politics. It seems pitiable to find fourteen men burthened with the cares of state meeting together to sanction the appointment of a messenger, and yet every appointment has to be made by order in council. Even if it were desirable, the inability to give the subjects proper attention seems to be a serious drawback. I have found, when bodies of men meet together, some one or other is sure to raise a minor point leading the discussion off from its main purpose, and as a result a decision is frequently arrived at from sheer weariness. No, the business of looking after the civil service should be given to men having nothing else to do. On them should be laid the burden of appointments, promotions, retirements and dismissals. Taking these in order and the last first, I believe a recommendation to dismiss an official is a very serious matter and should be so regarded. I have seen, but only on rare occasions, what I can only describe as cruelty in dismissing public servants. I speak of the Federal service, but from what has been brought to my attention dismissals in the Provincial service are much more frequent. In all cases of dismissal cause should be shown and a quasi judicial enquiry instituted."

COMPULSORY RETIREMENT.

"In regard to superannuation, which I hope will be soon restored, I am a believer in a fixed age for retirement. It has two great advantages; it relieves the state from the importunities of officials who wish their services to be retained, and it prevents the retirement of men under the age to make places for interested candidates. The age in Great Britain is 65, and there are only three reasons for which an official can be retained beyond that age; even then the services can only be extended for one year and a return of the officials whose services are extended is made to Parliament. An official may be retained because he is engaged in some important work which it is desirable to complete; or he is doing some work which is in course of transfer to some other part of the system; or the services are so important at the particular moment from reasons of state and great urgency that the retention is necessary. As an example of this last I may mention the name of Sir Francis Mowatt, who was secretary to the Treasury at the outbreak of the Boer War. The financial requirements were so urgent and the situation so stringent that in the public interests his services had to be retained.

"As to promotions, all things being equal, I think that seniority should prevail. When promotions were required in my old department I made it a practice to consult the chiefs' interests, and, as their comfort and happiness in a great measure depended on their assistants, as a rule those best worthy got their steps. The department in all cases should have much to say on the subject of promotions and I may say that, while it may be desirable to have some test as to the ability of an official destined for promotion, yet, I am not quite sure that our system of examination is altogether the best. It was a great fad of the late Mr. Brunel, Commissioner of Inland Revenue, and may probably be desirable in that department.

MAKING OF APPOINTMENTS.

"Now we come to the first and most important of the four subjects, the question of appointments to the public service. After a long experience I have come to the conclusion that the best way in which appointments can be made is by a system of open competitive examinations. I am aware that there are many who disagree with me. Sir Arthur Helps, whom I have before quoted, did not approve of it. But, if carried out, it will free the service from politics. Even after examinations, I think appointments should be probationary, for it may happen that a successful candidate may, with all the knowledge, lack the qualities such as decision of character and promptitude in thought, which are desirable in an official—dreamers who spend their time in polishing up sentences in despatches are certainly not required in a department, they are too good for human nature's daily food.

"I would also like to see different examinations for the different departments. The Finance Department requires a different style of man than is required by the Privy Council Office, and the examinations should be so varied as to suit the various departmental needs. I would also like to see what I may call the political appointments, such as collectors and postmasters, taken away from the executive government and placed within the reach of subordinate officials. To do all this I would like to see the Civil Service Act removed from the Statute Book. It is, I think, unnecessary. In the Mother Land there is no such thing as a Civil Service Act, and Parliament, by means of the Supply Act, has full control over all branches of the public service. There is over legislation and to a great extent useless legislation. As a proof of this I may mention that on examination of the estimates now before Parliament I find between 30 and 40 votes have the words "Notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act," and as the Votes in which the words do not occur for some reason or other had them in previous years, it would follow that there is no portion of the Civil Service which was not at one time or the other contracted out of the Act.

AN INDEPENDENT COMMISSION.

"Now how can these changes, which to me appear to be desirable, be brought into effect. I believe there should be an independent commission whose duty should be to give their full time to matters relating to the Civil Service. They should have the power to appoint examiners and sub-examiners, and in order that they should be entirely freed from politics, I would respectfully throw out a suggestion, for whatever it may be worth, that they should receive their appointments from the Senates of the Universities of Canada.—I think three commissioners would suffice.

"If the twentieth century is to belong to Canada an absolute necessity for the healthiness of the national life is to have a pure, honest, stable, willing and efficient Civil Service in which a member can look forward to the future with confidence; a service adequately renumerated; a service in which each member has a pride; and lastly, a service in which each member is actuated by the belief that in doing his duty properly he is truly doing his best for the public interests.

"Twice has it been my good fortune to address Canadian Clubs, and I say here, as I said in Toronto, that it is for you, gentlemen, members of this Club and members of similar clubs; you, gentlemen, who are actuated by a high degree of patriotism, to press forward anything that can improve the public life of the Dominion; and if by this paper I may be the means of interesting you in the well being and improvement of the public service, I shall feel that the little I have done will not be in vain."

Senator Beveridge and Child Labor.

The February number of the Woman's Home Companion contains a comprehensive description of Senator Beveridge's national bill to abolish child labor. The Senator tells how he worked in a logging camp at fourteen years of age, beginning before daybreak and ending after dark, and the lessons he learned there served as the foundation for his present fight against the horror of child labor. After describing the evil, he adds:

"But that is not the worst of it. The worst of it is that pretty soon these children 'come to age.' What kind of citizens do they make? London Hooligans! That is the kind of citizens they make. Each boy and girl of this kind that develops into a man or woman knows that he or she is inferior to his fellows—inferior in body, mind and soul. They not only feel it, they actually see it. They feel that they have been robbed in some way—not robbed in money or property, but robbed of life, of health, robbed of intellect, robbed of spirit. And in their undeveloped brains, in their weakened hearts, in their cramped and deformed souls the fires of an unextinguishable wrath begin to burn. They go through life hating society, hating everybody and everything. For, while they do not know much, they do know that a system of industry and a state of society has worse than murdered them. There is your material for anarchy. We hear a good many speeches about the danger of anarchists coming to this country from Europe. The truth is that child labor is creating some two hundred thousand grown-up anarchists of native American blood in this country every year."

THE PARTY POLITICIAN EMPEROR.

BOTHA WILL UPHOLD BRITISH POLICY

New Premier of Transvaal Says Boer and Briton are United Again.

Pretaria, March 4. — General Louis Botha, the new Premier of the Transvaal, in a speech, here, recently, said:

"British supremacy will be safer in the hands of the Boers than in those of cosmopolitan capitalists. We have fought and suffered grievously, more than anybody else in this country. That is past, and no one is so foolish as to want it over again. The questions of the flag and of supremacy have been settled for all time. They are both now outside politics. We are now concerned with out domestic affairs.

"Having got free government, our natural desire is, and our sole endeavour will be, so to govern that this country shall prosper and the two races be drawn together. At Vereeniging I signed the treaty of peace. I then solemnly accepted what is so dear to you—your King and your flag. They are now our King and our flag."

Referring to the mines and to the necessity of restoring confidence on the part of Great Britain and Continental Europe in the Transvaal, General Botha said: "People talk about our hostility to the mines. There is no such hostility. We simply object to the men who run the mines also controlling the running of the country. Had I wished ill to the mining industry, as such, I, more than any man, had the fullest opportunity during the war of harming the industry by wrecking the works along the Witwatersrand Reef. I recognised then, as I recognise now, that my people must look to the mines for help, and, as I protected the mines then, so shall I see that they are not injured now.

"The education and language questions rank next in importance to the labor and mining industry. In regard to these, Premier Botha said:

"We want to pursue a just and liberal policy. It is an accepted principle that English shall be the compulsory language. Then, as regards education generally, we are prepared to work on the basis of the compromise which was reached 15 months ago by the representatives of the Volkites and the official representatives of the Government, including the Colonial Secretary and the Director of Education. Complete agreement was then effected, and a minute was drafted, which was acceptable to both sides."

Premier Botha has given out the following assurance: "The 'Coalitionists' will do nothing that a purely British Ministry would not do."

YOUNG OPERATOR MURDERED.

Body Picked Up on Track Near McKenzie, Ont.

Port Arthur, Ont. March 4. Word has been received that the dead body of Ernest Ironside, operator at McKenzie, on the C.P.R., had been picked up on the track two miles west of that station. Two wounds in the neck, apparently inflicted with a knife, indicated the manner of death.

He was a son of John Ironside, collector of Inland Revenue at this port, and had been appointed to the position of operator at McKenzie only a few days ago. He was 21 years of age. The coroner declares that he was stabbed to death and his body placed between the rails.

PREMIER TWEEDIE SUCCEEDS TO POST

He Has Been Appointed Lieut.-Governor of New Brunswick.

MR. PUGSLEY MAY SUCCEED

It Is Understood Mr. Pugsley Will Become Premier, and Speaker Robinson Enter Cabinet.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Ottawa, March 4.—At a meeting of the Dominion Cabinet held on Saturday afternoon, Hon. L. J. Tweedie was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick, to succeed the late Hon. J. B. Snowball. Mr. Tweedie was here when the appointment was made. His acceptance of the post caused some surprise, as the general opinion was that he would not care to be laid on the shelf for some time to come. It is believed that Hon. Wm. Pugsley, Attorney-General of New Brunswick, will succeed Mr. Tweedie as Premier, and that Hon. Clifford W. Robinson, the present Speaker, will take the position of Provincial Secretary.

Hon. L. J. Tweedie.

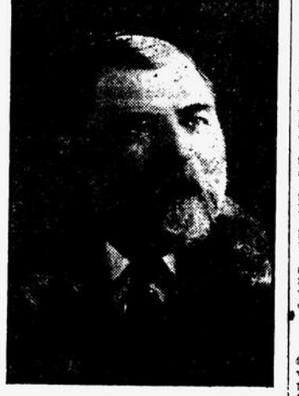
THE NEW LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR.

Hon. Lemuel J. Tweedie, the new Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick, is of Irish descent, but a native of New Brunswick, being born at Chatham, N.B., in 1849. He was educated at a Presbyterian College, and called to the New Brunswick Bar in 1871. He entered public life in 1874, being elected as a Conservative to the Legislature. In 1878 he was defeated, but was re-elected as Conservative in 1882, and has since been continuously in the Provincial Legislature. In 1899 he entered the Provincial Government as Surveyor-General, later becoming Provincial Secretary during Mitchell and Emmerson Administrations. On the resignation of Premier Emmerson in 1900 to contest Westmorland for the House of Commons, Mr. Tweedie was called upon to form a ministry, which he did in September of that year, becoming Premier, and still holding his portfolio as Provincial Secretary, which offices he held up to his present appointment.

MR. PUGSLEY'S CAREER.

Hon. William Pugsley, the present Attorney-General of New Brunswick, is of English-American descent. His ancestors lived in New York State prior to the Revolution, but then settled in Nova Scotia. He was born at Sussex, N.B., and educated there, and graduated with honor from the University of New Brunswick, being called to the Bar of his province in 1872, and made Q.C. in 1891.

He was first elected to the Provincial Legislature in 1885, at a by-election, and re-elected in 1886 and 1890. He was Speaker of the Legislature from 1887 to 1888, when he was called to the Executive Council and appointed Solicitor-General, which office he resigned in 1892. In 1896 he ran as an Independent for the House of Commons in St. John City, and three years later again entered the Legislature, and accepted office as Attorney-General in the Tweedie Government, which he still retains. He was regarded as a Conservative supporter until Hon. A. G. Blair was made Minister of Railways.



Hon. W. H. Pugsley.

Hon. Mr. Mack, member of the Legislative Council, was on Saturday sworn in as a member of the Provincial Government. Hon. Mr. Mack will assume the duties of leader of the Government in the second chamber of the legislative machinery of this province. The vacancy was caused by the entrance of Hon. W. T. Pipes into the House of Assembly.

McCraw Murder Trial Postponed.

Three Rivers, Que., March 4.—The March sessions of the assizes here have been adjourned until the 25th instant in order that the Crown authorities may make up their minds as to what is to be done with the McCraw murder case. When the session opened, Mr. N. K. Laflamme, K.C., with Messrs. Blondin and Desy, appeared for McCraw, and announced that they were ready to go on with his new trial for the murder of Percy Howard Sclater at Grande Anse. Mr. C. A. Wilson appeared as Crown prosecutor, and stated that he was not prepared to go on with the trial, nor to exactly announce the intentions of the Crown in that regard.

In the musical competition the status is given thus: Quebec Symphony, 27 marks; Clarke's Brigade of Newfoundland, 24 marks; St Lambert Choral Society of Montreal, 23 points, and Ottawa Minstrels, 16 marks.

LIGHTS ON ST. LAWRENCE.

Mariners are Notified of Various Changes That are Ordered.

Ottawa, March 4. St. Lawrence river mariners are advised as follows:

The maintenance of a steam fog horn at Lake Islet light station, River St. Lawrence, on the entrance to Saguenay river, has been discontinued.

The light maintained on Les Eboulements Government wharf, north shore of the River St. Lawrence, has been improved by the substitution of a fifth order dioptric illuminating apparatus for the pressed lens heretofore used. The light shown is fixed white light, which should be visible 9 miles from all points of approach by water.

Range lights, established by the Government of Canada on the west shore of Riviere du Loup, near the mouth in the county of Maskinonge, Province of Quebec, to lead in from Lake St. Peter, will be put in operation on the opening of navigation in 1907. They will be known as Louiseville range lights.

The lights will be fixed white lights, shown from anchor lens lanterns hoisted on poles, and should be visible 6 miles in the line of range. The poles are made more conspicuous as day beacons by having a diamond-shape slatwork, painted white, on the top of each. The poles are respectively 29 and 40 feet high, and stand on ground elevated 6 feet above the summer level of the river. The front light is elevated 25 feet and the back light 45 feet above the water.

The front light pole stands on the west side of Riviere du Loup, about ¾ mile above its mouth.

Lat. N. 46 13 58
Long. W. 70 55 46

The back light pole stands on the west side of Riviere du Loup, about 1-10 miles north from the front one.

Lucania Had a Rough Trip.

New York, March 4.—The Cunard steamship Lucania arrived from Liverpool on Saturday night after a rough passage of six days, ten hours and five minutes. From February 26 to March 1 the Lucania encountered moderate to strong gales, with high seas and hail squalls, in which a portion of the railing was smashed. Shortly after leaving Liverpool Mrs. William Brewster, a saloon passenger, died of heart failure. She was the wife of William Brewster, president of the Brewster Carriage Company, of this city, and daughter of the late Judge Munger, of Rochester.

Tips May Still Be Given.

Jefferson City, Mo., March 4.—Following a committee hearing, at which negro waiters appeared on the side of the Opposition, the Missouri Senate has voted to postpone indefinitely the Tubbs bill to prohibit all persons from giving or receiving tips in any form. Waiters, sleeping-car employes, hotel porters, bell-boys and all other interests affected by the proposed anti-tipping legislation were represented at the meeting. The bill passed the House by an overwhelming vote.

Shooting Was Accidental.

WE CONTINUE OUR DISPLAY OF

The New Dress Goods and Silks

"Leaving town" time is drawing near. Dressmakers are getting busier.

Months ago we anticipated your needs and we were determined in spite of all obstacles to be ready on time with the new dress goods and silks.

And we are. They're all here. It meant worry and hustling to get them, but it was worth it. Paris, London and New York in one, could not show a more fashionable and comprehensive display than we are now. It includes:

HERCA SILK, in black and cream, as well as all the best colors. The Taffeta we guarantee as unsplittable, unripable and untearable .... .45

PRIESTLEY'S Showerproof Cravenette, in new greys, fawns, tans, blues, blacks, etc .... $1.00 to $2.50

FRENCH HERRINGBONE AND ARMURE CHEVIOTS, in navy blue and black, .85 and $1.00

SHEPHERD CHECKS, a very special lot, 54 inches wide, .75

SILK TAFFETA SHEPHERD CHECKS 65c, 75c, 85c and $1

DRESDEN SILKS, in a charming variety of designs $1.25

$7.35 for $15.00 Shirt Waist Suits

Others worth $10.00 and $20.00 at Same Price

These are samples that came to us with the summer dresses the other day.

Smart, up-to-date Spring and Summer Styles in voiles, greys, navy, and figured lustre and brown delaine, and we're putting some green-grey tweed ones along with them.

Here they are—about 30 only—we can't promise any such opportunity later on.

They're new, they're smart and up-to-date and on Tuesday will only cost you half (or less) their real value.

Values from $10.00, $15.00 and $20.00, for $7.35.

IT'S THE CORRECT BRAID YOU WANT

The cut of the Costume isn't everything. Nor the material. Nor both together.

"It's the little things that tell." Things that seem trivial are often mightily important.

Braids for instance. They add distinction, they signify "this year" or "last year."

Braids are pregnant with meaning. The good Braids, the new Braids, handsome distinctive, exclusive Braids. Braids such as we're selling now. Have you looked through our sample book? It may be a revelation to you in the matter of braid assortment, coloring and artistic design.

We're ready with the newest and best to show you. All prices, from 5 cents a yard upwards.

Montrealer Achieved Success.

A former Montrealer, who has recently been appointed to a very responsible position in the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the West, is Mr. George J. Bury. Mr. Bury, who was formerly general superintendent of the road at Winnipeg, has just been named for the position of assistant general manager of the company's western lines. He will have charge of all matters relating to maintenance of ways and operation of the lines, with offices in Winnipeg. The duties to be performed by Mr. Bury have in the past been discharged by Second Vice-President William Whyte. Owing to the expansion of the work it has been found imperative that an office be especially formed to deal with the western lines.

Protestant House of Industry.

The visiting governors for the present week to the Protestant House of Industry and Refuge and to the Homes at Longue Pointe are: Messrs. Albert H. Campbell and William Smith.

The number of night lodgings given last week was 563, and the number of meals given was 920. The Board of Outdoor Relief distributed 121 parcels of provisions, 33 quarter cords of wood and 28 quarter tons of coal.

PRESENTATION.—Mr. A. G. Meaden, superintendent of the Canadian Bronze Works of this city, was last week the recipient of a silver tea set, presented to him by the employes of the works. Mr. Meaden starts on Tuesday next for Winnipeg, to open a plant for the company in that city.

THE FUTURE OF MONTREAL'S HARBOR

Programme of Notable Improvements Promised by President Stephens.

A TRULY NATIONAL PORT

Minister of Marine and Fisheries Guarantees Government Aid to Representative Gathering.

"We must not only help the improvements contemplated by the Harbor Commissioners—we must not only help to give the harbor of Montreal the best equipment possible, but we must find the necessary means of bringing the trade to Montreal from Manitoba and the great Northwest. We want the thirty or forty-five million bushels we are exporting every year to be carried entirely through Canadian channels, to the greater benefit of the trade of Canada. We will be very glad when the time comes to hear that the commission is ready to carry out the plans as formulated here to-day by President Stephens, and I can assure you there will not be any difficulty with the Finance Minister in getting from him the necessary amount of money required to improve and develop this harbor."

Such was the announcement made on Saturday by the Hon. Mr. Brodeur, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, at the luncheon tendered the business interests of Montreal by the Harbor Commissioners.

The meeting was organized by the Harbor Commissioners of the Port of Montreal for the purpose of bringing together the varied interests of the port. Luncheon was served in the office of the secretary of the commission. Hon. Mr. Brodeur, and the Deputy Minister, Col. Gourdeau, stood at the head of the stairs leading to the board room, and were introduced to the guests by Lieut.-Col. Stephens.

After luncheon, the members adjourned to the board room to hear the various announcements in connection with improvements to the port.

Lieut.-Col. Stephens occupied the chair. On his right sat Hon. L. B. Brodeur, Messrs. L. E. Geoffrion, Hon. Mr. Tarte, Hon. H. J. Cloran, Hon. William Owens, Mr. D. McNicoll, the Consuls of Russia, Sweden, Norway and Italy. On his left sat His Worship Mayor Ekers, Mr. C. C. Ballantyne, Hon. Robert Mackay, Hon. J. P. B. Casgrain, Hon. L. O. David, Mr. H. A. Allan and the United States and French Consuls.

President Stephens, after thanking those present for showing such an interest in the work contemplated by the present commissioners, before calling on Hon. Mr. Brodeur, spoke in part as follows:—

LIEUT.-COL. STEPHENS.

"At the heart of a great continent, one thousand miles from the sea, Montreal holds in the hollow of her hand the secret of trade supremacy. If we, Canadians, supplement the natural advantages of her position by wise and general policy of development, Canadian engineering skill has further enhanced the value of this strategic position by a service of deep water canals unrivalled in any other country of the world. This makes it possible for the St. Lawrence route, when completely developed, not only to become a national highway in a Canadian sense, but, if we are wise, it will one day become the international carrier of a great portion of this continent's over ocean trade. It will become so by reason of its being the shortest, the safest and the cheapest highway to the markets of the world. Nature has already made it the shortest; it becomes therefore our national duty to make it the cheapest and the safest trade route of this continent.

WHAT IS TO BECOME OF MONTREAL?

"In the face of those facts, we are compelled to ask ourselves what is to become of the port of Montreal, with the vast increase of her channel capacity and the doubling of her railway approaches, if some means are not at once undertaken to provide the facilities demanded by the new conditions. If we neglect the development and equipment of our ports, these railways and canals become the feeders of American ports rather than the sources of supply to our national waterway.

"By the completion of the grain conveyors, which we undertake to bring about by the 1st of May, 1908, we will make possible the delivery of grain to vessels berthing at any of the ten sheds in our harbor, thereby outfitting the port of Montreal with the best grain-carrying service on this continent. We have under contemplation the taking over, on the 1st of May, all railway traffic on the wharves, so that after that date there will be one terminual authority taking care of railway freight from Point St. Charles to Hochelaga. This has been made possible by several conferences held with the management of the great railways, and the Commissioners feel confident that through their co-operation much of the congestion now experienced will be done away with.

"We will also create a traffic department which will control and regulate the cartage to and fro on the wharves, as a further attempt to relieve the congested state of our local business, and we hope, with the co-operation of the interests concerned,—and a little patience on the part of the public,—to put into operation a business management of the port of Montreal that will mean the saving of time and money to all concerned.

THE PROGRAMME.

"This, then, is our programme:

"For the present:

"To equip and complete what we have with the best that money can buy, to cheapen the handling of our business.

"For the future:

"To bring together by means of an elevated track system the Eastern and Western divisions of our harbor. To bind into one harmonious whole the entire water frontage of Canada's national port, thereby doubling her space capacity. Adding six new ocean berths in the centre of the harbor, and making it possible to handle her railway freight, day and night, without fear of congestion, or blocking the ground floor approaches to the piers and sheds. Making it possible to so classify her freight as to cut in two the handling charges of the port, whereby new trade could be invited, our present trade despatched without loss of time, and our position as a national port made impregnable against the competition of our rivals.

"We purpose, therefore, at the earliest possible moment, laying before the Minister a request to sanction the borrowing of sufficient money to enable us to map out the permanent works of this harbor for the next ten years, so that we may double, or, if necessary, triple the capacity of the port to handle its share of national trade. (Loud cheers.)

HON. L. P. BRODEUR.

The Hon. Mr. Brodeur, on rising to respond, was received enthusiastically, and outlined the circumstances leading to the new board being formed:

"I think that one of the questions that the Harbor Commissioners will have to examine is the question of bringing traffic to this city. We must not only look to the improvements of our harbor, not only equip our harbor, but also find the necessary means of bringing trade to Montreal. It is a most important thing, because it will give us the opportunity of the trade carried through Canadian channels, and it will bring some more revenue to the Harbor of Montreal. It will help to a large extent to pay the interest on the investments we are going to make. The Harbor Commissioners will not only give us the big wharves, but will see that the traffic is being carried this way. Railway companies, and shipping interests will be very glad to see the members of the Harbor Commission co-operating with them for the purpose of bringing the traffic from the West entirely through Canadian channels. The question of transportation is certainly one of the most important, if not the most important, that is at present before the public.

"I see that we have been making in Montreal great progress. In 1905 we exported 6,176,851 bushels of wheat—last year the exports of wheat were 10,555,450 bushels. This is a very fine result. The West exported last year about 40,000,000 bushels. In the year 1905 it was something like 30,000,000 bushels. Now of this forty million there are only 10,000,000 that have passed through the port of Motreal, and most of the wheat that has been exported from Canada has necessarily been exported through American ports. I am very glad to see this American prosperity, but why should we not try and secure that prosperity? Eleven millions have passed through this route last year, and there is no reason why we should not take the necessary means of diverting the trade through the St. Lawrence and Montreal. I am sure the Harbor Commissioners will be happy to co-operate with the several interests in carrying out this result. But how is this going to be done? We must see that our ports are kept open as long as Chicago and Duluth. There is no reason why we should not keep the ports of Fort William and Port Arthur open as late in the autumn as the others just mentioned.

NOT AN EXPENSIVE PORT.

"It has been said very often that our port of Montreal is a very expensive one, very much more expensive than the ports of New York and Boston. I had the good fortune the other day of receiving with Sir Wilfrid Laurier and some of our colleagues a deputation from Ontario and Montreal, and there it was stated, and I may say that the statement is absolutely correct, that the port of Montreal, instead of being dearer, was cheaper than New Work.

"There is another fact which I may mention. The President has just stated that the American ports are under the control of railway companies, and shipping companies. Of course, when the grain is shipped through those ports it is shipped at freight rates, and consequently no specific charge is made. But is it to be expected that those terminal facilities which are installed in the ports of New York and Boston and other ports, are used by the people without any charge being made for their use? Is it to be expected that the railway companies of Boston and New York are giving their terminal facilities for nothing?

"I must say that there is some discrimination in the insurance rates on the St. Lawrence route, and even the ports of St. John and Halifax are compelled to pay larger rates than the American ports.

"The insurance companies are not, I am sure, properly aware of the conditions, because if they had looked into the improvements that we have made, especially during the last five years, they would realize that we have made a great deal of progress, and that there was no specific reason for this discrimination in regard to insurance rates. In spots dangerous to vessels through fog, fog alarms have been established; in several places where lights are required lights have been established, and where those lights were not of sufficient strength, the efficiency of these lights has been increased."

"It was represented to me some time ago that accidents might happen between Quebec and Montreal, which could be prevented if we put some telegraphic service on the coast to be used by the shippers. I may tell you that a contract was made a few days ago with the Bell Telephone Company by which we are going to install on the shores a telephone service to prevent accidents similar to the Victorian two years ago."

Comedian Jumps to His Death.

Chester, Pa., March 4. — In an effort to escape being burned to death, John Conly, a comedian of the Vanity Fair Company, was instantly killed yesterday by jumping from a window of the Arcade Hotel, where the theatrical company was stopping. Mrs. Watson, also a member of the company, was severely burned, and she is in a serious condition.

TO CURE THAT COLD

Local Druggist's Suggestion.

Said Druggist R. H. Bryson: "This is the season for coughs and colds, and for the benefit of Montreal people we want to tell them the best means for a cure.

"Don't dose the stomach with cough syrups. It's no use; they only soothe a little—upset the stomach and do not heal.

"The best cure we know is Vinol, which contains in a highly concentrated form all of the healing, curative elements taken from genuine fresh cods' livers, without a drop of oil to upset the stomach and retard its work. It contains no sickening drugs whatever. Vinol heals, cures and strengthens the sore lungs and bronchial tubes. It makes rich, red blood, builds up the appetite and creates strength; in fact, it is the best remedy we have ever sold in our store for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis, and all lung affections.

"We ask every person in Montreal who has a chronic cough or hard cold to try Vinol on our guarantee to return their money if they are not satisfied." R. H. Bryson, Druggist.

Dyspepsia

Don't think you can cure your dyspepsia in any other way than by strengthening and toning your stomach.

That is weak and incapable of performing its functions, probably because you have imposed upon it in one way or another over and over again.

You should take

Hood's Sarsaparilla

It strengthens and tones the stomach, and permanently cures dyspepsia and all stomach troubles. Accept no substitute.

IN LABOR CIRCLES.

Charles March, Toronto, 2nd vice president of the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators of America, will be the principal speaker at the open meeting of the local union.

The Sash and Door Factory Employes' Union will hold an open meeting at 122 St. Denis street this evening. Addresses will be delivered by Messrs. Joseph Amey, business agent of the Building Trades Council, and A. Martel, president of the union. All the sash and door factory employes have been invited.

At yesterday's meeting of the general meeting of the Montreal Labor party, a notice of motion was given which, if adopted, will bar Socialist, Liberals and Conservatives from holding membership in the party. The resolution will be discussed the first Sunday in April and a warm time is expected. The Electoral Committee made its financial report, which showed that the receipts had exceeded the expenditure in the St. Mary's by-election. Alphonse Verville, M.P., delivered a short address, giving an account of his work in Parliament during the present session. He discussed the Lemieux Trades and Disputes Bill, stating, among other things, that most of the objectionable clauses, in so far as the workingmen are concerned, had been eliminated.

To-night's Boxing.

There are three good fights on the programme at Riverside Park to-night. Jack Walsh and Olivier Daoust, the clever local welter-weights, meet in a fifteen round bout that should be a rattling good fight from start to finish, as both are clever boxers and hard hitters. Kid Parsons and Bob Critcher, lightweights, and Kid Locke and Kid Fleming, the 100 pound boxers, will furnish the preliminaries of six rounds each, both of which should be fast and interesting.

Beware of imitations and substitutes, accept none but the genuine "Baby's Own."

DR. ORONHYATEKHA DIED IN GEORGIA

Supreme Chief Ranger of Foresters Succumbed to Heart Trouble.

HAD A PICTURESQUE CAREER

A Full Blooded Indian He Was Educated at Oxford at the King's Expense.

Savannah, Ga., March 4. — Dr. Oronhyatekha, of Toronto, former chief of the Mohawk Indians, and Supreme Chief Ranger of the Independent Order of Foresters, died at the De Soto Hotel yesterday afternoon.

His remains are now en route to Toronto, and it is expected that they will reach there on Wednesday.

Dr. Oronhyatekha arrived in Savannah on January 30, and stopped at the De Soto. He was accompanied by his secretary, Mr. W. W. Dunlop. An affection of the heart, which had long given him trouble, became more pronounced shortly after he arrived, and the doctor was confined to his bed. He was able to go out but little while here. On Wednesday his condition became such as to cause his physician and his secretary alarm. On Friday paresis developed and Dr. T. J. Charlton, who was attending him, seeing that the end was near, advised that he had done all he could for the distinguished sufferer, and that death was not far off.

Dr. Oronhyatekha was conscious until a short time before he died, and conversed with Mr. A. E. Stevens, of Port Huron, Mich., assistant general manager of the Independent Order of Foresters, about the affairs of the organization. He longed very much to see his son Lockland, who had been telegraphed for, but who was unable to reach here in time.

During the short time that he was here Dr. Oronhyatekha met a few people, who became very much attached to him. One of his regrets was his inability to visit the tomb of Tomochichi, the celebrated Indian, who was a friend of Oglethorpe, and who lies buried in a public square in Savannah. He and Tomochichi were much the same character of men, if history is to be believed. But few of the guests of the hotel knew the doctor was an Indian. He carried his 66 years lightly, and his curly hair was so unlike that of the ordinary Indian as to make him wholly dissimilar from the popular conception of the American red man. Before coming to Savannah he spent a week in Washington, during which time he called upon President Roosevelt.

It is expected that the remains will be buried at Deseronto, Ont., where his wife be buried, and where his daughter, Mrs. Percy Johnson, resides.

Dr. Oronhyatekha's death removes a man who was probably the most picturesque figure in Canadian public life a curious combination of the traditional poetry of the dying race of red men, with the keen business instincts of the white. An extraordinary combination of a natural leader of men, with splendid business capacities, mingled with a curious degree of almost childish vanity, he strongly impressed every one who met him. Although his management of the Foresters' order was frequently severely attacked, he was always full of the most unbounded enthusiasm and belief in its permanency, as well as its real value as a beneficent institution, and there is no doubt that to this strong belief he had, much of his success in building it up was due. He will be sincerely mourned by many thousands of Foresters all over the world, as well as by his own people of the Six Nations, amongst whom he was held in singular reverence.

SPOKE IN MONTREAL RECENTLY.

His death will be a severe blow to the order, although it was not unexpected by those who had known him. He visited Montreal a few months ago and made an address at the Monument National in connection with the recent insurance investigation. At that time those who had known him for years past were shocked at the change of his appearance. It was evident that the strain of the investigation had told upon him severely, as he looked ten years older than he had a year ago, and was evidently failing. He made a brave effort to give an address, but it was noticeable that his voice was exceedingly weak, and several times in the course of his speech his memory failed, so that his secretary had to stay behind him throughout, and several times prevented him repeating himself, and generally guided him through his speech.

Dr. Oronhyatekha was a full-blooded Indian, a member of the Six Nations tribe, being born on their reservation near Brantford, Ont., in 1841. His education was begun in the Industrial School established by the New England company for the training of young Indians. When he graduated, his parents, believing he had learned enough, refused to help him to pursue his studies farther, or even to give their consent to his doing so. When 14 years old he ran away and worked his way for two years in the Wesleyan Academy at Wilbraham, Mass. Afterwards he worked through a four-year preparatory course at Kenyon College, Ohio, in three years. He entered Toronto University, and there, as in his other school, supported himself while he worked through the course.

Oronhyatekha was at Kenyon College in 1860, when the Prince of Wales visited this continent, and presented him with an address on behalf of the Six Nations. The Prince was so impressed with the young Indian that he used his influence to have him continue his studies under Sir Henry Acland, Bart., then regius professor of medicine. A friendship sprang up between professor and pupil, which long continued. After his course at Oxford, Oronhyatekha married a woman of his own race. To them were born several children, but only two lived. They have grown to splendid manhood and womanhood.

CONNECTION WITH FORESTERS.

Dr. Oronhyatekha became a Forester when practising medicine in London, Ont. The order then was very weak and did not offer the attractions it does today. It is believed, therefore, that the principal reason he had for joining was because its membership was restricted to "male whites." The reflection upon his race was more than he could tolerate. Having broken down the barriers he became interested in the order and determined to work for its advancement. To accomplish this he was compelled to obtain a high place in the order. This brought him into competition with brainy men, but he superior ability finally landed him in the highest place Forestry has to offer. It was in 1881, when he brought about the reorganization of Forestry that he was elected supreme chief ranger. Since that time the order had no reason to regret the choice and no desire for a change. To his efforts, advice and energy the order to-day owes its position as it is.

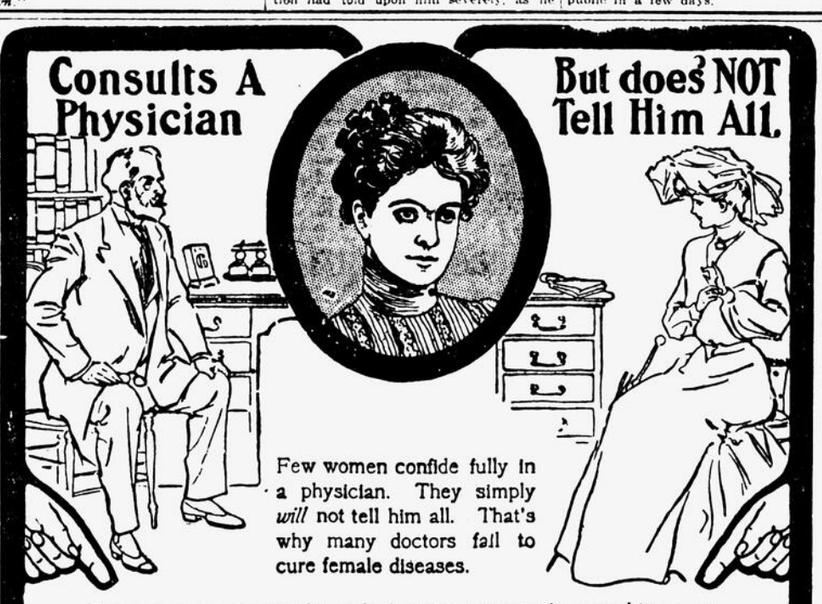
Socially Dr. Oronhyatekha was one of the most interesting and affable of men. While maintaining the dignity of his race, which his six feet and splendid physique made easy, he had a warm, hearty manner which made loyal friends of all acquaintances. In debate he was forcible, and, when attacked, imperturbable.

He had been a temperance worker all his life. In Masonry he took his thirty-third degree in the Scottish rite. In 1899 he was elected president of the National Fraternal Congress.

MR. MORIN TEMPORARILY HEAD.

Toronto, Ont., March 4 — The manner of choosing a successor to Dr. Oronhyatekha lies with the executive council. Under the regulations, temporary charge will pass into the hands of past supreme chief ranger Victor Morin, of Montreal, who has been connected with the order for nearly twenty years. The council is invested with power permanently to fill the vacancy, to summon a special session of the supreme court to make the appointment, or may allow the office to remain vacant, permitting its duties to be discharged by the temporary head, who would be equivalent to bestowing the honor upon Mr. Morin. The executive council is composed of Victor Morin, Montreal; Joseph Dayton Clark, Dayton, Ohio; Robert Matheson, Toronto; H. A. Collins, Toronto; Dr. T. Millman, Toronto, and E. G. Stevenson, Detroit. Dr. Oronhyatekha was the seventh member. The constitution provides that the chief ranger must at the time of his election be a resident of Canada, and must continue to remain a resident of Canada during his time of office. This will preclude the present vice-chief ranger, J. E. Clark of Dayton, from being elevated to the higher office, and also Mr. Stevenson, of Detroit.

It is known that Dr. Oronhyatekha had made all arrangements in view of his possible death, and had discussed the choice of a successor among his intimate lieutenants, and his choice will be made public in a few days.



Few women confide fully in a physician. They simply will not tell him all. That's why many doctors fail to cure female diseases.

Every woman dreads the ordeal of the physician's consulting room. A sensitive, refined woman shrinks from the searching questions and the physical examination!

It is not so in writing to Mrs. Pinkham. Thousands of women owe their present health and happiness (yes, and their good looks, too) to the fact that they have told all their physical troubles to Mrs. Pinkham and followed her advice and been cured of female diseases.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Cures more women every year than any other medicine in the world. If you are in doubt about your case, write in perfect confidence to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. You will receive in reply a personal letter of advice free. Mrs. Pinkham is daughter-in-law of Lydia Pinkham, and for twenty-five years under her direction, and since her decease, she has been advising sick women free of charge.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered intensely with suppressed periods and pain every month for years, and could get no relief from physicians' prescriptions or other medicine. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and did so, and in a very short time my functions were regular, and without pain.

I am, indeed, a grateful, happy woman for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me.

ELLEN WALSH, Wellington Hotel, Ottawa, Ont.

Mrs. Hayes also profited by Mrs. Pinkham's advice.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Sometime ago I wrote you describing my symptoms (fibroid tumor) and asked your advice. You replied and I followed all your directions carefully and to-day am a well woman.

THE WEATHER

So long as March continues to give such weather as this it is not likely that anyone will have a very strenuous kick to make. It is rather a difficult matter to say whether March is beginning this year in a lamblike or a lionlike mood. This seems to be a mixture of both—something like the lion of friend Bottom, who "roared sweet as any sucking dove."

PROBABILITIES FOR THE NEXT 24 HOURS.

Moderate winds, fair and moderately cold to-day and on Tuesday.

Mr. George A. McNicholl Promoted.

Mr. George A. McNicholl, who for a time has been secretary to Mr. Frank W. Morse, vice-president and general manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific, was on Saturday appointed to the position of Pacific Coast purchasing agent of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Mr. McNicholl is only thirty years of age, but he has been with the Grand Trunk interests since he was twelve years old. He was for years under Mr. W. Wainwright and Mr. George B. Reeve, and finally went with Mr. Morse. He will be located in Vancouver and will leave in a few days for his new post.

DENIES MRS. EDDY IS VERY WEALTHY

Counsel Discusses Charges Made in the Bill of Equity.

HE TERMS IT PERSECUTION

And Says She Does Not Believe Her Relatives Have Taken Up the Inquiry Into Her Affairs.

Concord, N.H., March 4.—General Frank S. Streeter, the legal adviser of Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, has issued a statement as a reply to various allegations in the bill of equity which has been filed against directors and trustees of the Christian Science Church, by relatives of Mrs. Eddy, with a view of obtaining an accounting of funds. The statement says:

"Early on Saturday morning I sent to Mrs. Eddy a copy of the bill of equity, as published, but not yet served upon any of the defendants, so far as I am informed. I have since had a long conference with her, in which this matter and matters connected therewith have been fully discussed.

"In common with her many friends, she believes that the initiative in this proceeding was not taken by her son or by other relatives, but by others, who, in a markedly unusual manner, and by unique methods, are undertaking, under the guise of court proceedings, to continue the persecution begun some time ago.

"From my conferences with her at the time, and on other recent occasions, I am able to speak definitely and positively. Her clearness of mind and resoluteness of purpose has been in no respect impaired by her advanced years. Her capacity to think clearly and to deal accurately and justly with important business affairs has never been more perfectly demonstrated than in her conferences and acts in the last two weeks, and in numerous letters in her handwriting, which I have received from her during that time.

"The amount of Mrs. Eddy's property has been grossly multiplied by rumor and unfounded report. She is not possessed of large wealth as the term is used. Mrs. Eddy receives no income from the Church, nor from the publication society connected with the Church. Her sole income for many years has been from the copyright on her own books, and the amount from these sources has been grossly overestimated.

ON BUSINESS METHODS.

"Mrs. Eddy's business affairs have been managed by herself, with the aid of Mr. Frye, and under the oversight and personal audit of another gentleman, whose name has not been mentioned, but who stands for all that is honorable and of good repute in financial circles in Concord. Accurate accounts of all her property and investments, as well as her annual income expenditures, have been carefully kept, and frequently audited. The last audit was in October, 1906. None of the defendants named, except Mr. Frye, have any connection with the management of her property or investments, or have any knowledge whatever in reference thereto, nor have any of the said defendants ever received any property of Mrs. Eddy which they hold in trust or otherwise, except in one instance, for the benefit of a relation.

"With reference to the report that within a few days Mrs. Eddy has placed in the hands of trustees a large amount of money, to be held and used for the benefit of her son and her grandchildren, I have nothing to say. Whatever Mrs. Eddy may or may not have done toward providing for her family is a matter which ought not, for the present at least, to be discussed by me."

Overheated Stove Caused Damage.

The fancy dry goods store of F. Bernstein, 87 St. Lawrence street, was damaged to the extent of $800 by a fire that broke out in the premises last evening. The blaze is supposed to have been caused by an overheated stove.

THE STANDARD

The publishers of The Standard regret that so many thousands of citizens were disappointed in not being able to get last week's Standard. At the Windsor Hotel and hundreds of news stands the supplies were exhausted in a few hours, and crowds of newsdealers besieged The Standard office for further supplies. Although last week's edition was the largest in the history of the paper, yet the supply was literally thousands short. It was impossible to foresee this condition. This week's orders justify a further greatly enlarged edition, and we hope to minimize the complaints from those unable to procure a copy.

An Interesting Government Report and Gerhard Heintzmam Pianos.

According to the official returns only 643 American made pianos have been sold in the Dominion of Canada during a fiscal year, and from the valuation of same it is fair to assume that 75 per cent. of these pianos have been of the cheapest grades.

This official report proves clearly that our musical and cultured people have come to the conclusion that we are producing a piano in Canada which meets their most exacting requirements.

This piano is the "Gerhard" Heintzman, the art piano of Canada, and it is most gratifying to Mr. Gerhard Heintzman that his efforts to build a thoroughly high grade artistic piano are fully appreciated by the musical families of this country.

At the present time the demand for this piano is so great that the manufacturer can scarcely fill the orders which are streaming in from all over the broad Dominion. A full assortment of the latest art styles in fancy woods can be seen at the warerooms of J. W. SHAW & CO., 370 West St. Catherine street, who are the sole agents for the genuine "Gerhard" Heintzman in Montreal and vicinity. J. W. Shaw & Co. are also manufacturers and are making in their factory in this city some beautiful pianos in several different styles. These instruments are gaining a fine reputation among our musical people.
