René compares Québec to Mugabe's Zimbabwe

MONTREAL (CP) — Emerging from a luncheon to honor visiting Zimbabwe Prime Minister Robert Mugabe, Premier René Levesque admitted Monday he was envious of the African leader's success in making his country independent.

"When we were talking together before lunch he said, we (Zimbabwe) had a dominant minority — you know, that brings back memories — that more or less hampered our development."

Before his Parti Québécois government came to power in 1976, Levesque referred to English Quebecers once as "white Rhodesians." The PQ lost its bid to make Quebec independent when its 1980 referendum on sovereignty-association was unsuccessful.

"What really struck me was what he said about the emancipation of his country, which was called Rhodesia before," Levesque said.

White-dominated Rhodesia was "something like what we experienced here in Quebec, with a dominant minority which exploited the majority."

Since attaining independence in 1980, Zimbabwe has had its problems, the premier conceded, but "it is a more healthy society because the majority has taken the instruments of decision making."

Asked about the 100,000 whites who have left Zimbabwe, Levesque said: "They have been replaced."

Levesque said Mugabe told him about neighborhoods of the capital Harare, which used to be known as Salisbury, where the whites have moved out.

"There were people who moved out because they couldn't accept change and they have been replaced by local people."

Hospital staff sells personal file

QUEBEC (CP) — Information contained in confidential medical files of patients at several hospitals in Quebec is being passed on to insurance agents and other salesmen without the knowledge of the patients, indicates a survey by The Canadian Press.

The practice is prevalent in the maternity wards at hospitals here and in Montreal where insurance agents and sellers of baby-care products are eager to be the first to contact parents of the newborn.

Several doctors, nurses, and sales personnel, who have asked that their names not be published, have confirmed that it is common for nurses to give the name and addresses of new parents to sales agents.

If the agent eventually makes a sale, the cooperating nurse can expect to be paid a commission, either as a fixed sum or a percentage, health professionals say.

This practice appears to be common across the country, according to parents in several provinces who say they have been surprised at the onslaught of a variety of salesmen almost as soon as a child is born.

A Quebec insurance agent said the practice offers extra income to nurses and puts the seller in quick contact with a potential customer.

Among those who pay to get the names of new parents are photographers and people who sell furniture, diaper services, baby food, and nursing kits.

Several mothers who recently gave birth say they received up to six phone calls from insurance agents in the first few hours at home after leaving hospital.

Mulroney locks horns with MacEachen over deficit

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Brian Mulroney went head-to-head with deputy prime minister Allan MacEachen Monday, demanding government action to reduce the multi-billion dollar deficit.

Mulroney, reappearing in the Commons after a two-day absence last week, told MacEachen the deficit — forecast to be $31.3 billion this year — has a debilitating effect on both interest rates and employment.

Mulroney campaigned for the leaderhip of the Progressive Conservative party on a platform of virtually eliminating the deficit by 1990, but his comments appeared to be at odds with those made by Tory finance critic John Crosbie in the Commons last week.

Crosbie advocated then that the government take advantage of the fact the deficit may not be as great as expected this year and introduce tax breaks to help consumers hit with high federal taxes on items ranging from television cable service to cigarettes.

MacEachen brushed off Mulroney's deficit concerns, saying interest rates have been falling and therefore have not been adversely affected by the deficit, which was $24.3 billion in the fiscal year which ended March 31.

MacEachen, currently external affairs minister, argued the high savings rate by Canadians permits borrowing authorities in Canada to manage the debt without undue effect on interest rates.

Finance Minister Marc Lalonde has indicated his intention to reduce the deficit in coming years, he said, suggesting the decline in interest rates and apparent increase in business confidence in the economy shows Lalonde's approach is justified.

CRITICIZES HIGH DEFICIT

Mulroney, who described MacEachen's response as a homily, pegged his question on the latest annual report of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), which he said criticized the Canadian government for its high deficit.

Speaking later to reporters, Mulroney said MacEachen showed a lot of gall to suggest a $25-billion deficit was reasonable.

The IMF report, released Sunday, said the strength and durability of the economic upturn are threatened by enormous budget deficits, particularly in the United States.

RECORD-PERRY BEATON

Clinic fire death accidental

Quebec fire commissioner Cyrille Delage was told Monday that health clinic employees are not required to learn fire safety techniques. Delage said his report on the death of a 91-year-old Bedford man in his CLSC bed will be forwarded to the Ministry of Social Affairs. See story page 3.

Stormy weather slows data recorder search

WAKKANAI, Japan (AP) — Stormy weather curtailed search operations today as the Soviet Union added an intelligence-gathering ship to its fleet looking for wreckage from a South Korean airliner shot down over Soviet territory Sept. 1.

U.S., Japanese and South Korean vessels also are taking part in what appears to be an increasingly frenetic search, focusing on the so-called black box, or flight data recorder, of the 747 jumbo jet shot down by a Soviet fighter plane. The 269 people aboard were killed.

Officials hope the flight recorder would shed light on the incident, perhaps explaining why Flight 007, on a flight to Seoul from New York via Anchorage, Alaska, flew into restricted Soviet territory. The jetliner was hit by air-to-air missiles and crashed in the Sea of Japan near Moneron Island, off the Soviet-controlled Sakhalin Island.

Moscow claims the plane was on a U.S.-initiated spy mission, a charge denied by Washington. A Soviet air marshal was quoted today by the Communist party newspaper Pravda as saying the South Korean pilot was co-ordinating his movements with a U.S. spy satellite to test Soviet air defence reactions.

Japan's Maritime Safety Agency said today a storm moved in overnight from the southeast with strong winds and rain that reduced visibility to a maximum of three nautical miles from 12 nautical miles, sharply curtailing the movements of search vessels.

The ships working on the grey seas are trying to trace the flight recorder by its "beeper," which emits a pinging noise audible to undersea listening devices.

The Washington Post reported today that U.S. search crews had heard electronic beeps from the black box housing the data recorders. Unidentified sources were quoted as saying the Soviets also have heard the beeps but neither side appeared to have found the recorders.

The sources were quoted as saying "it is almost certain" the wreckage containing the recorders is in international waters, rather than Soviet waters. One official was reported to have said: "There is one hell of a race going on out there" to locate the beeper.

Officials at the White House, Pentagon, State Department and with the U.S. search operation in Japan had no comment on the report.

The black box, which contains taped records of an aircraft's movements as well as the last 30 minutes of cockpit voice conversations, are built to withstand 48 hours in seawater but can survive as long as several weeks, authorities have said.

MPs dual addresses legal but mislead voters

OTTAWA (CP) — Some MPs are telling voters one thing and the tax department another.

Several Quebec MPs, some cabinet ministers, and at least three non-Ontario MPs have told the tax department they live in Ontario.

But only one non-Ontario MP out of 187 gave an Ontario address on his nomination papers in the 1980 general election.

What they're doing isn't illegal but it is misleading for voters.

An official in the Office of the Chief Electoral Officer said the address on the nomination papers doesn't necessarily have to be a candidate's normal residence.

But it is the address voters see on the public notice put up in ridings during an election and it is the address they'll get if they try to check with the returning officer in the riding.

Labor Minister Andre Ouellet, MP for the Quebec riding of Papineau, was the only non-Ontario MP to put an Ontario address on his nomination papers, according to the 1980 election report of the Chief Electoral Officer.

Yet, the Quebec Revenue Department recently said that at least 20 Quebec MPs and senators are dodging the province's higher income tax rates by claiming they are Ontario residents.

The Parti Québécois, however, has so far not carried out a threat to reveal names.

A Canadian Tax Foundation study shows Quebec residents pay substantially more in taxes than Ontario residents.

For example, a married father of two earning $50,000 a year and residing in Quebec would pay $16,695 in federal and provincial income tax this year, $3,075 more than he would have to pay as a resident of Ontario.

But there are also other provinces — Newfoundland, Manitoba, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia — where the tax rate is also substantially higher than in Ontario.

For example, that same $50,000-a-year wage earner would pay $13,620 in income tax in Ontario, but would pay $14,512 in Newfoundland, $14,425 in Manitoba, $14,326 in New Brunswick and $14,186 in Nova Scotia.

The difference is marginal in some other provinces. The same wage earner would pay $13,813 in Prince Edward Island and $13,764 in Saskatchewan. In British Columbia the tax would pay somewhat less than in Ontario, $13,081, and in Alberta substantially less at $12,508.

A Canadian Press survey of MPs in those provinces other than Quebec where the tax rate is substantially higher revealed that at least two — Jack Murta, Progressive Conservative MP for the Manitoba riding of Lisgar and Mike Landers, Liberal MP for St. John, N.B. — told the taxman they live in Ontario but gave voters an address in the province in which their ridings are located.

Funeral brings lull in Lebanon war

BEIRUT (AP) — The Lebanese government said its troops killed six Syrian-backed insurgents today while repulsing a new assault on Souk el-Gharb — the mountaintop town overlooking Beirut which the United States has pledged to help protect.

State-run Beirut Radio reported that Druse militiamen trying to move into Souk el-Gharb this morning were beaten back, with six of the attackers killed and several others injured. The radio said fighting around the strategic town had raged through the night.

Before daybreak, U.S. F-14 Tomcat fighters from the U.S. aircraft carrier Eisenhower flew reconnaissance missions over Beirut and the nearby mountains. It was believed to be the first nighttime mission by planes from the U.S. task force.

Lebanese military officials said one of their reconnaissance planes crashed near the Druse mountain town of Aley, "and the fate of the two pilots is still unknown."

Elsewhere in the mountains, fighting was reported to have died down today, and the Lebanese media attributed the lull in part to the funeral of moderate Druse leader Majid Arslan, who died of natural causes Sunday. Arslan, 79, headed the Islamic sect's Yazbek clan, which has sought reconciliation with Christian President Amin Gemayel's administration.

On Monday, U.S. Navy ships off the coast opened fire on anti-government positions near Souk el-Gharb. It was the third such shelling since Sept. 4, but the first in which the firing was in support of the Lebanese army rather than in direct response to shelling of U.S. marines.

Syria's Soviet-backed government declared Sunday its Lebanon-based forces would fire back if attacked by American forces but there was no Syrian retaliation for Monday's naval bombardment.

Druse spokesmen in Beirut claimed the U.S. shells landed in several towns around Souk el-Gharb and said civilians were killed. But U.S. officials insisted the guns fired at military positions.

The destroyer John Rodgers and the guided missile cruiser Virginia fired repeated barrages as the Lebanese army's 8th Brigade fought with Druse and Palestinian guerrillas attacking Souk el-Gharb. The town overlooks the U.S. marine base at the Beirut airport.

U.S. Embassy spokesman John Stewart said the naval gunfire supported "defensive actions" by Lebanese forces which were "vital to the safety of U.S. personnel."

"I think we have made clear our concerns about Souk el-Gharb and our intent to assist militarily to see that that does not fall into the hands of people who could shell our marines," said John Hughes, a State Department spokesman in Washington.

Another State Department official, who requested anonymity, said control of Souk el-Gharb was "vital" and its loss could spell a defeat for U.S. policy.

The White House said last week the marines in Beirut had been authorized to request naval fire support when they and other troops of the multinational force were threatened and when the Lebanese army was in danger of losing a position from which the marines could be attacked.

Feds appeal challenge to cruise

OTTAWA (CP) — Still trying to head off a legal challenge to testing of U.S. cruise missiles in Canada, the federal government Monday appealed a Federal Court of Canada ruling that would permit anti-cruise protesters their day in court.

Justice Department lawyer Graham Garton said he has asked the Federal Court of Appeal for a speedy decision on a hearing date. He will argue once more that government approval for cruise testing in Western Canada is a political issue, not one for the courts to decide.

The lawyer for a coalition of trade unions, peace and women's organizations trying to block testing of the unarmed missiles complained that the government is trying to get around last Thursday's Federal Court ruling by using its unlimited resources — "yours and my tax dollars."

Lawrence Greenspan said Monday he will be ready with counter arguments to make his point that the Liberal cabinet is not "above the law."

Brian Tobin, Newfoundland MP for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe, also revealed he pays taxes as an Ontario resident, but it is his first term as an MP and he was a Newfoundland resident when he filled in his nomination papers.

He no longer maintains a residence in Newfoundland, he said.

There were 11 other MPs, including three ministers, who refused to reveal where they pay their taxes.

Some, such as New Brunswick Liberal Herb Breau, MP for Gloucester, refused to answer, saying the survey was "offensive" and he echoed the opinion of the some others that tax matters are private.

Another, Progressive Conservative Jim McGrath, MP for St. John's East, said he didn't know, and others such as External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen, MP for the Nova Scotia riding of Cape Breton-Highlands-Canso, just ignored the survey.

Liberals unwilling to say where they pay taxes include: Newfoundland MPs William Rompkey (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador) and David Rooney (Bonavista-Trinity-Conception), New Brunswick MPs Eymard Corbin (Madawaska-Victoria), Maurice Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi), Public Works Minister Romeo LeBlanc (Westmorland-Kent) and Trade Minister Gerald Regan (Halifax).

Tories keeping quiet include: Newfoundland MP John Crosbie (St.

John's West) and Nova Scotia MP Mike Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East).

Although most Quebec MPs weren't surveyed, one who pays taxes as an Ontario resident is Energy Minister Jean Chretien who recently chided new Tory leader and Quebecer Brian Mulroney for being parachuted into a Nova Scotia riding.

"This little guy from Shawinigan runs in Shawinigan," Chretien boasted at the time.

What he failed to add was that for tax purposes he's the little guy from Ontario.

Chretien aide Eddie Goldenberg defended the minister, saying Chretien has been open about being an Ontario resident and the minister puts a Quebec address on his nomination papers because that's where he can be reached when campaigning during an election.

Goldenberg also expressed annoyance at the question.

"Tax matters are between the individual and the Department of National Revenue and not for public consumption."

Yet, some MPs who said they pay taxes as residents of the province in which their riding is located said MPs should face the same tax burden as their constituents.

"The people there elected me and I should pay my taxes there," said Terry Sargeant, MP for the Manitoba riding Selkirk-Interlake.

New Canada specialist cites acid rain and gas imports as priorities

WASHINGTON (CP) — James Medas says the issues of acid rain and natural gas imports are the top priorities as he begins his new assignment at the State Department to improve management of relations between Canada and the United States.

He told reporters Monday the two issues warrant "some attention immediately" as he settles into the newly created post of deputy assistant secretary of state for Canadian affairs, including introductory meetings Thursday with government officials in Ottawa.

The 39-year-old former White House aide was introduced to Canadian reporters at a coffee-and-doughnuts meeting where senior officials said the appointment of a full-time top official devoted to Canadian affairs is proof the U.S. does not take its northern neighbor for granted as is sometimes charged.

Medas said it is premature to go into detail on how either acid rain or gas questions will be resolved as new policies on both issues have not yet been announced by the U.S. government. Announcements on both policies are expected within the next few weeks, possibly in time for a quarterly meeting between External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen and U.S. State Secretary George Shultz scheduled to take place in Halifax Oct. 16-17.

The U.S. government is expected to announce acid rain controls that fall short of Canadian government hopes and, while Medas said the final decision has not been made on a controls program, the proposals should lead to "intense negotiations" between the governments.

MEETING SCHEDULED
New natural gas import policy is expected to go part way in responding to U.S. demands for lower prices and quantities of Canadian imports, possibly leading to renegotiation of a three-year-old Canada-U.S. export pricing agreement. Energy officials from both countries are scheduled to consult at a Sept. 28 meeting.

At the State Department meeting attended by Canadian Ambassador Allan Gottlieb and senior embassy staff, Medas was introduced by Lawrence Eagleburger, undersecretary for political affairs, who said the new post indicates Canada's "special place" in American policy and thinking.

"We do not take Canada for granted," Eagleburger said, citing as further evidence the renaming of the State Department's Bureau of European Affairs to the Bureau of European and Canadian Affairs. This clearly shows the importance of Canada as the closest ally and largest trading partner of the U.S., he said. Medas said he attributed creation of the new post to a special interest by Shultz in Canada and said he had been promised "access to the highest reaches of the State Department on behalf of Canada." Also, Canada had recently created a similar post in the External Affairs Department, giving Assistant Deputy Minister Derek Burney responsibility for U.S. affairs.

There was a friendly mood between the Canadian and U.S. officials at the meeting punctuated by moments of frivolity such as Gottlieb wondering whether the new bureau would be known by the acronym "Eurcan."

Eckville students disturbed by Holocaust survivors

ECKVILLE, Alta. (CP) — Students in this town in central Alberta listened gravely, some weeping, on Monday to three survivors of the Holocaust.

Meanwhile, their former teacher prepared to fight to keep his mayor's chair from a lone contender in the coming civic election.

The Holocaust survivors, two men from Montreal and a Vancouver woman, were brought to Eckville to counter the teachings of Jim Keegstra, the high school teacher fired for telling his students that it was not true that Hitler arranged the deaths of millions of Jews during the 1930s and 40s.

The Keegstra case has brought a continuous flurry of media attention to this quiet farming community.

High school principal Ed Olsen barred reporters from the three-hour meeting between about 80 high-school students and the three guests.

After the session, the youngsters emerged from the closed gymnasium and scattered to avoid reporters. But according to Vera Slymovics, 57, a survivor of Auschwitz concentration camp, the meeting was an emotional one for many of the audience.

"There were 12 young ladies with tears in their eyes," she said. "When they talked with me, they were reaching out."

Slymovics said the students seemed shy and reluctant at first, but opened up when the room was broken into smaller groups. Most of their queries were highly personal, she said, mostly wanting to know her own experiences and those of her family and friends.

Britain's biggest game — is she or isn't she?

LONDON (AP) — It's the most popular guessing game in Britain: Is the Princess of Wales expecting her second baby or isn't she?

One London newspaper says she is, another says she isn't and the one person who knows for sure isn't saying.

So, did the 22-year-old Diana, as widely reported, slip away from the royal retreat in Scotland on Sept. 4 for a secret visit with her gynecologist in London? Did she then break the happy news to the Royal Family, which celebrated with champagne?

These are questions Britons have been asking for the last two weeks and the answers vary in the news media.

On Monday, The Sun, Britain's best-selling newspaper, assured its four million readers that the whole thing is a mistake. "Princess Di Is Not Pregnant, Says Aide," ran a headline.

The story underneath it read: "Reports that she is expecting her second baby in April were dismissed as 'rubbish' and 'pure speculation' by her personal press secretary, Victor Chapman."

He said no such thing, Buckingham Palace spokesman Sarah Brennan told The Associated Press.

DENIES REPORT

"I can tell you he didn't make those quotes," she said. "If they asked him, he would have said what we have been saying all along — and that is that an announcement will be made if the princess is pregnant. But that doesn't mean she is."

Humanopoly provides help for sex-shy parents

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A new game in which players move around a board with egg and sperm tokens is on the market to help tongue-tied parents tell children about the facts of life, says its creator.

On the outside of the Humanopoly game box, a group of grinning sperm carrying signs saying "Eggs are cute!" "We like eggs," and "Eggs are beautiful" marches toward a smiling egg.

Inside, the game board features illustrations of male and female genitals and drawings of the stages of an infant's development in the womb. The game, played with one egg token and up to three sperm tokens, proceeds on a twisting course representing the fallopian tube.

"It's a tool for facilitating the process of communication," Carol Wells, director of the Centre for Sexual Communication and developer of the game, said Monday.

Wells said she developed the idea for the game because parents have repeatedly told her they would like to discuss the facts of life with their children, but find it difficult to deal with the subject.

"Because it seems to be so hard to handle, most of the time it gets postponed," said Wells, who says she is a sex educator, certified sex therapist, licensed marriage and family counsellor, and a registered nurse. HAS VARIOUS LEVELS

The game is designed for a parent to play with the child, and is designed for two age groups. The first level is intended to provide basic information for children younger than nine. The second level, aimed at kids up to 12, provides more advanced facts and concepts, primarily on puberty. An optional level that can be ordered gives information on contraception.

Weather

Variable skies with moderate winds today and a 20-30 per cent chance of an isolated shower. High of 26.

Former Cast exec defends payoffs

MONTREAL (CP) — A former executive of now-bankrupt Cast North America Ltd. testified Monday he did not consider secret commissions paid by Canadian National Railways to the Cast shipping group from 1979 to 1981 to be "unethical."

Ron Behnan told a Canadian Transport Commission hearing into alleged secret payments by CN to Cast that he was not aware the commissions were "unethical" until he was subpoenaed to testify.

In July, Behnan told the commission he knew of an agreement by CN to pay a seven-per-cent commission to Cast Containers S.A. of Switzerland on 17,000 containers shipped by CN Rail from Montreal to Chicago. CN invoiced Cast for the full transport charge.

They're no angels — Sliwa

MONTREAL (CP) — Two groups of Guardian Angels may soon be competing to keep the city crime free.

Angels founder Curtis Sliwa gave his blessing Monday to a breakaway faction of this city's fledgling chapter of the anti-crime patrol, saying that members need more training in the martial arts.

The Angels' archangel flew in from New York City to hold a news conference at which he said he had never sanctioned a group formed under the aegis of local martial arts teacher Jean Boisvert.

Several rebel angels, saying they need more training in self-defence, have dissociated themselves from Boisvert, and Sliwa said they have his seal of approval.

Force feeder found — Kaplan

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government was found a doctor willing to force-feed Doukhobor women on a hunger strike in a B.C. prison if it's the only way of keeping them alive, Solicitor General Robert Kaplan said Monday.

Kaplan said the government has a legal obligation to provide medical attention to keep the three women, members of the radical Sons of Freedom sect, alive.

The women are "declining very rapidly" because of their month-long fast at Matsqui federal prison, he told reporters. Mary Astaforoff, the oldest at 68, is in the worst shape, but is still conscious, he said.

American fuels territorial dispute

OTTAWA (CP) — An obstinate American sea captain has reopened a simmering international dispute over the ownership of Machias Seal Island, a tiny migratory bird sanctuary off the coast of New Brunswick and Maine.

Canadian authorities are accusing Barna Norton, a Jonesport, Me., charterboat operator, of flooding the remote island with tourists to the detriment of rare sea birds that migrate half way round the world to breed on its barren shores.

Norton says Canada precipitated the problem by selective and unfair enforcement of a quota designed to keep human intrusion to tolerable limits by restricting visitors to 25 a day.

MP Yurko wants Riel pardoned

OTTAWA (CP) — Independent MP Bill Yurko plans to introduce a private member's bill in the Commons that would pardon Louis Riel, the French-Canadian politician and visionary hanged in 1885 for leading the Metis and Indians in the Northwest Rebellion.

Yurko, who left the Conservative caucus last year after a falling-out with former leader Joe Clark over Prime Minister Trudeau's constitutional package, said in a telephone interview Monday from his Edmonton East riding office that the hanging of Riel "is a blot on Canadian justice."

Riel, who was born in St. Boniface, Man., became influential in the Metis fight to protect their land in the face of the influx of settlers from Central Canada and helped draw up the terms of Manitoba's entry into Confederation in 1870.

Newfs have first bid — lawyers

OTTAWA (CP) — The province of Newfoundland argued Monday that Hydro Quebec cannot go ahead with a proposal to export billions of dollars worth of hydroelectricity to the United States unless it first offers to sell power to Newfoundland.

Newfoundland lawyers told the National Energy Board that Quebec, in its failure to offer electricity to Newfoundland, did not do enough to discover if Canadian energy requirements could be met before the exports are approved.

But Quebec lawyers, calling Newfoundland's intervention a stalling tactic in the context of long-standing disputes between the two provinces, said federal legislation does not require one province to offer energy to another before exports are sought.

Menasco to start move in October

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — Menasco Canada Ltd. will begin moving some of its production from Quebec next month, acting on a threat to leave the province rather than comply with an anti-strikebreaking law.

A newly formed subsidiary, Menasco Aerospace Ltd., will begin production of aircraft landing and flight equipment in the vacant plant of Riverside Yarns Ltd. in Cornwall, the company announced Monday.

About 75 to 100 workers will be employed at the new plant, scheduled to open in mid-October.

User-fee penalty approved soon

CALGARY (CP) — Federal Health Minister Monique Begin says legislation expected to penalize provinces that permit user-fees and extra-billing by doctors should win cabinet approval by late October.

"It (the Canada Health Act) should be passed by cabinet in four to five weeks," Begin told a news conference Monday. "It could then be given to the provincial (health) ministers and tabled in the House (of Commons) right away."

But the parliamentary session may be finished or drawing to a close by then — meaning the bill would be held back for the new session expected to begin shortly afterward.

U.S. tells UN to leave if unhappy

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.S. deputy chief delegate to the United Nations told other UN members today if they want to move UN headquarters out of the country, the United States would do nothing to stop them.

"We will put no impediments in your way," said Charles Lichtenstein. "The members of the U.S. (UN) mission will be down at the docks waving you farewell as you sail into the sunset."

He made the remark in the UN Host Country Relations Committee after Soviet delegate Igor Yakovlev complained of conditions put on Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's travel to New York that prompted the Soviet government to cancel Gromyko's annual trip to the UN General Assembly.

Lasers verify antique's age

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard used laser photography techniques to establish the authenticity of a 204-year-old desk, boosting its anticipated auction value to $150,000, Christie's auction house said Monday.

John Herbert, a spokesman for the London auction house, said doubt existed about the desk, believed to be the work of the French court cabinet maker J.H. Riesener, because an inventory number could not be seen.

At Scotland Yard, senior scientist Kenneth Creer said scientists used argon ion laser radiation photography equipment to examine the desk. Under the blue-green light of the laser equipment, the inventory number, 2929, showed up as black where the ink had stained the wood, he said.

Cafe Royale hit by inspectors

LONDON (AP) — The Cafe Royal, one of Britain's top restaurants, was charged Monday with 36 health-code violations after hygiene inspectors said they found cockroaches in the kitchens, hot water and cleanliness "well below the standard required in any food premises."

The prosecutor for Westminster Borough, Donald Kerrigan, said that though the Cafe Royal had a worldwide reputation as a prestige restaurant, the inspectors "found it to be considerably wanting from the food hygiene and cleanliness point of view."

Wilson chooses ruin as title

LONDON (Reuters) — Four-time British prime minister Harold Wilson is naming himself after a ruin.

For his new role as a member of the House of Lords, Wilson has chosen the title Lord Wilson of Rievaulx, after a rural corner of his native Yorkshire where the ruins of a 12th-Century Cistercian abbey stand.

NATO stages largest exercises

WANSSEM, Netherlands (AP) — The largest river-crossing exercise in NATO history began Monday, almost 39 years to the day after the Allied disaster at nearby Arnhem during the Second World War.

U.S. British and Dutch units built bridges and piloted ferries to move 300 tanks bound for West Germany across the Maas and Rhine rivers. The three-day crossing is part of Autumn Forge, a two-month exercise involving more than 250,000 NATO troops in Western Europe.

Woman gives world cold shoulder

BERLIN (AP) — A 70-year-old woman took sleeping pills, then locked herself in her basement freezer to die, West Berlin police reported Monday.

Investigators reported the woman left several letters indicating she was despondent about her ill health. The letters were dated Sept. 16. Police said her body was found frozen.

Angolan rebels claim 2,000 killed

LISBON (Reuters) — Angolan guerrillas said Monday their recent offensive killed more than 2,000 government and Cuban soldiers and that they will next move on the capital of Luanda.

The guerrillas ordered a new, three-month, general offensive as soon as possible to spread guerrilla activity to the north and west, surround Luanda and put pressure on the capital's transport and communications, a communique distributed in Lisbon said.

The communique said 12 Soviet advisers, 1,812 government soldiers and 349 Cuban soldiers were killed in the guerrillas' first general offensive, Aug. 2 to Sept. 3, in 13 provinces. Forty-nine foreign citizens were captured, the guerrillas' organization, the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, said.

Town hit by 80 earthquakes

POZZUOLI, Italy (Reuters) — The Naples suburb of Pozzuoli was shaken by 80 minor earthquakes in a one-hour period Monday, Naples Observatory officials said.

Since June, about 20,000 people have evacuated their homes as more than 3,000 low grade shocks have been registered from the dormant Solfatara volcano a near the town.

Leopard roams Johannesburg

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — A leopard roamed through a Johannesburg suburb for more than three hours Monday until police and zoo experts shot it with a tranquilizing dart.

A housemaid discovered the leopard in a servant's washroom in the suburb of Benoni, about 20 kilometres east of the city. She ran and hid in her employer's car, calling for help until a neighbor's gardener approached with an axe. As he and two police officers peered into the washroom window, the leopard leaped at them and dashed into some bushes.

The leopard led police on a three-hour chase that ended when pursuers cornered it in a yard. After being hit by one dart, the leopard ran in and out of a nearby house and then crept under a parked car. A second dart put the animal to sleep and it was taken to Johannesburg Zoo.

Neighbors kill three robbers

NAIROBI (Reuters) — Now that's Neighborhood Watch. Neighbors beat to death three robbers from a gang of about 20 who invaded the home of prominent trade unionist Edwin Mbuigua early Monday.

The Kenya News Agency said the gang broke into Mbuigua's home and seriously wounded him with machetes before the neighbors arrived and fought them off.

Israeli commando hero promoted

TEL AVIV (Reuters) — Maj.-Gen. Dan Shomron, who led Israel's daring rescue of hostages at Entebbe airport in 1976, has been appointed commander of ground forces.

Shomron, a paratrooper, led 200 Israeli commandos in an airborne attack on Uganda's Entebbe Airport in July 1976 to rescue 110 Air France passengers held hostage by pro-Palestinian hijackers.

Hungry in Hungary — prices rise

BUDAPEST (Reuters) — Hungarians had to pay sharply higher prices for basic goods Monday as the government conceded that agriculture and industry failed to meet 1983 production targets.

The price of sugar went up by 23 per cent, bread by 16 per cent and edible oil and margarine by 10 per cent.

KAL 007 spy plane — Soviet brass

MOSCOW (AP) — The South Korean airliner the Soviets shot down was delayed 40 minutes in Alaska so an orbiting U.S. spy satellite would be in position to monitor the plane's intrusion over Soviet nuclear installations and the Soviet response, Air Marshal Pyotr Kirsanov has charged in Pravda.

A summary of Kirsanov's article, released Monday by the official news agency Tass, amplified Moscow's earlier charge that the airliner was diverted from its course by the U.S. so the Soviet Union would disclose its air defences in the Far East.

Soviet satellite ceases existence

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet satellite burned up in the atmosphere Monday, more than a month after leaving the Salyut 7 space station, the official news agency Tass reported Monday.

It said the Cosmos 1443 satellite released a transport capsule with data from the space station before it burned. The capsule landed safely on Earth, Tass said.

The satellite was launched March 2 and docked with the space station March 10. It "ceased its existence" after entering the atmosphere over the Pacific Ocean on Monday, Tass reported.

The satellite was jettisoned from the Salyut 7 on Aug. 14 in a manoeuvre carried out by cosmonauts Vladimir Lyakhov and Alexander Alexandrov, who had hooked up with the Salyut 7 on June 28, some 24 hours after being blasted into space aboard Soyuz T-9.

Bird decapitator fined $430

SYDNEY (Reuters) — A man who bit off and chewed a parakeet's head before 200 people at a talent contest in Australia was fined $430 Monday.

Lee Stubbs, 24, told a court in Sydney he had not intended to harm the bird.

Student turns in swindler mother

PEKING (Reuters) — Liu Liangwei, a student in the Chinese city of Wuhan, helped police arrest his mother on charges of swindling, a Chinese newspaper reported Monday.

The Peking Daily said Liu, whose age was not given, led officers to a relative's home where his mother was hiding.

The newspaper also reported that the chief pharmacist of Peking's General Military Hospital had been expelled from the Communist party for protecting his gangster son.

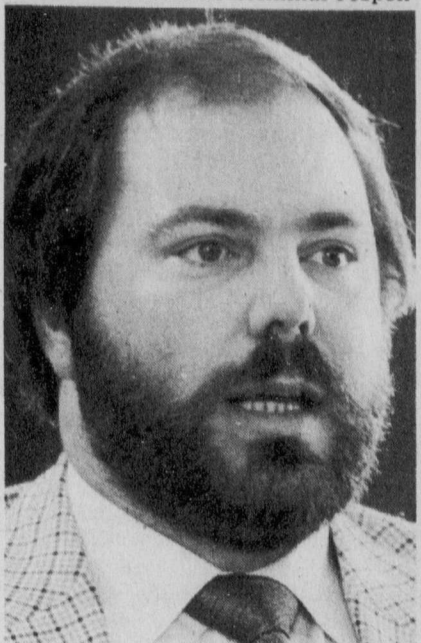

Jiang Guiren hid his son, wanted on gang-rape charges, in the hospital laboratory during a police raid, it said.

Québec Fire Commissioner rules Bedford clinic fire death accidental

By John McCaghey

COWANSVILLE — The death of 91-year-old René Dégasse following third-degree burns sustained in a fire at the Bedford CLSC on March 25 was "accidental with no criminal responsibility.", but Québec Fire Commissioner Cyrille Delage made his displeasure with the lack of safety training of staffers at the CLSC quite clear.

Bedford CLSC director-general Réjean Champagne told the fire commissioner labor contracts prevents employees from learning to use extinguishers.

Dégasse died at Montreal's Hotel Dieu hospital two days after the fire, which was apparently caused by smoking in bed.

An angry Commissioner Delage said a copy of his report would be sent to the Ministry of Social Affairs but he added that it is not his function to interfere with contractual agreements. Dégasse, of Bedford, was in the solarium of the health-care clinic after supper when staff members heard a shrill scream and went to the scene where they found him enveloped in flames from the waist up. Nurse Estelle Lucier said assistant nurse Denise Audet was first on the scene and tried to extinguish the flames with blankets — which also caught on fire.

Audet corroborated Lucier's testimony, saying the flames almost reached the ceiling and clinic visitor Arthur Hall used a fire extinguisher to quell the blaze. Both staff members said they had not been taught how to operate extinguishers nor had they attended any fire-control or other emergency-procedure courses. Audet said she was afraid of using the extinguisher as the patient would possibly have been suffocated by the powder it contained. Both said they were on the ward with a maid when the fire broke out while three other nurses were on their supper break.

Testimony showed the other three nurses, three doctors and the director-general came as soon as they were alerted. There were no indications that a fire alarm was ever sounded and nobody recalls hearing smoke detectors.

Officer Michel Marquis of the Québec Police Force arson squad said it was his personal opinion the flames were started when Dégasse attempted to light his pipe with a wooden match and part of the match set his clothing on fire. There were no traces of fuel on the remains of his clothing, according to a report by the Medical-Legal Institute.

The victim's daughter-in-law Lorraine Dégasse said he had been a patient at the CLSC for a year and a half prior to the tragedy, was a pipe-smoker and always had wooden matches in his pocket. She said when told of the event her immediate reaction had been that the matches must have caught fire.

Arthur Hall, a 65-year-old gravedigger from Dunham, said he was visiting a friend in another room in the clinic when he heard the victim screaming. He said he immediately went to the scene and tried to fill a bucket with water but the pressure was too low. He said he ran and got a fire extinguisher and then stopped the flames in a matter of seconds.

Bedford CLSC director-general Réjean Champagne, 37, explained that his staff cannot be required to learn safety techniques. He said his hands are tied through labor contracts when it comes to obliging staff members to attend fire or other safety procedure exercises. He added the shift at the supper hour was also split for union reasons: "The staff have to eat at a convenient hour."

Champagne said only he or his replacement can sound the clinic's emergency alarm, which wasn't necessary in this case since they arrived on the scene immediately after they had been alerted. Champagne said the relatively new building was equipped with smoke detectors and had an appropriate number of fire extinguishers in strategic locations.

"I have been in trouble with the authorities before and told to keep quiet," Delage said. But the commissioner, who has seen countless fires during his 17-year tenure, added that "it seems a shame to have the most modern equipment and facilities when one cannot require employees to take courses in safety and evacuation."

"It's contrary to common sense."

Committee hopes for mapping decision by year's end

SHERBROOKE — The federal cabinet will begin looking into the prospects of transferring the Mapping Division of the Ministry of Energy, Mines and Resources by the end of October, according to a local committee, and should reach a decision by the end of the year.

The Comité pour l'implantation de la cartographie en Estrie (Committee for the establishment of Mapping in Estrie), an unofficial group formed at the beginning of this year, said in its first press conference Monday that the cabinet should be able to come up with a scheme to transfer the department even if the debate over the 'Canada Clause' is not settled before year's end. The Canada Clause is the section of the Canadian Constitution which guarantees accessibility to schools in their own language to any children of parents educated in that language in Canada. This is in direct conflict with Québec's Charter of the French Language, which restricts English language education to children of parents educated in English in Québec. That aspect of the Charter has been blamed for the delay in transferring the federal department — a plan first announced in 1977.

Roland Champagne, a local broadcaster and a member of the committee said his group is interested in the economic aspects of the scheme and is not going to get involved in political debate. "It is not for us to find a way to bring it about, it's up to them (federal and provincial politicians) to clear it up," he said.

The plan to move the Mapping Division would mean the creation of over 700 high-paying jobs in the region, with the accompanying economic benefits to the community. It would also be a shot in the arm to the anglophone community and its institutions, notably English school boards.

Sherbrooke MP Irène Pelletier, who has been working to implement the plan since it was first announced, told the committee on Saturday that the funds to carry out the scheme are still available, and that this would pose no obstacle in the Cabinet's decision.

The committee is composed of Champagne, Estelle Gobeil, president of the Conseil régionale de développement de l'Estrie, as well as representatives of the University of Sherbrooke, the Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce, the Townshippers Association and other interested organizations.

S. Stukely man sentenced in drug bust

By John McCaghey

BURLINGTON, Vt. — Peter MacFarlane, of South Stukely, was handed the stiffest sentence in connection with what had been termed "the biggest drug bust in the history of Vermont." HE was sentenced to the maximum term of 15 years concurrent and fined $50,000 by Judge Albert Coffrin of the United States Court here Monday.

MacFarlane, in his mid 30's, had pleaded guilty to charges of conspiracy to traffic in illegal drugs and possession of illegal drugs for purposes of trafficking.

Assistant United States District Attorney Sheila M. Ware told The Record Judge Coffrin, in remarks on sentencing, said MacFarlane was the apparent brains behind a conspiracy to attempt to smuggle 1900 kilos of pure hashish into Canada. The drug had an estimated street value of between $10 and $12 million dollars.

Ted Handoga, a special agent of the United States Drug Enforcement Agency (USDEA) led a team to an isolated farm on the outskirts of Bakerfield last summer where they found the illegal drugs concealed in printing press rollers. The USDEA were acting on a tip from the RCMP. Seven of the eight arrested at the scene, or later as a result of the investigation, pleaded guilty.

Farm owner Sally Edith, fellow U.S. citizen Joe Tremblay and Canadian citizens Harold Raxlan and Ken Norris, both of Sutton, were sentenced to two years for their part in the conspiracy. Indian native Nizarli Hamirant was sentenced to the 12 months served and ordered deported. Bill Sturgeon, of Farnham and St. Jean, was handed 30 months due to a subsequent conviction on a charge of simple possession of cocaine in St. Jean while awaiting preparation of his pre-sentence report. Mohan Mankani, a native of Uganda, was sentenced to 12 years following his conviction. MacFarlane has 10 days to launch an appeal and the others have filed notices of motion to appeal.

Kyle announces takeover of Jeffrey asbestos mine

ASBESTOS — The new owners of the world's biggest asbestos mine say they plan to keep it open at least into the 1990s, contrary to reports last week that it would close as early as 1987.

In a brief press release issued Monday, Peter D. Kyle announced that the new firm JM Asbestos Inc. had taken over the Jeffrey Mine here effective last Friday. Kyle said the intention of the new owners, former employees of the previous owner Johns-Manville Canada Inc. (a subsidiary of the U.S. giant Manville Corp.), is to keep mining as long as possible.

Published reports last week said the new owners were considering 'highgrading' the mine — stripping off only the richest-grade mineral for a fast profit — and closing it permanently in four years. But Kyle says this misinformation came from a "mean" competitor.

JM Asbestos has a four-year expansion plan, Kyle said, but only to "ensure ore for the next four years."

Kyle said he is "confident that in spite of the present weak market for asbestos fibre, that the operations of the mine should continue until the late 1990s." He added that the operating personnel at the Jeffrey Mine "has for its main task to study and recommend future mine expansions," once the present expansion is complete. The current plan is to uncover a new ore body with the help of federal government money.

Kyle said he wishes to reassure the firm's employees and the population in general that "nothing is changed" in the present expansion program, obtained with the cooperation of the employees and the Canadian government. "To the employees, welcome aboard JM Asbestos Inc."

Transpacific Asbestos, a Toronto-based firm trying to buy the mine, claimed Thursday that JM planned to highgrade Jeffrey and close it. The JM Asbestos president said "it is sad that a competitor acts in such a mean fashion and tries to discredit our new company and creates a climate of insecurity throughout our employees and the population."

J.M.-Asbestos president Peter Kyle said Monday his firm has no plans to close the Jeffrey Mine.

Objection to metric conversion makes us dinosaurs

I am a dinosaur.

A federal cabinet minister says so and that makes it official. I am a dinosaur because The Hon. Judy Erola says that anyone who objects to having the metric system forced on us is a dinosaur. I am also dumb, and officially so because another cabinet minister in Ottawa, the Hon. Andre Ouellet, in a Commons debate in May of last year, declared that metric opponents are just that. Dumb.

Now being both pre-historic and dumb will no doubt mean that few of the great people will think my views on metric warrant much notice, but because I am stubborn as well as stupid I shall keep right on telling all those who have the time and the inclination to listen why I think that the imposition of metric upon the long suffering Canadian taxpayer is in itself more than enough to make us give the government responsible for it a dishonorable discharge come next election.

It is first of all tremendously costly, so costly that the government itself dares not estimate, and the billions it will demand must come from us at a time when the economy is the worst it has been for many years.

Secondly a complete metrification of this country is impossible unless of course, we are to go so far as to change the whole map of the nation. Our roads, from the humblest of country sideroads to super highways have been laid out in the old Imperial system of rods and miles. We may now be able to metrify a thoroughfare like Highway 401 but most of the inhabited part of Canada has long ago been criss-crossed with a system where the distance between one road and the next is the exact multiple of a mile. In the county where I live as in most of eastern Canada, our sideroads form the base line for carving the farmland into 100 acre parcels, and within that hundred acres the fields were fenced by our forefathers so that each field would have an exact number of acres. The entire Canadian West has been laid out in miles, square miles and acres.

The glib people in the metric commission have for some time been trying to make us farmers translate our acres into hectares, but to metrify this country completely we would have to plow under a million miles of country roads and move every fence on every farm in the land.

The off-repeated claim that our old Imperial system of measurements threatens our international trade is ridiculously untrue. It has never hindered our trade with other countries in the past, but to change to metric now would indeed threaten it because nearly three-quarters of our trade is with the U.S.A., and that nation has let it be known emphatically that it has no intention whatsoever to force its people and its industry to go metric.

Is metric really a better system of measurement? In many respects it certainly is, just as esperanto is most certainly a simpler, more logical language than English. The point is that our Imperial system, like the English language, has so long been a part of our culture and our way of life that it is much too late to suppose that we can discard it.

But the most damning aspect of our federal government's attempt to make Canada metric is that it so shamelessly ignored the elemental principles of democracy. First we were lied to, because ten years ago when the idea was first broached, we were assured that metrification would be voluntary. Later, after it was realized that the majority of Canadians opposed it, metrification was made compulsory by an Order-in-Council. Not even a single word of debate about it in parliament.

We weren't asked: we were simply told. And now when some of us object to such a disgraceful disregard to the will of the majority, we are called dumb and classified as dinosaurs.

Seems to me that Ms. Erola and Mr. Ouellet will be surprised at how many dinosaurs will manage to get into the polling booths of this country come next election.

Not Amused

In an inexcusable display of ignorance Premier René Lévesque Monday seriously compared English-speaking Québécois to the white former rulers of the black African nation of Zimbabwe. He said he envied the success of Prime Minister Robert Mugabe in finally achieving independence. The poor, pathetic man.

Perhaps the premier has spent too much time examining the lower regions of his own intestinal tract to have noticed what preceded the 1980 success of black guerrillas in liberating their country from the iron grip of white-only rule. A little reminder is perhaps needed.

Zimbabwe achieved its independence in 1964, when then Prime Minister Ian Smith unilaterally declared it to forestall British efforts to end minority rule. For 16 years black guerrillas led by Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo battled the Rhodesian army and they finally succeeded when it became apparent to the Rhodesian government that majority rule was inevitable. In 1980 it became a reality.

A great number of White Rhodesians, unable — or unwilling — to cope with the new regime have left Zimbabwe and many others will surely do so if the internal politics of that country do not improve. A feud between former partners Mugabe and Nkomo has torn the country apart along tribal lines and it has often looked like civil war was just around the corner.

Before the victory of the black guerrillas Rhodesia's 20 million blacks were ruled by 600,000 whites, who held exclusive reins on government, financial and military resources. The blacks of Rhodesia had no power, little good land and no vote. They were simply a source of cheap labor. The traditional hewers of wood and drawers of water.

French-speaking Québécois, on the other hand, have always had their rights protected, first by the BNA Act and now the Canadian Constitution. They have always had political power and have used it with skill to their own advantage. It is safe to say that the rulers in Ottawa would be a completely different crowd were it not for the support they have from Québec. In 1980 Québécois themselves chose to remain in the Canadian confederation after a free and open debate. Mr. Lévesque appears frustrated because of his own inability to lead his people down the garden path.

After an heroic struggle the people of Zimbabwe liberated themselves from an unjust and vicious regime. Liberty was gained after a long and bloody fight that saw thousands of men, women and children lose their lives. The destruction inflicted on the economy of the country is almost impossible to imagine and will take years to repair. Of this our premier is envious.

In making his glib remarks the premier of Québec insulted all Québécois — English and French — as well as our guest, who must have considered the comparison of the two situations rather pathetic if not outright laughable.

Lévesque owes us all an apology. His remarks were smug, bigoted and vindictive. While he may have meant them as a joke, we are not amused.

Court tests await new rights charter

by Gerard McNeil

OTTAWA (CP)— Another ground-breaking session of the Supreme Court of Canada opens today with some 20 Charter of Rights cases awaiting hearing and more coming every month.

The court will spend this week hearing 46 applications for leave to appeal, three of them involving charter arguments that are still new to Canadian courts.

The charter became part of the Constitution April 17, 1982, and a wave of appellants citing its guarantees began hitting the court early this year.

The court has granted leave to appeal quickly in most of the applications involving such arguments.

Charter cases involve about a quarter of the 95 cases that are awaiting hearing as the fall session begins. The number should swell this week.

The three applications involving charter arguments involve:

An Ontario case in which a man charged with conspiracy to import marijuana is trying to get prosecutors to turn over transcripts of wiretaps that led to the charge. Richard Diotte contends the legal rights he enjoys under the charter are being violated because he can't mount a defence to the charge without knowing the evidence against him. A provincial court judge ruled that the charter doesn't apply because the charge was placed before the charter came into effect. The Ontario Court of Appeal ruled that Criminal Code provisions limiting an accused's access to wiretap evidence aren't unconstitutional.

A Québec case in which the Québec Court of Appeal ordered a new trial for Edwin Pearson on a charge of conspiracy to have possession of stolen property. Pearson had been convicted and served his sentence when the new trial was ordered. He cites Section 11 (h) of the charter, which says a person found guilty and punished for an offence can't be tried and punished for it again. CROWN APPEALING

A Nova Scotia case in which H. W. Corkum Construction Co. Ltd., charged a year ago with five breaches of the Construction Safety Act, says its right under charter section 11 (b) to be tried "within a reasonable time" has been violated. The charge was thrown out for this reason and the Crown is appealing.

Eastern Townships boys near top of Ottawa's heap

by Edison Stewart

OTTAWA (CP)— In the post-Pitfield era of official Ottawa one name to watch is that of 41-year-old Gérard Veilleux, a miner's son from Asbestos who has rocketed almost to the pinnacle of the federal public service.

Now deputy clerk of the Privy Council and secretary to cabinet for federal-provincial relations, the low-profile Veilleux is well-placed to eventually become the top civil servant in the country.

"I don't think there's any limit to how far Gérard Veilleux can go," says former deputy finance minister Simon Reisman.

A career civil servant whose specialty is "managing the federation," Veilleux replaced last year the higher-profile and more controversial Michael Kirby, a Liberal who presided over the constitutional wars and now is a vice-president of Canadian National.

His major success so far is last spring's constitutional conference on aboriginal rights, which ended in an accord affirming past land claims agreements and guaranteeing at least three more first ministers' conferences on the issue by 1987. "It was the first federal-provincial conference that went well in six or seven years," one federal official says.

Friends and associates variously describe Veilleux as "enormously intelligent," "dedicated, decisive, persistent and ambitious — a man who 'calls a spade a spade but doesn't turn people off.'"

Former Progressive Conservative finance minister John Crosbie calls him "a first-class public servant."

"He represented the kind of person we wanted to hire, the prototype of the new wave of French-Canadians," adds former CBC president Al Johnson, who brought Veilleux to Ottawa to work for him in the federal Finance Department in 1965.

Veilleux's latest promotion came as part of a series of changes that saw the appointment to the Senate of then Privy Council clerk Michael Pitfield, a close friend and adviser to Prime Minister Trudeau.

Pitfield, who served as Ottawa's top mandarin for most of the last eight years, was replaced by Gordon Osbaldeston, former undersecretary of state for external affairs.

MOVED OFFICE

One of the first things Veilleux did was put some distance between himself and the prime minister's office, where Kirby had set up shop.

Veilleux moved his office back to a neighboring building to be with the rest of his crew.

He also began chopping staff, reducing the number of bodies in the federal-provincial relations office to about 55 from an allocation of about 75.

"He's the only bureaucrat I know who's cut his man-year complement," says Donald Savoie, a former staffer. "That frankly deeply impressed me."

At first glance, at least, Veilleux seems better placed than Kirby for the delicate task of avoiding unnecessary bickering between Ottawa and the provinces.

He has no political connections, has worked for both Manitoba and Québec and as an assistant deputy minister of finance he presided over the renegotiation of agreements which funnel billions of federal dollars a year into the provinces to help fund health care and post-secondary education.

However, one provincial official notes that Veilleux is not saddled with the controversial issues Kirby had to deal with and adds that Kirby was easier to deal with because of his political connections to Trudeau.

"If you had a real problem, he (Kirby) understood a real problem and would try to solve it," the official said, whereas Veilleux is more of a bureaucrat.

Veilleux's ambition in his new job is to get the cabinet looking at "the range of (federal-provincial) issues in the system" rather than on a one-by-one basis as they arise.

"The issue is not necessarily to avoid tension," he adds, but to manage it so that it doesn't reach a critical stage "and overload the system."

Born the son of a miner, Veilleux had to work at nights to get through Québec's Université Laval, one former colleague said.

"He was poor — take my word for it — poor. . . Now he's up there with the people who were sent to Oxford by their parents."

Veilleux entered public service when, 21 years old and speaking "not a word" of English, a professor lined him up a junior position in the federal-provincial relations section of the Manitoba finance department.

At Johnson's invitation, Veilleux moved to the federal Finance Department two years later, working on the first set of what has come to be known bureaucratically as federal-provincial "fiscal arrangements" — Ottawa's contribution to health and education.

He worked briefly for the Québec government in 1970, again in federal-provincial relations, but by all accounts was unhappy.

A firm federalist, Edgar Gallant, chairman of the federal Public Service Commission, says Veilleux found his bosses in Québec City to be "politicians disguised as bureaucrats" who eventually went on to hold key positions in the Parti Québécois.

Veilleux returned to Ottawa in 1971, becoming assistant secretary to the Treasury Board, where he frequently advised Johnson on the implementation of the bilingualism policy Parliament had passed two years before.

"If a person can be a touchstone, Gérard was that for me," Johnson says now.

From Treasury Board, Veilleux went back to Finance, then to Health and Welfare and then again to Finance, where in 1979 he became assistant deputy minister for federal-provincial relations and social policy.

Veilleux was convinced that the federal-provincial pendulum had swung too far in favor of the provinces, Gallant says. "I'd say he has a deep conviction the balance has to be restored."

In 1982 he was appointed associate secretary of the new Ministry of State for Economic Development, only to be promoted yet again a scant nine months later into his current position.

However, Veilleux has not gone without ruffling some feathers.

Though Johnson describes him as pragmatic, he adds that he can be "enormously persistent" once his mind is made up.

"He's not as cautious as the system would like him to be," one former staffer said. "When he sees something he doesn't like he tends to say it."

One bureaucrat Veilleux has crossed swords with is Jack Manion, secretary to Treasury Board, the government's financial watchdog. At a meeting a few months ago, Veilleux took Manion and the government to task for breaking its own restraint guides, apparently over some tax increase.

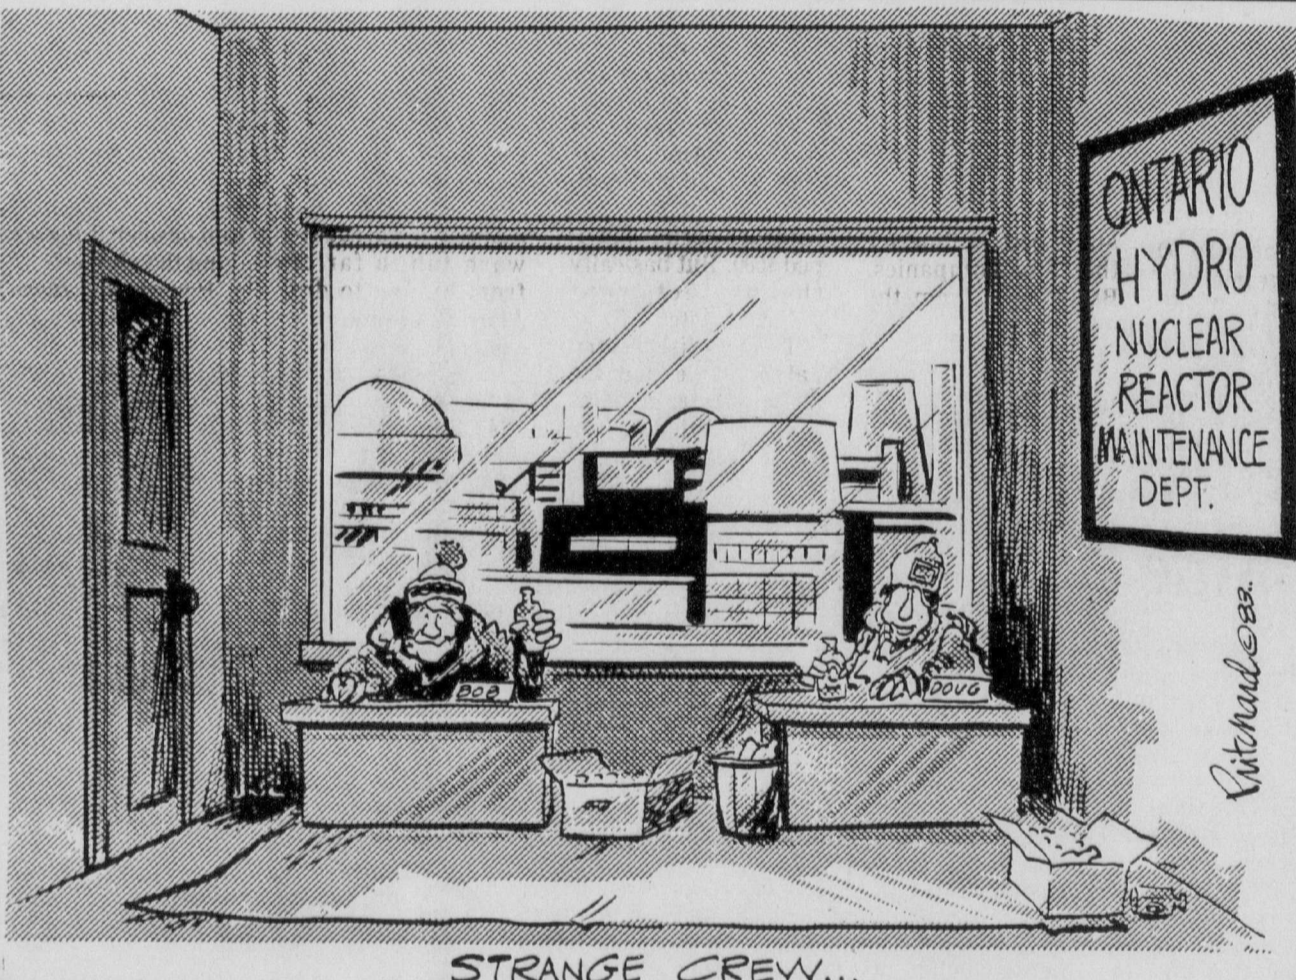

"It was a heated exchange to say the least," one source said.

Reisman, deputy finance minister from 1970 to 1974 and an avid admirer of Veilleux, also cautions that his protégé may be getting overconfident.

"He doesn't suffer fools lightly. He's worked with a lot of people and I think he's come to the conclusion that's he's as good as many and better than most. I like people to come to conclusions of that kind when they're very close to maturity. . ."

"I just sort of have the feeling, just talking to him, that he shows a tremendous amount of confidence for a man that age. I take a kind of avuncular view of Gérard, I treat him as a protégé, nephew, son, and I'm very critical of my children. I don't like to see them become overconfident."

"I like modest people and Gérard is feeling his oats. But I hasten to add he's justified. He's a good man."

STRANGE CREW...

Day for peace, not war — teacher-preacher

HALIFAX (CP)— After the Second World War, Maud Vant addressed envelopes for philosopher Bertrand Russell — and peace. Now she is promoting the idea that peace should be taught in schools on Remembrance Day.

"I'm a teacher and a woman and therefore I'm concerned with all the children of the earth," she said in an interview during the first stop of her cross-country quest.

Vant, who met with Halifax teachers last week, is on leave from teaching high school English and social studies in Vancouver. She is a Quaker, an author and a poet and this is her second cross-Canada tour.

Last year she drove across the country to promote her autobiographical novel The Year Begins with Winter, an account of her childhood in London during the war.

"We must bring up a new generation of people who think in terms of peace," she said. "I think the world is mad — Reagan and his star wars."

Teaching peace on Nov. 11 has been accepted by the British Columbia Teachers Federation and a peace curriculum is being considered, she said.

"You can get to children and teach them racial hatred and bias and prejudice and teach them bad history from school books, or you can teach them to live and laugh and love and be proud of their heritage."

Vant considers herself a friendly bully for peace; her idea for life is intractable and she believes peace is possible even when the world is threatened by nuclear war.

Reviews mixed on new Tory leader's House debut

by Roger Smith

OTTAWA (CP)— Brian Mulroney made his parliamentary debut last week with the outward swagger yet wary eye of a kid at the controls of a new high-stakes video game.

The neophyte Progressive Conservative leader steered carefully through strange new surroundings, trying to avoid the pitfalls of policy and caucus disputes as political opponents and the media sat poised to leap on his first wrong move.

How well he fared at the new game depends, of course, on who is keeping score.

Tory colleagues think he passed the test with flying colors by staying out of big trouble and matching Prime Minister Trudeau in their opening-day battle of wits. Liberals read Mulroney's absence from the Commons on Thursday and Friday as an admission of how badly he tripped up earlier in the week.

"All in all, it couldn't have been much better," Mulroney adviser Pat MacAdam said of Mulroney's first-week performance. Québec Liberal MP Pierre Deniger's assessment was just the opposite: "It'll have to get better because it couldn't get much worse."

Such rushed verdicts say more about the predictability of political rhetoric than about reality: The new boy did well enough but didn't come away unscathed.

Mulroney heard the first whispers of caucus dissent when the Liberals set a predictable trap on the question of French-language rights in Manitoba. He was reluctant to clarify apparent shifts in the Tories' positions on a civilian security agency and changes to the Crownsnest Pass freight rates.

And one of his first Commons retorts was interpreted in some quarters as a vulgar suggestion that Health Minister Monique Bégin is so fat that she looks like she is about to give birth.

EXPOSE INEXPERIENCE

The hype surrounding Mulroney's debut flowed from the fact he was chosen Opposition leader and given a chance to become the country's next prime minister even though he had never held elected office. The Liberals hope to prick his high-flying balloon by exposing his inexperience.

Yet Gallup polls released this week suggest the importance attached to anything he does in Parliament has been exaggerated.

One indicated that 32 per cent of decided Canadians think that of the three current national leaders, Mulroney would make the best prime minister. Only 23 per cent ranked Trudeau as tops, the first time since 1976 that he has ranked second.

Another suggested that 64.6 per cent of Canadians have little or no interest in Parliament — a result that suggests Mulroney can relax in the House because so few people are paying attention.

Those polls, along with the Tories' 22-point lead over the Liberals in the most recent Gallup poll on party popularity, hint at the strategy which many Tories think Mulroney should follow — keep his head down, steer clear of controversial policy pronouncements and count on voters' disaffection with the Liberals to carry him to 24 Sussex Dr.

"Let them (the Liberals) stew and sweat," said a top Mulroney aide. "We'd be naive in Opposition, as we were in government, if we gave them too much to shoot at."

Nevertheless, the Liberals will keep trying to flush out Mulroney. His absence Thursday did not spare Mulroney from Trudeau's pointed jibes about his silence on policy.

"He is magnificent to look at," quipped Trudeau. "But we hope he will be magnificent to hear."

With Week One out of the way, Mulroney advisers are hoping to persuade him to slow down. They say he is exhausted after six months on the run through the leadership race, the byelection campaign in Central Nova and preparation of his new team in time for the resumption of Parliament.

Mulroney didn't come into the office Thursday or Friday. Instead he stayed at his temporary home at Kingsmere in the nearby Gatineau Hills to catch up on correspondence, make telephone calls and put together the Tories' new national campaign committee.

Aides admit the benefits of days away from the spotlight must be weighed against the predictable Liberal charges that Mulroney is ducking pressure in the House.

Mulroney got off to a good start Monday in his initial joust with Trudeau but the going got rougher on Tuesday.

Responding to a planted question from a Liberal backbencher, the prime minister suggested the possibility of a resolution aimed at encouraging Manitoba's NDP government to stick with plans to increase French language rights in the face of growing opposition led by the provincial Tories.

The ploy, while exposing the Liberals as desperate enough to play politics with crucial language issues, squeezed Mulroney between his desire to reach out to Québec voters and his fears of alienating some western caucus members and western voters who are less enthusiastic about bilingualism.

While most Tories praised Mulroney for immediately agreeing to meet Trudeau on the issue, others said he should have been more wary. "I would have been more cautious myself," said one adviser. Nervous aides called at least one newspaper office to debate impressions that Mulroney had been caught in a trap.

Mulroney said little after his first private meeting with Trudeau but it was clear he was in dangerous territory — several Manitoba MPs and former Tory premier Sterling Lyon warned him that Ottawa should not interfere while the provincial legislature is dealing with the issue.

Policy issues also posed problems. With Mulroney's new shadow cabinet in place, the Tories shifted its position on changes to the Crownsnest Pass freight rates and appeared to alter its stand on a proposed civilian security agency. But Mulroney did little to clarify the changes.

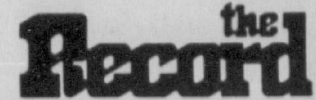

Charles McMillan, his policy adviser, admitted there was some confusion but blamed it on "the natural confusion that exists with you guys (the media)." He argued that reporters were too anxious to jump on Mulroney.

Then there was the dispute over Mulroney's jibe at Monique Bégin. The health minister heckled him with a French phrase that literally means "Give birth" but is often used to mean "Get to the point."

Mulroney responded by saying in French: "Speaking of childbirth, Monique, when's it on the way?" Offended Liberals accused him of suggesting she was fat; Mulroney aides said he was merely asking when she would give birth to her promised Canada Health Act.

Whatever he meant, the message in the reaction shouldn't escape Mulroney: The Liberals will be playing hardball with the rookie every chance they get.

New event highlights Québec Arab horse breeders club weekend

By Claudia Villemaire

RICHMOND — Over 60 horses, most of them registered arabs, turned out in their best spit and polish for the final competition of the Québec Arab Horse Breeders' Club, a two day event which attracted horses from all points of Québec.

"We are featuring many classes for the young people this year, and so far the turn out has been great," Québec club president Bob Talks commented.

A never-before seen attraction at the show was the dressage event which is the equivalent to the final exams one must pass on completing a university course. Horse and rider must demonstrate their complete mastery of the paces, strides and techniques which are required in the dressage competition.

Winners of the highest number of points will receive horse coolers, trophies and ribbons plus another accumulation of points which will place them in the national standings and hopefully among the national champions at the end of the season.

The lonely get even lonlier

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — When Maytag Co. introduced the wringer washing machine in 1907, it became a symbol of progress. Now the company is shutting down the assembly line.

"It's been a losing proposition for us for years," said Bob Hoover, Maytag public relations director. "We're only making a few dozen a day. At one time, we were making 500 a day."

Maytag's first wringer washer, a wooden tub model, featured a hand-operated dolly that forced the clothes against a corrugated wash tub, a far cry from having to drag clothes over a washboard.

Sales reached a peak in the postwar boom of 1948 as the familiar white wash tub and wringer followed families to the suburbs.

But sales have been falling ever since, largely because of the rise of automatic washers and dryers, including Maytag's own models. Maytag president Daniel Krumm said wringer washers today account for less than one per cent of the washing machine market in the U.S.

There are two models now, a round tub sold at retail for about $469 and a square tub costing about $500, similar to those of the late 1930s. Both have an armature that can swing away from the tub or over it for wringing the clothes.

Hoover said there is still a die-hard group of customers for the machine.

"I had a letter from a lady the other day who was very indignant about the price of the machine today, but she didn't want to buy any other type." In 1938, a model cost $59.50. Hoover said wringer washers will still be available through other manufacturers — including Speed Queen and Amana — but "we've had well over half the market for many years," Hoover said.

By the time production shuts down at the end of the year, Maytag will have sold more than 11 million wringer washers.

Key Lake uranium mine set to go

KEY LAKE, Sask. (CP) — On time and slightly below budget, Key Lake will become Saskatchewan's third producing uranium mine later this month, capable of producing more than four million kilograms of yellowcake annually.

Despite a three-month construction strike in mid-1982 that threatened to delay the $500-million project until 1984, Key Lake Corp. president Peter Clarke said construction has been completed to the point where ore can be fed into the mill later this month.

"Right now we're commissioning the plant... we're testing and feeding waste material through," Clarke said.

When the plant is operational, the first ore from what is considered the richest ore body in the western world will be processed.

It will employ 400 to 500 full-time workers, and over the 15- to 20-year life of the project will provide about $2 billion in royalties to the Saskatchewan government.

Owned by three companies — Saskatchewan Mining Development Corp. (50 per cent), Uranex Exploration and Mining (33.3 per cent) and Eldor Resources (16.7 per cent) — Key Lake will come in slightly below the projected $500-million price tag, Clark said. The ore bodies that will feed the mill were discovered in 1975 and 1976. Preliminary drilling indicated ore reserves in excess of 68 million kilograms of yellowcake. But Clark now says subsequent testing has indicated reserves closer to 90 million kilograms.

The richest ore body, the Gaertner, 40 metres below the sandy surface, is the first that will be open-pit mined and contains the "richest" ore, while the Deilmann will follow. Lower grade ore will be stockpiled for later milling, when the price of yellowcake is expected to climb from the present $44 to $50 a kilogram.

Located about 800 kilometres north of Saskatoon, the Key Lake project is the province's third producing uranium mine.

Rabbit Lake, brought into production in 1975 and now owned by Eldorado Resources Ltd., and Cluff Lake, owned by Amok Ltd. and brought into production in 1980, are the other two.

The development of Key Lake hasn't been all smooth sailing for the three companies. But almost from the first day of discovery the provincial government — then the NDP — has been of the view it would be a "go."

Almost three months of public hearings were conducted by a board of inquiry in 1980 to discuss everything from waste management through to native hiring policies and radiation dangers.

The board recommended approval of the project and the provincial government gave Key Lake formal approval in February, 1981. There were brief complaints about the lack of hiring of northerners and northern contractors for the project and in late 1981 Key Lake Mining Corp. was charged with draining part of the area without a permit and fined $500. But basically the project went without a hitch.

Two Swedish electrical companies and five United States utilities are committed to buy Key Lake uranium until at least 1990.

Campers and caravaners gathered from across the province Sunday one final time this season to celebrate their common interests and elect their executive for next year.

Québec caravaners meet once more

MONT SCOTCH HILL — Campers and caravaners gathered like birds preparing for a flight south recently at a rally which brought together members of the Quebec Federation of Campers and Caravaners for the last time this season. Over one hundred campers and trailers and 350 people attended from all points of Quebec, travelling from the Abitibi, Quebec, Montreal and Eastern Townships to give their season one final farewell party and hold their annual meeting and election of officers. A quick survey of the campground revealed trailers varying from the smallest tent camper to the luxury house on wheels valued at somewhere around $50,000. Total evaluation of the participants accommodation for the weekend amounted to over $4 million, making the rally one of the most prestigious events of the season. Folks interested in joining the federation, which puts out a catalogue listing hundreds of recommended campgrounds and also offers a special insurance rate for members, may address enquiries to the local chapter which is Region 9, Centre du Québec/Estrie.

Bridal shower

The evening of August 26, some 30 ladies wound their way between the colorful fall flowers on either side of the walkway into the home of the Littles, where each was greeted by one of the hostesses, Mrs. Connie Little and Miss Kathy Little, hostesses for a Miscellaneous Bridal Shower in honor of Miss Charleen Smith of Bulwer and Montreal, whose pinned-on corsage was of old-fashioned flowers, especially sweet peas, from the Little garden, and of which were placed in Profusion throughout the home... a delight to behold, indeed!

As Charleen opened her many parcels from the table placed before her, she was assisted by her mother, Mrs. Morris Smith, Mrs. Thomas Abbott, mother of the prospective groom, and closely watched by his two sisters, Mary and Margaret Abbott, and by Miss Jose Noel, all of Montreal.

The pretty wrappings revealed many gifts, pretty and useful, carrying Best Wishes for a long and happy life together for Charleen and her chosen partner, while little Emily Verlinden maintained a very happy and relaxed atmosphere all evening, as she presented parcels to the guest of honor, who, after the last parcel had been viewed, expressed in her own gracious manner, her appreciation to her hostesses, for their shower and gifts, and to all others for their gifts and good wishes.

The jovial evening ended with delicious refreshments, including slices of a dainty blue and white cake, created by the Little-Verlinden ladies and served by Charleen, assisted by Kathy.

L & D women's centre fall program

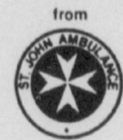

The Lennoxville & District Women's Centre begins its third Fall Program with a discussion of Community Services for women. The staff of our Research Project, completed earlier this summer, will be there to discuss those community services whose functions and availability they learned about while working on the project. There will be free pamphlets available, in English, from some of the local service agencies, and an opportunity to discuss how current services might be improved. All women are invited to attend on Thursday, September 22nd at 7:30 p.m. at the Women's Centre, 109 Queen St., Apt. 7, Lennoxville.

Free to members, $1.50 for non-members, $7.50 for seniors and students.

On Wednesday, September 28th everyone is invited to the Second Annual Open House at the Lennoxville and District Women's Centre from 1-9 p.m. This is a good opportunity to join or renew your membership, or simply to drop in and look around. There will be a small Book Sale and refreshments available. Come up and say hello!

FIRST AID TIP

TO CONTROL MINOR BLEEDING

Wash the wound under running water, if contaminated with foreign matter. Temporarily protect the area with a sterile dressing and gently clean the surrounding skin. Dry the skin with swabs of cotton. Wipe or swab away from the wound. Apply firm pressure to the bleeding points. Cover with a sterile dressing. Apply a pad, if necessary and bandage firmly. An adhesive dressing may be sufficient. Elevate the bleeding part.

Pickling still a major activity

First, may I clarify directions (August 30) for freezing peas? The pods should be well washed to remove any trace of dirt. You then shell the peas and freeze them. No processing is required. There may have been an impression left that they were frozen in the pods.

Pickling is still a major activity and new recipes seem to be welcome. Perhaps these two (with thanks to Else Syberg) may be useful.

The first by request:

SPICY PICKLED FRUIT (Peaches, Pears, Crabapples)

- 1½ cups brown sugar
- 1½ cups white sugar
- 3 cinnamon sticks
- 1 tablespoon whole cloves
- 1½ cups white vinegar or ½ white and ½ cider vinegar
- 3 quarts peaches, pears or crabapples, fresh.

Peaches: pour boiling water over fruit, peel; cut in halves or quarters.

Pears: Peel, core and cut in halves or small pears may be left whole.

Crabapples: Wash, do not peel or remove stems. Mix sugar, vinegar and spices (tied in a cheese cloth bag). Cook slowly 10 minutes, remove spice bag.

Put prepared fruit into hot liquid. (For crabapples, red food coloring may be added to the syrup.) Simmer until fruit is tender. Remove fruit and pack into hot, sterilized jars. Bring syrup back to boil and pour over fruit covering completely. Seal. Makes approximately 6 pints.

WATERMELON RIND PICKLE

- 3 lbs. prepared watermelon rind
- ¼ cup coarse pickling salt
- 5 cups cold water

Kay's kitchen korner

BY KAY TAYLOR

- 2 cups white vinegar
- 2 cups water
- 4 cups white sugar
- ½ lemon, sliced fine
- 4 cinnamon sticks
- 1 tablespoon whole allspice
- 1 teaspoon whole cloves

(Tie all spices in a cheese cloth bag.)

Use only firm water melon rind, not too ripe. Use only the white rind, discarding both the red and green portions. Cut rind in pieces approximately 1" x 1½". Dissolve salt in cold water, pour over rind and let stand overnight. Drain and rinse well in cold water. Mix vinegar, cold water (2 cups), lemon and spices in a large pot, bring to boil (red food coloring may be added to the syrup if desired). Add drained rind and continue cooking slowly until rind is tender and transparent (about one hour).

Remove spice bag, pack rind into hot, sterilized jars, being certain hot liquid completely covers rind. Seal. Makes approximately 3 pints.

Still hoping some kind reader will have the old Certo recipe sheet with Rhubarb and Raspberry Jelly. Please phone Kay at 243-6177 in the area (or write Box 833, Knowlton, Que., JOE IV0). And remember your favorite recipe will always be welcomed by Kitchen Korner.

Scary language and human rights

Dear Ann Landers:

I read recently that a Senate committee voted 15-1 to strengthen the language on all cigarette packages. Sen. Thomas Eagleton of Missouri proposed the wording be changed to the following:

"WARNING: CIGARETTE SMOKING CAUSES CANCER, EMPHYSEMA AND HEART DISEASE, MAY COMPLICATE PREGNANCY AND IS ADDICTIVE."

I believe the language is much too scary. Also, doesn't this interfere with human rights? Sounds like we are getting to be a dictatorship. Sign me!

Worried In N.C.

Dear N.C.:

The language may be scary, but it's accurate. As for human rights, truth in labeling helps people make an educated choice. In this case they still have the right to behave in a suicidal manner if they wish to do so.

It's up to Sen. Howard Baker, the majority leader, to decide whether this bill will be brought to the Senate floor for a vote. My personal hunch is that he has the integrity to schedule it. There are some powerful interests that wish this bill would get lost.

Dear Ann Landers:

When you replied to "Tired of Feeding Other People's Guests," you said, "Maybe I am living in another century, but—" and then went on to say it was not proper to ask people to bring food to a party unless they were family or very close friends.

Never mind the century, Dear Ann — you are obviously living in a different income group. A lot of people are out of work and hard up. They still like to have friends in. Pot-luck suppers are a great way to do it. Please reconsider.

Jackson, Miss.

Dear Jack:

Read my answer one more time, please. I said it was OK for close friends. If you still believe I'm wrong, write again and I'll rethink it.

Obituary

MABEL RUBLEE

Formerly of Sherbrooke, Quebec
Mabel Annie Rublee passed away peacefully at Grace Christian Home in Huntingville on August 17, 1983.

Mrs. Rublee was the daughter of the late William and Annie Pitman, and was born on a farm at Belvidere, Quebec, on January 3, 1893.

In 1917 she was married to Charles M. Rublee, a farmer living at Minton, Quebec. Their three sons, Reginald, Ronald and Earl were born on the farm. In 1926 the family moved to Sherbrooke.

A devoted wife and mother, Mrs. Rublee's principal interests centered around her home and her family. She also enjoyed her plants, and had a great variety of African violets, as well as other plants.

She was a faithful member, first of the Methodist Church at Minton, and later of Trinity United Church in Sherbrooke, and subsequently of Plymouth Trinity.

After the death of her husband in 1981 Mrs. Rublee moved to Grace Christian Home in Huntingville where she lived until her death.

Mrs. Rublee is survived by her two sons, Ronald of Sherbrooke and Earl of Lennoxville. Her eldest son Reginald predeceased her in 1979. Also left to mourn her loss are three daughters-in-law, seven grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren.

"Precious in the sight of the LORD is the death of his saints."

Women's Institute members hold regular meetings in the Townships

SPOONER POND — The September meeting of Spooner Pond Branch of the Q.W.I. was held on the first day of the month at the home of Mrs. Florence Blanchard, with Mrs. Grace Taylor assisting hostess. Motto: "To err is human, but when the eraser outwears the pencil, you are over-doing it."

The meeting was opened in the usual way by the President, Mrs. Laurie Walker. Roll call, "Bring an article for a sale table at the Tea and Bazaar" — was answered by 14 members. Two adult guests and two little guests were welcomed.

Minutes of the July meeting and an account of the August picnic were read and approved. The Treasurer, Mrs. Vera Hughes gave her report and bills were paid. The outgoing Ways and Means committee had held a drawing among members on a ceramic rabbit, which had been won by Vera Hughes. A new Ways and Means committee was named for the next three months — Vera Hughes, Audrey Samson and Blanch Fortier.

All were sorry to learn that Kay Crack was in hospital and a card was signed to be sent to her. The subscription to the C.A.C. magazine will be renewed for another year.

Convenors' reports: Agriculture, Grace Taylor, read an excerpt from an account of the ACWW conference held in B.C. earlier this summer, in which the writer wondered if members of this Associated Countrywoman of the World, should call themselves "Country" women when the majority of them lived in towns! A list of the courses offered in adult education classes was read.

Citizenships, Gladys Biggs has a good supply of knitted articles to be sent away. She displayed a very nicely knitted vest. Education, Fran Pope had asked members to write brief essays in Ethnic groups in Canada, and four members turned in essays, with that of Joyce Lancaster winning the prize.

Home Ec., Florence Blanchard told of a booklet — "Stitch-in-Time" which she could send for, and she took a list of names of those who wanted to get this booklet, which comes several times during the year. She also read the list of things which this branch is to do for the tea.

Welfare and Health, Audrey Samson was not present. Publicity, Dorothy Oakley reports all meetings to County convenor and The Record. Only one scarf and hat set was brought in for inter-branch competition for next year, and suggestions for this are to be brought in at the next meeting. The regular drawing was won by Vera Hughes.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Florence Ignatieff, with Violet Davidson and Fran Pope assisting hostesses. As World Food Day is October 16, it was decided to have a food sale table at that meeting, with each member to bring in a food item for this. Proceeds will go to the World Food Day Fund.

No further business, the meeting was adjourned and lunch served.

LENNOXVILLE — The Women's Institute held their first meeting after the summer recess in the club room, Town Hall, Queen Street. Mrs. Dorothy Geddes, president, welcomed all. Motto for the day: Intelligence is like a river, the deeper it is the less noise it makes and roll call: Name a Canadian author and give the title of one of his or her books. This was well responded to.

Following a review of the minutes, business included a discussion on the upcoming annual Christmas Bazaar and the date of November 12 is to be verified. A reply from Austin Branch showed 15 guests would attend the October meeting and plans are to be finalized at a special meeting on Tuesday September 13 in the club room, along with other work, including making entry tags for the upcoming school fair on September 17.

It was noted Quebec is trimmed with Saskatchewan this year and Mrs. Sterling Parker and Mrs. Eldora Turner were named to arrange for correspondence between the members.

Correspondence included a report from the Lennoxville and District Women's Centre and a most interesting letter from the Women's agriculture association of Sill Bay, Cape Province South Africa with whom the members of this branch are having exchanges and correspondence.

Mrs. Doris Cascaden, treasurer, gave a most favorable report. Convenors reports — A report on the visit to the Eaton Corner Museum taken by the members during the summer and most favorable and enjoyable comments given by all who attended. A list of ways to prevent accidents in the home was outlined.

Members were reminded that hand-made items for the upcoming Bazaar are to be brought to the October meeting.

Assistance for the school fair on September 17 by the members is required and one loaf of sandwiches.

Mrs. Eldora Turner gave a detailed report of the recent County meeting and discussed several items.

A pleasing part of the day's program was the presentation of a small gift to Mrs. Frances Taylor on the occasion of her 90th birthday which had occurred during the holidays. This, with belated best wishes, was extended by all.

Tea was served by Mrs. Dorothy Geddes and Mrs. Doris Cascaden.

DUNHAM — This meeting took place at the home of Christine McLaughlin on September 7, with the President Jane Greig in the chair and 13 members present. The Collect and Salute to the Flag were recited.

Motto: A book should serve as the axe for the frozen sea within us. Roll call asked that we name our favourite magazine and tell why.

This certainly unlocked the frozen areas within us, speaking for myself, as member after member cited their favourites, and a most interesting discussion evolved. We all surely are doing our bit to keep the magazine industry alive.

Some of these were the National Geographic, Canadian Geographic, Science Digest, Equinox, Harrowsmith, Chatelaine, Reader's Digest, home and garden magazines, craft magazines, and one member will be our first subscriber to the new Farm Woman magazine. Margaret Ellis, who is related to the Ten Eyck family, showed us an article on the famous Ten Eyck chair, a very beautifully carved, ornate piece of furniture brought to this country by the first Ten Eyck family. There were many comments relating to the preservation of the very old issues of magazines, no longer published, some of which are still published. Pearl Yates has kept an issue dating back to 1890.

The minutes were read by the secretary, Christine McLaughlin. Queries about the type of canvas to be used in the QWI competition for 1984 came up, and Barbara will investigate.

Treasurer Pearl Yates gave her report, healthy at the moment.

It was voted to donate $25.00 to the Plowman's Association. Also our tea money in October will go to the Northern Branches.

A Silent Auction will be held on October 5 at the home of Pearl Yates.

The October roll call will be Name a province you have visited, members please note. This is a switcheroo. November will be the Jams & Jellies effort.

September 14, 10:00 a.m. the Fall rally of the W.I., four counties, will be held in the Anglican Church, Main Street, Sutton. A hot lunch will be served $6.00 each. A very interesting program has been planned, and it is hoped that WI members from the four counties can be present. For more particulars you may phone your president or Pearl Yates.

The semi annual meeting of the County WI will be held Tuesday September 20 at Emmanuel United Church in Cowansville at 1:00 p.m. and Mrs. Ola Carr will be the speaker.

The Unicef Christmas brochure containing many attractive designs, was passed around.

An album of art work depicting hasty notes, stationery, name tags, done with bamboo skin on white stationery was passed around. We received this through a former Dunham resident. It was done by an Haitian artist. The sale of this art work helps to support an Anglican Mission in Haiti. The samples are very delicate, different and beautifully executed.

Barbara Harvey read her Agricultural report and Ruby Sherer read a popular method of freezing corn, presented a new recipe for corn salad, and suggestions for freezing vegetables. An Agriculture Outline for 83 and 84 was read, and ancient pictures of farm houses and buildings were distributed for study. Also Barbara gave her recipe for pickled vegetable salad, and also read an article on how to care for Christmas Cactus, this was from the Work Basket.

Dorothy Paterson, Education convenor, presented her program, which consisted of a story written by Mildred Westover Anderson, which was a nostalgic account of School Days in Knowlton, many many years ago. This would be interesting story telling for grandchildren.

Members were happy to learn that new rules are being enforced at Massey Vanier. NO SMOKING will be allowed in the school area, no swearing will be tolerated, both on penalty of expulsion.

The next meeting will be at the home of Pearl Yates.

Farmers Association resumes meetings

On Sept. 8, the Bulwer Sector of the Quebec Farmers Association met at the Bulwer Community Hall. Mr. Fraser, President, welcomed all back after the summer recess. Minutes were read by the secretary Neil Burns. Motion of acceptance was made by Gordon French and Mac Ross. Mr. Fraser gave the report of the Fair Booth which proved to be a good place to accommodate the showmen and spectators. The profits were not as high as some years due to the increase in prices which was not passed on one hundred per cent but kept the booth in a good position of fellowship.

The speaker of the evening was the Agronomer, Andre Pettigrew who spoke on Government Policies, bulldozer work, assistance with storage of forage and grain development, cow-calf farming, feeders or sheep. He concluded with a question period with the farmers.

Upcoming events: Plowing Match, Sept. 17 at Mr. Mac Ross', Sand Hill, Clinic at Albert Sylvester's, Sept. 15, 10 a.m. at Low Forest. Judges are hired and arrangements underway for a good match. October 22 is the date set for the dance to raise funds for same to be held at Salle Veilleux, Clifton Road, Sawyerville.

Three bursaries will be offered to students entering an Agricultural Course. Motion was made by Theda Lowry and seconded by Bernice Black. Elmore Barter showed the members a plaque to be given to Donald Coates, formerly of Lennoxville, in appreciation of the work he did for the Bulwer Mini-sector of the U.P.A. Usual social period ended the evening.

Farmers Association resumes meetings

Legion Ladies Auxiliary hold meeting

WATERLOO — The Ladies Auxiliary have after a brief vacation, resumed their monthly meetings.

Sept. 13, 33 members were dinner guests of the Auxiliary at the Green Dragon Restaurant, prior to dinner cocktails were served at 6 p.m. in the Legion Lounge.

A delicious meal of Chinese food-steak and chicken was enjoyed and the Auxiliary would like to thank Comrade Collin Blackman for presenting them with wine during the meal. Thank you, Collin, for your thoughtfulness.

As this was social evening, business was very brief, however, it was decided that a Halloween Dance would take place on Oct. 29. Also approved was the sponsoring of a runner, Miss Tryhorn, at the Terry Fox Marathon. The President S. Bockus presented, on behalf of the Auxiliary, a wedding gift to Vivianne and Paul Royer, a china teapot, sugar and creamer. To Mrs. Ruth Lefebvre, a fire victim, cutlery was given.

Before leaving the Restaurant drawings were held: Margaret Wright and Rita McGovern received wine and Vivian Bockus, a lovely bowl, donated by Lilian Bouchard. Those taking home "doggie bags" were Mrs. Alice Buckland, Wendy Williams, Ethel Sturtevant, Crystal Singfield and Debbie Edwards.

The October meeting will be on the 11th at 8 a.m. hosted by Rachel Cody and Joice Durrell. Welcome members and guests.

Old pro Crowley comes through as Expos send Cards down the tubes

By Terry Scott

MONTREAL (CP) — Hopes increased for Montreal Expos on Monday night, but they were all but snuffed out for St. Louis Cardinals, the defending champions in baseball's National League.

East Division title at Olympic Stadium late last September, fell 3-0 and 6-3 to Montreal, a doubleheader defeat that dropped them seven games behind the first-place Philadelphia Phillies.

The Expos, meanwhile, inched within two games of the top, using a five-hitter by Bryn Smith to capture the first game and a pinch-hit RBI single by Terry Crowley to deliver the go-ahead run in a three-run eighth inning that clinched the nightcap.

"It's just a matter of time before they pull the plug on us," said St. Louis third baseman Ken Oberkfell, referring to the team's desperate situation. "We've got three teams to catch and few games (12) to do it with."

The Expos felt none of the sting in their twin victories. Smith, who failed to survive the third inning in a crucial game against the Phillies last Wednesday, heeded some advice from manager Bill Virdon.

"When he took me out of that game, I was walking away from the mound and he said 'Hey, settle down. There'll be more games. This isn't the biggest one you'll face.'"

Recalling the incident, Virdon said: "I think Bryn was too uptight in Philly. He tried to be too careful, too fine. 'Sometimes it takes a rough situation like that. Some people can handle it and come back, and others can't. It looks like Bryn is able to handle that.'"

Smith, 5-10, stranded runners in scoring position four times. His finest effort came in the seventh, when he retired three straight batters, two on strikeouts, with runners at first and second.

The shutout was the second for Smith, who walked two batters and struck out seven.

Bryan Little, with an RBI single in the first, Doug Flynn, with an RBI double in the fifth, and Tim Raines, who scored on a wild pitch by reliever Jeff Lahti in the ninth, accounted for Montreal's runs. Neil Allen, 11-13, took the loss.

In the nightcap, Andre Dawson altered the Expos' record book. His fourth-inning solo home run, which cut into a 3-0 Cardinals' lead, was his 32nd. That broke the team record held by Gary Carter.

Dawson also capped the three-run eighth with a sacrifice fly, his 110th RBI, shattering the mark set by Al Oliver last season.

St. Louis had built a 3-0 lead against starter Ray Burris on Jamie Quirk's three-run homer in the fourth. After Dawson's solo shot, the Expos tied it in the fifth on Dawson's RBI single and an RBI groundout by Carter.

Tim Wallach opened the eighth with a double off reliever Dave Rucker, 5-3. Argenis Salazar ran for Wallach and advanced to third when pinch hitter Terry Francona reached on a fielder's choice. Crowley, facing Bruce Sutter, ripped a run-scoring single. Chris Speier beat out a bunt to load the bases for Raines, who delivered an RBI single. One out later, Dawson brought in the third run of the inning with a sacrifice fly.

Jeff Reardon, 7-8, earned the victory with 2 2/3 innings of one-hit relief, while Bob James worked a perfect ninth for his sixth save.

The Expos conclude the three-game series with St. Louis tonight, sending Bill Gullickson, 15-11, against Bob Forsch, 8-11.

Mets 5 Pirates 4

In New York, Hubie Brooks singled home the winning run in the 10th inning. With one out, Mookie Wilson started the Mets' winning rally with a single off Kent Tekulve, 7-5. Wilson stole second and Brooks followed with a single to short centre field, scoring Wilson from second and making a winner of reliever Carlos Diaz, 3-1.

Dodgers 9 Astros 2

In Los Angeles, Ken Landreau hit three singles and Pedro Guerrero collected his 29th home run to lead the Dodgers. Bob Welch, 15-12, earned his seventh win in his last eight starts, giving up five hits over six innings.

Padres 4 Giants 2

Garry Templeton's run-scoring groundout in the fourth inning broke a 2-2 tie for San Diego. Tony Gwynn knocked in one of San Diego's runs, but his season-high major league hitting streak of 25 games was snapped when he went 0-for-3.

Don't tell Milwaukee Brewers that lightning doesn't strike twice in the same place.

After trailing the Brewers 7-0 Sunday, Baltimore Orioles rallied and won the game in the ninth inning on a single by rookie catcher John Stefero.

Stefero, who has played in six major-league games with five hits in 10 at-bats, did it again Monday night. He climaxed a two-run rally in the 11th inning with another RBI single, giving the Orioles an 8-7 victory over the Brewers and a 7 1/2-game lead over second-place Detroit in the American League East.

"It's kind of a one-in-a-million chance to get to do this," said Stefero, who helped reduce Baltimore's magic number to seven. "I want to open some eyes here that I can hit in pressure situations."

Mariners 9 Blue Jays 6

Seattle snapped a seven-game losing streak with a five-run seventh inning in Toronto highlighted by Darnell Coles's two-run single. Al Cowens and Dave Henderson also contributed run-scoring singles to the winning rally that made a winner of Matt Young, 11-15.

Twins 7 White Sox 5

Minnesota continued its success over runaway division-champion Chicago as Tom Brunansky knocked in four runs, two of them with a homer in the top of the eighth inning. The White Sox, who have already clinched the AL West title and had won 17 consecutive games at home, have now lost five of 11 games to the Twins, who are 24 games behind Chicago.

Red Sox 5 Yankees 3

Bob Stanley earned his 30th save and stifled a home-run hitting contest between Boston and New York with three innings of one-hit pitching. Before Stanley came in, Dwight Evans, Jim Rice and Glenn Hoffman hit homers for the Red Sox and Steve Balboni and Roy Smalley connected for the Yankees.

Royals 8-7 Angels 4-6

Kansas City had to rally in the late innings of both games to sweep a doubleheader from California. With the Royals trailing 6-5 in the ninth of the second game, Willie Wilson doubled in the tying run with two outs then raced home when Pat Sheridan hit an infield single. The Royals won the opener as Don Slaught tripled home two runs to key a six-run rally in the eighth.

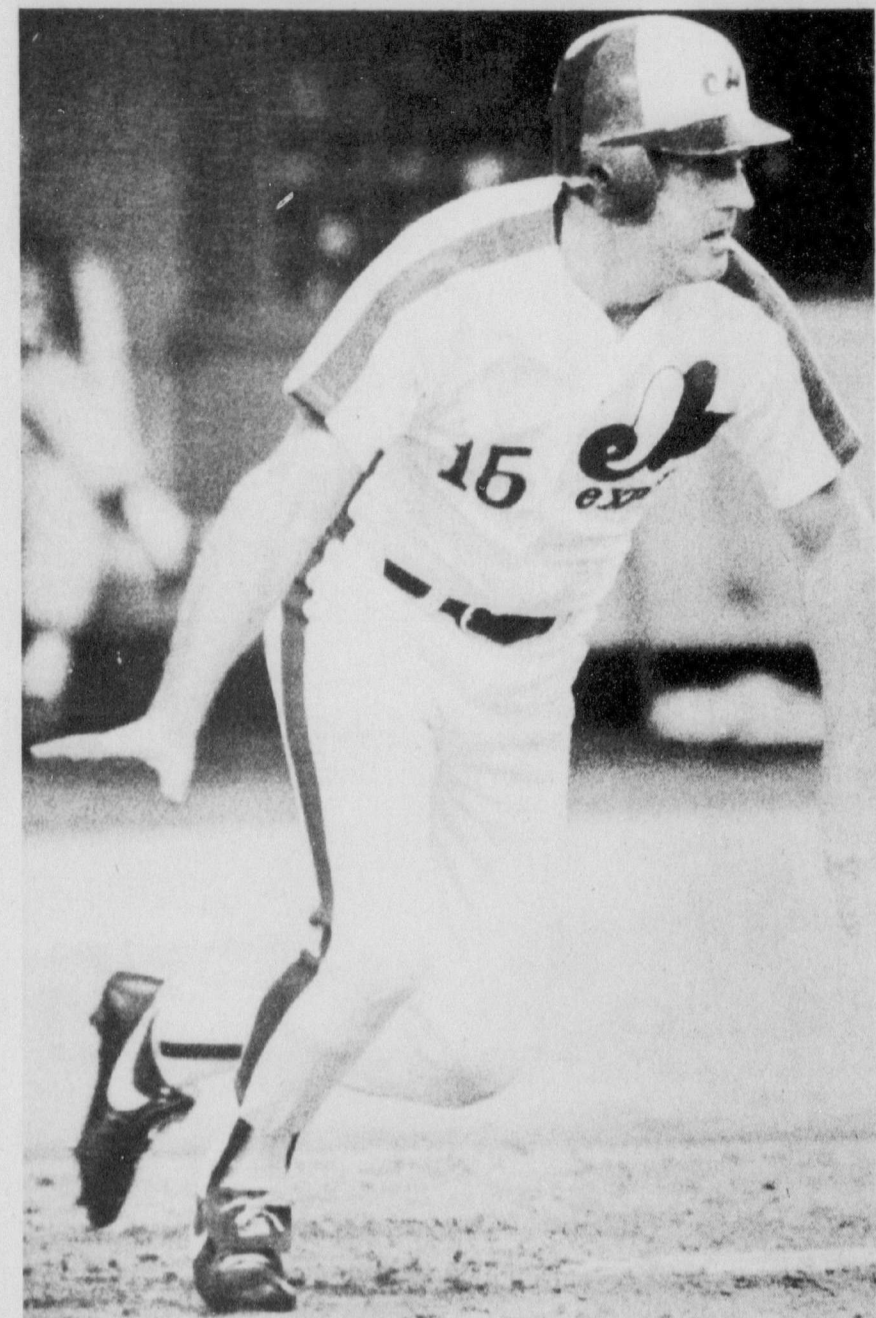

James makes player of week

NEW YORK (AP) — Pitcher Bob James of Montreal Expos, who won one game and saved two in four appearances for the East Division pennant contenders, was named Monday the National League baseball player of the week.

James earned his first major-league victory last Tuesday against Chicago Cubs. In 101-3 innings covering the three games, he struck out 15 batters, walked three, gave up three hits and didn't allow a run.

In the American League, relief pitcher Dan Quisenberry of Kansas City Royals, who set a major-league record for saves in a season, was chosen as the week's star.

Quisenberry, who appeared in four games last week, earned saves for three of them to surpass the record of 38 set in 1973 by John Hiller of Detroit Tigers. Quisenberry now has 41. He didn't walk a batter, didn't allow a run and permitted three hits in 62-3 innings.

Terry Crowley... comes through in a pinch.

RECORD/PERRY BEATON

Tidewater wins minor league World Series

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Darryl Boston and Mike Hart scored unearned runs Monday night as Denver eliminated Portland 5-4 and gave Tidewater the championship of the Class AAA baseball World Series.

Portland needed a victory against Denver to set up a tiebreaker with Tidewater.

Tidewater, champions of the International League, finished the round-robin series with a 3-1 record after taking both games of a doubleheader Sunday.

Texas tale is a fishy story

TEXARKANA, Tex. (AP) — Investigators say that initial tests on bass that took top prizes at a tournament near here support suspicions the fish were caught elsewhere.

"The results of the tests that have been completed have been in our favor," Chief Deputy Dewayne Cannon of Bowie County said Monday. "I feel like there will be an indictment on it."

Two brothers turned the fish in with their catches and came in first and second, respectively, in a Labor Day derby at Lake Wright Patman.

The brothers won a combined $65,000, but were disqualified after failing the required lie detector test, authorities have said.

The Texas Bass Association began challenging the winners' fish stories with lie detector tests amid allegations a ring is planting frozen Florida bass in tournaments in Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Cannon said the case will be presented to a grand jury after the investigation is completed. He declined to comment further, saying the investigation is continuing and that Texas A-M University scientists are performing more tests on the fish.

Association president Coy Milam said a 12.18-pound bass broke a 1977 lake record of 10.08 pounds. The next day, a 9.78-pound bass was turned in.

Milam said eight winners have been disqualified after failing polygraph tests and that some have provided information about the ring.

The loss to Denver dropped Portland, titleholders in the Pacific Coast League, to 2-2. Denver, the American Association champions, finished third with a 1-3 mark.

With the score tied 3-3, Boston reached third in the bottom of the fifth on a throwing error by Portland first baseman Ron Pruitt and scored on a wild pitch by reliever Paul Nirabella to put Denver on top to stay.

Hart ended up at second in the top of the sixth on a throwing error by third baseman Rick Schu and scored on a double by Tye Waller.

Portland pulled to within one run in the top of the seventh when Ed Miller homered to left to make it 5-4 Denver, but that was the last hit allowed by Bob Fallon, who picked up the win by going the last five innings in relief of starter Mike Trujillo.

Denver jumped on top 2-0 in the first inning. Fran Mullins doubled, moved to third on a grounder and scored on a double by Marv Foley. Foley scored on a single by Hart.

Denver added another run in the third inning on a homer by Foley.

Portland scored once in the third inning when Miller scored on a single by Dick Davis and again in the fourth on a home run by Jerry Keller.

Starter Kelly Downs got the loss for Portland.

Tidewater first baseman Gary Rajcich, who hit two home runs, drove in five runs and batted .583 in four games, was named most valuable player of the series.

Concordes' 13th man makes CFL books with fine

TORONTO (CP) — Jake Gaudaur, commissioner of the Canadian Football League, levied a $100 fine Monday on Andre Francis as a result of the Montreal defensive back's actions Saturday when he stepped into the playing field to impede an interception return by B.C.'s Jo Jo Heath.

Francis made his niche in CFL annals when he appeared to try to block Heath's progress along the sideline near the Concordes bench during a game at Olympic Stadium.

Heath was tackled short of the Montreal goaline, but the Lions were awarded a touchdown en route to a 42-26 victory that kept them atop the Western Division.

It was only the second time the rule had been invoked since it came into being following the 1953 season.

Pete Karpuk of Ottawa Rough Riders is believed to be the first player in the CFL's modern era to come off the bench to nail a player running for an apparent touchdown.

Hall of Famer Red O'Quinn, then with Montreal Alouettes, was walking toward the Montreal players' bench during a 1953 game when he looked around and saw Hamilton halfback Bernie Custis running in his direction.

O'Quinn said later he gambled that the officials would ignore the fact he was an extra player on the field and tackled Custis.

Under rules at that time, the non-offending team was given better field position and play continued.

It was after the 1953 season that rule awarding the non-offending team a touchdown was added to the CFL rule book.

Since then, the only time the sideline interference rule had been invoked was in the 1957 Grey Cup game when Ray (Bibbles) Bawel of Hamilton was tripped by a fan as he raced down the sideline. The Tiger-Cats beat Winnipeg Blue Bombers 32-7 for the CFL title in that game.

U.S. Open champ Jimmy Connors: Pete Rose of the tennis world

NEW YORK (AP)—The proper and genteel sport of tennis seems the strangest of places to find a dead-end kid like Jimmy Connors.

Most tennis players approach their sport with cool detachment. They check their emotions at the door, rarely putting them on display on the court.

Some, like Czechoslovakian Ivan Lendl, seem to put themselves on automatic pilot, progressing through matches and tournaments as though they were mechanical men.

Then there is Connors, who scrapes and scrambles his way through matches, cheering his good shots, punctuating points with clenched fists that punch the air. He's like a fan on the court. He plays tennis the way Pete Rose plays baseball — with pizzazz.

When Lendl suffered a double fault while serving for the third set against Connors in the United States Open championship recently his computer program didn't quite know how to handle the adversity.

"If you make a mistake like that, you don't deserve to win a match," said the mechanical man.

That's a classic example of black and white thinking: If I can't be perfect, I'll just be perfectly awful.

Instead of trying to recover, Lendl's solution to his problem was a total collapse, losing 10 straight games and the match as his hollow eyes took on a haunted look.

Minor hockey players to get drug kits

TORONTO (CP) — Pee wee hockey players across Ontario will be receiving more than a registration card when they sign up this fall — they'll also be given a kit warning of the dangers of alcohol and drug abuse.

The kit, produced by a non-profit organization called Alcohol and Drug Concerns Inc., is aimed at 11- and 12-year-old players because those are the ages at which many children start experimenting, said company spokesman Cynthia Malik.

"This is not sent out to scare people," Malik said Thursday. "But according to our research, this is the crucial age."

The kit, to be distributed by a number of hockey organizations, including the Ontario Minor Hockey Association, consists of a brightly labelled plastic bag containing four booklets.

One is a comic book which tells of a pee wee player tempted by an older boy to try drugs and another tells the story of how former Toronto Maple Leaf defenceman Jim McKenny became addicted to alcohol.

Malik said the kit is being distributed to hockey players because it was felt it would reach more children that way.

She said if it was distributed through the schools, the material might not reach the children.

"Hockey reaches more kids," she said. "That's not to say that there's more addiction problems in hockey."

Raider defence keeps Monday record going

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lyle Alzado says he and his teammates on the Los Angeles Raiders' defence are a little different. But they are very good, as Miami Dolphins have learned.

The Raiders downed Miami 27-14 Monday night to join Dallas Cowboys as the National Football League's only unbeaten teams.

"Each of the guys on the defence is a little off-centre and there's a great deal of pride," said Alzado, 34, a defensive end. "Your teammates beat you up trying to get to the ball. It's a very overpowering defence."

The Raiders have given up only three touchdowns and only 30 points overall in beating Cincinnati, Houston and Miami. All three of those TDs came after Los Angeles had assured itself of victory.

The Dolphins, who had only nine first downs until the final few minutes Monday night, got their touchdowns on a six-yard pass from rookie quarterback Dan Marino to tight end Joe Rose with 2:29 remaining and a two-yard pass from Marino to Mark Duper with 20 seconds left.

Before that, nothing. As a result, the defending American Football Conference champion Dolphins fell to 2-1 and the Raiders improved their incredible Monday night record to 20-2-1 since prime-time football came into being in 1970.

Probably the key play of the game occurred late in the third quarter, and it was provided by the Los Angeles defence.

LOSES THE BALL

The Raiders led 13-0, but the Dolphins were in a third-and-six situation at the Los Angeles 21-yard line. Miami quarterback David Woodley went back to pass, but was separated from the ball by blitzing linebacker Rod Martin.

Rookie Los Angeles defensive end Greg Townsend scooped the ball up at the Raiders' 34-yard line and dashed 66 yards for a touchdown, making it 20-0 and all but sealing the outcome.

The Raiders had taken their 13-0 lead on a two-yard run by Frank Hawkins with 2:53 remaining in the first quarter and a 14-yard pass from quarterback Jim Plunkett to tight end Todd Christensen with nine seconds left before halftime.

Greg Pruitt's five-yard scoring run with 5:15 left made it 27-0.

Despite being sacked five times, Plunkett completed 11 of 15 passes for 162 yards and wasn't intercepted. He attempted only one pass in the second half. Los Angeles running back Marcus Allen was the game's leading ground gainer with 105 yards on 22 carries.

Woodley completed 10 of 18 passes for 144 yards before being replaced by Marino after the final Los Angeles touchdown. Woodley was sacked three times and threw one interception. Marino hit on 11 of 17 passes for 90 yards.

The leading rusher for the Dolphins was fullback Andra Franklin, who was held to 34 yards on 11 carries.

Sport shorts

DALLAS (AP) — Running back Tony Dorsett of Dallas Cowboys only has a bruised right knee, not a ligament stretch as feared and is a probable starter for the National Football League game Sunday against New Orleans Saints.

Dorsett limped off the field in the 28-13 victory last Sunday over New York Giants.

He was examined thoroughly by Dr. Marvin Knight, who said the swelling in the knee was minimal.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota Vikings quarterback Tommy Kramer underwent knee surgery Monday to repair a ligament torn in the game Sunday with Tampa Bay Buccaneers, coach Bud Grant said.

"Obviously, he's out for the year, but the prognosis is good," said Grant. "It's not as severe as many we've seen."

Grant said five-year veteran Steve Dils, who led the Vikings to a 19-16 victory after Kramer left the game Sunday, will start the next game.

Leading Universities, including the University of Alberta, University of California at Berkeley, and Pepperdine University sponsored this exact Cossman Program. Here's what some of the Seminar Graduates had to say ...

Manufacturer

I made a plexiglass stand to hold calculators. I took this stand directly from the seminar out into the world and sold about 1,750,000 of them by using the Cossman Methods.

Victor Cummins

Salesman

Thanks to the Cossman Seminar, I learned how to get exclusive rights to a product without tooling or manufacturing it. As a result, I made over $100,000 with a toy that the inventor had abandoned.

Larry Lott

Housewife

I started a business in the garage. Then attended the Cossman Seminar. Now making over two million dollars per year by using the marketing methods I learned.

Betty Chapin

Exporter

I was always interested in foreign trade but didn't know how to get into it until the Cossman Seminar. The seminar showed me how to sell everything from golf clubs to candy all over the world.
