FIRE!—Prompt action on the part of the local volunteer fire brigade and other citizens prevented the destruction by fire of Thos. Shore's Marble Works, on Sunday night. Shortly before ten o'clock, someone noticed smoke and flames issuing from a window on the upper flat of the building towards the rear end, and a general alarm was given which was quickly responded to, and chemical extinguishers got into action before the hose reels arrived, which was not long, however. A torrent of water poured into the building soon extinguished the blaze. The damage to the building was comparatively slight.

The shop, we are told, had not been heated up since Friday, and nothing wrong with the electrical installation was discovered after the fire, so that its origin is a mystery, if the presence of some boys there during Sunday afternoon does not explain it.

There's just one gift that money can't buy, and only you can give—Your Photograph. You will please your friends at a small expense if you take advantage of our Christmas offer—fourteen photos to the dozen. H. IMISON, Photo Artist.

Close up Deer Hunting

Local nimrods and others from the outlying neighborhood "took the trail" the last few days of the open season, which closed on Friday, to make an onslaught on the deer herds that were known to exist in the wooded sections of Clarendon Front, a rather extensive tract of comparatively wild land, included within the bounds of the largest and most populous township in the county. The week's hunt, shared in by several parties, of two to six or eight men, resulted in the bagging of about a dozen deer, one party having the good fortune to get ten in three days. Others again never "drew a bead," as the saying goes; but that was not owing to the scarcity of game, as scores of tracks were encountered as the hunters tramped the forest, but the deer, either wisely or instinctively, kept out of sight, and could not be induced to take to the open.

Local hunters claim that there are far more deer in the locality just referred to than in remote sections beyond the bounds of settlement, where they are a constant prey to the pot hunters in Summer and the wolves in Winter time. This is because no out-of-season shooting is practiced, and the wolf is an unknown factor in game destruction, so far as is known.

A girl 12 years old, Iron County, Mich., is credited with having clubbed a large wolf to death with a stick, when it attacked her dog.

HENRY'S SHORTHAND SCHOOL

OTTAWA, ONT.

No School in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "The School of Higher Efficiency"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should specifically say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

THE YELLOW SEVEN. THE WISDOM OF RABAT-PILAI

By EDMUND SNELL.
Illustrated by
G. MONTGOMERY FIELD

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Captain John Hewitt is Commissioner of Police at Jesselton, British North Borneo. His sister, Monica Viney, is engaged to marry Peter Pennington, who is detailed by the government to apprehend Chai-Hung, leader of the Yellow Seven, a gang of Chinese bandits. Van Daulen rides to Pennington, hates Chai-Hung bitterly.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Van Daulen turned to the Commissioner.

"Captain Hewitt, I must appeal to you. I've come a long distance to-night to inform you of the seriousness of the position in our territory, not to answer absurd questions."

"Sorry! I thought you two had possibly met before. Van Daulen, this is Pennington. He's responsible for any action taken against Chai-Hung and consequently entitled to ask what questions he chooses. Have you fixed up a room anywhere?"

"I expect there's room for me at the Rest-House, thanks."

"Well, drop in any time after ten tomorrow and we'll talk things over. I'm sorry about poor Domberg. Good night."

He was barely out of earshot when Hewitt swung round on Pennington.

"Rather a blow to your theory, what?"

"Not in the least!"

"You'll never admit when you're wrong," persisted the Commissioner sadly.

"And you'll never admit when I'm right. By the way, keep young Van Daulen in Jesselton as long as you can. I shall be running up to Kasih-ayer tomorrow."

Hewitt drained his glass and made off down the passageway to his room.

"I'll do my best," he shouted back over his shoulder, "but Van Daulen's inclined to be impetuous."

"Peter," Monica demanded when they were alone, "why do you go out of your way to quarrel?"

"I don't."

"But you do, dear. The way you tackled that poor fellow, who'd ridden goodness knows how many miles, made me feel positively uncomfortable. He was dead beat, you know."

"I wonder who discovered the fine metal point in the pen-holder—and decided it had been smeared with poison?"

"You haven't been listening. I don't believe you heard a word I said."

He drew her to him.

"Dear little woman, I've been listening most patiently, but you see it's utterly impossible for you to understand my motives. I'm a queer, jumbled-up piece of machinery, sometimes actuated by reason, sometimes by a sort of sixth sense which Nature gave to me when she presented me with Chinese eyes. That's why I'm here now, it's exactly why your brother sent for me, and it's why I sometimes talk as I do. I'm not like that with you."

"I should hope not indeed!"

"Nor with Jack or Dawson—or even that prince of scarecrows Rabat-Pilai. Do you remember what I was saying before Van Daulen came in? Somebody at Kasih-ayer's in league with Chai-Hung—and I've got to put my finger on him and keep it there. It might be Vance, Whittaker, their chief watchman, their Tamil apothecary; it might, on the other hand, be Van Daulen. I jumped on him right away when, as you say, he was dead-beat. Why? Because at such a time he was less likely to be on his guard."

"You've no earthly reason to suspect him."

"Except," said Pennington dreamily, "that when he stooped to put that pot of yellow paint away a corner of his tunic dipped into it!"

Monica's brain reeled.

"But—"

"He came away without bothering to change. Perhaps you didn't notice, but the bottom corners of his coat curled—and the bulk of the stain was on the under side."

"It's still purely conjecture. He might have gone right up to the sign to examine it—and brushed his jacket against it."

"He might—if he'd troubled to inspect it with a ladder. The Yellow Seven, if you remember, was painted on the side of Domberg's house—and Domberg's bungalow is built on piles ten feet or more above the ground."

She caught both sides of his coat and forced him to look at her.

"Do be careful, Peter, for my sake."

He ran his fingers carelessly through her curls.

"There's no need to be anxious," he said, "for I shan't want to be so very alone. Rabat-Pilai will be hovering in the shadows. Say! have you the remotest idea what the time is?"

She shook her head and there was a wistful look in her eyes.

"It passes so quickly when you are here—and so slowly when you're away on these wretched expeditions. Come back soon, Peter dearest; promise me you'll come back soon."

And Peter Pennington promised.

"Evening, Van Daulen!"

The Dutchman started, almost falling back down the steps of his own veranda. Curled in a chair, a cigarette between his lips and a half-filled tumbler resting in the cavity in the arm, lay Chinese Pennington.

Van Daulen paused with one boot half off.

"Oh! good evening! Thought I'd left you behind in Jesselton."

He blundered past Pennington, found a seat and began unlacing his boots.

"D'you intend stopping here?"

"If I may."

"Certainly—delighted, of course. No need to offer you a drink, I see!"

Two diagonal slits were all that was visible of the Englishman's eyes.

"No thanks. I brought my own!"

Van Daulen paused with one boot half drawn off—and stared hard at his guest.

"You—brought—your—own—whisky?"

The Dutchman choked something back in his throat and discarded the boot. He was evidently ill at ease for, while endeavoring to operate the second pair of laces, he got them hopelessly knotted.

"My boy made you pretty comfortable, I hope?" he jerked out without looking up.

"Brought my own!"

Van Daulen sprang to his feet, a ludicrous figure in one riding-boot and a gray sock.

"Confound it all, Pennington; this is too much of a good thing!"

"And"—added the man with the Chinese eyes—"in case I have occasion to write anything—I've taken the additional precaution of bringing a fountain pen!"

The Dutchman stood for some moments, clenching and unclenching his fists, then dropped heavily back on to his seat.

"If I thought for one moment you meant to imply anything by these extraordinary breaches of etiquette—I'd pitch you and your damned servant into the garden."

Pennington moved a cushion to a more comfortable position.

Van Daulen crossed the floor in his socks and poured himself out a stiff helping of neat spirit.

"Why didn't you put up at Vance's or Whittaker's?"

"Because," said Pennington sweetly, "I had a notion Chai-Hung had selected you for his next victim. I made a most interesting discovery while you were away this afternoon. I succeeded in running to earth a pot of bright yellow paint, a tin of black enamel and two brushes."

Van Daulen spun round on his heel.

"Where?" he demanded thickly.

"Buried a couple of feet down in a neatly boarded recess under your own house."

"Under—my—house?"

Van Daulen leant heavily on the rail.

"May I see those brushes?" he inquired suddenly.

"I'm afraid that's impossible. You see, I sent them down to Hewitt by a special messenger over an hour ago. They're a finger-print expert down there—and paint's a thing that can be easily rubbed off."

There followed a long period of silence during which a lithe, brown-skinned scarecrow, with an ear and eye missing and a mouth slit at either side so that its owner wore a perpetual grin, emerged from the living room and hung a lighted oil lamp on a hook above the table. The Dutchman—still leaning over the wooden rail, filling his pipe from a bag of tobacco—observed the fall of darkness without turning his head. The servant paused on his way out, stared deliberately at Pennington, reciprocated the broad wink that he received—and disappeared.

"That stuff couldn't have got under here without somebody knowing it," said Van Daulen.

"That is my contention. Whoever was responsible for the crime had an accomplice in the house."

The other grunted.

"Appears to lie between my boy—and myself."

"So I took the liberty of arresting the boy."

"The devil you did!"

Ideal Speed Track Found by Irishman

L. T. Scott Told Malcolm Campbell of Mysterious, Flawless Runway in Sahara Desert

Racer Will Fly To Course

London.—Captain Malcolm Campbell, who gained the motor speed record on Daytona Beach in February, only to lose it in April to Ray Keech, proposes to make a long journey to a remote and desolate place in his determination to recapture the honor.

Setting out immediately in a Moth airplane for a secret spot in the middle of the Sahara, Captain Campbell will inspect what is described by its discoverer as the world's ideal speed track. If he finds that it comes up to expectations he will not hesitate about taking his Blue Bird racing car and all the necessary equipment to that out-of-the-way place.

Captain Campbell has given up the idea of making another attempt on the speed record at Daytona Beach. He aims at reaching 220 miles an hour, and he says it would be impossible to attain that speed on Daytona or any other beach.

"The slightest wind would cause sand ripples which would play havoc with a car traveling at so fast a speed," he declares.

A young Irishman, Leonard T. Scott, is the discoverer of this "world's ideal speed track," the exact location of which, for some purpose, is not being disclosed. But it is stated to be nearly 1,000 miles from the coast, beyond the Atlas Mountains, and hundreds of miles from the nearest town.

Mr. Scott, who is one of the few men who have trekked across the desert from Aran to the Niger, says that it is a great plain of sand with surface as smooth as a billiard table, except for some parts of it that are littered with tiny pebbles. Native labor would have to be employed for a number of days to clear a course twelve miles in length by 150 feet wide.

"This plain stretches for 400 miles without even a shrub to break the monotony of the landscape," says Mr. Scott.

The place is so remote from civilization that Captain Campbell would have to transport his car, his mechanics and his supplies of gasoline and oil by motor lorries and camels over hundreds of miles of desert. Water would have to be conveyed to the spot from an oasis on the northern fringe of this vast sterile stretch of sand. This oasis would be Captain Campbell's headquarters.

Captain Campbell intends, if the preliminary survey is satisfactory, to make his attack on the speed record late in December, when, according to Mr. Scott, the temperature at midday does not exceed 100 degrees Fahrenheit and the early morning air is even chilly. The place is not wind swept and the surface of the sand always smooth.

The racer says his test would be checked up by representatives from the French official motor organization. The French military authorities also would be asked to provide special patrols to protect the camp against roving bands of brigands which overrun that part of the desert.—N.Y. Times.

Millions Killed in this War

Ottawa, Canada. — Another victory in the war against insect pests is claimed by the Entomological Branch of the Canadian Federal Department of Agriculture. The location of the latest victory is the prairie provinces—Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Recent official reports state that there is just now a general freedom from insect pests in Western Canada. Grasshoppers which, in former years, have done a share of damage to the crops, have been found scarce this year. The red backed cut worm which has a predilection for the sugar beet crops grown extensively in Southern Alberta has been smitten hip and thigh by the entomologists, who are constantly engaged in war to the death. The Bertha army worm, which feeds on western alfalfa crops, has been attacked relentlessly with a resultant casualty list totalling millions.

The scenes of battles in this war are not limited to Western Canada, but extend throughout the Dominion. There have been engagements with the peach moth, with the corn borer and with insect pests of many varieties. No quarter is given by the scientists in the fight. It is a war which the Kellogg Treaty does not affect, and one in which poisonous gases and lethal powders are used without regard to whatever objections may be laid down by the Hague or any other tribunals.

Mike was an Irish laborer earning good money in Yorkshire, and pot-caring to spend his money on beer, he bought a watch and guard, though he could not tell the time. It was amusing to watch his frequent glances of pride as he was wheeling the barrow. One day his workmates saw him coming on the street, and for a lark told a newcomer to ask Michael the time. "Can you tell me the time?" he asked with courtesy. Michael pulled out his watch, looked at it, then turning it round with face to the questioner, he exclaimed: "Would yer believe it?"

Making Broad-Fronted Advance

Ottawa, Canada.—The record wheat harvest of Canada, aggregating more than five hundred million bushels, draws attention to the fact that agriculture is still the Dominion's leading industry, but the remarkable progress which has been made in recent years in the development of her forest, mineral, water-power, and other resources shows that Canada instead of confining her energies to a few extractive industries is making a broad-fronted advance in many fields of activity.

Ranking second to agriculture in value of products, the forest industries loom large in Canada's economic structure. The growth of pulp and paper production in recent years has been rapid and spectacular and since 1926 the Dominion has been the world's greatest newsprint producer. The erection of new mills and additions to present producers indicate that the Dominion's total will be further increased in the immediate future. The effect of expansion in this as in most of the other industries engaged in the development of the Dominion's natural resources is seen in the growth of towns and cities and in the springing up of new communities. An increasing demand for lumber for export and a slight increase in price have brought about a general improvement in the lumber industry. The mining industry is thriving. Exploratory and prospecting operations are being carried on in practically every province of the Dominion.

The development of Canada's water power resources continues apace. Notwithstanding the gigantic undertakings which have been completed in recent years new projects are adding to the total installations year by year.

The expansion of the forest and mining industries, in which hydropower is playing a large and increasing part, has contributed to the demand for more electrical energy.

The year 1928 marks a period of rapid growth in the economic structure of the Dominion and on every hand there is evidence of the progress being made in exploration development and production.

Canada Paid Tribute to 60,000 War Dead

Tenth Armistice Anniversary Stirs Memories of Her Offer to Send an Expedition to Defend the Empire, and of the Large Army That Went Overseas.

A nation hushed for two minutes! This is the tribute Canada paid to her 60,000 war dead on the tenth anniversary of Armistice Day.

The occasion has lost nothing with the passing of the years, and the silence will be observed by not only those who knew the great war in all its grim reality but by that younger generation which has grown up since and to whom war is only a faint echo rapidly becoming fainter.

The heroes are not forgotten. Who will forget that dramatic day in 1914 when Sir Robert Borden offered to provide an expeditionary force for the defense of the empire? This offer was accepted by the British Government. In response to calls for volunteers, some 40,000 men assembled in a few weeks at Valcartier, where land had been purchased, cleared, drained and otherwise prepared for the assembling and organization of the troops.

The mobilization scheme prepared in 1911 and revised later was ignored, but gradually the troops were formed into units prior to sailing for England. This original contingent consisted of one division of infantry and one brigade of mounted troops, together with lines of communication units. The immortal Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry was an independent unit, recruited throughout Canada.

Surplus troops were organized into an additional—Fourth—brigade and also accompanied the force. The con-years on a voluntary basis, but the voluntary spirit gradually worked itself out and compulsory service was introduced in August, 1917, on the passing of the Military Service Act. By this time the reinforcement situation had become very serious.

Under the voluntary system 258 infantry battalions and thirteen regiments of mounted rifles, together with numerous other formations, had been raised; on the introduction of compulsory service the policy was adopted of passing recruits to depots, the process of forming new units to send to England and be broken up there being abandoned. Altogether, under both systems, 619,636 men were recruited in the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

The official figures on casualties is one of which Canada is proud. The list follows:

Killed (including missing, now presumed dead)	39,433
Died of wounds	12,260
Died, other causes	7,796
Wounded and injured	175,841
Prisoners of war	3,870
Enemy prisoners captured	43,436
Guns captured	664
Trench mortars captured	471
Machine guns captured	3,154
Enlisted in Canadian Expeditionary Force	619,636
Number overseas from Canada	424,539
Served in France and other theatres of the war	344,506

The principal battles in which Canadian troops took part were as follows: In 1915, Ypres, Festubert, Mount Sorrel; in 1916, Somme, including Thiepval, Ancre Heights and Ancre; in 1917, Arras, including Vimy Ridge, Arleux and the Scarpe, Hill 70, Passchendaele, Cambrai (cavalry only), Saint-Quentin (cavalry only), Amiens; in 1918, the Scarpe, Drocourt-Queant line, the battles of the Hindenburg line (including Canal du Nord and Cambrai, 1918), Valenciennes, Sambre and the pursuit to Mons.

In September, 1918, a brigade of tingent, with a total strength of 33,000, began to embark at Quebec on Sept. 22. The thirty-one transports gathered at Gaspe Bay, whence they sailed on Oct. 3 with a naval escort provided by the Admiralty.

The contingent remained encamped at Salisbury Plain during the winter of 1914-15, which proved to be an exceptionally wet one. The First Canadian Division proceeded to France in February, 1915, followed in May and June by the Cavalry Brigade (dismounted) and the Motor Machine Gun Brigade.

Meantime other units were being recruited in Canada and passed on to England. The Second Canadian Division was organized and proceeded to France in September, 1915, and together with the First Division formed the Canadian Corps. The Third Canadian Division was organized in France in December. In August, 1916, the Fourth Division, which had been organized in England, joined the Canadian Corps, and for the rest of the war the corps was maintained on a four-division basis.

Other Canadian Forces
The Fifth Canadian Division, which was formed in England in the early part of 1917, did not proceed to France and eventually, in February, 1918, was broken up and its personnel used as reinforcements, with the exception of the divisional artillery, which went to France intact.

Many units which were used in excess of divisional establishments were depleted and their personnel transferred to reserve formations for use as reinforcements. Other new organizations came into being during the course of the war, such as the Canadian Machine Gun Corps, the Canadian Forestry Corps, the Corps of Canadian Railway Troops, etc., and much expansion and reorganization took place in the Canadian artillery and engineers.

Recruiting in Canada was for three artillery and some details were provided from England for the North Russian front, divided between Archangel and Murmansk. In January, 1919, a force organized in Canada was sent to Siberia, consisting of two battalions of infantry, a battery of artillery and details; in all, 4,136 men.

Four hospital units served in the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force at the Dardanelles (Lemnos) and Salonika, and a bridging company served in Palestine. Forty-one picked Canadian volunteers took part in the Bagdad Mission, known as the Dunsterforce, and practically each man was detailed for an isolated mission in the vicinity of the Caspian Sea.

Defence Against Failure

There is no end to the sufficiency of character. It can afford to wait; it can do without what is called success; it cannot but succeed. To a well-principled man, existence is victory. He defends himself against failure in his main design by making every inch of the road to it right. There is no trifle and no obscurity to him; he feels the immensity of the chain whose lost link he holds in his hand, and is led by it. Having nothing, this spirit hath all. It makes no stipulations for earthly felicity—does not ask, in the absoluteness of its trust, even for the assurance of continued life.—R. W. Emerson.

Worry

It is not work that kills men; it is worry. Work is healthy; you can hardly put more upon a man than he can bear. Worry is rest upon the blade. It is not the revolution that destroys the machinery, but the friction.—Henry Ward Beecher.

A Thankful Heart

A thankful heart is not only the greatest virtue, but the parent of all the other virtues.—Cicero.

Sea Disaster Laid to Delay in Asking Aid

Captain Remained With Ship in Accordance With Law of Sea

New York.—The steamer Vestris sank when only about 80 of its 328 passengers and crew had been launched, after two boatloads of women and children had been hurled into the sea, and while the rest were leaping from the ship's sides and swimming fast lest they be dragged down with the foundering hulk.

Survivors brought here declared that the traditions of the sea had been scrupulously observed as to giving first thought to women and children, and they told an appealing story of inadequate preparation for disaster.

The first two boats were filled with women and children—there were 37 women and 13 children on board—and the crew started to lower away. Then the sinking ship lurched, the boats crashed against its side and women and children were tumbled into the waves. Reports indicate that all the children perished and but 10 of the women were rescued.

Began to List Saturday

On the whole, the 125 survivors arriving here on the American Shipper and the 23 on the Berlin agreed that in intention the officers and crew of the Vestris had been beyond criticism, but many of them blamed the captain, who went down with his ship, for indecision which they saw as one principal reason for the large number of fatalities believed to total 108.

The ship began to list on Saturday night, they said, and its condition grew more serious steadily throughout Sunday, and yet no distress call was sent until the middle of Monday morning, and as a result no rescue ships were on the scene until many hours after the ship sank at 1.30 that afternoon.

Many persons declared that when the captain did decide to abandon ship, shortly after the first SOS call, the tackle of the lifeboats was found to be faulty. It took hours to lower them, the ones with the women and children were crashed, and another was stove in and put away with a gaping hole in its side.

Vessel Sank Suddenly

Only two boats were successfully launched, although others broke loose as the ship sank and were caught by swimming survivors. The greater number of passengers and crew had to fling themselves into the water. One man told of seeing the ship sink two minutes after he jumped from the deck and there was a general feeling that others may not have jumped in time and were carried down with the captain.

Of those who did get into the water and survive the actual sinking of the ship, the majority of those eventually rescued were members of the crew, the greatest loss being among the passengers. This was thought to have some explanation in the theory that the crew were men accustomed to hard labor, more able to withstand the hardship of the long hours in the waves, and not to any general effort on the part of the crew to take positions of comparative safety in the boats rightfully belonging by the law of the sea to the passengers.

Knowledge is Power

"Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Does this not suggest the reason why some are unhappy and why all are not equally happy? Many have been delinquent in developing their minds and hearts to entertain happiness. They have had no time and no enthusiasm for getting wisdom, for discovering truth. Vessels may be equally full, but the large holds more than the small. Yea, knowledge is power, but knowledge alone is not happiness. The man who spends all his time in acquiring knowledge finds himself at last exhausted and standing still, with the heights of happiness yet far away. There is pleasure, often acute pleasure, in acquiring wisdom. There is no happiness in knowledge without action. Knowledge without action is like steam generated, but carried off on the bosom of the wind, unharnessed and uncontrolled. It is like the blossom in the springtime, for the moment beautiful, but disappointing when no fruit appears.—Daniel Poling.

All desperate hazards courage do create. As he plays frankly who has least estate; Presence of mind, and courage in distress, Are more than armies to procure success.—Dryden.

Blessings

The private blessings—the blessings of immunity, safeguard, liberty and integrity—which we enjoy, deserve the thankfulness of a whole life.—J. Collier.

Education

What is the true purpose of education? To make plain to the young the laws of the life they will have to enter. For example, that lying won't do;—thieving still less; that idleness will get punished; that if they are cowards the whole world will be against them; that if they will have their own way they must fight for it.—Arthur Hugh Clough.

League "Shop Talk"

Committees are Active at League Headquarters—Many Problems Being Investigated by Experts at Geneva

Although the Assembly of the League of Nations, which brings so many statesmen, journalists and observers from the four corners of the earth to Geneva, concluded its sittings some time ago, the Swiss city still hums with activity, writes a correspondent of "Interdependence," monthly review of the League of Nations Society of Canada, published at Ottawa. Commissions, committees, sub-committees and various bodies are constantly in session delving into various abstruse international problems whose very character are generally so complex and technical that they baffle the common lay observer. But not a little that is romantic and interesting is buried beneath the mass of "shop-talk" that goes on.

The difficulty of collecting taxes from the natives in Western Samoa and the work of the secret "Citizen Committee" busy broadcasting false and fantastic news, were described, for instance, to the Mandates Commission, to whom report the various nations under whose control various remote and uncivilized areas have been placed. A report upon his stewardship was also given to this body by Mr. Werth, Administrator of the territory of Southwest Africa. Railways were functioning, the port of Walvis Bay has grown and prospered, and conditions have greatly improved, he said.

Hoping that the customs authorities of the countries of the world may be encouraged to call a spade a spade metaphorically—in all languages, a special sub-committee of experts

Daily Life

The daily life into which people are born, and into which they are absorbed before they are aware, forms chains, which only one in a hundred has moral strength enough to despise and to break when the right time comes—when an inward necessity for independent action arises, which is superior to all outward conventionalities.—Mrs. Gaskell. (Ruth.)

Thankfulness

There is this difference between a thankful and an unthankful man: the one is always pleased in the good he has done, and the other only in what he has received; but there are some men who are never thankful.—A. Monod.

Nobility

Anything in any wise beautiful or noble, owes the beauty to itself, and with itself its beauty ends; praise forms no part of it. . . . true beauty needs no addition, any more than law, or truth, or kindness, or self-respect.—Marcus Aurelius.

THE EQUITY.

SHAWVILLE, DEC. 6, 1928.

Hon. Rodolph Monty, a prominent figure in the Conservative councils of this province and Secretary of State in the Meighen cabinet of 1921, died suddenly at St. Hyacinthe on Saturday last.

Senator John Webster, of Brockville, at one time Conservative member for that town in the House of Commons, died on Saturday after several weeks' illness. He was 72 years of age. Senator Webster's death leaves four vacancies in the Red Chamber.

That deep concern is felt throughout the British Empire, in consequence of the grave illness through which King George is passing, was manifested on Sunday in the special prayers that were offered up in all Churches for his recovery.

W. C. Cowell, an inspector of immigration stationed at Vancouver, states that of the 100,000 Chinese in this Dominion 60,000 are located in Vancouver, whose total population is now estimated at 600,000. Too many Chinks to the square mile, most white people will think, for the moral uplift of that great coastal city.

"Prosperous at the moment through sale of raw materials which ought to be manufactured at home, Canada is following a bent which leads to destruction of her economic life, and it is the mission of the Conservative party to bring about a realization of the fact that the disposal of natural resources never yet made a people great." This was the message of the Hon. R. B. Bennett, Dominion leader, in a vigorous speech to Ontario Conservatives at their annual banquet held in Toronto recently.

WEALTH AND PUBLIC SERVICE.

Edmonton Journal.

Gen. McRae has disposed of his extensive business interests and intends to devote all his time in the future to public life. The qualifications that he possesses for such service have been fully demonstrated in recent years, first in the politics of British Columbia, and later as a member of the House of Commons. Immigration is the subject to which he has given his chief attention which was only natural, as he came to the fore through the settlement work that he did in the pre-war period. The thoroughness with which he is preparing himself for dealing with the problem was shown by the extensive tour of investigation that he made in Northern Alberta and British Columbia during the past season.

It is a cheering sign of the times for Canada that a citizen in his position prefers to give himself up to such activities rather than to those that appeal to the majority of men of wealth. He regards his material success as involving responsibilities to the country in which he has won it, and too few Canadians, placed as he is, have adopted that attitude.

THE PEACE RIVER BOOM.

Manitoba Free Press.

Within the last ten months the population of the Peace River country has almost doubled, according to the Grande Prairie Herald. There is a continual rush for homestead land. During October alone 260 persons filed on land at the Grande Prairie Office, compared with 37 in the corresponding month last year. The paper estimates that 535,000 acres of land were under crop this year. Next year it expects to see 900,000 acres under the plow, and by 1932 it suggests two-and-a-half million acres will be in cultivation.

It has been estimated that every new settler in Western Canada brings $746 in gross revenues to the railways. This year, the Herald considers that 4,000 new families have moved into the Peace River district. This should make an increase of almost three million dollars in the gross revenues of the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway. The Canadian Pacific, it would seem, made no mistake when it accepted Premier Brownlee's terms for the purchase of the road.

William Miller, a member of Renfrew Town Council, has been appointed inspector of colonization roads in succession to the late Henry N. Moss. He will have jurisdiction in Renfrew, leaving somebody else to look after those of Lanark county, which county was for some time linked up in that respect with Renfrew.

Mrs. R. J. Millar, president, presided. Mrs. George Ross, wife of Dr. Ross, of Erskine Presbyterian Church, Ottawa, was their special speaker. She gave a very interesting address on her work as a missionary in British Guiana, and of the splendid work our Women's Missionary Societies are doing in our home and mission fields.

During the Offering Miss Phyllis Kenny sang two very appropriate solos—"Give Thanks to God," and "Teach Us to Pray."

A splendid offering of $132.25 was received.

Mrs. Harry Cowan Killed in Automobile Accident.

One person was killed and three others were injured when their automobile skidded on the icy Montreal-Ottawa highway near Wendover, Ont., on Monday night of last week, and turned over completely, pinning the victims under the wreckage.

Those in the automobile were Mrs. Harry Cowan, of Alexandria, who suffered a broken neck and died almost instantly; her husband, her son Jack, and a niece. The last three suffered from minor injuries.

Mr. Cowan was at the wheel, driving from Ottawa, where the party had been visiting, to the Cowan home in Alexandria. The accident occurred at a curve and was blamed on the slippery condition of the highway. After the accident Dr. Tweedle, of Rockland, was summoned, but Mrs. Cowan was beyond aid. Dr. Powers, of Rockland, coroner, was informed of the case and held an inquest. The body was taken to Buckingham and the funeral was held from the home of her brother, Dr. J. D. Sicard, on Wednesday.

Mrs. Cowan had resided in the Ottawa Valley nearly all her life and had a host of friends at Alexandria, where she had lived for several years. She is survived by her husband, one son, Jack; one daughter, Miss Isobel Cowan, of New York, and three brothers and four sisters.

This is the second fatal motor accident to occur in the Cowan family. A son, Leroy, was killed about a year ago near Cornwall.

AN ENGLISH HEROINE.

Gave Her Life Trying to Rescue Drowning Man.

English people have been thinking with pride of a brave girl who has died in France. She was Betty Ledger, a girl of nineteen, of Kent, England, living with mother in Boulogne.

Betty was a fine swimmer. She knew most of the currents of the coast near Boulogne. As she was strolling with her mother along the shore a French workman was walking and laughing at his dog playing king of the castle with the waves. Going a little too far out the dog was swept away, and the workman dashed into the shallow water after it. Betty and her mother stayed to watch, and were horrified to see the man swept off his feet.

Without an instant's hesitation Betty plunged in after him and struck out with bold strokes to the place where the man's head was bobbing up and down. She had almost reached him when the current caught her. Betty struggled hard, watched in agony by her mother, who could only stand still on the shore.

There were now two heads bobbing up and down in the waves, and groups of watchers standing on either side of the stricken woman. Someone dashed by. It was an Englishman, Mr. Sidney Springay. He plunged into the sea, but could not get near the girl or the man she had gone out to save. He was flung against the breaker and his breathless, bruised body was drawn back by a rope to shore.

Farther and farther out the tossing waves carried the struggling pair, and when the boats went to their rescue it was too late. They had gone down, and Betty, who had left home laughing with her mother an hour before, is now among the heroes, those who gave all to save others.

OBITUARY

Death of Mrs. Thos. Macfarlane

On Monday, Oct. 29th, 1928, there died in the front part of the Township of Clarendon, County Pontiac, Que., Christina MacLaren, widow of the late Thomas Macfarlane.
She had suffered considerably for some years, and death came as a happy release, that she might rejoin, across the valley of the shadow of death, many much loved ones who had preceded her into God's morning land.

In the Autumn of 1871, Thomas Macfarlane, with a couple of his brothers, conducted lumbering operations amongst the red pine of Ross township, Ont. There he met Christina MacLaren, a beautiful young woman of eighteen. It was a case of love at first sight with both of them, a love that never faltered or failed throughout all the passing years. Next year, when Christina MacLaren was nineteen years of age, and as beautiful a woman in face and form and disposition, as one could meet in all the Ottawa Valley, she and Thos. Macfarlane were married, and went immediately to live on the old Macfarlane homestead. There as wife and mother, and as hostess to all friends, she upheld the finest traditions of the old home for cordiality and hospitality. Three daughters and one son were born to them. Two daughters and the son still survive.
But Mary died as a child; and when the hymn, "If we knew the baby fingers pressed against the window pane, would be cold and stiff tomorrow, never trouble us again," was being sung the father and mother let their tears flow quietly down. It was the father's selection. Deep grief filled the hearts of father and mother as the little form was prepared for burial.

Their other children are still living, Jeannie, now a widow in Idaho, U.S.A.; Margaret, in Bristol, Mrs. H. G. Young; and James Roy, on the old homestead, which has been in the family more than one hundred years. There are also surviving one brother, Peter MacLaren, of Renfrew; and two sisters, Mrs. Ferguson, of Ross township, and Mrs. J. D. Macfarlane, of Ottawa.

When some years ago, Thomas Macfarlane died, and the bond that had linked him and his wife had been snapped, Mrs. Macfarlane never could get over the blow. It followed her as a deep grief as long as she lived. Now Christina MacLaren has joined, in the land of Light and Love, the baby she lost and the husband for whom she has so deeply grieved.

PALACE OF SURPRISES.

Rooms of Big Hotel Furnished After Styles of Different Nations.

In addition to being the Empire's tallest and largest hotel, the Royal York, now fast nearing external completion, promises to be a palace of surprises as well. Recently Architect R. H. Macdonald of Montreal paid a visit to Toronto and as a result further details concerning the interior equipment of the great building were made known.

In all some fourteen rooms of the hotel will be furnished after the styles of different nationalities in order that overseas visitors or those with a particular flair for some special kind of furnishing may feel quite at home. There will be Dutch, French, Italian, Spanish, Norwegian, Indian,
Japanese, Chinese and other suites,
all carried out with the greatest care that they reflect the true atmosphere of the country they represent. The furnishings for these rooms are one of the problems the small army of interior decorators have to face and all the articles installed will be imported from the various countries represented.

Particular attention is also being given now to the royal suite of the Royal York. This will occupy a whole floor and will be so designed that should two members of a reigning family visit Toronto at the same time it can be divided up into two complete units for their accommodation.

Another valuable and interesting feature will be the library. As planned at present this will contain at least 5,000 volumes and probabilities are these will be chosen by no less an expert than Dr. George H. Locke, chief librarian of Toronto, whose reputation is international.

The books included will be the latest and best novels, books on travel, biographies, classical works and books of reference. A conservative estimate of the cost of such a library is $25,000.

The Future in Russia

A certain amount of new light is shed on the mystery of present-day conditions in Russia, by some of the papers in the latest Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. The information therein contained does not suggest much hope that the territory now administered by the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is likely to modify its economic and political views and systems in the near future. Private systems in the urban areas, which was tolerated after the first attempt at universal socialism because the state machinery was not sufficient for looking after all the irritating details of small retail business, is not expanding but rather contracting, as the state becomes a more efficient competitor.

The private ownership and private operation of the farms is a mere concession to the agriculturists to make them more productive. The Soviets realize perfectly that it is inconsistent with their essential doctrines, but they hold that it is unimportant because the grant of property to the farmer is not accompanied by the grant of political power. The farmer may make money—by producing the things that the Soviet wants him to produce. But he can only go on making money, and can only retain what he has made, just so long as the Soviet, which alone possesses political power, is willing to allow him to do so. Just as soon as there is a sufficient number of Communists to carry on the agricultural operations of the country, or to see that they are carried on, upon Communist principles, just so soon will the private-ownership farmer be sent to the right-about. If he shows any reluctance to part with his gains, the same methods will doubtless be applied to him as were applied to the bourgeois of the cities and the great landowners.

There is not, in this view of the case, much hope for a collapse of Communism through the growth within the Communistic structure of a strong individualistic interest. As well predict the destruction of a slavery system because some of the slaves are being so well fed, with a view to doing their masters' work, that they are getting fat and powerful.

The comparatively small size of the urban population in Russia, and the concentration of all political power in its hands, is setting up what is virtually an aristocracy, the aristocracy of the factory workers, who are rapidly developing the common characteristics of aristocracy, namely, a profound contempt for those outside of their own class and a determination not to give them any share of political power. The mere possession of wealth by a few farmers can have no significance in such a community; for wealth without the political power to preserve it is a mere shadow.

To the Russian agricultural peasant, who has not even enjoyed a shadow of wealth until very recently, this temporary and defenceless wealth is doubtless pleasant enough; but it is no kind of foundation for the restoration of a political state based upon property rights. Russia could go on for a hundred years with all its farmers strong individualists, and if the control of the strategic trades, the army and the engines of government remained during that period in the hands of the members of the Soviets the general policy of the country would continue to be perfectly communistic.

It does not follow that the Communism of Russia must necessarily be for all time a missionary Communism, engaged in trying to upset all foreign governments based on individualism. There is really no more reason why a Communist State should not exist at peace with individualist States than why a Republic should not exist at peace with kingdoms. All that is necessary is that each side should make up its mind that it is possible to live with the other side. In the early days of Communism it was imperative for the leaders to promise that the world should be converted to the new doctrine within a short time, and handy to blame all the sufferings of the period on the enmity of the individualist countries. These motives become less potent with time; and should the Russians ever show a willingness to allow the other countries of the world to conduct their economic affairs in their own way, there seems to be very little reason why those countries should not permit the Russians the same privilege.

The repudiation of the old Russian debt is not really a serious obstacle; it was not the repudiation that horrified a world sufficiently accustomed to that sort of thing, but the doctrine of the disregard of all debts, by which it was justified. A debtor may plead that he cannot pay, or that he has paid, or that his particular debt does not exist; he must not plead, as the Russians did, that no debt whatever has any existence.

Steamed apple pudding is a favorite in many homes, and has the advantage of being both easily and quickly prepared. Wash and cut apples into thin slices in the bottom of a well buttered baking dish. Steam until soft but not until fruit has lost its shape. Pour over this a dropped batter made of ordinary biscuit dough, allowing sweetening as follows: 2 tablespoonfuls sugar to 1 cup of flour. When steamed invert pudding on serving dish and sprinkle with fruit sugar. Serve with plain or whipped cream.

Fried apples with sausages. Fry sausages in the usual way, pricking well with a fork. Have ready a number of large, firm, tart, red apples, cored but not pared. Cut into rings an inch thick. When sausages are fried turn onto a hot platter and fry the apples in the sausage fat. Garnish sausages with the apples and serve at once.

Spiced Apple Jelly. Wash and quarter apples without removing cores or skins. Cover with a solution made of one part vinegar to three parts cold water. Boil until soft. Strain through a jelly bag. Allow equal measures of juice and granulated sugar. Add stick cinnamon and whole cloves. Boil until the jelly stage is reached (220 degrees Fahrenheit), strain through double cheese cloth, pour into hot sterilized glasses and cover with paraffin.

Apples in casserole. Pare, core and slice one quart of apples. Place in a casserole alternately with three-quarters of a cup of sugar. Add a little cold water to cover bottom of dish. Cover and bake until tender in a moderate oven. Serve either hot or cold with plain or whipped cream. This is a good way to utilize fruit which has imperfections.

Determination

If you want to do a thing badly enough, if you are dead-in-earnest enough, you can do whatever in reason you want to do. But merely wishing to do a thing, provided it won't cost too much, won't call for too much sacrifice, won't require too much work, won't keep you out of your easy chair too much, will not help you.

My friend, that is the sort of spirit which never gets anywhere. You must fling your life into your vocation with all your might. You must resolve to be somebody with all your might, or you will never win out in any large way.

If you want to stay down with the little fellows, the men who get their living from the neck down, or who only use a little bit of themselves above their necks, you will get through the world with comparatively little brain effort. If you will use the muscle instead of the brain, you must make the muscle pay; the muscle preparation means the muscle success.

Where the Great Captain Cook Died

A private letter from an English naval officer, from Honolulu, briefly describes the commemoration of Captain Cook's centenary in the Hawaii Islands, of which he was the discoverer.

"We are now," he says, "celebrating the hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Cook's discovery of these islands on January 18, 1778. The celebrations had to be postponed till the summer, as the wind is so uncertain during the winter months and very big seas are experienced on the coast."

"We arrived from Fiji on August 11 and found H.M.S. Cornwall here from England and H.M.A.S. Brisbane from Australia. On Wednesday we left in the evening for Waimea, a small port in the island of Kauai, which is the spot where Captain Cook first landed on January 13, 1778. There was quite a squadron collected here—our three cruisers, Pennsylvania, flying Mr. Davis's flag, four U. S. submarines, and two U. S. destroyers, all to do honor to the memory of this English sailor."

"A monument has been recently erected here to mark the event, and this was unveiled on Thursday with due ceremony, the surroundings being kept clear by platoons of seamen from the cruisers and Pennsylvania. Several speeches were delivered, and then the memorial was unveiled by two Hawaiian children, and the British officers laid a wreath on the monument inscribed with the names of England, Australia, and New Zealand. A national salute of twenty-one guns was then fired by all ships present, and the National Anthems of U. S. and England brought the ceremony to a close."

"We were then driven all over the island and entertained at a native lunch or 'luau,' i.e., feast of food cooked in hot stones by the Hawaiians—much the same as we have had in other islands, but more civilized. We got back to our ships at 4 p.m. and sailed at 5 p.m. for Kealahou Bay in the island of Hawaii, where Cook

Our Canadian Apples

By Jenny Wynne, in the Ottawa Journal.

"I believe our Canadian apples to be the finest in the world."—Sir George Foster.

As this season of "mists and mellow fruitfulness" draws to a close our thoughts turn to our wonderful heritage of luscious Canadian apples, for kind Nature, "conspiring . . . to load and bless with fruit the vines that round the thatch-eaves run, to bend with apples the mossed cottage trees, and fill all fruit with ripeness to the core," has sent us a rich harvest indeed.

Sad to say, however, all too few Canadian housewives make a sufficient use of this native "King of Fruits," choosing in its place some of the more highly advertised foreign-grown fruits. This ignorance or indifference on their part results in smaller demand for our own fruit, and increases the sale of foreign products.

If we could all make it a point when planning meals to include daily use of the apple, not only would we be doing our bit to boost Canadian horticulture, but we would also soon notice the beneficial effect from the health standpoint, and the lessened strain on the food allowance. Other arguments in favor of the apple are that it lends itself to more diversified ways of preparation than any fruit. There is considerable truth in the old adage that "an apple a day keeps the doctor away" and "an apple at night makes the dental bill light."

Apples are best when eaten raw. When they are at the proper degree of ripeness, the cellulose and acids are present in moderate amounts, exerting mild stimulation on the intestinal walls. If unripe the cellulose content is much greater, the carbohydrates, which constitute nearly all the solid matter in the fruit, are present in the form of starch instead of sugar, and there is an excess of acid, all of which may prove irritating to digestive processes.

The following varieties are to be recommended for desert purposes: Wealthy, Fameuse, McIntosh Red, Spy and King. Varieties recognized as excellent for cooking purposes include: Alexander, Wealthy, St. Lawrence (both summer and winter varieties), Greening, Baldwin, Gravenstein, Spy, Golden Russet, Blue Pearmain, Blenheim, etc.

Baked apples make a most versatile dish, equally appropriate for serving at the breakfast, luncheon, dinner, or supper, and when properly prepared and daintily served make an instant appeal.

Select large, firm, highly colored apples, tart and of pronounced flavor. Core and pare about one quarter of the way down if desired, otherwise make a cross through the skin at the stem end with a sharp knife. Place in a pan and pour over a syrup made by boiling together for five minutes one part of sugar to one and one-half parts of water. Cover closely and bake in a moderately hot oven until tender yet unbroken. Frequent basting is required. Remove cover, sprinkle pared portion with sugar and fill cavity with sugar to which has been added a dash of cinnamon. Place apples under a broiler flame or at the top of a very hot oven for a few minutes. This melts the sugar and coats the apple with a most appetizing golden color. The fruit may be served immediately, or if preferred allow it to become chilled and serve with either plain or whip-was killed when he landed there on February 14, 1778.

The ceremonies at Kealahou Bay took place, and were, we all thought, most impressive. We landed at 8 a.m. and formed our guards up round Cook's monument at the village of Kawaaloa, where he was killed whilst endeavoring to induce the King to come on board Resolution, as hostage for the return of Discovery's cutter which had been stolen during the night. The monument stands on British territory. The small enclosure surrounding the monument having been given to Great Britain by the Queen of Hawaii in 1823 (the first centenary). It was a fine sight to see the British seamen and marines and the American sailors surrounding the monument, the delegates and naval officers inside, the whole located in very pretty scenery on the black lava shore with the swell rolling in heavily and lovely feathery trees overhead.

"We then moved along about 50 yards to the spot where Cook fell when stabbed in the back. He fell into the water, and the spot is now marked by a bronze plate under the water except at lowest tide. It was unveiled on this occasion, the ceremony being completed by a salute of 21 guns from all ships present, and then by the last post played by our assembled buglers."

"We then went over to the other Bay to Napoopoo, where the first Christian burial took place in Hawaii of one of Cook's men, William Whetman, of the gunner's party. A monument has been erected to his memory which has been unveiled. Then up into the mountains to a 'luau,' where 5,000 people sat down to feed at once."

FORTUNATE IF FREE OF BLADDER CAMPION

Presence of this Weed in Any Clover Prevents Crop Grading Top

Fortunate are those growers whose clover fields are free of bladder campion. This weed was placed in the primary noxious class, at the recent meeting of the Seed Advisory Board at Ottawa, which means that any seed containing it cannot grade No. 1 for sale in Canada. Although many of these weed seeds can be removed by modern cleaning machinery there is always a portion about the same size and weight as the clover seed and this fact explains why buyers are not anxious to bid at all on seed from fields infested by this very serious weed.

"We have great fear of the spread of bladder campion," states W. J. W. Lennox of the Dominion Seed Branch, "as it is a perennial, very difficult to eradicate, and each plant produces thousands of seeds, it may be considered one of our most serious weeds. If we are to maintain our high reputation in the production of clover seed it is essential that growers make a determined effort to combat this growing menace. In those favored clover sections where this weed is as yet unknown, growers are fortunate and should find seed growing a profitable business, but they should be very careful in purchasing seed of any description that the same does not contain any seeds of this weed. Where there are only a few plants of bladder campion individual treatment is recommended. By this I do not mean simple mowing the thing down as this is often worse than useless, causing the weeds to branch out and raise more seeds than would have been the case had it not been cut, but to thoroughly eradicate each specimen. The plants should be dug out and burned or cut off deep below the surface of the soil and some salt sprinkled over the portion of the roots remaining. This may seem like a big job, an dit is a big job, but bladder campion is a mighty serious weed."

Less than one half of our domestic requirements of red clover seed, it is pointed out, are produced in Canada, principally in Ontario where bladder campion has become widely distributed. With this weed considered primary noxious, and none allowed in grade No. 1, about 85 per cent. of the Ontario red clover seed will have to be graded No. 2 and No. 3, or designated rejected and prohibited from sale in Canada. This means that a part of our northern-grown red clover seed will be exported to other countries where it is much in demand because of its winter hardiness. The demand in Canada is principally for seed that will grade No. 1 and to meet this demand red clover seed will have to be imported from France, Poland, New Zealand and other countries. Much seed from these countries has been used in recent years and has proven adaptable.

Says Britain Not Asking for Advice

Lork Birkenhead Sharply Critical of Coolidge's Speech

London.—The Earl of Birkenhead, until recently Secretary of State for India, was sharply critical of the Armistice Day speech of President Coolidge in an address at a recent complimentary dinner tendered him.

"I thought there underlay in that speech a spirit of patronage and a capacity for giving to Europe and to England," the Earl said. "As far as England is concerned, I am not sure that we specially require it. We have not asked the United States, as far as I am aware, to do anything for us." Asserting that the United States entered the war not from any desire to assist the Allies, but solely because American nationals were being murdered by German submarines, he said: "My answer to the President of the United States would be that we ask nothing from them except good will. When we discuss questions of naval construction, we do not specially invite lectures as to whether we are pacific or not a nour purpose."

"Placating the Implacable"

Britannia (London): The South African Union has always had a different relation vis-a-vis the rest of the Empire from any other Dominion. Canada might conceivably leave the Empire without bringing down the rest of the fabric. The secession of South Africa would cut in half our only assured line of communication with India, Australasia and the Far East. South Africa is the "clasp of the Imperial girdle." England acquired it by every conceivable title—conquest, cession and purchase. So long as she is responsible for India and has to keep touch with the Australasian Dominions, so long will she resist every means in her power, any attempt of South Africa to secede from the Empire.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS ALWAYS IN THE HOME

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she always keeps a supply on hand, for the first trial convinces her there is nothing to equal them in keeping children well. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach, thus driving out constipation and indigestion, colds and simple fevers and making teething easier. Concerning them, Mrs. Saluste Pelletier, St. Dumas, Que., writes:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past ten years and am never without them in the house. They have always given the greatest satisfaction and I can gladly recommend them to all mothers of little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or direct by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Empire Preference

Rockhampton Bulletin (Queensland): Empire preference, to be anything more than a mere sounding board for windy orators, has to effectively protect the markets of the Dominions in Britain for raw products and foodstuffs, as well as the markets in the Dominions for British manufactured goods. Nothing short of that will count.

Horrors of War Depicted by Memorial in Germany

A war memorial that is not a glorification but a scathing denunciation of war and martial deeds has been erected at Ettingen, Baden.

In the Town Hall tower, surmounted by a baroque helmet, one side of the wall is adorned with a haut relief depicting all the gruesome horrors and destructiveness of war. Symbolized death riding a black horse is seen swinging a blood-dripping scythe as his animal tramples on a mass of human beings and on soldiers engaged in fierce combat. The base of the relief, symbolizing human discord, pictures two men desperately clutching each other's hair, both enlaced in the coils of the serpent of paradise with the apple.

Break Colds with Minard's Liniment.

A theatrical troupe arrived in a New England town late one evening to find that no accommodation was to be had in the only hotel that the place afforded. The landlord did not seem a bit affected by the sad plight of the tourists but after much persuasion the old fellow said they could sleep in an abandoned church across the street. For want of any other shelter they accepted and retired for the night. About two o'clock in the morning the landlord heard the church bell ringing vigorously, and sent his son over to see what the matter, Jake brought back the report: "There isn't anything the matter, Pop, but the gent in pew twelve wants a couple of gin fizzes sent right over."

Pamela had been so troublesome that her mother put her to bed a full hour earlier than usual. As she left the child, she murmured gently: "God bless you, darling, till the morning." "Dad bless you, too, mummy, till you bring me my supper," answered Pamela.

A threatening prospect of several hours, heralded by a strong south-east wind, were the signs which made most people hereabouts look for the big snow storm which set in Friday afternoon, and continued "far into the night." Result: 6 inches of fresh snow on top of the 4 already on deck. Thus sleighing for the time being at least, is now beyond question.

Friends of Judge Roland Millar in Pontiac will learn with regret that he sustained serious injuries by falling on an icy sidewalk on Somerset Street, Ottawa, on Friday last. He was picked up in an unconscious condition, and taken to the Plant Swimming Pool, where he received first aid and was later removed to his home in Hull.

The United Farmers' Club of Bristol held their seventh annual chicken supper at the home of Mr. John D. Russell on Friday evening, Nov. 23rd, supper being served in the basement to about 140 people, after which all enjoyed a short program, consisting of solos and recitations, rendered by Miss Jessie Farquharson, of Aylmer. A quartette, "Flow Gently Sweet Afton," was sung by Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Hines, Miss Ada Hines and Mr. John Sturgeon. Addresses were also given by Mr. Bridal, of Montreal, and Mr. Robitaille the government poultry man. The Farmers'

Club at Bristol have a contest every year, two men being captains and choosing sides. Each side works hard to see how many rat and mice tails, crows, sparrows and pigeons feet they can collect, each one counting so many points. When the contest closes the men that are on the losing side have to do all the waiting on tables, washing of dishes and the cleaning up at the supper. The Farmers' Club is growing stronger every year.

Mr. Harry Way, of Huddersfield, went to the Civic Hospital last week and submitted to an operation for appendicitis shortly after his arrival there. Mr. Way whose home is 12 miles from Otter Lake on the Pickanock Road, had rather a trying motor trip coming down to Shawville over a rough road, most of the journey.

Mr. J. M. Argue has a lumber camp in operation this Winter on the bush lot purchased a short time ago from Miss Steinke, of Ladysmith, and bordering on Johnston's Lake. Mr. Jacques LeMay, of North Clarendon is in charge. This lot contains a considerable quantity of fine timber.

Rev. Father A. Stanton, parish priest of Huntley, has been transferred to Old Chelsea, and Father Dowd, of Chelsea, goes to St. Theresa parish in Ottawa.

J. C. Latour, aged 30, formerly of North Bay, and employed by the Fraser-Brace Co. at Paugan Falls, was drowned on Nov. 17, when he was swept away from below the dam, when unaware of his presence there the gates were reopened on account of the rapid rise of the water above.

FOOCHOW STAGES COMEBACK.

Tea Bushes Again Dot the Hills Surrounding Chinese City.

Foochow, once one of the most prosperous and famous tea ports of China, but for decades little heard of because its tea trade suffered a slump, is staging a "comeback."

The steep slopes of Fukien, Foochow's province, again are terraced and green with tea bushes. There is renewed activity in the tea hongs, or warehouses, where women and children labor from daylight to darkness sorting and preparing the leaves.

Tea merchants are visualizing a harbor once more sheltering ships awaiting cargoes of Foochow tea bound for foreign ports and recalling the romance of another day, before the growth of the tea trade of Ceylon and Japan eclipsed that of Foochow, when Yankee clipper ships, pride of New England shipbuilders, crowded their British rivals for trade at the moorings.

Foochow's most famous teas are the scented varieties, or "flower teas." They are scented by mixing in petals and leaves of the jasmine, caryophyllum and rose before curing. The fragrance of the flowers permeates the tea and is released in brewing as a "bouquet." Such tea has always been popular in China and the American market is growing.

The Bohea hills, far in the interior, supply the better qualities. One variety once was grown on a small patch of ground and was so prized that sale was forbidden to anyone other than the Emperor of China, who is reputed to have paid 10,000 pounds of rice for every 100 pounds of tea acquired. The hills are now held by bandits, however, and little of their product comes to Foochow.

Foochow exported during 1927 7,500,000 pounds of tea, a fair increase over recent years. In addition some 5,000,000 pounds was re-exported after being received from other parts of China to be scented.

Struck by a Meteorite.

From Japan comes the second reported instance of a meteorite hitting a human being. A tiny pebble of celestial origin seared the neck of a three-year-old baby girl at play near Tokio.

A tremendous number of meteorites bombard the earth each day, but they seldom fall within range of civilization. There is only one fatal accident on record, when a man was killed in India in 1827 by a falling stone.

The tiny stone, weighing only a few grains, that hit the Japanese girl was found in the child's dress, still warm, and proved to be a typical meteorite with a black crust, formed by melting in its flight through the air.
