J. E. Piche, M.L.A., Chosen Official Liberal Candidate at Campbell's Bay Convention

W. R. McDonald, M.L.A. Withdraws To Run as Independent

In one of the most hectic and stormy conventions that any political party has ever experienced in Pontiac, J. E. Piche, M.L.A., for Temiscamingue, was chosen official Liberal candidate for the coming federal elections, at Campbell's Bay on Saturday, after W. R. McDonald, M.L.A., for Pontiac, had withdrawn to run as Independent.

The vote was J. E. Piche 200; J. J. McCann, of Quyon and Ottawa, 126.

The convention was presided over by Paul Mercier, M.P. for St. Henri, Montreal, representing the Central Liberal organization of Montreal.

Friction arose during the addresses of the candidates previous to nomination. Mr. McDonald charged the Temiscamingue organization was under the direct control of Mr. Piche, and of irregularities in their attempt to control the 17 polls of Abitibi. Mr. Gagne, Mayor of Rouyn, and a vice president of the Temiscamingue association emphatically denied this allegation and said that his organization had simply ratified what had been done by the electors of Abitibi. Mr. Piche said that the electors of Abitibi had been invited and had expressed their willingness to come in with the Temiscamingue association, and that as far as he knew there had been no irregularity in Abitibi.

Two groups of 51 delegates came to Campbell's Bay from Abitibi, the first group made up of officers elected under the auspices of Temiscamingue Liberal Ass'n, and the second group of delegates, selected at a later date, independently. Mr. McDonald insisted the Temiscamingue Ass'n had no right to interfere in Abitibi County, and refused to recognize the first set of delegates.

Although Mr. McCann stated he had no grievances against the way in which Abitibi delegates were chosen, a heated controversy ensued when he claimed that Mr. McDonald had started the rumor that he was behind Mr. Piche. Mr. McCann produced an affidavit in which he declared "J. J. McCann was out for only J. J. McCann."

When a settlement between Mr. McDonald and Mr. Piche became evidently impossible, Mr. Mercier suggested as one way of settling the controversy that votes to which the Abitibi representation was entitled, totalling 51, be divided equally, one-third of the votes being given to each candidate.

Both Mr. Piche and Mr. McCann agreed to this ruling. "On a point of principle," Mr. McDonald sharply refused, and declared with much regret he could not allow his name to go before the convention.

When Mr. McDonald retired from the convention hall, followed by many supporters, Mr. Mercier called for nominations and balloting.

Mr. Piche was proposed by Paul Gervais and R. Gagne, and Mr. McCann by Michael Muldoon and Ambrose Kennedy.

While delegates who remained in convention hall voted, friends of Mr. McDonald met in the council chamber of the same building. D. J. Jones, editor and owner of Noranda Press, formerly of Pembroke, declared at this meeting he was positive Mr. McDonald would receive strong support in the northern section of Pontiac riding. Other speakers, including Mr. Louis Theissen, mayor of Duparquet, who flew 100 miles to attend the convention, highly commended Mr. McDonald's action in withdrawing, and urged him to be a candidate. When several delegates from both ends of the riding had pledged him their full support he announced he accepted and was a Liberal candidate, supporting Mackenzie King.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted at the meeting of Mr. McDonald's supporters: "We the undersigned delegates of Abitibi at the Liberal convention held at Campbell's Bay on July 20, 1935, at which representations made by us were refused, protest against the decision reached by the chairman, Paul Mercier, M.P., representing the central Liberal organization. We protest in our own names and in the names of delegates we represent. We further approve Mr. McDonald's decision in refusing to allow his name to go before the convention."

Mr. McDonald in giving his consent to let his name go before the people said, "I am not afraid to present myself as a straight Liberal candidate, supporting Mackenzie King."

Quyon Resident Killed by Lightning While Picking Berries

James Dowe, aged 33, was instantly killed when he sought refuge under a tree on McCrae's mountain, seven miles north of Quyon, on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Dowe, who, with a party of three others, had been picking berries on the mountain, ran for shelter under a large tree when the storm broke. John and Evelyn Trudeau and a small boy, who were with him in the party, had hastened for the lee of a bush some distance away.

After the cloudburst, when they received no answer to their calls, they went in search of him and when they found him under the tree, one of the party hurried to McCrae's farmhouse further down the mountain, to phone Dr. Dowd, of Quyon. Dr. Dowd could only pronounce him dead. Dr. Leopold Renaud, coroner, of Campbell's Bay was informed, and he ordered the body to be brought back to Quyon, where, after questioning the men who accompanied Dowe, decided an inquest was not necessary.

Mr. Dowe, is survived by his widow, formerly Miss Velma Doherty, one son, Ronald Dowe, and two brothers, Hubert Dowe, of Geraldton, Ont., and Arthur Dowe, of Quyon.

Jimmie Dowe was well-known as a hockey player throughout the County, and was a valued member of the Quyon championship team of 1920.

THE REMARKABLE ROMANCE OF AN INDUSTRIAL DICTATOR

Velvet and Steel

By
PEARL BELLAIRS

SYNOPSIS

Joan Denby of humble origin, is introduced as a social equal of Miss Georgina La Fontaine, rather than as her secretary. She meets Piers Hannen, millionaire, who forces his attentions on her. Lord Edwards proposes to Joan.

The boys gaped and stared and the rest of them stood in awkward silence while he put on his motoring coat. Mr. Denby, observing that it was made of pigskin, realised with a shock the real meaning of wealth. That coat was worth his whole wages for six months. If it was worth a penny! Cripes! Mr. Denby fidgetted, looked at Joan, who stood there as stiff as a dummy. Didn't his daughter know how to behave to a gentleman?

Joan, meanwhile, was preparing to say good-bye to him in the kitchen, but her father nudged her along as Hannen went, and she had to follow him out to the car and see him off.

Out on the pavement they stood in silence while Hannen pulled on his gloves. He seemed to be deep in thought. The foggy London dark was closed down on the grey slate roofs like a pall, the funeral little houses stared down at them with blank black windows, only a light showing here and there. A terrible wretchedness was in Joan's heart at the dreariness of it all; and when she looked up she calmly met his eye, hoping that he saw every detail of the scene, understood exactly what it meant, and would only wish to get away.

He seemed very broad in the dim light, utterly out of place, himself and his racing car in the poverty-stricken street. His face was in the shadow, and she could not see his expression as he looked at her.

"Thanks," he said, "for a pleasant evening!"

"Not at all!" murmured Joan, politely.

He turned and climbed into the car. So that was all. Not another word. She was amused—and content. The car roared and filled the silent street with echoes, and Piers Hannen drove away.

She watched the car gather speed and swing round the corner—out of her life.

So that settled him. And it made her realise, too, that exact meaning of her position in the world—what it would be like if she tried to mix Georgie's world with this one, where she belonged. She rather admired Piers Hannen's composure in what must have been, to him, the most trying situation!

She listened; she could still hear the roadster faintly now and far away; she heard like the note of a trumpet sounding retreat, the hoot of Piers Hannen's horn as he turned into East India Dock road. And that was all. He was gone.

In the house adjoining the Denby's the front door was opened.

"What's up?" asked a woman's voice. Inquisitively their neighbour emerged on to her doorstep.

"Nothing, Mrs. Cashel," replied Joan.

"It did give me a turn seeing that car outside the door," said Mrs. Cashel. "I thought there'd been an accident for sure. Fair put the wind up me, it did!"

"No, there's nothing wrong, Mrs. Cashel," Joan replied, as she went into the house, leaving Mrs. Cashel to fume with curiosity.

In the kitchen her father was sitting by the fire, and her mother was standing up, too exercised in mind to be able to sit down.

"He'll never think the same of you—never!" were Mrs. Denby's first words.

"What do you mean, mother?"

"Bringing him here, Joany. We wouldn't have asked you to. Your friends are your own, and Miss La Fontaine will look after you. I know that! You needn't have brought him here. What will he think?"

"Fancy him being a friend of yours!" said Mr. Denby, at once. "Why didn't you tell us before? Bringing him here all of a sudden like!"

"I didn't know that I was going to bring him until a few minutes before we started to come," Joan said.

"My word! It's a bit o' luck falling in with Hannen," said Mr. Denby.

"Where was it you met him, Joany?" asked Maude, who was hovering in the background.

"He's a friend of Miss La Fontaine's."

"Is he sweet on you, or what?" Maude demanded, in spite of her mother's efforts to make her be quiet.

"Oh, go on, mother! Joany isn't as shy as all that!"

"I imagine not," replied Joan truthfully, for she fancied that Piers Hannen must be thoroughly cured of his infatuation at the moment. "I'm not sweet on him, as it happens, Maude!"

"Ain't you?" Maude's young but shrewd brown eyes searched Joan's face. "He's ugly, in a way. But he's got nice eyes, and his shoulders—why, he might be a wrestling man! I'd be mad about him if I had half a chance!"

"His manner is pleasant enough, I will say," admitted Mrs. Denby. She looked questioningly at Joan, and then turning on Maude she said sharply: "I thought you said you was going round to see Millie Ganning down the street. If you don't run along now you'll be out till all hours!"

"Oh, give us a chance!"

Longing to stay and hear the rest of the conversation which she was sure would ensue with regard to Hannen and Joan, Maude put on her coat and went out. Mrs. Denby, after some altercation, managed to get the boys packed off upstairs. Joan assisted her to put them to bed. She felt tired and depressed now; it was all very well, but one could not rejoice about the wretchedness of Hooley Street and their lives here. It was all very well to startle Piers Hannen—but that was a fleeting joy! The rest of life here remained sordid and uncomfortable from day to day. (To Be Continued.)

Mantillas And Fans Latest Addition To Feminine Coquetry

Paris.—The classic Spanish influence in evening accessories is the latest addition to the store of feminine coquetry.

It is in the choice of the dainty little things that give the finishing touch of elegance that the fashionable woman shows her taste and personality.

After the oriental influence, which provided the western adaptation of the head-scarves and saris of India and Persia, mantillas and fans have made a triumphant come-back. The lovely chantilly lace that was lying in lavender-sacheted drawers since the gay days of the second empire and the beautiful Empress Eugenie is once more adorning graceful heads. Among the folds of their delicate silky webs nestle flowered garlands, even richer than the lavish ones of nature.

To accompany this type of coiffure many dresses have capes or berthas of matching lace.

The reappearance of fans, which now flutter in every attractive hand, keeps up this illusion.

With gowns harmoniously draped in the classic manner, nothing is more charming than fragile feathers, always large whether they are ostrich or heron, and always dyed the same shade as the dress they complement.

INDIAN SERVANTS DON'T MAKE EXCUSES WHEN AT FAULT

Housekeeping Problems Of Canadian Who Makes Home In Cawnpore.

Wife of a captain in the R.A.M.C. at Cawnpore, India, Mrs. Ethel Rogers Mulvany, the only Canadian woman in that city, said in an interview in Toronto: "I am here to direct the Agra and Oudh exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition." Then she launched into interesting details of housekeeping problems.

She started out two years ago with the theory that Indian servants could be treated like servants elsewhere. She soon got rid of that. "You can't treat them as you would treat servants here," she said. "They would not understand it. I couldn't do any dusting about the house, for instance. If one of the servants saw me working, he would tell the others and they would think I was just like them. Then I'd find the whole lot of them lolling about doing nothing."

She has some 22 servants in her household. Over them is a head man, or bearer, who gives orders to the coolies. For her to order the coolies directly would be to destroy the whole system of discipline.

"The servants never make excuses, or give a reason, if they are in fault," she said. "They just say, 'In Indian of course, 'Sorry Sahib, it shall not happen again.' It is necessary to be absolutely strict with them; if one once let them get out of hand, you are lost."

"Suppose I want roses for a dinner party and there are only three in my garden, I simply tell the servant that I shall need roses for the occasion. He goes off and in the evening the vases are filled with roses. No one shows any surprise or asks any questions, but we know that one of the neighbors has lost roses, and that when he needs anything badly we shall lose that in our turn."

DEVICE BANISHES ODORS IN KITCHEN

Engineers' Society Told Of Latest Gadgets For The Home

Toronto.—Refusing to commit themselves upon the merits of using a raw potato in the frying pan to absorb the odor of frying fish, delegates to the semi-annual meeting of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers stated recently an apparatus, costing approximately $60, is the latest and most efficient device for ventilating kitchens.

The ventilator is installed high up on the kitchen's outer wall, not necessarily in close proximity to the stove. When odoriferous foods are being cooked, the cook pulls a string or pushes a button which starts a fan in motion in the ventilator, which whiffs away all offensive odors without the slightest draft.

Another gadget, a pocket size water conditioner, resembling a thermometer, was shown by a delegate. When agitated in water, it produced electrons which conditioned water without the use of chemicals. If used in water before a shampoo, the hair would be soft and lustrous, he said. It brought out the flavor of tea and coffee, conditioned water so that vegetables did not lose color or form in cooking, and if agitated in a glass of cheap raw rye whiskey produced a drink that tasted as if it had been aged in the wood at least half a century, he said.

Massage as Cure For Insomnia

Muscular Relaxation Essential To Sound Sleep

"Massage is a physical method which often gives good service in the treatment of insomnia," writes Sir W. Arbuthnot Lane. "A light general massage late in the evening may induce sleep in some or it may be limited to the limbs, a kneading action in the direction of the venous circulation being specially valuable. In other cases gentle stroking movements from the back of the head down to the neck and upper part of the spinal column is best. Gentle stroking of the hair or brushing it for a prolonged period has also been tried with success."

Muscular relaxation is essential for sleep so that when in bed every effort should be made consciously to relax all the muscles. Think of each group of muscles in succession and so ensure their relaxation."

PREPARE YOUR SKIN FOR BRIGHT DAYS

Facial Mask Will Make Complexion Clear and Lovely

This is to be a navy-blue and white season, and consequently the greatest care must be taken to prepare and improve the condition of the skin in order to ensure that our make-up tones perfectly.

Every woman realizes that her complexion is not at its best after the trying days of early spring. A complete overhaul is the right thing at this time of the year, but there is no reason why this should be expensive.

With the exception of a Turkish bath, you may give yourself a complete treatment in your own home. The bath is a good start, as it clears the skin of all acids and waste matter.

An oil and a bleaching mask are the first essentials. Clean the skin thoroughly with a cleansing cream or lotion, then remove any stray eyebrows. In trimming eyebrows, by the way, the very latest style is to train them to go upwards at the ends. It gives a much more youthful expression.

For the oil mask soak a piece of gauze in a mixture of olive, castor, and almond oil, equal parts, and lay it on the face for from 10 to 15 minutes. This nourishes and smooths the skin, and gives it a velvety surface.

The bleaching mask is applied in the same way on gauze. An excellent one may be made by mixing bleaching lotion and bleaching powder together to form a creamy paste. A mild bleach is prepared with fine oatmeal and warm milk, to which has been added a few drops of peroxide. This should be removed with a little warm milk.

The popular colors for the season's dresses are directly responsible for the colors in make-up, for make-up must harmonize with our clothes. This season nice creamy rachels and the latest primrose shades are right. The pinky and peachy shades, so popular in powder last year, are now to be avoided.

Rouge should be used very sparingly, while lipstick should be bright pillar-box red, carmine, or scarlet.

CHALLENGE

True Sportsmanship Among Swimmers

Drowning and aquatic accidents exceed the traffic hazards in the months of July and August every year. Be careful and insist on others being careful and so help to break this record. Follow these rules:

Everyone should know how to swim.

Everyone should know how to rescue a drowning person.

Everyone should learn the Prono Pressure Method of Resuscitation.

Never dive in unknown, shallow or rocky waters. A deep dive even in clear water is dangerous.

Always wait two hours after eating before going into the water.

Avoid drinking any cold beverage before going in swimming.

If afflicted with heart trouble—do not go in swimming.

Avoid swimming alone in unfrequented waters, or at night.

Avoid teasing inexperienced swimmers. Teach them to stay in shallow water, to beware of hidden holes, sudden drenches, heavy breakers and undertows. Be helpful.

Even a good swimmer should avoid taking foolhardy chances in the water.

Children—even good swimmers—should not be allowed to swim alone; particularly where there is high surf or danger of an undertow. Save the children.

Your Handwriting Reveals Your Character!

All Rights Reserved

Geoffrey St. Clair Graphologist

(Editors Note: Have YOU obtained an interesting character analysis from you handwriting? Have you sent to find out what your friends are really like? You will be surprised at the accuracy of the delineations).

The other day I received a letter from one of my readers who had sent her writing to me some time ago for a character analysis. In writing she commented on the fact that by following the advice I had given her in delineating her character, she had been able to obtain a very good position, and she remarked "I am not exaggerating when I say that, had I not had your criticism of my character, and the helpful advice with which you supplemented your criticism, I would not have been able to obtain this new position. It all shows how excellent a science is Graphology, and what value it is to those who follow out its promises faithfully."

In other words it is not merely that a graphological delineation must be accurate, but the resultant diagnosis MUST be acted upon by the client. After all, there is nothing unusual in this—any advice is useless unless it leads to remedial action.

I am reminded of a letter I received some time ago from a young man to whom I had suggested that, for his own good, he adopt a more definite and determined outlook regarding his future. He was too vacillating and procrastinating ever to get anywhere, unless he developed these more aggressive qualities.

In replying to me, and asking me to analyse the writing of his girl friend which he enclosed, he took issue with my analysis, claiming that whatever his faults, he certainly had lots of decisiveness and determination. However, on looking at the letter from his girl friend which he sent me as a specimen of her writing, I found a direct reference in that letter to my analysis of his character. Writing this to him, she said: "It certainly is amazing that he can tell your character from your writing. He has got you down pat in every instance."

The sequel to this came recently, when this young man again wrote to me and expressed his thanks for the constructive criticism I had given him previously, and mentioned that he had found a definite improvement in himself by following out the advice I had given to him.

So, again I say, the moral is that the advice must be acted upon if it is to achieve its aim.

The other day, in the course of some graphological work I was doing for an insurance company, there was one particular handwriting specimen which I suggested indicated that the writer lacked aggressiveness and initiative. I said that there was definite intelligence, allied to an attractive personality, but added that the writer's lack of initiative would prevent him from getting very far along in his career unless he made some definite improvement in certain characteristics, to give him much more forceful individuality.

It turned out that the writer of this specimen was a salesman, and it had for a long time been a matter of wonder to his superiors that with so pleasing a personality, he was unable to reach a very high mark of effort. It is my hope that the advice I was able to extend to this young man will enable him to make a much-needed improvement, to the end that he will make the fullest use of his undoubted capacities.

Would YOU like to know what your handwriting tells about YOUR character? Would you like to find out the story told about your friends through their writing? Send specimens of the writings you wish to be analysed, stating birthdate in each instance. Send 10c coin for each specimen and enclose with 3c stamped addressed envelope, to: Geoffrey St. Clair, Room 421, 73 Adelaide St. West, Toronto, Ont. Letters will be strictly confidential and will be answered as quickly as possible.

Boston Archbishop Condemns Make-up

Says They Look Like Savages — Denounces Scanty Frocks Also

BOSTON.—The liberal use of cosmetics by women was attacked by William Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, as an attempt to imitate Pagan savages, in a sermon delivered after he had administered the sacrament of confirmation to 599 women converts at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross.

The Cardinal upheld the right of a priest to refuse the Eucharist to a woman with painted lips, and denounced what he termed the scantiness of some modern dresses and the use of artificial coloring on lips, cheeks and fingernails.

P.E.I. Ranchers Get $2,500,000 From Pelts

The pelt business, it is estimated, was worth $2,500,000.00 to Prince Edward Island fox ranchers last year. A representative of the Canadian National Silver Fox Breeders' Association recently returned from London and Paris stated that France is one of the biggest markets for silver fox fur where it is used extensively by designers and style modistes. In Great Britain the demand is growing; two years ago silver fox was worn very little. England is becoming a great centre of the fur dyeing industry, there having been a great exodus of expert dyers from Leipzig. One firm in Britain had to enlarge its premises considerably; in one day it dyed around 17,000 squirrel skins.

Fire Losses Increase

Toronto.—For the second consecutive month fire losses in Canada during May recorded an increase, according to the Monetary Times' report made public recently. Total losses were $2,466,375.

This compares with $2,136,650 in the preceding month, and with $2,098,600 during May, 1934. The increase during May was largely accounted for by the $400,000 convent conflagration at Joliette, Que. in addition to several large stores and warehouse fires at Sydney and New Glasgow in Nova Scotia, St. Pascome, Que., and in Avonlea, Sask., and Prince Albert, Sask.

LESSON No. 62 COMPOSITION IN ART

In thanking our readers for their very interesting letters of appreciation and of questions, I wish to state that a few of our readers have inquired about a series of lessons pertaining to composition in Art. Well, here is a new series of lessons on that most important subject which should prove to be not only useful, but also very popular with our readers.

Composition in the art of advertising and illustrating or any other kind of art, is that combination of several parts in which each part is presented in due proportion. In grammar it is the putting of words together to form sentences. In the latter we have to deal with different language, but when we use the language of art it appeals to all alike: Art is the universal language.

Feeling: Without an understanding of the fundamental principles of composition we have no criterion by which to judge the merits of art other than our own personal likes and dislikes. This has been called "feeling".

We shall aim in this new series of art lessons to define and to point out the first principles and fundamental foundation necessary for good composition in a pictorial way. We shall endeavor to teach the student how to successfully arrange objects, stimulate his imagination, and to add the elements of fitness and beauty to otherwise uninteresting things.

How many of our students make notes while reading the text matter of these lessons? Should any part of the text interest you and cause you to stop and to think, well and good. There may be some parts which you may not readily understand at the first reading; but, with a little thought and conscientious study your work will become easy and interesting.

We only appreciate that which we understand. Unless you know something about numbers, you cannot appreciate the quantity of "ten". Neither can we construct sentences unless we know something about grammar and words, nor could we tell you to do so unless we and you also, know something about the alphabet, spelling, etc. The same may be said of composition in art. We cannot help you by merely telling you how, unless you know something about the principles of harmony, balance and rhythm. These principles you have studied in previous lessons. They are your alphabet, your vocabulary which you must use in composition; you must learn their significance, their meanings and usages.

We invite questions from our readers. These lessons are free. The only thing you have to pay for is the return postage on your questions, so please enclose a three cent stamped addressed envelope. Send your requests to the Art Director, "Our Sketch Club", 73 Adelaide Street West, Toronto.

Baker's Cloud Has Bread Lining For Poor

Unable to deliver bread because of driver's strike which stopped all deliveries, Cleveland, Ohio, bakeries gave away their outputs to all those applying. Pictured in scene in front of one of the large plants as youngsters gleefully load up with bread and cakes handed to them from bakery windows.

Royal Greetings

Royal greeting was accorded President Pehr Evind Svinhufvud (left), of the tiny Republic of Finland, by King Gustav of Sweden when he arrived in Stockholm for a visit recently. The democratic sovereign and the President are shown chatting together as they leave quay.

The High Sign?

William W. (Tiny) Hearn seems to be getting the lowdown on professional football from Bert Bell (right), President of the Philadelphia, Pa., Eagles, after signing up to play with them in the National Professional Football League. Hearn is six feet nine and a half inches tall. He played tackle at Georgia Tech. for three years.

DUTCH GIRL TOWELS PATTERN 902

Dutch girls—the symbol of cleanliness—are always decorative in a kitchen. These are especially delightful on towels and other kitchen accessories. Do them in colors to match your kitchen or in a variety of gay colors. You'll enjoy embroidering them for each motif has so much animation and interest. The crosses are 8 to the inch so you'll be done in no time! If you have enough towels, make them for that bride-to-be. She'll treasure them.

Pattern 902 comes to you with a transfer pattern of seven motifs (one for each day of the week) averaging 5 X 9 inches; illustrations of the stitches needed; material requirements; color suggestions.

Send 20 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to Needlecraft Dept., Wilson Publishing Co. Ltd., 73 Adelaide St. W., Toronto.

First Police Radio Bikes

A further step towards placing the Verdun, (Montreal), Quebec, police force on a basis of efficiency second to none in the Dominion has been taken by authorities with the placing in operation of two motorcycles equipped with radio. In addition to increasing the efficiency of the department, the municipality has also the distinction of being the only city in Canada with such equipment for its motorcycle squad. Satisfaction that the necessary money had been voted by the City Council for the establishment of the new arm of the force was expressed by officials of the department. They, including Director Dubeau, expressed the opinion that the radio motorcycles would prove of great value in eliminating crime, particularly that in which cars were used, in the west end municipality. The above photograph shows Officers McIver and P. Gatteau, of the Verdun motorcycle squad, as they drive away immediately after their machines have been equipped by a Northern Electric radio engineer. The radio sets are located on the handle bars. The "V" shaped rods in front serve both as supports and antennae.

United Farmers of Ontario Will Support H. H. Stevens

The United Farmers of Ontario, have through headquarters at Toronto signified an intention to support Hon. H. H. Stevens' Reconstruction party. Announcement to this effect is made over the signatures of R. J. Scott, president, and H. H. Hannam, secretary. The United Farmers of Alberta are out with the statement that they are to give their allegiance to the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, whose leader is J. S. Woodsworth.

Income Tax Collections Better Than Last Year

Dominion income tax collections in the Ottawa district for the first three months of the current fiscal year, ending June 30, totalled $2,656,049, compared with $2,346,764 in the corresponding period of 1934, a statement issued by the Department of National Revenue shows.

Total collections for all Canada amounted to $54,564,610, compared with $38,770,313 in the three months' period last year, an increase of $15,794,297.

Both Toronto and Montreal had big increases, collections in the former district being up $5,819,429 and Montreal, up $4,452,534.

Tourist Traffic Heavy This Year

Mr. D. Leo Dolan, director of the Canadian Travel Bureau, Ottawa, recently told officials of the Quebec department of roads tourist traffic in Canada this year would compare favorably with the record year, 1929, with an increase over 1929 shown at some ports of entry. Mr. Dolan spoke at a luncheon tendered him by Hon. J. E. Perrault, minister of roads and mines. Both the minister and Mr. Dolan complimented Arthur Bergeron, director of the Quebec Tourist Bureau, for the success of touring in the province.

Pleasure that Hon. Mr. Perrault favored preservation of old traditions and customs of Quebec was expressed by Dolan. He himself advocated such a policy throughout Canada and it was proving attractive to tourists from the United States and other parts of the world.

Mr. Perrault mentioned that $1,250,000 had been spent by the province of Quebec to advertise itself in the United States and other provinces in Canada.

St. Augustine, Oldest City in United States

St. Augustine is the oldest city in the United States. It has preserved relics of its antiquity with impressive dignity. Don Pedro Menendez landed there at the mouth of the Matanzas river on September 6, 1565. Life in the little colony consisted of a series of battles with Indians and with corsairs. Sir Francis Drake and his English fleet of 26 vessels attacked, sacked, and burned the settlement in 1586.

Standing and in good state of preservation in that ancient city is Fort Marion, built in 1756 and said to be the oldest fortress in the United States, notes a writer in the Chicago Tribune. It is maintained as a national monument operated by the St. Augustine Historical society.

The structure is of coquina, a dark gray rock peculiar to this vicinity. The walls, rising 25 feet from a moat, are rectangular with a bastion at each corner. On the northeast bastion is a watch tower 25 feet high.

Guides take visitors through casemates, chambers, off a courtyard 103 feet by 100 feet. One of these, not much bigger than a clothes closet and devoid of any source of ventilation when the door is closed, was described as an execution chamber—execution by suffocation. "Doctors have estimated that a man can live here for only 12 hours before exhausting the air," said the guide.

Red, White and Blue Are Popular Hues for Flags

Red, white and blue, colors that come into the minds of people whenever flags are mentioned, are the most popular hues, it happens, for the flags of the world, says a writer in the Montreal Herald. Red is used more generally than any other color in flag-making, followed in order by white and blue. Next in order, but much less popular than the three leaders, are yellow, green and black. Orange, which appears in the banners of three countries, about exhausts the colors used in the world's flags. One country (Spain) uses purple. Brown does not appear on any national flag.

Astronomical devices are favorites of flag-makers. Stars are used by many countries and there are suns and moons, the latter usually in the form of crescents. Brazil, makes use of a circle of the firmament showing the Southern Cross and neighboring stars and the Southern Cross also appears in the flags of Australia and New Zealand. Alaska has placed on its flag the Great Dipper and Pole star.

Other countries' use characteristic symbols—Afghanistan, a mosque; Cambodia, an eastern temple; the Republic of Lebanon, a cedar; the Papal state, crossed keys and triple crown; Germany, a swastika; Siam, white elephant; and the Soviet union, a hammer and sickle. Tibet shows the sun rising over a snowy mountain.

Why Farmers Should Buy and Use PLYMOUTH GOLD MEDAL BINDER TWINE

THE Plymouth Cordage Company makes only twine of the highest quality, and for that reason they place their guarantee on each tag, so the user may know he is getting exactly what he pays for when he buys Plymouth Gold Medal Twine. Every ball is guaranteed to be of the average length of 650 feet to the pound.

It is Twine Service rather than twine that you must buy. The price per pound is not so important as the number of bundles each pound will tie and the amount of time saved through smooth-working twine that is uniform in size and quality. Buy Plymouth Gold Medal Twine and save money!

It is made in Canada

When you buy Plymouth Gold Medal Binder Twine you not only buy the best, but you cooperate in keeping a Canadian factory busy

President Langston Receives Invitation from Drummondville

An invitation to hold the annual regional industrial safety conference in Drummondville this fall, has been received by President W. J. Langston, of the Quebec Association for the Prevention of Industrial Accidents.

The invitation was sent by the Secretary-Treasurer of the Town of Drummondville upon instructions of the Council. It is stated in the letter of invitation that the Council had been informed that the association was thinking of holding the conference in Drummondville and that the council desired to inform the president of the association that the council and the population of the town would be happy to receive the association and its delegates in Drummondville.

While a final decision has not been taken it is more than likely that the invitation will be accepted and that plans for the holding of the conference will be made soon. The last regional conference took place last year in Sherbrooke.

Equipment in use in the fishing industry in Prince Edward Island last year represented nearly $1,000,000 in capital. The total was some $3,900 greater than in 1933.

Athens Once Capital of Entire Civilized World

Athens was once the capital of the civilized world. Back of it is the most famous of all hills, the ruin-strewn Acropolis. The Acropolis, observes a writer in the Chicago Tribune, was the site of the early city which grew into Athens. It was fortified more than a thousand years before Christ.
Part of the original walls still stand.
Here the semi-mythical kings ruled and sat in judgment. Here under Theseus the city on the hill united with the villages that had sprung up on the plain below. Here was laid the foundation of the democracy that is still making its way westward around the world.

In 480 B. C. the Acropolis fell before the armies of Xerxes, who was later defeated in the naval battle of Salamis and he went back to Persia.
In the same century the hill saw Sophocles, Euripides, Socrates, Aristophanes, and Pericles rise to immortality. The following century brought on the blight of Philip of Macedon after he had paved the way for his son, Alexander the Great.

As the town of the greatest sculptors, poets, and dramatists of antiquity and the seat of the schools of philosophy founded by Plato and Aristotle, Athens subsisted for centuries on the intellectual capital it had stored up during the golden age.

For 2,000 years Athens has owed its prosperity to the fame achieved in its early days. It is still reaping the harvest of the intangible factors on which the empire of the mind is built: learning and literature, art and eloquence, philosophy and democracy.
Students go there from all over the world, and the visitor stands in awe before the might and majesty of things immaterial.

Gigantic Globe of Stone

Graces 14-Story Temple

India rivals Egypt so far as the miraculous is concerned. The building of the Pyramids provides enough wonder, but they were, despite their size,
"piled" up stone by stone, says the Montreal Herald.

India, on the other hand, can go one better by boasting, in Tanjore, a temple which rises to a height of 216 feet, consisting of 14 stories, and upon which rests a gigantic globe of stone weighing some 80 tons. The globe is made of solid granite, and much speculation has been going on for years as to how it got there.

In the case of the Pyramids the theory is given that the mass was slowly raised as the building grew in height. In the case of the temple in Tanjore, however, it is believed that the stone, brought from quarries from miles away, was conveyed by means of an inclined plane and 12 years of strenuous labor were needed to accomplish the task.

POLICE RADIO EQUIPMENT
The equipment of Canadian police with radio broadcasting sets is interesting in view of the fact that through the work of the radio patrol in Old London, the number of automobile thefts has been reduced from 100 per month in 1932 to about 10 in 1935. A car is no sooner reported stolen than its number and description are broadcast over the entire metropolitan area. — St. Thomas Times-Journal.

TREATMENT GIVEN TREKKERS IS PRAISED

Editorial comment on the visit of the relief camp strikers to Ottawa, appearing in newspapers throughout the country, is practically unanimous in approving of the manner in which the Federal premier and his colleagues received them, and of the answer the Prime Minister gave them. The Woodstock Sentinel-Review feels that Canadian farmers and other industrious citizens are rather tired of the demands of single men who are being comfortably housed and fed pending their reabsorption into gainful occupations. The St. Thomas Times-Journal declares that the strikers' claims are altogether preposterous, that they were quite aware that these claims could not be granted, and that what they really wanted was the refusal which they got.

The Brantford Expositor says: "The people of Canada without regard to political affiliations will be constrained by good judgment and their interest in the welfare of the country to support Premier Bennett in his attitude toward the relief strikers. . . . The whole tenor of this interview at Ottawa showed that the strikers were endeavoring to instigate trouble and Premier Bennett is to be sincerely commended for the firm manner in which he dealt with the men. For them to leave the camps under the conditions which prevail at a time when the country is burdened with the problems of unemployment, and when it is endeavoring to do its utmost for those who, through no fault of their own, are out of work is a perversion of loyal citizenship." The Kingston Whig-Standard observes:

"It will be generally agreed that Mr. Bennett adopted the only possible attitude in refusing to entertain the demands of the deputation. Clearly, the first of these, for wages of fifty cents an hour and an abbreviated working day and week, is quite out of reason. As a whole the demands were only partly related to camp problems specially; for the most part they represent an extremely socialized programme that would effect the whole population of the country. The deputation can hardly have expected any other reception than they received and there is little to show in the reports of the interview that they were prepared to discuss or offer suggestions as to how the work and life of the camps could be made more satisfying and productive of greater benefit to the men in them."

The Chatham News asserts that it would be impossible for any Ottawa Government to grant the strikers' wishes, that the strikers are clearly led by Red agitators, who are seeking to sow seeds of strife throughout the country, and that their real object is to overthrow Canadian institutions and substitute therefor impossible Communist practices. Not one of the newspapers thus quoted is Conservative in stripe. Every one of them is an independent publication. In dealing with the subject under discussion they all have the welfare of the whole Canadian people in mind.

It should be added by way of pre-emptive that the Red agitators have had, unfortunately, too much encouragement from such men as Mayor Gerry McGreer of Vancouver and Attorney-General Roebuck of Ontario. It was the latter who told a crowd of hunger marchers some months ago to go back home and organize until they got strong enough to return and force their views upon any Government in Queen's Park. If the trekkers at Regina are well advised they will continue to accept the Government's generous hospitality until work can be provided for them.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

WOULD ESTABLISH COMMUNISM

Arthur Evans, leader of the Vancouver relief camp strikers, has never been in a relief camp in his life. He is in the argument, not because he is anxious about the welfare of camp workers, but because he is interested in establishing Communism in Canada and he thinks this is his chance to help along the idea.—Chatham News.

KING GEORGE.

King George has been the recipient of many richly deserved compliments during his Jubilee year, but none more aptly phrased than an appreciation voiced during the course of an address by Rev. John Gardner, in the Cathedral of the Incarnation, Long Island, N.Y. His reference was as follows: "King George V. of England is a man of rich and rare sanity and a great deal of his power comes through his sagacity in knowing what to say, when to say it, and when not to say anything." This summarizes an ideal which it would profit all to follow.—Brantford Expositor.

REMEMBER YOUR PETS.

With the arrival of a month late of real summer weather, people are moving out rapidly to their summer homes in the country. The time is therefore appropriate for making an appeal to those who possess pets not to forget them when leaving city residences. It is difficult to believe, but each year the number of cats, dogs and birds left locked up in houses or apartments, where they slowly starve to death, is painfully large. The number of complaints received from neighbors by the S.P.C.A. would amaze the public, and these are but a tithe of the actual cases, it is safe to assume.

It is inconceivable that anybody who cares for a cat or a dog or a bird sufficiently to look after it all through the winter and spring would deliberately abandon it when summer comes. Only thoughtlessness can explain why so many forget. It is to urge them to keep their pets in mind and to arrange for their care or for their merciful destruction the S.P.C.A. has issued its annual appeal, which we heartily endorse.—Montreal Star.

BEAVER COLONY

Both by the introduction of new stock and a further strengthening of regulations governing trapping, the Ontario Government, it is said, intends to make a determined effort to restore the beaver to its position of eminence among the forest animals of the province.

In the forwarding of this program it is to be hoped that the colony established for some years in the immediate neighborhood of Brockville will not be overlooked.

It would mean something from both conservation and attraction standpoints to have a well-regulated colony of beavers almost at the back door of the community, and the manner in which the members of the existing colony have resisted all

THE NEWSPAPER AND SALES.

Modern life is much different today from what it was a decade ago. Today, a great deal of buying is done over the telephone.

This, in turn, means that opportunities for purchases advantageous to the buyers are now almost completely centred in newspaper advertising.

The modern housewife knows what she wants, knows by brand name, and orders in that manner—because advertising has taught her how she should do it and why it is profitable for her to do so.

Imagine ordering from an unknown grocer "some breakfast food," "some bacon," "some coffee," "some bread"—and so on, as in the olden days before advertising became the powerful force it is today!—Kingston Whig-Standard.

THE EMPIRE

A NEW WIND BLOWS

India has many villages and few towns, but in these days of science and system the village receives much less direct attention than of old. The motor car and cycle, the importance of secretariats and the growth of secretariat correspondence are among the causes; the big official rushes by in his car; touring on horseback with pencil and pocket-book is almost a forgotten custom; few nowadays move about leisurely with tents. Officials have not the time to spare.—The Statesman, Calcutta.

CUPS THAT CHEER.

Australia is declining. Until a few years ago it had the reputation of being the greatest tea-drinking country in the world. Now we are fourth on the list. So says a representative of the tea-trading interests of Ceylon. This gentleman, Mr. R. B. Williams, attributes the decline partly to the popularity of "soda fountains" and milk bars, and partly to the poor quality of the tea served in houses of refreshment. No doubt he is correct. . . . There seems to be little to commend in the American vogue of iced tea, which it is proposed to introduce into Australia. Moreover, the fad would not last. Such fads never do. The sour-milk drinking which was fashionable some 20 years ago endured over two summers. Therefore, a trade in iced tea is not likely to be of permanent value to the merchants of Ceylon.—Melbourne Australasian.

The Week In Ottawa

Ottawa—In the twilight of the final session of the present Parliament, the Commons heard Prime Minister Bennett on Thursday evening tell Mackenzie King that the government was ready for an election at the soonest possible date. The Opposition leader made brief reference to the Liberal victory in New Brunswick, but there was grim determination in the face of the government leader when he said he was ready for the federal battle. Then both leaders went into a half-hour huddle. What they said was not made known; but they spoke not of union government, according to Mr. King.

BRIGHTER CAIRO.

Tourists and long-absent visitors returning to Cairo after a lapse of many years call attention to the great advance made in the illumination of the city. The various types of flashing signs and artificial luminous advertisements which adorn our local street corners and road crossings are a tribute to the enterprise of the city's business people. Time was when people looked askance at the appeal of the literate advertisement in such an illiterate country. Times have changed, but we who are bound to the soil of Egypt scarcely seem to realize the progress that is undoubtedly being made, which accounts in some measure for the harshness of a few of our cynical judgments. A notable trend of popularity is the brilliance of illumination of the up-to-date quick-snack counters. Enquiry elicits that the main reason for favor of such food establishments is not the very good value for money that is given, but the fact that the city worker is a dweller in suburbs that are extending further and further from the centre of the town and its evening attractions. Thus, between late office or shop hours and the beginning of some entertainment program, there is time only for a hasty meal at the counter. The speed of the service, the quality of the food, the price and brightness—all are factors which count with the discerning proletariat.—The Sphinx, Cairo.

Throne forecast amendments to strengthen the powers of the Natural Products Marketing Act of 1934. Last week Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture, introduced these amendments to the House, bringing pulp and paper and other forest products within the scope of the measure. Should another amendment go through, local boards set up under the provisions of the act will be enabled to carry on until funds have accumulated in the natural course. One million dollars have been set aside in supplementary estimates for this purpose.

While some opposition members staged another attack on the Marketing Act, the Minister of Agriculture forecast a price differential scheme for the dairying industry. Details of this scheme have not been worked out, but the general idea would be to place levies against one section of the industry for the purpose of butter prices were above the world market, producers shipping to creameries might be taxed and the proceeds used to bonus farmers who shipped their milk to cheese factories with prices considerably lower.

The government's $10,000,000 housing bill hit a few bad curves on its road through the House, but there was no division on third reading. There was practically a general assault upon the measure. The potshots, however, did little damage and on the suggestion of some opposition members Sir George Perley amended the bill so municipalities could deal direct with the government and not through a loan or insurance company. As it finally passed, the bill provided a fund of 10,000,000 under the control of the Minister of Finance. From this, advances could be made to a limit of 20 per cent. of the cost of the house, providing loan or insurance companies or municipalities put up 60 per cent. and the owner the remaining 20. The interest to be charged by loan companies will be 5½ per cent., with the government rate 3½ per cent.

In the parlance of the pugilistic ring, unscrupulous directors and promoters got one "right on the button" when the Commons passed a bill recasting the law governing company incorporations and management along the lines suggested by the price spreads commission. In effect, the blow would cause company directors to pass a resolution that money received for par value stock was just and equitable. Then, if a court found otherwise, the directors would be liable to the company for the balance.

CHARACTER STUDY OF T. E. LAWRENCE

By L. B. Namier, in the Manchester Guardian

I had a slight acquaintance with Lawrence in our undergraduate days, but knew nothing about him. A day or two after war had been declared he took me to a disused rifle range in North Oxford to practise shooting. I do not remember how I fell in with him that day, nor where he got the rifle, and it strikes me only now that this cannot have been his first visit to the range. With what plans or dreams had he been practising there?

After that for several years I heard nothing of him, for only when I met him in the lounge of the Hotel Majestic at the Paris Conference in a colonel's uniform did I realize that he was "Lawrence of Arabia." We do not easily credit our friends with anything surprising or, inversely, extraordinary things surprise us in those we think we know.

It was in 1920, when I was at Balliol and he was at All Souls, that I came to know him. He was accessible and communicative, and there must be hundreds of people who have known him as well as I, or better. He was retiring and yet craved to be seen; he was sincerely shy and naively exhibitionist. He had to rise above others, and then humble himself, and in his inflicted humiliation demonstrate his superiority.

It was a mysterious game which amused or puzzled some, annoyed or put off others. A deep cleavage in his own life lay at the root of it. I wonder whether he himself ever knew why he did it, or rather had to do it.

One day in 1926 I met him at the gate of the British Museum in his private's uniform.

"Hallo, Lawrence."
"Do you recognize me?"
"Of course."

Then he said: "The whole afternoon I have been walking about the museum where every attendant used to know me, and not a single one recognized me. till I inquired about someone I missed. Then the man knew me." Yes, what was the good of disguising if no one recognized him?

As a private he would ring at the door of a field marshal and ask the butler whether his Lordship was in. He was not. Would he lunch at home? Yes. "Then tell his Lordship that Aircraftman Shaw will lunch with him."

This game he had started long before he became a private. It was childish — a superficial ripple which people took too seriously, or not seriously enough. He himself enjoyed it in a quaint, whimsical manner. It is distressing to think how such stories will fill books about him.

He was a man of genius, an immensely rich personality, a great artist, and a man who has suffered as few ever suffer. Had he been born on the fringe of a desert he would have become a prophet. ("Go into the desert a few years and you will return a prophet. If you stay there too long you will never speak again.")

Had he lived in the Christian Middle Ages he would have become a saint.

He had the instincts and negations of both, without their faith, and under modern conditions had to turn it all into an incomprehensible joke. When I saw him last, in 1930, I showed him a passage in my forthcoming book and asked whether he objected. He did not. Here it is:

There are men who crave for mortification, "la mia allegrezza e la maninconia." But unless this desire assumes a standardized religious form — hair-shirt or hermit's hut — and can be represented as a profitable bargain for another world men dare not admit it, even to themselves. It proved beyond doubt it is described as madness. Educated men may become monks, but must no tenalist as privates in the army.

There was a deep negation of life in him — "It were better there was nought." But he wished to believe that his mode of life was the result of his philosophy, and not the other way round. "Trees grew down by the river, till they grew above its bank and saw the ruins of Troy, and they withered away." It was this deep negation of life which drew him to the desert, and next to the sterility of garrison life.

Besides, there was the infinite capacity for suffering, and even the downright desire for it. He could bear any pain, outside the Arabs on a camel, do without sleep and food; at times it would almost seem as if he had no physical existence. He was small, but not so well proportioned that, except by comparison, one barely realized how undersized he was. He had sad, piercing eyes; his greatness was in them. He spoke in a low, soft voice. When he talked seriously people would listen spellbound. He had style in talking and style in every line he wrote. . . .

The think which was wholly absent from Lawrence's mental makeup was a legal conception of fact or a mathematical idea of accuracy. He was fond of Cubist paintings, and his statements sometimes partook of a Cubist character. It was easy to arraign them on formal grounds, but if probed they would often be found to express the truth better than would a formally correct account.

He never bothered or condescended to make his statements "foolproof." On one occasion he accused someone of having "packed a delegation." When afterwards I repeated to him a passionate denunciation of what he had said, he replied, "The man asked the delegation whether he might have some of his own friends present. He filled the room with them. There people do not understand these nice distinctions. It was like a football game on an Irish village green; soon the entire village is playing. The room was packed, and that sufficed. In fact, the man afterwards boasted how clever he had been."

People Married Younger During The Depression

Ontario's vital statistics for the year 1933, which have recently been issued in printed form, disclosed a curious change in the most-frequent-marriage age, says the Toronto Star. "In 1929 at the height of prosperity, there were more brides of 21 than of any other age. In 1935, in the pit of the depression, there were more of 19 than of any other age.

"And then as to grooms. In 1929 the group aged 24 was largest; in 1933, the group aged 23. Are people really marrying earlier? There were, of course, fewer total marriages in 1933 than in 1929. While 21 was the favored age for brides in 1929, it had a close rival in 19 by 1932, and 19-year-old brides led the list in 1933. Among the grooms, 24 was the favored aged in 1929 and 1932, but gave place to 23 in 1933."

Nerves Linked To Appendixes

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J.—Disorders of the nerves in the area surrounding the appendix may cause some cases of appendicitis, especially the kind diagnosed as "chronic," Dr. Louis C. Simard, of Montreal, reported to the section on general surgery of the Canadian and American medical associations recently.

Dr. Simard made a study of all appendixes removed at Notre Dame Hospital, Montreal, between 1927 and 1931. In an earlier study it had been found there is frequently an abnormal cell distribution, sometimes to such a degree that small tumors are formed. These are generally considered scar tissues when studied under the microscope, but the cells can be demonstrated by a special laboratory technique.

Dr. Simard divided his collection of appendixes into "acute," "chronic" and those that had been removed in the course of some other operation. In the group labelled "chronic," the abnormal condition of the nerves was demonstrated in 51 per cent. Even in the "acute" group, nine per cent. showed them. In the other group, 30 per cent. showed nerve changes, leading the physicians to suggest that these were the cause of symptoms interpreted otherwise.

CORN MAKES TASTY CHICKEN

Many Interesting Results Reported By The O.A.C.

Some interesting results of poultry experiments were reported by the poultry committee of the Canadian Society of Animal Production, which held a meeting at the O. A. C. on June 12. The discussion centred around cereal grains and their use in poultry nutrition. J. B. Smith, of the O. A. C. staff, showed from experimental work how a mixture of farm grains—oats, barley, wheat and buckwheat—along with milk, were good for both hatchability and production. Liver meal proved to be a good substitute for milk from the viewpoint of hatchability, but if a poultryman has a variety of farm-grown grains, including those named, and some milk, he can get good production from the flock, and the eggs will be hatchable.

Dr. H. D. Branion, also of the O. A. C. staff, discussed the cereals from the viewpoint of growth, and introduced the argument that experimenters and research workers really do not know what constitutes quality in bone. Poultrymen sometimes have considerable difficulty with slipped tendons which cripple the chickens, yet the bone in that case may be just as large and contain all the minerals found in the bone of the healthiest bird. Dr. Branion prophesied that it would be eventually learned that not mineral elements and their combinations but some other and now unrecognized substance would really constitute quality in bone of poultry, horses and other classes of live stock.

At Macdonald College cereal grains have been tested from the viewpoint of fattening and finishing birds for market. Professor W. A. Maw said that corn distributes fat through and between the tissues of the fattening birds, whereas fat produced from wheat is largely laid down on the outside of the carcass beneath the skin. Corn-fed birds are very palatable when eaten, whereas birds finished on wheat are inclined to be dry and unpalatable. Barley-fed birds, particularly when cold, have a delicious chicken flavour.

This research work conducted at Macdonald College has a direct bearing on the grading of market fowl, and Dr. F. N. Barcellus, Chairman of the Poultry Committee, interjected that there is a distinct swing to meat in the programme of many poultrymen today. For a number of years many poultrymen thought only of eggs, but now they are deriving almost as much revenue from market fowl as from eggs, and birds for market are coming back more prominently into the farm poultry picture.

S. Bird reported on refrigeration studies conducted by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, in conjunction with the National Research Council. This study is important from the viewpoint of export to the Old Country. Mr. Bird expressed the opinion that three to four weeks is all birds will stand in chilling storage and come out in good form.—Farmer's Advocate.

Canada Recognizes Services of Currie

Ottawa. — Recognition by the nation of the services of the late Sir Arthur William Currie, former commander of the Canadian Corps, is noted in the supplementary estimates tabled in the House of Commons recently. An appropriation of $50,000 has been made to his estate. The official comment on the vote is that it is "in recognition of the eminent services rendered to his country by the late General during the Great War."

Industrial Survey Shows Increase

NEW YORK—World industrial production in April was generally above the first quarter average, according to the monthly statement on foreign economic conditions issued by the National Industrial Conference Board.

All major countries with the exception of France, Belgium, Switzerland and the Netherlands showed industrial output well over a year ago, according to the survey. Unemployment decreased from March by 5.7 per cent in Great Britain, 7.0 per cent in Germany, 6.6 per cent in France, and 1.3 per cent in the United States, the report said.

Canada and Mexico showed gains for the month, but Central America business conditions were not as good, according to the report. Argentina, Brazil and Chile showed improvement. Wool prices rising 14.4 per cent in April helped Australia, and rayon and steel production reached new records in Japan, although cotton and rayon textile production was curtailed in May.

World prices of raw materials gained in April, with exception of coffee, which declined and rubber, which was about unchanged. European wholesale prices continued to advance during May.

PEAT COST SHOWS SAVING POSSIBLE

Quebec and Ontario Have Assurance From Expert

Ottawa—Effective use of the peat bogs of Ontario and Quebec to provide cheaper fuel and furnish employment is proposed in a report prepared by H. G. Acres, hydraulic engineer and peat expert, of Niagara Falls, Ont. Mr. Acres has investigated processes of briquetting peat in Denmark, Scotland and Ireland. He deals extensively with the peo-gram process.

Mr. Acres concludes his report as follows:

"Can the peat bogs of Central Canada, or any of them, be made to produce in volume a hard, transportable fuel, sufficiently high in effective heat value, in proportion to its bulk, to enable it to compete successfully in the domestic fuel markets of Quebec and Ontario?"

"There are two elements to the answer, one having to do with the physical qualities of briquetted peat as a fuel and the other having to do with its status as a saleable commodity.

"The answer to the first part of the question is that the peo-gram process will produce in volume a hard transportable fuel; that its heat value in proportion to its bulk is such that it can be readily and conveniently used as a general purpose household fuel; and that by reason of its special qualities, briquetted peat has a pound for pound parity with Caneal coal as a fire-place fuel.

"The answer to the second part of the question is that on the basis of the assumed heat value ration of 1½ to one it would be necessary to sell 3,000 pounds of briquetted peat in order to deliver the same amount of effective heat that the customer would obtain from 2,000 pounds of average anthracite coal.

Applying this ratio to the Herin estimated production cost of $4.57 per short ton, thereby foregoing any prospective benefit which might be derived from the realization of higher thermal efficiencies, or from reduced machinery costs, the comparable cost of briquetted peat in Ontario or Quebec becomes $6.85. In other words, on the basis of 56,000 tons of briquetted peat per annum the production cost f.o.b. factory of the equivalent of 2,000 pounds of anthracite coal would be $6.85.

"Taking the delivered price range of prepared sizes of anthracite coal throughout Ontario and Quebec at $13 to $16.50 per short ton, this would mean a spread of $6.15 to $9.65 per short ton between production cost and delivered price.

"These latter figures would appear to indicate that briquetted peat fuel is a saleable commodity.

"Such being the case, the final conclusion is that there exists in the peo-gram process an opportunity to make effective use of the heat resources now lying dormant in the peat bogs of Quebec and Ontario, thereby achieving the double purpose of increasing local occupational opportunities as well as the wealth of the community at large."

A Sand Point correspondent of the Renfrew Mercury bemoans the lack of fish in Chats Lake writing as follows: "Summer residents of Sand Point find the fishing in the Ottawa river rather poor this summer. So far this season the catch has been small and what are caught are of poor quality. In the spring time it was rumored with bass and pickerel but this has not come to pass. At Norway Bay the same may be said of the fishing."

City "Lost" 1,000 Years

Once Capital of Arabia

Somewhat to the south of the pipe line from the oil fields of Iraq to Haifa and Tripoli, on the Mediterranean sea, lies a city of the forgotten past called Petra.

Not far removed from the Gulf of Akaba on the Red sea was once the veritable crossroads of the Old world, notes a writer in the New York Times. In the year 106 A. D. Petra was made the capital of Arabia. Its population was then about 50,000, and goods were brought from Africa, Arabia and India for storage before being transported by caravan to the Valley of the Nile, Palestine, Phoenicia and the Euphrates-Tigris valley. Of such importance was the city that the Romans built two roads to tap its wealth. With the fall of Rome, however, its doom was sealed.

The metropolis of Arabia was then abandoned except for a small number of desert tribesmen. The Arabs considered it sacred ground, and danger menaced any one encroaching upon it. But in 1812 the intrepid Swiss adventurer, John Lewis Burckhardt, reached the city in the disguise of a Bedouin sheik and returned to tell of its mysteries.

A comparatively handful of Arabian faithfuls still inhabit the city, and to this day it is only under the protection of British guards that visitors are admitted into its historical and almost mythical confines.

The Advantages of Pasture

Records of the feed cost of milk production at the Central Experimental Farm for the year 1934 show that during the seven stable feeding months the average cost of milk was 72 cents per 100 lbs., while during the five pasture months, the feed cost was only 46 cents per 100 lbs., or a reduction of 36 per cent., and that in a dry season when considerable supplementary feeding was necessary. Similarly, with beef cattle, under winter feeding conditions it requires heavy feeding of expensive grains to make a gain of two pounds a day, while on fresh spring pasture, two-year-old steers have been known to gain 400 to 500 pounds in a pasture season. A gain of two pounds a day over a pasture season of 150 days, or a total of 300 pounds increase, is considered a good average. At the nominal rate of $2 per head per month for cultivated pasture, this gain is a good fifty per more cent than could be obtained under winter feeding conditions.
