VICTOR HUDON, President. | J. F. SINCENNES, Vice-President

DIRECTORS:

VICTOR HUDON, J. F. SINCENNES, HONORE COTTE, JACQUES GRENIER and GEORGE H. NYE.

The above Joint-Stock Company having organized, under the Limited Liability Act, are now putting up large modern and substantial buildings for the manufacture of COTTON CLOTHS and YARNS.

The main building will be 215 feet long by 78 feet wide, and five storys high, with an Ell 69 by 41 feet, three storys high, the machinery for which has been ordered from England of the latest and most improved styles; the power for driving the same will be supplied by a double-compound Steam Engine of 500 horses.

The location is one of superior advantage—at Hochelaga—a short distance below the city on the banks of the River St. Lawrence, where arrangements will soon be such that all Cotton, Coal and other freights will be unloaded in rear of the Mills. With the protective duty we have of 15 per cent on Cotton goods, and the free entry of Cotton and Cotton Machinery, with an excellent location for securing operatives and labor from 20 to 25 per cent cheaper than in the States, where Cotton Mills are now paying from 20 to 25 per cent on capital invested—any one can readily see what advantages we have. Besides, Cotton and Coal can be landed here at cheaper rates than in the New England States.

More than two-thirds of the Capital has already been subscribed, and there is no reason why capitalists should not invest their money in a business, the results of which cannot but meet their most sanguine expectations.

Applications for Shares may be made at the Office of the Company, or at

POETRY.

LADY LUNE.

The golden day was over,
A glorious day in June;
And up from the shimmering ocean
Slow rose the lady moon.

And the wavelets on the shingle
Rippled a slumbrous tune,
Whilst an angel voice was singing
A lay to "la belle lune!"

An angel, yes, though earth-born,
The sheen of those violet eyes
I knew were but reflections
Of hues from Paradise.

These tresses bathed in moonlight,
That vestment's classic fold,
Seemed an angel's snowy mantle,
And radiant crown of gold.

And I almost feared to see her
Join "sister spirits" fair,
And ascend to the asphodel meadows
Up yonder silver stair.

So I drew her closer to me,
And her hand more tightly press'd;
And lovingly her beauteous head
She pillowed upon my breast.

She was mine, she vowed, mine only,
Whilst moons should wax or wane;
She longed to give her virgin troth
To me in holy fane.

She sought not ranks or honors,
She spurned the thought of gold;
The love I proffer'd to her
Was more than wealth untold.

She would share my name and fortunes,
It could not be too soon;
She invoked, to witness that maiden vow,
The changeable lady moon.

And I kiss'd, and rebaptized her,
To those wavelets' slumbrous tune,
By, alas! the ominous title
Of beautiful Lady Lune.

* * * * * *

She deserved it. Next November
She married a big dragoon;
She shared his wealth. She owns his name,
She is now his Lady—Loon!

MARINE MURDER.

The Crusade against Over-Loading and Rotten Ships.

MR. PLIMSOLL'S APPEAL.

To the Editor of the London Echo.

LONDON, March 24.

SIR,—I herewith inclose you a copy of the Bill which I have introduced into the House of Commons for the purpose of checking over-loading, and securing proper repairs to ships in the interval which will elapse before a more perfect measure issues as the result of the Report of the Royal Commission.

The issue of this Bill has been delayed some weeks in order to allow time for the fullest consideration of the subject, and all the objections which might probably be urged against the proposal in Committee.

The survey provided is simply such as will make every vessel that goes to sea seaworthy—no more, and is simply that to which a full half of all the Mercantile Navy is now voluntarily subjected by the shipowners for purposes of insurance.

The second part of the Bill prohibits deck-loading, and the absolute necessity of this being done will not be disputed by any one at all conversant with the facts of the case.

Of 62 sailing-vessels engaged in the grain and lumber trade between the United Kingdom and America, which were lost in the closing months of 1872, no less than 49 were lost on the homeward voyage, that is, when loaded for England.

The load-line is determined after the most careful consideration of all the scales accessible, British and foreign, and the figures given indicate the minimum free-board which is to be applied to first-class vessels.

Power is given to the Board of Trade to require rather more free-board when such a step seems to be required by the age of the vessel, by extreme length, or by fulness of bottom.

Care has been taken to make the provision of this Bill as little troublesome and harassing as possible to the shipping interest.

Care has been taken while establishing a load line on British ships, to protect the interests of British shipowners against foreigners, for whom we cannot legislate, by making their compliance with these requirements a condition of their entry into our ports.

As, however, to keep out a foreign ship in distress would frustrate the object of the Bill, which is saving of human life, a vessel in distress may enter, shelter, and depart without incurring these penalties, but may not trade.

A great number of consultations have been held with counsel, point after point has been considered and settled, the phraseology of the Bill has been amended and rendered as exact as possible, and no trouble has been spared in the preparation of the measure.

It is certain, however, that, unless a very vigorous demand for its enactment this Session be made by the public, the opposition, determined, unceasing, and persistent, of a small minority of the shipowners, and the hostility of the Board of Trade, will prevent its being carried into law.

May I therefore, ask your powerful aid in forming a public opinion which shall make the passing of this measure an absolute necessity to the Government?

The measure itself would be temporary, and will give place to the more perfect measure which we may expect as the result of the Royal Commission.

In the meantime, however, this can be said of it—that it fairly deals with the evils of unrepair and overloading, and that it deals with these evils in a spirit of perfect impartiality and equality all round.

I am, sir, &c., &c.,

SAMUEL PLIMSOLL.

A BOLD PROJECT.

Forgeries are not so rare as is supposed, and of late years, with the spread of elementary education, they are said so be rather increasing, but they are seldom attempted on a large sale or for great amounts. A clergyman of Middlesborough is just now awaiting his trial for forging joint-stock scrip to the amount of £20,000 to £30,000, but the common run of forgeries seldom go beyond petty sums. For a parallel to the case which has just excited so much alarm and uneasiness, we must go back some thirty years or more. In 1841 the Times brought to light a bold project of forgery, and its prompt and energetic action in the matter is commemorated by a tablet in the Royal Exchange. Four or five different persons, some in Florence, others in London, were engaged in the conspiracy.

On this occasion the forged papers were not bills, but letters of credit. The conspirators produced one of Messrs. Glyn's letters of credit, and procured an imitation of it so perfect that one of the partners of the house said that for a time he was unable to distinguish between the original and the copy. Two Scotchmen, father and son, resident in Florence, designed the fac similes, and a couple of Frenchmen, one of them a Marquis, took charge of the engraving of the plates in London. An English banker at Florence, named Bogle, superintended the distribution of the forgeries. They were presented for payment at Brussels, Ghent, Cologne, Turin, Bologna, and Florence in rapid succession, and in a few days £20,000 had been obtained on them. Either seduced by their easy success, or afraid of prompt detection, and eager to make the most of their chances before an alarm was raised, the conspirators pressed the game too recklessly. Suspicion was aroused, and a communication was sent to Glyn's which led to a disclosure of the fraud. The Times was not afraid to publish an article showing up the swindle in all its ramifications, and Bogle, thinking he could brazen out the matter, took advantage of this to bring an action for libel.

Owing to a technical rule of evidence which prevented the production of certain private letters, the jury were unable legally to identify the plaintiff with the conspiracy, but they gave him only a farthing damages. The Times refused to accept the subscription which was raised to defray its expenses at the trial, and the money was applied to the foundation of scholarships for the boys of Christ's Hospital and the City of London School, and to the erection of commemorative tablets.

FAMILY READING.

"I trust everything, under God," says Lord Brougham, "to habit, upon, in all ages, the lawgiver as the schoolmaster has mainly placed his reliance; habit, which makes everything easy, and casts all difficulties upon a deviation from a wonted course. Make sobriety a habit, and intemperance will be hateful; make prudence a habit, and reckless profligacy will be as contrary to the child, grown or adult, as the most atrocious crimes are to any of your lordships. Give a child the habit of sacredly regarding the truth; of carefully respecting the property of others; of scrupulously abstaining from all acts of improvidence with involve him in distress, and he will just as likely think of rushing into an element in which he cannot breathe, as of lying, or cheating, or stealing."

Industry prolongs life. It is the friend of virtue, and indolence the handmaid of vice. The active are seldom criminal; but most of those who yield to guilty encroachments might trace their lapse from rectitude to habits of idleness, which, leaving the heart vacant, gave full opportunity for the evil passions and desires of our nature to exert their power. A state of ease is at best but a neutral state of being, alike distant from positive happiness and positive misery. But it is the source of misery; and, as such, is shunned by those who are wise enough to understand the philosophy of living pleasantly.

We need not preach the courage to die—that is common enough—but the courage to live, to be honest in spite of poverty and neglect; to be true, though all is dark except where God shines in; to be faithful though heavens fall, and hearts break, and friendship turns to gall. Yes, we must teach men to dare to be unpopular, to be misapprehended, to be ahead of the times, to follow the voice of God though it leads into the wilderness, to tell the devil to his very face that he lies, and also to give him his dues, an act which requires the supremest courage at times.

I wouldn't give a farthing for the triumphant faith of the death hour, unless it comes from that triumphant faith that makes our life full of noblest daring, that is ready to fling aside honor, wealth, the praise of friends, rather than impair for one moment the soul's integrity. Oh, for such a courage—the courage to think, to act, to tell the harsh truths, to overthrow splendid falsehoods, to disown sweet lies and to banish tenderest associations rather than check in the least free movement of the sovereign soul. We all must die with more or less equanimity, but we cannot live in the full splendor of our being except by courage and determined exertion. The coward, under certain circumstances, may die grandly, but never, under any circumstances, can he live grandly.

Life is but death's vestibule, and our pilgrimage on earth is but a journey to the grave; the pulse that preserves our being, beats our dead march, and the blood which circulates our life is floating it onward to the depth of death. To-day we see our friends in health; to-morrow we hear of their decease. We clasped the hand of the strong man but yesterday, and to-day we closed his eyes. We rode in a chariot of comfort but an hour ago, and in a few more hours the last black chariot must convey us to the home of all the living. Stars die, mayhaps; it is said that conflagrations have been seen afar off in the ether, and astronomers have marked the funerals of other worlds—the decay of those mighty orbs that we have imagined set forever in sockets of silver to glisten as the lamps of eternity. Blessed be God, there is no place where death is not life's brother, where life reigns alone, and "to live" is not the first syllable which is to be followed by "to die." There is a land where death-knells are never tolled, where winding sheets are never woven, where graves are never dug. Blest land beyond the skies. To reach it we must die.

A person who has formed his temper and dispositions of mind after a right model—who is humble, meek, cheerful, and contented—can commonly find a convenient shelter when overtaken by the storms of life. The first are the gales to impel us on the voyage of life, but the last ought still to sit at the helm and direct our course. The stream, when it slowly descends with a hoarse murmer from the mountains and ripples through the plain, adorns and enriches the scene; but when it rushes down in a roaring and impetuous torrent, overflowing its banks, it carries devastation along with it; so, when the passions, appetites, and desires, are kept under due restraint they are a useful and felicitating part of our nature; but when they are allowed to rage with unbridled fury, they commit fearful ravages on the character which were fitted to adorn and exalt. We must watch over the first movements of the heart, and not indulge with secret complacency in imaginations which we would be ashamed to avow. If we wish the stream of life to be pure, it ought to be our aim to preserve the fountains whence it flows unpolluted. "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life."

THERE is music in the word home. To the old, it brings a bewitching strain from the harp of memory; to the young, it is a reminder of all that is near and dear to them. Among the many songs we are wont to listen to, there is not one more cherished than the touching melody of "Home, Sweet Home."

Will you go back with me a few years, dear reader, in the history of the past, and traverse in imagination the gay streets and gilded saloons of Paris, that once bright centre of the world's follies and pleasures? Passing through its splendid thoroughfares is one (an Englishman) who has left his home and native land to view the splendors and enjoy the pleasures of a foreign country. He has beheld with delight its paintings, its sculpture, and the grand yet graceful proportions of its buildings, and has yielded to the spell of the sweetest music. Yet, in the midst of his keenest happiness, when he was rejoicing most over the privileges he possessed, temptation assailed him. Sin was presented to him in one of the most bewitching garbs. He drank wildly and deeply of the intoxicating cup, and his draught brought madness. Reason was overwhelmed, and he rushed out, all his scruples overcome, careless of what he did or how deeply he became immersed in the hitherto unknown sea of guilt.

The cool night air lifted the damp locks from his heated brow, and swept with soothing touch over his flushed cheeks. Walking on, calmer, but no less determined, strains of music from a distance met his ear. Following in the direction the sound indicated, he at length distinguished the words and air. The song was well remembered. It was "Home, Sweet Home." Clear and sweet the voice of some English singer rose and fell on the air, in the soft cadences of that beloved melody.

Motionless, the wanderer listened till the last note floated away and he could hear nothing but the ceaseless murmur of the great city. Then he turned slowly, with no feeling that his manhood was shamed by the tear which fell as a bright evidence of the power of song.

The demon that dwells in the wine had fled and reason once more asserted her right to control. As the soft strains of "Sweet Home" had floated to his ear, memory brought up before him his own "sweet home." He saw his gentle mother, and heard her speak, while honest pride beamed from her eye, of her son in whose nobleness and honor she could always trust; and his heart smote him at he thought how little he deserved such confidence. He remembered her last words of love and counsel, and the tearful farewell of all those dear ones who gladdened that far away home with their presence. Well he knew their pride in his integrity, and the tide of remorse swept over his spirit as he felt what their sorrow would be could they have seen him an hour before. Subdued and repentant, he retraced his steps, and, with his vow never to taste of the terrible draught that could so excite him to madness was mingled a deep sense of thankfulness for his escape from further degradation. The influence of home had protected him, though the sea rolled between.

None can tell how often the commission of crime is prevented by such memories. If, then, the spell of home is so powerful, how important it is to make it loveable and pleasant! Many a time a cheerful home and smiling face does more to make good men and women than all the learning and eloquence that can be used. It has been said that the sweetest words in our language are "Mother, Home, and Heaven;" and one might almost say that the word home included them all, for who can think of home without remembering the gentle mother who sanctified it with her presence. And is not home the dearest name for heaven? We think of that better land as a place where brightness will never fade to night. Oh, then, may our homes on earth be the centre of all our joys; may they be as green spots in the desert, to which we can retire weary of the cares and perplexities of life, and drink the pure waters of a love which we know to be always sincere and always unfailing.

FAMILY MATTERS.

Disagreeable Perspiration.—To remove the disagreeable odour produced by excessive perspiration, place about two tablespoonfuls of the compound spirit of ammonia in a basin of water. Washing the face arms, and hands with this leaves the skin as clean, neat, and fresh as any one could wish. The was is perfectly harmless, very cheap, and is recommended on the authority of an experienced physician.

A Cure for Low Spirits.—Exercise for the body, occupation for the mind; these are the grand constituents of health and happiness, the cardinal points upon which everything turns. Motion seems to be a great preserving principle of nature, to which even inanimate things are subject; for the winds, waves, the earth itself, are restless, and the waving of trees, shrubs, and flowers is known to be an essential part of their economy.

To Remove Redness of the Skin.—Mix half an ounce of blanched bitter almonds with half a pint or soft water; make an emulsion by beating the almonds and water together; then strain through some muslin. Bathe the face occasionally with this mixture. Redness of the skin, when caused by a disordered stomach or deranged liver, may be remedied by the occasional use of a mild purgative, say rhubarb and magnesia. Occasional fasting, and the avoidance of all highly-seasoned food, rich gravies, pastry, or stimulants, will hasten the cure.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

There is a dreadful little frog of a baby in Chicago, whose scientific father has taught it to be amphibious by constant duckings. It is six months old, and is accustomed to breathe and play under water in a wholly unconcerned and natural manner. As a baby it is tame and unimportant, but as an exponent of a new line of popular science it is extremely interesting.

One would as readily think of looking for honest men in Washington as for bandits in London. Yet in London these theatrical persons are to be found, and not on the stage either. A lawyer from the Isle of Wight was recently kidnapped, kept for some time in a confinement entirely doleful and disagreeable, and released only on payment of a large ransom.

Massachusetts, we believe, is noted for intellect and patent medicine, two things which lend dignity and excitement to the average Puritan farmer. A lovely story of devotion to principle and a particular pet potion is told by a country druggist, to whom entered one day a man inquiring did he buy bottles. The druggist did, and shortly thereafter the man appeared with a large wagon running over with—Balsam bottles. There were seventy-three dozen, and every one of these precious bottles had been emptied by the family of that noble man. The family is still living, a monument of perseverance and balsam. This story is true. We know it, because we saw it in a Massachusetts newspaper.

"If we are not to have a universal language the world is at least to have a universal dress. The bond of a dress-coat between nations is as strong as a bond of tongue. The King of the Sandwich Islands wears the garments of Paris, and the untutored North American Indian the hair of somebody else. The last instance of this blending of habits comes from Constantinople, where the police excludes from the theatres and other places of amusement everybody who wears a turban. It is thought that the Sultan wants to introduce in its place that herald of civilization, the stove-pipe hat. It is a shame. What would Aladdin, Sindbad, or Giafar be without the turban? Would there have been any Arabian Nights if Haroun Alraschid had worn a hat? Think of Scheherezade in a French bonnet! One by one old traditions and customs are dying, and all our dear, venerable romances are remorselessly crushed beneath the heel of the tailor and the milliner!

PROPOSED TRADE GUILD OF EDUCATION.

A Mr. Stuart, a graduate of Cambridge, has just delivered an interesting address to gentlemen in London interested in promoting the technical and higher education of skilled workmen. He detailed the efforts he had made to induce the University of Cambridge to extend its educational advantages to workingmen, by the employment of lectures on various branches of education and the formation of classes by Fellows of the University in the various manufacturing towns. He contended that as working men could not attend the Universities, the Universities should go to them. He had laid his scheme before the Council of the University during the past week, who had appointed a committee to consider how it could be practically worked out. A long and interesting discussion took place, and the following resolution was unanimously adopted:—

"That in the opinion of this meeting it is desirable to form a Trades' Guild of Learning with a view of promoting the delivery of lectures and the formation of classes to assist members of Trades' Societies and other skilled workmen in acquiring a knowledge of history, political economy, and mechanical education, as well as literature, science, and art generally; that the Trades' Societies in the United Kingdom be invited to connect themselves with this Guild by a small annual payment, which should give to their members admission to certain courses of lectures and to classes, either without payment or on reduced terms also to libraries, reading-rooms, discussions, and meetings, when these can be provided by the Guild, and if the requisite funds can be obtained, an agent, commanding the confidence of Trades' Societies, be engaged to visit their lodge meetings by permission, and solicit their support for the foregoing objects; that in order to bring within the reach of members of the Trades' Guild of Learning the advantages of University teaching, and of such educational endowments as were intended for the less wealthy portion of the community, it is important to obtain the co-operation of the authorities of the University, and other governing bodies at present administering such endowments."

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

"I have never felt willing," said a well-known divine, in one of his lectures, "in performing the marriage ceremony, to use the word obey in reference to the wife—wedlock being a state of entire reciprocity."

If you are a wise man you will treat the world as the moon treats it. Show it only one side of yourself, seldom show yourself too much at a time, and let what you show be calm, cool, and polished. But look at every side of the world.

It is one thing to moralize, another thing to act. There are men who can utter the most refined and elevated sentiments, and at the same time be guilty of crimes of the deepest dye. These are the most dangerous of mankind.

As he that can revenge an injury, and will not, discovers a great and magnanimous soul, so he that can return a kindness and dare not, shows a mean and contemptible spirit.

The world cannot advance much, cannot make real, substantial progress, till people learn to devote fewer hours of the day, fewer days in the week, fewer days in the year, and fewer years of their lives, to the mere art of money-getting.

WIT AND HUMOR.

"Home—sweet, sweet home," as the bee said when he entered his hive.

The scientists have discovered that the reason a woman can keep a lover by her tears is because love, like beef or pork, is best preserved by brine.

"I say, Jim, which would you rather, that a lion tore you in pieces or a tiger?" "Why, you goose, of course I'd rather a lion tore a tiger in pieces."

A beau of much experience says that "the time for a fellow to leave is when a young lady asks him how the walking is."

A coroner's jury in Vermont, impanelled to ascertain the cause of the death of a notorious drunkard, brought in a verdict of "Death by hanging—around a rum shop." In California a coroner's jury, under similar circumstances, rendered a more courteous verdict, "Accidental death while unpacking glass."

SPARKS.

It is estimated that the miner's strike just ended in Great Britain entailed a loss of $3,750,000 upon the workmen.

New York is to be rid of the Tombs shortly; it has been suggested that the site be turned into a play-ground with pond and fountain in the centre.

It is said that among the bodies washed ashore at the wreck of the Atlantic, was one of a young woman attired in sailor's clothes who had served on board for three voyages undiscovered.

The younger of the Leon brothers, gymnasts, fell heavily a distance of ten feet, in Chicago, on Monday night, from a trapeze, and fractured his right thigh. He is probably disabled for life.

Dr. Alloway, dentist, of Montreal, has invented and patented a very ingenious lock-stopper for bottles, which prevents all but the holder of a small key from extracting the contents. The invention commends itself and should meet with a large sale.

It is rumored that "better terms" have been granted New Brunswick, the bargain being that the Dominion will make the subsidy $150,000, and in return take over the duties on timber exported from the Province. The latter last year amounted to about $60,000.

The New York Witness says it can admire De Witt Talmage saying grotesque things in the pulpit and making his congregation laugh, but adds:—"In speaking thus we do not, however, mean to be understood as defending the marriage ceremony performed in masquerading dress at a church fair."

JUDGE BOSSE.

Speaking of the difficulty existing between the above Judge and the authorities, a Western exchange says:—

"They have a very obstinate judge in the Province of Quebec. It appears that an act of Parliament provides that Judges of Superior Courts must reside within the limits of their district, and this Judge, Bosse by name, is determined to be "boss" de facto, acts of Parliament to the contrary, notwithstanding. If we remember rightly, the Provincial Government have, ever since 1869, been sending him notices traversing the gamut of urgency, from simple official notifications, meek requests, suggestions, and orders up to the most peremptory commands, and all in vain. The Judge won't budge. He has planted his stakes and he won't pull up. So the Dominion Government is invoked in the premises. The matter is now, not for the first time either, before the Commons. The Secretary of State has sent a number of formal but futile intimations to the refractory dispenser of justice, that his candlestick should be removed into its place, and the Judge has received them all with the same impartial contempt. The joke of the thing is that the clause requiring the Judge's residence in his district, appears to have no penalty attached, and His Honor appears to think such a clause about as formidable as a wasp without a sting. Either Government might remove the Judge from office, but that would seem too harsh a proceeding for so artificial an offence, or they had better amend the Act by attaching a penalty, and enforce it. If that does not move him, we recommend extract of Castor.

BROTHER JONATHAN seems to have "caught a Tartar" in the Modoc warrior, Captain Jack. Months have elapsed since the United States forces moved on the dusky chieftain's stronghold, and so far the losses have been solely on the side of the troops, while the Indians are as defiant as ever. The latest tidings tell of a sally by the Modocs, and the massacre of a number of white men, including the Rev. Dr. Thomas, U. S. Commissioner, and General Canby, a cavalry officer. American journals often express surprise at the inability of Spain to quell the Cuban uprising; the weary drag of the Modoc "war" ought to explain matters.

RESPECTING the suits instituted against the city in the matter of the Mountain Park expropriations, the Gazette of this morning makes some extraordinary revelations. It is stated that "Mr. Andrew Allan never gave any authority to anyone to use his name in these suits, and that he has called upon Mr. Barnard not simply to withdraw the proceedings in which his name has been improperly used, but to state through the press that the use of his name was unauthorized." Our contemporary moreover believes that in other cases proceedings have only been authorized at the earnest solicitation of Mr. Barnard and "upon an entire misrepresentation by him of their scope." These are grave charges, which the Bar must deal with at once. We trust all who have been made victims of Mr. Barnard's "misrepresentation" will at once follow the example of Messrs. Smith and Allan.

IT may interest some to know that the United States Signal Service authorities affirm that Capt. Williams was fully justified in turning from his course for coal. It has been very generally held that he should have trusted to the Atlantic's sails and pressed on towards New York, but the Signal Service Bureau demonstrates that neither shortness of coal nor of provisions presented to Capt. Williams so serious a threat of danger as did, in conjunction with these, a rapidly falling barometer. In noticing this, the New York Tribune says: "On Wednesday, the 26th ult., a storm center was reported on the coast of Oregon. Passing over Dakotah and Iowa, this storm was marked by a region of very low barometric pressure. On Saturday afternoon it was very violent, with its center approaching this city. During that day south-east winds and rain were raging with unusual and increasing severity on the New England and New Jersey coasts. All Sunday the storm center was developing in New England into absolutely unprecedented proportions. On Monday morning this storm, with a barometric pressure below 28.8 inches (a record hitherto unparalleled), passed along the mouth of the St. Lawrence, out upon the ocean. When on Sunday afternoon the captain of the Atlantic read by his barometer the approach of an extraordinary tempest, with the certainty of heavy westerly gales, he would have been guilty of a gross error in seamanship if, while short of coals, he had attempted to face it. He has at best a heavy burden to bear. Let us give him credit for correct judgment in avoiding what then was really the greater danger. He did right in changing his course toward Halifax."

IT is to hoped that the disastrous failure of the New York gas-makers' strike will cause the other branches of industry meditating a similar move to look well before they leap. It seems that for every man that struck there were three eager to be engaged at the wages which the strikers refused. It is quite true that gas-making requires no technical skill that cannot be acquired in a few hours, and that, therefore, more laborers are easily convertible into gas-makers; but from the utterances of the local journals it would seem that the same surplus of labor is to be found in almost all trades in New York at the present time. A strike under such circumstances would be foolish in the extreme. We regret to observe it stated in a New York paper that the gas-men "have sacrificed whatever public sympathy they might have reasonably claimed, by their brutal assaults upon peaceable men in search of work. A German, looking for the Gas Works, was knocked down the other day, beaten and kicked in the face, and then stabbed. A man who was only suspected of wanting to work was pursued by a body of strikers, who stopped a car in which he was riding and attempted to drag him out." The same journal remarks, truly enough, that "the liberty which the strikers claim for themselves of either working or not working, just as they see fit, they must be compelled to allow to others. A strike is a lawful and in many cases a sensible mode of obtaining for labor what it is really worth. We are not opposed to the principle upon which it is founded, and for the same reason we believe in the justice, if not in the wisdom, of a lock-out. The laboring man has a perfect right to say, My labor is worth so much an hour, and I will not give it for less. The capitalist has a right to say, The wages which I offer are worth so much labor, and I will not give them for less. Only in both cases there must be fair dealing and no interference with those who offer either their work or their money at cheaper rates."

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

SPECTACLES.—Very good indeed; hope you enjoyed the joke as thoroughly as we do. The explanation is simple, the sense of a sentence is rarely considered by compositors, rapidity being the desideratum, hence type-setting becomes, in a great measure, purely mechanical. In the hurry consequent upon the compression of two day's work into one, the report was not proof read; hence the error which has afforded you so much amusement.

THE MONTREAL LACROSSE CLUB.

The success of our leading snow-shoe and lacrosse clubs has become a general desire, and the popularity of both of these peculiarly Canadian sports needs no advertisement. The Montrealers have gone to work early, and on Wednesday evening commenced re-organization to "follow the ball" this season. A thorough determination to wipe out all associations and connections with matches which attracted the rowdy element was formed, and the sensational champion matches which had been a deep injury to the game, as experience had proved, disgusting good players as well as the respectable part of the public. For this, no club was responsible, but the character of the matches played.

It was resolved at the meeting of the Montreal Club to continue the complimentary ca[illegible]s; to visit the United States to play a [illegible] on with the Knickerbockers; to establish a [illegible]-room, for which $100 was subscribed by those present. A balance of $60 is in the Treasury, and the ground had paid for itself. His Excellency Lord Dufferin was elected Honorary Patron. The following were chosen officers for the ensuing year:—N. H. Hughes, Honorary President; Lemuel Cushing, President; A. Grant and W. H. Whyte; Vice-Presidents; D. Bowie, Secretary; H. Becket, Treasurer. Committee — Messrs. Wood, Ermatinger, Beers, Maltby, McIndoe, Dowd, and Carnegie. Mr. Dowd was elected life member.—Com.

THE PULPIT.

Sherbrooke street W. M. Church.

Rev. A. Arrighi, B.D., preached yesterday morning at the Sherbrooke street Wesleyan Church' taking as his text, the 31st verse of the 15th chapter of St. Mark: "Likewise also the chief priests mocking said among themselves with the Scribes—He saved others, Himself He cannot save."

He dwelt upon the indignity of these remarks, on the part of Christ's enemies, who were well acquainted with the wonderful miracles He had performed in the few years preceding His death, and while adducing these extraordinary evidences of His power, as proof of His ability to have released Himself from His ignominious condition, explained that such a course would have been impossible, as it was imperatively necessary that every jot and little relative to His coming announced by the prophets of old, should be strictly fulfilled. He developed the Saviour's abounding love for the human race, as shown by His willing submission to the shameful death of the cross, and closed an earnest appeal to his hearers, to give evidence of their appreciation of His mercy by an acceptation of the principles of the Christian religion, by singing in a somewhat sweet and attractive voice, a hymn which bore the simple refain—is it true? He reiterated that the promises of Christ were so true that they should rather doubt the actuality of their own existence, than their deep and affecting reality, and he exhorted them as Christians to show forth fruits of their Christianity, by constant exertion in its interests, and the salvation of souls, urging that if on self examination they chanced to discover that they had been remiss in this respect in the past, to enter more zealously into that sacred and all important work in the future, maintaining that the proofs of their personal salvation were self-conscious, being contained within, while from the custom of the Romish Church in keeping lamps burning day and night before the consecrated wafer, he borrowed an illustration of their duty which lay in presuring the light of their faith brightly and unceasingly clear and pure, in the presence of their Saviour, the founder of their religion.

St. James Street W. M. Church.

This church was crowded to excess last evening, many being unable to obtain admission, to hear the converted Italian, the Rev. Signor Antonio Atrighi, who, as announced, gave a description of his own conversion. He was listened to with intense interest, and at times created a sensation throughout the congregation. The rev. gentleman will, on Tuesday evening, deliver a lecture at the same place on "Life in Italy," on which occasion he will sing several sacred melodies in Italian and English. No doubt the church will be filled to overflowing. The proceeds of the lecture are to help to defray his expenses to his native land, where he intends preaching the Word of God to his fellow-countrymen.

Church of the Gesu.

Rev. Father Moylan, S. J., occupied the pulpit last evening at the English service in the Gesu and delivered a discourse upon the words: "This is the day he hath made; let us be glad and rejoice therein"—the 24th verse of the 117th Psalm.

Such were the inspired words, with which the Church of Jesus Christ greeted her children dispersed in every clime, on the annual recurrence of the greatest of her festivals. Throwing aside all sorrow and penance, she invested herself anew with the robes of joy and triumph. In her sacred temples, the mournful recital of the sufferings of the Redeemer, had given place to canticles of praise and thanksgiving. Joyfully at the foot of the cross she rejoiced over his glorious sepulchre. Nor was the festival confined to the life that then was, for on that day the glory of the Triune God was fully indicated, and death which had ruled with an iron sceptre over their fallen race, was conquered, sin which had disfigured his living images, was expiated, and the devil vanquished by the act which had been the instrument of his victory, was confounded. That heavenly spirit which had rejoiced at the birth of the Saviour, and which had announced the joyful news to the good shepherds of Bethlehem had rejoiced also at His resurrection, and had hastened to proclaim the glad tidings to the pious women, and the Apostles. How keen and intense must have been the angel's joy; the sad havoc made by the defection of Lucifer and his associates; the numerous heavenly thrones rendered tenantless through their fatal rebellion, and on that day they felt their Divine Lord triumph over death and hell, and by his victory open the portals of a felicitous eternity to millions of our favored race, destined hencefor h to repair the losses of the angelic hosts; and as if so many voices both above and below sufficed not to worthily celebrate the glorious resurrection of Jesus Christ, inanimate nature itself said the Apostle, groaned till it was liberted from the slavery to which their vanity had subjected it. Inanimate nature itself at this happy season emerged from its death-like silence and exhaustion smiling and blossoming anew, making this in its own eloquent language, emblematic for their instruction of the power and glory of Him who out of nothing called it into existence and regulated the unfailing succession of the seasons; who in his very abasement and in the arms of death took unto himself life again, and who through the merits of his own triumphant resurrection would make their bodies rejoin their souls in the realms of immortality. It was the greatest of all festivals as it was the grandest of all the seasons. "Christ risen from the dead," said the Apostle, "dieth no more," hence while it was the greatest of festivals, it was also the greatest of all possible miracles and mysteries. No prodigy could equal the raising from the dead, and of all resurrections, resurrection by one's own unaided power, was the most miraculous. "No, greater wonder," said Pope St. Leo, surnamed the Great, "did the Son of God, than when he rose with His body, and lifted that life to Heaven"; "and the Son of God," continued another great Pope, St. Gregory, "who was insulted by the Jews saying, "if thou be the Son of God come down from the cross, and we will believe in thee;" would not come down, using his great strength, to rise from the dead; greater, therefore, is it to rise from the grave than to descend from the cross." Greater was it to destroy death by rising, than to save life by descending. True it was that as a public minister their blessed Lord, had raised to life his friend, Lazarus, and the son of the widow, but centuries previous, his prophets, had performed the same wonder; and in this respect, both as regarded the greatness and the number of miracles, he was surpassed by His Apostles and their successors, conformably to His prediction. But one miracle alone stood forth unparalled in the annals of mankind; performed neither by the Patriarchs of the Old Testament, nor the Ministers of the New; on which was stamped he seal of Divinity; execut d by His own strength, and predicted as such by himself; appealed to as proof of His Divine origin—that of destroying Death by the very act of dying; of recovering life while under its relentless grasp; a miracle solely reserved to the Son of God, the foundation of their Faith, and the ground of their hopes.

The mystery they celebrated was the divine resurrection of the divine founder of Christianity; he was not more the universal victim of mankind; he had stripped himself of every mark of suffering, and every vestige of mortality; he was now the prototype of a regenerated race transformed from the slavery of sin and adopted as sons of God; he had assumed the state of glory and the mantle of immortality, profound and heavenly truth which the help of revelation alone could enable them to understand. Relative to this matter the Evangelist St. Luke said: "Ought not Christ to have suffered and entered into His lory?" From this necessity did the death of the God-man derive its origin, to appease the infinite justice of the Heavenly Father, outraged by our sins; to offer in his Divine person the expiating victim for our weakness and unworthiness; to perform the office of Mediator without degrading his dignity as God, he appeared amongst us and like unto u.

Guided by the light of faith, initiated into the secrets of the Almighty, they might follow their blessed Redeemer at every step from the cradle to the cross; and although they saw him poor, despised, forsaken, calumniated, ranked with the ungodly, and nailed to the accursed wood of the cross, they believed neither in the scandal of the Jews nor the mockery of the Gentiles, bitterly deploring the sad necessity which condemned Him, the Son of the living God, to such humiliation and suffering, and steadfastly believing in it, whilst their faith remained unshaken and their love was increased. They prostrated themselves in the stable at Bethlehem and acknowledged Him as their God; they saw Him in the workshop, and like Mary and Joseph adored Him; in His presence, with John the Baptist, they trembled; they witnessed his ascent to Calvary, and exclaimed before the whole world "My Lord and my God!" Certain heretics in the early ages of the Church had denied in divers manners the reality of the sufferings of Jesus Christ, pretending that they were merely apparent and the creation of fancy, essentially incompatible with the divine person of the Redeemer; but vain were their efforts, and absurd their doctrine, for through the Providence of God the dogma of the reality of the human nature of Christ, and consequently of His sufferings, was surrounded with light of evidence so strong as to command the belief of all reflecting beings, whether the friends or the opponents of Christianity. Did a shadow of doubt on this point exist, a perusal of the circumstances of His passion and death, so minutely recorded by the four Evangelists, would suffice to establish with irresistible conviction, that foundation article of their faith. What else than a human soul could extort from the agonized Redeemer these words: "My soul, oh Father, my soul is sorrowful, even unto death!"—what other than a human body could pour forth a bloody sweat, which soaked the ground whereon he lay postrate; what besides humanity could have made him exclaim when on the cross, "My God! my God! why hast thou forsaken me?" He expired, it might be said, in the sight of the whole world, and to set at rest all possible doubt of his death his sacred side was pierced with a spear, this, to confirm the faith of his unborn children of every age to the day of judgment, resolved to make of it the great proof of His humanity, as He purposed to make His subsequent resurrection to be the principal evidence of His divinity. The Crown of the resurrection was the beginning of that glory, which never would fade, and the dawing of that day which never would set, while the object of his suffering was to encourage their own weakness, and to show forth in his own career, the certainly of reward. The reverend father discussed several additional topics connected with his subject, laying emphasis on the Resurrection, the foundation of the Christian faith, and picturing the scene that would be exhibited on the day of judgment, Magna Dies, Dies Iræ, urging in conclusion most earnestly upon their attention, the fact that this life passed their selection was irrevocable, as on this side of the grave alone, did they possess any choice respecting the condition of their future and eternal estate.

The music was fine, and the church was as had been anticipated, more than usually thronged.

Life Insurance.

The Phœnix Mutual Life Insurance Co'y., of Hartford, Conn., issues one of the most unique annual statements for Jan. 1st, 1873, that has come under our observation, for, lo these many days. The assets of the Company now exceed $8,000,000. The surplus, free of all liabilities, exceeds $1,000,000. The income last year was nearly $3,500,000, and losses paid upwards of $800,000. It furnishes a table indicating the progress of the Company, which shows how the increase in the number of policies issued during the past ten years has come up from less than 1,000 per annum to upwards of 10,000 per annum; how the assets have increased nearly twenty-fold, and the income more than thirty-fold. The old Phœnix is progressive. It has paid in loss claims nearly $3,000,000, in dividends nearly $2,700,000 during all this time in which it has been so largely increasing its assets.—[Insurance Monitor.

The Celebrated Woven Wire Mattrass.

Allusion has already been made in these columns to the "National," a woven wire mattrass, and a marvel of inventive ingenuity, manufactured by the W. W. M. Co., and kept for sale by James Brown & Bro., hardware Merchants, St. James street. This mattrass possesses rare sleeping qualities, and during the several years it has been in use has invariably given in all respects unqualified satisfaction; the best proof, indeed, that experience fully warrants all that has been said in its favor is the fact that those who once purchase return and express their confidence by additional investments. It is undoubtedly all that it is claimed—cheap, in consideration of its advantages, elastic, and durable. The Company manufactures two mattrasses, one of which (the "National") possesses the peculiar recommendation of being made hard or easy at will. In addition Messrs. Brown & Bro. make it a point to keep on hand an unrivalled assortment of hardware and other goods.

WINGATE'S NERVO-TONIC PILLS supply one of the most important consitutents of the human economy which is found in the brain nerves, blood, bones and tissues which, if from any cause become deficient, produces that debilitated condition of the system characterized by a want of nerve tone. "I have been for two years using largely in my practice Dr. Wheeler's Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calisaya, and, in my judgment, there is no preparation of its kind that can compare with it where it is applicable With feeble, anaemic women, of whom we have so many, and in cases of convalescing from prostrating diseases I should hardly know how to get along without it. In Dyspepsia it acts like a charm—in fact in any of the long list of exhaustive diseases it is the remedy.

SOLAR GAS GENERATOR.

SIMPLE IN OPERATION,
PERFECTLY RELIABLE,
EASILY MANAGED,
UNQUESTIONABLY SAFE.

NO FIRE USED!

The light is soft and mellow, more pleasant to the eyes, and CHEAPER THAN COAL GAS.

The great defect of almost all Gas Machines 's, the gas is extremely rich at first, consuming the best of the Gasoline, and caving the poorer portions for the last, which give only a thin, weak flame, and the residuum, from which no light can be obtained, and which is so much waste, has to be drawn off.

This defect is obviated in the SOLAR GAS GENERATOR by drawing from the bottom of the reservoir the heavy portions, which, when Gasoline is fresh, give abundance of light thus leaving the lighter and best portions to be consumed last.

IT HAPPENED on a bright, Spring morning, as I left my home, at Beaver Hall, to walk to my business in the city, I was overtaken by my friend Royden, who had invested in one of J. G KENNEDY & Co.'s capital $12 suits. I could not help remarking the contrast; my suit (although an expensive one) was not half so smart and well cut, and in the bright morning appeared quite rusty, when side by side with his. I resolved I would no longer be deluded through prejudice from the advantages offered by this well-known house; and have since saved, at least, 25 per cent in my own and my boys' CLOTHING.

— The sale of tickets for Bellew's readings at the Queen's Hall, opens to day.

— The Amy Stone Dramatic Combination appear at the Theatre Royal, this evening.

— G. B. Burland and James Coristine, Esq., will be the visiting Governors to the General Hospital for the week.

— Rev. A. Arrighi, B.D., lectures on Tuesday evening, in the St. James' Street Wesleyan Church, on "Life in Italy."

— An entertainment of tableaux vivants, with music and readings will be given at the Queen's Hall, under the auspices of the St. George's Society on Saturday evening the 19th.

— Twenty-three interments took place last week in the Protestant Cemetery, nine of the deceased being children; one death had been due to small-pox, and five to consumption.

— Mrs. Saunderson, Miss Idler, Messrs. J. Prume and Maltby, with Prof. Andrew will appear next Thursday evening, at the conversazione to be given by the Young Men's Association of Trinity Church.

— In one of the cases of the Park expropriation, the Commissioners appointed will commence their labors on the 16th inst.; in a few others, on the 18th; the returns to be made, either on or about the first of next month.

— A fine, new organ, built by Warren & Co., will be formally opened in the American Presbyterian Church, on the 24th inst., when a number of choice selections of Sacred Music will be rehearsed by a choir, composed of fifty voices.

— To morrow afternoon, Mr. Shaw will sell at the residence No. 121 Champ de Mars st., the whole of the neat household furniture, fine-toned pianoforte, &c., the whole to be removed immediately after the sale. Sale at two o'clock.

— There can be little doubt after the unquestionable failure of the efforts made to secure funds for the re-building of St. Patrick's Hall, that the ground will be sold; the question asked by anxious shareholders is—when?

— The St. George's Church Temperance Society will hold a public meeting in the School Hall, Stanley street, this evening at 8 o'clock. Addresses will be delivered by members of the society, and other friends. Songs by the Glee Club; Chairman, Very Rev. Dean Bond.

— Fifty-one prisoners occupied the cells last night; twenty-one arrested for drunkenness, were, in accordance with custom, released. J. Doyle, a waiter, one of the prisoners, was taken in charge by Detective Lafon on suspicion of having stolen goods from S. Heuser.

— A cash-box was found yesterday on Dorchester street, which proves to be one that was stolen last Fall, when it contained some $100; parties were arrested on suspicion subsequently but the charge was never established. Search was made at the time for the box, but it was, it seems, embedded in the earlier snows. It was taken from M. St. Jacques, a resident of this city.

— On Saturday the preliminary proceedings in a number of expropriation cases were concluded before Judge Mackay, and Commissioners were named for the properties of W. O. Smith, estate Hall, estate Redpath, estate Frothingham, Hugh Taylor, Robert Campbell, Pierre Belanger, Louis Lamontagne, E. Ferland and D. Dalbec. Several will in all probability be purchased privately. Proceedings for the expropriation of the portion of Sir Hugh Allan's property required, were postponed to the 21st inst.

TYPOGRAPHICAL.

The Committee of Reception of the Jacques Cartier Typographical Union, No. 145 (French Canadian printers), are soliciting subscriptions to their fund for the entertainment of the delegates to the International Typographical Union, which meets in this city in June next. The Committee's appeal has met with a very generous response.

THE SHORTEST ROUTE TO EUROPE.

A correspondent seemingly well acquainted with the subject of which he treats, after reviewing the various routes which have been suggested as securing the above object, asserts that Paspebiac, on the north side of Bay Chaleurs presents superior advantages in every respect; being open all winter, safe, easy of approach and only requiring ninety miles of railway to connect with the Intercolonial at the Restigouche River.

RUBINSTEIN.

Our citizens may expect a rich treat in the concerts to be given by the above artiste and eminent associates in the Queen's Hall on Monday and Tuesday, 21st and 22nd inst. The following from a New York paper affords some idea of what may be expected:—

The coming of so great a man as Rubinstein to this country is a most notable event. "Life is short but art is long," says the proverb; and here we have a man who has barely attained maturity, and yet has reached the final results of his profession. Listening to him we feel that we are in the presence of the one person in all the world who is the complete master of the piano-forte, who controls most absolutely all its moods, resources, mechanism, and possibilities, and has subdued it to his own purposes. What it refuses to his hand it can give to no other living man.

We have little space to do justice to Mr. Wieniawski, whose violin playing would create a furore in it itself, if he were alone, and consoles us for not having heard Paganini. He is full, rich, careful, vigorous, all that could be wished for in a violinist, and what we have never heard before.

SAD CATASTROPHE ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

A mournful tale of the sea comes from British Columbia. Having left Sitka with thirty-one souls on board, including several U. S. officers, the American steamer Geo. S. Wright proceeded to Kluvok Bay, for the purpose of taking in freight, consisting of fish, skins, oil, furs, &c.; having completed her cargo, the vessel left the bay on January 25, for Naraimo, and has never since been heard of. H. M. S. vessels and those of the U. S. vied with each other in searching for the lost ship, on obtaining tidings of her fate, but have only, thus far, been rewarded with finding her signboard.

Captain Shanley, of H. M. S. Petrel, describes the coast as the roughest and wildest he has ever witnessed, and also pictures Cape Caution (which is near where the vessel is supposed to have been wrecked) as a perfect pyramid of surf and breakers. It is supposed that a cluster of rocks known as "Devil's Reef," was the scene of the sad catastrophe.

3rd. EDITION

SIX O'CLOCK.

THE American papers have telegrams from Aspinwall confirming the reported destruction of San Salvador, the capital of the South American Republic of that name. It is said that the shocks extended over several days, during which eight hundred persons perished. It is estimated that property amounting in value to $12,000,000 was destroyed, partly by the earthquake and partly by a fire which succeeded. San Salvador has suffered badly from earthquakes, the most notable having occurred in 1859 and 1854:

There is no historical record as to the destruction of life and property in 1659, but in 1853, a year previous to the latest chronicled disaster, San Salvador City contained about 30,000 inhabitants, a large and beautiful cathedral, eight other churches, a university, a female seminary, several hospitals and two extensive aqueducts for providing a sufficient water supply. The city at that period was in a very flourishing condition, with a rapidly increasing trade, but on the night of the 16th of April, 1854, it was completely destroyed by an earthquake, when over 100 lives were lost and an incalculable amount of property ruined. Subsequently a new city was laid out by the government ten miles nearer the sea, called Nuevo San Salvador, but so general was the purpose of the inhabitants to rebuild their ruined houses that in the year 1855 the Legislature determined to continue the seat of power in the old city. Since that time until the catastrophe which has just occurred, San Salvador has been making rapid advances. Schools, colleges, and churches have multiplied, and the city was beginning to occupy a prouder position than it ever before enjoyed, when this towering misfortune befel it.

A Lull at Ottawa.

No Parliamentary news, as to-day is being observed as a holiday, and all the Departments are closed; the Houses of Parliament are quite deserted. A large number of members are expected to-morrow, when business will be resumed. The various committees will begin to sit again after Wednesday.

The weather is fine but chilly, with a high wind. The streets are becoming more passable for pedestrians.

Dastardly Attempt on a Saloon-Keeper at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, April 11.

This afternoon Wm. Sanders, George Fletcher, and Michael Connor entered the beer saloon of Philip Reese, No. 216 Pear street, and stabbed the proprietor in the neck, both wrists and the face. They were subsequently arrested. Two of the gang are members of the fire department. The wounds are serious.

ROUND TOWN.

— The ice forced ashore from the central parts of the river from its thickness and firmness, has re excited fears of a flood.

— The deputation at present "starring" the American cities, may possibly arrive home on Wednesday evening next.

— E. D. Proctor and Robert Esdaile, Esqs., are visiting Governors at the Protestant House of Industry and Refuge this week.

— Tickets for Charity Concert, to-night, can be bought at the door. The excellent programme and good object will command a full house.

— Miss McPherson purposes leaving England with a party of children by steamship Circassian, sailing April 24th, followed by another party in the end of May, and another in June.

— The Allan steamship Nova Scotian has just been floated at Greenock after having been lengthened fifty-two feet. She is to have new engines, and is expected to prove a very fast vessel.

— The crowded state of the St. James Street W. M. Church yesterday evening caused those in the gallery to suffer greatly on account of inadequate ventilation; one lady fainted.

— To-morrow morning the large annual spring sale of furniture for the Bowmanville Cabinet Company will be commenced at Nordhiemer's Hall, St. James street. The furniture is very fine and should command a large attendance. Storage can be had to the 1st of May. Mr. Shaw, auctioneer.

— The large sale of oil paintings will be continued at Nordhiemer's Hall, St. James street, to-morrow, Tuesday afternoon, and not in the evening, there being no gas in the building. — It is to be hoped the local artist of the Canadian Illustrated News will not omit to give a sketch of the picturesque crossing at Cohen & Lopez's corner, Place d'Armes Square. It cannot fail to interest country readers, and Montrealers of the future will be amused at seeing how their ancestors managed to bridge a dismal swamp in the heart of the city with a single plank. A portrait of the Chairman of the Road Committee should accompany the sketch.

— A large and important furniture sale takes place to-morrow (Tuesday) morning. Messrs. Devany & Co. will sell at the large residence, No. 58 St. Hubert street, all the expensive furniture in drawing room, dining room, breakfast and billiard room, three bedrooms furnished in walnut and marble, four ditto in plain walnut, handsome carpets, curtains, crystal gasiliers, B. ### PUBLIC OPINION.

On the New City Loan.

To the Editor of the STAR.

Notwithstanding that it has been demonstrated beyond question by several of the most experienced Accountants in the city that the interest on the Loan cannot cost less than 6.81 per cent on the average for the 30 years, the City Treasurer still insists that the rate is 5.87. As it must come under the head of only one of the three forms of interest., viz., "Simple," "Compound," or "Discount," there should be no mystery or vagueness about it, but the problem worked out under its own rules and laws, and from the same basis or starting point, the result must ever be the same. The difference, where one exists, must always be owing to the view the Accountant takes of the nature of the transaction, or its mode of repayment, and that difference is easily explained. What the tax-payers want to know in this case is what is the average amount of money the city has per year from the Loan and how much is the annual simple interest on that amount? We do not propose to work out the problem here, but to shew wherein Mr. Black is mistaken, taking it for granted that the following extract from the Herald of Tuesday last is Mr. Black's method of making the calculation, as the result is the same:

To the Editor of the Montreal Herald.

SIR,—My attention has been directed to an article which appeared in your paper of this morning, headed "More Last Words about the City Loan," in which in endeavours to establish that the annual provision of a certain amount for the sinking fund is virtually a diminution to that extent of the sum received as proceeds of the £500,000 which are borrowed. Now to my mind nothing can be more fallacious. The city in borrowing is not supposed to keep intact what money it receives for the sake of paying so much annually to extinguish the debt created by the issue of the bonds, but it uses the money received for the purposes for which it was borrowed, and agrees to tax itself annually. So much for the payment of interest and sinking fund. Now let us see what these are.

The interest, it cannot be denied, is the sum paid to the bond holders for the use of the money, and the sinking fund is the annual provision made to recoup the promise to pay at the end of the term of the loan—thirty years—neither can be varied; each is separate and distinct. A condition of the bond is that an annual provision be made for interest and sinking fund, averaging $32,508 68, which in the sum received is $7,649, and inasmuch as it requires $7525.10 0 annually, to compound at 5 per cent, to recoup the £500,000 of bonds issued—it follows that the percentage on this annual sum (7525.10 0) represents on the proceeds exactly 1.777. Take this latter amount from the gross annual charge, and the balance is 5.872, which indubitably is the cost for interest.

The argument advanced by the writer in the Herald that the annual provision of sinking fund is virtually a diminution of the capital originally received, cannot be sustained. This would imply the retention of the capital intact for the sake of meeting such engagement, and the same argument might apply to the interest also. It would, therefore, be inferred that the city in borrowing the money undertook to keep it unemployed for the sake of paying the bondholders their interest, and for providing the sinking fund. But the loan was negotiated to employ the proceeds in developing city improvements, and it cannot be claimed that the city can "keep its loaf and eat it" at the same time.

Your obed't serv't
V.S.H.

We notice first from the remarks of the writer "V. S. H." in regard to the proceeds of the loan, or £425,000, and its annual tax of £32,508, it is assumed, that it has the first amount for the thirty years, and pays the latter for it which includes interest and sinking fund. Granting that it is so, the transaction then is of the nature of an annuity, and the rate 5.85 must be compound interest. Turning to the annuity table applicable to the case, to confirm our impression we find that the present value of £32,508 annuity for thirty years at 6.00 compound interest is £447,913 while the city gets but £427,000, and a close calculation would make $6.48 compound interest. This, therefore, will not satisfy, and I look into the calculation which "V. S. H." gives us. In the first place, he says, and that truly, that to pay £32,508 interest (simple) on £425,000 would be at the rate of 7.649 per cent on £100 (I use the £ instead of the $, and leave off the fraction), and then in substance he says, for it amounts to just this in plain English, that if he could lend the same amounts for the sum of £7,525, the rate would be 1.777, which deducted from the 7 649 per cent, it would leave the rate 5 87. Very true, but where would he get his money, then, for "developing city improvements." Many of your readers will ask, where does he get the sum of £7,525 in the calculation. I answer that he tells us that it is 1-30th of £225,753, and this latter sum if placed 5 at p.c. compound interest, for thirty years, its final amount would be equal to its original obligation, or £500,000. I find then, according to the 5.87 interest method, he would have to reloan the money, costing him 7,649 per cent simple interest for 1,777 per cent simple interest, and then to recoup the debt of £500,000 he would place £225,753 at 5 p. c. for 30 years. I also grant it would do it, but what would become of that "loaf"? V. S. H. has only to consult the rules for "annuities" to see that his method bears but little resemblance to the law of geometrical progression. To an accountant his mode is as devoid of common sense as the boy's problem to his teacher after a lesson on the fall of Adam, "If it took one apple to destroy the human race, how many would it take to make a barrel of cider?"

Yours, &c., X.
Montreal, April 14th, 1873.

OR THE

NAMELESS CHILD.

CHAPTER XXXII.—Continued.

"Miss Plantagenet was a very beautiful girl," remarked the marquis.

"Ay! she was that, an' mortal proud wi' it, too!" said the landlord.

"She had many suitors, of course!" suggested the marquis.

"Many what?" interrogated the landlord, quickly.

"Suitors—lovers—sweethearts—I suppose you call them!" remarked the marquis.

The landlord laughed.

"Ecod!" he said, "they mun be foine fellows to ha' come up to her idee. But she was a wondrous beauty, an' I be bound she had a swarm a'ter her—more, too, because the old-man, her father, was rolling in riches."

"Did you ever hear of any one lover in particular to whom she was much attached?"

"Why, to Marquis Westchester, to be sure!" promptly responded the inkeeper. "She married him."

"Was there no other?" inquired the marquis.

"No," returned the landlord.

"Are you quite sure on this point?" he persisted, rather pressing his question.

The landlord laughed.

"Lord bless you, sir!" he rejoined, "that's a question I couldn't undertake to answer to a certainty. I never heard that she had any lover till she married th' marquis, her husband; folks said she wur too proud ever to know what love meant!"

He faced the churchyard, and pointed to a grave upon which lay a bouquet of fresh flowers.

"Beneath that green turf," he adden in a subdued voice, "lies the only one who could truly answer your question, if anybody could. But she's gone long ago—God rest her soul!"

"Whose grave is that?" inquired the marquis.

"Poor Fanny Shelley's!" returned the man in the same softened tone.

"What did she know of Miss Plantagenet?" inquired the marquis, with an air of interest.

"What?" echoed the innkeeper in a loud tone, so as to cause the marquis to start; why she lived with her from her infancy, slept in her chamber, ate with her, went with her wherever she went.

The marquis passed his hand across his brow to remove some clammy drops of moisture that were gathering there.

He remembered now, vividly, when last at Beachborough, questioning her ladyship respecting the very young woman of whom the landlord was speaking, and that her ladyship had mentioned her with indifference and even levity—certainly not as one in whom she had ever taken such interest as the landlord had broadly asserted that she had.

"You must be mistaken in your impression that Lady Westchester ever had any special liking for the young woman to whom you are referring," suggested the marquis in a hesitating voice.

The landlord turned a fierce glance upon him.

"Mistaken!" he echoed; "why I knew poor Fanny Shelley since she was a baby! Why, sir, its plain you doan't know that Fanny Shelley was Miss Plantagenet's foster sister!"

The marquis closed his eyes, and staggered a pace or two: those two words fell upon his heart like blows from a poinard.

He made a strong effort to master his emotion, for this was terrible intelligence.

He pointed to the grave.

"Tell me the history of the unfortunate young woman who lies buried there," he said.

"It is soon done," returned the landlord; and immediately related the heads of the unhappy story with which Fanny Shelley was connected, as the world—of Beachborough, at least—knew it.

The face of the marquis, when he concluded, was ghastlier than poor Fanny's headstone.

There was a silence of a few minutes, for tears stood thickly in the landlord's eyes, when he mentioned the death of Fanny's parents, and their burial, without one word or sign from the marchioness that she either knew or cared about it. There was only one excuse, he added, for her, and that was her absence from England: for he believed that, after marriage, she went abroad for two years, and so, perhaps, she never heard anything about the fate of poor Fanny.

This was truth—the marquis could bear testimony to it. But he remembered, too how extremely eager the marchioness was to leave England, and how reluctant she appeared to return to it.

The links were approaching each other with strange rapidity.

"The child of which you have spoken under the name of the Poor Girl, was the child—the love-child—of the unhappy girl who was murdered?" suggested the marquis.

"Well, she always strongly denied that charge, replied the landlord; "and I believe her, sir. If ever a poor girl was undeserving such a cruel and infamous slander, she wur the one! I saw her one day cry and wring her hands, when she wur taunted wi' it. Ah, sir! God never gave us faces to conceal guilt, if he gave us mouths to cover up the tongue wi'!"

"Do you remember the child's face?" inquired the marquis, thoughtfully.

"Eh! to be sure, sir!" returned the landlord readily; "just as if I see it before me now—fair as a lily and beautiful as an angel's!"

"Did it resemble the girl, Shelley," inquired the marquis, in as careless a tone as he could assume,

"No, sir," replied the landlord. "Fanny had brown eyes, and the Poor Girl blue; Fanny had brown hair, and the Poor Girl golden locks. No, sir; I believe," he added, in a whisper, "that it was the offshoot o' some fine high dame, and poor Fanny was fool enough to take care on't, and bring it up."

The marquis felt as if he should suffocate.

The words Fanny Shelley was Miss Plantagenet's foster sister kept ringing in his ears with a terrible sound.

For whom should Fanny Shelley run the risk of the odium, and the fate she had brought upon herself, if not for her foster sister.

With a clammy moisture like a death sweat thickly gathered upon his forehead, with a faintness spreading over his frame, which threatened to fling him to the earth in a swoon, he asked, in a feeble voice—

"As you remember the child's face so well, try and recollect if you can remember any lady whose countenance it resembles?"

The landlord thought for a minute or two, and then shook his head.

"It wur so pretty, so lovely!" he replied. "No, no; I recollect no young woman's face like it a bit."

"Did you ever see Miss Plantagenet?" inquired the marquis, impatiently, although he could scarcely articulate the words.

"No, no; I think not," replied the landlord. "Her ladyship wur down here about was down at the Abbey. Remember, be careful, and particular."

The landlord eyed him with surprise, and said—

"Mayhap I ain't doing right to mention these things."

The marquis laughed spasmodically.

"Personally," he said, huskily, "I have no interest in this history. Yet there is something so strange in it, that I am really anxious to hear the whole of it. How long do you say it is since Miss Plantagenet was down at the Abbey?"

"Something over ten years," returned the landlord.

"And she was ill,' pursued the marquis, eagerly.

"Ay, very ill," responded the landlord.

"Who attended her?" interrogated the marquis.

"Why, Fanny Shelley, to be sure!" replied the landlord.

"But, man, she was ill, and she had a doctor, I suppose, exclaimed the marquis hastily.

"Ay, to be sure! Why she had old Dr. Bird who lives down at entrance to village yonder."

"The doctor still lives there?" asked the marquis, hastily.

"Ay! And he's as hale and hearty as a buck," rejoined the innkeeper with a laugh "If he do knock off some o' t' villagers, he keeps a main good look on a'ter himself."

"Thank you, thank you!" exclaimed the marquis, lifting his hat, and moving away. I will be back to luncheon at two. Good morning."

"Good morning, sir," responded the landlord, muttering, "a strange kind of a gentleman that. A little cracked, I do think."

He turned and entered his house.

The marquis staggered rather than sauntered down the High-street of Beachborough, and he muttered to himself, between his teeth—

"It cannot prove a difficult matter to find the residence of this Dr. Bird!"

The recent extensive forgeries on the Bank of England have caused much excitement and interest not only in England, but in this country. Some details respecting the conspiracy and the manner in which it was discovered will not fail to interest many of our readers. From a long editorial in the London Times we gather a few general facts. The whole affair began by the person who is now being sought by the police opening an ordinary deposit account with the western branch of the bank. Apparently he was introduced by some well-known customer, as this is always required, and he deposited a sufficient cash balance. Evidently there was no lack of funds to carry on the speculation, and the manager of the plot took good care not to be in a hurry, but to gain a sure footing before he ventured on his ultimate undertaking. He drew upon his balance, renewed it, deposited good, genuine bills, and acquired the reputation of a person engaged in a legitimate business, and as being thoroughly trustworthy. At length the forged bills were presented, and discounted without hesitation. About a hundred thousand pounds were safely pocketed by the authors of the fraud. Strange to say, however, the whole of this neatly arranged scheme was discovered by the inevitable flaw which always creeps into the most skilful plots. Two bills were presented in which the date of acceptance was omitted. Of course inquiry was instituted, the dateless bills were found not to be genuine, and afterward the whole series were proved forgeries. Some of the money was invested in United States bonds, which has given rise to the suspicion that the forgers were Americans. The London papers publish a detailed description of the bonds; and JAMES CALLEN, at 525 and 527 Craig street, has received a full and varied stock of material for Spring Suits. Mr. CALLEN is satisfied with small profits, so that all are assured of good value for their money. 81

Belcher, during the excitement of the late fire at the St. James' Hotel, will send the papers and memoranda contained therein to the St. Lawrence Hall, he will confer a favor, and no questions will be asked. The papers are of great value only to Mr. Belcher, and he trusts that this will be the means of their restoration. 86

PERSONAL.—"A lover of honesty" who wrote to Mr. S. a few weeks ago, is requested to communicate personally, or by letter, giving particulars over his real name in confidence. 86

TO THE AFFLICTED.—All

those who are afflicted with loss of memory morbid sensitiveness, impoverished blood, indecision of character, depression of spirits, sense of shame, lack of confidence, palpitation of the heart, incapacity to attend to business, wasting away of brain force, constipation, imbecility, impotency, and are generally aware of the cause (I need not mention it), I will simply state that by my new mode of treatment the vital forces can be restored without the use of injurious drug and nostrum treatment, and that I have given much time and careful attention to this fearful source of the ills which afflict the human family and that my efforts have been crowned with great success. I am averse to advertising, but I don't see how I am to make my discovery known otherwise and yet I don't see why physicians have not a right to place new and useful medical discoveries before the public.
