Sponsors, CBC reach agreement for Cup telecast

OTTAWA (CP) — The bitter, protracted 1962 Grey Cup television squabble is over—at least as far as televising this Saturday's football classic in Toronto is concerned.

An agreement, announced late Tuesday, will enable the publicly-owned CBC television network to carry the rival private CTV network's telecast of the game without advertising messages.

Subject to final confirmation expected today, it means that the threat of a deliberate violation by the CBC of a controversial regulation of the Board of Broadcast Governors will be avoided.

The regulation, passed Nov. 7, required the CBC to carry the CTV telecast complete with the CTV's advertising but BBG Chairman Dr. Andrew Stewart has indicated the board now will not put the ruling in force—provided signed documents verifying the agreement are produced today.

WILL NAME SPONSORS

The arrangement, announced separately by the CBC and representatives of the CTV sponsors, who hold the Grey Cup TV rights, allows the CBC to insert "courtesy announcements" on behalf of the sponsors. The CBC's network will carry the CTV picture and commentary, and special arrangements will be made for French-language commentary on the CBC French network.

Main issue in the dispute was the CBC's refusal to carry on its network commercial messages "arranged directly or indirectly" by the CTV's sponsorship of this year's final between Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

The CBC contended that the BBG regulation made the publicly-owned corporation a "sales tool" of another network and argued that the ruling as it applied to the advertising was beyond the board's authority.

While all parties have expressed satisfaction at the "courtesy announcement" solution in so far as it will enable the widest possible television audience of the Grey Cup, representatives of the rights

Boardom said our ailment

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians are suffering from "boardom," says Social Credit Leader Thompson.

He made the remark in the Commons Tuesday night after Finance Minister Nowlan introduced a resolution to establish a national economic development board to advise the government on the likely shape of the economy three to 10 years in the future.

Paul Martin (L—Essex East) said the proposal looks good on paper but that he has grave doubts about the capacity of a "tired" government to meet serious problems.

Colin Cameron (NDP — Nanaimo - Cowichan - The Islands) said Mr. Nowlan's outline of the proposal was "empty twaddle" and as "meaningless" as similar proposals put forward by the previous Liberal government.

'ALMOST REVOLUTIONARY'

Mr. Nowlan described establishment of the board as a "new and, to some extent, almost revolutionary, proposal."

He said the board would seek, analyze and recommend ways and means for development in the domestic economy.

The Commons granted the government $449,473,276 to enable it to carry on business during December. Funds are being provided on a month-to-month basis because none of the main appropriations for the 1962-63 fiscal year—which ends next March 31—have yet been approved.

The snail's pace of Commons work this session got another airing.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said he would hold a conference with opposition leaders to apportion debating time in what remains of the session before Christmas.

He then tossed in a remark that, legislatively, he wasn't looking beyond March or April at the moment.

Sees market for nuclear power plant

WASHINGTON (CP) — J. L. Gray, president of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, today predicted a big world market for the basic kind of nuclear power plant Canada now is building.

Canada's first 200-megawatt power reactor at Douglas Point, Ont., is expected to be ready for commercial operation in 1965 at a construction cost less than anticipated, Gray told the atomic industrial forum.

An advantage of the Canadian plant, he maintained, is that its fuel source, natural uranium, is plentiful around the world and therefore countries which adopt this system won't be dependent on the "whims" of a foreign government.

Many countries now are pondering whether, in developing nuclear commercial power, they should turn to the Canadian system or adopt the basic U.S. system which is based on enriched uranium, requiring special processing and markets for plutonium in the spent fuel which are centralized in the U.S.

Pope John XXIII

Influenza strikes Pope John

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John's usual Wednesday general audience was cancelled suddenly today. The Vatican press office said the 81-year-old pontiff has influenza.

Vatican sources Tuesday night denied reports in Rome newspapers that the pontiff would undergo an operation for prostate trouble before Christmas.

The Vatican sources reported Tuesday night that the Pope had cancelled some private audiences with bishops Tuesday afternoon because of a slight cold. The Vatican press office said today the cold had gone into influenza.

Despite the unofficial denials, Rome newspapers continued to give big headlines to the report that the Pope would undergo surgery. Il Messaggero said an operating room was being prepared in the Vatican palace and the operation would take place Dec. 11, three days after the ecumenical council goes into recess for nine months.

Pope John is said to have had a prostate condition for several years. When he is tired, his fatigue often shows clearly in his face.

He looked to be in excellent health, however, when he celebrated mass on his 81st birthday last Sunday.

Sources said they have learned that an operation on the prostate was considered for Pope John about a year ago but ruled unnecessary after medical consultation.

Royal commission recommended

Study of trade urged by C of C

OTTAWA (CP) — A one-year study by a royal commission to chart a trade policy for Canada in a fast-changing trading world was proposed today by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

In its annual brief to Prime Minister Diefenbaker and the federal cabinet, the chamber also called for a slowdown in government spending, cuts in income taxes and "early efforts" to balance the federal budget.

"A balanced budget is a pressing objective," said the chamber, the national voice of more than 850 Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce across Canada.

The brief, presented by a delegation headed by President Victor Oland of Halifax, said trade expansion is essential to continued economic growth and a satisfactory living standard.

In the present period of dynamic change in world trading relations, effective communication between government and all segments of Canadian business was of paramount importance.

"Greater co-ordination than has been achieved thus far is essential to determine the trade policies which will best serve Canada's interests."

The government should immediately appoint a commission of inquiry, to report within a year, in order to gather the necessary facts, stimulate exchange of information and promote more co-ordinated policies.

Dealing with government finances, the chamber expressed concern that government spending has risen at a faster rate than national production.

It said a growing share of federal expenditures is going to support public consumption of goods and services "at the expense of capital accumulation and investment."

"If the Canadian economy is to maintain a satisfactory rate of growth, there must be more emphasis on increased savings, capital investment and productivity, and less on new welfare programs."

To encourage savings and investment, the chamber said the government should reduce its present reliance on personal and corporation income taxes and act now to revise the federal tax structure without waiting for the report of the new royal commission on taxation.

URGES ACTION ON REPORT

To control government spending, a Chamber of Commerce spokesman said the government should implement many of the recommendations in the first report of the Glassco royal commission on government operations—a report issued after the chamber's brief was drafted.

The Chamber of Commerce submission included several proposals not directly connected with the state of the economy. Among them:

1. Adoption by Parliament of a distinctive national flag and recognition of "O Canada" as the official national anthem.

2. Revision of the Lord's Day Act "to reflect present day conditions and to remove anomalies" in the law governing the observance of Sunday.

3. Legalization of lotteries, under strict government supervision.

4. Recognition of bilingualism "not only as a constitutional duty but equally as a factor of national unity and of social, economic and cultural progress throughout the country."

The chamber's brief reiteraed its opposition to government's role in business and said it should stop selling annuities and should curtail operations of the National Film Board apart from its role in distributing films and advising government departments.

RESCUE WORKERS RECOVER BODIES FROM ROCKY PEAK

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Rescue workers worked today at the slow and arduous task of bringing down from a rocky peak the bodies of 97 persons killed in the crash of a Los Angeles-bound Brazilian jetliner. It was aviation history's eighth worst disaster.

Nineteen of the dead were listed as Americans. There were no survivors—and no immediate explanation—of the crash in good flying weather minutes before the Boeing 707 was to make a predawn landing at Lima's airport Tuesday.

A Peruvian cabinet minister, a high Cuban economic official and a California oil executive were among the 80 passenger victims. The plane carried a crew of 17.

Commons attack

Verbal abuse heaped on president of CNR

OTTAWA (CP) — CNR president Donald Gordon came in for another round of verbal abuse on Parliament Hill Tuesday. One MP referred to him as "that silly ass."

Ironically, only last Friday the Commons railway committee had heaped high praise on the 61-year-old railway boss after questioning him for four days about the CNR's operations.

The tone Tuesday was much different — with Mr. Gordon back in Montreal.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Temiskaming) in a Commons speech complained that the railway "has bastardized the time schedule to such an extent there will not be any passengers left" on the section between Capreol, Ont., and Montreal. It had ruined connections into Northern Ontario and northwestern Quebec.

This was all a plot to discourage passenger traffic and then persuade authorities to let the CNR drop the section on account of low passenger volume.

"The people are there. The travellers are there. It is just the Canadian National and that silly ass of a Gordon who are trying their best to get rid of this line."

Mr. Peters, warming up to the subject, continued:

"I believe we should get rid of Gordon. Let us get someone who cares about these things."

Later he said of Mr. Gordon, "I think he should go back to banking and quit trying to run a railroad."

Gilles Gregoire (SC — Lapointe) jumped to his feet a short time later to second those sentiments, getting a previous demand for the removal of Mr. Gordon into the Commons record of debates.

Round three of the attack followed an hour later in the Senate chamber, where the criticism was a little more subtle.

Fewer strikes

OTTAWA (CP)—There were fewer strikes and lockouts in Canada in October than in the previous month, the labor department reported Tuesday. Work stoppages in October totalled 42 compared to 48 in September.

Trainees up

OTTAWA (CP) — Enrolment of unemployed Canadians in retraining courses is expanding. The number enrolled since April 1 totals 19,330, the national technical and vocational training advisory council has been told. The council met here Nov. 21 and 22. A summary report of its proceedings was issued Tuesday. The number of unemployed persons registered for training since April compares with 4,600 trained in Canada for the full year 1959.

PRINCESS WILHELMINA

Wilhelmina dies at 82

THE HAGUE (Reuters) — Princess Wilhelmina, former queen of The Netherlands, has died at the age of 82, it was announced here today.

The former queen died peacefully in her sleep just before midnight in her palace near Apeldoorn, the secretariat of Queen Juliana announced here.

She had suffered from diabetes and a heart condition and had been in retirement for years. A week ago a government spokesman said the state of her health was causing concern.

She reigned for 50 years, relinquishing the throne to her daughter, Juliana, in 1948 when the old queen was 68.

Stormy hearing exchange

SIU ordered to bare blacklist records

OTTAWA (CP)—Mr. Justice T. G. Norris has ordered the Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind.) to expose to public scrutiny its system of punishing seamen for opposing the union.

Amid a stormy exchange Tuesday, the Vancouver jurist ordered the SIU to haul to his public hearing today all its records on its blacklist—including a card index file of 3,399 names, reports of trial committees and other pertinent data.

The SIU, which maintains it abolished its "do not ship" blacklist in 1958, refused to obey the order.

The judge promptly threatened to sign a subpoena requiring the documents.

Indications were SIU counsel would avert such a showdown with Mr. Justice Norris by accepting as bona fide a list of names prepared by commission investigators from the union's own files.

Under the DNS list, the SIU barred seamen from any sailing jobs on union-manned ships on the Great Lakes—some of them sentenced to 99 years on the blacklist.

QUESTIONS OFFICIAL

The fireworks erupted after commission counsel Charles Dubin cross-examined SIU Executive Vice-President Leonard J. McLaughlin on the union's DNS list.

Mr. McLaughlin admitted the list was maintained until 1957 or 1958 when it was ruled illegal in a court action.

He said the union now keeps a card-index file of some of the names on the DNS list, plus others who have been reported to the union on charges of contract or constitutional violations. He said the file was for "information" purposes only.

It was this file—already scrutinized in private by commission investigators — that the judge wanted produced in court today.

Mr. Dubin said he needed the file to continue his questioning of Mr. McLaughlin.

He also asked for other DNS documents—papers which Mr. McLaughlin contended were destroyed some four years ago.

India - Pakistan unity is urged

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Averell Harriman, assistant secretary of state for far eastern affairs, left here today for tension-easing talks with Pakistan leaders after urging India and Pakistan to unite in defence against the "very real threat" from Communist China.

Harriman, head of a special U.S. mission to India and Pakistan, flew to Rawalpindi, where he will confer with Pakistan President Mohammed Ayub Khan and other leaders in an attempt to ease strained relations caused by U.S. military aid to India.

Before leaving, he warned of the Chinese Communist threat to both India and Pakistan and stressed the U.S. felt free to give aid to anyone it wished.

He told a Pakistani correspondent "we believe that in giving aid to India we are protecting Pakistan as well as the security of the United States and India."

Moose charges jet airliner

ANCHORAGE (AP) — The bull moose lowered his head, pawed the ground, charged and clobbered his opponent right between the No. 1 and No. 2 engines.

The roaring Boeing 720 jet, taxiing for a take - off Tuesday, wasn't staggered very much by the blow, but officials of the Alaskan city's airport were.

"It gets expensive," Tony Schwamm, Anchorage International airport manager, said. The plane was delayed about 30 minutes for a checkup.

The moose, apparently unhurt and unimpressed, trotted away.

Problems, possibilities outlined

TCA surplus indicated for '63; better record is seen this year

OTTAWA (CP) — Passenger traffic indicates that Trans-Canada Air Lines is heading for a surplus on 1963 operations and its record this year should be substantially better than the 1961 peak deficit of $6,450,000,-TCA President Gordon McGregor said Tuesday.

He was opening his annual testimony about the Crown-owned air carrier before a Commons committee.

Speaking to an audience of MPs who were generally sympathetic, or at least restrained, in questioning TCA policy decisions, the former Second World War fighter pilot sketched TCA's problems and possibilities.

Mr. McGregor said the 1916 deficit was largely due to competition from Canadian Pacific Air Lines on the trans-continental route. CPA had taken $5,-300,000 in revenue away from TCA on this route.

He stressed that if TCA was left alone on the profitable trans-continental and trans-Atlantic services it could easily handle the deficits of subsidiary air routes within Canada.

SUGGESTS CHANGE

Mr. McGregor suggested that the external affairs department be removed from negotiations for international routes because it is more concerned with good will than profit and Canada generally hasn't done very well in such negotiations.

Mr. McGregor cited as examples the rights of the West German Lufthansa line and Air France to fly from Montreal to Chicago direct. No Canadian company had such rights and he attriubted a $400,000 loss in 1961 to these agreements.

But he also confessed that low economy fares established in 1961 were "badly conceived" and contributed to the deficit. Economy fare sales had boomed to about 80 per cent of traffic at the expense of first class.

He would be prepared to see the name Air Canada—used in Quebec and occasionally abroad—replace the line's existing title.

He said the only apparent solution for "sustaining" non-profit routes and showing something in the black besides is one putting together TCA and CPA routes.

US, Reds return to bargaining table

Resume Cuba negotiation

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—United States and Soviet negotiators on the Cuban crisis return to the bargaining table today for the first time in six days.

U.S. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson discussed the situation with President Kennedy in Washington Tuesday, then flew back to New York for the meeting with Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily V. Kuznetsov and possibly First Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan.

Mikoyan is scheduled to meet Kennedy in Washington Thursday on the Cuban crisis and probably will confer later with State Secretary Rusk.

Stevenson and John J. McCloy, head of Kennedy's Cuban co-ordinating committee, were reported anxious to find out what stand Mikoyan would take before he meets with the president.

There already is reported to be a private understanding between Kennedy and Soviet Premier Khrushchev to cool off the Caribbean crisis. The presence of Mikoyan in the White House provides Kennedy with the opportunity of reaching further understandings on specific and detailed measures for East-West disengagement.

TALK AT DINNER

The U.S. negotiators talked with Mikoyan Monday night at a dinner given by Acting Secretary-General U Thant, but Stevenson said it was mainly a social gathering and didn't go deeply into the Cuban issue.

The Russian trouble shooter returned to New York Monday after 24 days in Havana. Havana radio said Mikoyan, in a farewell letter, told Premier Fidel Castro:

"The complete support of the Soviet Union, of the brother family of the Socialist countries and of all progressive humanity is at your side in this noble fight."

Stevenson was expected to press the Soviets to carry out Premier Khrushchev's proposal for international inspection to ensure that all Soviet missiles have been removed from Cuba and the missile bases dismantled.

Stevenson also was expected to tell the Soviets the United States will not even consider Castro's demand for dismantling of training bases for anti-Castro exiles in the United States, Puerto Rico and elsewhere. Castro said he would agree to UN inspection of Cuba if the United States would do away with the anti-Castro bases and permit UN inspection of the process.

Show Business

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — If you want to watch movies being made, the Mirisch brothers are the ones to visit nowadays.

The brothers are shooting a total of two films these days, and that is today's equivalent of full production. Look at the totals for other studios: Warners 1; Paramount 1; MGM 0; Fox 0; Universal 1; Columbia 0.

I hurried out to Goldwyn Studios, where the Mirisches rent space and thus keep down their overhead. The brothers had tied up most of the stages with their sets. The most impressive of these was a Paris neighborhood created for Irma la Douce.

Here on two large stages is reproduced a slice of modern Paris, authentic down to the fruit on the stands and the scratchings on the walls. It is so realistic you expect to see Toulouse-Lautrec come stumping around the corner.

All this was put up in six weeks at a cost of $300,000. Sound expensive? Not when you consider the cost of idling a film company for weeks while waiting for the French sun to shine.

On the next stage Billy Wilder was directing a scene with Shirley MacLaine, who plays Irma, and Jack Lemmon, who plays Irma's boy friend and—sponsor. He manages her career, you might say.

The film is admittedly not aimed at the Saturday matinee trade.

Across the street, George Roy Hill was directing Toys in the Attic, and the atmosphere was more restrained. That befits the filming of the problem-laden Lillian Hellman play.

Toys in the Attic is notable for teaming Dean Martin, as the long-sheltered brother, with Wendy Hiller and Geraldine Page, as his possessive sisters.

Miss Hiller who played the original Liza Doolittle in the film Pgymalion, is an academy award winner (Separate Tables, 1958) and one of England's most distinguished actresses. Miss Page has been twice nominated for Academy Awards and is a queenpin of the actors' studio.

TIME OUT FOR PLEASURE. Kim Novak, who adorns an apartment shared by four males in Joseph E. Levine's "BOYS' NIGHT OUT," expresses her feelings for one of the "boys", James Garner. Tony Randall is also a member of the "share plan" in this CinemaScope and Metrocolor M-G-M comedy which arrives today at the GRANADA Theatre.

GRANBY —

The St. Patrick's Guild will hold its annual bazaar, food sale and tea on Dec. 8, in St. Patrick's School Hall at 3 p.m. Proceeds to go toward the school benefits.

Mrs. Harold Bowen, of Fredericton, N.B., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. K. Stapleton on Boivin Blvd., for several days. Mrs. Bowen will sit for examinations in Montreal, for registered nurse before returning to her home in New Brunswick.

Mrs. J. E. Huet has returned to her home on Glen Street after visiting her son, Mr. Kay Huet and Mrs. Huet and family in Kingston, N.B.

You can't go 'ALL-OUT' If you feel 'ALL-IN'

These days most people work under pressure, worry more, sleep less. This strain on body and brain makes physical fitness easier to lose—harder to regain. Today's tense living, overwork, worry—any of these may affect normal kidney action. When kidneys get out of order, excess acids and wastes remain in the system. Then backache, disturbed rest, "tired-out" feeling often follow. That's the time to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's stimulate the kidneys to normal action. Then you feel better—sleep better—work better. Ask for Dodd's Kidney Pills at any drug counter. 84

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

ESCAPE HATCH IN TRANSFER BID

What do you do with the North hand after your partner opens one no-trump? You don't want to let him suffer there, but how can you get out of no-trump and into the right major suit?

In other words you want the hand to play in two spades if your partner has four of them or in two hearts if he does not have four spades.

If you are playing the Jacoby Transfer you can do this by responding with a Stayman two clubs. This orders South to bid two spades with four spades in his hand, two hearts with four hearts, but less than four spades, and two diamonds without four cards in either major.

Opening lead—♥Q

In this case South bids two spades and your troubles are over. If his bid happened to be two hearts your troubles would also be over. If he went to two hearts and he would pass. This compulsory pass is a built-in safety feature of the Jacoby Transfer system which allows responder to get off the hook with hands like North's.

The play at two spades is not a cinch, but if South will avoid leading trumps until he has cross-ruffed some of dummy's hearts and his own clubs and diamonds he should make the contract. There is no way to come close to making either one no-trump or two hearts.

Q—The bidding has been:

South	West	North	East
1 Club	Pass	1 Dmd.	Pass

You, South, hold:

Spades A-Q-8-7, Hearts A-Q-6-5,, Diamonds K-2, Clubs A-9-6.

What do you do?

A—Bid two hearts! You have an embarrassment of riches and I would not critizize any of several other string bids, but I like this one best.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Your partner continues with three hearts. What do you do?

Rotary speaker maintains

Government should help small business

An Ottawa businessman suggested Tuesday night that the steps be taken to open up a new road to give small businessman and independent merchants financial assistance and technical service.

Bertram I. Loeb, president of the wholesale food distrutors and IGA supply depot for Northern Ontario and and Western Quebec told members of the Sherbrooke Rotary Club that the government, as the government before it, has not given due consideration to the small businessmen in Canada.

"Opportunities for the small business and the independent merchant in Canada were never better,," Mr. Loeb said, "but small businesses are declining simply because many of the operators don't understand what it takes to run a business."

Small businessmen don't know who to consult for advice or help when it is needed, the speaker explained.

"What is lacking is a clearing house where small businessmen and independent merchants can get whatever information they might need," Mr. Loeb said.

"To be done now is not build a roadblock on big businesses but open up a road to give small businessmen not only financial assistance but also technical service," Mr. Loeb said.

Many small businessmen, explained the speaker, fail to understand that as their business grows they must be ready to make modern changes. Many, he said, do not even know how to read a financial statement.

He urged small businessmen to learn more about the business they are in and discuss their problems with others who can help them.

"Above all, the small businessman has got to consider his business as a profession. Business is one of the noblest professions," said Mr. Loeb.

"Today, business in Canada is in an era of bigness, particularly in manufacturing, but the independent merchant still holds sway," Mr. Loeb said.

The M. Loeb Limited recently acquired all the outstanding shares of G .T. Armstrong and Sons Company in Sherbrooke.

He said there was no limit to the individual growth of independent merchants in Canada. He said in small businesses there was an opportunity for self expression and initiative which does not happen in a large business.

"Basic manufacturer's greatest distribution is through independent owners," Mr. Loeb said. He also stated that small business eliminates cartels.

"Small businesses preserve the personalized service and the desire to please the customer. This service, still wanted by the customer, is gradually disappearing," the speaker said.

Seated at head table were Ken Halpenny, Ted Littler, Don Watson, Mr. Loeb, Frank Pearson, Norm Peveril. Hubert Armstrong, Bert Lyon and Ralph Gosselin.

Historian claims

Socred strength in Quebec weakened since elections

A historian who specializes in the study of French-Canadian political parties said Tuesday night he believes the strength of Social Credit in Quebec has fallen to half of what it was in June at the last federal election.

Claude Thibault, who is lecturing in history at Bishop's University while he carries on postgraduate studies both there and at the University of Sherbrooke, based his belief that Quebeckers have changed their minds about Social Credit partly on the Liberal victory in this month's provincial election.

He was addressing the second meeting this term of the Sherbrooke County Teachers' Association at Sherbrooke High School.

He said that a new election now would reveal Social Credit retained only about 25,000 of its 50,000 supporters, concentrated in the four Quebec region ridings of Beauce, Bellechasse, Dorchester and Montmagny-L'Islet.

"Real Caouette was a mistake," he told a teacher who asked him about the Social Credit leader's election sweep in the question period following his talk, which was chiefly a plea to Canadians to deal with each other in a "human," not a "racial" way.

The French-English understanding he wished to restore had first been soured by Lord Durham's 1839 assessment of the problems of Canada, Mr. Thibault felt. Durham had attributed all dissension in the country to its language split.

Actually, according to the historian, the political division in Quebec at the time was not racial, but between conflicting concepts of government—the absolutist and the democratic. French seigneurs rallied to the predominantly English absolutist side, and names like Neilson, O'Callaghan and Brown were aligned with Papineau among the democrats.

Ever since, French-Canadians had tended to retreat into a shell of conservatism, and English-Canadian politicians had exploited the desire of ordinary English-Canadians to feel there was somebody still lower than them, Mr. Thibault said.

What was needed now was an "understanding," which need not lead to a mingling of the groups, he said. "There are too many of us now on both sides for a complete merger of French and English."

Dealing more directly with political parties, Mr. Thibault described the 16-year Union Nationale regime as "aggressively nationalist."

"Whatever we may have against Mr. Duplessis," he said, "we must grant him this —he prevented a centralization which would have been bad for all provinces."

By 1960, when the Union Nationale had become "intrigue-ridden," However, Quebec was finally ready to move forward, and rejected it for "a fresh team which presented itself under the name Liberal. It could have used any other name."

Just this month, the province returned this team which had "proved it meant business." The Liberal support was non-racial, said the speaker, though he admitted English-speaking voters might have felt they were voting for the "lesser or two evils."

The change had extended even to Lennoxville, home of the Bishop's campus, which voted Liberal this month for the first time since 1867, Mr. Thibault said. "Now that we've got it," he added, "let's not let go of it."

The Social Credit success on the federal scene Mr. Thibault attributed not, as a questioner suggested, to the withdrawal of the Roman Catholic clergy from political activity, but to the failure of the New Democratic Party to present a full slate of candidates. "As it was, a large number of discontented voters themselves voting all for the same man."

"I don't blame the Socreds for being elected," Mr. Thibault said, "I blame the do-nothing euphoria of the other parties."

Asked if he agreed with Quebec Resources Minister Levesque's statement, which he had quoted, that English Canada needed French Canada more than French Canada needed English Canada, he said he would not go that far. He felt, though, that such sections of the country as southern Manitoba would now be parts of the United States were it not for their French population.

SPEAKS ON FRENCH CANADA — Claude Thibault, left, Bishop's University history lecturer who spoke to the Sherbrooke County Teachers' Association Tuesday night at Sherbrooke High School about Quebec political parties and French-English relations in Canada, here chats with L. D. Allen, president of the Association, before the meeting.

Woman killed in crash

STORNOWAY — A 52-year-old woman was killed and five other persons injured in a two car collision on highway 28, two miles south of here shortly after 8 p.m. Tuesday. Quebec Provincial Police identified the dead woman as Mrs. Louis Dansereau, of Lac Megantic.

All the injured except Leo Doyon, and Lucien Roy, drivers of the cars, were released from St. Vincent de Paul Hospital in Sherbrooke after treatment. Hospital officials said, Roy and Doyon are suffering from leg injuries and their condition is "good."

Police said the accident happened when one of the driver's tried to pass a parked car and collided with one coming in the opposite direction.

Boy hit leaving school bus

MELBOURNE —(Special)— A seven year-old boy is in the Hotel Dieu Hospital Wednesday with a broken leg, fractured jaw and cuts to the face after he was hit by a car here Tuesday afternoon, Cpl. Donat Sevigny of the Richmond Quebec Provincial Police said Wednesday.

Guy Vigneault, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Vigneault was hit by a car driven by Lorne Lyster of R.R. 1 Melbourne on the Melbourne side of the MacKenzie Bridge near the post office, police said.

Young Guy had just gotten off the school bus and came out from behind the bus to cross the street. He was hit by Lyster who was driving in the opposite direction of the school bus, Cpl. Sevigny reported.

Royal Winter Fair

Social changes are gradual 4-Hers told

By D. J. MacMILLAN
(Cookshire Agronome)

There were 139 boys and girls representing 4H Clubs from all the provinces of Canada along with eight boys and girls from the United States, one boy from Malaya who is attending the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, Ont., and one girl from England, at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto.

Questionnaires were handed out and the various delegations were asked to answer them and give the meeting their answers.

As Dr. E. J. Tyler, of Brandon College, pointed out, the boy who went to college and came back home six months after noticed changes in his community which even his family had not realized. Maybe one reason was that these changes had been so gradual, they had forgotten to stop to look.

These are the introductory remarks of Dr. Tyler:

"One of the common phrases that marks our world is the comment that 'we live in a changing world.' Everyone agrees that we live in changing times. All young people are regularly lectured on the fact that their education must prepare them for a different kind of world than their fathers knew. They expect that the brave new world in which they must spend the bulk of their lives, will be one which requires much more preparation by way of education than their fathers' world required.

"What are the changes which marks 'a changing world'? What will our social world look like and be like in twenty or thirty years, or even in ten years? These are always intriguing questions, for they suggest fortune telling or some other form of foretelling the future.

"The one thing about the change is that it seems to come so gradually — not slowly — that we seem unaware of it, until one day we are forced to recognize it. The other thing about social change is that few people want it, many people actually resist it, and yet it comes. Perhaps, then, if we accept the fact that social change is always with us, we may examine some of the kinds of changes which have occurred, the factors responsible for these, and in this way we may get a glimpse of the changes that are apt to occur and are apt to shape and characterize tomorrow's world.

"Consider first changes in transportation. Our society has moved from horsepower to steampower, and automotive power, to jet power and atomic power; from horse and buggy, to automobile, to aircraft, to jet planes, to intercontinental missiles — all in less than fifty years.

"Consider communication. Our society has moved from handwriting to typing, to teletyping; from radio to television and to Telestar all in less than ffity years.

"Consider production. We have moved from horse and manpower to tractor and automotive power, to automation and atomic power, all in less than fifty years.

"Every area of our social world would yield the same startling pattern of change if we were to examine it in detail. But why examine it? Why should we bother about change? Perhaps the story of the dinosaur answers these questions.

"It is evident that the dinosaur in days gone by continued to grow in size and appetite, regardless of the world about him. That world changed. It changed so much that one day the dinosaur found himself completely unable to live in it — and he vanished from the face of the earth.

"Many species have become extinct because the world about them changed and they failed to recognize what these changes were, and, more important, they failed to recognize what these changes meant. In our time many species have become virtually extinct. Wagon-makers, candlemakers, blacksmiths, harnessmakers, just to mention a few, have all but gone out of existence. We say that such people are technologically obsolete, which means, that the skills they possess with which to participate in the economic life of the community, are no longer of any value.

"All of these examples tell us that man, to survive as either a biological being, or a social being, must know what the world around him is like. He must know what changes are occurring, and he must know what these changes mean. If he either does not know or fails to interpret the changes about him, his behavior ceases to be appropriate, and like the dinosaur, he may become extinct.

"It is surprising, and downright disturbing to realize how many people are either unaware of the changes which mark our world or else are totally unaware what these changes mean. We find these people in every walk of life. We find them in the policial world. We find them in industry, in education, in farming, in fact we find them on all sides.

"What, for example, does automation mean to you, and to your action? What does it mean for your education? What does it mean for those concerned with government, social services, community planning, and development? What does it mean in defining such words as employed or democracy?"

These few remarks, I believe will give you plenty of food for thought and will indicate how fast change is taking place around us. They also point out how essential it is that our young people get as much preparation in the form of education as is possible to obtain.

TCA flights

If Trois Rivieres receives service, so will Sherbrooke

Sherbrooke Mayor Armand Nadeau said Wednesday that he had received the assurances of the Minister of Transport Leon Balcer that if Trois Rivieres is to be served by T.C.A flights then so will Sherbrooke.

Sherbrooke's mayor has maintained that the city should receive the same degree of attention from Ottawa on this matter at Trois Rivieres.

For some time now the Sherbrooke mayor and the councillors have attempted to convince the aviation authorities in the capital of the necessity of providing the T.C.A. service for the city.

Even if the T.C.A. route to Sherbrooke should prove unprofitable, it is the contention of the mayor that the airline company would then receive a federal subsidy in such circumstances.

According to the Sherbrooke mayor, the transport minister has the authority to force the air transport board to provide service for any city.

He said he hopes that his latest plea to the minister of transport will result in such an action.

Six youths fined for disturbance

ROCK ISLAND —(Special)— Six youths, including two from Newport Vermont, were fined here Monday by Lee Audet, Justcie of the Peace, after they pleaded guilty to charges of disturbing the peace.

The two Newport youths were fined, one $20 and the second $25, while the four other youths from this area were given, two $10 fines each and the others $5 fines each.

The six youths were arrested by police last weekend for fighting and damaging public property.

Hearing postponed

SWEETSBURG —(Staff)— J. P. Choiniere, of Waterloo, charged with illegally voting at the November 14 provincial elections had his preliminary hearing postponed until December 11, when he appeared before Judge Patrick Delaney here Tuesday.

Special Crown Prosecutor, Guy Genest, of Waterloo explained to the court that the Chief Returning Officer of the Province of Quebec was unable to attend Tuesday because Francois Drouin had to testify in the false certificates case at Montreal.

Sees monopoly

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Civil Aeronautics Board examiner recommended Tuesday that the C.A.B. turn down a request by American and Eastern Airlines to merge. He said it would tend to create a monopoly. Examiner Ralph L. Wiser, who heard arguments on the proposal for several months, said neither airline is a failing business or is unduly weak. Therefore, he said, the merger cannot be justified on the basis of business necessity.

Faces counts for thefts from church

A 20-year-old Stanstead man is scheduled to appear in Sherbrooke's Court of Sessions today to face charges of stealing $1,000 from the office of Father Normand Comeau, of Sacre Coeur Church in Stanstead.

The man is charged with two thefts. The first theft of $700 occurred Nov. 5th, while the second one is believed to have take place on Nov. 26.

Father Comeau, who only reported the money taken from a desk drawer to police on Monday night, said he decided to report the theft after he found $300 missing from the drawer Monday.

The Stanstead man was arrested in St. Hyacinthe after making a down payment on a car, and was taken back to Sherbrooke, where he was placed in cells at Provincial Police headquarters.

A Corrections Society for the E. T.

A Montreal Superior Court judge this week painted a grim picture indeed of the crime situation in Quebec. In a talk to a session of the Research Conference on Criminology and Delinquency held in Montreal, Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet said that no other province in Canada breeds criminals of all kinds at such a rapid rate as Quebec does.

Judge Ouimet advanced a number of reasons for this deplorable but only too well-known situation. He included comparative lack of education in the province, rapid industrialization of rural and suburban areas, geographical factors and break-downs in social morality as a result of political immorality.

One of the major remedies the judge recommended — in addition, that is, to the obvious ones now in the process of being applied — was the speedy implementation of a wide-ranging rehabilitation and parole structure.

Others in the field have underscored the astonishing lack of not only these facilities, but also of probation arrangements which would allow those who have fallen afoul of the law to rebuild useful lives without going through the often destructive process of going to prison.

Quebec has been particularly backward in this respect, and with it, the Eastern Townships. It is encouraging therefore, to note that the possibility of setting up a branch of the Quebec Corrections Society is being discussed in this area.

A meeting to explore the matter has been scheduled for tomorrow night in Sherbrooke.

Doubtless, at the meeting, many problems to the setting up of an organization of this kind will be broached; but it is certain, too, that the undoubted advantages will be aired.

The advantages should be the deciding factor. There can be no quarrel with the fact that a society of this kind is badly needed here as elsewhere. It will not solve all our crime problems. There is doubt, in fact, that it will even begin to solve them. It is becoming increasingly clear that large-scale government action on the question is going to be necessary. But the existence of a local corrections society will at least amount to recognition of what the crime problems are and what direction solutions should take.. In addition to doing what it can for individual cases, the society can prepare and mold public opinion so that inevitably, proper government action will be taken.

Britons fear Common Market plans

The Canadian Liberals who have been loud in their criticism of the Diefenbaker Government for interfering with the efforts of the British Government to carry the United Kingdom into the European Commons Market may have to adopt a new tack as the result of the recent by-elections in the old Country. Of five seats formerly held by the Macmillan Conservatives, two switched to the Labor column and in the other three the tremendous majorities run up by the Conservatives were whittled to the near vanishing point.

In all five ridings British entry into ECM was one of the key arguments in the campaign, providing a test run for Prime Minister Macmillan who hoped to assure the return of his administration in the next general elections by an appeal to Common Market sentiment.

Popular reaction indicates that the British people do not think they are in the position pictured by a Canadian Liberal Senator who claimed they were being hampered from achieving their destiny in the ECM by the tactics of the Canadian Government. Apparently the British people fear the European Common Market as a regional tariff bloc whose eventual aim is a politically united Europe in which Britain inevitably would yield much of her sovereignty.

That the opposition to British entry into ECM is not confined to one or two segments of the populace is apparent from the geographical location and economic nature of the five seats at stake. They were located in widely-scattered sections of England and Scotland and varied from the essentially farming constituency of South Dorset to the business and residential riding of Glascow Woodside. Thus they represented a fair cross-section of British life.

A husband may be able to read his wife like a book and yet not be able to shut her up.

They would never see light of day

Sherbrooke would probably be making history of sorts in the Eastern Townships if it went along with a proposal of Alderman Gerard Berard to build two underground pedestrian walks at the corner of King and Wellington Streets.

The walks would be somewhat unusual as far as tunnels go because they would criss-cross at one point under the busy intersection by being constructed diagonally from one corner to the other.

Ald. Berard's plan is designed, of course, to protect the pedestrian who, under the present scheme of traffic lights, has to walk at a brisk pace if he hopes to reach the relative safety of the sidewalk on the other side of the thoroughfare. Ald. Berard is to be commended for his thoughtfulness and good intentions.

However, the condition of similar tunnels in other cities leave much to be desired, they are usually dirty, badly maintained, often poorly lighted, and if not regularly checked by the police, offer excellent hiding places for purse snatchers and muggers.

Ald. Berard probably had these points in mind when he suggested that the underpasses be open only from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on weekdays and from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Friday. The opening hours are, no doubt, planned to accommodate pedestrians during peak traffic hours. But they also limit usage of the tunnels and, hence raise the question of why they should be built at all.

On the other hand, perhaps Sherbrooke could adopt the project and integrate it into a bomb shelter system by placing the entrances in the basements of the buildings at each of the corners. This would allow a Sherbrooke resident to float a loan or make a bank deposit, on one corner, fortify himself with martinis on the other, order a new suit on a third and buy a box of chocolates on the fourth, without seeing the light of day.

Other papers say:

US economic isolationists strong

One of the most important pieces of legislation passed by the U.S. Government this year was the Trade Expansion Act, designed to give the President sweeping tariff-slashing powers to meet the challenge of the European Common Market. In return for tariff cuts on Euromart exports, it is expected reciprocal cuts on U.S.-made goods will enable the United States to increase, or at least maintain, its share of burgeoning European consumption.

But the trade act is not a solution to any problem raised by the economic unification of Europe, nor is it a guarantee of prosperity to American producers (who now send one-third of all exports to Europe). It is merely a means of giving Americans the possibility of bargaining within Europe on an equal footing with market members themselves. The fundamental laws of good business still hold. He who produces the best goods most efficiently, and markets most aggressively, will sell the most. That is exactly what Canada's Trade Minister, Hon. George Hees, has been preaching steadily for many and many a month.

It may be that it is in the marketing aspect that Americans and Canadians are deficient. That is the opinion of one American businesman after a visit to Europe and the Middle East.

Randall M. Ruhlman, vice-president of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, believes almost any American product can be sold abroad. The reason why some products are not being sold or are not selling as well as they could, is that Americans are not salesmen. They are considered order takers, with "a more or less general reputation for not being sufficiently interested even to answer letters of inquiry."

According to Ruhlman, price is not the determining factor. This goes counter to the perennial argument that American and Canadian goods are at a disadvantage because of lower labor and production costs in foreign countries. World War II shook the United States out of its political isolationism. But if Ruhlman is correct, it would seem that some elements of American business are still slumbering in a state of economic isolation. Perhaps Mr. Hees' many trade missions hither and yon, regarded by some as mere junkets, will serve Canada very well in the long run, spurring Canadian producers of manufactured goods to get out of their shells and dig for business outside Canada. We're far too inclined to be economic isolationists ourselves.

Surprise announcement

Election campaign without issue seen for Prince Edward Island

By J. C. LEWIS

CHARLOTTETOWN - (TNS) — Why has Premier Shaw called a snap provincial election for December 10, when his government has been little more than three years in power?

The answer to that question is the best - kept political secret this province has had in many a day.

According to sources close to the Premier, he had, on Monday of the week he called the election, no intention of calling it this year.

The announcement caught everyone by surprise — even his own supporters in the legislature.

* * *

The reasons given by the Premier via television were that his government was launching an ambitious adult education program and an equally ambitious resources development program. There were, too, he said, plans to be devised and put into effect for the celebration of Centennial Year in 1964. He felt it only fitting, he said, that before embarking upon such "comprehensive" economic and cultural expansion, he should have "a mandate from the people."

Then the Premier added his vote-catcher. If returned to power, he said, his government would abolish the premiums now paid by every citizen (with some few exceptions) for hospital insurance.

The former premier and now leader of the opposition, Liberal A. W. Matheson, took a skeptical view of the reasons given by Premier Shaw.

He hinted strongly that the Shaw government could only be calling this election in order to avoid an exposure of the "tragic" condition the province's finances are in as the result of three years of Conservative rule. That exposure, Mr. Matheson implied, would have been made at the next session of the legislature. But this sudden calling of an election, he added, will not prevent the exposure, for he will make the state of the province's finances the main issue of the campaign.

* * *

At dissolution, Premier Shaw's Conservative government held 22 seats; the Liberals held six. There were two vacancies. Both vacant seats had been held by Liberals.

Two explanations are being given, by those who enjoy attempting to read politicians' minds, for calling an election at this time.

The first is that a major row developed at a cabinet meeting—held on the day the election was announced—over the question of immediately implementing some of the major recommendations made by a Royal Commission on electoral reform.

Among those recommendations were that the property vote be eliminated and that certain changes be made in the area of some of the smaller electoral districts at the expense of some of the larger ones. According to this thesis, the Premier became so angry at some of his colleagues for the stand they took on electoral reform that, to show them who was boss, he suddenly decided to make the election announcement.

Supporters of the other explanation place little credence in the row-in-the-cabinet theory.

They maintain that Premier Shaw had recently become convinced that the forcing of a general federal election could not be warded off much longer. Within the next few months, the theory goes, Prime Minister Diefenbaker would lose a non-confidence motion, and in the resultant, he would stand a poor chance of being returned. It was better, therefore, for the Island's Conservative government to go to the people now than to wait until after a general federal election, results of which might have, from a Conservative aspect, a bad psychological effect on the electorate.

* * *

It is impossible to predict with any assurance what will happen on December 10. The Premier's statement that he will abolish insurance premiums has been nullified, so far as its vote-catching power is concerned, by Mr. Matheson's countering statement that his party, if elected, will do the same thing.

As of now, there appears to be no real issue unless one is made. A possibility is the opposition leader's stand on the financial situation.

ASSIGNMENT WASHINGTON

with B. T. Richardson

WASHINGTON (TNS) — It was a pleasure to see a giant Trans-Canada Airlines DC8B jet lined up and making a prominent place in the photographs of the newest and biggest airport in the world. But it was there under false pretenses.

Such is the situation on Canadian-American air routes that Dulles International Airport is a million miles from any Canadian airport. No Canadian service will enter or depart from this flashy new gateway to the heartland of America.

To make it to Toronto, where 80 per cent of Canada's outbound air traffic originates, you will still have to take the milk run through New York or Buffalo or Cleveland or, if you are the adventuresome type, though Detroit.

Washington's new airport, about twice the size of New York's Idlewild, is a symbol of many things.

THEY'RE OBSOLETE'

It is built solely for jet travel. Its runways are longer than a dozen Canadian moose pastures. Its fences keep out the foxes and the hounds of the Virginia gentry, which now includes America's first family. Its architecture is a marvel of the modern world.

BUT DULLES AIRPORT is also a symbol that the air agreements on routes between Canada and the United States are obsolete. No one can look at the flossy maps of world air routes without concluding that one or both the Canadian carriers, Trans-Canada and Canadian Pacific, should fly in and out of the new Washington terminal.

The reason that such ideas as these are idle hopes at present is that the bilateral air agreements between the two countries are ridiculously out of date. They need to be completely overhauled, with an eye to jet travel and an unfolding future of air traffic.

The agreements provide only a series of short-leg links between the two countries, some from Montreal, more from Toronto, a few from Calgary and Vancouver. This gives Canada a DC-3 pattern as Grant McConachie, president of CPA, said recently, for it is based on the vanished day when the old DC-3 was the main carrier.

What is needed is a revision of routes that would allow TCA and CPA to use the new jet aircraft of which they are so proud and which are going to bankrupt both companies unless ways are found to keep them full and keep them flying.

Dulles International Airport has taken four years to build. It cost $110,000,000 and as it expands to meet supersonic demands in future, it will probably never be finished.

'FLEEING VISION'

Its $15,500,000 terminal building overwhelms the visitor. The FAA hired the late Eero Saarinen and gave unlimited scope to his talents as an architect. One lyrical press writer said it was a "fleeting vision of a white Viking boat sailing a rolling meadow."

Its passengers load into mobile lounges that cost $232,000 each, which deliver them to the jet planes. This saves $25 a minute in costs of taxiing a jet.

The new airport will become the logotype of America as television newsreels and press cameras imprint the arrival and departure of celebrities from around the world. It will become part of the pageantry of the United States as the No. 1 power.

As things are now, a Canadian will arrive at Dulles Airport only in a foreign carrier. Yet it should be the one airport in the world at which Canadian flag-carrying planes should call.

THE AMERICAN government can hardly deny Canadian air carriers to its new airport is going to need the business to avoid the danger of becoming the white elephant of the air age.

Victoriatown Boy's Club is popular centre

MONTREAL (CP) — Nine years ago a plain, two-storey brick building opened for business in eastend Victoriatown.

Two years later, the area's juvenile crime rate had fallen by 97 per cent.

The building, squeezed into narrow streets among stockyards, wharves, canals and coal dumps, is the home of the Victoriatown Boys' Club.

The club has been so successful keeping kids out of trouble that the building has long run out of space to handle all its activities. And, it manages to operate on a skimpy annual budget of $32,000.

"All we need is more space and more money," says club director Fred Appleby. "But fitting everything in is our only real problem."

The club has grown into a virtual community centre for Victoriatown's citizens. Three-year-olds attend afternoon nursery classes; housewives stage weekly bridge parties; parents use the building for community meetings, and there's a corner for an association helping retarded children.

HOLDS DANCES

Certain corners of the building are reserved for teen-agers who want a quiet place to work or talk. The library is available to students who are unable to do homework properly in crowded family quarters. There is a lounge near the entrance equipped with television for teen-agers looking for something to do in the early evening.

The club has its quota of dances, sports, handicrafts and other activities. Workers at the club, most of them volunteers, assist the regular five-man staff, spend much time advising the 600 members on careers. Trying to encourage the young members to continue their education is a major part of their work.

Membership costs $1 a family a year and 50 cents for employed teen-agers. The Victoriatown community association supplies financial support.

The Town Crier, a mimeographed news sheet of club activities, is distributed to more than 400 homes.

Sherbrooke Teachers edge Bishop's 33-31 while YWCA wallop Business Girls 48-9, one game slated tonight

Sherbrooke Teachers edged Bishop's University 33-31 at Bishop's University while YWCA walloped Sherbrooke Business Girls 48-9 in two Eastern Townships Womens' Basketball League fixtures Monday.

One game is slated Wednesday night — 28 November — when St. Pat's of Magog takes on the Sherbrooke Nurses; game time 8:00 p.m.

In the Bishop's - Teachers' game, action was very close throughout with good basketball being displayed by both teams. Sherbrooke Teachers had a bad break in the second quarter however, when Sylvia Smith — a guard with the club — was taken out of the game with an injury.

Teachers still managed to come out on top at the end of the first half with a tight 20-18 lead and then came up with the 33-31 victory over the hosting University club.

Bev Noble and Sylvia Loomis starred pointwise for the victors with 14 points each while Ann Fitzgerald led Bishop's with 16 points. Cathy Donald turned in an outstanding performance on guard duty for the University club.

In the YWCA-Business Girls' tilt, the Y led throughout the battle to come up with their 44-9 victory. By the halfway mark of the fixture, the YWCA squad led 15-7 and then proceeded to outscore their opponents 29-2 in the final frame to chalk up the win.

Thelma Bennett paced the victors with 19 points while Bev Dustin was a standout for the club on guard. For the Business Girls, Frances Sol dumped in two backets while Phyllis Gillam turned in a commendable performance on guard.

Teachers: B. Noble (14), S. Loomis (14), M. Woollerton (3), H. MacKenzie (2), N. Love, S. Smith, A. Gustafson, A. Bedard, J. Clifton. Total 33.

Bishop's: A. Fitzgerald (16), B. Denison (9), J. McAlpine (3), N. Knapp (2), A. Warner (1), J. Mason, A. Collins, C. Donald, B. Hoult, C. Nestruck, W. Wright, S. Howie. Total 31.

Business Girls: F. Sol (4, J. Deacon (3), A-M. Morrissine (2), J. Ryan, L. Lemire, T. Loblaw, P. Gillam. Total 9.

YWCA: T. Bennett (19), E. White (99), S. Allatt (6), E. Duffy (5), C. Blois (5), D. Gillam, J. O'Connor, L. Morin, V. Rawlings, B. Dustin. Total 44.

Aces register 10th home win

Quebec Aces, maintaining their home-ice winning habit, pulled two points ahead of second-place Hershey Bears in the American Hockey League's Eastern Division by shading Pittsburgh Hornets 3-2 Tuesday night.

The win was the 10th straight for the Aces at home. Of 10 away games they have won only two.

Bill Dineen got the winning goal with about 12 minutes left. Terry Gray and Skippy Burchell scored the other Quebec goals while Al Johnson and Bob Dillabough scored for Pittsburgh, which remained tied for last place in the Western Division with Cleveland.

Tonight, Hershey has its chance to pull back into a tie with Quebec. The Bears are at Cleveland in the only game scheduled.

Green and Gold blank Bishop's University 5-0

BISHOP'S BLOCKED — N. Bodtker, assistant captain of Bishop's hockey Gaiters, is seen down on the ice while D. Stanforth is closing in to try and pick up the loose puck but C. Isabelle, University of Sherbrooke's rearguard, blocked the attempt. The Green and Gold blanked the Gaiters 5-0 in their first game of the season between these two clubs. (Photo by Doug Gerrish)

University of Sherbrooke Green and Gold hockey team last night won their fourth consecutive victory by blanking Bishop's University Gaiters 5-0.

The Green and Gold opened their scoring at the 1:38 mark of the first period and during the last seven minutes of the period scored three goals to bring the total to four goals in the period.

Clement Bernard tallied two goals in the first period while Albert Bureau and Real Danjou registered one each. Claude Letendre scored the last goal at the 3:42 mark of the second period. Claude Perron received two assists in last night's game on goals from Bernard and Letendre.

Referees handed out ten penalties including a minor and match penalty to Big Laflamme in the third period after he hit Morehouse on the leg with his hockey stick.

The Green and Gold kept up their good defensive play all through the game and ended up with 41 shots on goals while the Gaiters only succeeded in getting 24 shots at goalie Murray Campbell of the Green and Gold.

The Green and Gold are leading the Gaiters for the Skinner-Nadeau Trophy. The team who has the most points in a two-game total series wins the trophy.

Magog Aces take on Rock Island Jets tomorrow in St. Francis loop, gunning for league leadership

WINDSOR —(Special)— For the first time in two years the Magog Aces lead the St. Francis Valley Intermediate "C" Hockey League.

Just how long they'll stay there nobody knows but Jean Claude Therrien's men go after their second victory in as many starts tomorrow night when they meet the Frontier Jets at the Border Arena.

The Aces have already got Township hockey buffs whispering and have had Frank Bergeron, the Richmond coach, talking to himself all week.

Magog came from behind Sunday to spoil Richmond's home opening by defeating them 4-2. They are tied with the Rock Island Jets for first place in the league with Rock Island, who won their home opener 5-1 aganist Windsor, also on Sunday.

The Windsor loss at Rock Island was forecasted but the Braves, last year's champions, were expected to make short work of the Aces who were picked for no better than third place.

"I told you we had a strong team," Therrien said after the game. "Our famine is over, put your money on somebody else if you want a cellar-dweller this year," he added.

"The Magog fans haven't had a winner for a long time so we got new players and hope that this year we can pay them back for their loyal support," he said.

When asked why he wouldn't release the names of any of his new players before the season started he said, "I wanted to surprise everybody and besides I wasn't sure that we were going to go anywhere." Now he seems to be sure that they are going to go somewhere.

Possibly his youngest and most important player is Yvan Letarte who, according to his age, should be still playing junior hockey. Letarte played a brilliant game on Sunday, stopping 28 of the 30 Richmond shots.

The Jets, however, are paying no heed to the reports out of Magog. Connie L'Heureux, their coach, says his team is the hungriest in the league.

"For the last two years we've made it to the finals and lost out in the seventh and deciding game," he said.

Tripucka may replace Owens

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — "Frankly, I don't know," star quarterback Frank Tripucka said Tuesday night after the possibility he may become coach of Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Western Football Conference.

The 34 - year - old Denver Bronco veteran was named as a strong candidate for the post today by the Winnipeg Free Press.

The newspaper says Steve Owen, former head coach of New York Giants of the National Football League, is expected to be shelved shortly by Saskatchewan.

Tripucka played with the Roughriders before coming here three years ago, when Denver and the American Football League made their debuts.

Tripucka, who played college football at Notre Dame, said several sports writers from Winnipeg called him Tuesday morning to inquire "about my feelings" for the coaching job.

"But I haven't been contacted officially and I haven't given it a thought. Frankly, I don't know."

Coach Bud Grant to test his walking wounded today as team prepares for big battle with Ticats Saturday

TORONTO (CP)—Coach Bud Grant today expected to find out how sore his wounded warriors are as he planned to take Winnipeg Blue Bombers through their first full practice for Saturday's Grey Cup game against Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

The Bombers, champs of the Western Conference, were expected to return to the back campus field at the University of Toronto.

Their plans went awry when they discovered the university plowed up the field at Varsity Stadium where the Bombers had intended to work out this week.

They moved into a nearby hotel for convenience but were shunted to an open field where it will be difficult for Grant to keep secrets from the enemy. The field at the stadium was in poor condition and officials, unaware of Winnipeg's plans, decided to get an early start on preparing it for next season.

Grant was still looking for an enclosed field so he can hold secret workouts.

He was also trying to find someone to replace corner linebacker Gordie Rowland, out of action with a torn knee cartilage.

He was hoping the wrenched back of fullback Charlie Shepard would show improvement following three days of rest and that some judicious taping would make it possible for defensive tackle Roger Savoie to take pounding on a torn rib cartilage.

Adding to his problems were a sprained ankle on defensive end Herb Gray, and charley-horses hampering linebacker Dave Burkholder and defensive end Jack Delveaux.

Trainer Gordie Mackie, on leaving Winnipeg Tuesday, said: "We've packed everything except the operating table."

The list of injuries has placed the Bombers in the unfamiliar position of six-point underdogs for the game, scheduled at the Canadian National Exhibition Stadium starting at 1 p.m. EST.

The Bombers' workout Tuesday was devoted to interviews, publicity photographs and a light run.

CRIPPLES EXCUSED

But, even for this, Grant excused Gray, Burkholder, linebacker Gar Warren, who has a twisted knee, and fullback Roger Hagberg, hampered by a sprained ankle.

"Rowland's out and the rest of them are doubtful," Grant said. "They'll stay that way until Saturday morning when I have to make my decision.

"I doubt if they'll do very much running in the meantime."

To add to his woes, the long-range weather forecast has below normal temperatures and rain or snow suggested for the day of the game.

This could result in even greater trouble for his depleted defensive crew in containing the hard-driving Hamilton ground attack.

The offensive runner, who knows where he's going, has the edge over the defensive man, who usually finds it difficult to change direction on a slippery field.

Bad weather would also affect the passing of quarterback Kenny Ploen.

Andy Bathgate has chance to set new record for Rangers, all teams meet tomorrow, Leafs at Montreal

All-star right winger Andy Bathgate needs only one more goal to complete his sweep of New York Rangers' club scoring records.

The smooth-skating veteran will have a chance in Detroit Thursday night to break his club's record for most goals.

Bathgate now is tied at 228 goals with former Ranger great Bill Cook. While Cook scored his total in 475 games between 1926 and 1936, Bathgate has scored his in 612 games since the 1953-54 season.

There is no scheduled National Hockey League action tonight, but all clubs will be active Thursday night. Apart from the Rangers-Red Wings game in Detroit, Toronto Maple Leafs will visit Montreal Canadiens in a game to decide third place in the standings, and Chicago Black Hawks play in Boston.

Bathgate had a great season last year, tying Chicago's Bobby Hull for the league scoring title and placing on the first all-star team.

LED IN ASSISTS

Hull had more goals with a 50-goal splurge, but Bathgate's 56 assists led the league and set a new Rangers' season record.

The 30-year-old Bathgate already held the club record for the most goals in one season—40—and the most points in one season—88. Both marks were set in 1958-59, when he made the first all-star team and won the league's most - valuable-player award.

Bathgate, a hard-driving playmaker, is the all-time Ranger leader in assists with 380 and in points with 608. He is threatening to take over fourth spot in lifetime scoring totals by still-active players. Leafs' centre Red Kelly has a narrow four-point edge with 612 points.

The statistics raise the question: What if Bathgate played for a championship - calibre team?

He hasn't finished lower than fourth among league scorers in the last six seasons, although Rangers made the playoffs for the first time in four years last season.

This season is running true to form, with Rangers in fifth place and Bathgate tied for third spot in league scoring with 19 points.

Cookshire High wins consolation in volleyball

CORRECTION — It was incorrectly reported in Monday's Record that St. Pat's had won Consolation honours in the SFVIAA volleyball tournament held Saturday at Sherbrooke High School.

Cookshire boys were the actual winners in the Consolation round; defeating St. Pat's in the final game.

Richmond Flyers wallop Asbestos in juvenile tilt

RICHMOND — The juvenile hockey season got off to a start here Tuesday night with the Richmond Flyers scoring an upset over Asbestos Underground team 10-3.

The local club had a free-scoring night when Ronald Dubreuil came up with a hat-trick with two-goal performances by Terry Whittingstall, Larry Skillen, Richard Carrier and one by Yves Tanguay.

The oppposing goals were scored by Fortin, Dallaire and Campbelton.

This was the second game played by Flyers as the league opening took place at the Civic Center in Asbestos last Saturday. Flyers tangled with Aramis, another Asbestos entry, by a 4-3 setback.

The next tilt will be played back in Asbestos Saturday against Moulin. The following Tuesday, Dec. 4, will see the Mill back here at the arena.

Claude Arpin tallies twice but Beavers drop decision 3-2, Vics and Rockets battle to 2-2 draw

Sherbrooke Beavers, despite the two-goal effort of young Claude Cardin, came out on the short end of a 3-2 count last night at the Maurice Richard Arena in Montreal. In the other tilt Granby Vics came from behind in the third period to earn a tie with the Drummondville Rockets 4-4.

The results allowed the Olympics to gain ground on Lou Poloquin's club in the standing. The draw didn't change anything between the top two clubs in the loop, Granby and Drummondville.

Tomorrow evening the Vics will be in Sherbrooke while the Rockets will be at home to the Olympics in what should be a close battle. The Drummondville club will be trying to get back on a winning streak on their home ice. They have lost only one game against Granby and will be out to start another streak tomorrow evening.

The game in Montreal was a clean battle with only four penalties being called but two of them figured in the outcome. Cardin opened the scoring in the first period on a passing play with his mates, Real Rousseau and Gemus. This was washed out when Connie Mandala finished off a power-play with Rejean Hamelin in the cooler.

The second frame saw Montreal extend their lead when Chagnon broke the deadlock and then Noel Picard hoisted a long shot from the blueline which got by Joe Lacoursiere. It was a lucky shot and put the Olympics ahead 3-1.

The battle continued with both clubs going all out. Cardin came up with his team's second tally just near the halfway mark and from then on the Beavers tried their best to get a tie. The locals were without Serge Nadeau while the Olympics had Labrosse, Latreille and Degrandpre out.

VICS AND ROCKETS TIE

Jean-Yves Boudreau came through with the tying goal last night to give the Vics a 2-2 deadlock with the Rockets. It was the only tally of the third period in a close checking affair.

The Vics kept the pressure on and forced Claude Groulx to handle a total of 38 shots compared to 25 by Andy Payette. In the overtime the home club held a slight edge but both goalies held them off.

Gilles Boivin tallied the first marker and at the start of the second frame B. Leblanc made it 2-0 before Granby came up with their first goal, Ray Laplante was the marksmen for the Vics.

The final period saw the Vics finally came through with their second tally to earn the tie with Boudreau finishing off a play with Gilles Bedard. In the overtime Goyette got tagged with a minor but the Vics held on to earn the draw.

Fog cancels Ticats' workout but Coach Trimble is still confident his Tabbies will wallop Bombers

HAMILTON (CP)—Fog foiled a practice by Hamilton Tiger-Cats Tuesday night but the way coach Jim Trimble is talking, the Ticats may not need any workouts before meeting Winnipeg Blue Bombers in Saturday's Grey Cup game at Toronto.

Trimble has been mincing no words about what the Tabbies will do to the defending champions in the annual classic for Canada's professional football championship. Apparently his confidence has rubbed off onto his players.

Team captain John Barrow says the Tiger-Cats are in a better position than they were last year, when Winnipeg won 21-14 in overtime. He said the team is better prepared mentally.

"This club is just starting to jell as a unit and we're getting that good team feeling. Defensively we're stronger. Our offensive line is stronger too."

Tuesday night the Ticats were holding their first practice since eliminating Montreal Alouettes from the Eastern Conference final last Saturday but had to cut it off after 30 minutes because of the fog.

Trimble, who says the Tiger-Cats are "the best-balanced team I've ever had in Hamilton," announced that his starting quarterback for the big game will be Joe Zuger, who may also play defence.

Garney Henley will play both offensive and defensive halfback and other Tabbies who may see action both ways include guard and middle linebacker Hardiman Cureton, guard and defensive end Ellison Kelly, defensive halfback and fullback Don Sutherin and fullback and linebacker Bobby Kuntz.

The arms should not be overlooked when setting up your training schedule for this winter's skiing. Strong arms are especially important to the competitor who must make the most of poling during a race.

They are helpful to all when it comes to breaking a tumble.

When we think of building up our arms we immediately think of push-ups and chin-ups. Men seem to be able to cope with these exercises whereas most women cannot.

HALF PUSH-UP

Well, let's do half a push-up.

This is done from the knees. Raise and lower the body keeping the back straight. Increase number gradually and before you know it, you'll be able to do at least one full length push-up.

Now for a variation of this exercise: Assume a crawling position on the hands and knees as shown in the second illustration. Allow the body to move as far forward as possible without losing its balance; then lower the body by bending at the elbows, knees and hips.

Repeat. The head should describe a circle.

Miss Heggtveit will answer questions from skiers as space permits. Address Enjoy Skiing in care of this newspaper

West dominates Canadian Professional Football All-Stars

West with six Grey Cups victories top East in CP All-Canada All-Star teams with 15 to nine for East, Als' George Dixon tops

TORONTO (CP) — The West, nearly supreme rulers of Canadian professional football for the last eight years with six Grey Cup victories, today decisively outclassed the East in selection for the first Canadian Press all-Canada all-star team.

The choice of 15 western players against nine from eastern clubs for the 24 positions on the offensive and defensive squads reflected the resurgence of the West as a football power since 1954 and its superiority, in particular, this year—the second season of the Canadian Football League's partial inter locking East-West schedule.

The 54 selectors—evenly divided between the West and East — picked eight western players for the offensive team and seven for the defensive squad. The East placed four men on offence and five on defence.

This year the West won 12 of 20 interlocking games, lost seven and tied one. Last year the East had the edge with 11 wins, seven losses and two ties.

Balloting for the all-star team was conducted for CP by the Football Reporters of Canada in the nine league cities.

OFFENSIVE TEAM

Half—George Dixon, Montreal
Half—Leo Lewis, Winnipeg
Half—Earl Lunsford, Calgary
Half—Ray Purden, Sask.
Quarter—Eagle Day, Calgary
Centre—Neil Habig, Sask.
Guard—Tony Pajaczowski, Cal.
Guard—Gerry Patrick, Toronto
Tackle — Frank Rigney, Winnipeg
Tackle—Bronco Nagurski, Ham.
End—Hal Patterson, Hamilton
End—Tommy Joe Coffey, Edmonton

DEFENSIVE TEAM

Half—Harvey Wylie, Calgary
Half—Jim Rountree, Toronto
Half—Don Sutherin, Hamilton
Corner l'backer—Jim Conroy, Ottawa
Corner l'backer — Gord Rowland, Winnipeg
Inside l'backer—Tom Brown, British Columbia
Inside l'backer—Wayne Harris, Calgary
Middle Guard—Kaye Vaughan, Ottawa
Tackle—Don Luzzi, Calgary
Tackle—John Barrow, Ham.
End—Herb Gray, Winnipeg
End—Garner Ekstran, Sask.

PICK 6 STAMPS

The voters, whose ballots were weighted to give equal balloting strength to each city in the western and eastern conferences, picked six players from Calgary Stampeders—three for the offensive team and three for the defensive unit.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Hamilton Tiger-Cats, who will meet in the Grey Cup game next Saturday for the fifth time in six years, both landed four men on the team—two on each squad. Saskatchewan Roughriders were picked for two offensive positions and one defensive berth and Toronto Argonauts for one spot on both teams.

Edmonton Eskimos and Montreal Alouettes each got one position on the offensive unit. No player from British Columbia Lions or Ottawa Rough Riders made the offensive team but two Rough Riders and one B.C. performer were chosen for defence. Both Edmonton and Monrreal failed to win a spot on the defensive team.

There were no unanimous choices. George Dixon, Montreal's spectacular running ace, came closest with his selection by all but one voter. The speedster from the University of Bridgeport in Connecticut, the East's nominee for the award of the outstanding player in the country and a unanimous choice in the voting for The Canadian Press Eastern Conference all-star team announced two weeks ago, oddly enough missed out on a clean sweep by failing to get one of the eastern votes.

The six - foot, 195 - pound ground - gaining Dixon practically was the entire Montreal attack. An elusive, tricky and driving runner, he led the Eastern Conference in scoring with 15 touchdowns for 90 points and set a league rushing record of 1,520 yards, averaging seven yards a carry.

Defensive halfback Harvey Wylie of Calgary Stampeders, nominated by the West as the outstanding Canadian in the country, was picked by all but three selectors. The veteran, who played in the United States with Montana State College before joining the Stampeders, was a unanimous choice on CP's Western Conference all-star team.

DAY EASY WINNER

Calgary's Eagle Day easily won the quarterback spot over Winnipeg's Kenny Pleon and Ottawa's Russ Jackson, the first Canadian in 16 years to be named the quarterback on CP's Eastern Conference team. Day was also the quarterback choice on the western all-star squad.

An accomplished passer and good ball-handler, he was chosen by 26 selectors, double the number who picked Ploen. Jackson received seven votes.

Day, who played for Winnipeg and then went to Washington Redskins of the National Football League before joining Calgary last season, performed brilliantly for the Stampeders after an early-season injury and guided them into second place in the regular schedule with an impressive late-season drive.

During the regular season Day completed 156 of 262 passes for a completion percentage of 59.5 and a total of 2,494 yards. He threw 15 touchdown passes and had only eight intercepted.

Only four Canadians made the team—one on offence, guard Tony Pajaczowski of Calgary, and three on defence, Wylie and corner linebackers Jim Conroy of Ottawa and Gord Rowland of Winnipeg. Pajaczowski was voted the outstanding Canadian player in the country last year.

LIKE WESTERN BACKS

Except for Dixon, the offensive backfield is made up of western players. The others besides Dixon and Day are Leo Lewis of Winnipeg, Earl Lunsford of Calgary and Ray Purdin of Saskatchewan. Lewis, like Wylie, was a unanimous choice on the Western Conference all-star team.

There was a more even split for the offensive line positions with four going to western players and three to easterners. The West is represented by Pajaczowski, centre Neil Habig of Saskatchewan, tackle Frank Rigney of Winnipeg, named the best lineman in the country in 1961, and end Tommy Joe Coffey of Edmonton, the league's scoring leader and top pass receiver.

The three easterners are guard Gerry Patrick of Toronto, the only player picked on the all - Canada team who didn't make either the eastern or western all - star teams, tackle Bronco Nagurski of Hamilton and end Hal Patterson, also of the Tiger-Cats, who won the Outstanding Player award in 1956 when he was with Montreal.

The defensive backfield is made up of Calgary's Wylie and two easterners—Jim Rountree of Toronto and Don Sutherin of Hamilton, who like Dixon was a unanimous selection on the eastern all-star team.

Three westerners were picked for the four-man linebacking corps—Winnipeg's Rowland, a corner man, and inside linebackers Tom Brown of B.C. Lions and Wayne Harris of Calgary—the West's nominee as this season's outstanding lineman in the country. The lone eastern linebacker chosen was Ottawa's Conroy for one of the corner spots.

Middle guard Kaye Vaughan of Ottawa, voted the Outstanding Lineman in 1956 and 1957, and tackle John Harrow of Hamilton, the East's nominee for that award this year, were the easterners picked on the defensive line. The westerners chosen were tackle Don Luzzi of Calgary, who won th Lineman of the Year honors in 1958, 1960 winner Herb Gray, an end with Winnipeg, and end Garner Ekstran of Saskatchewan.

HORSEMEN HONORED — Albert Toutant, centre, owner of Adios Widow, is seen receiving from President Roger Trudeau of the Sherbrooke Racing Club a special trophy when Adios Widow was judged the best two-year-old colt at the local track. Gordon Adamson, owner of Tony Clapp, received a gift for the best three-year-old at the track, President Trudeau, Mr. Toutant, Florent St. Denis, driver of the colt, and Guy Jutras, owner of Joseph Worthy, judged the most-improved horse at the track this year. The presentation took place Saturday at the Elks Club where a dinner and dance was held to close out the season. (Photo by Gerry Lemay)

Magog Juniors edge Ayer's Cliff in overtime while Seniors stopped by PEHS in basketball twin-bill

Magog Junior boys edged Ayer's Cliff 21-18 Monday in a very close basketball fixture that went into two overtime periods.

Ayer's Cliff Seniors revenged their Junior colleagues however when they swamped Princess Elizabeth High of Magog 58-20 in a lopsided tilt that ACHS dominated from start to finish.

In the Senior game, the action was much more one-sided than the Junior fixture with Ayer's Cliff coming up with the 58-20 win in a game that they outplayed the PEHS group.

O'Keefe Mixed Bonspiels open with 100 clubs competing, finals to be held in Quebec City in February

QUEBEC — Inscriptions this year are expected from some 100 clubs, with over 2,000 men and ladies curlers, competing in the O'Keefe Province of Quebec Mixed Curling Bonspiels to be played off across the Province during November, December and January.

Regional winners will meet in Quebec City, February 20th to 23rd, in the Provincial Championship Playdown for the O'Keefe Golden Bowl Trophy which will be one of the festivities during the famous Winter Carnival.

Last year the honors went to a rink from the Cambrai Curling Club, Quebec City, was skipped by Gaston Asselin, with Miss Carmel McCann, third, Guy Germain, second, and Miss Jacqueline Caron leading, defeating the Montreal Region No. 1 champions, from Town of Mount Royal, skipped by Bruce Adair, 11-7.

It should be noted that all those who belong to a member club of the Canadian Branch, Royal Caledonian Curling Club or the Quebec Curlers Association are eligible to compete. A fee of $5.00 per rink will be charged, such fee to accompany the entry, payable to the O'Keefe Mixed Bonspiel. All entry fees will later be donated to a suitable charity or charities within a Region, as expenses are taken care of by the sponsor. Each rink will be composed of two ladies and two men and no two members of the same sex may play in consecutive positions. All four members of the rink must be members of the club from which the rink is entered.

Regions competing for the O'Keefe Trophies are: Quebec City and District, Lower St. Lawrence, Quebec North Shore, St. Maurice Valley, Saguenay-Lake St. John, Northwestern Quebec, Southwestern Quebec, Eastern Townships Northern, Eastern Townships Southern, Western Quebec and Montreal District with its four new Regions (Central Montreal, Lakeshore, South Shore, Laurentian).

Gerry Levesque, Brand Manager for the O'Keefe Brewing Co. Ltd., expressed the opinion at a preliminary meeting "that during the past two years a great deal of progress has been reached in the field of mixed curling and the enthusiasm shown by all concerned is a strong indication that this year's entries should increase by close to 30% right across the Province."

Parish priest of 'everyville' travels widely

MONTREAL (CP) — Rev. Louis-Marie Parent is a priest who oversees one of the largest "parishes" in the Roman Catholic Church.

Because of his extensive travel, mostly by airplane, he has been nicknamed "le cure de Partoutville" (the parish priest of everyville).

Father Parent is the founder of the Institute of Oblate Missionaries of Mary Immaculate, a lay group of women missionaries and nurses whose 1,500 members now are scattered through 15 countries of Europe, Asia and Africa.

Starting in 1952 at Vieilles Forges, a suburb of Trois-Rivieres, Que., he recruited young women—both single and married—who wanted to serve the church without taking the vows of a religious order.

The movement spread to 62 other dioceses in Canada, to the United States, Chile, Bolivia, Haiti, Laos, France, Honduras, Italy, Germany, Chad, Natal, Rhodesia, Mexico and Ireland.

This year, Father Parent hopes to establish missions in Israel while on a "parish visit" that is to take him through 10 countries.

Annette Trudeau of St. Johns, Que., who joined the institute in 1953 and serves now as general secretary, is to leave later this year for Laos, where the group maintains 10 missions.

Purser yearns to see ports

HALIFAX (CP) — Talk about frustration—the chief purser of the Greek liner Olympia has crossed the Atlantic 20 times but has yet to set foot on land in most of the ports at which it calls.

Nicholas Valmas of Athens says he longs to see such cities as Southampton, Glasgow, Liverpool, London and Halifax.

He explains that the ship stays only a few hours in each port and he is kept busy disembarking passengers, arranging passenger visits ashore, changing money and dozens of other tasks.

"My easiest time is when we're days out in the ocean, thousands of miles from anywhere. In port I have to settle for a ship's rail view of many of the cities we visit."

The exception is New York, terminal port for Atlantic crossing. He usually finds time in the daylong stopover to see the sights.

He says he will make a special effort to get ashore at Halifax next time.

"There will probably be snow when we arrive again and I have always wanted to see a Canadian city with snow on the ground."

To protect birds in New Zealand

WELLINGTON (Reuters) — New Zealand is making an all-out effort to preserve its rare native birds, a few species of which are in danger of extinction as their natural habitats are changed by encroaching civilization.

The wildlife department of the internal affairs ministry has succeeded in taking measures to protect rare species in sanctuaries and provide them with new nesting grounds.

For example, in 1948 an amateur ornithologist captured in the southern mountains of New Zealand a takahe, a flightless bird which had been believed extinct.

Immediately, the government declared some 700 square miles of the rugged Murchison Mountains a sanctuary. Since then more takahe have been found in the mountains and the species has been studied in its natural habitat.

SCHOOL LIBRARIES

Centralized school libraries in 1960 in Canadian urban centres had a total of more than 3,500,000 volumes.

C. P. Snow finds Broadway scene is fascinating

NEW YORK (AP) — "Of all the worlds I've ever set foot in, this is the strangest," marvels Broadway's guest celebrity, Sir Charles P. Snow.

Still, he found, a sudden theatrical spotlight can be pleasant. There was that pretty girl, for example. Spied him strolling, rushed to hug him. Startled but unruffled, he bestowed a knightly kiss.

"I can't imagine a middle-aged American being suddenly embraced on a London street," he says with an appreciative chuckle for the bizarre.

The tall, heavy-set centre of attention hasn't done anything himself to become a playhouse lion. He is a showman-by-association.

A novelist by choice (with a high reputation also in science and government) Snow is the author of four books which other writers are busily turning into a sequence of stage works.

ONE ON BROADWAY

One, The Affair, recently opened on Broadway following a hit run in London. Another, The New Men, now is in London's West End. Production plans are well along for The Masters. A fourth, Time of Hope, is being eyed as a Theatre Guild prospect.

The first three are renditions by Ronald Millar, the other is the work of Mrs. Violet Ketels, a school teacher.

"I have no desire to write for the theatre myself although there has been some temptation," says Snow. "I'm too old and not tough enough for it."

Besides, he adds, "novel writing is fantastically emotion-consuming."

Sir Charles took time out from such work for a whirlwind round of appearances, interviews and luncheons following arrival of The Affair here to general critical applause.

"It's been my biggest theatrical excursion," wearily observed the 57-year-old knight from Leicester. The phase began casually in 1960.

Millar read the novel, became enthused over its dramatic possibilities, sought an appointment with the author. By coincidence, Millar had been a Cambridge student when Snow was doing faculty research in molecular physics, but they had never met.

"It was all quite out of the blue," recalls the novelist, "but I thought he understood rather well what I meant and told him to go ahead."

The plot of The Affair concerns a group of university teachers who reopen the case of a dismissed colleague. The gent is universally disliked, but the aim is to see justice done.

Grasshopper will survive bomb attack

WINNIPEG (CP) — "If an atom bomb comes, the little grasshopper is going to be sitting round rubbing his legs together long after we are gone," says a federal government scientist.

"And that goes for all his little friends," Dr. B. N. Smallman of the federal agriculture entomology and plant phathology division told the annual meeting of the Entomological Society of Canada.

"You see, we have exposed insects to large doses of radiation—enough to kill any man—and it hasn't hurt them a bit."

Dr. William Baldwin of Chalk River, Ont., who also conducted radiation tests on insects, said that although the doses given the bugs would have killed a man or horse, they had no effect on the insects.

Dr. Smallman said the explanation is simple: insects are far less complicated entities than are humans and animals and because they have fewer organs, no bones and little outer covering, the rays pass right through them.

He told of an experiment in British Columbia's Okanagan Valley where scientists had subjected male coddling moths to gamma rays in an effort to destroy or severely impair their reproductive processes.

"The same dose would kill a man but it doesn't hurt the moth much."

Asked whether he foresees insects taking over the world should a nuclear war kill half the population, Dr. Smallman smiled: "If they were able to do that they would have done it before this."

Sargasso Sea delays freighter

VANCOUVER (CP) — When a Finnish freighter arrived here a day late the crew explained that the reason was seaweed—a whole sea of it.

The crew of the Vaasa Leader said the seaweed in the Sargasso Sea lying east of the Caribbean was so thick they feared there would be considerable delay if they tried to sail through it.

It was decided to alter course and skirt the huge mass.

Dic Nivala, steward on the ship, said the freighter runs into patches of seaweed on each voyage but this time it was thicker than any crew member had ever seen it before.

"In the early morning mist, for miles and miles, the sea looked like a desert with the weed so thick no ship could have plowed through it.

". . . We noted a weird assemblance of creatures that live in the weed mass as involuntary passengers—many small fish, crabs, shrimp and innumerable larvae of assorted marine creatures."

Capt. T. H. Korhonen and mates said they believe they spotted the pterophryne fish, known as the fiercest carnivore of the Sargasso, plunging through the seaweed.

Red China clerks told to imitate Western methods

PEKING (Reuters) — Store clerks in Communist China are being told they can learn something from their capitalist counterparts.

A mass drive is under way to improve the quality of service in state-owned stores and one of the main themes of the campaign is that more attention should be paid to the way things were done before the Communists took power in 1949.

The campaign to improve service is in line with another to increase the supply of consumer goods and keep the people satisfied at a time of difficulties in agriculture and other economic spheres.

Observers here say the supply of such articles as pencils, note books, plastic products and other everyday consumer goods has recently shown an increase.

Some people also say that they notice, too, a distinct improvement in the manners of clerks in the larger state-owned department stores where sales people now will almost always explain to the customer why a certain product is not in stock and promise to make an effort to get it.

CLERKS TOLD OFF

The Peking People's Daily, the Chinese Communist party newspaper, launched the "better service" campaign with an article bluntly telling store clerks they have much to learn from their predecessors.

This new attitude to things past is clearly reflected in several aspects of life here.

Diplomatic observers say they have noticed a recent trend not to denigrate all aspects of pre-Communist China, but to look at things thought to have been done well in pre-Communist times as a model for the future.

For example, newspaper articles continually urge Communist officials in rural areas to "heed the advice of veteran peasants"—a marked contrast to the heady atmosphere of the 1958 "great leap forward" when young, enthusiastic, but inexperienced, officials thought that they had all the answers.

Lane Larocque Gives talk on Jr. Red Cross

SUTTON — The November meeting of the Sutton Home and School Association was held in the auditorium Nov. 20, with about 35 in attendance. The program committee was asked to present the evening's program.

Mrs. Stanley Pergau introduced Lane Larocque, who gave an interesting account of a Junior Red Cross conference last summer, at Charlottetown, P.E.I. which she attended as a delegate for Sutton High School.

The second item on the program also reported on a meeting in Montreal, which she and Carolyn Thompson attended recently, as representatives of the Junior Red Cross. She was thanked by Mrs. Leon Darrah.

The third item on the program was An Historical Sketch of the Rural Schools in the Township of Sutton This was an outline of the origin of each one, folklore and record of its history down through the years; This sketch was compiled by Mrs. Rupert Phelps and read by Mrs. Leon Darrah.

Some snapshots of these old schools and their pupils were shown on the delineascope, and many of those present were able to recognize themselves in the pictures taken several years ago.

Refreshments were served by the committee during a social period at the end of the evening.

Christmas sale plans made by Sutton U.C.W.

SUTTON — The regular meeting of U.C.W. Unit A of Calvary Church, held its regular meeting Nov. 21, at the home of Mrs. Cedric Douglas. Mrs. Arnold Thompson gave the Devotional.

Plans were made for a Christmas sale to be held in the church hall, 3 p.m. Nov. 30. There will be tables of food, aprons, candy, mystery articles, a Christmas novelty table and a Christmas tree with articles for children to buy.

A letter from Mrs. M. Mcleod was read by Mrs. Derrick, telling of the work at St. John's Hall, where the Mcleods are stationed.

The ladies from this church were invited to join with the ladies of Grace Church on Nov. 29, to hear Miss Hazel, a missionary.

Regular meeting is held by UCW at South Durham

SOUTH DURHAM — The November meeting of the U.C.W. was held on Nov. 16, at the home of Mrs. Hattie Armstrong.

The president, Mrs. Edison Montgomery, led in prayer as the devotional convener was not present.

Donations are to be sent to St. John's Hall in Quebec City, and to the Cecil Butters Home.

Outstanding bills were ordered paid and plans were made for a chicken pie supper to be held on Dec 12.

It was decided to order another plastic tablecloth, like the one purchased a year ago. The proceeds from the tea and bazaar, which was held in the Protestant school were most satisfactory.

The nominating committee, Mrs. Neil Mountain, Mrs. Armstrong and Mrs. Carson, is to present the new slate of officers for 1963, at the December meeting.

MODERN FACILITIES

NO SMILE FOR THE BIRDIE—Photographer Charlie Rose (left) doesn't want a smile from this Alberta thoroughbred. He wants a photo of the registration plate, held in place by Ken Sweetman, and the number tatooed inside the horse's upper lip. Sweetman has tatooed numbers on about 300 horses in the Alberta and Saskatchewan racing circuit this year. It's a scheme to prevent unscrupulous horse-owners from switching winners for nags just before race time to get long-shot odds on favorites. (CP Photo).

All of the performers assembled on the stage for the closing, when John McCaw, on behalf of the students, expressed the thanks and appreciation of the performers to Mrs. Alex MacArthur, who trained the cast. Mrs. MacArthur was presented with a corsage and a gift certificate in recognition of her splendid work in putting on the event. If Canada joins 'race for space'

Future missile experts may be graduates of rocket club

By JAMES DAVIES
(Record staff reporter)

If Canada ever decides to join the "race for space", authorities might find the name of St. Patrick High School cropping up repeatedly on the application forms of missile experts.

And if the future missilemen are questioned about what drew them to rocketry, the answer will be the rocket club formed at St. Pat's.

The club was formed early in the month of October at the St. Patrick High School for the purpose of providing those interested with an opportunity of engaging in their favorite hobby while under the supervision of a qualified science teacher and somewhat of an authority on miniature experimental rockets.

Looking at the activity from the educational point of view, the club is seen as a place where the boys can gain invaluable experience in the application of principles that are taught in the chemistry and particularly physics classes.

According to Father Guy Morin, the man who organized and provides the guidance for the group, the aim of each of the 23 club members is to assemble a rocket that will, when launched attain a height of 1,200 feet.

The only instructions that the boys receive are the proportion of the zinc and sulphur fuel that the rocket is to be loaded with. Aside from this they are on their own.

The complete assembling of the rockets is done, not in the school laboratory, but in the home of each of the boys.

Assembling a rocket does not take an extremely long time, said club president, William Bessant Jr., but it does require a certain measure of dedication to one's hobby.

Nor is it a very difficult process, he said but then again, you must like what you are doing.

The first step in assembling the gadgets is to acquire the piece of copper tubing that will make up the main body of the missile, and then to get a conical nose that will fit the tubing.

The rocket is filled with the solid-fuel zinc and sulphur mixed in the all-important right proportion and then a thin plastic diaphragm is fitted to the base of the missile.

Through this diaphragm, is placed two thin pieces of copper wire that conduct the electrical current into the fuel to start the desired reaction.

The fins of the rocket is soldered to the base of the missile.

But said Mr. Bessant, all the fun does not come from assembling the rocket itself.

Sometimes the rockets do not fire properly and there is then the added excitement of trying to discover just where the fault lies, he said.

Such an occasion presented itself on Sunday morning when none of the nine experimental rockets that were set on the launching pad got off the ground.

After searching about for the causes, they discovered that the thin plastic diaphragm at the base of the rocket was melting with the heat of the reaction.

"Working one's way out of such circumstances can be very rewarding," he said.

However, not all the pleasure depends on the rockets that fail.

"Naturally, the object of each and every one of us is to eventually build bigger, more powerful rockets with much more thrust, such as the one we have planned for the spring time if all goes well," he said.

This one will be a 36-inch long solid fuel rocket, and should reach a height of 10,000 feet, he said.

"Who knows, we might make the big leagues yet?"

Has lived on the sea for 30 years

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP)—Alan Farrell read a book about sailing when he was 17. He has never strayed from a life near water since.

In the last 30 years he has built three dozen vessels, improving his craftsmanship with each until he was ready for a master stroke — the schooner Ocean Girl, his home.

He and his wife Sharie, both 50, have used their talents to give themselves as much freedom as possible.

With their three sons grown up in Pender Harbor, on Vancouver Island, they set out four years ago to build the Ocean Girl together, piece by piece, without the aid of modern power tools.

She was ready a year ago, and recallnig their seven-month South Seas adventure in 1951, they headed again down the Pacific coast.

It was a leisurely cruise. They spent a couple of months in California, five months drifting down the Mexican coast to Acapulco, and a month and a half exploring the Hawaiian Islands.

The 10,000-mile voyage described a giant triangle and brought them back in August. They have been cruising since in British Columbia waters, never stopping anywhere for long.

"That's the beauty of living on a boat," says Farrell. "You can come and go as you please."

P.C. wants to become premier

By JOHN MATTERS

CALGARY (CP)—Asa Milton Harradence is a political novice who wants to become the first Progressive Conservative premier of Alberta.

The 40-year-old criminal lawyer doesn't intend to waste any time getting on with the job.

He owns a Mustang, a single-engine Second World War fighter plane, and recently sanded off the blistered red paint, replacing it with a coating of wax to increase its speed 20 m.p.h. to 350 for his trips in the next Alberta election campaign, expected in 1963.

"Social Credit will at least know it's been through a campaign," says Mr. Harradence. "I will spare no effort to run the Manning dynasty out of Edmonton."

The Progressive Conservatives have one member in the 65-seat legislature where Social Credit has formed the government since 1935.

Milt Harradence was chosen party leader in October, succeeding Ernest Watkins, member of the Legislature for Calgary Glenmore.

APPEAL FOR UNITY

In an appeal for unity he said the time has come for Alberta PCs to forget talk of left and right and big and small C. Some division remained, however, after his statement a few days before the leadership convention that he would be prepared to nationalize Alberta's oil industry if necessary to protect the public from "cartels."

Mr. Harradence was born at Blaine Lake, Sask., where his father had a small farm and hardware store. Prime Minister Diefenbaker, then a lawyer in Prince Albert, was a frequent visitor.

"I just admired the man, the way he fought, the way he took on anybody," says Mr. Harradence.

When the family moved to Prince Albert, Mr. Harradence often took time to watch Mr. Diefenbaker perform in courtrooms. "I skipped school to watch him in a murder trial once."

After serving in the army and air force in the Second World War, Mr. Harradence studied law at the University of Saskatchewan. A six - foot - one, 175-pounder now, he was a middleweight boxing champion at university. He doesn't smoke and rarely takes a drink.

He has earned a reputation as a leading criminal lawyer with a flair for dramatics. He also gets around quite a bit, travelling in his Mustang in his law practice.

Second year of existence

Que. House expands program

By Paquerette Villeneuve
Canadian Press Correspondent

PARIS (CP)—Quebec House, the cultural and commercial voice of the province of Quebec in France, is entering its second year of existence with a greatly expanded program.

"The first year was devoted to making the approaches," said Charles Lussier, director of the centre located in one of the oldest and best-preserved residential sections of Paris.

"We've presented the cultural background. Now we must begin our real task—offering raw materials and hydro - electric power to manufacturers in the Common Market nations.

"We want to encourage them to form subsidiaries in Quebec, so the production would take place on the spot and not be done over here in Europe."

He said the French economic mission, headed by former finance minister Wilfrid Baumgartner, had visited Quebec in October with this purpose in mind.

Running down the activities of the first year's operation, Mr. Lussier said the striking thing is the great interest aroused among Frenchmen of all classes in Quebec House.

"The thirst for knowledge was so great that we had to put many hours of extra work to complete the projects we had planned."

PLAN ART SHOW

In addition to distributing tourist brochures, the three delegates — economic attache Georges Mercier, seconded from the Royal Bank of Canada, cultural attache Robert Elie and Dussier — had made many public appearances and interviews on behalf of Quebec.

"We also mailed to thousands of Europeans the May issue of Revue Francaise for this year, which was entirely devoted to Quebec. That drew many enthusiastic requests for information.

"We addressed copies of the catalogue for the painting exhibition Modern Canadian Painting: 25 years of French-Canadian Painting to the artistic circles of Paris."

"Our organizer Charles Delloye is organizing a December exhibit of Jean-Paul Mousseau and another one of Marcel Barbeau." Both Mousseau and Barbeau are noted Montreal painters.

Another project will be to set up a welcome centre for students. It will provide lodging and help to students from Canada.

Mr. Lussier said the students' centre will also provide machinery for an exchange of university lecturers between the Sorbonne in Paris and universities in Quebec.

Thought vessels had gone for good

Building schooners again in Nova Scotia

By ED WALTERS

HALIFAX (CP)—In boatyards along Nova Scotia's south shore from Hackett's Cove to La Have, men skilled in the art of laying a keel have gone back to building a type of vessel they thought had gone for good.

Small schooners, from 25 to 43 feet long, are rising on the stocks as Nova Scotia yachtsmen and an increasing number of outsiders place orders in what promises to be one of the biggest boat-building booms to hit the province before the Second World War.

The vessels are modelled after the miniature schooners that formerly did the inshore fishing job now taken over by flat-sterned motor-powered Cape Island boats.

About 20 of the older vessels were purchased by yachtsmen and converted to pleasure craft between the end of the war and 1960. Then the supply ran out and builders began receiving orders for new schooners — a type of craft most had not considered for two decades.

The little schooners were fairly common in Nova Scotia waters until the war. They were beneath the notice of most well-heeled yachtsmen although a few were sailed on Sundays by old-timers who wanted to season their waning years with the salt of bygone days.

SOME ABANDONED

After the war a few were still fishing, others lay rotting on beaches and some had been converted to motor boats. Few, if any, new ones were being built.

"Now the boatyards are so busy you couldn't get one for love or money," says Rear-Admiral H. F. Pullen, Ret., president of the one-year-old Nova Scotia Schooner Association. He bought his 27 - foot schooner Venture in 1951.

Eight new vessels were launched this year and orders for the trim little craft are coming in so fast the boatyards have waiting lists.

Built, rigged and ready for the sea, the schooners cost about $10,000 each. Teakwood decks, fancy panelling in the cabins and other extras cost more.

Last year J. A. Snow, former commodore of the Armdale Yacht Club in Halifax, and F. A. Lane, both schooner owners, suggested a race.

Capt. Angus Walters donated the Colonial Fisheries Trophy he had won when he sailed the racing-fishing schooner Bluenose to victory in the 1921 International Schooner Race. Three other trophies were offered.

Eleven schooners took part. First was the 30-foot Airlie skippered by Mrs. Douglas Creighton of Chester, N.S.

After the race at a meeting aboard Brig. Victor deB. Oland' 57-year-old Adare the Nova Scotia Schooner Association was born.

The second race was held last August and again Mrs. Creighton won, beating 19 competitors.

Admiral Pullen announced the schooner race would be held annually, and next year 40 schooners are expected to take part over a 20-mile triangular course in St. Margaret's Bay 20 miles southwest of here.

The admiral said U.S. yachtsmen are showing interest in the Noav Scotia schooners and the annual race and they are welcome to take part "but they'll have to race according to our rules." And anyone wishing to join the association must prove his vessel was built in Nova Scotia and is schooner-rigged.

Time to make your 'best dress'

Holidays are not too far distant, and you will have invitations that mean you need something very special to wear.

Don't hurry. Be deliberate so you may enjoy the whole procedure. Visit yard goods departments — not one, but several. Find a fabric so right for the dress you want to make that you can get truly excited about it.

Now for the pattern. Avoid a pattern that is too cut up. That means tedious making and limits accessorizing. Buy the loveliest fabric you can afford. Then choose the simplest pattern with lines you know are becoming to you. If necessary, make a muslin model from the pattern and be sure pattern is right and that the garment will fit before you cut into your precious fabric.

Let your fabric and your sewing skill make the dress look like $200 rather than $20. Cheap-looking dresses are often overdesigned. They are cut up, have exaggerated trimming to cover a shabby fabric or shoddy workmanship. Try to choose your dresses so that they do not look like bargain-type garments.

When making a beautiful dress, approach it in the spirit of enjoyment — that you are going to find delight in every part of the making.

Hang the fabric up on a door, look at it, feel of it! Read all the instructoins that come with your pattern.

Match your thread and zipper with care. Buy at the notion counter a foundation for your belt in the width you want, if the pattern calls for one. At least a dozen widths are available at your notion counter. Remember, you are out to make a masterpiece. This requires deliberation as well as a will to succeed.

Think of your dress as a painter would a canvas. Every stroke must count toward a perfect creation. Don't just whack out a dress. Create one that will bring you compliments, that will enhance your appearance and prove a tonic to your pride. That is the way to have a truly beautiful dress.

I have said, and I believe, that if you can read and execute a recipe, you can read and understand a pattern. If you can operate a car, you can become skillful with a sewing machine. Both require mastery on your part. When you have it, then the world of beautiful clothes is open to you because the fabric represents only one-third the value of a dress. Your fabric represents one-third—your appropriate styling one-third—your cutting, fitting and finishing one-third. Try this formula; make it work for you, and look live a "living doll" in your finished dress.

Savory yeast muffins are easy to prepare

Anyone who thinks that baking with yeast is a long, involved process will be in for a surprise when they try this recipe for Savory Yeast Muffins. A glance at the recipe itself should dispel the myth that yeast bread and rolls cannot be made by a amateur, or anyone with limited time.

These unusual quick yeast rolls are as easy to prepare as a pan of the more conventional type of muffins, leavened with baking powder. The batter is flavored with shredded cheese, handy dry pepper flakes available in tins, or with pimiento and fresh green pepper. There's no need to knead and only one rising is required. The result is a very rich, tender and light roll that can be served with a variety of dishes—soup, salad, cold meat, poultry or seafood. The rolls are at their peak when served hot, although they're also good eaten cold.

SAVORY YEAST MUFFINS (Yield—12 to 15 muffins)

¾ cup lukewarm water, 1 teaspoon granulated sugar, 1 envelope fast rising active dry yeast, 2 tablespoons granulated sugar, ½ teapsson salt, 2 cups (about) pre-sifted all-purpose flour, ½ cup soft butter or margarine, 1½ tablespoons chopped dried sweet pepper flakes or 3 tablespoons mixture of chopped pimento and fresh green pepper, ½ cup shredded old Canadian Cheddar Cheese.

Measure lukewarm water into warm bowl or bowl of electric mixer; stir in the 1 teaspoon sugar. Sprinkle with yeast. Let stand 10 minutes, then stir well. Stir in the 2 tablespoons sugar, salt, egg and 1 cup of the flour. Beat with electric mixer set at a medium speed for 1 minute or with a wooden spoon for 100 strokes. Stir in soft butter or margarine, pepper flakes or pimiento and fresh green pepper cheese and sufficient floor to make a rather thick batter—about 1 cup more. Again beat 1 minute or 100 strokes. Two-thirds fill greased average-sized muffin cups with batter. Cover. Let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk—about 1 hour. Bake in a hot oven (400

Treat yourself to a luxury bath

There's a world of difference between a bath and a luxury bath. If time permits, you can enjoy this wonderful beauty treatment every night. If not, set aside one night a week to pamper yourself.

Choose bath soap, bath oil, dusting powder and cologne in your favorite scent, and plan to allow a half hour or longer for your bath.

Put a capful of the bath oil into the tub while the warm water is running. Bath oil is an important aid to beauty, especially during the cold weather. It will scent and soften your skin, and prevent dryness.

Before you get into the tub, cream your face, neck and shoulders, so that the cream will lubricate while you soak leisurely.

Equip yourself with a bath pillow and a tray on which you can rest a book, or beauty tools for chores you can do while you bathe. A mirror and tweezer, for instance, will enable you to take care of your brows while you relax in the fragrant water.

After you've soaked for about 15 minutes, scrub as you would in your regular bath, using a stiff brush for your arms, legs and back. Next rub such rough spots as foot calluses and elbows with a damp pumice, then rinse in clear water.

When you step out, pat yourself dry with a thick towel, splash or spray cologne all over your body, and finish with dusting powder in the same scent. You'll feel as though you'd bathed in Roman splendor.

Most of us suppress temptation to answer these remarks truthfully

What are you supposed to say —

When you are wakened from a sound sleep by a telephone call and the caller asks cheerfully, "I didn't wake you did I?"

When you are asked a personal question you don't want to answer and the person asking adds, "I hope I'm not being too personal."

When you are obviously busy and the person interrupting your work says blandly, "I'm not interrupting anything important am I?"

When the hour grows later and later and one of your guests says "I'll bet you wish we would all go home."

When someone asks a favor of you that isn't going to be easy to grant and adds, "Now if it's too much trouble, just say so."

When a person who has kept you waiting half an hour arrives with a nonchalant, "I hope I didn't keep you waiting."

When a caller's uninhibited three-year-old breaks one of your prize possessions and the caller says sweetly but without too much concern, "I hope it wasn't anything you valued."

When someone volunteers your services without a by-your-leave and then tells you about it with the question, "You don't mind, do you?"

Just what are you expected to say in times like these?

N.W. Territories gets telephone, teletype, link

EDMONTON (CP) — The Great Slave Lake area of the Northwest Territories, isolated except for air services, winter roads and brief summer shipping, now has telephone and teletype links with the outside.

But unlike work in more fully developed areas, construction of communications lines had to take into account the winter residence of bears, nesting grounds of whooping cranes and the difficulties of keeping a bulldozer on course through dense bush.

A long distance service has linked Fort Smith, administrative capital of the Mackenzie District, and the mining centre of Yellowknife with Peace River in northwestern Alberta.

The link includes a 400-mile microwave network from Peace River to Hay River on the south shore of Great Slave Lake and a 500-mile pole line into the Great Slave area. Alberta Government Telephones and Canadian National Telecommunications operate the system.

Nerve centre is Hay River where a building houses the toll centre, local telephone exchange, commercial offices and repeater equipment for microwave and land lines. Twenty five technicians, operators and office workers are employed there.

RUNS THROUGH MUSKEG

Land lines branch out from Hay River in two directions. A 182-mile section runs southeast to Fort Smith through bush and muskeg country bordering the northern part of Wood Buffalo Park.

The Yellowknife line runs 315 miles northwest from Hay River, crossing the mile-wide Mackenzie River and stretching around the rocky western shore of Great Slave Lake.

Construction of the Fort Smith line was carried out in winter because the only access route was a road built over muskeg. Tripod pole construction was used to overcome muskeg and permafrost conditions.

In places the bush was so dense that captive balloons were sent aloft along the survey line so that bulldozer operators could use them as a guide in keeping on course.

In a few places the line makes a slight deviation to accommodate prior claims of hibernating bears, detected by surveyors by puffs of steamy air rising from snow mounds.

The original survey was altered when it was discovered the line would go through the nesting grounds of the rare whooping crane.

Canadian National, which built and maintains land lines, plans to add lines later to Fort Simpso nand Inuvik, near the mouth of the Mackenzie.

Fighting ship progress victim

VANCOUVER (CP)—One of Canada's proud fighting ships, HMCS St. Laurent, limped into harbor looking as if she had come off second best in a naval encounter.

Her decks were cluttered with gear, her superstructure and most of her electronic equipment missing.

The vessel is a victim of progress, not warfare.

She arrived at the end of a towline for a major refit after the navy decided she was obsolete. She had been in service eight years.

St. Laurent, first of a series of destroyer escorts in the St. Laurent class, is being brought up to date in submarine warfare.

Her electronic equipment was removed in Esquimalt, first stage of the $3,500,000 refit. In Vancouver she is being fitted for a helicopter landing deck and new long-range submarine detection gear.

Smiley pride of Winnipeg boy's reptile collection

WINNIPEG (CP)—Tom Vincent likes reptiles and he's got a crocodile, or maybe an alligator, in his basement to prove it.

The 15-year-old schoolboy says the toothy 2½ - foot monster named Smiley is the pride of his offbeat collection of reptiles, amphibians and tropical fish.

Tom, shy, tall and bespectacled, began collecting the weird-looking animals after he got a turtle for a ninth birthday present. Now he values the collection at $1,000.

Most of the 50 or 60 species live in tanks or enclosures in the basement of the Vincents' Winnipeg home.

But a 28-inch iguana lizard named Iggy and a box tortoise hang around with the family upstairs.

LIKES TURKEY

"But when my mother's canasta club comes," Tom says, "the iguana has to go down to the basement."

Iggy is bright green formerly lived in the tropics and now thrives on insects, plant food and choice bits of roast turkey.

He likes to relax on the sofa, halfway up a drape or perched on Tom's shoulder.

When sent to the basement, he joins an assortment of horned toads, newts, chameleons, salamanders, turtles and Smiley.

Smiley was a recent Christmas gift from Tom's mother, who thought she was buying an alligator.

But Tom says Smiley has the crocodile's pointed snout and "is also more vicious than the average alligator."

Smiley, whatever he is, allows Tom to pick him up out of his water tank heated to a temperature of 85 degrees.

GROWS QUICKLY

"He snaps," Tom says nonchalantly, "but I can handle him without gloves. When I put my hands in his tank, he keeps his eye on me all the time."

Only two years old, Smiley grows a foot a year on a diet of raw meat and could reach a length of 10 or 12 feet in captivity.

For the smaller reptiles, Tom raises meal worms, night crawlers and white grubs for food. The fish get manufactured food.

A topnotch mathematics and science student, Tom plans to gon on to university and take some sort of science course.

Tom prefers to spend his spare time with his pets rather than take part in teen-age night life. Weekends he works at a pet shop.

But he also made the grade as 140-pound end on the football team of Churchill High, where he is a Grade 10 student.

Students publish French paper

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP)—A student publication printed entirely in French has made its appearance at Prince Andrew High School here.

The first edition of L'Egalite, containing political comment, fashion and sports news, was described as a success by student-editor Ian Chambers. It will become a monthly project of the school's amateur journalists along with its English counterpart Squawk Box.

The French-language paper is published entirely by the students although the French teacher, Therese Gerroir, acts as faculty adviser.

SCOTSTOWN

When the mill did close in Scotstown
Many families moved away
Some to many parts of Canada
Others to the U.S.A.

In strange towns they've made new friends
As they settle down once more
Though they often think of Scotstown
And the homes they had before.

They do miss the whistle blowing
In the crisp and early dawn,
As they would rush to beat it
On a tired blue Monday morn.

They do miss the Salmon river
As it flows down by the mill
While happy memories still linger
About the fair-grounds on the hill.

They do miss their place of worship
Steeples reaching for the sky
And wistful are the memories
When they think of Scotstown High!

They will miss old Mount Megantic
Proud it stands in sun or rain
Yet they know each year brings changes
'Ere they gaze on it again.

A. M. MacKenzie's store is closed
Oldest merchant of them all
For age has bent the shoulders low
That once stood strong and tall.

In the Record and the Telegram
They do read the news and names
Of the ones who paid a visit
To the home town once again.

All the old acquaintance's
All the old familiar names
Matheson, Smith, MacLeod, MacLennan,
Nicholson, Beaton, MacDonald, Graham.

Morrison, Riglar, Coates, MacRitchie,
Goodin, Sherman, MacAulay, Wells,
Tetreault, Lizotte, Gregoire, Dostie,
Dumoulin, LaPrise, Lortitch, Martel.

Goodwin, Parsons, Cowan, Baker,
Gordon, Watson, Quint, MacRae,
Elger, Haskel, Irving, Simpson,
Wonnacot, Coleman, Boy, MacKay.

MacKenzie, Jacklin, Ladd, MacIver,
Gaulin, Armstrong, Mayhew, Wooley,
Bucharan, Atkins, Wintle, Pehleman,
Henderson, Campbell, Waldron, Murray.

MacKaskel, Doherty, Lloyd, Desruisseaux,
French, Hanright, Scott, MacLean,
And a host of many others,
Who can boast a Scotstown Name.

One who'll always be remembered,
Doctor Charlie Smith by name
Who gave gladly of his talents
To those in sickness or in pain.

Names bring back other memories
Harvest suppers in the fall,
Or the big friendly gatherings
Of Scotch concerts in the hall.

Baseball games and hockey scraps,
On Hallow'en who rang the bell?
While others were busy hauling
Double waggons out to Dell.

Or at the yearly Xmas tree
For each child there was surprise
As Santa Claus came jingling in
Watched by admiring eyes.

Now once more the leaves have fallen
You can feel the wintry chill
And the kids will soon be sliding,
Down the slope called Coleman's Hill.

Xmas time we know is coming
Then melancholy thoughts return
As they remember happy gatherings
At the old Scotstown home.

So, from the town of Scotstown
To you all at Christmas time
We will drink a toast of welcome
For Auld Lang Syne

Gland secretion may help to stop growth of cancer

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ten years ago, a Nobel Prize scientist turned his lively curiosity to a gland which seemingly held few mysteries.

The object of Dr. Albert Szent-Gyorgyi's interest was the thymus gland, located in the chest. Little was really known about it. It reaches its largest size when a person is growing most rapidly. Then it shrinks, and by old age may disappear altogether.

Now Dr. Szent-Gyorgyi and associates have discovered three intriguing chemicals in the thymus gland.

One is a powerful growth stimulant, and has been named Promine.

Another stops or slows growth, including cancerous growths in animals. It's been named Retine.

The third chemical makes male and female animals sterile, for as long as they get injections of it. It acts as a contraceptive.

HOPE FOR TREATMENTS

The discoveries may in time lead to new treatments for human disorders, including cancer.

Dr. Szent-Gyorgyi, a native of Hungary, won the Nobel Prize in medicine in 1937 for isolation of vitamin C, and is director of the Institute for Muscle Research at the Marine Biological Laboratory, Woods Hole, Mass.

He and Drs. Andrew Hegyeli and Jane A. McLaughlin discovered the two growth regulators in thymus secretions.

Promine, the stimulator, spurs the growth of tumors in mice and Retine, the brake, makes tumors regress, Dr. Szent-Gyorgyi reported in the proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

TRY FOR SEPARATION

Promine also made mice sterile, but recently the researchers found strong evidence that this contraceptive activity was not due to Promine but a different substance closely associated with it. They now are trying to separate the two chemicals.

Retine, the growth inhibitor, is found in high concentration in the thymus, but also appears to be present in other body tissues, Dr. Szent-Gyorgyi says, and he speculates it may be part of the body's natural defence against cancer.

Retine may be mobilized to stop cancers—possibly started by cosmic rays or other causes—before they can get started. With less Retine produced in older age, this might explain the higher incidence of cancers in old age—part of the defence is gone.

This is speculation, and Retine's possible role waits upon further testing in animals against different types of cancer.

Sandwich favorite American dish, furrier tailors mink coat for doll

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

Favorite menu items of Americans are sandwiches . . . they eat 100,000,000 daily . . . there may be no connection, but—some 18,000,000 Americans also have ulcers.

Prosperity note: Mike Forrest, a furrier here, has developed a line of mink coats for Christmas dolls this season—the coats will sell for $395 each. (The dolls come extra.)

Oh, my aching back: Next to headaches, the most common form of pain is caused by backaches.

Masculine fashions: Girdles for men aren't really new. . . . In the first half of the 19th century, pudgy gentlemen in London and Paris customarily wore corsets to achieve a slimmer waistline.

Quotable notables: "The best way to keep your friends is not to give them away."—Wilson Mizner.

Onward and upward with science: It has been found you can catch a mouse easier by baiting a trap with bacon rather than cheese. . . . British researchers discovered that the favorite scent of women (whether single or married) was orange blossoms.

What's in a name? . . . One of Russia's biggest film stars is Innokenty Smoktunovsky. . . . Imagine trying to get that one on a North American theatre marquee! . . . (He'd probably wind up being called Kent Smoke.)

Wise moppets: Your six-year-old child is smarter than you think . . . tests of first-grade children show that most have a vocabulary of 2,500 words—although the one they seem to use most in the home is "no."

Human puzzle: No wonder a man today gets mixed up. . . . To his lawyer he's a client, to his doctor he's a patient, to a hotel he's a guest, to a politician he's a constituent, to his bank he's a depositor, to his boss he's an employee, to a store he's a customer, to a sports promoter he's a fan—and to his family he's "good old dad," the provider.

Human bank: In 1958 surgeons in Durham, England, removed from the stomach of a 54-year-old man 424 coins and 27 pieces of wire weighing more than five pounds. . . . The value of the coins: About $5.

Develops method of controlling fungus disease

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prof. John E. Bier of the University of British Columbia has developed a method of controlling tree-killing fungus diseases.

Prof. Bier, with the department of biology and botany, said the method holds great promise for the B.C. forest industry, which now rejects more than 60 per cent of the timber it cuts because of fungus infection.

He said he discovered that certain beneficial organisms in trees help keep harmful fungus under control, if these organisms are present in sufficient numbers.

Under Prof. Biers' method, cuttings from healthy trees are left in distilled water for five days to draw off the beneficial organisms. Other tree cuttings then are placed in the solution, giving them almost complete resistance to fungus.

Prof. Bier hopes to begin extensife field trials of his solutions.

His work at UBC is supported by grants from the National Research Council and MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Limited, a large B.C. forestry fomplex.
