CONSERVATIVE PRECAUTIONS.

MEETING TO PREPARE FOR VOTERS' LIST REVISION.

The Event Gives Rise to Renewed Talk About the Approach of the General Elections–What Mr. Ouimet Says.

There was an unusual amount of stir in Conservative circles to-day. Hon. J. A. Ouimet, Minister of Public Works, and leader of the party in this district, was in the city, and was busy all day with the leading Conservatives of the city and district. This afternoon a meeting of representatives of the local Conservative associations and of Conservative members of adjacent counties was held at the Government officers. The object of the meeting was announced to be to select committees to supervise the revision of the voters' list. The announcement of the meeting and its objects gave rise to much speculation in all political circles, particularly among the Liberals, who regarded the event as positive proof of the near approach of the oft-threatened general elections.

"Does this meeting mean that the general elections are at last on hand?" queried a STAR reporter of Mr. Ouimet this morning.

"No, it does not," replied the honorable gentleman. "According to law a revision of the voters' lists has to take place, and we are going to take steps to see that our friends do not suffer in the revision. It is practically the same precaution that the Liberals are taking, for we cannot afford to be caught napping any better than they can."

"When will the elections take place, any way?"

"Well, that is more than any body, even including the Prime Minister, could say just yet. It will probably be held on the electoral lists now under revision, however, for it will be two years before the next revision takes place."

THE HARBOR SCHEME.

Work on the Guard Pier Progressing–Scarcity of Dredges.

The big embankment built in the centre of the river opposite the city is attracting much attention at present. Citizens generally know that the embankment is part of the harbor scheme, but strangers are apt to ask what the big pile of mud and stones means. The Hon. Clarke Wallace asked the question the other day while looking out of the Customs House windows. He had heard something of the harbor scheme, but did not know that the guard pier was part of it. In two months more when navigation closes this season's operations will have amounted in time to about five months. Close upon half a mile of the pier will have been added to the structure, which is now assuming gigantic proportions. The derricks have not been working full time owing to the scarcity of dredges, else the work would be still further advanced. In a month, however, a new dredge will be ready and this will help the work on some. About 27 feet of the pier is showing above water, leaving about seven feet more to be added to the height. A number of visitors are taken over to the work daily in the harbor tugs.

THE RIVER VERY LOW.

Down to Twenty-Seven and a Half Feet in the Ships Channel.

The water has seldom been so low in the river as it is at present. In the ship channel between here and Quebec it is "dead" low at 27 feet 6 inches. Harbor officials think it may go, at least, one and a half feet lower. At this point it would be the lowest on record. Steamers leaving here have got to load to suit the depth of the water. Opposite the city several shoals are plainly visible and during the past week several small boats have got stranded on them.

HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION.

While Montreal will have no provincial exhibition this year, she will have one, that of the Montreal Horticultural Society. Next week, commencing on Tuesday evening, the Victoria Skating Rink will be bright and beautiful with plants, flowers, fruits and vegetables from all over the province. The exhibition promises to be a great success, as many entries have already been received. The following gentlemen have contributed handsomely to the prize list, which contains nearly $2000 in premiums, the largest sum in the history of the Society: Sir Donald A. Smith, Hon. John S. Hall, Mrs. Redpath and Messrs. W. W. Ogilvie, Robert Mackay, D. Williamson, W. M. Ramsay, F. Roy, G. Cheney, H. Montagu Allan, D. Morrice, George Hague, George Moore, Warden King, William Evans, A. A. Ayer, Henry Morgan & Co., William Ewing & Co., W. C. McDonald, W. Mann, Robert Reid, W. Woodhall and Stone & Wellington. The directors of the Society have also given special prizes, amounting to $50, for the best collection of apples, open to the world.

The following gentlemen have been secured as judges: Plants, Mr. David Allan and Mr. Robinson, both of Boston, and Mr. G. Cooke, Plattsburg; cut flowers, Mr. C. Scrim, Ottawa, and Mr. Jonathan Brown, city; apples and pears, Mr. A. McD. Allen, Toronto, and Mr. C. P. Newman, Lachine; grapes, etc., Mr. J. Kirkwood and Mr. J. Nairn, both city; vegetables, Mr. William Ross, Outremont, and Mr. P. Power, Petite Cote. Diplomas and special prizes will be awarded to exhibits of exceptional merit. The directors have decided to donate the gross proceeds of one of the days to the General and Notre Dame Hospitals in equal proportions.

AGAINST THE PETITION.

At the regular meeting of Gordon Lodge, No. 31, I. O. G. T., last evening, the following resolutions were carried unanimously:

"That this Lodge beg to offer a protest against the petition now about to be put before the Lieutenant-Governor, by the Licensed Victuallers' Association asking for the suppression of the Temperance societies, especially the Dominion Alliance; also, that this Lodge endorse the action of the Dominion Alliance in taking all legal steps for the suppression of the liquor traffic, both in saloons and groceries."

SATURDAY'S MATCHES.

ORTON WINS THE TWO MILE IN THE STATES.

The Canadians to go to Quebec and the Shamrocks to the Theatre---Miscellaneous Sporting News.

The next important match in the Senior League series is that between the Capital and Montreal teams, which is to take place on the M. A. A. A. grounds, on Saturday afternoon next, commencing at 3 o'clock sharp.

Both teams are desirous of being as near to the championship as possible, and, consequently, they will put up the game of their lives. It is not too much to presume that there might be a surprise in store for the Shamrock team in their match with Toronto in the Queen City next Saturday, and if by any unforeseen reason they should be defeated, they may yet have to fight very stubbornly for the ticker.

The Montreal Club think they can yet come one round nearer the trophy and perhaps be in the final bout for the same, should they defeat the Capitals next Saturday and provided the Shamrocks suffer defeat at the hands of Toronto. The Capitals are not any way too confident about the outcome of next Saturday's match, as they know how close the "gray colts" played them in Ottawa on July 7, and now they are minus the services of Barney Quinn, who is a tower of strength on their defence. For all this mishap the Montreal Club are taking no chances, and are daily improving their team, the result of which could be seen in their play against Toronto last Saturday, when Robertson, the new but active inside home man, gave a good account of himself, and he will show up to better advantage on his own grounds next Saturday.

Austin Irvine is another intermediate man who has been laying low all season, and is now fit to take his position on any senior team. He will also grace the home on Saturday.

Draper, who has signified his intention of being a Montrealer all year, but who through some intricacy found in certain lacrosse circles, drifted around to Ottawa and practised with the Capitals for a few times and was then stood off for a less reliable player on the 25th August, will be another invaluable assistance, he having come to Montreal to further pursue his studies at McGill. Another likely change will be that in the person of "Tito," the star fielder, who played for the Victoria Lacrosse Club last year, and made such a brilliant name for himself during the eastern tour made by that club.

Surely, with all this in their favor, the team should come out one ahead of the Capitals, as they now stand four wins each out of six matches played.

There will not be any fancy prices charged. Those who have not seen the Capitals play this year, and those who have seen them should embrace this opportunity, as it will be the last one, in a regularly organized lacrosse championship match in Montreal this season.

Shamrocks at the Theatre.

The Shamrocks are holding their second annual theatre night at the Queen's on Wednesday evening, the 12th, on the occasion of Edmund Collier's visit to this city.

The chorus will meet at the Association rooms at 8 o'clock, when the first rehearsal will be held. St. Patrick's, St. Ann's and St. Mary's choirs will send a large delegation to help the vocal portion of the entertainment.

Those Perthians.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

OTTAWA, September 5.—The Lewis who played on the Perth team is the man who played on the Cornwall team. Dwyer is the brother of the celebrated defence man of Shamrock, and played with the Shamrocks at Ogdensburg against the Capitals, and McVey a brother of the Shamrock ex-home fielder. Lewis says that the Cornwall team is busted up and there is nothing to do but star now, so he gave Perth a hand.

The Toronto-Shamrock Match.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

TORONTO, September 5.—On Saturday next the Toronto Lacrosse Club will meet the famous Shamrocks of Montreal at Rosedale. This will be the first and only appearance of the Shamrocks in Toronto this year. The boys in blue are working hard and while the Toronto Lacrosse Club team is a new and young one, they are capable of creating a surprise party. Ewing, who showed to such advantage against the Capitals on July 1, and who was injured in Montreal will again be on the Toronto defence.

Long Throws.

A meeting of the Junior Independent Lacrosse League will be held to-morrow evening, at 471 Craig street, at 8 o'clock. Delegates from the Victoria, Standards, Garnet and Ivy Leaf are requested to attend.

AQUATICS.

The Prince May Sell His Yacht.

LONDON, September 5.—The Court Journal says: A report has been circulated to the effect that the Prince of Wales is thinking of disposing of his cutter, the Britannia. The statement is not quite worthy of belief, at least just now, but there is no doubt that yachtsmen have an inclination to change their craft. It is said, in connection with the rumor that Lord Dunraven would like to become the owner of the Britannia; but this is contradicted by the counter report as to the laying down of the keel of a successor to the defunct Valkyrie. It is possible that the Prince of Wales feels the responsibility of owning a yacht that carries all before her too much, and he may anticipate the day of the Britannia's defeat, when some still faster craft is designed, though, as the general opinion goes, she will have to wait a long time for a beating. Yachtsmen will hope for a denial of the report of the Prince's wish to dispose of the Britannia, or else for the news that His Royal Highness proposes to have another crack in her stead.

THE TURF.

Yesterday's Trotting at Elmira.

ELMIRA, N.Y., September 5.—The see-sawing in yesterday's events floundered the talent. The intervention of darkness saved Ruby from an inglorious defeat in the 2.17 trot. Summaries:

A Good Card at Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., September 5.—The weather yesterday was threatening and only 1500 people attended the second day of the races. The track was heavy and consequently Directly was not sent against his world's record. Alix will try for the world record for a mile to-morrow. The sport yesterday was fine, and the finishes close and exciting. The 2.16 trot was one of the warmest contests ever seen in the West. Darkness prevented its completion. Summaries:

Threatening Weather at Fleetwood Reduces the Attendance.

NEW YORK, September 5.—Threatening, muggy weather tended to reduce the attendance at Fleetwood yesterday, and there were not more than three thousand persons present to witness the second day's races of the Grand Circuit trotting meeting. The damp atmosphere seemed to affect the track, and it was not so good as it had been the day before. Still, as some of the fastest trotters on the turf were engaged in the three events of the day, the average rate of speed was almost as good as on the opening day. Summaries:—

They Will Hold Race Meetings at Night.

NEW YORK, September 5.—Horses are to run on a new Long Island track by night as well as by day. This custom will begin on Saturday evening next. The new idea has been secret and almost nothing has been said about it. The new track and its accompanying buildings have sprung up within the last month, and even the people around that part of the world hardly knew what was going on. The new track is owned by the Newtown Jockey Club, of which Marx Frank, of New York, is president, and James Calire superintendent. There is a grand stand with seats for 2500, bleachers for 1500, and a shed for the betting ring. A half-mile track has been constructed, with electric light poles every eight feet. In addition three great reflectors will be operated from the roof of the grand stand, and the horses will be followed in their journeys by a search light.

Lowlander's Death.

The brown horse Lowlander, winner of the Suburban Handicap in 1893, and a horse with a more or less picturesque career who died at Coney Island of inflammation of the bowels, was imported in utero by Mr. Maxwell, of Virginia, and was trained for his early engagements by W. P. Gilpin, one of the owners of Sport. He was sold as a four-year-old to Bookmaker Fred Lowe, who owned the horse at his death. In the hands of Charles Oxx Lowlander developed into one of the speediest horses in training, showing a preference for light weight and a mile or a mile and a furlong. Oxx prepared the brown horse for a number of coups, but the most successful by far was the Suburban of last season. Nobody but Oxx, owner Lowe, and their Jockey Patsy McDermott believed Lowlander capable of running a mile and a quarter fast enough to beat the crack field that would oppose him for the Suburban, and, as a consequence, he was at any price in the betting. The readers of The Sun will recall how Lowlander shook off all but Terrifier and Iddesleigh in the early stages of the race and then had the race in hand, ultimately beating Terrifier three-quarters of a length in 2.06 3-5, one of the fastest Suburbans on record. Lowe won the rich stake and $20,000 in bets. Soon afterwards Oxx and Lowe quarrelled, and the brown horse passed into the hands of Trainer Chandler, who tried to get him ready for this year's big handicaps. He was an exceedingly hard horse to train, and, after causing untold trouble at the post on a number of occasions and wearing other horses out, thus destroying their chances of winning, his entry was refused by the Coney Island Jockey Club for any of its races.

Lowlander was a brown horse, six years old, by Lowland Chief, out of Restless, and he was anything but a first-class performer in looks, being exceedingly plain and commonplace. He had speed, though, and but for his ugly temper would have been a great horse, especially over the mile ground.

Hoof-beats.

The autumn meeting of the Bel-Air Jockey Club will take place on Thursday and Saturday, September 27 and 29. A good programme has been arranged and will be issued in a few days.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause than Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

THE WHEEL.

Crossed the Bristol Channel on a Water Cycle.

LONDON, September 4.—The attempt to cross the English channel on a water cycle has apparently been abandoned for the season by the Frenchman who tried it and failed early in August. It is not unlikely, however, that the feat will be attempted by Robert Brown, sculptor, of Newport, Wales, who, on Wednesday, crossed the Bristol channel from Newport to Weston, a distance by steamer route of fourteen miles, but Brown, owing to the tide and other causes, actually travelled twenty-one miles. The time was three and three-quarter hours. He finished in good condition. Brown's cycle consists of two cigar-shaped tubes, each seventeen feet long, lying parallel and three feet apart. They are filled with compressed air. In the centre space is a platform and seat for a driver. Two paddle-wheels, one on the outside of each tube, are propelled by the ordinary cycle pedals and chain gearing. The steering gear consists of two rudders, which seem the weakest part of the machine, and will probably come to grief in rough water.

OCEAN PASSENGER TRAFFIC.

Captain Barrett, of the Mongolian, said to a STAR reporter to-day: "The passenger traffic between Liverpool and Montreal, both ways, has been this year as great, if not greater, than I have known it. By that I mean the saloon traffic. The steerage passengers have fallen off a little. Our cargoes are good, and I believe that there is going to be a good stir up of ocean business. The last voyage inward was made very pleasant for the officers of our vessel. The passengers presented a most gratifying testimonial to the officers and crew. Lord Swansea headed the list of signatures and many prominent Canadians also added their names in evidence to the favorable and flattering testimonial."

SAVED BY THE FENDER.

On Sunday afternoon Emma Belanger, a child two and a half years of age, was picked up on the fender of car No. 364 at the corner of Vinet street on the Notre Dame route. She was uninjured and ran to her home, 73 Vinet street. The fender that did this good work was one of the straight fenders that the Street Railway Company have placed on their cars. This is the second child which has been picked up in this manner since they have been put on.

THAT BIGAMY CASE.

In connection with the recent bigamy case, Mr. W. T. Hart, father of the young man who married Sarah Wheeler, considers that a misapprehension exists concerning his part in the affair. During this time he declares that not a word was said about a former marriage.

Proposed Improvements Discussed by the Council.

Cote St. Antoine Town Council held a meeting last evening, Mayor Redfern occupying the chair. Those present were: Councillors Hutchison, McCormack, Walker and Greig.

The Mayor and secretary were authorized to sign the deed to transfer Selby street, Clandeboye avenue and Brook avenue from the present proprietors to the town. Councillors Walker and McCormack were of the opinion that there was a possibility of a lawsuit in the matter and that the documents should be submitted to the corporation's solicitor before signing.

A communication was received from proprietors on Murray avenue asking the Corporation to lay drainage pipes for a distance of 200 feet, the proprietors offering to pay for the construction of the same, which would be levied according to frontages of property. The request was granted.

A number of St. Catherine street proprietors were present and objected to the homologation of a special assessment roll for the widening of St. Catherine street west. The matter was laid over for a week when witnesses will be heard.

The secretary reported that the valuation roll had been registered at the Corporation office and was open for inspection.

A communication from the Montreal Street Railway Co. re the laying of a double track on Western avenue from Victoria avenue west and to the limits of the municipality was deferred until the next meeting.

METHODISTS' CONFERENCE.

PREPARATION FOR THE MEETING IN LONDON.

List of the Delegates to be Present, The Scope of Their Powers and the Work to be Done—The Question of the General Superintendency.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

LONDON, Ont., September 5.—To-morrow the Quadrennial Conference of the Methodist Church in Canada will open in the Queen's Avenue Church, London. It is expected to continue in session two weeks, though it may extend beyond that time. It has been known to last four and five weeks.

The Conference is the governing body of the 850,000 Methodists in the Dominion and Newfoundland, who will be represented by some 260 clerical and lay delegates, including the most prominent men in the Church. Official representatives from Japan, Bermuda and Great Britain will also be present. The edifice in which they will meet is the oldest one of the denomination in London and has a seating capacity of 1800, which will permit the attendance of the general public. As the Conference meets concurrently with the Western Fair, when the city is always flooded with visitors, local hospitality has been taxed to the utmost to accommodate the delegates, but has not been found wanting. All have been billeted in comfortable Methodist homes.

The Conference will be presided over by Dr. Carman,

THE VENERABLE SUPERINTENDENT of the Church, who has held that exalted position so long. He will be supported by the brilliant galaxy of men for which Canadian Methodism is noted, but the sublime figure of the late Dr. Douglass will be missed from among its pillars.

Though no burning questions such as union or college federation, will engage the attention of the Conference, many important matters for legislation have necessarily accumulated in the last four years in such a large, important and progressive body as the Methodists. The entire work of the quadrennium must be reviewed. Reports from all departments of the Church will be received and considered and the general superintendent, missionary secretary, educational secretary, editor, book agent, and other officials will each give an account of his stewardship. A question that will certainly provoke a long discussion is the ever-recurring one of pastoral itineracy. Proposals will be made to lengthen the term from three to five or seven years and will be vigorously supported and opposed. There is much to be said on either side. Advocates of the change will argue that the strict enforcement of the three-year regulation is in many cases a hardship; that where a minister has won the love of his congregation and has sown good seed, it is unwise to remove him from the field when the harvest is ripening and to replace him by a stranger, to say nothing of snapping the ties of affection. They will claim that the lengthened term, though not so imperative in small places, is better adapted to cities and towns, where more time is necessary to a thorough acquaintance with the community. They do not ask that the five or seven years' term be made compulsory, but that it be lengthened to that limit at the unanimous desire of an individual church. The opponents of the innovation will point to the prosperity of Methodism under the existing system and pronounce the change a doubtful experiment. They will condemn it as a step towards the abolition of itineracy and claim that the congregational option of extending a term will create discord and reflect unjustly, on and work injury to, those pastors who were not perhaps through the disapproval of a few. However this may be, there is a strong feeling that present conditions should be more elastic.

Another fruitful source of discussion will be the proposition to lessen the number of conferences and alter their boundaries. A suggestion will probably be made to reduce the present six conferences of London, Guelph, Niagara, Toronto, Bay of Quinte and Montreal to three or four. The readjustment would not affect Quebec, but would be confined to Ontario. The proposal is to unite London, Guelph with the western half of Toronto, and the Bay of Quinte with the eastern half of Toronto, thus making nine conferences in all instead of the twelve into which the Church is now divided. This would entail a division of Toronto city. Whether the representatives of that place will consent to it being decentralized is questionable.

Many think the enlargement of Conference boundaries would lessen the difficulties of the stationing committees, and by simplifying the legislative machinery, promote the interests of the Church. It will also be proposed that the dividing lines, instead of running east and west, shall run north and south, so that ministers by removing to different latitudes will benefit by changes of air and climate without transfer to other conferences.

A committee was appointed some time ago to investigate the subject of superannuation and report the result. The committee has made the Methodist world its field of enquiry and has directed communications to and received answers from some two thousand sources of information throughout Christendom.

These will be epitomized for the information of Conference.

It was found that the superannuation allowance in Canada was exactly the same as the average in England and Wales, though not so liberal as in Australia. The American system was unsatisfactory.

The discipline of the Church may be subject to revision. An endeavor may be made to relax it somewhat, in reference to worldly amusements, but the uncompromising attitude of Methodist leaders leaves little hope for

CHANGE IN THIS DIRECTION.

A great deal of interest naturally centres around the election of officers. The situation is best explained by the Rev. Dr. Johnston, of Washington, D.C., in this letter to the Michigan Advocate:

"The General Superintendent is not appointed for life, but is elected quadrennially, yet Dr. Carman has held the office ever since the union. Men with more popular gifts could be selected as the highest representative of the church, yet in all the qualities that constitute an ideal presiding officer, Dr. Carman is without a peer.

"The name of the eloquent and sagacious Dr. Potts, perhaps the most popular divine in all the churches, has been mentioned, but who could fill his important place as secretary of education? There is also the name of Dr. Sutherland, scarcely less popular, of wide, comprehensive intellect, whose flow of speech is impetuous as a torrent and broad as a sea; but for twenty years he has given the whole force of his talents, energy and industry to the missionary secretariat. The book steward, Dr. Briggs, is also firmly seated in his place, for though as a preacher he has a style of such admirable richness that all his sermons are splendid as a cloth of gold, yet he has manifested a business capacity which has made him master of the situation and made the book concern by far the largest publishing house in the Dominion. And who could fill the place of the genial, gifted, scholarly and indomitably energetic Dr. Withrow, editor of the "Magazine," "Sunday school" and "Epworth League" publications? Dr. Dewart's vigorous pen, poetic nature, strong intellect, exercised by theological and philosophic studies and ripe editorial experience of nearly 25 years, still command

THE SUFFRAGES OF HIS BRETHREN.

"There may be good brethren ambitious to rise a step, but 'not yet' may say the officers of the Canadian Methodist ship, and unless there be some melancholy 'taking off,' or some ecclesiastical coup d'etat, there will be no changes in the personnel of general conference officers.

EXCESSES BY SOLDIERS.

Wild Actions by the Red Coats in Camp at Levis.

QUEBEC, September 5.—The citizens of Levis are much incensed against the volunteers, drafted from the different military schools in Canada, and formed into a military camp at Levis for the purpose of field exercise.

Some of the boys in red recently got very turbulent after having drank deeply, and insulted women and girls. They were watched lately after one of their wild rambles, and were given the soundest thrashing possible. A large body of the soldiers, who just crossed from here and not knowing what was the matter had to seek the assistance of the police, the Levis men were so badly disposed against them. The camp was then required to send an escort of ten men to protect the soldiers, and on their way to camp the escort picked up a number of drunken soldiers, who had taken refuge in the back yards.

General Herbert has stopped all leave of absence from camp.

CABLED NOTES.

LONDON, September 5.—The Trades' Union Congress, sitting at Norwich to-day, voted in favor of a compulsory eight hour day for minors. The vote on this question was 276 to 16.

An International Ecclesiastical Congress will shortly be held in Paris, under the presidency of the Bishop of Grenoble. The Congress will discuss important questions affecting the interests of the Holy See.

A despatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Asaba, Niger Territory, says that desperate fighting has taken place in that part of Africa. It is added that sixty of the Royal Niger Company's men were killed and wounded. The news received refers to the disputes with the French in regard to boundary questions.

WASHINGTON, D. C., September 4.—Senator Jones of Nevada, who for twenty-one years has represented his State as a Republican, has written a letter, in which he declares himself separated from that party and become a Populist. The basis for his change is the question of silver.

TALE OF A TELEGRAPH PIONEER.

MR. EASSON'S ASSOCIATION WITH EZRA CORNELL IN CHICAGO.

The Founder of the Magnificent Educational Institution at Ithaca Cleaned Batteries on Sunday and Handled Chicago's Telegraph Business with One Operator.

Mr. Robert F. Easson, Superintendent of Reports of the Great North Western Telegraph Company, at Toronto, has a fund of stories, which he occasionally draws upon. These are based on his early experiences as a telegraph operator, in the pioneer days of that business, whose net-work of wires to-day spans the continents and traverses the oceans of the world.

The STAR has hitherto noted Mr. Easson's interesting story of the inauguration of a system, for the distribution of trans-Atlantic intelligence, by despatching the news broadcast, brought by the Allan Line steamers to Father Point, in this province.

Another story of Mr. Easson's early experience, ante-dating the Father Point narrative, is published in the Monetary Times. The object of this contribution is to bear witness to the sterling character of Ezra Cornell, the founder of the great educational institution at Ithaca, which bears the name of the man, whose friendship and acquaintance Mr. Easson considers himself as privileged to have had. Incidentally, the writer tells some of the early history of Chicago, where as a lad, fourteen years of age, he applied to Mr. Cornell for a position as telegraph operator. And, furthermore, the workings of the telegraph at the time are reviewed, and form a striking contrast to these—the days of quadruplexes, "Wheatstones," duplexes and all other scientific additions to the meagre outfit with which Morse and his early disciples puzzled and astonished an incredulous generation fifty years ago. Mr. Easson's contribution reviews the building of the first telegraph line, in 1844, between Washington and Baltimore. In the office at the first named place, Mr. O. S. Wood, afterwards superintendent of the Montreal Telegraph Company, in the same year entered as a student, and in November following by receiving from Baltimore the results of the presidential elections in the northern and eastern states." This first student of Morse was for many years a resident of Montreal prior to the year 1847.

Three years later, in Toronto, Mr. Easson "sent" his first message, and again three years later he marched in upon Mr. Cornell, in Chicago, and applied for a position as telegraph operator. The latter gentleman was then 46 years of age, and for the previous eight years had been associated with Morse in telegraph matters. And with what success up to that date? Not very much; for Mr. Easson tells that "the telegraph business up to this time had not yet 'evolved' either a battery-man or a line repairer. During the winter of 1853-54 Mr. Cornell was around Chicago a good deal of the time, and that gentleman and myself often came down to the office on Sunday forenoon to clean the battery. It was a Grove battery of about 60 cups, and as it was only cleaned once a week, it required a careful and complete furbishing up. We amalgamated the zincs and weeded out all the defective ones. The fumes arising from the sulphuric acid during the cleansing process almost stifled us, and we had frequently to leave the room to get a breath of fresh air. * * * I was Mr. Cornell's only operator for a while, but by-and-by as business increased we got another, Charlie Bassett, a good operator and good fellow, who is now, I believe, connected with one of the railroads running into Chicago. Mr. Cornell about this time was constantly on the move,

AND WAS KEPT VERY BUSY.

* * * * In the spring of 1853 there were perhaps half a dozen regular operators, all told, in the Chicago office. * * * * But Mr. Cornell had faith in its ultimate triumph; this faith never deserted him. He appeared to be gifted with a prophet's vision, and the future of the telegraph, commercially and socially, was as an open book to him. He also had the courage of his convictions, and, as Mr. Depew says, "upon his judgment he staked the accumulations of his life and the almost superhuman labors of a decade." Every cent he could raise was invested in building telegraph lines, securing stock in lines already built, buying franchises and leasing lines. His time came. The telegraph had come to stay; people had begun to have confidence in it. It was now being more generally used, and in ten or twelve years from the time in which we find Mr. Cornell cleaning a battery in Chicago—the revenue derived from the telegraph business being so insignificant at that time that the services of a regular battery-man were considered out of the question—we find him many times over a millionaire, so profitable had his telegraphic investments become in the meantime."

As a comparison it is interesting to note that to-day Chicago and the yearly revenue in that city alone equals almost that derived from the whole of Canada. Mr. Easson, when first employed, received but $21 per month for his services, probably for the same cause that rendered it necessary for Mr. Cornell to turn batteryman on Sunday. Chicago in 1853 was a city of 40,000 people; to-day there are over 2,000,000 persons there, and of its "newness" Mr. Easson bears testimony as follows: "The first white girl born in Chicago was married in that city while I lived there, about 1853-54, and was not more than twenty years of age at the time of her marriage."

The smart looking telegraph clerk of the present day would be astounded if his chief operator were to order him to climb a telegraph pole to repair a break in the wire. But the economy that was, at first, part of the system under Mr. Cornell's regime, called for this duty, and Mr. Easson does not appear, despite his youthful years, to have escaped. He says: "As we had to do our own repairing out West, I saw a great deal of the country on all sides of Chicago. Certain sections of the different lines ran across the prairies and others through the bush. In some instances, for nearly a quarter of a mile at a stretch in the bush, poles were dispensed with altogether, and growing trees, with an insulator nailed to them, used in their stead. In some places the bush roads were so narrow and trees grew so close to the road that poles were unnecessary, in fact, they were an impossibility. In the open country the poles were slim, and as a rule made from the cheapest and commonest timber; the wire, too, was mostly unglazed and rusty. The company, of course, paid all the expenses of any one whom I chose to take along to help fix the breaks, and in nice weather I had no trouble in getting a good companion, but in the winter season the weather was sometimes as to deter any one from facing the cruel 'winds that blew across the wild moors,' who could possibly stay at home. There was very little fun in these excursions, when the thermometer hovered around zero and the playful western zephyrs were gamboling across the prairies and getting in their fine work. When the weather and season were favorable we sometimes took a gun with us, and without wasting time hunting, generally bagged some game. I have had the horses run away across the prairie more than once when 10 or 12 miles from Chicago, on the old road to the right of the Milwaukee plank road, strewing the contents of the buggy over the prairie, doing considerable damage, and almost reaching the city before being caught. On the open prairie there was nothing to which to fasten them, but the telegraph poles and the sighing of the winds and the clanging and jangling of the wire were too much for them. Their restlessness and efforts to free themselves presently caused something to give way, and off they started helter-skelter across the prairie. On one occasion, while crossing the prairie ten miles from Chicago, one of the horses, an ill-tempered kicker, in trying to reach my head with his heels, got one of his hind legs over the pole; the other horse just then drew the buggy forward, bending the kicker's leg and lacerating it in a shocking manner. Luckily there was a farm house close by, and the farmer took charge of the brutes while I and my companion tramped it back to Chicago over the ties of the first railway ever built between Chicago and Milwaukee, which was only then in course of construction, and on arriving at Chicago, foot sore and tired, we received orders to start off

AGAIN WITH A FRESH TEAM."

Again Mr. Easson says: "While on a line-repairing excursion one day, we stopped at a country house for dinner. On reaching the place we saw quite a display of dead birds hanging up around the back door. The most attractive of the collection was a large crane, a handsome bird which, when standing erect, must have been five feet high. We had some distance further to go, but arranged to return in time for dinner, which we did. At dinner, instead of the never-failing ham and eggs, we were proffered a treat in the shape of wild goose. My companion and myself were both ravenously hungry and we ate heartily of the dark-colored wild goose meat. After dinner, in looking around the back premises, we noticed that the crane had disappeared, and on further investigation we elicited the fact that we had eaten it for dinner—it had been palmed off on us as roast goose. Remonstrating with the old chap who kept the place, he, with a knowing gleam in his eye, acknowledged the deception, but said that so far from being considered unfit to eat, the people out there deemed a good fat crane (isn't this an anomaly?) superior to any other feathered game. I was not so sure about this. Without any pretensions to the whimsically fastidious taste of an epicure, I thought there were too many snakes in that country to permit of one ever acquiring a consuming desire for roast crane."

Mr. Easson's experiences, in part told above, lasted two years and a half, when he again returned to Canada, to re-enter the employ of the Montreal Telegraph Company.

MR. WILLOUGHBY CHOSEN.

The Conservative Candidate Selected in Cardwell.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

ORANGEVILLE, Ont., September 5.—On the third ballot W. B. Willoughby was yesterday selected by the Conservative Convention at Mono Mills to bear their standard in Cardwell, when that constituency shall be opened.

Mr. Willoughby led all the way through the convention, and when on the third ballot he secured a clear majority of the large convention the nomination was made unanimous. Candidates were present in large numbers, representing all sections of the electors. The convention was large, representative and remarkably orderly. Chairman Johnson lost no time in getting down to business, and at once called for nominations and was quickly answered and in rapid succession: W. B. Willoughby, James Snell, Richard Allen, Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, James Stewart, J. S. Leighton, W. H. Hunter, Richard Armstrong, Dr. Lewis, Dr. Law and E. W. Walsh were placed before the convention. Then the candidates were given a chance to speak themselves. James Snell was the first to speak. Mr. Snell announced that he was a loyal Conservative, and would support the Dominion Government. He was a farmer, and thought that sons of toil should have a show. Mr. Willoughby was given a warm reception when he stepped forward. He said: "I do not want any jealousy among the members of the party in this county. I am a candidate for the nomination, but I will support to the very best of my ability the gentleman who may be the choice of this convention. We are on the eve of a big fight in Cardwell. The man who is selected to-day should be the very strongest man in the party, one against whom there will be no factional opposition, and on whom every-body can unite. He must be a man who can discuss the McCarthy platform. There is nothing in the platform. It is simply the disgruntled utterances of a disgruntled politician."

After addresses by the other candidates, R. S. White, M. P., was called upon, but said only a few words, urging the despatch of business. The hall was cleared of all but delegates, and the balloting commenced. No candidate secured a majority on the first two ballots, although Mr. Willoughby was in the lead. On the third ballot he was declared elected and the nomination was made unanimous. The candidate made a short speech full of vigor and spirit which was loudly applauded.

W. B. Willoughby is a young lawyer and a member of the law firm of Willoughby & McPhillips, with offices in Toronto and Bolton. He was born in the constituency of Cardwell and spent the greater portion of his life there. His opponent up to date is William Stubbs, who is a supporter of Dalton McCarthy's Third Party.

INDIAN OUTBREAK FEARED.

The Non-Treaty Sotos at Jack Fish Lake Unquiet.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

TORONTO, September 5. — The Globe's Battleford special says: "We are threatened with an Indian uprising.

"On Saturday a settler, named Day, brought word that the Indians around Jack Fish Lake had risen and had seized all the guns and ammunition and horses belonging to the settlers in that neighborhood.

"It is said Gabriel Dumont is there, and is inciting the Indians to make trouble. That story, however, is not sustained by any evidence, and may have no foundation in fact. Thirty of the mounted police went out there late on Saturday night and nothing has been heard as to their movements since their departure."

Much anxiety is felt.

"The Indians are non-treaty Indians and belong to the Sotos. All the white women have been removed to one large house, which is usually a sign of danger. Six of the young Indians in the Industrial School ran away ten days ago and are supposed to have joined their brethren, who are threatening trouble."

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

MONTREAL WHOLESALE MARKETS.

GRAIN.—A good enquiry for No. 2 peas, which are not as yet arriving freely, is the only feature of the local market this morning. Quotations are unchanged, 72½ to 73c being again the range. Oats are hardly in such good demand to-day, but prices keep steady at 34c. Corn is nominal, rye dull and buckwheat slow of sale. There were no spot transactions in wheat.

FEED.—The market is strong and buoyant. Bran sells quickly at $16, and shorts are wanted at $18 to $19. Moullie is quoted at $22 to $24.

FLOUR.—Speaking generally, the market is dull to-day, although some millers continue to speak of a fair to good demand for special brands of Manitoba patents. The request from the lower ports is hardly so brisk as usual at this season, and on local account transactions this morning were few and unimportant. We quote: Patent spring, $3 40 to $3 50; do winter, $3 20 to $3 50; straight roller, $2 85 to $2 90; extra, $2 50 to $2 60; superfine, $2 25 to $2 40; strong bakers', $3 25 to $3 40.

OATMEAL.—There is an improvement to note in the demand for oatmeal. An increased consumption of porridge is one of the results of the opening of the schools, and better sales by the grocers means of course more activity in wholesale circles. We quote: Granulated, per bbl., $4 35 to $4 40 per bag; $2 12½ to $2 15; rolled per bbl., $4 30 to $4 40, per bag $2 10 to $2 15; standard, per bbl., $4 35 to $4 40; per bag, $2 12½ to $2 15; pot barley, per bbl., $3 75, per bag, $1 75; pearl, per bbl., $7 25; half brl., $3 75; split peas, per bbl, $3 40 to $3 50, per bag, $1 70.

PROVISIONS.—The features are the same. There is no diminution in the demand for smoked meats or increase in that for pork, and prices are unaltered. We quote: Canada short cut mess pork, per barrel, $18 50 to $19 50; mess pork, Western, per barrel, nominal; ham, city cured, per lb., 10 to 12c; bacon, per lb., 11 to 12c; lard, compound, 7½ to 7¾c; lard, pure Canadian, 8½ to 9c.

CHEESE.—The market in England continues its upward career, 50s, being the price announced by the Liverpool cable this morning. The very full private advices received by dealers here every day, which have all along been in advance of the public, takes the edge off such news for the trade who express no elation, only a moderate satisfaction that their correspondents' views have been to a certain extent corroborated. Still the feeling is always rendered somewhat firmer by public cable advances and the tone is very strongly buoyant, although there are no noteworthy transactions to record at time of going to press.

BUTTER.—In this market very little is being done outside of a routine jobbing business. Exporters manifest hardly any interest in the offerings of stock other than the finest August goods and even those who are not generally averse to a little speculation feel doubtful about paying 19c when mail advices speak of 16s as the outside figure in Liverpool for finest American creamery. Notwithstanding the present inaction holders seem confident and there is no change in asking prices.

EGGS.—A better feeling pervades the market this morning, and for really fine candled stock in large lots 10c to 11c is about the range. These figures being realisable here, dealers at the moment see no necessity for looking to Boston. Medium goods are not wanted either here or there, the supply of such qualities being excessive in both places.

MANITOBA WHEAT SITUATION.

The beginning of the movement in new wheat has stirred up more interest in the situation in Manitoba markets. At some country points deliveries of new wheat were quite heavy this week, but the most of the grain was going into store in country elevators, as the buyers were not on the market. Most of the shippers will have buyers on the market on Monday. Prices offered in Manitoba country markets to farmers range about 40 to 42c per bushel, average freight rates. The wheat now coming in is from threshing direct from shock, for which the weather has been favorable. The sample is good. Prices were easier again this week, in sympathy with lower markets elsewhere. We quote No. 1 hard at 58 to 59c per bushel, delivered afloat Fort William, and new wheat about 57c. Stocks in store at Fort William on August 25 were 789,761 bushels. Receipts for the week were 107,786, and shipments 248,228 bushels. A year ago stocks were 1,231,000 bushels, being a decrease of 118,899 for that week. The reduction in terminal elevator rates to ½c per bushel for handling, (including storage for twenty days,) and ½c for 30 days subsequent storage, is a not unexpected feature of the week.

In the country stacking and threshing has made good progress, under excellent weather conditions, and the marketings show a splendid sample of hard wheat. The western board of grain examiners meets on September 11, in Winnipeg. As the crop is very similar in condition to last year, the work of fixing the standards for grading the crop should be comparatively easy.—Winnipeg Commercial.

New York Banks.

The changes in the weekly statement of the New York banks are all in the right direction, though they do not go as far as those who have been dwelling on the great change for the better in the situation would have them in order to substantiate their position. Loans are expanded by $1,116,200; deposits increased by only $188,100; legal tenders reduced by [illegible], and the surplus whittled down by [illegible]. These figures reflect a net movement out of the banks.

ELECTION PROBABILITIES.

Conservative county conventions are nominating candidates for the next Federal elections just now without ostentation, but with considerable frequency. It seems to have occurred to the party managers that it would be just as well to be ready in case of a thunder shower. Sir Richard Cartwright may not be regarded as especially good authority as to the intentions of the Government; but, whatever it may be worth, his opinion is that it depends upon the issue of the Cardwell election whether or not we have another session before dissolution. Apparently the Opposition are ready. They have had their big Convention; Mr. Laurier has wooed eastern Canada and is now out convincing the distrustful people of the West that the Liberal party has both care for and interest in them. He will have covered the ground pretty well, even if the contest be sprung upon him this autumn, and it is difficult to see what he and his friends would gain by another session. This readiness of the Opposition would, of course, be a reason in the eyes of the Government for delaying dissolution; and then there is that other most important reason—the fact that the new lists will not be completed until February next. It would be a daring thing to challenge public opinion by bringing on an election on lists nearly as old as the Parliament itself, unless some exceedingly good reason could be given for haste. Then it would seem worth while for a government to wait until the settlement of the tariff question in the United States had steadied the business of the continent back to a better basis, before going to the people. The Democrats would willingly do some magnificent waiting if their constitution would permit it. Next year may see "better times," and it is very unlikely that it will see worse. Then, too, it may be thought that the memory of Mr. Laurier's speech-making may stale a bit by that time; and the people may even forget that St. Louis burned his books and nothing save a few dismissals followed the Curran bridge exposures.

Of course, the light drift of straws like these can be easily upset by a sudden flurry of wind in another quarter, and it is well to imitate the Conservative county conventions and prepare for the worst. Still the lesson of the situation points to the wisdom of making the lists now preparing as complete and—especially—as representative of the independent sentiment in the community as possible. The men who are on those lists will, probably, be the men who will elect the next Parliament; and no citizen can afford to disenfranchise himself by negligence at this time. The provisions of the act, though complicated, are broad; and practically every man who is of age and who is living in the community has a right to vote. No person should conclude that he cannot vote without investigation.

AMERICAN ELECTIONS.

The Americans are having the first of their early autumn elections just now. Most state contests held in a congressional year come simultaneously with the general elections in November, but several are scattered along through the autumn months previous to the great national tug-of-war. Arkansas voted on Monday, and Vermont yesterday. Maine will go through the formality of ratifying the work of its Republican convention on Monday next, and Georgia will close the list of sporadic elections on the first Wednesday in October. This is a pretty safe quartette of states, being fairly certain to vote according to precedent. Politicians regard them as valuable, however, in the capacity of indicators of the general drift of public sentiment. In Arkansas there was a falling off in the total vote, showing lax interest at this unimportant election; and the Democratic majority remained about as usual. The Populists were making a fight this year unaided by any alliance with the Republicans, but present indications show no success. Old "Arkansaw" plainly has not been shaken from its allegiance by the record of the past year. Vermont, which may be regarded as a New England wind vane, shows strong Republican gains as compared with '92; but '92 was an "off year" for the G. O. P. They are estimating to-day that Vermont will give the Republicans 25,000 majority—a gain of 7,000 over '92. But it gave Harrison over 28,000 in '88. This ratio of gain will, of course, if maintained throughout New England, repulse the Democratic attack on Massachusetts, for instance; but it would only deprive them of one of their three members of Congress from that state.

There is not evidence enough in yet to warrant a positive verdict. The Democrats have a long lead. The Republicans are gaining on them. The question is simply, will they gain enough to secure control of the House? It is a dyke standing against a flood, and the issue depends upon the extent to which the dyke has been injured by its friends. The result in Arkansas would seem to show that so far as the "solid South" wing of the dyke is concerned, the flood will advance but little; yet the Republicans are calculating on a gain of sixteen in the Southern States. The split over the unspeakable Breckinridge in Kentucky and the revolt of the sugar planters in Louisiana because their bounty has been taken from them by the Gorman bill, are signs of hope to those who would see the flood master the dyke. In New York and New Jersey, the Democratic party is in a bad way, and November may see the House lost to them in these two States. The Cleveland Democracy and Tammany are fighting as fiercely as ever, and this year Tammany will hardly be strong enough to carry the Cleveland men on its back while it routs the Republicans. Maryland, too, may give ground to the "flood," weakened by the quarrel between Senator Gorman, the leader of that state, and the President. The Populists are not very noisy in the west just now, but we may hear more of them later in the season. Should the Democrats "fuse" freely with them in close states, the alliance might gain perceptibly on the Republicans in the rear of their position. It will always pay the Democrats to lose to the Populists rather than to the Republicans; and it may be, as Jerry Simpson claims, that the Populists will emerge from the scramble in possession of the balance of power.

THE ALTON CLERK CASE.

A Squabble Between the Parties at Yesterday's Sitting.

The enquete in the Robidoux-Clerk case was resumed yesterday afternoon, Mr. Sicotte presiding. The first witness examined was Mr. J. Lowe. He produced the registers of the Stock Exchange, from which he read, at the request of Mr. Robidoux, all the transactions in Street Railway stock on 'Change on March 1, 1893. Those in which Mr. Clerk was interested were the sales of fifty shares by MacDougall Bros. to Mr. Clerk, at 191¼, and fifty at 191¼ by Mowat to Clerk. On March 13, 1893, Clerk disposed of twenty-five shares to Meredith & O'Brien at 188, and at 184¼ he sold seventy-five to Forget & Co., fifty to Turpin, and twenty-five to Oswald & Co. Mr. Lowe said that he was unable to say if the shares had been transferred to the books of the Company. Mr. Lowe's evidence will be resumed this afternoon.

This evidence was the outcome of a request on the part of Mr. Robidoux for a statement of all transactions on the Stock Exchange in Montreal Street Railway for sixteen months. This was refused, but a statement of Mr. Clerk's transactions was produced. Mr. Robidoux refused to look at this and demanded the books. When they were produced he wanted to examine the statement, but Mr. Lowe had pocketed it and refused to give it up unless paid twenty-five dollars. Mr. St. Jean accused Mr. Robidoux of simply wasting time to lengthen the case, and Mr. Robidoux retorted that he would postpone the enquete for fifteen days, if necessary. The hearing will proceed this afternoon.

A FIREMAN'S FEARFUL DEATH.

THE BIG EXTENSION LADDER IN COLLISION.

Fireman St. George Crushed to Death—The Ladder Waggon Became Unmanageable—An Inquest to be Held.

A sad accident occurred on Craig street between Bleury and St. George streets last evening, just as the streets were crowded with people returning home from their day's work. The result was the addition of another name to the long list of Montreal firemen who have lost their lives in the discharge of duty. The victim was William St. George of Number Three Station who was on duty at Number One Station, yesterday to replace Joseph Presseau, of the extension ladder crew, who had leave for the day to get married. At ten minutes past six an alarm from box 414 was rung in, for some burning rubbish on a vacant lot. The apparatus from No. 1 Station promptly responded, but the large Bangor ladder, to the right side of which poor St. George clung, did not get far from the station. Fireman Endicott was driving. After turning the waggon proceeded westwards for a few yards along the south side of Craig street, near St. George street. Endicott determined to cross to the north side of the street to avoid a crush of east-bound traffic. A trolley car was proceeding rapidly eastward, just ahead of the point where the crossing was made. This crowded the driver of the huge ladder waggon somewhat, and he attempted an extra sharp cut towards the sidewalk on the north side. At this moment the long vehicle began to sway, in spite of the efforts of Fireman Legace, who was at the steering wheel. A heavy brewery waggon was passing, and the rear wheels of the ladder truck slewed over and came violently into collision with it. The rear wheels of the beer waggon were smashed to splinters, and the ladder canted over on its right side. It kept along, running on two wheels for a few feet, when it toppled over, right on top of St. George, who was dragged along for a considerable distance under the heavy machine before the three spirited horses driving it could be brought to a stop. The other three firemen on the ladder truck to save themselves from serious injury. St. George's comrades and all the spectators thought the poor fellow had been killed outright, but he was still living when extricated from his dreadful position, though there was little doubt that he was fatally injured. The left leg was broken at the thigh, and a heavy hemorrhage told of serious internal injury. The ambulances were summoned and the injured man was soon on his way to the General Hospital, but before the institution was reached he was dead.

JUMPED IN TIME

Deceased was only eight months in the brigade, but was popular among his comrades on account of his quiet disposition. He was 32 years old, and leaves a widow and six children.

The driver of the beer waggon, with which the ladder was in collision, Joseph Gougeon, escaped without injury. He was promptly arrested and taken to No. 5 Police Station, but was at once released on the firemen explaining that Gougeon was not in any way responsible for the accident.

The Coroner will hold an inquest at the General Hospital at seven o'clock this evening.

The ladder sustained rather serious damage, one length of ladder and the steering gear being smashed.

There is little doubt in the minds of the firemen that the accident was caused by the under the steering wheel, through which the truck became unmanageable. They consider it very probable also that the disgraceful condition of the street car tracks are indirectly responsible for poor St. George's death. After the truck crossed and slewed off the tracks in front of the station the steering wheel did not work very well, and it is just possible that it was broken then by the terrible jolting, the collision with the beer waggon giving it the coup de grace. The collision alone could never have overturned the truck, the firemen say.

A special meeting of the Montreal Veteran Volunteer Firemen's Association was held last evening, when it was decided to attend poor St. George's funeral in a body.

WALKED INTO THE CANAL.

Sad Death of a Young Montrealer at Ste. Anne's.

A young man named Duchene, who lived at 42 Versailles street, in this city, was drowned at Ste. Anne's last night. He had been to Coteau in search of work and was unsuccessful. Last night he had supper at the locks at Ste. Anne's and started with two companions, Albert Allard, 57 Dufresne street, and S. Cloutier, 38 Versailles street, to walk along the canal bank. They had not gone far in the darkness and pouring rain, however, when Duchene missed his footing and fell into the canal. Help was obtained and he was dragged out still alive, but he only lived a few minutes. The body is still at Ste. Anne's, where an inquest will be held. The deceased was twenty-five years of age and unmarried.

A REMARKABLE HISTORY.

There is now in Montreal an elderly man whose history proves the correctness of the assertion that truth is often stranger than fiction. His name is Joseph Isaac Rabbinowitz, and he is a Russian Jew by birth. When only eight years of age he was forcibly abducted, with three hundred other Jewish children, by order of the Emperor Nicholas, and was baptized by the Greek Church. He was educated in a military academy, and advanced to the position of major in the Russian army. He commanded a large division at the siege of Sebastopol, and lost his left arm in battle. For the sake of his ancestral faith he abandoned all prospect of promotion after the close of the Crimean war, and left his native land for Roumania, where he again accepted Judaism. In Roumania he acquired property with the 90,000 roubles which then formed his fortune. When the Jewish persecution broke out in this country he lost all his property but some 6000 roubles, with which he fled to Jerusalem. There he lived for 14 years. He has now lost everything, and is compelled to ask for assistance. Some benevolent members of the Montreal Jewish community are interesting themselves in his case. It is expected that there will be a liberal response to their appeals. Mr. Rabbinowitz carries letters of recommendation from Drs. Mendes and Drachman, of New York, Dr. Morais, of Philadelphia, Zadock Kahn, Grand Rabbin of France, and the Alliance Israelite Universelle, of Paris.

MILK CASE DISMISSED.

The celebrated Dooley milk case came up before Deputy Recorder Bourgoin yesterday and was dismissed. His Honor in the Judgment held that as the milk was inspected outside the city limits and it was not proven that Dooley had sold any milk in the city, he had no jurisdiction in the case.

POSTING SCOTCHMEN.

Miss F. Marie Imandt, L.L.A., M.J.I., and Miss Bessie Maxwell, representing the Dundee Courier and Dundee Weekly News, are in Montreal, on their way home, after having made a tour of the world in the interests of their papers. The object of their journey was to furnish weekly letters of interest to lady readers, but of course they found it impossible to confine themselves exclusively to this feature. They have just come across the prairies by the Canadian Pacific Railway, and are much delighted with the appearance of the country and the condition of the people. They have written letters to their papers telling the Scotch girls what fine farms and prospective husbands there are in the North-West. Miss Imandt and Miss Maxwell made their tour via Brindisi, Paris, Florence, Rome, Naples, Cairo and across India, China and Japan, sailing from Yokahama.

THE SECOND DAY.

Order Now Reigns at the Sherbrooke Exhibition.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

SHERBROOKE, Que., September 4.—A glorious day greeted the second day of the Sherbrooke Exhibition, and is favoring the visit of a large number of strangers that keep pouring into the grounds. Every department is in ship-shape and in full swing, and the manufacturing and industrial exhibits are attracting much notice. Indeed, it may be safely said that never has so great a variety of brightness and freshness been displayed in the main building, where the exhibits have been arranged with good taste. In the main building, the floral exhibit is a new feature, made up chiefly of local contributions except a couple of fine exhibits from Ontario. Here there is a pretty display, although not of great variety and lacking somewhat, with the exception of a few exhibits, in artistic arrangement and design.

In the cheese department the judging of Mr. George Perlee, of New York, who was chairman of the judges at the Chicago World's Fair, is being watched with great interest the more so that the Bedford show consists of exhibits of seventy factories, representing a capital of at least $200,000. Outside of the immense exhibit from Bedford the residue is not large. The butter exhibit is well filled with contributions truly representative of the best in the province, and is characterized by a predominance of butter in prints and from from creameries. Of the latter, a number have been recently established in this vicinity, and they are exhibiting to a considerable extent. The attractions people from New York are on hand to-day. They have got their various apparatus before the grand stand into working order and are beginning their performances this afternoon during the intervals between the heats in the horse races. Prof. Wolcott, although advertised to be at Toronto, is fulfilling his previous engagement here and tells a sad and thrilling story about the accident which prevented his wife from being here to make ascensions with him. Louise Bates replaced her, as Prof. Wolcott's sister-in-law, who was, at first, retained for the purpose, was a day or two afterwards killed by a fall from the clouds.

FAVORITE AGROUND.

Her Company Took to the Boats—Ship in No Danger.

PARRY SOUND, Ont., September 5.—While endeavoring to find the narrow entrance, Point Aux Barils, on the east shore of Georgian Bay, on Sunday evening, the steamer Favorite, of the North Shore Navigation Co., ran on the Black Bill rocks. The smoke was dense and the night very dark, and to make matters worse a terrific thunderstorm came on about 12 o'clock, accompanied by a hurricane. It was a wild night for the passengers and crew, 30 in number altogether, who took the boats at daylight on Monday morning in a heavy sea. Two of them reached Point Aux Barils about nine o'clock; the third boat, containing the engineer, purser, steward and a lumber traveller, named Thompson, and six or seven of the crew got separated, but will probably make for Byng Inlet. Four of the passengers, Messrs. Jeffrey, E. A. Williamson, of Midland; W. Samuel Porter, of Lindsay, and J. Beck, of Penetang, arrived here yesterday by sail boat from Point aux Barils, 30 miles distant. No blame can be attached to the chief officer, Captain Jacques, one of the most careful navigators on the Georgian Bay, and who knows the route as well as any man can. He displayed great nerve and presence of mind throughout. The accident was entirely owing to the dense smoke that prevailed at the time. The Favorite lies in an easy position and will be taken off without damage to her hull.

NOVA SCOTIA'S FRUIT YIELD.

HALIFAX, September 5.—J. W. Bigelow, president of the Nova Scotia Fruit Growers' Association, writes from Wolfville: "We can now report with some certainty respecting the Nova Scotia fruit crop, and although many well cultivated orchards have a small crop, as a whole there is a good crop of very good quality which may be estimated as follows: Apples, 120,000 barrels; plums, 110,000 baskets, 10 pounds each; pears, 5000 bushels; strawberries and small fruits have yielded $50,000, and with present prospects for good prices, Nova Scotia fruit crop will give a revenue of $600,000 besides that used for home consumption. Several orchards in King's county have over 1000 barrels each, for which owners can take from $2000 to $3000 in the orchard, and some plum growers have been offered $1000 for their crop."

THE CHOLERA'S DOINGS.

LONDON, September 5.—A despatch to the Times from Vienna says: In Galicia on Sunday and Monday there were 400 new cases of cholera and 200 deaths. In Bukowina there were 21 cases and 16 deaths.

The Austrian cavalry manœuvres, which were to be held in Galicia, have been countermanded on account of cholera.

BOYD AND SOMERVILLE.

BEAUHARNOIS, Que., September 5.—(Special.)—Magistrate Loupret's decision in the Boyd-Somerville-Eastern Township case, regarding committal for trial of the accused, will be given on Friday next. After hearing counsel's argument yesterday, the Magistrate took the case en delibéré.

THE CATHOLICS' GRIEVANCES.

WINNIPEG, Man., September 5.—The complaints of the Winnipeg Roman Catholics regarding the separate schools, as presented to Mr. Laurier, yesterday, stated that the head of the educational system for Catholic and Protestant alike was the Protestant School board. Not a member of the advisory board was of the Roman Catholic faith, and the action of the provincial Government in compelling Catholics to send their children to Protestant schools, and taxing them heavily in support thereof, placed the minority in a position of violence and oppression at the hands of the majority. It was further represented that if Catholics refused to use the text books commanded to be used by the Government in their schools, they would not be allowed to collect taxes for the support of their schools, while being themselves directly taxed to maintain others. If there were no religion taught at all, it would be a matter of common fairness; but religious principles were taught which were not in accord with principles of Roman Catholics, and they would have to unlearn in the minds of their children many of the things which they were taught at school in the matter of religion. Other grievances were also ventilated. After the hearing Mr. Laurier promised to consider the question from both sides and if the facts were as represented by those present yesterday, then he would favor their case. He was not prepared to take action at present, but would bear in mind what he had just heard.

BURIAL OF FIRE VICTIMS.

BODIES PUT IN FOUR TRENCHES AT HINCKLEY.

St. Paul and Minneapolis Relief Camps for the Suffering Districts---Tales of Suffering and Narrow Escapes---Another Town Believed to be Burned.

DULUTH, Minn., September 5.—It is reported that the settlement of Sand Lake, nine miles west of Finlayson, containing about 100 Finns, is wiped out. If so, the people are probably dead.

Thomas Dunn, the heroic telegraph operator, who lost his life because he persisted in remaining at his post until his station at the Duluth road was on fire, was buried to-day. It was his order upon which the train returned to take aboard those who wanted to escape the flames. He put his order through. The train returned and carried away over three hundred people from Hinckley. He then jumped from a window and started for the gravel pit, where so many saved their lives. Dunn was within five rods of the gravel pit when he fell, and he was unable to get further. His dead body was found almost on the edge of the safe retreat.

ST. PAUL, Minn., September 5.—The burial of the fire victims goes steadily on. Yesterday at Hinckley and vicinity, 225 bodies were interred; at Sandstone, 67; at Pokegama, 25; at Miller, 12; estimate of dead not found, 50; total, 379.

At Hinckley four trenches in all have been opened, separated by about four feet. Commencing on the south trench are 45 unboxed corpses. In trench number two are twenty boxes, many containing from two to five bodies. This trench is not yet closed. In the third are twenty-seven boxes like the others. The fourth trench is not yet in use, but there are piled up nineteen boxes, which will be put in.

Every other person that one meets on the streets of Pine City, the rendezvous of the burned out, gives visible evidence, with their blood-shot eyes and burned noses and cheeks, of their conflict with the fire. The women numbered among the refugees are thinly clad, and many are without covering for their heads.

Grindstone Lake, ten miles north of Hinckley,

HAS BEEN THE CAMPING GROUNDS

for several summers of parties from Hinckley. This year a larger number of people were camping than usual, and, consequently, when a fire was seen to be encroaching on Neal's Place, three-quarters of a mile from one of the camps, several of the men started for the scene. John Patrick and Messrs. Ellsworth and Collins were among the number. Other men were fighting the fire when they got there and it was supposed that they could get it under control. The relief party hardly reached the scene, however, when they discovered the flames shooting over the tops of timber back of their own camp. Patrick started back along the shore while the others got into a small skiff and paddled faster than they had ever before, hoping to reach the camp before it was overwhelmed. While they were still some distance away they saw the women rushing into the lake and the camp outfit going skyward in flame and smoke. Patrick hardly comprehended these things, however, as he had not gone far before a ball of fire darted across the lake, over a mile wide where he stood, and knocked him down as it sped on its work of destruction through the forest. His clothes were ignited and for a time he was completely dazed. When he had recovered his senses, the fire was all about him, and only a narrow pathway through the water at the edge of the lake remained.

THE BANK SHELVED OFF

very steep all along and offered an avenue of escape. As he was splashing through the water a stray dog fell in behind him and marched along in his company. The two had an encounter a little later with a black bear that barred their passage, and would under ordinary circumstances have annihilated both man and cur. Bruin, who was squatted in the water, did not even deign to notice them, but simply moved aside about six inches, so that they could pass, and Patrick doubts if the dog realized that the bear was there. Finally we reached a space where the road opened out from the lake and here met 21 homesteaders and their families, who had been fleeing through the blinding smoke ahead of the flames. All the members of the party threw themselves into the lake and remained there until the flames had passed over, when they started back over the road they had come, in the direction of Sandstone Junction.

Eleven of the settlers, one a woman with a baby five weeks old, got into an old canoe and paddled out into the lake only to be destroyed by water, after escaping from the flames. The waves nearly filled the boat several times and the baby was frequently held aloft to keep it from drowning in the boat. The frail craft drifted ashore in the early morning over a mile from the camp. Patrick, after passing an awful night full of anxious forebodings, was able to reach his family overjoyed at finding them unharmed.

A special to the Pioneer Press says: The death roll at Sandstone has probably reached its limit and presents the awful total of sixty-seven. This is not an estimate nor a guess, but an accurate account of the bodies interred. Not all were from the little village, a few having been brought in from the immediate vicinity. There are here immense quarries, employing in a busy time a considerable number of men, when actively operated. For some time work has been light, but recently an attempt has been made to increase the output, and a large number of men has been called in for the labor that was offered. For this reason it is impossible to get an accurate estimate of the population of the place, but a fair figure is probably 350.

In one well at Sandstone four persons died a death that must have been a mixture

OF DROWNING, SUFFOCATING AND BURNING.

To-day the well was utilized as a grave and nine other bodies were placed in it and all covered with earth. Rescuing parties have been organized in Pine City and are scouring the country around.

J. P. Jackson, secretary of the Associated Charities of St. Paul, arrived at Pine City yesterday to represent the citizens of that city. Mr. Shannon, of Duluth, from the Relief Committee appointed by Governor Nelson, was among the arrivals also. H. H. Hart and Bishop Gilbert carried on the work of registration of refugees, adding fifty to the list of seventy made last night and representing in all probability four hundred people. They ask only for transportation and enough money to carry them to their friends. This includes the class that had no real property interests in Hinckley, and whose property, personal or real, has been entirely destroyed. It is simply a question of beginning life over, and they prefer to move elsewhere than starting again at the point associated with such terrible memories. Assistant-General Manager Miller, of the Duluth Road, is on hand, rendering the local committee every assistance in his power in the matter of transportation.

The work at the Hinckley cemetery yesterday progressed rapidly. It met with one peculiarly sad interruption the previous day. T. E. Webster, the Mayor of Hinckley, thought he recognized his wife in the horrid heap of dead. During his temporary absence the body which he hoped to claim for a more formal and sacred burial was thrown into a pit and covered up. When he learned of it he was half-crazed with sorrow. A portion of the trench where some men remembered to have placed the body was dug up, but either the body was not the one uncovered or the handling it had received had destroyed the scanty marks of identification, and Webster was forced to admit that the shapeless corpse was probably not that of his wife, and the loose sand was again thrown into the pit.

There is one point near Hinckley where an indefinite number of bodies may be found. It is west of the Duluth bridge across the Grindstone and at the where there was a mill pond of considerable depth and probably four hundred feet wide. On the bank stood the plant of the Brennan Lumber Company and its yard, with about half a million feet of sawed lumber. A considerable number of persons were seen making their way to the water of the pond down the paths between the piles of burning lumber. There is absolutely no basis for an accurate approximation of how many there were. One thing is certain, no one who went into it ever came back to give an account of himself or his companions. To the intense heat of the burning lumber and the suffocating volume of smoke which it alone furnished, was added that which went up from the sawdust and edging through which the fire ran to the very water's edge. The water was deep, and those who were there probably chose death by drowning to suffocation or burning. The pond is as yet unapproachable. The sawdust bank is still full of fire and as treacherous as quicksand. The smoke is so dense that not even a sight of the pond can be had from a point near the place where the bodies are supposed to be, and it may be some days before an attempt at recovery can be made.

From Brook Park, as the station on the Eastern line at Pokegama Lake has recently been christened, and the mills southeast of Hinckley come reports that the fatalities there were more than had been supposed. J. D. Markham, of Rush City, who owned the town site, knows that there were 113 settlers at or near that point. Yesterday's reports show 28 of the number to be dead. To-day rumor has increased it to between fifty and sixty.

DRIVER ROOT'S CONDITION.

The word from White Bear that the hero of the limited train, Engineer James Root, is getting along well and will recover from his terrible injuries caused general rejoicing.

Four hundred and twenty-one dead is the very latest computation of the loss of life in the Minnesota fire.

Minneapolis has subscribed $15,000 and three times that amount in supplies, such as lumber, provisions and clothing, for the fire sufferers.

The only topic talked of here is the great calamity and the whole city is practically a relief committee. Depots have been opened for supplies, many of the churches joining as a body in the work. Food and clothing by the car-load and money by the thousand is being contributed. Many cash contributions are coming from abroad.

TO "SAVE THE PIECES."

DULUTH, Minn., September 5.—John F. Killorin, manager of the Swan River Logging Company's operations, is here making arrangements to hire men for work in the mill. All that is possible will be done to save the standing timber that has been burned over before it is ruined, as it must be cut this season to be of any value whatever. Mr. Killorin estimates that no less than 300,000,000 feet was burned over, some of it so badly it cannot be cut, but most of it, if it can be got out this winter, can be saved. In total the loss of standing pine timber cannot be less than 700,000,000 or 800,000,000 feet.

On the Eastern Railroad 100,000,000 feet belonging to the Empire Lumber Company is all destroyed, while to the east the Diamond Match Company lost 200,000,000. Many owners have lost from ten to fifty million feet, which will have to be put in at once to save it. Already there is a demand for woodsmen, and higher wages are being offered.

REPORTS FROM WISCONSIN.

ASHLAND, Wis., September 5.—The fires broke out in a new spot yesterday, threatening the town of Odanaha, an Indian village on the Bad river reservation. It is probable that the Indians have all found places of safety. Navigation on the south shore of Lake Superior and in Chequemont, Ashburn, Washburn and Bayfield, has practically ceased. Port Wing is the latest town reported to be burning. It is a lumbering village located on the south shore of Lake Superior, midway between Ashland and Duluth.

GRANTSBURG, Wis., September 5.—Reports are coming in from the pineries and the destruction of property by forest fires will figure into hundreds of thousands of dollars. The Empire Lumber Company, of Eau Claire, having extensive logging operations north of here, has lost all its camps, together with logging outfits, provisions, etc. Hundreds of oxen, which are turned into the woods in the spring to care for themselves, have been burned. Millions of feet of standing pine have been burned. The dams on all up-river streams are burned and a large percentage of the cuts. Supplies for temporary relief are being sent up from this place. No lives are reported lost in this section.

CHIPPEWA FALLS, Wis., September 5.—A late report from Bruce says the little village was completely enveloped by the forest fire that has been surrounding the place for several days. The people escaped by running to the creek, covering themselves with wet blankets and allowing the flames to sweep over them.

COTTOLENE.

This is it.

This is the new shortening or cooking fat which is so fast taking the place of lard. It is an entirely new food product composed of clarified cotton seed oil and refined beef suet. You can see that

Cottolene

Is clean, delicate, wholesome, appetizing, and economical--as far superior to lard as the electric light is to the tallow dip. It asks only a fair trial, and a fair trial will convince you of its value.

Lady Olivia's Opals

A Lady's-Maid's Reminiscence.

I can't say I ever took to my Lady Olivia, though I lived so long with her, and, after her own fashion, she behaved well to me. She was one of your flashing, dark-eyed beauties, haughty as an empress, expecting all around her to worship and obey her, and caring no more for human love—aye, not so much as the great mastiff at her father's gate did, and yet winning it almost without an effort, if one were to judge by the crowd of suitors that sprang up wherever she went.

She had been married when only eighteen to a gentleman of lower birth than herself, but of immense wealth, and on his death, which happened only four months after their union, she returned to her father's house and declared her intention of remaining a widow to the end of her life. She said that to the world; but I, who waited on her day and night—I, who saw her in all her moods—knew better.

For two years, however, she kept to her intention, and though, what with her beauty and wealth, she had suitors of all ages and all ranks, she reached the age of twenty without encouraging any. But all that came to an end, as I knew it would. She fell in love at last—yes, veritably in love.

Hubert Berris was a dark, stern, haughty-souled man, every inch a nobleman, but, to my mind, much more fit to inspire dread than love. His family was ancient, more ancient, I believe, than Lady Olivia's, and it was even more distinguished, having been particularly fruitful in statesmen and admirals. They were also rich. So, altogether, the world said Lord Hubert Berris and Lady Olivia St. Marlow would be well matched.

Somehow my lady seemed to change from that time, not so much in her outward conduct, for in society she was still the same proud, cold, queen-like creature; but in her private life, in the hours when she sat in that magnificent dressing-room, with my eyes alone watching her, she seemed, as it were, to throw off her old self and let the new peep out.

She was in love, intensely in love, and somehow it seemed to flash up in her great, dark eyes with a power that made one almost frightened, for it gave one a glimpse of the true fierceness of her nature. She was terribly restless, too, and although she moved like an animated statue before the world, she paced up and down her suite of apartments occasionally like one demented.

What had come over her I knew not, but at length some words of her own gave me a suspicion.

We were sorting jewellery, and, under her direction, I was packing up that which was to be taken with her on her tour, and setting aside the rest for alteration at the jeweller's, when we happened to come across a large opal brooch of singular workmanship. I observed my lady set it aside immediately, and then, as a ring of the same antique workmanship appeared, she gave a little start and let it drop.

"Why, Morton!" she began, and then she paused, and seemed almost to hold back her words, whilst her great, dark eyes fastened on me with a look which seemed to try and pierce my very soul.

I was not afraid of her, though, and so I looked her back in her white face, and answered:—

"Well, my lady?"

For a minute or two she was silent, but, in spite of her pride and hauteur, I knew she was burning to tell me something—aye, and it would out, too, if I waited her time patiently. I went on sorting the jewels, therefore.

"Morton," at length said her ladyship, "did you know that ring was in this casket?"

"Yes, my lady. I found it on the floor near your ladyship's dressing-table yesterday, and put it in myself."

"On the floor!" she echoed, and then she took it up and gave another, a little start. "One of the opals is gone," she cried.

"Yes, my lady. I noticed that when I picked it up, but it was nowhere about the floor, for I looked carefully."

"Of course. I know you would, but——" Again, however, she paused, and then she got up and began pacing up and down in one of her wild, fierce moods, and I let her alone, for I knew it was scarcely safe to speak to her then.

Suddenly, however, she came up to me of her own accord, and putting her two hands heavily on my shoulders, said in a low, hissing tone: "Morton, tell me, how did that ring come there?"

"On my life, my lady," I answered, "I don't know."

"You would swear he did not give it you to give me?"

Her eyes were awful to look upon as she said that, and for once I did feel frightened of her.

"He, my lady? I don't know who you mean."

"Why, Gaston St. Marlow, my dead husband. That ring was on his finger. It was my last gift to him. He died with it on. He was buried with it. Don't you remember noticing it on his finger in the coffin?"

"Law! my lady," I shivered; but as she spoke I took up the ring and looked at it, and then it suddenly did strike me that I had seen that opal on the dead man's hand.

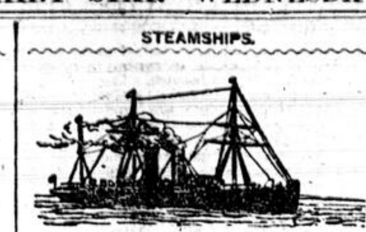

How came it there, then? Had the coffin been robbed? or—— Ah! an awful idea suddenly darted through my mind, and, raising my eyes, I understood the fierce trouble of those burning orbs of Lady Olivia.

"Morton," she exclaimed, shuddering, "I should go mad if this marriage were broken off. I love Hubert Berris better than my own soul!"

And then she turned back to her wild pacing up and down the room.

Days passed after that, and though I saw nothing to throw more light on my dark suspicion of Lady Olivia's trouble, it rather gained ground in my mind than otherwise. She was haunted by some fear—some fear that might bring about a rupture with Lord Hubert Berris, and I felt that it had connection with her dead husband. I kept my own counsel, but I also kept my own watch.

I recollect I was awaiting my lady's return from a ball just three days before the wedding day, when, suddenly, I heard the door open quickly behind me, and, looking round, I saw my lady looking white as a ghost glide quietly in.

I had heard no carriage drive up, and no bell, though the dressing-room was in the front of the house. To my surprise, too, instead of being in her pink satin and diamonds, as I had last seen her, my lady was dressed in a morning walking dress, particularly unpretending-looking. She came up to me quietly.

"Morton," she said, in a low, stern tone, "I think you are tolerably true when you once give a promise. Listen to me. If you will come with me and swear not to reveal what I am about to tell you, and to do, I will give you a hundred pounds down, and as much again when I am married. Hark you, girl, are you bold?"

"It takes a good deal, my lady, to frighten me."

"Yes, but could you look on a dead man's face without fainting? Could you dare to visit the dead?"

She hissed out these words, grasping my arm and gazing fiercely into my face, and then, as I turned shudderingly away, she seemed to quiet down.

"Morton," she said, almost humbly, for her, "I am in great trouble. I am pursued by a terrible fear, and I am either being driven mad by a fancy or a fiend. Listen: To-night, for the third time since my engagement to Lord Hubert, I have seen the face of my dead husband, not in fancy, but in living, breathing, ghastly earnest."

"Impossible! my lady," I exclaimed, horrified. "I saw Mr. St. Marlow's coffin carried to the vault with my own eyes."

She put up her hands and covered her eyes.

"This doubt is horrible, and if Hubert had a suspicion of it, all would be over. I believe I am going mad, but I have come to a determination, for, come what will, I will not be the dupe of any one. Morton, I am bound on a terrible errand. Will you come with me?"

There was no need for her to say more plainly what she meant, for I knew well enough what that large, rusty key belonged to, and for what purpose was that hammer and chisel and dark lantern. It was all horribly comprehensible. Throwing a shawl over my head, I took up the strange tools and opened the window. I helped Lady Olivia to mount the low sill and get to the soft garden bed beneath, and then descended myself.

We reached the dim, shadowy church—the entrance to the vault—and Lady Olivia pushed the key into the lock with almost fierce energy, and then with an effort she forced the great door back, and we two women stood there, white and ghastly, amid the mouldering dead!

The horror of that moment I shall never forget.

"Look," said my mistress's voice suddenly, breaking the dead stillness. "Morton, you know the coffin. Which is it? Tell me quickly."

"That one, my lady, the one to your right," I muttered, and then, in spite of my awe of her, I could not for the life of me assist her, as, using all her force, she slowly and with difficulty drew the coffin out and then let it fall heavily on one end on the stones.

"Dead men don't feel," she muttered, with a ghastly smile.

I covered my eyes, for somehow to see her face as she bent over that silver plate and read the inscription was worse than even the ghastly sight of those piles of coffins, and when next I looked up it was because a terrible cry roused me. Lady Olivia was standing like as if petrified with horror, and at her feet was the open coffin —empty!

How I got that coffin back into its place I know not. How I got my lady back safely into her room I know not. That night seemed always like some horrible dream, and I only remember bits and flashes of it. I did manage to get her to bed somehow, and then I gave her a draught to send her to sleep, for it was agony to me to watch her convulsive shiverings and hear her groans. I knew, too, that for my own sake it was as well to keep the night's work quiet.

The next day, however, to my relief, Lady Olivia woke herself again, though I, who saw her before she was dressed, knew how she must have suffered to make her careworn and old-looking in twelve hours.

My lady was still lounging by the fire in her dressing-room when a message was brought to her that Lord Hubert was below, and very much desired to be admitted to her presence for a few minutes, as it was a matter of importance. Lady Olivia turned a shade paler, but, pressing her lips firmly together, she gave the order to allow him to come up at once. And I, of course, retired to an adjoining room.

I solemnly declare I had no intention of listening till I happened to go into a closet to hang up some dresses, and then I noticed that every word of what was being said in the dressing-room was distinctly audible. I could also see into the room. And then the temptation was too irresistible.

"I come to ask you rather an odd question, Olivia," said my lord. "Do you happen to possess an opal ring?"

"Yes. That is, I believe I have some opals among my jewels," answered my lady, quietly. "But how can that interest you, Hubert?"

"It does, though, strangely. Will you show me the ring?"

There was a silence, as if Lady Olivia hesitated. Then, however, she rose, and I heard her go to the casket of jewels, and I crept to the door and knelt down to where I knew was a certain small crevice. And then I saw Lord Hubert take the ring and examine it, with a dark frown.

"There is a stone missing."

"Yes. It has been gone for some time."

And then my lord put his fingers in his watch pocket, and taking out a small stone he held it out towards my lady with a look on his face I shall never forget.

"There is the lost opal," he said. "Lady Olivia St. Marlow, need I tell you who gave me that, who warned me against your fatal hand, and that your sin is known."

For an instant those dark, evil, beautiful eyes flashed up defiantly, but even she could not face Hubert Berris. The next instant she was crouching on the floor before him, with her face buried in her hands.

"Get up, woman," cried her former lover, sternly. "I do not pretend to judge you, and I will not be less merciful than Gaston St. Marlow, who, rather than claim you for a wife, or expose you to the world, lives the obscure and humble life he does. Only, I will prevent your doing more harm. Gaston St. Marlow, enter."

And then, to my horror, the door opened, and the man whom I had seen lying dead in his coffin four years ago walked in. No wonder Lady Olivia uttered that one long, shivering groan, which made even the two men almost shriek. Gaston St. Marlow walked sternly forward, and then, as Lady Olivia sprang up, he stretched out his left hand, and I saw that one of the fingers was missing.

"Your crime was cleverly planned, Olivia, your hypocrisy was perfect, and had it not been for my friend's love and fidelity, my beautiful and affectionate wife would have consigned me to my living tomb effectually."

"What mean you? What means this horrible scene?" muttered my lady, making a terrible effort to throw off her fear.

"I am about to explain. Listen. That ring—the opal ring, containing the poison, and which your fond hand placed on mine—acted well. The little prick which, as you playfully squeezed my hand, it made acted marvellously, and in twenty-four hours you wept, a widow, tears over my coffin.

"I should have been buried, but my old friend, Eric Stones, hearing of my decease, came to take a last glance at me in the vault and fulfil a boyish promise.

"My terror had always been that I might be buried alive, and I had extorted a promise from him that, if he survived me, he would come and open my veins, so that, if by any change the life current flowed again, I should bleed to death in my tomb.

"It was the dead of night when Eric crept to my coffin and fulfilled his vow, and, to his horror, the corpse rose up a few minutes after and called his name.

"He was skilled and strong, and he immediately bore me to his own house, and, suspecting poison, administered such antidotes as saved me; and then, in searching, he found the ring. Suspecting you, Olivia, he kept me hidden, and, closing the coffin again, allowed you to burry your husband, as you thought, and weep your false tears for him."

"Gaston!" cried the horrified woman, but St. Marlow interrupted her.

"Speak not. Let me not hear that deadly voice again. Mercy you shall have, but make no attempt to marry, for, as certainly as you try, the opal ring shall appear again a witness against you."

I saw my lady fall on the floor, and the two men left the room.

Whether my lady suspected I knew that terrible secret I know not, but she gave me money enough to settle and marry, and I left her service immediately.

As for her ladyship, the last thing I heard of her was that she was the reigning belle of the Russian Court for some time, but that she was always strangely melancholy, and had at length committed suicide, it was supposed, though how was a mystery, as she was found lying on her sofa, beautifully dressed, and without any wound. An opal brooch, however, was found in her bodice.

The Antwerp Streets.

The streets of Antwerp present an unlimited number of unusual spectacles. Over hundreds of shops, including those set apart for the sale of grog, there is an image of the Virgin Mary holding the infant Saviour, and projecting from almost every house in the entire city is a long flagstaff, at the end of which the people hang out their flags on certain days.

Although Belgium is in Flanders nearly every one speaks French, and hitherto French coins have been used. In the future, however, the value of the coins and all inscriptions on them will be stamped in two languages—Flemish and French.

The hearses in Belgium are carved and gorgeously gilded, and look very much like city state carriages. Each horse is covered from head to feet with a large black pall, in which two little holes are cut to enable the animal to see.

The shopkeepers, generally, are dealers in miscellaneous goods. One man in a small way, for instance, sells beer, foreign stamps, fruit, cotton, biscuits, penknives, cheese and second-hand hair. Everywhere one finds a mania for glaring lights. One evening, when I was out, I saw a tremendous light in the distance, and I thought it must surely be an advertisement for a music-hall. When I got nearer, I found that the light merely conveyed the intelligence that sardines were sold on the premises!

LABOR MEN IN SESSION.

NO ASSISTED EMIGRATION FOR THEM, THEY SAY.

Resolved That Government Contracts be Subject to Certain Provisos---Mr. Darlington Moves Several Resolutions---Communications Received.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

OTTAWA, September 5.—The earnestness with which the members of the Trades and Labor Congress set about their work yesterday was not abated to-day, when a number of delegates from various points increased the attendance already here. Montreal is well represented by Geo. S. Warren, L. Z. Boudreau, A. Blondin, V. Dubreuil, P. C. Chatel and Wm. Darlington, and from Quebec are: P. J. Jobi, F. Nirois, H. L. Langevin, Ed. Jackson, Ed. Little, J. E. Beauard, D. J. Marsan, Wm. Guthrie and Alfred Cote.

In their report yesterday, the Quebec Executive complained that they applied to the Provincial Government asking for an interview, but were refused. "Thus," they said, "Washington is not the only place where the representatives of the people refuse to grant to the people whom they represent a hearing." This unfortunate and regrettable episode was, later on during the session, remedied by an invitation to the representatives of the Congress to appear before a special committee to whom were referred the amendments to the Quebec Factory Act. Although the meeting lasted over five hours the committee did not succeed in obtaining one single modification or amendment that might be remotely considered as of direct benefit to the workers in shop or factory. In justice to the other provinces of the Dominion, it should be publicly known that in the Province of Quebec there is neither factory inspection nor enforced regulations concerning these establishments. These facts were made plainly and painfully apparent in one instance where a prosecution was entered against a mill owner for a defective boiler, the rottenness of the Act allowing the said prosecution to fall through.

The Executive Committee reported that a visit had been paid to the members of the Dominion Government and these subjects had been presented: The payment of the prevailing rate of wages on Government contracts; the abolition of withdrawal notices in connection with deposits in the Post Office Savings Banks; a uniform two-cent passenger rate on all railways in the Dominion; the rigid inspection of gear and tackle used in loading and unloading vessels; the establishment of the First Monday in September as Labor Holiday; the employment of a practical mechanic as Superintendent of the Government Printing Office, and Chinese emigration on the Pacific Coast. As is customary, the committee was assured that the different matters would receive the serious consideration of the Government. The one referring to Labor Day did and became law, but the others still remained in abeyance. Many petitions embracing some of the above subjects and some new ones were circulated, but few of them reached the House of Commons. These two: "Praying for an Act making arbitration compulsory in the event of strikes and lockouts, and praying for the submission to a popular vote of the Dominion electorate the question of the future of Canada," were among the absent ones. Many of the bodies do not believe in compulsory arbitration, and for that reason would not present the petition. The few that were sent in regarding the future of Canada would not be presented to the House by those members who received them on the ground of disloyalty to the country.

The usual committees were appointed as follows:

Standing orders—L. Z. Boudreau, Montreal; P. M. Draper, Ottawa; S. Plum, Prescott; A. W. Holmes, Toronto; H. L. Langevin, Quebec. Ways and means—A. G. Carrl, Toronto; A. Blondin, Montreal; H. H. McClain, London. Audit—G. S. Warren, Montreal; G. E. Gauvin, Ottawa; J. Coulter, Ottawa. To consider the reports as to the various labor organizations uniting with the patrons, grangers and single-taxers—O'Donoghue, Page and Plum.

This morning Mr. A. T. Lepine, of Montreal, was in attendance. The first order of business taken up was communications. The Congress was invited to send delegates to a convention to be held in Toronto on September 17 to 20, for the purpose of the deepening of the river channels and other waterways to a depth of twenty feet to the sea, so as to permit of a more rapid shipment of grain, etc., and also reduce the freight and increase the price of the products of the soil throughout the whole of the West and North-West. The communication was referred to a special committee.

Alex. R. McDonald, secretary of the Bricklayers' International Union, wrote on behalf of that body, asking that the Congress assist the union in procuring a Saturday half holiday. The Toronto Trades and Labor Congress wrote in the same strain. The matter was referred to a special committee.

A resolution was presented, urging that a clause be inserted in every Government contract, compelling the contractor to pay his employes a scale of union wages, or such wages as are considered reasonable in the locality in which the work is performed, and, in addition to this, no employé should be compelled to work more than eight hours a day. This resolution was referred to a standing committee.

Delegate O'Donoghue moved, and Delegate A. W. Holmes seconded a resolution that no further bonusing of emigrants to Canada be carried on: it is unjust and the labor market does not warrant it, this to apply to federal and provincial governments, except British Columbia; the resolution to be forwarded to Mr. Daly and the Governor-General.

Standing Committee Delegate Darlington, of Montreal, moved a resolution: That inasmuch as the Trades and Labor Congress had found it impossible to secure any changes required from any of the political parties, that the several labor organizations of the Dominion unite in the forming of a distinctive labor party, with the hope of securing some of the changes which the workingmen so much require.

The resolution was seconded by Delegate Motcalfe of Montreal. Mr. Darlington, speaking to his resolution, said that last session, Parliament only passed three bills of interest to the workingmen, out of the 140 bills which were entirely antagonistic to labor. He insisted on the labor party being independent, so as to force some of the political parties to do something for the cause of labor. He said that many members of the Congress had become connected with that body as a stepping-stone to political offices. Delegate Jobin, of Quebec, asked for names, but Delegate Darlington said that he made no charge against any person. The discussion was ruled out of order until the committee reported.

The Committee on Standing Orders referred back the resolution relating to general contracts.

The resolution is as follows:

Moved by P. M. Draper, seconded by T. A. Smith:

That in the opinion of this Congress it is expedient for all Government contracts, Dominion or provincial, and in the best interests of the laboring classes as a whole, to insert in every Government contract for any public work made and entered into hereafter, a clause requiring the contractor to pay the workingmen engaged upon such works the union scale or at least the current rate of wages paid in the locality where such work is being done, at and during the time such contract is being carried on, that it is necessary owing to the rapid introduction of labor-saving machinery, which tends to reduce the demand for labor to an enormous extent, that a clause be inserted in every Government contract fixing the hours of labor at eight hours per day, this to be the maximum, not to be exceeded.

Mr. Darlington moved an amendment to the resolution that all Government contract work be abolished and that the hours of labor on Government work be eight hours per day or less. Delegate O'Donohue moved that the words, "pending the abolition of the existing contract system," be inserted after the word "congress" in the first line of the main resolution. The resolution, as thus amended, was adopted.

The resolution relating to immigration was then taken up, and after a short discussion was adopted.

The next resolution was as follows:

Moved by Frank Hetterell and seconded by R. Driscoll: That this Congress call the attention of the Provincial Government to the neglect of duty on the part of the Factory Inspector, in respect to saw mills in Ottawa and neighborhood, and request the Government to insist on the said officer doing his duty.

Delegate MacDonald, of Ottawa, said that the inspector had been repeatedly memoralized to do his duty, but he failed to do so. The resolution, after some discussion, was adopted. Delegate Darlington moved and Delegate Metcalfe seconded, a resolution to the effect that no person who is in the employ of the Federal or local Governments of this country shall be eligible to admission to the Congress as a delegate. There were party heelers, he believed, in Congress. He refused to give names. The President decided that the resolution required notice of motion. The resolution was therefore dropped, but it will come up again to-morrow. The Congress then adjourned till the afternoon, when business proceeded.

CROWDS ARE THERE.

The Rush to the Sherbrooke Fair is Enormous.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

SHERBROOKE, September 5.—In spite of a threatening sky to-day the attendance at the fair is enormous, and was vaguely estimated at noon to be between 15,000 and 20,000. One of the turnstiles registered 1000 in 35 minutes. There is scarcely moving room in the main building and the entire grounds are literally covered with swarms of visitors. As all the excursion trains are arranged only for to-morrow, to-morrow's attendance is expected to greatly exceed to-day's. Hon. John Hall, Provincial Treasurer, and Hon. T. C. Casgrain, Attorney-General, and their friends arrived by the noon train, which was late, and they were met by the Eastern Townships M.P.P.'s, Messrs. Pannetton, Chicoyne, Hackett and Bedard, and conducted to the grounds, where they partook of an informal lunch with the officers and the directors, and were informally entertained for the afternoon. In the dairy department the most flattering encomiums are bestowed by the judges, Mr. Geo. Perlee, of New York, judge at the World's Fair, and also by his co-judge, Mr. M. McDonald, M. P. P. for Bagot. Mr. McDonald states that the butter exhibit is positively the best that can be had in the province, and in answer to the enquiry whether the cheese exhibit of Bedford had kept up in quality and standard with Chicago exhibit, he said, "I am pleased to tell you that it has not only kept up the standard, but has improved since the Chicago Fair and I am sorry to see that in our country, the United States, they are not doing as you are doing here. There they were trying to get as much cheese as they could out of as little milk as possible, whilst here you are trying to improve your quality. The exhibit here is of prime quality and such as to puzzle us as to whom we should give the first prize. You may judge yourself the difficulty of picking them out among 300 or 400 of such fine exhibits."

MR. GLADSTONE'S CONTRIBUTION.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

LONDON, September 5. — The Dublin Freeman's Journal (anti-Parnellite) says that the origin of the circular, appealing for contributions to the Irish fund, has been traced to the London committee of the Irish National League. The committee, however, deny that they authorized the sending of the appeal to Mr. Gladstone or any other English minister or member of Parliament.

The Times thus comments: "The revelations are inconsistent with the resolutions of the House of Commons in February, 1893, that the Times was guilty of a gross breach of privilege in asserting that the Irish members were in receipt of a stipend drawn from the English party fund or from the private liberality of rich English partizans."

BRITANNIA'S OWNERSHIP.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

OTTAWA, September 5.—An Ottawa man, who has just returned from the old country, and who saw most of the Britannia-Vigilant races, says it is generally believed on the other side, though for some reasons the newspapers have not given currency to the statement, that the Prince of Wales is not the real owner of the Britannia and that the owner is Jamieson, the millionaire whiskey king, of Dublin, an experienced yachtsman. Jamieson, the Ottawa man says, has sailed the Britannia on nearly all her races, and whenever anything happened to the Britannia, his steam yachts always came alongside. At the same time it is believed the Prince has some monetary interest in the yacht.

THE ST. LAWRENCE VERY LOW.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

KINGSTON, September 5.—Captain Gaskin has left for the Morrisburg Canal, where the Montreal Transportation Company's tug Walker is aground. The water is very low in the St. Lawrence River at present and there is not enough water in the canal to float a laden vessel.

THE ST. CLAIR PICKED UP.

NORTH SYDNEY, C. B., September 5.—The captain and crew of the schooner St. Clair which was picked up twenty miles off Scatarie Island by the steamer Delta, on Sunday morning, without a crew, arrived here this morning from Glace Bay and reported as follows: "During Sunday night the vessel struck quite heavily on Flint Island. The boats were lowered and the crew succeeded in landing through the surf in safety. They then went in search of assistance, and returned in time to see the vessel sailing northward, having got off herself. The Delta afterwards noticed the vessel sailing aimlessly around with sidelights burning, and towed her to North Sydney.

THE STATE ELECTIONS.

WASHINGTON, September 5.—The Republicans have carried Vermont and the Democrats Arkansas in the state elections just held. In the former state the Republican vote showed a large gain.

RAN INTO THE TROLLEY TOWER.

A collision occurred about seven o'clock last evening on the corner of Cote and Craig streets, between a Wellington and Ontario street car and a trolley tower. The car was moving slowly along Craig street and the motorman did not notice the open switch at the Cote street turn and in consequence the car turned onto that street just as the repair waggon came around the corner and the result was a collision. Both horses were knocked down, but beyond a few scratches and bruises escaped uninjured. The damage to the cars was also slight.

DR. REID'S HOUSE GUTTED.

At midnight a fire broke out at the residence of Dr. J. T. Reid, No. 637 Wellington street, Point St. Charles. The fire originated in the rear of the premises and was well under way when discovered. The house was completely gutted and the occupants were obliged to escape with little more than the clothes in which they stood. The damage is placed at $2000.

FRACTURED IN TWO PLACES.

A laborer named Reaper was injured in the C. P. Railway yard opposite the Dalhousie station, at half-past eight this morning. Reaper was helping to unload some heavy boxes containing plate glass, when one fell on his right leg. The leg was fractured in two places. The injuries sustained are serious. He is at Notre Dame Hospital.

COOK'S MIRANDA COMES TO GRIEF.

HITS THREE TIMES ON WEST GREENLAND.

Afterwards Put Back to Newfoundland and Foundered en route---All of the Party Safe at North Sydney---Rescued by the Rigel.

NORTH SYDNEY, C.B., September 5.—The schooner Rigel, of Gloucester, Mass., Captain G. W. Dixon, arrived here to-day, having on board the crew and passengers of the steamer Miranda, which left New York on July 7 with the Dr. F. A. Cook Arctic excursion. All the party are well. On August 9 the Miranda struck a rock near Sukkertoppen, West Greenland, and was abandoned in a sinking condition on August 23, in Davis Strait, latitude about 61 degrees, 15 minutes; longitude, 58 degrees, 40 minutes.

The particulars of the expedition and its disastrous termination are as follows: After repairing the damage sustained by the iceberg collision of July 17, the Miranda left St. John's, Nfld., on July 29, and proceeded directly to Greenland. Much ice and fog were unexpectedly encountered off Cape Farewell. At one time the vessel came near being nipped in the floes, the rising of a fog disclosing ice all around. Considerable apprehension was felt by the officers and visions of the fate of the Jeanette and Proteus expeditions arose among the passengers, as the iron-built Miranda was totally unfit to cope with the terrors of Arctic navigation. But fortunately a thin place in the floes was found and the ship driven through. The south-west coast of Greenland was so blocked with ice that no landing could be made until August 7 when the expedition reached Sukkertoppen, in latitude 65 degrees, 45 minutes. Leaving this port on the morning of August 9 for Disco, the vessel had proceeded about seven miles at full speed when she struck with tremendous force on a hidden reef.

Everything loose went flying forward.

The steward, Joseph Farrell, was struck by a trunk and slightly injured. A party at breakfast found themselves piled up, with dishes and viands at the end of the cabin. Three times the high waves lifted the ship and let her down with a crash that shook her from end to end. When she floated off great excitement prevailed, as the vessel was soon seen to be settling. The boats were swung off and everything made ready to abandon the steamer. It was found, however, that the main injury was beneath the ballast tanks, which filled so rapidly that the pumps could not control the inflow. But the water tight bulkhead protected the other compartments and Eskimo pilots having at length come off in their kyacks the steamer was got safely into the harbor. As it was considered unsafe to proceed further with the damaged vessel, the situation of so large a body of excursionists on this inhospitable coast was not encouraging, especially when it was found that the Danish steamer, which regularly visits the settlement, had been stove in by ice, and could not arrive this year. It began to look as if the expedition might have to winter in Greenland, and short rations were served in anticipation of such a catastrophe. It was learned, however, through the Danish governor that several American fishing schooners were on the halibut banks near Halsteinborg, 120 miles north. To secure one of these vessels, Dr. Cook, with Messrs. Rogers, Porter and Dunning, and four Eskimos, started for the banks in an open boat. After a stormy voyage lasting ten days they found the Rigel, and brought her to the assistance of the people on the disabled steamship and the passengers were transferred to the Rigel. The Miranda then took the Rigel in tow, and left Sukkertoppen August 21, intending to proceed directly to St. John's, Nfld. All went well for two days, but a heavy sea the second night weakened the top of the ballast tank on which an enormous hydrostatic pressure was exerted, and it gave way at 12.30 a. m., August 23. Three blasts of the whistle gave warning to the Rigel to stand by. The night was cold, dark and foggy and the vessels bounded like balls on the billows. On board the Miranda all was confusion. The firemen, leaving the boiler room without orders, cut loose the best lifeboat, which was immediately dashed to pieces against the ship's side and were only kept in submission at the point of the captain's revolver. The carpenters tried in vain to stop the leak with blankets and mattresses, and at daylight, as water was invading the coal bunkers and a storm was threatening, the steamer was abandoned. The crew were taken up by the schooner. It was fortunate that the passengers were already on the Rigel, as a transfer could hardly have been affected under the trying conditions without loss of life. Nothing except the sailors' bags was saved from the Miranda. The passengers lose all their baggage except the clothing worn when they went on board the relief vessel at Sukkertoppen. Many of them lost expensive scientific instruments and hunting equipments. All the botanical, geological and ethnological collections, and all the photographs, probably the finest ever taken in Greenland, went down with the Miranda. Professor Dicke, of Kansas University, lost a fine lot of Labrador and Greenland birds. Prof. Wright, of Toberlin College, was able to make interesting studies of the glaciers near Sukkertoppen, but otherwise the expedition was a failure from the scientific standpoint, as it was also from that of the sportsmen. The journey home was without other incidents than adverse winds. The inconvenience of close quarters and insufficient provisions, only ten day's supply for forty men having been placed on the Rigel, and the addition of the Miranda's crew, made ninety-one persons on board this little craft of one hundred and seven tons. The passengers slept in the hold on top of the salt and fish. Gulls and other sea birds constituted the only fresh meat of the party for the past ten days. Too great credit cannot be given to Captain Dixon and the crew of the Rigel for their efforts in behalf of those whom they had rescued. The party will have a banquet at South Sydney before dispersing, at which time a handsome testimonial will be presented to Captain Dixon.

The lost steamship Miranda was built in 1884 for the St. John and New York trade. She is famous as the vessel which lost the celebrated Leary timber raft of Long Island Sound. For two years she has been running to Central America and the West Indies. She is said to have been insured for $90,000.

She registered 734 tons net, and 1158 tons gross, is 220 feet long, 31 feet beam and 23.5 deep. She is owned by C. T. Bowring & Co., and Messrs. Bowring & Archibald are her New York agents.

The steamship Miranda left New York on July 7 on a hunting and arctic exploration trip. In addition to Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the commander of the arctic expedition, the following scientists were on board: Prof. William H. Brewer, of Yale; Prof. G. F. Wright, of Oberlin College, and Prof. B. C. Jillson, of Pittsburg, geologist; L. L. Dyke, of Kansas State University, zoologist; Samuel P. Orth and B. F. Staunton, of Oberlin, assistant zoologists; E. A. McIlhenny, of Louisiana, ornithologist; Prof. Elias P. Lyon, Harvard School, Chicago, biologist; Dr. Julius F. Vale, of St. Louis, and Dr. R. H. Cramer, New York, surgeon; Louis I. W. Joyner, of Poughkeepsie, entomologist; Russel W. Porter, of Boston, and Robert de P. Tytus, of New Haven, surveyors; H. C. Walsh, historian. The following assistants to the scientific staff are also on board: Maynard Ladd, J. R. Fordyce, H. Cleveland and Frederick P. Gay, of Harvard, and W. H. Dunning, C. P. Lieneaweaver. J. I. Lieneaweaver, Arthur R. Thompson, A. P. Rogers, A. G. Brown and J. H. Rumril, of Yale. Among the well-known sportsmen accompanying the expedition are Robert D. Perry, of Braintree, Mass.; George W. Gardner, ex-Mayor of Cleveland; Walter S. Foot, of Cleveland; Ashly C. Clover, of St. Louis; William Bryce, Jr., of New York; S. G. Tenney, of Williamstown, Mass.; James D. Dewell, of New Haven; W. H. H. Armstrong, of Newburg, N. Y.; Dr. William A. Reeve, of Patchogue, and Dr. R. O. Stebbins, of New York; Charles E. Reed is the taxidermist, and F. A. Kersting, of New Jersey, is the photographer of the expedition. Carl Garrison, the thirteen-year-old son of Supreme Justice Garrison, of New York, is also on board.

The Miranda arrived at Sydney July 11 to replenish her coal bunkers, after which she sailed and arrived at St. John's, Nfld., on the morning of the 15th. It was found that the steamer's compass was out of order and she put into St. John's for the purpose of having it repaired. At St. John's, Mr. E. Dunphy, a well-known ice pilot, who was with the Peary expedition with the steamer Kite, was taken on board and the Miranda sailed at midnight. After this she had to return on account of the Cape Charles accident, whereby a hole was knocked in her.

The officers of the Miranda are Captain, William James Farrell; First Officer, George Manuel; Second Officer, Edward Doody; Third Officer, John Dahl, and a crew of thirty-five men.

COPENHAGEN, Sept 5.—The Peary Relief Expedition has been heard from. The Danish vessel, Tjalfe, commanded by Captain Brick, has arrived here from Greenland, and the captain reports that he met the members of the expedition at Godhaven on July 17. All were well. Captain Brick states that the winter in the Arctic regions has been extraordinarily long and severe, and he thinks that the chances of finding alive Bjorling and Kalstennius, the Swedish explorers, who started for the north in 1892, and the search for whom was one of the objects of the Peary Relief Expedition, are very remote.

THE COUNT OF PARIS.

LONDON, September 5.—Enquiry made to-day at Stowe House shows that there is no improvement in the condition of the Count of Paris; on the contrary, his condition is, if anything, aggravated.

The physicians attending the Count of Paris in response to enquiries as to the actual condition of their patient, have issued a protest, against making professional details public and ask the press to refrain from making sensational statements in regard to the case. "We doctors," their letter says, "feel that little can be done, but admire the heroic courage of the patient."

LOST IN A FOG.

A Tug and Five Barges Adrift in the Galop Rapids.

The tug Walker, belonging to the Montreal Transportation Company, while on its way from here to Kingston yesterday, at the head of the canals, got lost in a dense fog. Five barges were attached to her and the whole contingent drifted down through the Galop Rapids. The barges came to anchor in an eddy at the foot of the rapids, but the tug drifted on to an island opposite Iroquois. Tugs have gone to take it off.

INSPECTED THE INCINERATOR.

Chief Engineer Doré examined the new incinerator at Gregory Farm, yesterday afternoon. The examination is a very minute one and Mr. Doré expressed himself as highly pleased with the work. The chimney is now complete and is the highest in the city, reaching to a height of 168 feet. The work is reported as being first-class in every respect. The whole concern will be in readiness for inspection by the visiting members of the American Health Association in the latter part of this month.

DR. VERNON'S TALE OF WOE.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

TORONTO, September 5.—A man, who claims to be a doctor, is swindling the East End by an ingenius tale of woe. He says his name is Dr. Vernon, that he is not long from Montreal; has been married but seven months, and the lady with whom he and his wife are boarding, insists on being paid a few dollars on account. He says his father, who died recently, left a big estate, but it is involved and Mr. Pierre, his lawyer, is now straightening it out. In the meantime he is terribly hard up, not having even enough to wire his solicitor for a small remittance. The self-styled doctor is about twenty-seven years of age, well-dressed and of good manners.

LAVAL UNIVERSITY.

The Law Faculty of Laval was re-opened this morning, Hon. Judge Mathieu delivering the opening address. After thanking the students for having lately passed a vote of condolence on the death of his daughter, Mrs. Pouliot, the Hon. Judge gave some practical advice to the students. In substance he said that they should commence to study at the opening of the session and not wait till near the approaching examination, as it was always a source of danger to the student, and many were refused admission to the Bar solely on the ground that they had not been diligent enough in their studies.

COUNT OF PARIS.

The Duke of Orleans Who Will Succeed to the Head of the Orleanists.

LONDON, September 5.—The friends of the Count of Paris are astonished at the vitality he displays. In accordance with the desire expressed by the Duke of Orleans, son of the Count of Paris, who is said to be dying at Stowe House near London, that prayers be offered in the churches of France for the restoration of his father to health, a low mass was celebrated Sunday at the Church of the Madeleine. The services were attended by all the notable Royalists of Paris, each of whom displayed deep emotion. No untoward incident marred the solemnity of the services.

Both England and America view this passing away of the French pretender with sentimental interest. His grandfather's bones are laid here in English soil, and he himself, for the greater part of his adult life, has been more at home as an English country gentleman than as a Continental Prince. Partly through the effect of his mother's North German blood and partly through his long familiarity with the literature and public affairs in England and in the United States, it has always required a certain effort here to think of him as a Frenchman. Several of the working and planning partisans of the Orleanist restoration, although they never said so, it is easy to see have counted as among the difficulties their cause had to contend with, the fact that in France, too, the people did not regard him as a Frenchman. His intimate friendship with the British royal family and his expert acquaintance with the topic of the American civil war were alike against him in France. The popular imagination could conceive of him dignifying a fauteuil in the Académie, but not a throne. The perception of this fact is very strongly marked in the twenty-five-year-old Duc d'Orleans, whom the party has been calling the Dauphin and who now succeeds to the shadowy claim of kingship as Philipe VIII. This young man is extremely cosmopolitan in his private tastes, but publicly he has had the wit to preserve the studied semblance of a narrow ultra-French Chauvinism.

You will not catch him showing off his ability to speak English without an accent or signing his name to learned and abstract meditations in magazines. He has shrewdness, energy and cheek. He thinks, or, rather, desires others to think, of Henri IV as his model. He never quarrels or says petulant things. He takes life joyously, according to the amiable Valois and Bourbon precedents, and he does not pretend to any more elaborate political platform than that every Frenchman should have chicken for dinner. All this in a young man of great wealth and lofty descent, who, without being handsome, carries himself like one of the three musketeers he makes up to resemble, is well calculated to attract attention in France.

LOCOMOTIVE FIREMEN.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., September 5.—Grand Master Sargent and Grand Secretary Arnold, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, leave to-day for Harrisburg, Pa., to attend the general convention of the order. Eugene V. Debs will not attend. There will be little or no opposition to the selection of Chief Sargent, but there is a bitter fight on Arnold, and the trouble promises an interesting contest on the convention floor. The Terre Haute delegates lead the fight against Arnold. The Debs element of the order will array itself for Arnoldi's re-election. The records of the grand officer, just completed, show the order to be in a flourishing condition.

TRAIN WRECK AVERTED.

ST. PAUL, Minn., September 5.—The morning train from Chicago on the Wisconsin Central was saved from a bad wreck near Stevens Point by a plucky farmer. The train was approaching Stevens Point, at 2 o'clock when signalled by a flame, which quickly went out. On stopping the train, it was found that wreckers had been at work, but were discovered and frightened away by a man living near, who then tore tore off his shirt and lighting it, stopped the train.

TO BEAT THE CUNARDERS.

NEW YORK, September 5.—The American Steamship Line steamer St. Louis, now building at the yard of Cramp & Sons, Philadelphia, will be launched about the middle of next month, and will probably be the fastest steamship afloat. The St. Louis will be the largest vessel ever constructed in America. There are people who believe that the new vessels of the American line will make the voyage from Sandy Hook lightship to Daunt's Rock in five days.

WITT WAS ASSASSINATED.

HERRENTIA, Tex., September 5.—J. W. Witt, secretary of the thirteenth Congressional District Convention, and Superintendent of public schools at Decatur, was assassinated at the latter place last evening by S. Simmons, a young business man of Sherman. It is alleged that undue intimacy existed between Witt and a sister of Simmons, and that Witt openly boasted of it. Simmons was arrested.

TRUE TO CANADA.

To be That, Sir John Declares We Should Devote Ourselves to Smoothing Away Friction With the Mother Country.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

TORONTO, September 5.—Mr. John Withrow, President of the Industrial Exhibition Association, presented an address to Sir John Thompson extending a cordial welcome to himself and Lady Thompson on the occasion of the opening of the sixteenth annual exhibition. In reply, the Premier said it gave him great pleasure to assist in opening the exhibition. He was not there to speak of matters of policy, not to speak of the question of the policy of the recognition of the exhibition as a Dominion one, but as a citizen holding a high office, to do what he could toward paying the debt of gratitude owing to the promoters of the Industrial Exhibition. Hardly a year had elapsed since the people of this country, at the exhibition of all nations, had achieved a triumph such as had never before been achieved by any country. The circumstances were such as to justify pride of nationality as well as of progress in industry and the arts.

More than ever, they desired the establishment of British policy in this Dominion, Canadians were proud not only of their country, but of the constitution that gave freedom and scope in ever direction for the pursuit of every art and every branch of agriculture to which their industry can be applied. There were those who stated that the first duty of a public man is where the interests of this country and the interests of Great Britain fail to agree, to declare loyalty to Canada.

"As one of the public men of this country," continued Sir John—and the declaration was made in such grave tones as to be capable of a great deal of meaning in view of the trade question in the speaker's mind —"I assert that it is our duty to remove all possible causes of friction between ourselves and the Motherland, in order that we may truly establish in these seven provinces and in the fertile prairies of the Dominion, British policy and British institutions. Canada is greater to-day than it would be, did not the flag of the Empire float over us."

Sir John, turning to lighter topics, paid a tribute to the managers of the exhibition. In his closing words he declared that the time was coming when the people of the Dominion would understand what a country they had. They were coming home in tens of thousands from the United States, believing that they were safer at home and surer of a return for their labor, than in the States; believing, too, that the constitution not only furnished an absolute guarantee of the liberty and security of every citizen of the Dominion, but likewise opportunity for the expansion of every ambition that the heart of man could sustain.

THE WINNIPEG PRESS.

Comments on the Liberal Speeches There.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

WINNIPEG, Man., September 4.—The opinions of the Liberal papers regarding Mr. Laurier's effort on Monday evening are briefly expressed. Both are highly enthusiastic at the reception accorded him. Of his speech the Tribune says: "The applause which followed every reference to Tariff Reform shows that the people regard that as the paramount issue of the day. Mr. Laurier's speech was a magnificent effort. There was an entire absence of acrimony or bitterness, and the pure vein of lofty sentiment and high-minded statesmanship which ran through it, testified, as nothing else could, to the worth of the man."

The Free Press says: "There is no halting between opinions in the declaration of his policy. He sees Protection as a masked robbing of those who make the wealth of a country, and a species of serfdom, that differs in degree, more than in kind, from that which so long cursed the southern States of America."

The Nor'-Wester (Independent) says, that no other political leader who has ever visited Winnipeg has been so enthusiastically received; but scores severely his statements that the Liberals have evidenced no hostility to the North-West. It ridicules Mr. Mulock's statement in regard to St. Andrew's Rapids. On the freight rate it says: "Mr. Laurier pretended to give his views, but we defy any man to tell us what they are now he has spoken." Concluding, it remarks on the school question: "Mr. Laurier was simply cowardly, evasive, laboring by innendo as far as he dared, having the Catholic Province of Quebec in mind, and the 'Liberal' local Government policy. It was a fine meeting, it adds, the audience was large, intelligent and appreciative, and the speeches were good. Those of Mr. Laurier and Mr. Fraser was more than good. All the speakers were bold and outspoken in attacking the Government, for they want to capture the treasury benches. They were very careful not to ruffle a feather of the C. P. R., for they want the C. P. R. to help them in the assault. They could condemn the tariff for that was safe; they avoided the freight rates, which are many times more oppressive, for there was danger there. Of such is politics, even as practiced by Mr. Laurier.

THE CAPE MAY CUP.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

COWES, September 5.—The Prince of Wales wired from Homburg this morning that he approved of the decision of the sailing committee of the Royal Yacht Squadron, to accept Mr. Gould's withdrawal of the Vigilant's challenge for the Cape May cup.

WHY CHINA WENT TO WAR.

TEXT OF THE PROCLAMATION ISSUED FROM PEKIN.

Two Spies of the Japanese Executed at Shanghai--Details of Naval and Land Battle in Corean Waters and Territory.

LONDON, September 5.—The fragmentary despatches from Japan, it is believed here, give no clear idea of the last battle, believed to have been fought in Corea at Ping Yang. The despatches from Shanghai are generally believed to be notoriously favorable to the Chinese cause, while those from Japan are subject to a censorship that robs them of truth and interest.

All the Japanese in China have now been put under Chinese jurisdiction.

The Yokohama specie bank and other Japanese business concerns in China are closing.

The Chinese press and officials ridicule the British Government and forces, because they take no notice of the Kow-Chung incident.

A torpedo exploded off the coast near Shanghai yesterday, destroying a junk. All on board were killed.

It is reported that a levy of 250,000 troops has been made up in the province of Nshan Tung, which has hitherto withheld the men and war supplies demanded by the Government.

The two Japanese spies who were surrendered to the Chinese authorities by the United States Consul, under whose protection they were, were promptly tried and beheaded. In consequence of this summary action all of the Japanese remaining in Shanghai, about 700, decided to leave there at once.

Many Chinese recruits are arriving at Tien-Tsin. But a small proportion of them are sent to Corea. The majority are ordered to stations along the coast.

A Yokohama despatch says the Japanese elections have been held. They passed off quietly.

Large numbers of Japanese troops are going to Corea. All the available merchantmen have been chartered by the Government for use as transports.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., September 5.—The Steamer Belgic arrived from the Orient last night, bringing Hong Kong advices to August 1, and Yokohama advices to the 14th. China's declaration of war is as follows:

Corea has been our tributary for the past two hundred odd years. She has given us tribute all this time, which is a matter known to the world. For the past dozen or so years Corea has been troubled by insurrections, and we, in sympathy with our small tributary, have as repeatedly sent succor to her aid, eventually placing a resident in her capital to protect Corea's interests. On the fourth moon (May) of this year the rebellion was begun in Corea and the King repeatedly asked again for aid from us to put down the rebellion; we then ordered Li Hung Ching to send troops to Corea. They having barely reached Yan Shan the rebels immediately scattered. But the Wojen, (ancient name of Japanese) without any cause whatever, send their troops to Corea and entered Seoul, the capital of Corea, re-inforcing them constantly until they have exceeded ten thousand men. In the meantime, the Japanese forced the Corean King to change his system of Government, showing a disposition every way of bullying Coreans. It was found a difficult matter to reason with the Wojen. Although we have been in the habit of assisting our tributaries, we have never interfered with their internal government. Japan's treaty with Corea was as one country with another, there is no law for sending large armies to bully a country in this manner and couple it to change its system of government. Various powers are united in condemning the conduct of the Japanese, and can give no reasonable name to the army she now has in Corea. Nor has Japan been amenable to reason, nor would she listen to an exhortation to withdraw her troops and confer amicably upon what should be done in Corea; on the contrary, Japan has shown herself bellicose without regard to appearances, and has been increasing her forces there. Her conduct alarmed the people of Corea, and so we sent more troops to protect them. Judge of our surprise then, when half way to Corea, a number of the Wojen ships suddenly appeared and taking advantage of our unpreparedness opened fire on our transports at a spot on the sea coast near Yashan, and damaged them, thus causing us to suffer from their treacherous conduct, which could not be foretold by us.

As Japan has violated the treaties and not observed international laws, and is now running rampant with her false and treacherous actions, commencing hostilities herself and laying herself open to condemnation by the various powers at large, we, therefore, desire to make it known to the world that we have always followed the paths of philanthropy and perfect justice throughout the whole complications, while the Wojen and others have broken all the laws of nations and treaties, which it passed our patience to bear with. Hence we command Li Hung Chang to give strict orders to our various armies to hasten with all speed to route the Wojen out of their lairs, in order to save the Coreans freed from bondage.

The engagement between the Chinese twin screw cruiser, Chi Yuen and a Japanese man-of-war in Corean waters, according to Chinese accounts, lasted four hours. At the commencement the Chinese sailors refused to work their guns, but on five of them being shot by their own officers, the others fought so well that they raked the Japanese fore and aft, killing the Japanese admiral, but the Japanese picked off all exposed persons on the Chi Yuen and exploded a shell on her deck, killing a lieutenant and three men working one of the guns, Chi Yuen's own steering gear was carried away, and her forward guns disabled, but she steered with her twin screws and replied to the Japanese with her after gun with such effect that the Japanese surrendered, hoisting the dragon flag over a white flag. But before the Chinese could take accession, several Japanese men-of-war hove in sight, and the Japanese vessel re-hoisted her flag and the Chi Yuen made all haste to get away and succeeded in reaching Wei-Hai-Wei for repairs.

Particulars of the capture of the Corean palace are given in a letter from the Chemulpo correspondent of the North China Daily News, in which he says the 1500 troops on guard bravely resisted as long as they could, killing about a dozen Japanese soldiers, but were finally overpowered and the Japanese then took possession of the palace grounds, the King and Queen, Crown Prince and Crown Princess having been removed to the Japanese legation, where they are still kept heavily guarded. The Japanese then took possession of the telegraph office in Seoul, so that the telegrams could be sent away. Chinese residences have also been attacked. One policeman has been killed and the Chinese have fled. Three thousand Japanese soldiers are now marching to Gazan, where six thousand Chinese troops are encamped, and an engagement is hourly expected.

The battle of Seikwan opened at 3 o'clock on the morning of July 29, and after five hours of hard fighting the Japanese army was completely victorious, and gained possession of the enemies' entrenchments. The Chinese troops numbered over 2800, of whom over five hundred were killed or wounded, while the Japanese lost five officers and seventy men.

The Chinese Government is contemplating the wholesale reduction of its foreign employés, the money thus saved to go to pay the expense of the war.

The Chinese Government has prohibited the export of food stuffs to Japan as a retaliatory measure. The Japanese papers suggest the prohibition of the export of coal to China, which would inflict a great obstacle to the free operations of the Chinese navy. Japan has in view the raising of a loan to defray expenses.

The work of administrative reform in Corea is making steady progress. A new official organization is about to be promulgated. It is said to be modeled after the Japanese government, which the Corean King will in future bear the title of Emperor of Great Corea.

Though a majority of the Chinese in Yokohama will leave for home, there are many who have determined to stay among the merchants who deal extensively with Europeans and Americans as employés of foreign firms. These Chinese and their property will be protected by the United States so far as international law and usage will allow.

MANUAL TRAINING IN THE SCHOOLS.

RESULT OF MR. ARTHY'S TRIP TO ENGLAND.

The Superintendent of the Public Schools Will Recommend an Extension of the Kindergarten System to Primary Schools.

Mr. E. W. Arthy, Superintendent of schools under the Protestant Board of School Commissioners, landed from the Lake Winnipeg shortly after daybreak this morning, and at nine o'clock was on duty at his office, looking much the better for his trip to England.

"I took considerable time in enquiring into the industrial work introduced in the English schools," remarked Mr. Arthy to a STAR reporter this morning. "I found a great deal of this kind of work done in the schools in all the larger cities, including London, Birmingham, Sheffield and Manchester, with apparently considerable success. In the public schools for girls I found they devoted considerable time and attention to manual training or industrial work, the standard branches being sewing, laundry work and cooking."

"What do they do in the way of industrial training in the boys' schools?"

"Well, the manual training in the boys' schools is almost wholly confined to woodwork, but they carry it out very fully."

"Is this industrial training carried out in England of such a nature as will warrant your recommending its adoption in our schools?"

"To tell the truth, I have hardly had time to make up my mind whether the adoption of the whole system would be desirable or not. I am still thinking over it; but I certainly shall recommend an extension of the kindergarten system to the primary classes; the institution of what they call hand and eye training in England."

RAILWAY NOTES.

At the Bonaventure Station last night and this morning it was all that the officials could do to deal with the traffic. The authorities report a regular block. Whether it was a train from the east or a train from the west, the crowd was about the same. The trains are coming and going in two sections, and the telegraph operators have their hours of work extended. The pile of baggage outside the platforms of the Grand Trunk Railway this morning was quite astonishing.

Detective Flynn was busy this morning collecting the material items of evidence against an Italian named Marino. The accused thief came up for trial this morning. He had been employed for some time working for the Grand Trunk Railway. The articles stolen were a quantity of nails and other articles of value. The stolen goods were worth over $30.

SERIOUS RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.

Mr. Robert Stanley, contractor, residing at 634 Wellington street, Point St. Charles, met with a painful accident last night. While driving along Wellington street near the subway, his horse became frightened and ran away. In descending the grade leading into the subway, a heavy desk that was on top of his dog-cart rolled over, striking Mr. Staveley on the head and knocking him down between the dashboard and the horse. The animal kicked the unfortunate man in the chest, rendering him unconscious. In falling to the ground his head went under the left wheel, which inflicted a serious scalp wound. Mr. Staveley was conveyed to his home, where he still lies in an unconscious state.

BANKER ON TRADE SITUATION.

Mr. C. S. Leete, of New Haven, Conn., in conversation with a STAR reporter this morning made some expressions of opinion as to the trade of the United States and Canada.

"I am in the drug business specially. I am also a general merchant. I am also president of the Connecticut Mechanics Bank. So I have every means of knowing what way trade tends. The settlement of the tariff means just this: We know now whether we are riding on horseback or walking on foot. The general effect is that things are moving. That certainly makes some difference. I take no part in politics, but my view is that trade is going to get better.

DID NOT RETURN THE RIG.

Adelard Bertrand, aged 30, living on Beaudry street, was charged with having some few days ago gone to Alphonse Desjardins and hired a horse and rig, which he did not return. Bertrand's side of the story is that he got drunk and did not know what he done with the horse and cart. Detectives Trempe and Arcand who arrested him traced the rig to St. Henri de Mascouche, where it was sold to a man named Ame. Gougeon. Bertrand then went on a spree with the proceeds. When brought up in the police court this morning he pleaded not guilty. His trial was fixed for Friday.

EMERY'S ASSAILANT AT COURT.

Joseph Fraser, the man who shot Special Constable Emery on the night of July 6, was brought up in the Police Court this morning. He pleaded not guilty to the charge of stealing railway tickets from Glen Robinson and Alexandria. He pleaded guilty to the charge of breaking into Mr. Lester's store in Alexandria. He also pleaded guilty to the charge of stealing bicycles from Lunn's store on Craig street. On being charged with shooting Special Constable Emery, he pleaded that it was accidentally done. His trial was fixed for the 11th inst.

METHODIST CONFERENCE.

A well loaded special car of reverend gentlemen arrived this morning at the Bonaventure Station from the Lower Provinces. There is a Methodist Conference at London, Ontario, to open to-morrow, Sept. 6th. The meeting is expected to last a fortnight or more. There are no particularly contentious questions to be brought up, but said one rev. gentlemen, "We never know. Our programme is always rather vague, but we expect the Conference to be quiet, amiable and in every way a pleasant meeting."

THE COTE ACCIDENT.

The inquest on the body of Cote was continued this afternoon at the morgue. Several witnesses were examined. Mayor Dagenais, of St. Henry, watched the interests of the family of the deceased, and D. McCormick, Q. C., represented Thomas Pringle & Sons. The chain block which broke and caused the accident was examined by experts.

BURNED AT THE POINT.

An alarm of fire was sounded from Box 167 at half-past eight last evening. The fire proved to be a shed and stable belonging to Mr. Small in the rear of No. 41 Paris street, Point St. Charles. The damage was not heavy. The firemen had no sooner reached their stations than they were again called out. This proved, however, to be a false alarm.

THE PUGILIST CABBY FINED.

In the Recorder's Court this morning, Charles O'Brien, a hackman, doing business on St. James street, was charged with being drunk, deserting his vehicle and resisting the police. The officer's deposition was to the effect that the carter had left his vehicle in front of the St. Lawrence Hall and had gone into the bar, from which he emerged some time later in a state of intoxication. The officer met him and charged him with being absent from his vehicle. The carter requested the policeman to get on the box with him and hold the reins, which he did. When the cab started off, the carter fell off the box. He then jumped up and ran off, followed by the officer who soon reached him when the scuffle took place. O'Brien was fined $5 and costs or one month.

ROBBERY AT BEL-AIR.

The Case Being Tried in the Court of Queen's Bench.

Yesterday afternoon a jockey named Thomas Guerin was arraigned in the Court of Queen's Bench charged with having broken into the restaurant at the Bel-Air race-track on July 2nd and stealing a quantity of liquor. Mr. Dixon, who keeps the restaurant, swore that about $100 worth of liquor was taken. He had heard that Guerin was one of the party that had stolen the liquor and he had him arrested. Patrick Fitzpatrick, a waiter, was the next witness, and he said that he was on duty the night of the robbery. Guerin and two others said that they were going to break into the bar. The witness said that he had warned them not to break into that place, but they did so in spite of his warning. When asked why he did not interfere, he said that they were too strong, and he was not armed. Witness swore several bottles of liquor in Guerin's possession. Detective O'Keefe was the next witness. He had arrested the accused, who admitted having stolen a quantity of liquor, Lieutenant Reid corroborated O'Keefe's story. The case was adjourned till this morning, when the case was re-opened. A man named James Carr was called for the defence. He swore that the accused had slept in his (Carr's) house on the night of July 2. The case is being continued this afternoon.

The new Erskine Church, it is expected, will be dedicated on Sunday, September 30.

During the Sarnia's passage out she broke a blade of her propellor and was delayed for about five hours.

In the Police Court this morning James Kelso was fined $10 or two months for stealing a pair of boots and some clothing from Michael Nolan.

The Beaver line steamer Lake Winnepeg, Captain Herrman, arrived in port this morning from Liverpool. Several other steamers are due this evening.

A meeting of the merchant tailors of the city will be held this evening in the Monument National to consider the abuses of the credit system. A thorough discussion of the subject is expected.

The Young Women's Christian Association will hold a meeting to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock, to transact general business in connection with the work of the Association for the coming winter.

Detective Robinson yesterday arrested Dominique Bolla, St. Elizabeth street, on a charge of stealing two watches from Antoine Cazassa, a fellow boarder. In the Police Court this morning. Bolla pleaded not guilty. His trial was fixed for to-morrow.

PROPOSED HARBOR LOAN.

It will be remembered that the Montreal Harbor Commissioners some time ago asked the Government at Ottawa to guarantee the interest on a four million dollar loan which they wanted to float, the money to be donated to harbor improvements. The Government after mature consideration declined to do so; in other words, they wanted to enquire into the different schemes that had been submitted for the improving of the harbor before they would guarantee the interest. That was a few months ago, but up to now nothing has been heard of the enquiry they were to make. This, it is believed, was to embrace an enquiry into the carrying out of the present scheme, and an enquiry the chairman of the Harbor Commissioners was very desirous of having instituted. The Harbor officials think the Government may act when it meets again. The chairman says the delay is not causing any stoppage in the works under way at present.

FELL FROM THE FOURTH STORY.

A farmer named Beausoleil, hailing from St. Barthelemi, engaged in a high and lofty tumbling exhibit at Dumouchel's hotel, on St. Paul street, at one o'clock this morning, and as a sequel is now the occupant of a cot at the Notre Dame Hospital. Mr. Beausoleil was a guest of the hotel and occupied a room on the fourth floor, facing the rear. He sat in the window before retiring, lost his balance and fell to the ground. An ambulance was called and the victim was taken to Notre Dame Hospital, where his injuries were found to be of a serious, though not of a fatal, nature.

POLICE OFFICERS TO BE CHANGED.

Some changes are to take place at the Police headquarters in the near future. The changes decided upon are as follows: Captain Beauchemin, of No. 1 will take charge of No. 2 station; Lieut. Watson, of No. 1 will go to No. 6 station; Lieut. Sullivan, of No. 6 will take Lieut. Watson's place at No. 1, Lieut. Tetreault, will be changed to No. 4 station, corner of Ontario and German streets. Sergeant Beattie will be transferred to No. 1. The Chief, when seen this morning about the changes, said that it is usual every few years to change the officers from one station to another.

THE FLOUR KING IN MONTREAL.

SENATOR WASHBURN ON THE SLUMP IN WHEAT.

Low Prices Will Lead to the Transformation of the Wheat States Into Cattle Growing Countries—The Canadian Wheat Preserve.

Senator W. D. Washburn, of Minneapolis, the head of the greatest milling firm in the world, which turns out, on an average, fifteen thousand barrels of flour a day, was at the Windsor Hotel to-day, accompanied by his son, on his way to Maine, where he is going to join his family who have been spending the summer in the Pine Tree State. No one is better capable of sizing up the much discussed grain situation than Senator Washburn, but modestly does not like to admit it, for he stated to a STAR reporter this morning:

"I am just as likely to be wrong in my opinion on wheat prices as any body, in fact I have been so often wrong in my views on the question that I am almost afraid to express an opinion."

"From the present position of things do you expect the price of wheat to pick up again?"

"Oh, I certainly expect prices to go up; but just what figure they will reach. I would not like to say; in fact, I do not attempt to guess it. Of this, though, I am pretty firmly convinced: Prices will never be as high as they have been, and I do not think we shall ever hear of the price per bushel exceeding the dollar, unless we have some great wars or famines, restricting agricultural operations in any of the great grain-producing countries."

"Do you expect prices to go any lower?"

No; I do not see how it could, for

and at the present price proves a profitable investment for hog raisers to feed to hogs and their demand for the grain will prevent the price from falling any lower, for they are buying immense quantities of it."

"Will the present low price of wheat tend to reduce the acreage of this grain under cultivation, do you think?"

"Unquestionably it will, for the farmer cannot clear himself, much less make a profit at the present prices. He cannot afford continue to raise a crop at a dead loss and will vary his crop. There will be many thousands of acres less under wheat in my own state, Minnesota, and in the Dakotas next year than ever before. The farmers find now that it pays them better to raise live stock and root crops and the soil and climate in our part of the country are as favorable for those crops as for wheat. In southern Minnesota there are large herds of cattle now, and many of the present great wheat centres will be turned into live stock districts in a year or two. This change is due, of course, largely to the prevailing low prices of wheat, but also to the knowledge that other great wheat districts are coming in. Take for instance. Nobody likes to estimate the vast amount of wheat they can produce."

MANITOBA AND YOUR GREAT NORTH-WEST,

"You are not one of those, then, who think our far western territories incapable of producing wheat."

"No, I am not. They can produce the finest wheat in the world on every inch of it. It will be a great country."

"To what do you ascribe the great slump in wheat?"

"To be frank, I believe that the speculators on margin, who pretend to deliver thousands and thousands of bushels of the grain and never have a bushel in their possession, are largely responsible. Then I think that too much wheat is grown for the consumption; but as I have said, the farmers will speedily remedy that. I do not know whether Argentina is producing such a large amount of wheat as they claim, but your Canadian North-West will be able to produce almost as much wheat as will supply the export demand."

Mr. Washburn was the chief promoter of the Soo road. He said that Minneapolis had every reason to be satisfied with the result of the construction of the road, and it was benefiting the trade of the city very much, giving it the shortest direct line possible both to the Atlantic and Pacific. The export trade was rapidly being diverted to the St. Lawrence route, which was found very satisfactory.

Senator Washburn is a Republican and of course not enthusiastic over the recent United States tariff legislation, which, however, he says has split the Democratic party up.

A BENEFIT PERFORMANCE

At the Academy of Music on Saturday Evening in Aid of the Fresh Air Fund.

Mr. Herrmann, the famous conjurer, has done a characteristic act of kindness in offering a benefit performance at the Academy of Music on Saturday evening in aid of the Fresh Air Fund. The following correspondence explains itself:

WINDSOR HOTEL, MONTREAL, Sept 4, 1894.

J. M. M. DUFF, Esq.,
Chairman Fresh Air Fund.

DEAR SIR,—Before leaving the city I desire to acknowledge my obligations for the uniform kindness I have received at the hands of Montreal audiences during a period of twenty years. With this object in view, permit me to tender a benefit performance Saturday evening at the Academy of Music in aid of the Fresh Air Fund. Such an institution, which I understand has done a great public service, is deserving of every support. I shall be pleased to contribute to the Fund 50 per cent. of the receipts.

Hoping you will accept my suggestion on account of my love for the little ones.

I remain, yours faithfully.
A. HERMANN.

Following is Mr. Duff's reply:

Montreal, 4th September, 1894.

A. HERRMANN, Esq.,
Windsor Hotel.

DEAR SIR,—Your's of to-day has just been received, in which you very generously offer to give half of your receipts on Saturday, 8th instant, for the benefit of the Fresh Air Fund.

As a committee we have not considered that begging was any part of our duty; but we take what may come to us, and do the best we can with it, for the comfort and happiness of such little ones as come under our notice and who may be poor and in need of fresh air.

We consider ours is the most Catholic of all the charities, because we make no difference whatever between Roman Catholics and Protestants, nor between French-speaking and English-speaking families—all are treated alike and made heartily welcome.

I have very great pleasure in saying that we hope you may have a crowded house on Saturday, and that the result may be a great success financially for us all.

Yours sincerely,
J. M. M. DUFF.
Chairman Fresh Air Fund Committee.

These men were arrested last Friday by Constables Suthergill and Richard on St. Lawrence street for obstructing the sidewalk. James Labelle alias Reid was also arrested at the time, but he was present this morning. Mr. St. Pierre appeared for his defence he claimed that his client was not obstructing the sidewalk, but that had only stopped to speak to the others. He also referred to the good character of the accused and his parents. Judgment will be rendered on Friday.

SMITH ASSAULT CASE.

The Victim Again Testifies—Believes Murder Was Kelly's Game.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

SWEETSBURG, Que., September 5.—The Smith assault case, now a cause célèbre on this section, was resumed to-day before Justices Boright and Shufet, and Mr. W. W. Smith, the agent of the C. P. R. at Sutton Junction, when Kelly confessed he so previously assaulted, was again put in the witness stand.

The Court was crowded and the keenest interest was manifested by the shrewd looking audience to watch the developments, expected to be sensational. Kelly, Howarth and their lawyers were on hand as were Wilson and Jenne. Mr. Smith, whose evidence was interrupted on Friday last when Mr. Kelly told his "little story." Identified the lead pipe put in evidence as the weapon with which he was assaulted. He also identified the hat produced as being the one which Kelly lost in the scuffle.

In his cross-examination he swore that he believed that it was the intention of Kelly to murder him, and based his belief upon the violence of the blows which Kelly inflicted.

Chas. A. Dyer, veterinary surgeon, of Sutton, swore that he saw Kelly and the person Howarth together on Lebeau's track in Sutton. Howarth told the witness that Kelly was a horse-buyer from Boston, and that Howarth had driven Kelly from Abercorn to Sutton.

Daniel L. Smith swore that he had seen Kelly a number of times in Sutton shortly before Smith was assaulted, and saw him for the last time on the evening of the assault about seven o'clock. The case is still in progress, and will last all the afternoon.

The Big Convention at St. John.

[SPECIAL TO THE STAR.]

ST. JOHN, N. B., September 5.—This morning the convention of the Council of the C. M. B. A. opened business shortly after nine o'clock.

The financial statement, containing the reports of the officers, was adopted after some discussion.

About eleven o'clock Archbishop O'Brien, Bishop Sweeney and Reverend Doctor Murphy, of Halifax, visited the convention and were received with becoming honors. His Grace and Bishop Sweeney replied in appropriate terms, wishing the association continuous prosperity. Archbishop O'Brien expressed the hope that Halifax might soon be favored with a visit from the convention. The speeches were heartily applauded. The platform on which the President's chair stands is lavishly decorated with potted flowers and bouquets. To-night, by invitation of the local branches, the lady visitors, about one hundred strong, will attend the performance of "Rip Van Winkle" at the Opera House. Nearly four hundred delegates are in attendance. The financial statement above referred to shows that the total number of members in good standing in the Grand Council of Canada is 8824; under suspension, 370. The total amount of money received from July 1, 1892, to July 1, 1894, was $245,671.47. Of this sum $155,321.29 was paid out to families of deceased members, $78,020.44 went to the Supreme Council and $12,288.74 was added to the reserve fund. The ordinary expenses for the two years, officials' salaries, supplies, cost of organizing, etc., were $15,753.62. Since the formation of the Grand council in Canada, fourteen years ago, 394 members have died and the total amount paid in beneficiaries was $723,000. It was decided that a man over age accepted but not initiated for membership shall be rejected. The Grand Council of Canada was in committee upheld in its revolt against the Supreme Council in refusing to pay a tax demanded, alleged to violate an agreement made in Montreal in 1892. On Friday the meeting will close its deliberations.

AN AGED WANDERER.

A sad case of neglected infirmity was brought to light on Jurors street last evening. An old woman giving the name of Ellen Blake, 70 years of age, said she left the Hotel Dieu in the morning in search of a friend, but when she got to the place, where she hoped to find her, learned that she had changed her residence. A gentleman came to her assistance; and helped her toward Bleury street, where, she said, she had a friend who would keep her over night. The gentleman gave her car fare and would have willingly paid for her conveyance to her own home had it been possible to learn where it was. Finding that her reason was fast failing, he gave her to an officer, who had her taken to No. 5 Station. On her arrival there she was recognized by the officer in charge, who sent for some of her friends. Last winter she fell and fractured one of her legs, and again in the spring fell and hurt the same limb, leaving her almost unable to navigate alone. She is sober and honest, and is reputed to be well off.

FINANCE and COMMERCE

STOCKS CONTINUE DULL.

The flatness of the local market yesterday was not removed this morning to any remarkable degree. The small improvement in business only tended to accentuate the present dulness. Though the volume of business is light the tone of sellers is strong, and buyers are not over eager to do any great trading for the moment, as they are looking for a reaction and lower figures. This, however, may not come to pass, if current gossip on the "street" is worth anything. The reports from London and New York gave very little encouragement, and the forenoon session was a dull and gloomy one. Banks were firm and quiet, a few shares of Montreal at 220½ were the only business. In the miscellaneous list Street Railway had the chief attention. The old stock dropped from the opening at 154½ to 154, and the new declined a ½ from 149¾ to 149½. Cable Co. were steady at 141½. A lot of Duluth preferred sold at 14 and Richelieu closed a fraction lower at 81½. The rest of the list was neglected.

AN UNSOLVED STOCK MYSTERY.

A correspondent has the following to say of the manipulation of the local stock market: Curious facts develop occasionally, which show that Montreal's financial barometer moves with a sluggishness which is really painful, and then again the trade of an entire line of stocks are moved up or down with a sensitiveness which can hardly be credited, considering the fact that the source is entirely foreign and in no wise part or parcel of the stock affected. This is now particularly true of Sugar. Between Montreal and New York the prices vary from one half to three-quarters of a cent cheaper here than in that city. The great law of supply and demand which is supposed to control all prices in the financial world seems to have no effect whatever on Montreal's markets as far as the staples are concerned. The reverse of this can be seen on the Montreal Stock Exchange. When the Wall street bears raid the market and bring down the prices from one to five points, our market with the sensitiveness of a fine hair spring quickly responds to the call and goes down with equal promptness. Why the bearing or bulling of Union Pacific and Manhattan Elevated should bring down immediately the price of Street Railway or Montreal Gas is a mystery that will long remain unsolved."

Meredith & O'Brien's Wall Street Gossip.

The London market does not follow ours. Prices are ⅜ per cent. lower.

Mr. Thomson, vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, sees a decided improvement in traffic, and hopes it will last.

Reading reorganization is going on nicely. The back coupons on the fours will yield a little. No plan is expected for two weeks.

Senator Gorman says that efforts will be made at the next session of Congress to secure action on free sugar, coal and iron, but he thinks the bills will have no chance.

Texas Pacific increase fourth week, $26,932; month, $71,770. Norfolk & Western, increase $43,333; month, $100,796.

CHICAGO MARKETS.

Corn Stronger, Wheat Easier.

The market opened a shade weaker for wheat, but fractionally stronger for corn, and during the morning fluctuations, in so far as corn was concerned, were in keeping with early indications, being generally in an upward direction. Wheat made a strong effort to regain lost ground, and at one time reached yesterday's closings, but soon fell away again to the starting prices. The strength in corn was in part, no doubt, attributable to a report in this morning's Chicago Herald, which said: If the state reports being received are any criterion, then assuredly the Government report on corn next Monday will show a considerable drop from the August condition.

Messrs. F. G. Logan & Co., of Chicago, telegraph Messrs. L. J. Forget & Co. to-day over their direct private wire as follows:

There is very little that can be said about wheat. The stock in sight continues to increase. Bradstreet makes the increase for the week two million three hundred thousand bushels. The business doing in the pit is light and largely local. The export demand is less than it should be at this season of the year. The feed question for the moment appears the strong feature. But until receipts fall off somewhat or our export demand increases, we see no substantial advance near at hand. The low price and the feeding demand should make it safe to buy for a turn on the declines. Cables are steady, but bring no business to this market.

Corn opened firm, with fair outside buying orders, which caused an advance sufficient to induce considerable local selling, resulting in a moderate decline, but no weakness apparent up to the present writing. Receipts were moderate and shipping demand sufficient to keep our stock at just about the recent very low level. Oats started firmer under good demand and after the early orders were filled, the market simply followed corn. Receipts are still large, but the demand is also liberal, at present, but is expected to abate with improved pasturage incident to recent rains.

Provisions opened strong, but soon became weak and declining on liberal selling by local and outside packers. As prices declined stop orders were brought out, which greatly assisted the break. At the decline there was some buying by early sellers and also by outside investors. We advise purchases on breaks, as the product continues to be relatively cheaper than the hogs.
