A few stamp collectors not civil - Mtl. show report

Stamp corner

By Peter McCarthy

At the end of November the Canadian Stamp Dealers Association held a rather large stamp show at Place Bonaventure. You may recall my having mentioned it in this column. The event was to have a two-fold purpose. It was first of all to be a part of the CSDA new approach to promoting youth philately.

However, one of the primary reasons for holding such a show away from the city of Toronto, was to appease the Quebec stamp dealers. The latter were on the verge of forming their own association and breaking away from the Toronto run CSDA.

The CSDA now has a relatively new executive which includes people from other areas of Canada besides Toronto. Gary Lyons from the Maritimes and Maria Botman of Lighthouse Publications of Canada, whose Canadian headquarters are located in Montreal, are two examples of the change.

As far as the show goes, it wasn't all that bad. There certainly was a good selection of dealers to choose from. Whether they were all interested in the promotion of youth philately is a subject that is somewhat questionable.

I certainly did meet some very nice people while I was there. One in particular was Roy's Stamps of Kitchener, Ontario. He went out of his way to please young and old alike. However, there were others that were there to make every nickle and dime they could, regardless of how it was done. In some cases, it was observed that people were treated with downright rudeness.

While the better dealers don't hesitate to hang their name signs over their booths, there are others that can't be bothered to put out the expense for a decent sign. It's my opinion that the CSDA should make it compulsory for each of their members to have their names hanging in plain view for everyone to see. It might make some of these Post Office Box dealers think twice about how they treat potential customers.

There is to be another such show in the spring. I'm hoping that, with the view of promoting youth philately, the CSDA will sponsor and encourage young people to exhibit on a larger scale than what was on display last fall.

NEW ISSUE FOR BASEBALL FANS

For baseball fans and collectors of baseball on stamps, the Carribean island nation of Grenada has issued a series of nine sheetlets of nine stamps each depicting major-league baseball players.

Each team is represented by three players, except for the New York Yankees. There being twenty-six major league teams at three players each, comes to seventy-eight. In order to make up the eighty-one stamps, the National and American League Logos are depicted with the final stamp being reserved for the immortal Yankee slugger, Babe Ruth.

INCLUDING EXPANSION TEAMS

While he older teams are represented mainly by the stars of yesteryear, the expansion clubs are represented by more contemporary players. The Montreal Expos players depicted on stamps for example, Steve Rogers, Hubie Brooks and Tim Raines.

All these stamps should be available through your local dealer.If not, please write and I'll be more than happy to help you in obtaining them. The address is P.O.Box 688, Richmond, Quebec, J0B 2H0.

50 YEARS OF CONSERVATION

WE CONSERVE WETLANDS...

Ducks Unlimited Canada

We've been doing it since 1938. Today we employ more than 400 professionals and support staff in 44 offices across Canada. We keep an eye on wetlands — and we're good at it.

During 1988, we're celebrating our golden anniversary. How? By building wetland conservation projects. And when we finish those, we'll work on more, because helping out Canada's waterfowl and wildlife is the best way we know to celebrate the beginning of our next fifty years.

We don't think of ourselves as saviours of the natural world. We're hard-working, down-to-earth, nuts-and-bolts conservationists who do what we know best...conserve wetlands.

THE DUCKS AND GEESE DO THE REST.

Are you A.Q. or P.Q.- a coffee break could help

Who's who

By TADEUSZ LETARTE

OVERHEARD IN A COWANSVILLE COFFEESHOP:

"Since I only come up to Quebec at Christmas, I can never quite figure out all this French-English thing."

"It's all very simple, really. One side wants Quebec to be mostly French..."

"That's the P.Q., right?"

"No. That's Alliance Quebec. The English side."

"The A.Q.? Then the P.Q. must want it mostly English."

"No. The P.Q. want it entirely French."

"Then which side runs the government? A.Q. or P.Q.?"

"Neither. That's Boubou Bourassa. He wants it to be entirely French outside and mostly French inside."

"And the P.Q. side is against that?"

"So is the English side."

"Both sides are on the same side?"

"Boubou doesn't like it either."

"Maybe you'd better start over again and speak real slow."

"It's quite simple. The P.Q. passed a law banning English signs and the Supreme Court of Canada said Quebec could promote one language but it couldn't ban another."

"So the P.Q. had to change the law?"

"Boubou had to change the law. He banned English signs anyway."

"Even though the Supreme Court said he couldn't?"

"Well, they said he couldn't but he could if he wanted to."

"But he didn't really want to and so he did."

"Now you're getting it. You see, the minority are afraid of being swallowed up by the majority so they banned English on signs in Quebec anyway."

"The English are the majority in Quebec?"

"No. The French are the majority. Five million of them to about half a million of us."

"Ten to one? And they're afraid you'll swallow them?"

"Exactly. The majority in Quebec are really the minority in Canada, you see, and the minority is the majority so the minority insist their rights and freedoms be respected by the majority by denying the rights and freedoms of the minority."

"Er ... you want another coffee?"

"Which is really the majority and the Supreme Court ruled that the ban violated Quebec's Bill of Rights and Freedoms so Quebec passed a new law letting it violate that Bill of Rights and Freedoms."

"We've got a Bill of Rights back in the States."

"We know."

"It's a guarantee that people's rights can't be violated by the government."

"Ours isn't a guarantee."

"So it's more a Bill of Privileges?"

"But the government can only violate parts of it."

"What parts?"

"The important parts — freedom of speech, the press, religion. Stuff like that."

"I see. And that's your simple explanation of all this French-English fuss?"

"I could be wrong."

This is the time of year we do the books, add and subtract to see where we are, where we've been and where we're likely to go from here.

Back in May, when Tadeusz Letarte returned from the peace of South America, he found the Maritimes engaged in the Great Cucumber War — and it's still going on. Newfoundland was threatening to cuke Nova Scotia with hydroponic weapons. Diplomacy had broken down. Newfie minister Charlie Power said he'd flood Nova Scotia with cut-rate cucumbers from the huge, government subsidized Sprung greenhouses "and nobody's going to stop us!"

It was a proper pickle. Prince Edward, unmarried son of Queen Elizabeth, got drawn into the war by touring the glass houses with Dawn, unwed daughter of King Sprung. It looked for a while as if Newfoundland was getting all its own way but the tables were turned last week when special agents succeeded in penetrating Sprung security, mixed herbicide with the nutritive spray and all the cucumbers died. Sprung is offering a $10,000 reward. Edward is not available for comment.

There were plenty of other battles then, too — Gary Hart and Donna Rice, Jim Bakker and Jessica Hahn, Jimmy Swaggart and Debra Murphree, Oral Roberts and God, Bell Canada and the Cable and Wire Cutters Union, Malcolm Forbes and Elizabeth Taylor. Latest bulletin from that front is that Liz checked into a sanitorium to dry out again.

In June, the Toronto Lucky Seven Economic Conference prompted Joe Clark to eject 17 (Count 'Em!) 17 Soviet diplomats for trying to get jobs in CSIS, the Canadian Silly Idiot Society. Moscow retaliated by booting out Canadian diplomats and withdrawing all the staff from the Canadian Embassy so that Brian Baloney had to cancel his planned trip to Russia (just before elections, too) or stay at a bed-and-breakfast and cook supper on a hot plate.

Lots of fun with the spy game. Arafat just accused MOSSAD, the Israeli intelligence service, of blowing up the Lockerbie airliner in order to scuttle his peace proposals. Margaret Thatcher read Peter Wright's Spycatcher (in a smuggled edition) and got the speech from the throne to include much stricter controls on MI5.

The CIA, meanwhile, is desperately hunting a mole in their own intelligence community after a rash of spy cases, arrests and secret trials. Pollard, who spied for an ally, drew a life sentence while Walker, who spied for an enemy, got twenty years. There's a lesson in there somewhere.

Next, we'll have all the fun of watching Romping Ronnie & His Buckaroos ride into the sunset while George Whatsisname, the Queen's cousin, takes over the shop. (You remember George. He made his fortune some years ago by sinking all his prospects into jellybean futures and they paid off handsomely.)

Reagan, you'll remember, invented 'trickle-down economics'. That seemed to mean that if the rich could only get rich enough, they'd give all their servants a raise. Then he slashed taxes, ballooned military spending, watched the national debt almost triple in size and blamed it on the media.

Now George Whatsisname is so determined to reduce the national debt that he's willing to borrow money to do it. He's invented something called 'flexible freeze' which is rather like a magic pair of pants — the fatter you get, the bigger they grow so your economic underpinnings are always decently clothed. We can only wish him the best of luck.

As for Tadeusz Letarte, he has only one New Year's Resolution — he'll try not to take any of this (or himself) too seriously.

Happy New Year to one and all. Even Jim Lawrence.

Star Trek V - with more coming

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William Shatner, Leonard Nimoy and other starship Enterprise crew members gathered in Hollywood to toast completion of nearly all filming for the movie Star Trek V: The Final Frontier.

With only a few special-effects sequences left to be filmed, cast members sipped a mixture of champagne and green melon liqueur Wednesday.

Joining Shatner of Montreal, who plays Capt. James Kirk, and Nimoy, who plays Mr. Spock, were DeForrest Kelley (Dr. Leonard McCoy), Walter Koenig (Ensign Pavel Chekov) and James Doohan (Engineer Montgomery Scott).

The subtitle, The Final Frontier, doesn't mean that's the end of the voyages of the Enterprise.

Doohan says the actors have been signed up for Star Trek VI, and that the producer's services have been enlisted all the way to Star Trek VII.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Despite continuing improvement in his condition, country music star Johnny Cash will spend another week or so at the hospital where he underwent double bypass surgery last week, a spokesman says.

The performer's condition was upgraded Wednesday to satisfactory from critical but stable, said Baptist Hospital spokesman Aileen Katcher.

"He will remain in the intensive-care unit until next week for observation," Katcher said, and probably be released sometime next week.

The precaution is not standard in such cases, but is not unusual either, she said.

Generally speaking, Cash "is doing a lot better," Katcher said. "He was up and walking around again today."

Cash, 56, began having lung problems during the weekend after the surgery, but Katcher said they were under control.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The National Enquirer says it stands by its report that the mother of singer Engelbert Humperdinck's daughter fears he is "battling the AIDS virus."

The newspaper issued its statement Wednesday, a day after Humperdinck filed a $50-million-US-plus libel lawsuit against it, saying the story in this week's editions was false and malicious.

"The article, written and researched with extreme care, was based on court papers filed in New York's Family Court," the tabloid said in a statement from its Lantana, Fla., headquarters.

"The headline, Mother of His Child Claims in Court ... Engelbert Has AIDS Virus, is totally accurate," the statement said. "It was published only after being closely reviewed by our legal counsel."

The lawsuit filed in Los Angeles Superior Court says the entertainer doesn't have and never had acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Louise Penney - radio lifeline for province's anglos

QUEBEC (CP) — When she was 15, Louise Penney was named female athlete of the year of her Toronto high school.

This moved a Toronto newspaper editor to send a reporter to interview her.

"The reporter asked me what I wanted to do when I grew up," recalled Penney, now 30.

"I was raised to be a very polite young girl. So to please him, I said: 'I want to be a reporter, just like you.' Actually, I really wanted to be a marine biologist."

Then she received a telephone call from the sports editor of the Toronto Globe and Mail. Would she like to cover high-school sports?

Being a very polite young girl, Penney said she would.

The editor then suggested that she do a series of stories on living dangerously.

So being a very polite young girl, Penney jumped out of a plane. Her story on parachuting made the front page.

And to the great relief of anglophones from Quebec's northern Gaspe Peninsula to its Eastern Townships, Penney has yet to crack a marine-biology textbook.

As the host of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporations's English morning-radio show Quebec AM — heard everywhere in Quebec except Montreal — Penney is a lifeline for anglophones all over the province.

LIKE FAMILY

The show, produced in Quebec City, is the only English-language, Canadian-produced show available to many of the 185,000 Quebec anglophones who live outside Montreal.

All of which makes Penney a veritable VIP in Lennoxville, New Carlisle, Harrington Harbor and other anglophone towns in the province.

"It sounds hackneyed, but we're like a family," Penney said recently.

"The English language is something that holds us together. There is a mutual need to use and hear English."

Penney's predecessor, Royal Orr, is now president of Alliance Quebec, the province's major anglophone rights group.

The show has 16 regional correspondents, including one in Schefferville, in northern Quebec, though only eight anglophones live there.

In Rouyn, northwest of Quebec City, fire chief Ernie Chartrand moonlights as a correspondent for the show.

He ends all his regional reports with a fire tip. "Never put a lit cigarette in your pocket," he advised listeners recently.

REAL FOLKS

"We want people like Ernie, who are real folks," said Penney.

After high school, Penney studied journalism at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute in Toronto.

Upon graduation, she was offered full-time reporting work by both the Toronto Globe and Mail and the CBC's radio news department.

She chose the CBC, and at age 21 became co-host of network's Thunder Bay morning radio show.

After a four-year stint there, she moved to CBC Winnipeg to write radio documentaries for local current-affairs shows.

She did documentaries for one year before becoming host of the station's afternoon show.

In July of 1986, Penney was asked by the network to fill in for vacationing Peter Gzowski on Morningside, the weekday CBC national radio program that airs from 9 a.m. until noon. She took the job with Quebec AM in September 1987.

"I didn't want to leave Winnipeg," said Penney, who was born in Toronto. "But I felt I had to move on. And I wanted to move to Quebec.

"I knew I'd learn French in Quebec City. And it's such a glorious city. And the type of broadcasting you do here: I had to learn about the province. It goes beyond the Dow Jones and traffic tie-ups in Montreal."

She leads a spartan life, waking at 4 a.m. to do her three-hour show, which begins at 6.

"I start making strange at 4 p.m., just like a tired child. I cry, I weep. Then hopefully, I'll nap two hours. I go to bed at 10. It's a constant search for sleep."

Don will wed Melanie once again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Miami Vice star Don Johnson and his ex-wife, actress Melanie Griffith, plan to re-marry, Johnson's publicist said Monday.

"No date has been set," Elliot Mintz said in a statement by telephone from Aspen, Colo. He wouldn't disclose where the wedding will be or where the couple is spending the holidays.

"Both Don and Melanie wish to enjoy this very special time together," Mintz said. "In order to provide a sense of dignity and privacy, there will be no press conference, photo opportunities, interviews or further statement."

Griffith, 31, star of the current hit movie Working Girl, was married briefly to the then-little-known Johnson when she was a teenager. She is the daughter of actress Tippi Hedren.

She later married, then divorced, actor Steven Bauer, and they have a 3½-year-old son, Alexander.

Johnson recently was romantically involved with entertainer Barbra Streisand and the two sang together on the Top 10 adult contemporary hit Till I Loved You.

Johnson, 39, has a five-year-old son from his relationship with Patti D'Arbanville.

Johnson, who plays the scruffy vice cop Sonny Crockett on the NBC-TV series, and Griffith were reported to be living together in Miami.

Off-Beat Loose Moose Theatre - off-the-cuff comic absurdity

By Sylvia Strojek

CALGARY (CP) — There's no script, no plot, no one whispering cues in the wings.

For the actors on the Loose Moose Theatre stage, every performance ends with a twist. When they open a show, they don't know what the ending will be.

The Loose Moose is not the home of a North American ruminant with an intestinal problem. It is an improvisational comedy troupe with a reputation that extends far beyond Calgary.

Under the guidance of artistic director Keith Johnstone, the Loose Moosers serve up two hours of inspired mayhem each week. It's all off-the-cuff — the audience provides the topics or first lines — and usually off-the-wall.

CAN BE WHACKY

"It does have a tendency to attract exhibitionists, people who were a bit wild in school," says associate artistic director Dennis Cahill.

The troupe has five core members. But the theatre has between 35 and 50 performers who drift on to the intimate stage of an old cattle auction ring every once in a while to strut their decidedly wacky stuff.

There's really no prerequisite. The performance itself is the test.

MISFITS WELCOME

"People that stick at it ... they're the ones who survive," says Cahill. "We have taken in people who have no background in theatre. We've taken in quite a few misfits."

By misfits he means those whose off-beat approaches made them "unacceptable" to more traditional theatre companies. Those who were told they "wouldn't make it."

"We had one fellow who was told he didn't have it in him and maybe he should go to the Loose Moose," Cahill remembers. "He did and he did make it. Now he's a successful stand-up comic in Vancouver."

Others from the Loose Moose herd have gone on to write for Saturday Night Live or have formed comedy groups of their own.

Johnstone, a University of Calgary drama professor, started the company in 1977 with a group of his students. Theatresports — where teams of actors are awarded points for their improvisational work from a panel of judges — was just becoming popular in theatre circles. Johnstone wanted to develop the art.

The Loose Moosers kept adding to their repertoire and never looked back. Over the years they've added a weekly show of bizarre skits they've written themselves. They also stage children's plays and take bookings for conventions and school tours.

PAINFUL GLEE

A recent all-star night — the best of the self-penned skits — had audience members holding their sides in painful glee as two actors clad in women's bathing suits and caps gave an on-land display of synchronized swimming.

The men's hairy legs twirling less-than-gracefully above a concealing brocade curtain evoked such mirth that one spectator shouted, "Stop! Stop! Oh please ... (uncontrollable laughter) stop!"

You have to wander a bit to find the Loose Moose. The 240-seat playhouse is tucked into the corner of a sprawling building beside one of Calgary's airport hotels. It's easy to miss the tiny sign giving directions.

But when you walk through the door, you know you're entering the rather absurd Loose Moose country. It's hard to miss the hulking moose head staring at you with slightly crossed eyes.

Chabot - still plays great pool at 85 years young

by Claudia Villemaire

RICHMOND — Brilliant blue eyes and a ready laugh are his trademarks. Standing with his shoulders thrown back, straight and proud, the ever-present pool cue held at an angle, Ulderic Chabot gives no hint to his competitors of his four-score years and a bit more.

That's right, Mr. Chabot, as he's affectionately called by young and old, will be 85 next birthday.

"I started playing pool, billiards and snooker when I was eighteen. That's the only sport I know or care about and I think that's what has kept me alive and active too," he chuckles.

Chabot, who's business career took him back and forth across this province for more than fifty years claims he never worked for anyone but himself.

A BIT OF A REBEL

"You know I guess I was kind of a rebel in my time. Being raised in a tiny village east of Quebec you can imagine the idea of having a travelling salesman in the family didn't suit my very Catholic parents."

Apparently playing pool began when the senior Chabots sent their rebellious son off to school in Quebec.

"You could say I had a shortage of religion. You know, the idea of repititious prayers seemed silly to me. I asked my mother how she would feel if I fell on my knees at her feet and recited the same silly prayer hundreds of times. Of course she couldn't encourage me in that line of thought being a deeply religious person herself. But as the years went by and she realized I had turned out to be an honest man she did relent some."

"When it comes to religion I talk directly to the 'Manufacturer'. I don't believe in all these 'jobbers' in the religion business."

So classes suffered. "They had a lovely pool table in the school and my professors would find me more often than not during times set aside for prayer or religion, practicing at that table, learning to play the game that would be a major part of my life," he explained.

Playing billiards, pool and snooker soon became Chabot's main hobby as his career as a salesman developed.

A NEW FIELD

"You know I bought and sold gold for seven years. I would buy where I could find it and then off it would go to the Canadian Mint."

But his greatest achievement was developing what today is an integral part of retailing - wholsaling.

"Back in the thirties I began buying direct from the manufacturer. That was a new idea. Most retailers also bought from manufacturers and often it wasn't the best arrangement. If a person like me could promise to supply several different items at the same time, that was speeding up service and as you know, the customer has the last word. If he gets better service, he'll be back."

THE FAMILY FOLLOWED

A few years later Chabot married. "I was 33 years old when I made the leap, but you know," he laughs, "I think I'd be more apt to bypass the legal entanglements now and do as soo many young people do".

"I guess I like my freedom too much. I never was too strong on being tied down."

But eventually four children came along. And inevitably the Chabot sons joined their Dad, learning the father's secrets about wholesaling.

Soon the Chabot family were out in the hinterlands selling electrical appliances to retailers. Today, both sons, Michel (Mike) and John are successful entrepreneurs in this field thanks to the inroads their father blazed so many years before.

BUT THERE'S ANOTHER TALENT

Chabot's second love is music. His daughters, Micheline and Diane, fondly remember one epic holiday they spent with their Dad as he made his rounds on the Gaspé penninsula.

"You know, the people then, in those areas, saw few strangers. So aside from really liking my Dad, his arrival at any village was almost like a small festival," Micheline recalls.

"We would often have dinner with a client then stroll to the local pub oar tavern. There was always a piano and very often a fiddle. My Dad could pick up a tune as quick as a fellow could whistle or sing it. We girls sat on each side of him on the piano bench and he would play and sing until the wee hours."

"Dad never drank alcohol but on that special trip I remember the piano top being loaded with drinks his friends would buy in appreciation."

POOL IS TOPS

"But I live to play pool," he says. And that's exactly what he does, every day he can. Local pool halls and drinking spots where there's a table all form part of his rounds each day.

"I love the game," he says. And literally hundreds of young folks can attribute their knowledge of the game to some patient rounds with Mr. Chabot where lessons were expertly camouflaged by the former champion.

"You know, I have never been caught up in a quarrel or worse - not even once through the years," he says. "But I never played for money either,"he adds, stating that's where most of the arguments get started.

"You know, when you spend a lifetime staying in hotels and rented rooms, a fellow has to find some way to pass the time. I never drank nor played other sports. And most hotels have a bar equipped with a pool table. So that's where I find the physical and intellectual stimulation I need to relax and enjoy life."

For the past fifteen years the Richmond region has grown accustomed to seeing this gentleman turn up day after day wherever there's a pool table and a few friends waiting for a game or two.

We found him at one of his favorite haunts, the Brasserie Richmond. "I like it here," he laughed. "There are lots of young people travelling in and out who will play a game with me. I love to asses their ability and although I wouldn't say this to anyone else, I like to encourage them with a few wins."

"This is my life and I have lots of friends and friendly competitors too," Mr. Chabot said with a twinkle in his eye.

Patronage:

The oldest political profession

By Eric Siblin

The Spoils of Power: The Politics of Patronage by Jeffrey Simpson (Collins) - $27.95 (hardcover) -

Louis H. Lafontaine, government leader of the United Province of Canada in the 1840s, reportedly spent every day of his mandate selecting from an endless torrent of favour-seekers a long list of judges, militia captains, potash inspectors, and the like. When Brian Mulroney took power in 1984, the Conservatives simply plugged a data base into government computers which would blip out a detailed breakdown of 3500 positions coming vacant.

Patronage has come a long way since the time of Lafontaine, when politicians could speak the word without a shred of shame. More recently, it's become a shadow concept periodically thrown into relief by an orgy of appointments. Every now and then an otherwise respectable politician goes out on the town spending public pesos like a hosed sailor, mixing with cronies, contacts, and contractors, only to wind up splashed across the morning papers.

THE POLITICS OF PATRONAGE

In Spoils of Power: The Politics of Patronage, Jeffrey Simpson pulls Canadian patronage from the shadows. Simpson, The Globe & Mail's Ottawa columnist, is one of the country's most sober political scribblers. Like some Prairie puritan he looks far and wide for patronage, and low and behold, finds it everywhere.

But Simpson is no moralist. "Patronage," he writes, "by offering benefits to people in all regions, has helped to steer Canada away from politics based on race, religion, or region, which would have led to unstable coalition governments."

Beginning with the Conquest, when Canada itself was the spoils of power, Simpson skillfully threads patronage through the course of Canadian history. The genius of John A. Macdonald, for example, lay in his ability to cobble a motley group of men from disparate communities into a solid political party. This he did with the trusty glue of patronage. "The allure of patronage," notes Simpson, "enticed men into politics; its dispensation strengthened their loyalty."

World War One proved a trying time for such nation-building, not because civilization was committing suicide, but because of the advent of a politically neutral civil service. The Civil Service Act of 1917 managed to establish merit as the main criterion for civil service appointments. But the reform came at a time of burgeoning provincial power. With constitutional responsibilities for highways, resource development, and social legislation, the provinces woke up to find hordes of job-seekers and contractors knocking on their doors.

PARTY FAITHFUL CLAMOURED FOR SPOILS

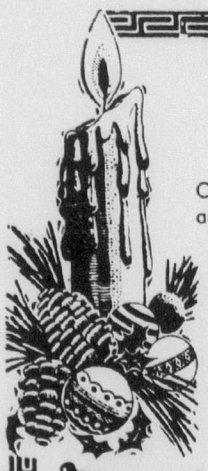
Thus begins a dreary chronicle in the provinces of porkbarrelling, tollgating, kickbacks, and treating (the purchasing of votes for alcohol). Newly-elected governments of every stripe are regularly besieged by the party faithful clamouring for spoils. In general, ethical standards improve moving westwards across the nation: what has been standard fare in the Maritimes would have been chased out of town on the Prairies. When the reader finally makes his or her way across the country, with Simpson tediously devoting a separate chapter to each province in westward order, it is with the relief of a weary traveller impatient for Vancouver.

The influence of admen, pollstars, and television in the 1960s enabled political leaders to communicate directly with voters and paved the way for a new kind of political participation. The Trudeau and Mulroney years have seen the "psychic patronage" of personality and ideas replace material patronage as the prime mover of public participation.

Increased reform and bureaucratization have further limited patronage possibilities to all but the political elites, and Simpson refers to a gap opening up between these elites and the rest of the populace. With less possibilities for patronage, Canadians have become less tolerant of it.

Yet Simpson argues that patronage should not be excised from the body politic, just exercised more constructively. It is a failing of an otherwise discerning book that he doesn't explain exactly how the spoils system might be put to good use.

In the meantime, government computers are notifying the Conservatives of dozens of patronage appointments coming vacant, from the Freshwater Fish Marketing Board to the CBC, and the shady possibilities for rewarding political friendship.



Season's Greetings to all

Our thanks to all our clientele for their patronage in 1988 and a warm welcome in 1989.

Guerilla television for teens

A CBC Pilot - pilot 1

By David Lang

VANCOUVER (CP) — Break out the flak jackets and the camouflage pants — guerrilla TV for teens is coming to the CBC.

It's a new show called pilot 1, aimed at teenagers 15 to 18 and designed to look more like a rock video than a television program.

"It's guerrilla television if you will; it's raw," said producer David Marsden.

He promises a free-flowing show that jumps from a blast of music to a jolt of comedy to a whisper of gossip in no particular order.

Pilot 1 premiers Friday, Jan. 13 at 11:30 p.m., taking over the slot held by Good Rockin' Tonight. GRT moves to Thursday nights.

Nothing about pilot 1 fits the traditional CBC mold. Its five hosts have little or no television experience — one used to be a waitress and another delivered pizzas. Three of the writers are 18.

The show will be shot in a mock-up of a dingy warehouse and audience members will be allowed to wander the set during shooting.

"It's about young people talking to other young people and using our show to do it," Marsden said in an interview in Vancouver, where pilot 1 will be produced.

"It's about everything of interest to people who are between the ages of 15 and 18," said Marsden, who is in his 40s but refused to give his age.

Marsden has been this route before, starring in his own CBC pop music show called Music Hop in the 1960s. He's also worked extensively in radio, creating CFNY-FM in Brampton, Ont.

NEW WAVE

But he said the music on pilot 1 won't necessarily be Top 40.

"We're talking here about the musicians who are just starting to break through, the young musicians who deserve ... the opportunity to be seen on network television," Marsden explained.

There will also be comedy sketches, news of interest to teens, celebrity interviews, and "streeters" where teenagers in cities across Canada will be asked questions on topics ranging from movies to sex.

Speaking of sex, Toronto-based sex expert Sue Johansen will also appear on the show offering tips for teens in a piece called Sex With Sue.

In his effort to give pilot 1 its "raw" look, Marsden ran newspaper ads seeking "gutsy, iconoclastic, extroverted" people to serve as hosts. He ended up interviewing 650 applicants.

Among those finally selected was Karen Campbell, 20, a blonde green-eyed Brigitte Nielsen lookalike who recently gave up a career in high fashion modelling.

"It wasn't challenging enough," Campbell said of the modelling, "How can you improve your picture? I mean you've got a face and so what, it could be in today and out tomorrow."

But she said in an interview that pilot 1 offered the challenge she wanted.

"We're required to perform, to articulate, to use our mind, maybe have to dance on the show, sing, we are expected to be creative."

Stephen Coulson, 23, was delivering pizzas when he heard about the pilot 1 talent call.

"I was attracted to it because I was told I would have an enourmous amount of input within the bounds of good taste ... or outside the bounds of good taste," said the dour Coulson, who was born in Manitoba but raised in Britain. "It's infinitely better (than pizza delivery). You meet a better class of people."

Midnight Caller - hot, new drama

LOS ANGELES — LIKED STYLE

The show was not considered anything special until network executives were suddenly excited by the pilot — a Miami Vice-like hour of dark streets, blue fog, hip music and directorial pyrotechnics.

"The style was very much taken from the content," says executive producer Bob Butler. "I mean — after hours, a little more honesty, a little more directness, a little more desperation in the way people connect, facelessness as a part of why and how they can be honest."

Soon tagged as a "hot" new drama, Midnight Caller can be thought of as a second generation descendant of Miami Vice. It's a lot of flash, but it tries to add some meat.

Killian, styled as urban folk hero, is meant to provide the substance, mostly through wordy confrontations with criminals and his rather sophomoric soliloquys on the radio.

The show, however, is struggling to avoid a psycho-of-the-week formula, as seen during the first two episodes when jilted lonely hearts made murder threats on Killian's show, thus sending him into action.

FORCED CHANGES

The third episode of the series showed signs of improvement, even though the changes were forced by objections from activists in San Francisco.

The controversial episode attempted to put a different spin on a TV AIDS drama by focusing on a bisexual male who knowingly continued to infect his sexual partners. Protesters argued that it simply depicted AIDS carriers as irresponsbile hedonists.

In the original conclusion to the show, the AIDS carrier was given a stock send-off: blown away on the sidewalk by a former bedmate.

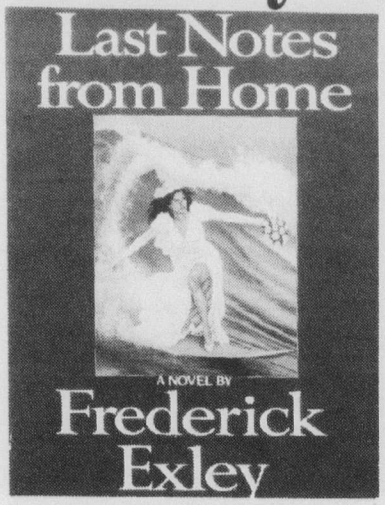
In the rearranged ending, Killian risked his own life to save the man, despite the fact that the man had given the virus to Killian's ex-girlfriend and made her pregnant besides.

The next week, Killian was jumping in front of guns again, this time saving a lover from an implausible situation involving paid assassins.

Each week, in fact, the climax has seen guns pointed or fired, and the fourth episode didn't even have flashy good looks — it was just a string of cliche cop-show situations.

Midnight Caller may have the network's backing now for a full season, but it needs to sharpen up. Like any worth-while action series, it will have to figure out how to be tough without being stupid.

Holiday fare - a good book - new music - a video



Kaleidoscope

By RICHARD LONEY

Last Notes From Home by Frederick Exley (RANDOM HOUSE): $26.75, 397 pp.

When the opening characters of Frederick Exley's Last Notes From Home appeared in Rolling Stone magazine in the mid-seventies it appeared that readers were going to be able to revel in the completion of the trilogy begun by the upstate New York writer with A Fan's Notes.

The second volume, Pages From A Cold Island had followed the experimental nature of Notes, and many years later it appeared that the magazine excerpts signalled that Exley was finally wrapping up his often-hilarious, frequently poignant, but consistently readable autobiographical journeys. Exley's notes and pages move across a broad spectrum of American geography, ranging from Watertown, New York, to the Iowa Writer's Workshop, to the coastal island off Florida that gave the middle book its title. The promised serialization in the rock fanzine suddenly dried up, however, with no indication as to its writer's disposition, until the publishing over a decade later of Last Notes From Home.

INTRODUCING SEAMUS FINBARR O'TWOOMEY

The ribald early chapters are here, perhaps slightly reworked or even expanded, in which Exley (he is the obsessive hero of his own work, while insisting that "Ex" is never to be confused with the book's author) is aboard an American Airlines jet en route to Oahu, Hawaii, to oversee the final days of his older brother's losing struggle against cancer. His admission to the paradaisical islands is disrupted by the intrusion into his solace and desire for privacy by the pushy, raving lunacy of one Seamus Finbarr O'Twoomey, a maniacal Irishman who leads a tour of demanding Irish pilgrims to the tourist islands.

The other distraction for Exley is the ripe presence of the lucious Robin Glenn, a stewardess whose ministerings to the passengers on the flight are made agonizingly difficult by the unreasonable demands of O'Twoomey.

Exley struggles with the unwanted social discourse of O'Twoomey, on the one hand, and a naggingly insistent sexual desire for the delectable Ms. Glenn, on the other, while his narration plumbs the depts of nostalgia about his odd relationship over the years with "The Brigadier", as he calls his career-army-man brother.

Exley enters into spirited dialogues with such figures as marshall Matt Dillon from the television program "Gunsmoke", addressing him as "Matt", or "Big Jim" as he uses him for a sounding board for his reflections. The inevitable death of Exley's brother sends him reeling back through the years to the Watertown of his teen period to attempt to come to terms with the crippling mental burden of having to bury his brother.

In his confessional, rhapsodical autobiographical style, Exley switches from the days of his youth in upstate New York, to the present of the novel, as his arrival in Hawaii leads to the unavoidable task of dealing with the Brigadier's wife and further embroilments with the sexy Robin Glenn and the irascible O'Twoomey.

Past and present are so intertwined in this book that the reader's only guide is the narrator, Exley, himself, whose anguish with the life the Brigadier led in the American army, Vietnam, male/female relations, or family strife, takes him through every human emotion. The emotional rollercoaster-ride of Last Notes From Home makes for gripping, compelling reading, verifying in part at least, the claim that Larry McMurtry made for Frederick Exley being considered "in a rough way, a kind of American Dante".

RECORD REVIEWS
END OF YEAR ODDS 'N' SODS

Does a sequel movie feature retreaded songs on its songtrack? Iron Eagle II (CBS), the Lou Gossett, Jr., aerial spectac, has at least one genuine song to its credit, with newcomer Henry Lee Summer's "If You Were My Girl". Other tunes are sequel-like, such as Doug & The Slugs doing "Tomcat Prowl", a remake of "Gimme Some Lovin'", by the Insiders, and Loverboy refugee Mike Reno on "Chasing the Angels". In the whatever-happened-to category, Rick Springfield attests to his longevity with "I Need You", perfect screen-fill fodder.

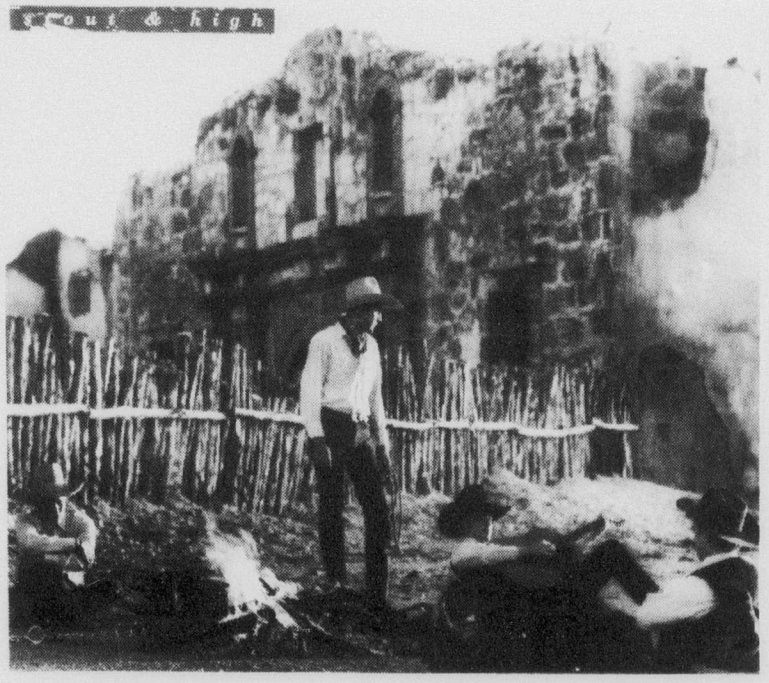
Heaven 17 Teddy Bear, Duke & Psycho (Virgin—A&M) In between machine-gunning drum-machine assaults, these cosmic cowboys prove that you don't have to have a pencil-thin Prince moustache to be terminally hip. Heaven 17 epitomizes the avant-garde British scene which seems to have a penchant for crossing George Michael's sincerity with Madonna's way with a song. The result is a great deal of throwaway eighties rock — heavy on style, bereft of emotional or song content.

The Wagoneers Stout and High (A&M) Progressive country — Jason & The Scorchers and Steve Earle — is one thing, but a Nashville album produced by Motown bassist Emory Gordy, Jr. is a country horse of a different color, pardon the bad pun!



The Wagoneers extend thanks to Buddy, Hank and Elvis, and while those masters of the formative years of rock and country-rockabilly have their stamp all over this record, Emory Gordy filters out the more rustic elements of western music on this laid back album. Sounding a bit like the earliest Buddy Holly recordings that the Lubbock, Texan made with Bob Montgomery, the Wagoneers manage to work in A&M boss Herb Alpert's mariachi trumpet on the vamp of their title track — a challenge to Mexican General Santa Anna shouted from the stout and high walls of the Alamo. The Wagoneers may well start a new trend on one of the classiest labels in the record biz — they represent the first country act ever signed to the Alpert & Moss logo label.

Christopher Cross Back Of My Mind (REPRISE—WEA) If ever Christopher Cross could hope to get back to the absolute groove that he hit with his smash "Sailing", it might be expected to be under the tutelage of keyboard wizard Michael Omartian.

Omartian produces, even co-writes three of Cross's songs, but so far only "Never Stop Believing" has been accorded a modicum of FM attention. Christine McVie's vocals on this track and Michael McDonald's on another, are not enough to float Cross back up to the ethereal regions of earlier hits. Back Of My Mind is comfortable, easy-listening, light rock, but there can only be one or two more near misses before Christopher Cross becomes a permanent depository in the discount cassette bins.

VIDEO SCREENINGS
Masquerade (MGM-UA VIDEO)

Although this little melodrama takes several liberties with the old Double Indemnity (1944) plotline, it becomes almost too clever for its own good — suggesting that the creative team responsible had not quite the advantages of the Billy Wilder film that succeeded thanks to Raymond Chandler's helping to re-shape a James M. Cain story.

Masquerade suffers from a made-for-TV style, and the presence of fresh young faces Meg Tilly and Rob Lowe fails to quite pump enough air into this one to keep it afloat. Tilly plays a fabulously wealthy young heiress in Gatsby country, somewhere in the Hamptons, perhaps, of Long Island, who is set upon by a fortune-hunting Lowe, who is a noted yachting figure.

The movie also has an ugly stepfather angle, in that Tilly's mother was saddled with a swaggering, despicable husband who insists on hanging around the estate long after the mother's demise. The stepfather is killed in suspicious circumstances, and while Lowe and Tilly fall in love, complications arise.

Doug Savant plays the stay-at-home young cop who turns out to have carried a hate for Tilly all through their teenage years, and he brings about some surprising plot twists in this movie about "masquerades". Somehow the glamour of Tilly's 200 million never quite makes an impact on the sets chosen for this movie, and the sudden reversals of plot seem to smack of afternoon soaps, and a redolence of hoakum.

Stronger young actors than the pretty Lowe and the wide-eyed Tilly might have breathed a bit more believability into these characters, but then Barbara Stanwyck, Fred McMurray and Edward G. Robinson were the cast for Billy Wilder's 1944 film, so it must have been the screenplay that made that one work so much more successfully than Masquerade. WHAT'S ON

Notes

By Claudia Villemaire

Today is almost the Dawn of another year. To some that means making resolutions they never keep, to others, a new year means it will take more determination keeping heart anad soul together.

As far as we're concerned, keeping you folks up to date in the entertainment field will be a priority. But don't forget, it's a team effort.

So as we all prepare to usher in the New Year we hope you'll find a bit of entertainment listed on these pages that will help you forget your troubles for a while, whatever your choice.

Happy New Year Eastern Townships folks.

First thing this week will be a bit of radio talk. Sometimes a quiet listen in a cosy chair does lots for the soul and CBC radio and sterio are airing some specials with that in mind.

Saturday, Dec. 31 at 11:30am, while you're wondering what to have for lunch you could give an ear to a program called Double Exposure New Year's Party bringing forecasts and predictions from newsmakers across Canada and abroad.

Then, to help set the mood for 1989, CBC presents, by popular demand, Max Ferguson with some of his favorite music. But you'll have to either see the dawn,(romantically of course,) or get up with the chickens because the Max Ferguson Show airs from 6:05 to 9am. And don't forget the New Year's Messages from the Governor General and Prime Minister at 8:10am, January 1.

CTV begins the holiday weekend with a laugh in My Secret Identity, a half-hour comedy/adventure series starring Derek McGrath and Jerry O'Connell.

On CTVSunday, January 1, The Man in the Brown Suit starring Rue McClanahan, Tony Randall, Edward Woodward and Stephani Zimbalist, is a two-hour mystery movie about a young American tourist looking for adventure and finds more than she can handle. Showtime is 9 to 11 pm.

And of course, the Rose Bowl parade followed by the Rose Bowl football game gets underway at 1:30pm.

On Vermont ETVJanuary 3 The Last Frontier tells the story of John Stoneman and members of the Foundation for Ocean Research observing the world of the coral reef.

On Sunday at 4, Dick Cavett hosts a special comedy of Groucho Marx and Jack Benny called Legends of Laughter.

At 7:30, - From Vienna: The New Year's Celebration 1989 features the music of the Strauss family. Selections include The Acceleration Waltz, The Blue Danube Waltz and Pizzicato Polka.

January 2 at 8 pm, ETV presents the first in a four-part series on four consecutive nights. The Power Game which asks such questions as "who seems to have power in American government?", etc.

On CBC television January 1 promises a full day of entertainment. A highlight is Breaking all the rules - The Creation of Trivial Pursuit at 8 pm.

Breaking All the Rules is about four ordinary guys who had the courage to pursue a dream. Originally telecast last January, the show was highest-rated CBC-TV movie of the season. Over 1.7 million watched and critics raved.

Happy New Year Canada will be heard beginning at 11:30pm on December 31.

Beth Harrington, entertainment reporter for CBC Toronto's News at Six hosts the evenings's celebrations from outside on Parliament Hill where an expected 50,000 revellers traditionally gether to count down the minutes to midnight.

Adding to the fun are Winnipeg-based family pop group Hart Rouge, Montreal rock singer Michael Breen, fire-throwing jugglers Espace Special and the annual shower of fireworks.

And there's another new series of half-hour shows coming too. Beginning Thursday, January 5 at 7:30 Family Pictures presents drama reflecting contemporary family relationships from independent roducers across Canada.

The first is called Cowpunk about a young man returning to the family farm for his grandfather's funeral. Shane turns out in full punk regalia with a strange looking girlfriend and his appearance puts him immediatly at odds with his older brother Stuart who has chosen to carry on the family farm.

For the kids Babar the Elephant is back in a new half-hour animated series.

Thirteen episodes will be telecast beginning Tuesday, January 3 at 7:pm with Cowpunk.

The people at Village Culturel de l'Estrie have sent out an urgent notice to all their subscribers.

Apparently their weekly Bingo, held for the past five years at the Salle Evolution will now be held at the Centre Communautaire de loisir de Sherbrooke, 1010 Fairmount st., Sherbrooke. Game time is 7 pm.

Louis Beaureguard carves old time farm machinery out of wood, all working models done to scale. This former post master at St. Adolphe de Dudswel, (Marbleton) is fairly well known in the Eastern Townships from his many appearances at fairs and exhibitions.

But this week, he'll make national news on the program On the Road AgainLouis Beaureguard shows off a few pieces of his work to Louise Penney, host of CBC-FM's morning show and Martin Stringer, producer and host of Summer Morning last summer. The occasion was the annual Richmond Quebec Farmers Association Farm Day.*

Music

I think most of the serious minded musicians and concert organizers have taken a few days off. We don't seem to have very much in that line for you this week.

There are a couple of things however. Of special interest is the appearance of André Philippe Gagnon at University of Sherbrooke. This world-renowned comic who has carried typical Québecois comedy to stages across the world will be in Sherbrooke January 5, 6, 7 and 8. A call to University of Sherbrooke box office will get you all the details and it would be advisable to hurry as tickets are selling like hotcakes.

Advance notice of an invitation to the Annual Ecumenical Celebration of Epiphany is extended to the population of Sherbrooke and vicinity. Scheduled for Sunday, January 8 at 2 pm, the concert is completely bilingual.The service consists largely of congregational carols led by the choirs of St. Esprit, Plymouth-Trinity, Marie Médiatrice, St. Patrick, Assomption and St. Peter's to name only a few.

Prayers will be offered in a variety of languages by representatives of different ethnic communities of Sherbrooke.

The service is at the St. Esprit Church, 2290 Galt W., in Sherbrooke.

ON THE LIGHTER SIDE

I guess folks tend more to the partyin' side of things for the New Year's festivities judging by the number of notices.

At the Georgian Hotel on Queen street in Lennoxville, making their debut performance for the hotel's New Year's Eve Party is White Wolf. Couldn't be a better chance for folks to get out there and give them encouragement while having a good time.

Then for two Saturdays after, Rocky River Band is back.

The Richmond Branch Quebec Farmers Association are doing it again this year. A grand New Year's Eve Dance at the Community Center in Richmond featuring music by Rodney Bray and The Countrymen is all lined up for your pleasure. These people do it up in style with a Buffet at midnight, and the usual paraphenalia to welcome in the new year. You should enquire about tickets from a RQFAdirector or Marion Coddington, secretary. Dancing starts at 9 and admission is $10.

Richmond town will be echoing New Year's Eve revelry on every corner this year it seems. The Royal Canadian Legion is welcoming members and friends to their party where music will feature Norman Ménard. Normie has been in the business a long time and never fails to entertain with his brand of C&W. The fun begins at 9:30 and Elsie Kerr has all the information you might need - telephone 819-826-3284.

I just happen to know about parties at a couple other places in the area. Bar des Copains, just up Craig st. from Main, is planning a big bash and the Danville

WHAT'S ON

Curling Club where members and friends are invited, is presenting their usual fun time with the music of Country Plus, a buffet and lots of noisemakers other than the 'two-legged' variety.

Down in Lennoxville in another corner of town, The Golden Lion Pub will spotlight The Mick Hall Band starting at 9 pm. There'll be champagne and noisemakers to help folks get in the mood and admission is $3.

Exhibitions/Events

There are few new exhibitions opening this last month of 1988 and many presently underway will continue well into the New Year.

Beaulne Museum continues with their display of classrooms of yesterday for another two months.

The show at Léon Marcotte continues with a Question d'élégance until Jan 10.

Don't forget The Little Prince still playing at Théatre Lac Brome in Knowlton. There's a show every night from Jan. 2 to 8. Tickets may be purchased in advance or at the door. Curtain rises at 8 pm. Admission for adults is $10., students and seniors, $6.50 and children under 12 years, $3.

A presentation of reknowned artist John Hammond, A.R.C. continues until January 15 at the Musée Laurier d'Arthabaska. This is a show "not to miss" - a perfect side trip during a quiet afternoon.

Hours each day Monday to Friday are 9 to 12 and 2 to 5. They will also be closed during the holidays from Dec. 24 to Jan. 6.

Musée des Beaux Arts located on Peel St. continues its fantastic presentation of Eastern Townships art and artists. This combined effort by local museums and collectors represents the scope and quality of art in the Eastern Townships.

Children of employees at Bélanger and Hébert continue their exhibition of art and poetry until Jan. 27 at the gallery at 455 King St. until January 27.

Old Fahsioned Christmases and writings of yesteryear is still the feature at the Memphremagog Library, a fun show to visit and find out what the Eastern Townships were like long ago. The library is located at 61 Merry St., Magog and you can call for information at (819) 843-1330.

A new exhibition begins January 2 at la Galerie d'Art de la Caisse Populaire. Micheline Binette is really a dance instructor at Le Triolet Secondary Highschool in Sherbrooke.

But, like anyone else who leads an active, intense life, Binette sought a hobby that would be creative at the same time as restful.

Painting seemed to be the answer and before long, Binette was devoting most of her leisure hours to art courses and actual painting.

The results are stupendous as the public is about to see. Her natural propensity to observe the minutest detail has enabled her to express artistically and proficiently her observations on canvas.

The exhibition opens January 2 and continues until January 27. The gallery is located at 2 Bowen South in Sherbrooke.

Movies

Good News! The Carrefour de l'Estrie Cinéma will have English movies starting this Friday.

Tequila Sunrise dubbed a sultry romantic thriller starring Mel Gibson, Michelle Pfeiffer and Kurt Russel starts Friday. Showtimes are 12:20, 2:30, 4:40, 7 and 9:20.

The Infinite Voyage — Scientists examine new evidence that is altering prevalent notions about the giant creatures who ruled the earth for milllions of years. Wed. Jnuary 4 at 9 pm.

A second feature is also listed for the coming week - Buster. Featuring the hit songs, A Groovy Kind of Love and Two Hearts, this is a story of warm, quirky love. Phil Collins and Julie Walters are the stars and curtain rises at 3:45, 7:30 and 9:30.

At Cowansville's Princess Cinéma they are holding Twins over another week. Starring Schwarznegger and Devito critics call this film an engaging entertainment with big laughs. Showtime is 7:15 and 9:20 from Friday on. But don't forget, they close New Year's Eve.

At Merrill's Showplace in Newport, the rib-ticklin' Naked Gun stays over for another week. Showtime for this funniest of all spoofs from the creators of Airplane is Friday at 7:20 and 9:10, Saturday at 2:05 and 7:20 and Sunday to Thursday beginning at 7:20 and 9:15.

The Land before Time as well as Hellraiser are also held over another week. The Land Before Time is an unbeatable animated odyssey while Hellraiser provides all the excitement anyone could wish for in a film. Showtimes are Friday at 7 and 8:30. Saturday showtime is 1:45 and 7. Then from Sunday to Thursday curtain rises shortly after 7 and again around 9. The films all begin within five minutes or so of each other so arriving on the hour means a possible wait of 10 or 15 minutes only.

BABAR — The adventures of Babar the Elephant come to CBC television in a new half hour series beginning January 3 at 7 p.m.

CBC's Marc Coté — agricultural commentator won an award for his servces as a ring announcer/ translator at the first annual Beef Cattle Producers Show held recently in Quebec City.

The value of a cruise vacation - mainly satisfaction

NEW YORK — Getting your money's worth is a year-round proposition, so efforts to get the most for the dollar shouldn't take a holiday when it comes to planning a vacation. Hidden or unforeseen expenses can spoil a vacation, a fact that makes the all-inclusive nature of a cruise even more appealing for the value-conscious traveler.

The price of the cruise covers not only accomodations, meals and entertainment, but in most cases includes free or sharply discounted air fare to and from the ship. Add to these such complimentary shipboard features as fitness agendas, recreational activities, enrichment programs and cocktail parties, and the value becomes even greater.

Daily costs for a cruise average $170 to $190 per person, including air fare, with a price range of as little as $135 per day or as much as $2,680. If a seven-day cruise is compared with a typical resort vacation — and all the costs included in the cruise are reasonably budgeted for in the resort vacation — the cruise vacation generally winds up being less expensive. "See the accompanying chart."

Cruise passengers continue to reap dividends of their vacation investment throughout the sailing. Shopping is one of the most popular activities on a cruise because of the opportunities for big savings. Ports of call on many cruises — such as St. Thomas, Nassau, Hong Kong and Singapore — read like a bargain hunter's atlas. Passengers also can count on getting good value on local merchandise — including clothing, china, crystal and art objects — at ports around the world.

Cruise vacationers don't even have to leave the ship to find good buys. Most ships offer competitive prices on such sought-after items as perfume, liquor and jewelry.

The value of a cruise vacation, moreover, is not always expressed in monetary terms. People who value their privacy, for example, usually can find some nook aboard ship where they can catch up on their reading or just gaze dreamily out on the ocean. When ships call on a port, the privacy seekers can head for a secluded beach to spend the day. In addition, several cruise lines cater to the fantasy of living on a deserted island by including a call on a private island in the Carribean or the Bahamas. Passengers can imagine themselves to be Robinson Crusoe, although that luckless sailor didn't have a band, scuba diving equipment and a shipload of food and drink to sustain him.

Cruise vacations also have an appeal for people who value their time and creature comforts. Because the ship serves as their hotel, cruise passengers are spared the hassle of checking in and out of hotels and packing and unpacking when traveling to different destinations. Similarly, after a hard day of sightseeing and exploring, it is rejuvenating to be welcomed aboard the ship by a crew who knows you and is trained to cater to your needs.

The ultimate test of value is whether the person is satisfied, and cruises traditionally have produced the highest vacation satisfaction levels in the travel industry. According to a market study conducted for CLIA, virtually all cruise passengers express satisfaction with their vacation experience. Nearly 50 percent of passengers said they were "extremely satisfied" with their cruise, compared to 25 to 29 percent for other vacation types.

Given all the benefits of a cruise vacation, it may be appropriate to change the adage of "what you see is what you get" to "when at sea, see what you get."

Rome is suffocating in car fumes

By Paul Holmes

ROME (Reuter) — "Rome is rotten to the core," says Italian historian Luigi Firpo, who is not sure the Eternal City can or should be saved.

Firpo, a 73-year-old Republican party member of Italy's parliament, made tempers flare by suggesting the Italian capital is so incapable of tackling its biggest problem — traffic pollution — that the state should cut off funds to restore the city's monuments.

He even recommended moving the capital elsewhere.

Firpo, who comes from the northern city of Turin, was a prime mover behind the defeat of a parliamentary motion to give Rome the equivalent of an extra $181 million Cdn in 1989 and 1990 for restoration work.

"Rome is suffocating in car exhaust fumes," said Firpo. "In a situation like this there is no point carrying out prestigious restoration projects."

SHRUGGED OFF

Firpo's broadside was dismissed as totalitarian by Rome's Mayor Pietro Giubilo and with the literary equivalent of a shrug by the city's leading contemporary novelist, Alberto Moravia.

"Rome has always had the privilege of being a living ruin," Moravia said.

But Firpo's attack may well have struck a chord with restorers. They say they are fighting a losing battle to protect one of civilization's great open air museums from some of the filthiest fumes and most chaotic traffic in Europe.

Experts have been pleading with the city council not to put the gilded bronze equestrian statue of Emperor Marcus Aurelius back in the open after eight years of analysis and restoration. They say the pollution would destroy it.

The 1,800-year-old monument, a symbol of Rome's pride and the only equestrian statue to survive intact from antiquity, had stood since 1538 in the Piazza Campidoglio, the square on the Capitol Hill and seat of city government.

SUGGESTS COPY

"Either we have to learn to look after our environment or science has to come up with a coating that can protect the statue," said Alessandra Melucco Vaccaro, who directed the restoration work. "Until then, it should be kept in a museum."

She has suggested replacing the void in the square with a copy of the statue. Some city politicians are outraged.

"I challenge the affectations of a few cultural mandarins and their contempt for the people," said Gianfranco Redavid, the city councillor responsible for cultural affairs.

"The feelings of the Roman people have to be respected," said the councillor. "Marcus Aurelius must go back to the piazza."

Romans, it might be said, have not always shown the greatest respect for their surfeit of monuments.

USED THE STONE

The Colosseum became an enormous quarry in the 15th century, when huge blocks of its travertine stone were carted off to construct St. Peter's Basilica and other buildings.

Today it stands blackened by exhaust fumes on the edge of one of the city's busiest road junctions.

Other great monuments of imperial Rome, including the Arch of Constantine and the columns of Trajan and Marcus Aurelius, have undergone extensive restoration after acid rain turned much of their marble to plaster.

They are back on display after years under protective green netting. And, around the column of Marcus Aurelius outside the prime minister's office, the cars again are parked at its base.

Adriano La Regina, chief curator of Rome's ancient monuments, has said that unless the environment is cleaned up many of the marble treasures may have to be covered with see-through plastic.

"There would be no need for protection if acid rain was eliminated," he said. "It not only damages the monuments. It also damages Romans' lungs."

The Little Prince, heartwarming and eloquent - plays to capacity crowds at Theatre Lac Brome

by Sharon McCully

KNOWLTON — The afternoon matinée, when the theatre comes alive with the laughter of children, is the best time to catch Dave Clarke's adaptation of Antoine de Saint-Exupery's classic, The Little Prince at Théatre Lac Bromein Knowlton.

The timeless story, which has been playing to large crowds daily since December 26 will continue from January 2 to 8.

Saint Exupery's message intended for children only (grownups wouldn't understand), was delivered with tenderness and eloquence by Emily Feldman in her role as the little prince. Feldman, who recently toured regional schools in Youththeatre's "Krystal Dreams", held her young audience spellbound as she demonstrated "all that is truly essential in life is invisible to the eye". Children joined the fantasy of taming the fox and sheltering the flower the young prince had befriended.

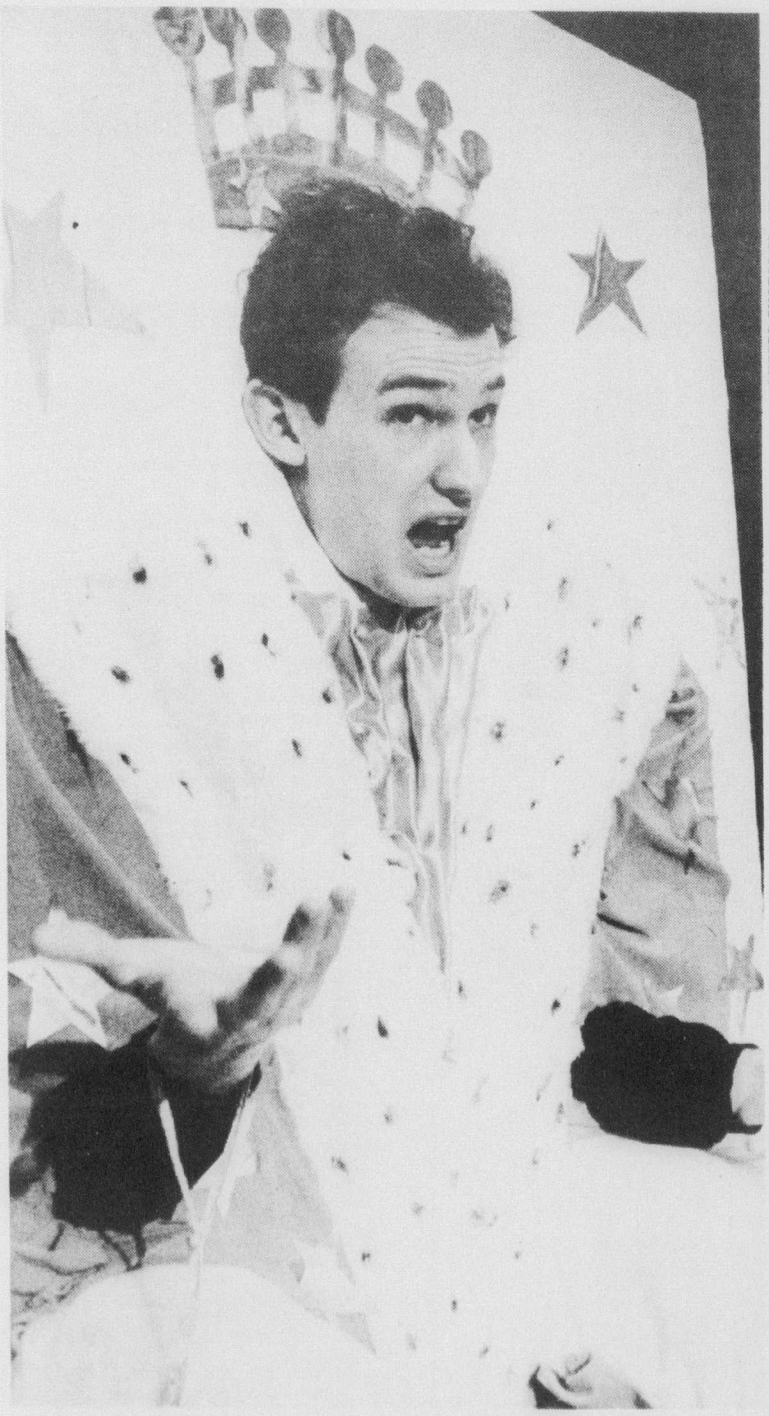
No grownups could be expected to understand the importance of a single rose in a garden or of one shining star in a constellation, the Prince expounded. The Little Prince devotes itself to the importance of each of God's creatures.

The holiday presentation is directed by Eileen Sproule, making her third appearance at Theatre lac Brome. After a hat-trick of successes with the Generic Theatre at last year's Quebec Drama Festival, Sproule will present Waiting for Godbout at the Elysée in January.

Tickets for The Little Prince are available at the door. Matinées begin at 2 daily. Evening performances begin at 8.

RECORD PHOTOS GRANT SIMEON

Emily Feldman and Robert Higden succeed very well in portraying the tenderness and eloquence of the Saint Exupery play, The Little Prince, at Theatre Lac Brome.



Emily Feldman as The Little Prince and Robert Higden, The Pilot, are winning the hearts of young theatre goers as The Little Prince continues during the week of January 2 to 8 at Theatre Lac Brome, Knowlton.

Soap Box UPDATES

Outrageous soap predictions for 1989

By Candace Havens

I decided everybody else does predictions, why not me? So, I got my crystal ball out of the attic and delved into the unknown world of soap predicting. Here are my predictions for the coming year (maybe they're not accurate but at least they're fun).

All My Children: Jeremy and Natalie will be the first soap couple to have triplets. Cecily will finally get rid of Sean and marry Tad. Erica will decide her looks are fading (Ha!) and have a complete overhaul.

Another World: Jamie will wake up and smell the roses! The man has no idea of what's been going on around him the last couple of years.

As the World Turns: James Stenbeck will stay dead the next time a hundred different people try to kill him.

The Bold and the Beautiful: There will be two babies born on the show—one named Barbie, the other Ken.

Days of Our Lives: Patch and Kayla will win a million dollars and donate the money to charity. Eve will have a religious experience and become a nun.

General Hospital: Olivia will come back from near death and become the mayor of Port Charles.

Loving: Hopefully ABC will realize their mistake and take this show off the air instead of Ryan's Hope.

One Life to Live: Bo will find the love of his life, Tina will get a job and hopefully the show will get some new writers.

Santa Barbara: Cruz and Eden will live one week without a life-threatening event hanging over their heads.

The Young and the Restless: Nina will take some nice pills and be the toast-of-the-town. Victor will have a coronary from stress overload, due to too many women in his life.

If I could have one wish for the New Year for the soap opera world it would be that Ryan's Hope would stay on the air.

TINY TRIVIA

Dale Evans' horse was named Buttermilk.

TINY TRIVIA

A Happy Days episode was first seen as a segment of Love American Style.

TINY TRIVIA

When Ronald Reagan was wed to Nancy Davis, his best man was William Holden.

HOROSCOPE

January 1 through January 7

CAPRICORN
(December 22 - January 19)

Self discipline is necessary to meet goals. Be honest in expressing true feelings. Avoid the temptation to spill the beans about another.

AQUARIUS
(January 20 - February 18)

Beauty and romance come to the forefront. An important invitation is probable. Tactfulness will help in obtaining needed information.

PISCES
(February 19 - March 20)

Channel restlessness into productive activities rather than into worry. Completion of projects should take priority. Deja vu is likely.

ARIES
(March 21 - April 19)

Financial status is in question as responsibilities increase. Take a hard look at necessities. Mystery intrigues you; seek answers.

TAURUS
(April 20 - May 20)

Creativity flourishes. New and original methods of accomplishing routine tasks make life easier. A former mentor re-enters your life.

GEMINI
(May 21 - June 20)

Home and family matters consume energies. Redecorating or rearranging are called for. Look toward the future, rather than the past.

CANCER
(June 21 - July 22)

A greater understanding of those around you surfaces. Your special talents and ability to entertain bring joy to others. Focus on health.

LEO
(July 23 - August 22)

Serious commitments are likely. A familiar face returns to your circle of friends. The need to express individuality is intensified.

VIRGO
(August 23 - September 22)

Heed intuitions. Emotional state teeters, indicating a need for time alone. Money picture brightens, but set aside funds for surprises.

LIBRA
(September 23 - October 22)

Individuality is spotlighted. Financial picture comes into clear focus. Travel plans may not take place as expected. A win could come your way.

SCORPIO
(October 23 - November 21)

Increased income is likely. A short, unexpected trip may be necessary. Be persistent in gathering facts to be used further down the road.

SAGITTARIUS
(November 22 - December 21)

Use discipline to improve appearance. Surprise payments are made; an old debt is paid off.

CBS airs Agatha Christie murder mystery

Agatha Christie's The Man in the Brown Suit, a romantic mystery drama about an American woman traveling through Egypt who becomes involved in solving a diamond theft and a murder, airs Wednesday, Jan. 4, on CBS.

Stephanie Zimbalist stars as Anne Beddington, an American tourist vacationing in Egypt with her girlfriend and desperately searching for adventure. She finds mystery as well as adventure when she witnesses an accident that she believes is a crime. When she spots a strange "man in a brown suit" (Simon Dutton) fleeing from the scene, she decides to follow him.

A piece of paper dropped by the man in the suit leads Anne to a cruise ship and a venture with an odd cast of characters, beginning with a much-married jetsetter (Rue McClanahan) who joins her as a sleuthing partner; a seemingly foolish, rich Englishman (Edward Woodward); his sinister secretary (Nickolas Grace); an impersonator and master of disguise (Tony Randall); and a mysterious American CIA agent (Ken Howard).

When Anne eventually catches up with the "man in the brown suit," she finds that her "adventure" has put her life in danger.

Agatha Christie's internationally popular murder mystery novels have sold more than 500 million copies in more than 20 languages. The Man in the Brown Suit marks the eighth Christie novel filmed by Warner Bros. Television and broadcast on CBS.

Former child star presides at 100th Rose Parade

Shirley Temple Black is Grand Marshal

By Chad Andrews

It will be a repeat performance for former child star Shirley Temple Black when she presides as Grand Marshal of the 100th Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena, Calif., Monday, Jan. 2, 1989. The parade will air live on all three major networks.

Black, who presided over the 50th Rose Parade as Grand Marshal in 1939, recalled practicing as a child to perfect her Rose Parade wave. "It's not often," she said, "that one gets to repeat a highlight of one's life. It's a great honor and a great thrill."

One of the most popular Hollywood performers of all time, Black starred in such films of the 1930s and '40s as Little Miss Marker, Bright Eyes, The Little Colonel, Curly Top, The Littlest Rebel, The Bachelor and the Bobby-Soxer and Wee Willie Winkie.

Black began dancing at age 2 and was "discovered" by a movie agent while at dancing school. She appeared in a series of one-reel comedies called Baby Burlesk when she was 3. Then Fox studios cast her in a full-length musical, Stand Up and Cheer, and her show-stopping song-and-dance number, "Baby Take a Bow," launched her into immediate stardom.

In 1935 she received a special Oscar for "outstanding contribution to screen entertainment during the year 1934." From 1935 to 1938 she remained the nation's top box-office star, reportedly making over $300,000. Before entering her teens she had earned more than $5 million from her movies and profits from Shirley Temple products.

Although her childhood was far from average, she doesn't believe she's suffered any ill effects from it. "I've certainly never been at a disadvantage because of my childhood," she said. "I sometimes say that little Shirley Temple opens doors for me, but if Shirley Temple Black can't produce, then the doors will close."

Black's life in public work has provided her with a wealth of opportunities. As wife of businessman Charles Black, she began to direct her energies toward charity work and politics. In 1969 President Richard Nixon appointed her as a delegate to the United Nations.

During the Ford administration, she served as Chief of Protocol (she was the first woman in 200 years to hold this position) and was appointed ambassador to the Republic of Ghana. "That was my best experience in politics," she said. "The Ghanaians are wonderful people. It was a very exciting job!"

Black is currently a Foreign Affairs Officer Expert who trains first-time ambassadors, and she is proud of her political career. "My whole life I've served my country when asked," she said.

Temple's recently released autobiography, Child Star, which was written without a ghostwriter, tells the story of her life through 1953. "It took me years to write, but it's mine," she said. "There have been about 12 books written about me, but most of them have been warmed-over, third-hand material based on the thousands of interviews I've given. I'm proud of my life. It's fabulous and I thought I'd better share it. The only one who really knows the story is me."

007 takes 'A View to a Kill' to heart

The name is Bond. James Bond. The movie is A View to a Kill. The date is Sunday, Jan. 1, on ABC.

Roger Moore is Bond, who is pitted against a Nazi-bred supermonster (Christopher Walken) who intends to destroy Silicon Valley and corner the world market in microchips.

In typical Ian Fleming fashion, Bond manages to extricate himself from danger and dodge at least a dozen attempts on his life. That, of course, is at least half the fun of a Bond flick. But it may not be so much fun for Roger Moore.

"They're (the special effects experts) always saying, 'Don't worry, you'll be safe.' And I look over and they're either hiding behind steel shields or way out in a boat somewhere," Moore said. "The only time I can trust being safe is in the middle of the picture.

"During the first two weeks, they can always collect the insurance and won't have to make the bloody picture. During the last two weeks, they have enough in the can to finish without you, and it would be great publicity—'Bond Killed!'"

Obviously, the special effects people weren't really trying to kill him, though. Moore made seven Bond films, including A View to a Kill—and lived to tell about it.
