AUCTION OF ART

Museum president Michel Joncas, auctioneer Igor de St-Hippolyte, Honorary president and La Presse cartoonist Serge Chapleau and proud highest-bidder Jean-Guy Lussier participated in a fundraising auction that raised $14,000 for the Sherbrooke Museum of Fine Arts Tuesday night. Lussier's cartoon started out being a OUI-not popular; became a well-known ex-politician's wife-nude-very popular and ended up being Jean Drapeau, which drew howls of delight. Many local artists such as Monique Voyer, Jeannine Bourret, Joyce Schwitzer-Cochrane and Louis Muhlstock contributed works to the project. - Perry Beaton.

Poetic verse courtesy of Lady Fan

Not marble, nor the gilded monuments of princes, shall outlive this powerful rhyme. - Shakespeare

Among the treasures in my bookcase is a fragile copy of Song's of Sherbrooke by Lady Fan, published by Page-Sangster in 1932. The cover is gone, the binding has crumbled away, and the yellowed pages are kept together by a rubber band. But on the flyleaf is a dedicatory poem in her own hand dated "Braeside, Scotstown, Oct. 23rd, 1933. Nobody else has that verse."

WHO'S WHO

TADEUSZ LETARTE

It begins:

Dear Mrs. Bowman
When we went roamin'
(Margaret Smith and I)
Out Victoria way, the other day
(To walk off effects of pie)

Lady Fan, the pen-name of Anne Merrill, wrote gay and sprightly verses almost everyday for the Sherbrooke Daily Record in the early 30s.

"Our first attempt at nonsense verse," she wrote, "was made when we were on the staff of the Toronto Mail and Empire and appeared under the title 'Lady Fan's Weakly Verse.'" She had been London correspondent to several Canadian papers during the First World War and her occasional verses could take on a bite as when the Quebec legislature turned down another proposal to give women the vote. She called it Belanger Cant:

So, dear women, if you're wise
You will cease to cast your eyes
Towards modernity,
For in spite of Dr. Plante
You're victims of Belanger cant
On maternity

Here's the burden of the song
Belanger chanted loud and long
(While the feminists in gallery Waxed indignant at his raillery)

"We would make you Queen of home,
Never let you from us roam,
And adore you if you do
Everything we tell you to
By the home and fireside
It should be your happy pride
To have children by the score,
Then we'd love you more and more."

Now that alone would have been worth a subscription to the Sherbrooke Daily Record.

Talk of the Townships

A lovely Valentine's Day

Lots of chocolate for me to eat...

Well, it's that time of the year again. And believe me, people, I'd better see some Hallmark cards flooding my mailbox for Valentine's Day.

LINDA'S PLAYGROUND

GALEAZZI

Nah, I'm just joking. Those of us with children are always blessed with a steady stream of homemade Valentine's Day cards and, of course, those are the best ones anyone can receive anyway. My daughter already brought home a beautiful red construction paper heart outlined with styrofoam cut-outs and a big "I love you" scrawled across the center. Sweet doesn't even begin to describe it.

And soon my son will bring home his Valentine's Day creation from the daycare. I'll bet any money his card will feature a skeleton and a Tyrannosaurus Rex on the front of it; maybe a few fossil bones and a monster to give it that personal touch.

But apart from the genuine warming of the heart I get from my kids giving me their creations, Valentine's Day is one "special occasion" that I devote very little energy to.

To be perfectly honest, it's a throw-away. Sure it's nice to have one day a year set aside to boldly let those we care about know just how much we care, and I always like the window displays that pop up at this time of year - much better than the gaudy black-and-orange that prevails during Hallowe'en - but it's not one of those occasions that I mark off on my calendar and anticipate weeks ahead of time.

There are a few problems with Valentine's Day that I believe will never allow it to rank up there with the biggies, like Christmas, Thanksgiving and Easter.

For one thing, Valentine's Day doesn't exactly warrant a supper of turkey, mashed potatoes and cranberry sauce. It just isn't a 'Great Food Occasion'. Tonight, I'm throwing a shepherd's pie in the oven or maybe make some spaghetti and garlic toast, and I won't feel the least bit guilty about the no-frills meal I'll serve my kids.

Another problem is that Valentine's Day is hardly the kind of occasion where it's worth calling up family and friends from far away to tell them how much you care. On Christmas Day, we call absent loved ones and get all cocky about how much the phone call costs - "Hey, I don't care if we've been talking for an hour and I don't care how much this call is going to cost me. It's Christmas Day, for Pete's sake!"

Do you really think you'd do that on Valentine's Day? No way. More than likely, you'd be constantly reminding the person you called how time is money and this call is costing you a fortune - "Come on, come on, this is 15 cents a minute. Just give me a brief synopsis of what's up in your life so I can hang up. Whaddya think, it's Christmas or something?"

Another problem is that Valentine's Day isn't really a day that warrants a major dressing-up, unless you're willing to parade through town in a red silk teddy or wear those heart-covered boxer shorts on the outside of your pants. It's just too nippy out there, people. There's nothing about this day that compels me to wear anything but my usual jeans and demin shirt.

So all of this makes me wonder exactly why I even bother with Valentine's Day.

If I can't defrost a ham for the occasion without making it look like overkill; if I can't use this day as an excuse to run up my phone bill and spend hours talking to my brother in Vancouver; if I can't even get dressed in fancy-shmancy clothes, then why bother?

Because Valentine's Day has the one element that other occasions are missing, something so crucial, so important that it almost makes this day worthwhile.

Chocolate. And lots of it.

Yes, Valentine's Day is the one day of the year when we all are permitted to eat as much chocolate as we please, and those around us are almost willing to forgive us for stuffing 20 Hershey's Kisses into our mouths and having the box of Laura Secord chocolate-covered almonds open and ready to go as soon as the Kisses have been swallowed.

That, my friends, is this occasion's only saving grace. So pass the heart-shaped box over here and let's revel in the calories we can pile on with a relatively guilt-free conscience.

Happy Valentine's Day!

Singer Bob Drew has melody on his mind

Find out who I am and do it my way." These are lyrics from a song written by singer Bob Drew. The words exemplify his philosophy of life, his passionate nature and strong desire to be self-made.

Drew has a clear definition of what a country song is all about.

"If it's good, you will relive the emotions which inspired the song every time you sing it," he said.

This Gemini was born in Ladd's Mills, part of a family of four children. Ladd's Mills is a small community named after his grandmother's family on his father's side. It's located between Coaticook and Baldwin's Mills.

When Bob was very young, the family had a piano in the house, like many families during that time, but no one besides him was intrigued by the black-and-white keys. The only musical influence from young Bob's family was his father, a banjo player with a local band.

By the time he turned 13, Drew had made up his mind that he wanted a guitar.

"Mom and Dad went on a holiday and came back with one. I was jumping with joy and I can still remember it being dark brown and beige," he recalled.

Drew grew up listening to various types of music, but country was his favorite.

"Buck Owens and his Buckaroos were very popular at the house so I ordered out a book on how to play the guitar, written by Buck himself," Drew said of his idol.

It was from this book that Drew learned how to play guitar.

After extensive practice, he entered a talent show in Ayer's Cliff.

"I came in second with a song I had written called 'Shiny Red Car', but it's funny when I think about it," said Drew. "I had never owned a red car in my life."

His first band was the Dixville Travellers.

"We didn't travel too far and it didn't last too long," he said. "I guess I was too immature with not enough experience under my belt."

"Then I played with (a group called) Sundown in which I handled the vocals, played steel guitar, and piano. The guitar was an old 'Show Bud'. I wasn't too bad on the piano. I learned a lot watching John Foster. He was a great musician," remembered Drew, whose voice has a startling resemblance to Neil Young's.

At one point in his career, Drew also experimented with the fiddle, though he points out he "never achieved anything in that department."

Being lead singer of Rocky River Band is what has left the biggest impression on Drew's life. "I think that Rocky River Band was very ahead of its time," he said.

Drew and Rocky River have been together in good times and bad for the better part of 15 years. Drew remembers a time when the group missed a booking at the renowned Hose Shoe Tavern in Toronto.

"One of the guys had to back out for personal reasons, so we had to let go of that contract. We had an agent who wanted to change my look and a few things with the band," he said. "When you're young, I guess your understanding of the business is not as good and you're more stubborn; you want things done your way or not at all."

Being himself means a lot to the country singer.

"I'm a homebody, down-to-earth. I'm also a romantic, sensitive guy. All of this put together is what probably stopped me from pushing my career too its limit. I don't think I would be happy on the road all the time. I love being at home so much."

To date, Drew has written more than 50 songs, about 15 of which are staples at his shows. Drew sings about a variety of topics, including women, love, family, playing music and smoky bars. And he's not afraid to put his emotions into words.

Drew always has a melody in a corner of his mind just waiting for lyrics. His latest work is a beautiful love song titled "I'll Always Remember You" and it's as good as any of the chart-toppers that have come over the radio.

COUNTRY COLLECTIBLE NO. 2

Radney Foster

Foster's first solo album, Del Rio, TX 1959, was a hit with such chart-toppers as "Nobody Wins," "Just Call Me Lonesome" and "Easier Said Than Done." This singer-songwriter is often referred to as the "preppie" of country music because of his conservative good looks. His new album is set for an early spring release.

Cover Story

Chantal Angers on the passion of painting

'It's like leaving your footprints in the sand'

By Kathy Mercier
RECORD CORRESPONDENT
ST-ELIE-D'ORFORD

Subtle, warm earth tones combined with bold brushstrokes. Precious, gentle women draped in flowing dresses. Chantal Angers's work appears at first glance to be delicate and fluid, but upon closer inspection, it shows excitement, spontaneity and perhaps even a little danger.

Born in the Victoriaville area, Angers remembers art and drawing always being important to her.

"I always drew," she said. "As far as I can remember, I was always drawing."

Angers's interest in high school art classes evolved to more dedicated CEGEP art studies in Ste-Foy, then a BAC at the Université du Québec à Trois Rivières. From there, she went on to become a high school art teacher, sharing her love of art with students at the Polyvalente de Victoriaville and finally at the Séminaire de Sherbrooke.

EVOLUTION

Angers devotes most of her time to her art these days and she finds her work evolving.

Her earlier pieces were drawn with black and white ink, crayon, and charcoal. Later pieces included watercolors collaged with photographs. More recent representations have utilized a variety of mixed medium.

"I want to use mixed medium without drawing attention to it," she said. "I want it to melt into the work. I like to play with texture, and explore with it, because it is easy not to have it in a watercolor."

She traces her interest in using mixed media to her university days.

"Mixed media was very popular then. I found it was something that I always liked to play with. I need a medium that is transparent, and fast in its execution. I also love paper. I'm very sensitive to the texture of paper," she said.

Watercolors allow Angers to control the texture and fluidity of her paint. Working vertically with these watercolors, a combination that does not always satisfy artists, forces her to work even more quickly and instinctively.

"My work is very subjective and spontaneous, guided by my imagination. I might work around themes, but I don't know what the final product will be in advance."

Her free-spirited style does not mean that Angers's standards are lower than other artists. Beneath the work table in her cozy basement studio rests a pile of uncompleted work that has been discarded. Some of the pieces appear to be finished. Others are in an obvious state of incompleteness.

"I'm very difficult," she said. "I don't permit things on the painting that I don't like, so I throw out a lot of things and redo them."

This way, she is assured that an exhibited work is a work she is satisfied and proud of.

"I have to like my paintings," she said. An almost constant in Angers's work is the depiction of women, most often in medieval-like attire.

"I've always painted women," she said. "I don't know why.... My women are very mysterious. I don't know their mystery, but I certainly find myself and my emotions in them. My subjects seem to have a spirit in them."

Angers said there is one painting in particular, Mission, which touched her so much she was reluctant to sell it.

"There is something about that painting that moves me," she said, although she can't quite put her finger on it.

When not painting luminous women, Angers paints birds and other feathered friends, such as geese and ducks, in tranquil settings.

"I'm a country girl. I was raised in the country. I guess I'm leaving a large avenue open for birds of a feather."

Angers shows a penchant for warm, golden earth tones in her works, and she also likes to play with light.

"I like a series of earth colors. Now I find I am using more color," she said. "I like working more with light, so I work with a very simple palette."

These colors include blues and greens, gently blended in with rich browns. She is also showing more detail in her backgrounds. For her, it is important that "the composition treats the subject as much as possible, taking out the superficial and focusing on the subject. The background is only suggested."

Adding character to Angers's watercolors are the visible brushstrokes and texture of paint, both not often seen in watercolors.

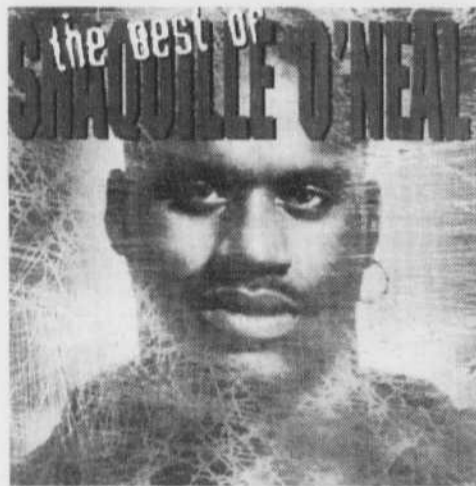

"I want people to see my paintbrush," she said. "There is emotion that passes through the brush. It (the painting) becomes more animated.... Brushstrokes vary with mood. It's like leaving your footprints in the sand."

Though she continues to paint women and geese, Angers is now painting works depicting European architecture.

"Europe is beautiful," she said. "I want to do some work on the architecture of Italy."

Angers is currently preparing for a spring exhibit at the Beaulne Museum in Coaticook, which will feature about 20 of her works.

A diversity of sounds From Shaquille to Chasse Galerie

Shaquille O'Neal: The Best of Shaquille O'Neal (five)

My jaw almost fell to my Nikes when this CD fell into my hands.

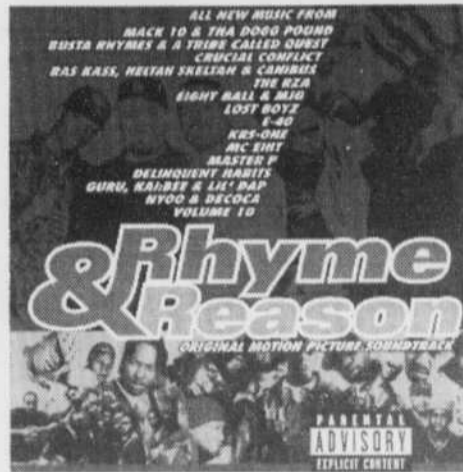

"The Best of Shaquille O'Neal" was as much of a shock to me as was Kris Kross' greatest hits. Hey guys, here's a little hint for you. You have to have more than two songs released before you can have a greatest hits album! And said album cannot/should not contain several remixes of the same hit which are counted as more greatest hits; It's the same song! After my initial apprehension, I did give this CD a listen and I was pretty indifferent afterwards.

Shaquille is a great basketball player, and a decent rapper, but by no means does he deserve a greatest hits album. Especially since he only raps one quarter of the songs himself. For eight of the 12 songs, he has guest rappers, among them Erick Sermon and Redman, Def Jef, Ill Al Scratch and Method Man to name a few, who rap more than O'Neal does.

The songs themselves are good raps, and the guests make some of them worth listening too, but on the whole I don't really recommend it to rap fans, as you could definitely use the $16 more than Shaq could. If you are a die hard rap fan or Shaq fan, then go nuts, but otherwise, you can skip this self glorifying effort from O'Neal.

Various Artists: Rhyme and Reason Original Soundtrack (Priority Records)

At last, a rap compilation that I enjoyed from start to finish.

Unlike many rap CDs which include songs that have no business on any label, "Rhyme and Reason" is a great collection of true gangsta raps. Starting off with Mack 10 and Tha Dogg Pound, through Tribe Called Quest, to the grand-daddy of rap KRS-ONE, this CD is full of old school rappers and lots of new up-and-comers. I have no clue what the movie "Rhyme and Reason" is about, but if it is anything like the soundtrack then I'm waiting in line for tickets on opening night. Mack 10 and Tha Dogg Pound's "Nothin' But the Cavi Hit" and Eight Ball and MJG's "Reason for Rhyme" are two of the best songs on the soundtrack, and they all deserve a shout out. Co-executive producers of the soundtrack Andrew Shack and Happy Walters deserve a big thank you for putting together such an excellent soundtrack.

This is a definite pick up for any rap fan as it would make the best addition to any collection. Hurry to your local record shop today!

Matt McCarney

it vaults over the language barrier.

Chasse-Galerie is a five-piece, traditional folk band, accompanied by a passel of guests. Of the 23 tracks on the album, six are instrumentals; these and the vocal tracks are a hybrid of Celtic and what you might call "farmers' folk": The music you would have heard on homesteads over a century ago.

The lyrics become secondary to the tone and enthusiasm of the songs.

I found myself listening to this album over and over, not getting all of the words, but enjoying it immensely nonetheless. The band does a marvellous job of recreating an authentic sound; rather than trying to mesh modern rock sensibilities with traditional music a la Ashley MacIsaac, or adapt classic Celt instruments to a different sound like Spirit Of The West, they put a great deal of effort and love into pulling the real music up through the centuries and onto the disc.

The net result is something that is historically accurate and immensely uplifting, lifting you from the screeching wail of today's rock and tossing you back to the happier sounds of the sugar shack, the farm and the town dances of yore.

Highest recommendations to any fans of folk, Celtic, or traditional music. Bilingualism is not required - once again, it has been proven that good music is a language all its own.

ELVIS SIGHTING

Elvis: Incognito reveals the many facets of two-time World Champion and Olympic medalist Elvis Stojko. The dynamic hour-long special airs Sunday, Feb. 16, at 8 p.m. on CBC. Elvis, of course, is the skater the world is watching. He's an exciting athlete who also happens to hold a black belt in karate and who is setting the standards others try to match. Stojko's first CBC-TV special is a showcase for one of the most unique and charismatic talents on the ice today. The show's dazzling opening number challenges viewers to find the real Elvis among a host of impersonators. As his personality reveals itself, the special moves from a rehearsal at his practice arena to a spectacular rock & roll challenge with guest Brian Orser, just one of the surprise personalities joining Stojko in his special.

YARMUSH ON ABC

Knowlton resident Michael Yarmush stars with Academy-Award winning actress Meryl Streep in the ABC-TV movie First Do No Harm airing this Sunday at 9 p.m. The 14-year-old actor plays the older brother of a young boy suffering from epilepsy. When the boy becomes immune to the various medications prescribed, his frustrated father tries a controversial treatment known as a Ketogenic diet, in which the victim combines periods of fasting with intakes of fatty foods.

HAAAIR'S KRAMER!

The zany Michael Richards stars as Kramer, TV's most loveable, spaced-out next-door neighbor on the hit comedy Seinfeld. As one of comedian Jerry Seinfeld's friends, Kramer has an unparalleled way of looking at the world. New episodes of Seinfeld air on NBC and CTV Thursdays at 9 p.m.
