NEW PROPOSITIONS AT PEACE CONFERENCE

Almost Every Country Represented Had One

MOST IMPORTANT MOTION

Was One in Regard to a Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague—Conference will Close in August.

The Hague, July 8.—A score of new propositions were introduced to-day for the consideration of the conference, and almost every country represented, including Hayti, had one. Many of them can, however, be grouped together and this will shorten the work of the conference, which is expected to come to a close the end of August.

One of the most important proposals made to-day was that brought forward by the American delegation regarding the permanent court of arbitration at The Hague. This outlines the organization and procedure of the court on a basis resembling that of the supreme court of the United States.

Prince Yi Tying Chi, head of the Korean delegation, which was refused recognition, delivered a lecture to-night before the International Peace Club, W. T. Stead presided. He strongly stigmatized the cruelties practiced by the Japanese in the occupation of Korea. The club unanimously voted a resolution of profound sympathy with Korea. The club also expressed the hope that a tribunal soon would be established, hearing of such cases as that of Korea.

Baroness Bertha von Suttner, the well known Austrian peace worker, advised the Koreans not to go to the United States at the present time, saying their presence there would add to the anti-Japanese chauvinism and do nothing for the cause of justice and peace.

A FLIM-FLAM GAME

St. Catharines, July 8.—A slippery customer visited the city on Thursday and endeavored to work a bogus cheque game upon several merchants. The first place he visited was Charles Logan's furniture store, where he tendered a cheque for $468 in payment for $132 worth of furniture purchased. He did not get away with the game, however, as Mr. Logan was suspicious and refused to accept the cheque. The stores of Andrew Foster, John W. Timmons, and Roath and Fuminger were also visited, with the same, or similar motives, but in no case did the game come out as anticipated. At the post office he approached the stamp wicket and asked the young lady if she could give him a $20 bill or $20 in bills. She replied that she had a $10 and two $5 bills, and he emptied his pocket, saying that would do. Fifteen dollars was found all right and taken by the young lady, but upon counting over the balance $5 was found to be only $4.75. In the meantime he had asked her to put it in an envelope and seal it. The young lady then turned to wait upon other customers, and later returned to him and told him of the shortage, to which he replied: "Oh, she must have given me the wrong change." He then handed her the envelope, promising to go and get the correct change, and she, supposing it to be the original $20, put it in the cash drawer. Suspicion that all was not right occurred to her this morning, and upon opening the envelope it was found to contain a blank paper. The man registered at the Russell as B. Graham, of Toronto, and cheques tendered merchant were drawn on the Bank of Toronto, payable at Toronto. The story told was that he was taking 200 bronchitis from Chicago to Calgary, and supplies were purchased to be taken to-day. The man paid the bill of the Russell and departed on a trolley car for the Falls.

THE HAYWOOD TRIAL

Time Yesterday was Taken Up with Reading Depositions.

Boise, Idaho, July 8.—Part of the San Francisco depositions dealing with the Bradley explosion were read to-day to the jury that is trying Wm. D. Haywood on the charge that he murdered Frank Steunberger. The rest of the depositions will be presented to-morrow. The reading began directly after court opened with Clarence Darrow and Senator Borah alternating for their respective sides, and, although they read as fast as they could, a folio calculation at adjournment this evening showed that much of to-morrow would be consumed by the affidavits. The depositions have an important bearing on the case. Both sides seemed to be satisfied with the showing made by them and their content will probably furnish much material for contention when the trial reaches the argument stage.

The state counted it a victory that Bradley receded from his first and positive statement that it was a gas explosion and was prepared to believe that a bomb might have been used. Bradley's first statement was made before he knew of Orchard's confession or any of the evidence placing Orchard in the vicinity of the house. The prosecution was also pleased to have it shown that Whyte Bradley was still inside the door when the explosion occurred and that particles of glass from the door, fibres from the rug outside the door and pieces of stone and cement from the mosaic floor of the vestibule were blown into his face and body. It would be contended that this shows conclusively that the explosion was from the outside and it could not have been gas from the inside of the house.

The defense on the other hand is satisfied that the depositions show that it would have been impossible for Orchard to reach the vestibule and place the bomb in the manner and time described by him; that the evidence shows that a gas leak was the cause of an explosion and that Orchard's testimony as to his movements in the rear of the building where he says he poisoned the milk, is shown by physical confessions to be unlikely.

ALLEGED ILLEGAL TELEGRAPH COMBINE

New York, July 8.—Acting on a petition filed by Attorney-General W. S. Jackson, Justice M. W. Plazek, in the Supreme Court to-day, appointed R. Burnham Moffatt an attorney to take evidence based on the Attorney-General's allegations that the Postal Telegraph and Cable Co. and the Western Union Telegraph Co. have formed an illegal combination to increase the rates in New York and other States. Mr. Moffatt announced this evening that the first hearing in the matter will be held at his office in Wall street July 10th. In his petition Attorney-General Jackson charges that the alleged combination was formed in this city last January and is a monopoly in restraint of competition in the telegraph business.

GENERAL STRIKE AT COBALT

Cobalt, Ont., July 8.—A general strike was declared this morning and nearly all the union men in the camp are out. They have left the mines of all these companies that signed the schedule of wages. The union has hoisted up its schedule of wages along side of the companies. The difference between the two schedules of wages is that the union men are asking about fifty cents a day more pay for surface men, and three shifts a day for underground men. A deputation from the union will wait upon the managers of the mines who have not signed the agreement with a view to having them grant the men's demands. If they refuse the miners in these mines will declare themselves on strike. About two thousand men are affected so far by the strike. The mines on which the strike is declared have shut down.

MOST INSIDIOUS POISONER YET

Pupils of His Wife's Eyes Terror-Stricken in Death.

PARIS STIRRED BY MYSTERY

Prominent Physician Charged With Murder—A Garden Full of Deadly Drugs.

Paris, July 8.—The Laforest mystery is stirring the imagination of all classes of Parisians more than any other murder of modern times. Dr. Albert Laforest, a physician of skill and standing, is accused of poisoning his wife in a strangely terrible and subtle manner. He is accused of using a poison-atropine—which produces certain well-known symptoms. Dr. and Madame Laforest lived at Montreuil-sous-Bois, near Paris. One night recently Madame Laforest was brought to the Hospital Saint Antoine in an ambulance which had been sent for by her sister. She was in terrible agony, and said that she knew she was going to die, because her husband had poisoned her. She died on the following day.

Dr. Laforest promptly applied for permission to take away the body, but this was refused. The Government expert was called in to examine the body of the deceased for traces of poison. At the same time the Commissary of Police arrested Dr. Laforest and seized all the drugs and medical appliances in his house.

MARRIED A NURSE

A young woman named Apollinaire Célour was employed there as a nurse. One day she came to Dr. Laforest to consult him about an affection of her eyes. He then fell in love with her, and proposed to marry her, but this was bitterly opposed by the young doctor's mother, whose consent was necessary to the marriage.

Old Madame Laforest moved in the highest circles of society. She was proud, severe, and very rich, and she regarded her son's marriage with the nurse as impossible. Other features of his conduct had also displeased her very much.

The young couple then crossed over to England, where they were married. They returned to Paris, and the doctor began to practice on the Boulevard Beaumarchais. At the same time he kept importuning his mother for money, but she refused and reproved him for his extravagant habits and unwise marriage. The young wife had a considerable sum of money, but he soon spent this.

At last Madame Laforest died and left her son a fine property at Montreuil-sous-Bois, and a fortune of $400,000. He then settled down at this place and carried on a desultory practice, but he devoted himself principally to a wonderful botanical garden, in which he cultivated poisonous and medicinal herbs.

A MARVELOUS GARDEN.

In this garden he had more than a dozen varieties of the plants from which atropine is produced, including the white atropa of India, which has been employed with the most deadly effect by Hindu poisoners from time immemorial. He also cultivated the Calabar bean, from which curare, which paralyzes the breathing centers, is prepared, and jaborandi, a plant whose essential principle paralyzes the heart's action. He had various species of the laburnum, from which cytisine is compounded, that simulates the symptoms of gastric catarrh.

At the time of their removal to Montreuil his love for his wife had completely disappeared. It is said that he treated his wife with the greatest cruelty, and was apparently trying to drive her away from him, but she insisted on living with him at Montreuil-sous-Bois in spite of all menaces.

On one occasion he rushed into the room, seized his wife by the throat, and cried: "You are about to die! Death approaches! I hear the death rattle." Dr. Laforest at this time was in love with a handsome young woman named Germaine Billard, whom he wished to marry. She too, like his wife, had come to him to be treated for her eyes, and he had fallen violently in love with her on the spot.

When Madame Laforest's body was examined she presented some of the symptoms of atropine poisoning. The pupils of her eyes were widely dilated, giving her the look of one who had died in very great terror. There was also a scarlet eruption upon her skin, which is found in some cases of atropine poisoning.

GOLDSTREAM GUARDS' BAND COMING

Toronto, July 8.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier has written from Geneva to the manager of the Canadian National Exhibition, Dr. Orr, stating that he is using his best endeavors to secure the Goldstream Guards band for the Canadian National Exhibition. He has enlisted the services of Lord Elgin, and it is believed the band will be here for the fair.

FIND OF FURS

Toronto, July 6.—A parcel of very valuable furs in the possession of Provincial Detective Greer at the Attorney-General's office, the find having been made beneath the railway elevator at Fleeterton. There are two ladies' Persian lamb coats, one of which has a ticket attached with the name of Mrs. Wm. Richardson. An atropine coat has the name of Mrs. James Ballard on it. A letter was found in another garment addressed to J. W. Thompson, Imperial Hotel, Winnipeg, and from box 1773, Portage LaPrairie.

BRITISH COLUMBIA'S PREMIER THE GUEST

Hon. Richard McBride Met Members of Lafontaine Club

SEES VICTORY IN THE WEST

Predicts Mr. Borden Will Have Majority from Ottawa River to Pacific Ocean.

Montreal, July 8.—Hon. Richard McBride, premier of British Columbia, is of the firm conviction that Mr. R. L. Borden will carry every province west of the Ottawa river, that the majority of each province will be large, and that a solid contingent of Conservatives will be sent to Ottawa from British Columbia whenever the people of the Pacific province get an opportunity at the polls to give expression to their political opinions.

The young premier from the coast, having reached here from London en route for Victoria, the Montreal Conservative organizations were desirous of manifesting their appreciation of Mr. McBride's qualities as a successful political leader and as a statesman, but the time at his disposal being limited, the demonstration took the form of a reception at the Lafontaine Club on Saturday evening.

The function was informal, yet Mr. McBride was given an opportunity to speak a few words to his friends in the province of Quebec, for he is evidently as popular on the banks of the St. Lawrence and down by the sea where he followed his legal studies as in his own province.

Premier McBride is a fighter from start to finish, and his story of how to get even in the local arena with the man who had formerly downed him in the federal field was greatly enjoyed by those who had the good fortune to hear the eloquent British Columbian on Saturday evening.

The members of the Club Lafontaine have never given a more hearty welcome to any outside political leader than that which was vouchsafed to the Hon. Mr. McBride. In the absence of Mr. E. J. Bédard, the president of the club, Mr. L. T. Marchal occupied the chair and delivered a spirited address in introducing the honored guest to his fellow-clubmen, and the cheers which greeted the Premier were indicative of the place he had already won in their hearts.

Premier McBride said that as far as he was concerned the eastern provinces had always been too isolated from the Pacific province in the Dominion of home. For his part, all the provinces were dear to him, and he felt as much at home in the east as in the west. He had done his best to do away with this isolation, and this, he thought, should be the policy of every true Conservative. He believed in the mission of the Conservative party, because he believed in Canada.

Mr. McBride then told of his efforts to vanquish the Liberals of his province, and gave facts to show that the Conservative party was the party of the people in the West. Mr. Borden, he said, would win a signal triumph from the banks of the Ottawa to the Rockies and down to the Pacific Ocean. He had good reason to believe that every federal seat in the province of British Columbia would be carried by the Conservative party, and he expressed the hope that old Quebec would not be far behind in the race for good government.

Almost every one present was introduced to the Prime Minister, who likewise expressed himself as delighted with his reception in French Canada.

THE COULD DIVORCE CASE

New York, July 8.—The two most sensational allegations in the suit of Katherine Clemons Gould for a separation from Howard Gould, was stricken out of the complaint to-day by order of Supreme Court Justice McCall. The sections of the complaint stricken out are those which allege infidelity on the part of Mr. Gould, and that he tampered with Mrs. Gould's mail. A third section of the complaint, which Mr. Gould sought to have removed from the complaint, charges him with having had his wife watched by detectives. This allegation the court allowed to remain in the complaint.

PLANTING MANY TREES

Ottawa, July 8.—The Dominion Government forestry branch is engaged in an active campaign of tree propagation and tree preservation in the West. The officials have been soliciting the established farmers and the new settlers on prairie lands to plant trees. The movement is meeting with the greatest success. This year to date the Government has supplied about 2,300,000 young trees to farmers throughout the three Provinces, making a total of about ten million planted during the past few years.

JUSTICES MAY ANNUL MARRIAGES

Toronto, July 8.—"Marry in haste, repent at leisure," goes the old saw. After to-day, if the reporter is young enough and lives in Ontario he or she will find the repentance more satisfactory. By proclamation to-day the Lieutenant-Governor put into effect the "Amendment to the Marriage Act," made at the last session of the Legislature. This amendment provides that where either or both parties to a "regrettable" marriage ceremony, as under the age of 18 years, and where there hasn't been co-habitation either party under the age of 16 may obtain annulment of the marriage from a judge of the High Courts of Justice. This amendment comes into effect to-day. The House of Commons at the last session refused to pass a somewhat similar amendment to the "Criminal Code." The Ontario amendment becomes law to-day nevertheless. No policeman should arrest a train of thought without a warrant.

THE ALL-RED ROUTE.

If the report which comes to us in recent despatches, be true that Australia has refused to concur in the All-red route project on account of the large subsidy, some two million dollars, which she was asked to contribute, the proposal has received a decided set-back, if not its death blow. As we pointed out before it was extremely doubtful whether the British Government would venture to recommend the enterprise to Parliament, and still more doubtful whether, if it did, Parliament would listen to it, but the prospects, small as they were, are infinitely smaller now if Australia has really made up her mind to refuse to enter into the partnership. In fact the Australasian colonies, Australia and New Zealand, were the only arguments that could be used for the project, as, leaving these out of the question we have already an all-red route in the shape of the C.P.R. service across the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and this continent, a very efficient one, and if it were desired to increase the efficiency it could be done at much less expense to the public than by the establishment of a new and rival route. Moreover, if we are to trust to current gossip, the other great Canadian line, the Grand Trunk, is contemplating following the example of the Canadian Pacific, and as soon as it has got its Pacific extension completed and trains running over it, will establish steamship lines on both oceans, as its rival has done, and the commercial competition of the two railroads will necessarily involve a marine competition also. Thus, if we exclude the Australasian colonies there is no need for a third all-red route, especially if it is going to cost the subsidizing colonies so much as it appears that it will. Australia evidently thinks that there is such a thing as paying too dear for one's whistle, and, with her out of the running, it is not unreasonable to think that other people also will come to a similar conclusion.

MR. BRYCE BLUNDERS.

Man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upward; and this is especially true of the particular class known as British Ambassadors to Washington. British Ambassadors to other foreign nations never get into hot water with the governments and peoples to whom they are accredited, and the Ambassadors of other foreign nations at Washington contrive to lead a tolerably quiet life, but sooner or later the British representative in the United States manages to put his foot in it, and to bring the press buzzing about his ears like a swarm of hornets. The reason for this seems to be that the men selected for Washington service have too much gush, and too little diplomacy. They are, as a general rule, men of conspicuous talent, and imbued with profound feelings of respect and esteem for the nation to which they are accredited, but they are not diplomats; the true diplomats are reserved for the courts of St. Petersburg, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, and Constantinople; they attend strictly to their own business, and they hold their own tongues; the Washington man has more confidential moments; he talks without much reserve to his friends; he answers enquiries on local politics in letters; or he goes about the country making speeches a la Whitelaw Reid, but not always with that gentleman's consummate tact or discretion. "It is," says the Baltimore Sun, "the unwritten law of diplomacy that foreign Ambassadors accredited to the Government of the United States shall not discuss publicly the domestic affairs of this nation, especially its politics. On the whole, the rule is a good one. Ambassadors are assumed to concern themselves with international relations. In 1888, when President Cleveland was a candidate for re-election, the British Minister at Washington, Lord Sackville-West, was given his passport for advising Englishmen who had become naturalized to vote for Mr. Cleveland. It was the general belief at the time that Lord Sackville-West fell into a trap laid for him by wily Republicans. On the eve of the war with Spain the Spanish Minister at Washington, Senor Dupuy de Lome, was dismissed for criticizing President McKinley in a letter which the Cuban Junta in this country managed to secure and which it published with the purpose of increasing the friction between the United States and Spain. The British and Spanish diplomats were very indiscreet, to say the least. It is never safe for a diplomat to write even private letters intended to influence the result of an election in the country to which he is accredited. It is dangerous and in questionable taste for a diplomat to write disparagingly of the Chief Executive of the nation to which he is accredited, unless he writes under cover of a privileged and secret communication to his own Government."

The doctrine laid down is sound common sense; it is plain that the expression of an opinion, especially by an outsider, on internal questions which divide two political parties, must inevitably antagonize one or other of them, but there seems to be some fatality attending British Ambassadors to the United States which urges them to overlook this, and to express public opinions before an American audience which they would certainly not give vent to whilst holding official positions before a British audience at home.

Mr. James Bryce has fallen into the usual trap, and all the more readily because he has not the slightest pretensions to be a diplomat, though he was credited with having a sympathy with the Americans and an understanding of them far surpassing that of any of his countrymen which was supposed to more than make up for his want of diplomatic experience. In order to keep up this reputation, or perhaps on account of it, ever since his arrival on this continent he has been phenomenally gushing, and has been touring Canada and the United States making speeches here and giving interviews there, till it was only a question of time as to how soon it would be before he ran up against a political snag. During his recent visit to the South-west he is quoted as having discussed extensively the constitution framed by the constitutional convention for Oklahoma, and according to the newspaper reports gave it the highest praise. That sounds innocent enough, but it was entirely uncalculated for; it was no part of the business of a British Ambassador to comment on an inchoate constitution, and to express approval of its proposals; and in this case it is generally understood that there are many features of the instrument which fall far short of meeting with the approval of the President who may feel compelled to disapprove it as not conforming to the enabling act, and who, in that case, will find the language of Mr. Bryce used against him by the enemies of his administration. The embarrassment that will thus be caused to the Government can easily be appreciated, and it will be all the greater because Mr. Bryce has been regarded as a high authority on the American constitution. Here again it is probable that his reputation has led him to do a very unwise and injudicious thing.

It is much to be regretted, especially in the present state of the world's politics that Mr. Bryce should have done what may produce a coolness between the two nations if his escapade should be taken seriously, and what must in any event damage his prestige and usefulness. Fortunately both the President and the Secretary of State are known to have a warm personal friendship for Mr. Bryce, and this may induce them to overlook any embarrassment he may have caused them and to adopt the moderate views of the Baltimore Sun which says: "It has not yet been established whether Ambassador Bryce spoke as freely in commendation of the Oklahoma Constitution as he is represented to have done. If he had, in an unguarded moment, denounced it as some American statesmen and newspapers have done, the people of Oklahoma and Indian Territory would have a grievance, and doubtless would send a vigorous protest to Washington. Inasmuch as the language attributed to the distinguished diplomatist is in praise of the Oklahoma Constitution, the Administration is represented as being displeased. It is to be hoped that we will not have a tempest in a teapot over Mr. Bryce's reported utterances against the Oklahoma Constitution. If the President intends to approve the Constitution, no harm will have been done because Mr. Bryce is reported to have commended that Constitution. If the President is bent upon vetoing it, nothing that Mr. Bryce may have said about the work of the constitutional convention of the two Territories needs to be considered. Our States and Territories do not frame their organic laws with the view of conforming to the convictions or theories of foreign statesmen. When a new State is knocking for admission to the Union, diplomatists should maintain a prudent reserve. It has been stated repeatedly that prominent Republican statesmen would be delighted to find a flaw in the Oklahoma Constitution which would give the President a plausible pretext for vetoing that instrument and thus keeping Oklahoma out of the Union until after the national election next year. If Mr. Bryce has, in an informal way, declared Oklahoma's Constitution a worthy production, he has made a tactical mistake.

Mr. Bryce is one of the greatest authorities on American institutions and government. His "American Commonwealth" is read by all students of our institutions. He is a sincere friend and admirer of the United States. He is a man of learning and deep convictions. It is to be hoped that our statesmen in Washington will let the matter drop, if they have ever had any intention of pressing it. No harm has been done. The dignity of this nation has not been ruffled. Finally, if President Roosevelt has decided to veto the Oklahoma Constitution he will not forego his purpose because

Mr. Bryce was reported to hold that Constitution in esteem. There is no reason to get excited or to manifest displeasure."

PRESS OPINIONS.

WARSHIPS ON THE LAKES.—Canadians should face the situation as it stands. The Convention of 1817 is a mere agreement. Either side can end it by giving six months' notice. If the efforts of the American co-workers of our Peace and Arbitration Society are not effective, if the American ship-builders' demands become stronger, the Washington Government may decline to continue the agreement. Then we must face the alternative of complete abrogation or of modification. Of the two evils we should choose the less, that of modification. Consequently, it may be wise to think a little in advance as to what modification would prove least distasteful.

Here is a possible alteration which conceivably might be accepted by our people:

1. No naval armament or vessels of war to be kept on the lakes.
2. No actual war vessels to be used for training purposes.
3. Training ships to be limited to 1,000 tons and revenue and fishery vessels to 300 tons; their armaments not to include weapons heavier than six-pounder guns.
4. Vessels built for either Navy not to be armor-plated, armed, equipped, or rendered available as vessels of war while on the lakes.
5. Only one such vessel to be built by either country at a time.
6. Vessels so built to be passed out of the lakes to the Atlantic as soon as completed.
7. No vessel to return to the lakes for repair or refit.

Such an arrangement would be inferior to that now in existence; but it would be preferable to an absence of any agreement at all, which might lead to a maintenance of armaments on the lakes most injurious to both sides. —Toronto News.

IN SASKATCHEWAN.—In Saskatchewan the expected trouble in the province of Saskatchewan, over the separate school business, is beginning to show itself. Hon. Walter Scott, the Premier chosen by the Laurier Government, has begun to kick over the traces. In a speech recently made in Regina Mr. Scott affirmed that the autonomy act provided for separate primary schools only and gave no sanction to the Catholic demand for separate schools of a higher nature. The Legislature of the Province, at the last session, passed a high school act which, it is claimed by the Catholic managers, is in contravention of the provincial constitution. In Regina Catholics have refused to be candidates for seats on the high school board, and Catholic electors refuse to go to the polls to elect high school trustees. They hold that they have a right to separate high schools, and they propose to appeal to the country. On this subject the Toronto News says:

It is difficult to see how the contention can be maintained. It seems to have been the clear intention of the Federal Parliament, under the Sifton clause, to give only separate public schools as in Ontario. The fact that the claim for separate high schools is now made shows what the clerical authorities intended and how thorough was the original bill introduced by Mr. Fitzpatrick with the sanction of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The design, however, was at least partly defeated by Mr. Fielding and Mr. Sifton, and it will be surprising if the courts entertain the claim which is now advanced by the separatists.

This revelation of the full meaning of the original autonomy bill is significant, and shows that at least something was accomplished by Mr. Sifton and Mr. Fielding. Here is, perhaps, a partial explanation of the rumor that certain elements are hostile to Mr. Fielding and determined that he shall not succeed to the leadership of the Liberal party. Of course even the amended legislation should not have been enacted. The Western provinces should have been permitted to establish their own school systems, and to give or withhold separate schools according as the Western people might determine. To do otherwise was to do violence to the constitution and the traditions and principles of the Liberal party.

Washington, July 7.—Acting United States Secretary of State Adeo denied to-night that the United States government has made any overtures or contemplated any negotiations for the purchase from Mexico of a naval site on Magdalena Bay, in lower California. Mr. Adeo added, however, that Mexico has recently consented that the United States government may permanently station a collier in Magdalena Bay to provide coal for American naval vessels during the annual target practice.

C.P.R. LINE.
 Steamer Montezuma, Captain Bigham, from London and Antwerp, with 560 passengers and a general cargo, arrived in port last evening and moored at the Breakwater.
 Steamer Montfort, Captain Evans, having landed Quebec goods and taken on board part of outward cargo, left for Montreal at 5 p.m. yesterday.

DONALDSON LINE.
 Steamer Athenia, Captain McNeill, from Glasgow, with 176 cabin and 350 steerage passengers, arrived in port at 2 a.m. yesterday, mooring at the Breakwater. At 6 a.m. she landed her passengers and then crossed over to the Grand Trunk wharf, South Quebec, to discharge a number of sheep, returning to the Pointe-a-Carey wharf to land Quebec cargo, and left for Montreal last evening.

DOMINION LINE.
 Steamer Southwark passed Brownhead at 4 p.m. yesterday and is due to arrive in Liverpool this afternoon.
 Steamer Welshman sailed from Portland for Liverpool at 4 p.m. Saturday, July 6th.

LEYLAND LINE.
 Steamer Virginian, Capt. McDonald, from Antwerp, with a general cargo, arrived in port last night and moored at the Pointe-a-Carey wharf.

MANCHESTER LINE.
 Steamer Manchester Trader sailed from Manchester for Quebec and Montreal at 9 a.m. on July 6th.

QUEBEC STEAMSHIP CO.
 Steamer Trinidad arrived at New York from the West Indies at one o'clock yesterday afternoon.

THOMSON LINE.
 Steamer Cervona, Captain Stooke, having discharged her Quebec cargo, left for Montreal at 5 p.m. yesterday.

THE CORNWALL CANAL.
 Cornwall, Ont., July 8.—Navigation of the Cornwall canal, which was suspended in consequence of two gates being carried away by the steam barge Ionis, was resumed last evening. The canal was kept open to-day to accommodate the delayed traffic. R. & O. passengers were taken to Cornwall by special trains and conveyed by the street railway to a steamer waiting at the foot of the canal.

WATER IN THE LAKES.
 Detroit, Mich., July 8.—As predicted by the United States Lake Survey, the stages of water on the Great Lakes rose during June. Lake Superior gained five inches, but is still one inch and a half lower than the average for the past ten years. Michigan and Huron show a rise of four and one half inches, or seven inches higher than the average of the past ten years. Erie rose four and one half inches during the month, and is now seven inches above the average of the last ten years. With excellent stages in Lakes Michigan and Huron, draughts should be good in the locks at the Soo, and high water in Lake Erie assures good draughts in the lower Detroit river and Lake Erie harbors. The best of conditions prevail on Lake Ontario.

LLOYD'S STATISTICS.
 On the occasion of the opening of the Sunderland offices of Lloyd's Registry of Shipping, some interesting particulars regarding the tonnage of vessels registered were supplied, from which we extract the following: The total tonnage holding the classification of Lloyd's Register is, to date, about 10,300 vessels, of 19.75 million tons, while twenty years ago the corresponding figures were 7,979 vessels of 8.5 million tons. Of the total tonnage classed during the year 1887 the steam tonnage represented about 70 per cent of the whole. About 94 per cent was of steel and iron vessels and the remainder of wood. Similar figures for 1905 are 89 per cent steam tonnage, and of all the vessels registered 99.75 per cent are constructed of steel and iron. In 1887 the percentage of steam tonnage built in the United Kingdom was 85 per cent, in 1905 it amounted to 99 per cent. During 1906 seven turbine steamers of 19,000 tons were classed, and of the total number of such steamers already launched or under construction by the United Kingdom shipbuilders, 146,774 tons are classed or are about to be classed by the society.

WIRELESS OPERATOR.
 Ottawa, July 8.—The steamer Montezuma, which was pulled off the sand at Sydney unharmed, is to proceed at once to Pictou, where ten wireless telegraph operators are waiting for their summer supplies to man the five wireless stations on the St. Lawrence gulf and along the north shore. If the weather is favorable the Montezuma will have the men and supplies on board to-day, and will at once leave to deposit them at their various lonely stations to spend the summer talking to ships of which they seldom see more than smoke. The last pair should be landed and have their station working ten days from now, or in time for the opening of navigation by the northern route through the Strait of Belle Lake. The operators have been assembled for some time, but owing to the fact that the Marine Department's steamers were engaged and the Montezuma went ashore, there was a little delay. It is claimed that this has resulted in no inconvenience for the Strait has not been navigable as yet. The Canada is replace the Montezuma as tender at Sydney for the mails as long as the steamer uses the southern route by way of Cape Race. The Canada has been watching the operations of a big fleet of American mackerel fishing boats, but these have lifted their nets and left the coast with the departure of the fish, thereby releasing the Canada for a time.

NOTES.

The whaleback steamer Bay City and burgess Bombard and Barones, which have been in the Graving Dock for some time, having their stems repinned, will come out of dock this evening and proceed to Davie's yard, Lewis, to complete the work, which, it is expected, will be completed by the end of this week. These vessels had their stems removed to allow them to pass through the canals from the upper lakes to this port.

DOCTORS IN TURN FAILED BUT ZAM-BUK CURED.

Magistrate F. Rasmussen, writing from his residence, 211 Marquette St., Montreal, says: "I take genuine pleasure in informing you of the great good I have derived from Zam-Buk. For many years I was troubled with a serious eruption of the skin, which was both unsightly and painful. Not one, but several doctors in turn were consulted, but I was unable to get any permanent relief. Some time back I noticed a report from a Justice of the Peace who had been cured of a chronic skin disease by Zam-Buk, and I determined to give this balm a trial. After a thoroughly fair test, I can say I am delighted with it. While everything else I tried—salves, embrocations, washes, soaps and doctor's prescriptions failed absolutely to relieve my pain, three boxes of Zam-Buk have worked a complete cure. In my opinion this balm should be even more widely known than it is, and in the hope that my experience will lead other sufferers to try this herbal healer, I have no objection to you publishing this letter. Yours truly, (Signed) F. RASMUSSEN, Justice of the Peace, 211 Marquette St., Montreal. (Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.)

STOPS MONOPOLY

Fine of $5000 Imposed for Exclusive Terms in the Leases.

Boston, July 7.—The anti-shoe machinery bill, considered the most important legislation of the session just closed, has become effective, 30 days after it had been signed by Governor Guild.

Under the provisions of the bill it is now unlawful for the United Shoe Machinery Company to insert in the leases under which their machines are let, provisions that the lessee shall not use the machinery of any other company, as has been the custom in past years, and which gave to the United Shoe Machinery Company a monopoly of the shoe machinery business.

The text of the bill, which is now a law, is as follows:—

"No person, firm, corporation or association shall insert in or make it a condition or provision of any sale or lease of any tool, implement, appliance or machinery that the purchaser or lessee thereof shall not buy, lease or use machinery, tools, implements or appliances of material or merchandise of any person, firm, corporation or association other than such vendor, or lessee, but this provision shall not impair the right, if any, of the vendor or lessor of any tool, implement, appliance, or machinery protected by a lawful patent right vested in such vendor or lessor to require by virtue of such patent right, the vendee or lessee, to purchase or lease from such vendor or lessor such component and constituent parts of said tool, implement, appliance, or machine, as the vendee or lessee may thereafter require during the continuance of such patent right; provided, that nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit the appointment of agents or sole agents to sell or lease machinery, tools, implements or appliances.

"Any person, firm, corporation or association, or the agent of any such person, firm, corporation or association, violating the provision of this act, shall be punished for each offence by a fine not exceeding $5,000.

"All leases, sales or agreements therefor heretofore made in violation of any of the provisions of this act shall be void as to any and all of the terms or conditions thereof so in violation of said provisions of this act."

It will be remembered by every "Bulletin" reader that this paper played a most important part in the enactment of this legislation.

But for the Bulletin and the Boston Daily Tribune the Shoe Machinery trust would still be in unrestrained pursuance of its policy of dictation to the shoe trade of Massachusetts.

A QUESTION OF AUTHORITY

Seoul, July 8.—At a meeting of the Cabinet Ministers in the presence of the Emperor last night the former raised the question of the source of the authority under which the Korean deputation at the Hague was acting. The Emperor at first pleaded ignorance, but finally gave an evasive answer and ordered the Ministers to explain the matter to the Japanese in such a manner as to appease their anger. A committee was appointed to superintend the Imperial outlay and prevent any further alleged illegal disbursements which have frequently occurred.

DENOUNCED SINN FEINS

London, July 8.—John Redmond, the Irish leader, in a speech at Battersea, denounced the Sinn Fein as cranks and sore heads. They were crying for the adoption of a new policy, but it was the old policy of discrediting and trying to destroy the Nationalist party. The Nationalists must put away all this futile foolish talk and pursue vigorously Parnell's policy. The present Parliament would not last more than a year or a year and a half, and the next Government would not have such a majority as the present one.

ANOTHER REFORMATION

Rome, July 8.—The Correspondence Bureau, a local agency which is well informed in Vatican matters, issues a sensational revelation, corroborated by copious documents, about a secret international organization which originated in Germany having for its ostensible object the collection of signatures to a petition to the Pope asking for the abolition of the Congregation of the Index, but the real and ultimate purposes for which is to promote a reformist movement on a larger scale in Germany and Anglo-Saxon countries. Preparations have been taken to hide

FRENCH STRIKE COLLAPSED

Montpellier, France, July 8.—The municipal council of this city decided to-night, by a decisive vote, to withdraw the resignations of the members handed in during the trouble arising from the protests of the wine-growers of the south. This means the collapse of the agitation in this section. Marcel Albert, M. Ferrou, mayor of Narbonne, and other leaders of the movement have sent a letter to the court demanding their release on bail.

INTERNATIONAL SCHOOL CRICKET

Malborough, Eng., July 8.—In the first innings to-day of the cricket match between Malborough School and the University of Pennsylvania, the former made 114 runs. Pennsylvania followed with 184 runs for the first innings. In the second innings Malborough made 51 runs for three wickets down. Play will be continued to-morrow.

A CLOUD-CAPT CITY.

(By A Banker.)

Probably the most strikingly situated city in the whole world is Constantinople, an inland town of North Africa. Perched at an elevation of more than two thousand feet, on the summit of a vast towering block of limestone rock, it is almost completely encircled by a narrow gorge or canon cut deep into the mountains through which swirls and eddies a furious raging torrent, its perpendicular walls, in which a footpath has been hollowed out in order to enable visitors to inspect this wonder of nature, rising sheer from the foaming flood more than eight hundred feet.

Descending this precipitous pathway, now under overhanging ledges of rock, now on the very edge of a terrible precipice, beneath which the boiling surge is wildly foaming in a very paroxysm of turmoil, or now round the spur of a jutting crag, the visitor is awe-struck and bewildered at the majestic grandeur and the august solemnity of the scene. Far beneath, the turbulent river—after the continuous rains and the abnormal snows of the past winter, much fuller and grander than usual—swirling round a sharp corner of the ravine, leaping over a steep escarpment into a boiling cauldron beneath, and then with a throbbing plunge disappearing in the semi-darkness of a nature-hewn tunnel escaped out of a projecting bastion of the solid rock. Above is the upreared beetling cliff rising in savage grandeur upwards towards the clouds, on its summit the white house of Constantine, or the rounded dome of a mosque, built upon the very edge of the precipice; or the sharp silhouette of some stately palm trees or graceful and lofty eucalyptus.

Lower down, on the other side of the town, is a most notable and imposing waterfall. Here the river is apparently very deep, pursuing its rapid course almost untroubled, then, curling over the lofty ledge with majestic sweep the deluge of waters plunges into the billow-tossed, yawning abyss far beneath with a deafening roar, while a cloud of foam and wind-driven spray rises high in air far above the watery hurrican beneath.

Truly this earth of ours is adorned and beautified with a lavish hand; and well may the hierarchs of high heaven have sung for joy at the contemplation of its beauties. And yet He who made it all, (for by Him—Jesus—all things were and are created,) was content to bleed and to die for us and on our behalf; thus paying the penalties due by us to Eternal Justice, and assuring for those who believe in Him an eternity of supreme joys.

AN AMUSING NOTARY.

Old Quebecers Tell How Legal Fees Were Increased.

The older generation of Quebecers tell a number of amusing anecdotes of a former notary of St. Paul's Bay, who was a bit of a wag, and whose notarial instruments were not always quite intelligible, especially if they had been prepared after one of his apparently thirty spells. At such times it is said that his pen would wander beyond the margin of the paper, and he would continue to scribble on the wood of the high desk at which he sat with unregarded dignity. A portion of the text would remain there, and the missing words would be supplied from memory when the time came to deliver copies. Some of his poor clients were in the low habit—in professional eyes—of "march-anding" (bargaining) about the fees they intended to pay him. When there seemed to be no help for it, the notary would quietly pocket the small coin, but, glancing at the same time that for such a miserable fee nothing but a very indifferent deed could be expected; it might hold good, it might not. "Why don't you order a first class one?" he would say. "You know my charges; one dollar for a first class deed, warranted; half a dollar for a fair one, which may turn out well, and for a third-class one I cannot recommend. You can only expect to have your money's worth. It is a mere chance if it is good for anything."

Some men hit the pipe when really they should kick it.

W. A. WEIR, Manager.

City of Quebec,
District of Quebec.

BY-LAW NO. 414.

To grant permission to the Chateau Frontenac Company to make certain works over and under des Carrières Street.

At a meeting of the City Council of the City of Quebec, held at the City Hall, in the said City of Quebec, on the twenty-eighth day of June, nineteen hundred and seven (1907), in conformity to law, and in virtue of a
By-law passed by this Council pursuant thereto, and after the due observance of all the formalities prescribed by the Statute in such case made and provided, at which meeting
the present two-thirds of the members composing the Council of the City of Quebec, that is to say:—

His Worship the Mayor, Aldermen
Barbeau, Barry, Dinan, Drouin,
Dugas, Foley, Fortier, Hall, Hogan,
Huard, Lavigne, Levesque, Lefebvre,
Mathieu, Messervy, Mulroney, Paquin,
Picard, Shink, St. Pierre, Taschereau
(St. Pierre), Taschereau (St. Louis), Verret. (23).

It is ordained and enacted by the Municipal Council of the City of Quebec, and the said Council ordains and enacts as follows:—

1st. In accordance with the power granted for that purpose by the Act
Edward VII., Chapter 62, Articles 12 and 43, the City of Quebec hereby gives to the Chateau Frontenac Company, a body politic and corporate, and having its principal place of business in this City, to its successors and assigns the permission to build, maintain and keep over des Carrières street, in this City, between Mount Carmel and St. Louis streets, one or two viaducts, or other constructions, and also to build under said des Carrières street, at the same spot, one or more tunnels or underground passages, to connect said buildings on both sides of said des Carrières street, and to establish communications between them.

2nd. The clear roadway, from the surface of the street to the centre of the said viaducts or constructions, shall not be less than fourteen feet.

3rd. If it is necessary, in order to support and uphold the superstruc-tures, to erect columns or pillars resting on the ground, such columns and pillars shall be placed on the outside portion of the sidewalk, and shall not encroach on the highway, nor on the water course of the street.

4th. The carriage way of the street, at said place, shall not be of a less width than it is at present.

5th. The sidewalks on the each side of said street, between Mount Carmel and St. Louis streets, shall be at least five feet and six inches wide.

6th. When the company begins excavating in the said street to build the tunnels or underground passages it shall guard the way effectively to prevent accidents to vehicles, passengers or animals, and maintain during the night, sufficient lights to prevent any accident.

7. During the building of super-structures, the Company shall also take the same precautions as those mentioned in the preceding article.

8th. The Company shall also, after the completion of said works, establish and maintain, at its cost, and as long as the said constructions shall exist, sufficient lights in said portion of said street under said viaducts or constructions, according to the City Engineer's instructions.

9th. After the building of said tunnels, the Company shall, at its own costs, remake the macadam or other paving of the said street at said place, to the proper condition of grade and hardness and to the satisfaction of the City Engineer.

10th. During and after the progress of said works, and so long as the said viaducts or constructions and tunnels shall exist, the Company shall guarantee and keep the City secured against any claim for damages, caused or alleged to have been caused by the erection of said works and in consequence of the said works and their construction.

11th. The present By-law shall come into force only after a notarial contract shall have been passed between the parties, embodying the conditions contained in the present By-law.

Pabst
Purity

The way Pabst secures absolutely pure yeast for fermenting beer proves the care that surrounds
every step in making Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer.

To secure an absolutely uniform fermentation, Pabst takes a single cell from its millions of fellows in the drop of pure yeast,
and from this one cell grows or cultivates the yeast required for each brew.

Pabst
Blue Ribbon

The Beer of Quality is fermented in hermetically sealed vats. From the time it is brewed until it is bottled it never comes in contact with the atmosphere or human hands.
It is then properly matured or aged in air-tight, cold-storage tanks.

When ordering beer, ask for Pabst Blue Ribbon.

BRITISH CHAMPION BELGIANS SMOKED

French Player who has Just Won Premier Golf
Honors.

London Chronicle:—A Frenchman has won the open golf championship—the same that used to be won by old and young Tom Morris, Jamie Anderson, Bob Ferguson, and the other heroes of the olden times, and which has most often been won in modern times by the members of the great triumvirate, J. H. Taylor, James Braid, and Harry Vardon. Think of that!

Three years ago an American player in Mr. Travis won the amateur championship, and yesterday at Hoylake Arnold Massie, who is the professional at La Boulie, Paris, won the premier even, and for the first time in history the trophy goes out to Great Britain.

All day yesterday, while the third and fourth rounds were being played,
it was a close thing between Massie and J. H. Taylor of Richmond. Other men had small chances if they played above their best, but they did not, and so it was a duel between the Englishman who was born at Westward Hol and the Frenchman who is actually a Basque, and was born at Biarritz, the latter playing an hour and a half behind the other.

Overnight Massie led Taylor by a single stroke. At noon yesterday Taylor led Massie by a stroke. So everything depended on the fourth round.
Taylor's was just a little inferior to his previous three. Massie's was his best, and so he won, but with only a trifle of two strokes to spare, his aggregate being 312 to Taylor's 314.

USED GOOD ENGLISH.

When the winner had holed out on the last green his brother professionals of Britain, to whom he is far from being a stranger, chaired him, and when the cup and his check for £50 were handed to him by Professor Paterson, the captain of the Royal Liverpool Club, he made little speech in good English, in which he said he was glad to have played such golf as he had done after coming all the way from Paris to play it; and then raising his voice, he shouted out, "Vive l'entente cordiale." Taylor publicly affirmed that the honors of being champion was safe in the hands of Massie.

The Frenchman won on his merits.
There can be no possible doubt about that. He is a brilliant player, more brilliant than almost anybody believed him to be, and he has played the best of his form all the week, being perfectly steady and consistent all the time. If James Braid had been himself, or if Taylor had not slackened somewhat in his last round, the championship might not have gone to France, but it is the man whose game has no "ifs" in it that comes out first.

ABOUT THE WINNER.
Massie is a tall, powerful man,
with strong shoulders, and he has a very stiff and erect soldier's carriage as he strides along the links. His style of golf is extremely good. There is no fault to find in it; but, after all, that style was chiefly cultivated, not in France, but at North Berwick.
Massie, in his young days, was a pelota player, and then he began to hang about the links at Biarritz, and to carry clubs for the players. Then, as all caddies do, he commenced to play a bit himself, and then to play much better, so that he was soon a little better than scratch.

Some nine years ago Mr. Everard
Hambo, believing that this young Frenchman would make a fine golfer, judging by what he had seen of his play at Biarritz, took him over with him to North Berwick, and thence for a little while to St. Andrew's. Massie liked his prospects, and thence-forward he made it his practice to play all the summer at North Berwick
as a professional, getting what matches he could in the ordinary course, and going over to Biarritz in the winter time. In time he made a name for himself, and was coached by Ben Sayers, and eventually he put in an appearance at the open championship. In the last two years he has made a great show in it, but his best performance was last winter, when he won the big tournament at Cannes, in which all the leading British professionals took part.

There is really no pronounced peculiarity about his play. It is simply fine golf, and what golf ought to be.
He uses wooden clubs with rather longer and deeper faces than are generally employed, but that is all that there is to say about them. From the tee and through the green he is a very quick and unhesitating player, but on the putting green he takes a lot of time, and studies his line very closely and thoroughly. Then he wastes no more time, but puts quickly.

QUEBEC MAN PITCHED.

St. John, N.B., Sun:—The St.
Peter's went down before the St.
Rose's last evening in the Inter-Society contest by a score of 11 to 10.
The game lasted five innings, and Jack O'Toole, with two out and the score tied, batted in the winning run with a clean hit to left field.

This is only the second game that the St. Peter's have lost since the league opened, and loose playing was chiefly responsible for their downfall.
Hod of last year's St. Peter's, who has recently returned from Quebec, where he has been playing this season, was in the box for the St.
Peter's.

ROCK CITY VS. QUEBEC.

The first of the series of championship games between the Quebec and Rock City teams, under the new order of things, will be played on the Q. A.
A grounds next Saturday afternoon.
The next match will be on the Rock
City grounds on the Sunday following. These two teams always provide a slashing contest when they get together and the coming encounter promises to sizzle with excitement. Both the aggregations will be strengthened up, and no effort is being spared by either to make a big bid for both games. Local fans can expect to see things doing all right when Quebec and Rock City get together.

London, July 8.—The race between the Sport Nautique and Leander eight was one of the most exciting in the history of the Henley regatta. The two crews went down to the starting post amid great cheering. They looked splendid, and surely there never had been such a Leander crew, with D. C.
R. Stuart stroking the cream of English rowing men! The Belgians were down by the island early, smoking cigars with a cheerful disregard for what was in England called training.

Bang! They were off in a spluttering rainstorm with a strong wind blowing down the river. For the first few seconds they rowed nose and nose,
and Leander crew ahead inch by inch.
It was a great race, and for the first quarter of a mile there was nothing in it, with the salmon pink oars of Leander just a trifle ahead and no more, and everybody was breathless.

ROWING IN A DRIVING RAIN.

From the press stand one could just see them coming along in a driving rain. There were yells of "Leander!
Leander!" all along the river. At the half-mile Stuart was still leading, but at Fawley the Belgians, with their wonderful flicking stroke crept up.
Close to the grand stand a wild beast sort of roar came from the Belgian coxswain, at which signal the blue barges struck the water quicker.

Stuart yelled "Now!" and his lovely crew dug down to business, but alas!
it was too late. There was a howl of sorrow and real passionate pain from England's great oarsmen all jammed together in a seething mass underneath the grand stand.

The Belgians shot ahead, and whole lives were lived in seconds now. The time machine was whirling to destiny
in a last splendid effort, but Belgium had pipped the flower of English rowing, and as they crossed the imaginary winning line cheers for their well-merited success almost deafened one.

The Leander crew were pumped out and helpless as babies.

STUART IN DEAD FAINT.

Stuart, the great Stuart, suddenly fell forward over his stretcher in a dead faint and had to be lifted out of the race.

The Belgians finished comparatively fresh, with a third of a length to their credit. They thoroughly deserved their victory, for their rowing was wonderful and their final spurt a hundred yards from home was something for all oarsmen to dream about.

CROQUET MUCH SAFER.

Brookville Times:—One convicted to fail in one city and two more committed for trial in another city on the same day is, in sporting parlance,
"going home," but such incidents have become necessary to impress upon a few of our players of baseball, hockey, lacrosse and football the fact that the strenuousness of athletic sports cannot be pleaded or accepted as an excuse for crime.

SUNSHINE FURNACE

The Sunshine is differently and better constructed than common furnaces. It's stronger, safer, more healthful.

The dome, the two sections of the fire-pot and the frame of the ash-pit are all securely fastened together by our famous "cup joint." Three "cup joints" in all, you see. All sections, you will notice, fit together perfectly, and are lined with a layer of asbestos cement, which unites them so firmly together that they become, in every purpose, one solid piece of metal. Can never spring or fall apart.

And that's not all! The top of the dome is fastened to the sides, with cement and boiler rivets, making the Sunshine just as smoke, gas, heat and dust tight as a steam boiler. From a hygienic standpoint it takes precedence in the furnace world.

Notice, too, the Sunshine is equipped with an automatic gas damper. This damper automatically opens when the gas in the furnace reaches a certain pressure and allows it to escape up the chimney. Eliminates all danger of an explosion or gas escaping through the registers.

Safest as well as most healthful, easiest managed, cleanest, greatest labor-saving and fuel-economizing furnace you can buy.

If your local dealer does not handle the Sunshine write direct to us for free booklet.

HAS BRYCE CLASHED WITH MR. ROOSEVELT?

The British Ambassador's Reported Comment on the

OKLAHOMA CONSTITUTION

Said to be Against the President's Views—
"This Would Give Roosevelt's Enemies a Big Club to Use Against Him."

Washington, July 8.—Some of the diplomats who still remain in Washington have shown a disposition to question the propriety of the comment which the British Ambassador is quoted as having made recently on the Oklahoma constitution. Whether his comment, if made in the language reported, will be considered improper or not, depends of course entirely on the view taken by the President and the Secretary of State, who are known to feel warm personal friendship for Mr. Bryce.

During his recent visit to the Southwest, Mr. Bryce is quoted as having discussed extensively the constitution framed by the Constitutional Convention of Oklahoma, and, according to the newspaper despatches, gave it high praise. It is generally understood that there are many features of the instrument which fall far short of meeting with the approval of the President, who may feel compelled to disapprove it as not conforming to the enabling act, and the Ambassador's remarks are being made the subject of an investigation by the State Department.

Mr. Bryce is reported to have commended especially the initiative and referendum provisions of the new constitution, and to have pronounced many features of the document in line with the most modern thought in republican forms of government. He is also reported as having declared that a careful examination of the instrument revealed some of the most commendable features of the constitution of Switzerland, which republic enjoys, in his estimation, perhaps the most nearly perfect form of popular government.

SOME OBJECTIONABLE FEATURES

The President, it is popularly understood, entertains the opinion that some features of the Oklahoma constitution are "decidedly objectionable." Within the last few weeks he has ordered a special census of the prospective State with presumably, the purpose of demonstrating how inequitable, not to say iniquitous, is the gerrymander proposed by the constitution.

The embarrassment of a situation in which the British Ambassador could be quoted by the political opponents of the President as upholding and commending an instrument which the latter had found it necessary in the performance of his official duty to reject can easily be appreciated. The fact that the present Ambassador long ago attained high standing as an analyst and exponent of the American Government through his authorship of "The American Commonwealth," would serve not only to strengthen the force of his commendation, but to heighten the embarrassment of the situation. The few diplomats who have learned the facts express surprise that Mr. Bryce should have deemed it judicious to tread on such delicate ground, as it is a cardinal principle of diplomacy that a representative of a foreign Government should never voice publicly any opinion on the internal affairs of the country to which he is accredited which might conflict with the views of the Administration.

On the other hand, it is noteworthy that Mr. Bryce has generally been exceedingly cautious since he came to Washington, as ambassador of his Britannic Majesty. While receiving members of the press with the utmost courtesy, he has firmly declined to commit himself on any question of American policy or government, and it is generally believed that if he said it of the Oklahoma constitution those things which are credited to him it was because he wholly overlooked the fact that the instrument was in the hands of the President awaiting executive approval, and that he was prompted solely by a desire to compliment the hospitable people who happened to be his hosts.

WAS MR. BRYCE MISLED?

The suggestion has been made that the ambassador may have been misled by his personal host, Robert L. Owen, who, while he was in the Southwest, was the primary choice of the Democrats of Oklahoma for Senator. It seems unlikely that the latter would have sought deliberately to involve the ambassador in difficulties with the Administration, but it may be true that Mr. Owen's own enthusiasm for the instrument, which is the work of his party, may have proved contagious, and that he may even have sought to convince Mr. Bryce of the beauties of a constitution which appeals to himself.

It is, of course, likely that because of the warm personal friendship which the President entertains for Mr. Bryce he may determine to avoid making of this occurrence a diplomatic incident, despite the fact that if the ambassador has been correctly reported, his words might be used to the embarrassment of the Administration. Were it not for this possibility the matter would unquestionably be allowed to pass unnoticed, or would be the occasion only of a personal suggestion from the President to Mr. Bryce that he was on delicate ground. It is also possible, of course, that the ambassador has been incorrectly quoted, and it is to ascertain whether that is the case that the State Department is making its inquiries. If the matter is susceptible of a satisfactory explanation, doubtless no one will be more pleased than the Secretary of State.

Correspondence

To the Editor of the Chronicle:—

Sir.—With all due deference to the Cathedral bell-ringers, whose office is doubtless, entirely honorary, and having in mind the saying that we must not look a gift horse in the mouth, nevertheless would it not be desirable if these gentlemen were to practice occasionally with the bells muffled? The way the hymn tunes are murdered frequently is very regrettable, and yesterday this feature seemed to be more than usually marked. The ringers quoted don't hear the discord, but the public does. Of course, anyone who has the time can betake himself to Levis, and wait there till the music (?) is finished, but it must be very tough on those who reside in the vicinity. And the visitors in town must surely think they have struck a third-class village instead of a city.

Yours, etc.,

JAPAN WILL NOT RENEW TREATY.

Washington, July 7.—That the Japanese Government will not consent to the renewal of the present treaty with the United States if the American Government reserves the right to insert a clause in the compact excluding Japanese coolie labor from continental United States is indicated by semi-official advice purporting to give the views of Foreign Minister Hayashi, which were received here today from Otataka Yamakura, the personal representative of Count Okuma, leader of the Progressive party.

AN IDEAL SPOT.

It would be hard to find a more beautiful spot on this continent than the Montmorency Falls and Kent House Grounds, and a trip to this popular resort at present is a dream of delight. The Falls are particularly picturesque at present, the mighty volume of water now rushing over the rocky height being an awe-inspiring sight. No visitor to Quebec should miss seeing them.

NEWFOUNDLAND NEGOTIATION HITCH

St. John's, Nfld., July 1.—It is understood here that a deadlock has arisen in the negotiations between the British and American governments over the proposed modus vivendi for the coming winter herring fishery on the Newfoundland coast and that the condition arises from the British Cabinet's inability to enforce the suggested clause requiring the Newfoundland authorities, from serving legal processes aboard American vessels, clause to which the colonial authorities have refused to agree.

For Boys and Girls

"Mathematical Joe"

HOW did he get the name? If you but knew Joe you wouldn't ask such a question.

When he first went to school, arithmetic was the only study he delighted in. Later he studied algebra and geometry. By that time Joe simply lived for mathematics. While other boys played, he was hard at work; when others talked of baseball and football, mathematics was his pet subject—indeed, his only subject. So, "Mathematical Joe" he became, and the name stuck.

"JOE SLIPPED AND FELL."

scientific studies, and thoroughly enjoyed the work.

Last summer Joe's family spent their vacation in Switzerland.

One day he and his brother started off for a climb in the mountains without a guide.

Roped together, they were getting along famously, when Joe slipped and fell backward over the edge of a precipice.

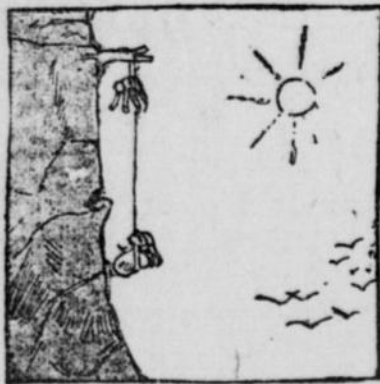

Luckily, the rope caught in a tree

"LUCKILY THE ROPE CAUGHT."

that grew outward from the cliff, and they were held safely for a time. But how to escape from this dangerous position? They couldn't hang there forever. If one of us could only reach the crotch of the limb above," thought Joe, "he could haul up the other."

Then he proceeded to make use of his scientific training. He began to make the rope move slowly at first, and then increased the length of the swing until he was able to grasp a great, massive stone that was detached from the face of the cliff.

"THE ESCAPE"

The great weight on his end of the rope then made his brother move upward toward the limb by which they were held. Jack reached it in safety, and pulled Joe up after him. They crawled along the limb, and were soon back on the path.

No longer did they make fun of "Mathematical Joe." If his "dry, old science" could save life, it must surely be worth studying, after all.

"BACK ON THE PATH"

A Queer Hat

WOULD you like to wear a hat like this, boys and girls? It is really worn by an old man, once a soldier, who lives in Portland, Ore.

He never cares to carry an umbrella, and so he made this hat, which serves both to cover the head and protect him from rain.

The hat looks so funny that quite a crowd follows the old man when he goes upon the streets, but he does not seem at all mindful of the stares.

Good Times Along the Creek

WHAT a treasure-trove the old creek is! What riches of nature's stores are hid near its rippling surface, or displayed along its banks!

The creek itself is wonderful, always surprising you with its wayward fancies and restlessness. Here it runs along smoothly, in seeming content; there it broadens out and its waters ripple and rustle and swirl over and around rocks without number; then it divides and shows you in its middle as pretty a little island as you might wish for your pirate's cave; often it bends and curves in a way that keeps you in the height of expectancy, wondering what new view will stretch before you.

What comfortable places the banks of the creek affords! There, to give grateful shade, are the fringes of oak, dogwood, birch, beech and witch hazel trees—the last variety so called because in the early days of our country old men and women thought to be witches gathered the roots and used the juices as a cure for all ills.

Here, too, you see the beautiful swamp cabbage, standing in places where the mud has collected, with its purple folds rolled up in pointed bundles. Near it wave the tassels of the swamp alder, and close by you see the spotted leaves and stalks of the yellow adders' tongue, "Snake feeders" glide here and there, and, without thinking, you look eagerly around for the snake, but nothing but was toads and grasshoppers greet your eye.

Where the thorny greenbriers cluster the hardy robins winter and the pheasants and quail eat the seeds and hide them from their enemies.

Over the water the bank-swallows skip, sometimes touching the surface just as do the stones you shy across to the other side. The kingfisher dives after his meal and the green heron, too, darts after minnows or pollywogs. Right above you the catbirds scold or laugh mockingly.

Along the bank the muskrat has his home. Just under the water's edge he digs his hole. It ascends upward for quite a distance, and at the end of it is his nest, nice and dry. The muskrat and the raccoon both like muskels, which they dig from beds in the muddy shallow. Beside some stone or tree near the water, you will see piles of these shells, where the animal has eaten their contents.

If you care to fish, the sunfish provides just as good sport as the mountain trout. Among the sand and pebbles it builds its nest and fiercely drives away its enemies. Even a chub, red-fin, or a catfish may come to your hook. Of course, you'll catch lots of minnows, but who wants minnows?

Frog eggs swing from the branches of plants under water. The stupid-looking tadpoles you see frisking around. From a log or stone near the bank yellow and speckled-headed frogs, propped up on their bowlegs, watch you solemnly. Tortoises and turtles plunk into the water and are lost sight of. You know, the ribs of the tortoise are united their whole length, while those of the turtle are separate at the ends.

Oh, yes, there's lots to be seen. After you've had a refreshing swim and lie there under a shady tree you don't feel like ever moving—even to go home for something to eat.

The Cat and the Bear

LEUTENANT C. D. RHODES, U. S. A., relates in St. Nicholas the following story of how a cat compelled a bear to flee:

Chris Bruin, the veteran first sergeant of Troop D, had a cat, which, during the summer camping of the troop at the Lower Geyser Basin, made her home within the sergeant's tent. Here, curled up on a pair of army blankets, she defied the world in general, and dogs in particular. When the latter approached, she would elevate every bristle on her brave little back, her eyes would glow like live coals, and her tail would swell up threateningly. If dogs approached too near, she would hiss and exhibit the usual signs of hostility until the intruders had vanished from her neighborhood.

One day, when the camp was bathed in sunshine and every soldier in camp felt lazy, an inquisitive black bear came down the mountain side, and, whether because he was in search of adventure or because attracted by a savory smell from the cook's fire, began to walk about among the white tents of the cavalry command.

Suddenly the cat caught sight of him. Dogs by the score she had seen, but this particular "dog" was the largest and the hairiest dog she had ever seen. But she did not hesitate. It was enough for her that an enemy had invaded her special domain. Hissing forth her spite, while her little body quivered with rage, she darted forth at the bear. The onslaught was sudden, and one glance was enough for Bruin. With a snort of fear, Bruin made for the nearest tree, a short distance away, and did not pause until he was safely perched among the upper branches! Meanwhile the cat stalked proudly about on the ground beneath, keeping close guard over her huge captive, her back still curved into a bow and her hair still bristling with righteous indignation, while her tail would, now and then, give a significant little wave, as if to say: "That's the way I settle important bears."

The soldiers, who meanwhile had poured forth from their tents, could scarcely believe their eyes; but there was the bear in the tree and the cat below, and there were those who had seen the affair from beginning to end.

And perhaps the strangest part of it all was that the bear would not stir from his safe position in the branches until the cat had been persuaded to leave her huge enemy a clear means of retreat! Then he slid shamefacedly down from his perch and ambled hastily off toward the mountain.

The Ball Did It.

Neighbor—Was it you who broke my window, Tommy?

Tommy—Well, I helped.

Neighbor—You helped, did you? How helped?

Tommy—It was a ball that broke your window—but I threw it.

More Gradual.

Jimmy—Who's goin' to tell Joe's mother he's hurt?

Jack—Let's send Clarence. He stutters so, he won't tell it so sudden.

DAY DREAMS IN THE HAMMOCK

OF GOBLINS and princes and ladies so fair,
And castles and treasures and jewels so rare;
A big, shaggy bear;
A princess who's carried away by a knave,
And brought back again by a hero so brave;
A wonderful case.

I know that you'll say this is all a day dream;
The fancies I'm spinning are not what they seem—They'll vanish like steam.
But truly they're real; for, whenever I look,
A witch or a giant's in each shadowed nook,
Like those in my book.

Of these and lots others I dream, hours a day;
It's easy to think of grand things when you stay
In hammocks that sway.
The trees tell me stories; the sparrows, in song
'Bout Fairyland elves, to fly there with me long.
With sprites I belong.

"Dottie Dimple"

IT IS true that Elizabeth had such pretty dimples, and as she was so merry, always laughing, whenever you saw Elizabeth you noticed her dimples. But, then, what was the use of having such "ornaments of beauty," as Ralph called them, if you didn't make use of them?

Dottie was a close friend of Elizabeth, so it was natural that she should admire the dimples—but she so longed to have such dimples herself, and spoke so much about it to the other girls that they began to call her "Dottie Dimple."

Ralph cured her of the "dimple" crazy," as he dubbed it. Brothers take lots of liberties, you know, that others don't dare to.

Dottie was taking a nap just before school time. As Ralph saw her a mischievous idea entered his head. Running back to the tool shed he grabbed a paint brush and carefully painted two dimples on Dottie's cheeks.

When Dottie awoke it was so late that she set off at once for school. Dottie declared to herself when she came home that day she would never say the word "dimple" again. All the afternoon the girls had made fun of her, nor did she gain peace until she reached home.

Strange to say, although Ralph had cured her of the habit, she wasn't at all grateful to him!

WHERE Nettle lived there was no garden at all—nor, indeed, room for one. Next door, however, where old Uncle George had his home, there was plenty of room for a garden, but not a sign of one.

For several weeks, Uncle George's sister, who "kept house" for him, was called away on business, and the old man was left alone.

At that time Nettle had offered to "keep house" until the sister's return. Uncle George never forgot this kindness, and although Nettle refused any remuneration, he promised himself that she should be rewarded.

So that when Nettle, leaning over the fence, looked into his yard and said, aloud, "It's a shame such nice ground should be wasted," she was surprised to hear a voice come from behind the tree nearby:

"Well, Nettle, I'll give you the use of it for a time." Uncle George came

A PROLIC WITH A GRIEVOUS ENDING

"TAINT no use talking, Jack. I've got to go with the folks. Last year I sneaked away and left grandpaw with all the baskets to carry. Pa was out of town, but he told him about it when he came back, and pa says I've got to do my share of the work this time or else I can't go."

Jack Warner whistled in sympathy as Bill Mumford looked down from the top of the freight car upon which they were perched.

"Too bad," said he; "half of the fun you get on a picnic is in going and coming—and you can't have any fun if you've a lot of baskets to mind."

"I'll meet you at the grove, anyway. None of the other 'robbers' are going. They're all going to wait for the Lutheran picnic, but I guess we'll find something to do."

Jack shinned down the ladder and made a bee-line for dinner, leaving Bill to scrape from his trousers some of the tar he had collected where he had been sitting.

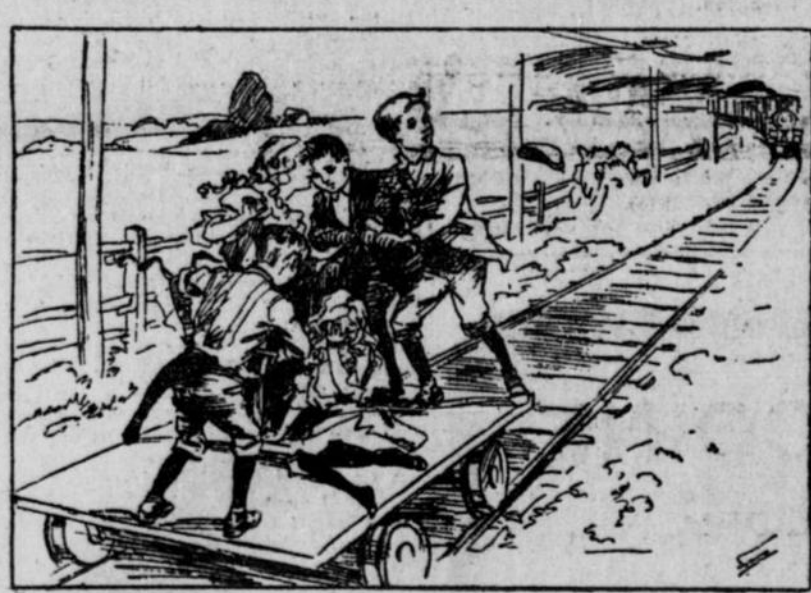

The next morning saw the perspiring Bill laboring toward the station under the weight of two heavy baskets.

"Gosh ding it!" he said to himself; "if it wasn't for what's comin' I'd chuck the job and run." But Bill never ran from a picnic in his life, and didn't intend beginning now.

However, diligent work is always rewarded. Bill managed to enjoy the ride in the train, even if he was with the folks, and his spirits had risen to their highest pitch by the time Chestnut Grove was reached.

Jack was there to meet him with a hearty yell, and helped him carry the baskets to the table selected.

Of course, the two first made a bee-line for the lake. That was a custom from which no member of the "Bloody Robbers" ever departed. For almost an hour they paddled on the water, and then, fearing lest their pocket money be all spent for the hire of the boat, they made for shore.

Sad to say, the "merry-go-round" was out of repair, but the boys found that they could easily push it around themselves and get as many rides as they wished without paying. Tommy Jones was imposed upon by being made to do most of the pushing—Tommy always did the work, while the others had the pleasure.

Then they passed a busy half hour in the swings, Jack and Bill doing stunts which caused them to be admired and envied by the onlookers.

Luncheon time had now arrived. Bill did his very best to eat up everything—

The Boy Across the Way

BERTIE was downright lonesome. You know it's awful to feel that way. But when the chum that you've known ever so long, and who taught you ever so many nice games moves away, things aren't just the same for a long while. Besides, it was raining, and that always makes you feel worse.

Bertie jingled together the knife with one blade, the bull's-eye and the lucky stone that Tommy had given him before he went away. Instead of cheering him, as they generally did, these treasures only made him more sad and discontented.

Flattening his nose against the window pane he gazed long and earnestly at the house across the way, where the new people had just moved in. Bertie was sure he wouldn't like them, 'cause he somehow felt that it was because of them that Tommy had gone. Yet he would like to know if the new folks had any little boys.

Just then he heard some one call from the house, "Jack! Jack! Come right in out of the wet this minute!" Oh, so there was a boy! Bertie ran quickly upstairs to see mother, but as he couldn't find her he asked auntie if he couldn't go and play with the little boy across the street.

Auntie, hardly hearing him, nodded "Yes."

He scampered through the rain and knocked at the door.

"Good mornin', Auntie says I could come over and play with your little boy if I'm not in the way," he explained to the kind-looking lady who came to the door.

The lady looked rather puzzled. "You see, I heard you call Jacky to come in out of the rain, and I s'posed he was lonesome like I was," Bertie went on, eagerly.

At this the lady laughed and laughed, so that Bertie's feelings would really have been hurt had she not looked so nice.

"Jacky is a monkey," at last she managed to gasp, "but I believe he would like to play with you just the same." Indeed, Jacky could play, and he was much more interesting than a boy. All that afternoon they romped and had all kinds of fun.

That evening Bertie told mother about the new "boy" across the way. "I think he's grand," said he, as he wound up his story.

Experiment With Matches.

In a basin of water float a number of matches, arranging them so that the heads are turned toward the center, as are the spokes of a wheel. Leave a little space in the very center.

Into this place dip a piece of soap. Immediately the matches will move away from it toward the sides of the basin.

On the other hand, if you will dip in the space a large lump of sugar, the matches will be attracted, and will move toward it.

Its Proper Place.

"Have you ever seen a lion skin?" asked the stern school director of a little boy in the front row.

"Yes, sir," was the prompt response. "Where?" questioned the director, much gratified at the boy's earnestness.

"On the lion," said the scholar.

Mother—Mercy, child, how do you get your hands so dirty? You never saw mine as dirty as that!

Child—No; but I guess grandma did!

NETTIE EARN'S A VACATION.

WHERE Nettle lived there was no garden at all—nor, indeed, room for one. Next door, however, where old Uncle George had his home, there was plenty of room for a garden, but not a sign of one.

For several weeks, Uncle George's sister, who "kept house" for him, was called away on business, and the old man was left alone.

At that time Nettle had offered to "keep house" until the sister's return. Uncle George never forgot this kindness, and although Nettle refused any remuneration, he promised himself that she should be rewarded.

So that when Nettle, leaning over the fence, looked into his yard and said, aloud, "It's a shame such nice ground should be wasted," she was surprised to hear a voice come from behind the tree nearby:

"Well, Nettle, I'll give you the use of it for a time." Uncle George came into view.

Nettie thought what fun this would be, to have a garden all her own, so she was soon industriously at work planting.

You know Nettle's mother is an invalid. This summer she was very ill, and the doctor said she must go to the mountains.

But Nettle knew this they could never afford. Then all at once she thought of her garden. Hitherto she had not thought of growing enough to sell, but perhaps, after all, she could make some money.

The garden was tended more carefully than ever this year. To her joy it yielded a fine crop of strawberries, and as most of the farmers had ill luck in raising theirs, she got a lot of money for them.

Nettie's mother was so surprised that she couldn't speak when Nettle told her they were now going to the mountains. She is certainly proud of Nettle.

What is more, Uncle George says Nettle may keep her garden just as long as she wants to.

To Make Swimming Fish

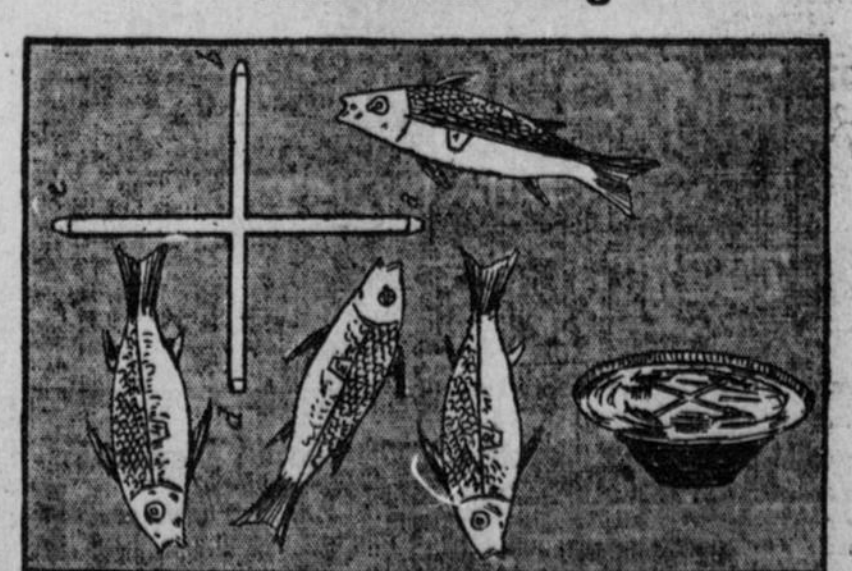

DIAGRAM EXPLAINING THE TRICK

THAT paper fish can be made to swim without aid may seem impossible, but if you will follow these directions you will see for yourself that it can be done quite easily. Cut out of very thin cardboard a cross of the same shape as that given in the diagram. Bend the ends upward. From the same cardboard cut out fish such as are shown here. Glue the fish to the places indicated on the cross by the letters a, b, c and d.

Now get four pieces of camphor, each about the size of a pea. Attach each little ball of camphor, by glue or gum, to the tail of a fish, so that the camphor will lie beneath the surface of the water when the whole is floated in a basin.

No sooner is the cross placed in the water than the camphor gives signs of dissolving just as soap does when placed in water, and so violent is the action that your fish will swim rapidly in a circle.
