THE RED CROSS DRIVE

The drive throughout the Dominion of Canada for the Red Cross has been running for ten days with an objective of nine million dollars.

The share for the East part of Pontiac is $3500. of which the Shawville district, which includes Bristol, Clarendon and Thorne, with the village, is asked for $900

Canvassers are calling on the homes for the donations of the people and you are asked to receive them kindly, and make an offering as liberal as possible. If any are missed by the canvassers please hand in, or send the amount to the treasurer, Rev. A. F. Fokes at your earliest convenience.

It is hoped to finish up the drive this week, and we expect this district to go over the top in the fine way it did two years ago.

The Red Cross is doing a magnificent work in sending comfort to our troops, aiding the bombed areas, assisting hospitals, providing ambulances and sending medical supplies to our allies. The work of the Red Cross is a God-send in the bombed areas. Do your very best!

Y. P. U. Play Draws Capacity House

The United Y. P. U. play "The Early Bird" presented last Wednesday night was a huge success and drew a capacity house. The humorous lines and situations kept the audience in roars of laughter, and the story, with its fine moral, was followed with keen interest.

All the characters excelled themselves: the hero, Robin Hodgins, and heroine, Miss Frances Fairbairn, and the crusty railroad president, Clarence Dean, acted their parts well. Humorous parts brightened the play, these being taken by Ben Midlidge, as the rich, flirtatious landowner; Mrs. Norris Horner, as a boarding house keeper; Ina McDowell, as her daughter, and Jessie Armstrong, as a servant girl.

Minor parts that were also well done included, Dougal Sharp, as an office boy; Leona Horner, as a stenographer, and Cameron Rowat, as a lovesick office clerk: also Euella Turner, as land agent, and Wilmur Hodgins, as an office executive. Straight roles were taken by Walter Kilgour and Kay Woodley.

Music was supplied by the Sinclair amplifying unit and was much enjoyed. Rev. A. F. Fokes was the director.

Gasoline Law Rigid

Enforcement officers of the War time Prices and Trade Board point out that ration books must be handed to the filling station attendant so that he can remove the coupons before he supplies the gasoline.

In some cases purchasers have refused to co-operate by handing over their books. These are warned by the Board that if, the customer fails to comply and gasoline is supplied to him the filling station attendants are open to prosecution.

The regulation is to ensure that gasoline coupons apply to the vehicle concerned. This is checked by the salesman who compares the license number of the vehicle with the number on the book.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON 20
TUESDAY: THE DAY OF CONFLICT
Matthew 21:23—23:39
PRINTED TEXT
Matthew 22:41—23:12

GOLDEN TEXT. — The stone which the builders rejected, The same was made the head of the corner. Mark 12:10.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time.—Tuesday, April 4, A.D. 30.

Place.—In Jerusalem, probably in the temple.

41. "Now while the Pharisees were gathered together, Jesus asked them a question, 42. saying, What think ye of the Christ? Whose son is he? They say unto him, The son of David." By the word Christ, our Lord meant the Messiah, for the Hebrew word Messiah was translated in the Greek language as Christos, both words meaning the 'anointed one.' That the Messiah is the son of David is clearly taught in Psalm 110, and in 2 Sam. 7, and is continually referred to in the New Testament.

The Son of David

43. "He saith unto them, How then doth David in the Spirit call him Lord, saying, 44. The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, Till I put thine enemies underneath thy feet? 45. If David then calleth him Lord, how is he his son? 46. And no one was able to answer him a word, neither durst any man from that day forth ask him any more questions." Then Christ asked them, if the Messiah was to be the son of David, how could they account for the fact that in this very Messianic Psalm, David who wrote the Psalm, speaks of his son the Messiah as Lord. How could a man have a son whom he referred to as divine? The son might call the father Lord as his master or superior, but how could the father, a king, speak of his son in this way?

David's Lord

This question of Christ was a revealing question. Their conception of Messiah was a wrong conception. They came to him about their politics, they expected a Messiah who would lead an army, and break the yoke and set them free; but he said, You do not know your Messiah. You think of Him as coming in David's line, but He is more than David's Son, He is David's Lord.

Exhorting the Multitude

1. "Then spake Jesus to the multitudes and to his disciples, 2. saying, The scribes and the Pharisees sit on Moses' seat: 3. all things therefore whatsoever they bid you, these do and observe: but do not ye after their works; for they say, and do not." Christ here is careful to distinguish between the office of those false religious teachers and their actual practice. He recognizes that they are worthy of being heard, as far as they upheld the Mosaic Law. They were said to 'sit in Moses seat'; that is, to be acting in his place and to proclaim his laws as teachers of the revealed will of God. In so far as they were true to such a sacred office they were to be obeyed. It was their practices however, which were to be avoided, especially their failure to follow their own precepts.

To Be Seen of Men

4. "Yea, they bind heavy burdens and grievous to be borne, and lay them on men's shoulders; but they themselves will not move them with their finger. 5. But all their works they do to be seen of men: for they make broad their phylacteries, and enlarge the borders of their garments, 6. and love the chief place at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues." The heavy burdens here referred to are the manifold, and often ridiculous, interpretations of the law of Moses, which these religious leaders insisted that men must obey; elaborate laws concerning washing, the Sabbath, business relationships. Men could not even remember the different laws they enacted, much less continually obey them. Phylactery signifies in classical Greek a guarded post, then a safeguard, finally an amulet, as guarding against evil.

Christ, The Master

7. "And the salutations in the market places, and to be called of men, Rabbi. 8. But be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your teacher, and all ye are brethren. 9. And call no man your father on the earth: for one is your Father, even he who is in heaven. 10. Neither be ye called masters. for one is your master, even the Christ." What our Lord prohibits is desire for the distinction involved in being recognized as a religious teacher.

Servants of Men

11. "But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant. 12. And whosoever shall exalt himself shall be humbled; and whosoever shall humble himself shall be exalted." Not only are we not continually to seek to be exalted among our fellowmen, and to be praised by them, but rather, if we are to be truly great in the sight of God, we are to be as Christ was, servants of men. A proud man, sooner or later, comes into such circumstances that he is humiliated, whereas a man who lives a truly humble life ultimately, not of his own seeking, but in recognition of such a virtue on the part of others, is exalted among men.

RADIO REPORTER

DIALING WITH DAVE:

Volume 8 — The eighth year of broadcasting by Jim and Marian Jordan, as lovable "Fibber McGee and Molly," began with their broadcast of Tuesday, April 14th, on the NBC-Red, CBC Networks. Their writer all through their radio career is Don Quinn. Listen to McGee and Molly, Tuesday 9.30 p.m. — CBC Network!

The average radio listener is a sturdy fellow with red blood coursing through his veins, and half-inch armor plate for epidermis. He is either impervious or indifferent, and his nerves are made of spring steel. That is the considered opinion of Himan Brown, who directs the Blue Networks shuddery Sunday night 8.30 "Inner Sanctum Mystery" Series. Right now, Himan's a bewildered and disillusioned gentleman.

"We started out modestly on a small scale to test their (the listeners) mettle. We gave them vampires, snakes, deathly nursery rhymes, supernatural demons, zombies and black magic. They loved it and asked for more. Not a sign of surrender—maybe they are a bit scared during the broadcasts, but the mail response shows they want 'em bigger and better—more macabre and more macabre—weirder and weirder! And, I think we've got the answer! We've arranged to have the Bogey Man of them all, Boris Karloff, do a number of guest shows, in the best mystery yarns we can lay our hands on. We kinda figure that the boys and girls who like their radio 'horror' in effective doses will lend an ear to his May 17th and June 7th and 21st broadcasts!"

Thanks Himan — we're among the sturdy listeners, and we'll be listening Sunday nights at 8.30, for the Inner Sanctum Mysteries!

* * *

Eddie Anderson, better known to radio's millions as "Rochester" valet to Jack Benny (NBC-CBC Sunday 7.00 p.m.), and custodian of Benny's ancient Maxwell, got his first big break in radio through a routine audition. The call was out for a Negro to play the part of a porter on a Chicago to Los Angeles train. A number of prospects were auditioned before Anderson, who had just finished the role of Noah, in the movie "Green Pastures," won the assignment. As he has since often done, Eddie stole the show from Benny on that program Easter Sunday 1937. Benny and his writers decided "Rochester" was too good to drop. So they kept him on the program by evolving the idea of an audacious valet. "Rochester" has been a fixture on the Jack Benny program since. He's done so well, he now has his own valet!

Some 1150 Listening Tips

Interesting sidelight on radio broadcasting was afforded a number of dealers and executives on Friday night, April 24th, when the "Bandwagon" show was done from the stage of the CKOC Radio Theatre. Joe Chrysdale, Howard Caine, Jean Gillard and all those associated with the show, including the assembled gathering, took part in the 'on the air' program. Incidentally, each Friday night's Bandwagon trips down Harmony Highways sparkle with novel program ideas, good music and good fun. The time is 8.30 from 1150 on your radio dial.

If you're the kind of person who likes to set your dial with the assurance you can have a couple of hours of the best entertainment in radio coming up, then tune to CKOC Sunday night at eight o'clock: Check these off: Eight o'clock, Charlie McCarthy, 8.30 Inner Sanctum Mysteries, and 9.00 o'clock, the Fred Allen Variety Show!

Record of the week, and a Sunday on CKOC 1.30 p.m. Hit Parade favorite, is Glen Miller's "Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree."

A Weekly Column About This and That in The Canadian Army

Did you know that men faint at the sight of blood, or at the thought of it, more easily than women? It's a fact. Perhaps not quite a fact from the strict angle of the clinical records of many cases that would accompany a medical statement, but—at least for the purpose of this essay—a fact!

The statement comes from a faithful worker in the Ottawa Blood Donor Clinic of the Red Cross. Five days a week at that establishment streams of men and women go to offer five-sevenths of a pint of blood to be made into plasma and shipped to Enland for Canadian soldiers and bombed British civilians.

For some reason or other — largely psychological in the opinion of some of the volunteer workers—some of the donors faint. It can't be from loss of blood—many a soldier has lost more than that much blood and still had strength enough to "bawl out" the sweating stretcherbearers for clumsiness. It is hardly likely the reason is delicacy—for, in most cases, the fainter is apt to be a big husky male, while a little half-pint of a woman is not bothered at all.

At the Montreal clinic on one occasion six men were sitting in the rest room enjoying the hot, sweet tea or coffee that is given to each donor while he rests for a few minutes following his turn on the table, when one of them keeled over. He was followed in a matter of minutes by four of the remaining five.

What has all this to do with the Individual Citizen's Army?

Quite a lot!

For one thing—and I should make it clear that many more people give their blood without fainting than do faint—the giving of blood is a definite and easy piece of soldiering that we can do in our spare time.

For another, this gives one example of why it is necessary for us to go easy on the sugar—there are many better uses to which it can be put than just sweetening beverages

Two facts—that it is against the law to hoard sugar, and that the Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic can put sugar to good use—were brought home to Montrealers recently when more than a quarter of a ton of sugar was handed over to the Red Cross by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

It had been seized from a hoarder who was fined $100 and costs for "withholding from supply." After the fine was paid there still remained the question of the sugar. While the fine had expiated the offence it was still not possible for the owner to keep the sugar. It is against the law to have more than two weeks' ration of sugar in your possession.

Hence the windfall for the Blood Clinic, which now has a year's supply. And do you know what that year's supply will do?

The clinic send to Toronto for processing 400 units of blood per week. That means that 400 blood donors get 400 sweetened beverages to help them recuperate and by simple multiplication it shows that the once-hoarded sugar will play its part in making possible the shipping of 20,000 units of blood plasma to where it is most needed.

Not all of us are handy enough to a blood clinic to be able to offer our blood—neither is every soldier in the front line. In fact it takes quite a number of soldiers behind the line to keep one at the front.

Of course in these days of mobile warfare it is sometimes hard to tell if the front line is in front, behind or at one side so every soldier, even if he belongs to what was a non-combatant service, is now trained to fight.

That's where the Individual Citizen's Army comes in. We can all train—in fact it looks as if we shall have to. There'll be no more telephoning to the corner drug store for a packet of cigarettes or a bottle or two of "pop." Now we'll have to do without or put on a hat and walk down there for it.

That's all to the good. How long is it since you went for a walk with your wife, or you with your husband?

It used to be fun, remember? Now we're going to find out that it still is good fun and what is better by doing more walking we'll make ourselves fitter.

There's no reason why only soldiers should be trained to physical fitness. In fact the members of our army need it more than they do—we've got to be fit enough to do without things so they can have them.

Wheat Acreage Cut In Western Canada

Decrease of approximately 800,000 acres in Western Canada's wheat acreage from last year is estimated in a preliminary survey by the agricultural department of the Canadian Pacific Railway made public in the first of the railway's weekly crop reports.

The report says Manitoba's acreage may be about 11 percent down, Saskatchewan's about three percent and Alberta's about two percent.

Total acreage to be sown to wheat in the three western provinces is placed at 20,755,000.

Vacation War Work For Nazi Students

German high school boys and girls will spend their summer vacations this year working in munitions factories under a plan mobilizing all the Reich's labor resources, Berlin despatches to the Basel National Zeitung say.

Younger students are being mobilized for farm work, and schools in some sectors will be closed immediately so they may go into field camps, the despatches declared.

Within a few weeks, it was said, there will be scarcely a German man or woman not engaged in some manner of war work.

The biggest gaps in the labor front, however, will be filled by increasing use of war prisoners and civilians imported from conquered lands, the advices reported.

It was expected that most of these would be employed in farming, but the difficulties of transportation were described as great because "the German railways have even more urgent tasks."

Air Raid Wardens To Carry Lipstick

Lipsticks—as possible lifesavers—found their way into 65,000 first aid belts being distributed to air raid wardens in Massachusetts. Officials said use of lipstick is the simplest means of writing on a person's forehead identification, classification of injuries and other information.

● SERIAL STORY

ANOTHER MAN'S WIFE

BY DONNA ASHWORTH

LAST WEEK: A dance at the Farmington Country Club is an event for Ann. She has a grand time with Ken, meets new friends. Late in the evening a crowd arrives from Richmond. An elderly man sees Ann, rushes toward her, calling her "Jean." "I think I must be your father!"

* * *

MARSHALL'S DAUGHTER

CHAPTER VIII

It was the morning after the spring opening of the Country Club. Ann and Sally sat eating a late breakfast.

"It was too exciting, Sally." Ann was bubbling as she sat drinking her coffee, looking much like a little girl in her crisp blue house dress, a blue ribbon around her head.

"Exciting! I'd say," Sally exclaimed with eager eyes. "Give me the details."

"Well, those people came in. I didn't know who they were, of course, and when we went into the ballroom, this man rushed toward me as we stood in the doorway. He is terribly good-looking. I can hardly wait for him to get here. He's handsome, with some gray in his hair, just like I used to dream my father would look, and he dashed over to me, calling me Jean. You know, that was my mother's name, so they said at the home, and the note that she left was signed that way. And there he was telling me I was her image, asking Ken if he were crazy, seeing a ghost.

"I told him I was Jean Ann Marshall, so what, and he says he's my father.

* * *

"Was everybody impressed? The Marshalls, it seems, have everything and always have had, and I gathered from the conversation that Father—doesn't that sound nice—was sort of a black sheep, went to New York and fell violently in love with my mother, who was a chorus girl. He married her, and when he brought her down here, his family were so snooty that she ran away. His mother must have been like Ken's mother, I guess." Ann's words tumbled out as she hurried through her story.

"Mother was going to have me, but didn't tell them, she hated them so, and her husband, too, for not making them take her in, or something, and when I was born, she didn't tell them until long afterward. She wrote Father a letter telling him that he had a daughter whom she had named Jean Ann Marshall, but that he would never find her.

"He never saw my mother again and he had no way of tracing the child, so she had a complete revenge for everything. He married again, later, and has two sons. The second wife is dead now.

"You ought to marry him, Sally. Wouldn't that be nice? You could be my stepmother, and you wouldn't have to work any more. I'll see what I can do. And he's coming. There's the bell now. Oh . . ."

* * *

She was on her feet, hurrying out, returning in a moment accompanied by a stranger.

"You're as beautiful in the daylight as you are at night." John Marshall said as he walked beside her. "My dear, I can't believe it is all true, but there isn't any question in my mind."

"It doesn't seem possible," answered Ann, her voice shaking a little. Yes, she would like this man for a father, or for a friend. "You don't know what it means to always want a family and never have one. It's just too wonderful.

"And this is Sally. She's pretending to be my aunt, though she isn't, and you musn't ever tell anybody the difference. Sally will have to be on my mother's side—I've been most indefinite up to now, but now that the family tree has branches on one side, I'll have to begin to grow them on the other. But Sally is a piece of background I never had, and the finest person in the world. Sally, this is Mr. John Marshall, my father. I hope it is true that I can say that."

* * *

"I know it is true," John Marshall said. "I have talked to the people at the orphanage in New York. Everything tallies, even to the time that your mother wrote me, the name and all."

"Here, sit down." Sally was pushing up a chair. "We're just having breakfast. Won't you join us? Try these biscuits and jelly, Jenny's best. We can talk while we eat."

* * *

John Marshall sat down, but he couldn't keep his eyes off Ann. He drank the coffee which Sally served him, but all the time he was staring at his new-found daughter. "You're the image of your mother. I thought she was the most beautiful woman in the world. . . Now I've found you. What are you doing down here? I was too excited to ask last night."

"The same thing my mother did, getting ready to marry a man out of my social level," Ann admitted. "I'm going to marry Ken Richards in June. I wanted to meet his friends, get acquainted. I had known him in New York, but he was afraid his family wouldn't take me in—a dancer—just as yours turned against my mother.

"So, I'm here, trying to be a lady, so that Ken's mother will accept me, that's the main idea." She laughed a little. "I'm telling you all my secrets, but they must not be told in Farmington. Ken made me promise that.

"He didn't have the courage that you had in bringing my mother to your home 25 years ago. He is afraid of his mother and the people here, so we're playing a game of pretend for them. They don't know about that past. It's gone."

* * *

"He may not have had as much courage," said John Marshall slowly, "but he has better judgment. He pobably knows his mother better than I knew mine.

"But it will be all right now. You're my daughter ,and that does count here, as well as in Richmond. You'll come over there, of course, you and Sally? The boys are never home.

"The house needs a woman in it, too, though I am well enough taken care of. Aunt Miranda, the colored housekeeper, has been there for years and years. She looks after everything, but it would be much nicer if you were there."

"Richmond." Ann spoke dreamily. "Things are just too exciting. I can't get used to it all. I think I'd better stay here since I'm going to marry Ken so soon, and I want to see him as much as I can. But we can come back and forth. Sally and I will love it.

"Now I'm really Ann Marshall, who has a family, a father and brothers and probably aunts and cousins. If you only knew how I've dreamed of that." Her eyes were shining.

"Last night it happened just like I'd dreamed it would, only it was much more wonderful, because"—she met the eyes of the man beside her—"you're so very nice, and like I'd dreamed my father would be, too . . ."

* * *

"Ann, darling!" The front door slammed. There was the sound of hurrying feet and Ken Richards came dashing through the house.

"Isn't it great? Good morning, Mr. Marshall. Hello, Sally. Everybody in town is talking about you. I'll bet Mother has had a dozen telephone calls. And she is excited. There isn't anybody that she thinks as highly of as she does of the Marshalls . . ."

"Oh."

Ann looked at him through eyes that were suddenly a little hard, and there was something a little mocking about the set of her lips. "My name was Marshall before . . ."

"It isn't just the name, Ann, honey; it's your being John Marshall's daughter . . . It makes you really somebody."

"I'm just the same person that I was yesterday," Ann answered lightly. "Except I'm happier today."

"But you don't understand. Mother has decided to accept you. She wants you to come to tea."

HAPPY WARRIORS

How To Prolong Life Of Stovepipe

Extra care in putting away stove pipes this Spring is a good precaution against future scarcity.

Pipes should be wrapped carefully and stored in a dry place. Before this is done the inner surface of the pipe, as well as the outside should be cleaned with a stiff brush to remove all carbon deposits. If the surface coating is scratched, the area around it should be cleaned with sand paper or steel wool and given a coating of good heat-resistant paint. After this has been allowed to dry thoroughly all surfaces of the pipe should be covered with heavy oil, grease or hot paraffin.

Finally, the pipe should be wrapped securely in paper—preferably waxed paper—and stored in a dry place. A similar procedure should be followed to prolong the life and save the metal content of a smoke pipe of a furnace or any other removable sheet metal parts which normally collect furnace soot.

Where a stove pipe has been partially destroyed, the serviceable portions of the pipe should be saved.

When a stove pipe is not protected during the summer, the sulphur in the pipe attracts moisture, forming sulphuric acid which eats away the iron. Precautionary measures will prolong the life of a stove pipe many years.

Radios Out of Action

It has been estimated that one of every ten domestic radio sets in Britain cannot be used because of a shortage of valves, batteries and skilled labor.

Marketing Basket Now Fashionable

Signs of the times point to a return to fashion of the marketing basket or capacious shopping bag.

Curtailment of deliveries, and conservation of wrapping paper suggests that more time will in future be given to the household shopping. The habit of ringing up the store at all hours of the day for the odd item forgotten in the first morning order, will have to be cured. The latest order of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board cuts out, with a few exceptions, the special delivery of any parcel under the value of one dollar by any means—truck, bicycle or on foot.

The patriotic shopper will in future carry her own parcels whenever possible, and co-operate with storekeepers by putting in her marketing basket all packaged goods without further wrapping. The general shakeup in housekeeping methods will call for more careful meal planning, and a return into the gentle sport of walking.

Floating Island

The last Dutch ship to leave the bombed, fired and dynamited Java naval base of Surabaya has arrived at an Australian port, says Newsweek. It got there without being caught by enemy patrols by rigging up a disguise that outdid any ruse ever used by the Japanese. The Dutch had fastened trees and other bits of tropical scenery to their ship, thus giving it the appearance of a small island.

THE SUIT-DRESS

By Louise Lennox

The brightest beam on the fashion horizon. It's the dress that looks like a suit that combines all the versatility and wearability of a suit with the simplicity of a two-piece dress. You'll like the nipped-in waist and the smooth bodice of this youthful interpretation.

Style No. 3253 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 36, 38, and 40. Size 16 requires 4⅛ yards 39-nch fabric for jacket and skirt.

TABLE TALKS

Did you ever stop to think of how much eye appeal has to do with our foods?

Add a garnish to a plain dish of pudding or custard and the value of that dessert multiples instantaneously. A little whipped cream in fancy form; some sliced berries; a few scattered nut meats; some jelly — no matter how simple or how complex the garnish, it turns a plain dessert into a fancy one.

Sugarless days need not mean "no desserts." Here are a couple of recipes for rennet-custards—desserts that call for no sugar, no eggs, no baking or no boiling. Make these, add your favorite garnishes, place the finished product before your guests — and your dessert problem is solved for the day.

English Rennet-Custard

1 package maple rennet powder
1 pint milk, not canned
½ cup chopped dates
½ cup raisins
¼ cup currants
⅛ teaspoon cloves
⅛ teaspoon cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup cornflakes

Mix fruits, spices and cornflakes and divide among 5 or more dessert glasses. Make rennet-custard according to directions on package, pouring at once over fruits, spices and cornflakes. Let set until firm — about 10 minutes. Then chill in refrigerator.

Chocolate Date Rennet-Custard

1 package chocolate rennet powder
1 pint milk, not canned
20 dates

Chop dates in small pieces and divide among 6 dessert glasses. Make rennet-custard according to directions on package. Pour at once over chopped dates. Do not move until firm — about 10 minutes. Then chill in refrigerator.

Patch Holes With New Resin Fabric

Piece Welded To Whole by Means of Hot Iron

A tear i nthe middle of the tablecloth—and it doesn't seem worth reweaving. A rip in a sheet —and you add it to the pile of family mending. A worn spot on Dad's shirt just where the point of the collar rubs—and you know from previous experience that nearly any kind of patch will be unsightly and spoil the looks of an otherwise good shirt.

* * *

These are just a few of the mending difficulties that Mrs. Thrifty Housewife faces as she sorts her weekly laundry. But they need be problems no longer. With the new resin-treated material that's on the market, mending can be done along with the family ironing. Just take a piece of the mending material, cut to size, lay it under the torn place, press it for a few seconds with a hot iron, let it cool—and the job's done.

No more long darning jobs, no unsightly patches, no expensive reweaving on your household linens. Just a quick pressing job, and your mending is done. And according to word received from experts, this patch is almost invisible, and what's more, it withstands a lot of laundering—both washing and ironing.

Patching washable household cottons and linens is not its only use. Holes in pants, raincoats, and other colored, heavy-fabric materials can also be repaired if a spare piece of patch material is available. Sometimes it can be taekn from some concealed part of the article to be mended. Here too the process is simple. In order to be sure that the new piece will fit exactly into the worn place, cut through both layers at the same time, preferably with a sharp razor blade. Set the cut-out patch into the hole into which it fits. Then fasten it permanently into place by a piece of mending material cut somewhat larger than the patch and applied from the reverse side. Cement it into place with your hot iron.

60,000 Warbirds Australia's Quota

Since the war began 250,000 men have applied for enlistment in the Royal Australian Air Force, states Australian Press Union. New South Wales leads with 90,000. Then comes Victoria 60,000, Queensland 40,000, South Australia and West Australia 30,000 each, meaning that a man has volunteered for the R.A.A.F. ever five minutes since the war began.

Not all the 250,000 men have been accepted, but the call-ups have been sufficient to permit Australia to honor her undertaking to supply 60,000 trained airmen and ground staff under the Empire air scheme. Since Japan entered the war the eagerness of Australia's youth to enlist has become even more pronounced.

Train Tasters To Test Egg Powder

Art and Science of Egg Tasting Developed In U. S.

A team of 12 men is being trained in the art and science of egg tasting at the U. S. Bureau of Home Economics laboratories in Maryland, relates The Toronto Telegram. Their job will be to apply the taste test to the whole dried egg powder being shipped to Britain under lend-lease agreement. The 160,000,000 pounds of whole dried egg powder represents quite an astronomical number of eggs, since it takes three dozen eggs to make one pound of the powder.

Very little whole dried egg powder is used in the United States. American consumption, chiefly by bakers and confectioners, is of dried egg whites or dried egg yolks, not whole dried eggs.

The British housewife will receive her whole dried egg powder through the Ministry of Food in a five-ounce cardboard package with a waxed paper inner lining, containing the equivalent of one dozen eggs, and will cost about 40 cents. Directions for use and instructions to keep in a cool place away from strong odors will be on the label.

At the receiving end in England, Dr. C. S. Hanes, of the Low Temperature Research Laboratory, Cambridge, will conduct taste tests as a further check on the palatability of the product before release for use. Dr. Hanes has himself just been through the egg tasting training in Maryland.

Seersucker Saves Precious Hours

With Red Cross sewing, defence classes, and other new responsibilities, added to the daily schedule of the average housewife, it's a happy day when she can cut corners. And that's right where the use of seersucker in the family wardrobe steps in to save precious hours over the washtub and the ironing board. Seersucker is easily washed and takes so little ironing. It has a practical value for summer pyjamas that can't be excelled. Blouses and school dresses of this time-saving material will help keep the family in plenty of clean clothes with a minimum of effort expended.

For the best results, starch the material lightly when washing blouses and dresses. It will give them a crispness almost like new and the garments will last twice as long. I've tried it and it works like magic. If the garment seems to need it, you may press slightly while dry.

Care Will Make Rubber Last Longer

Rubber is going to be increasingly hard to get in any form. Rubber articles in the home should be given the greatest care to make them last longer. Remember in storing that rubber rots quicker in hot, damp places than in cool, dry places.

Dust talcum powder or cornstarch in the creases or folds of rubber or rubberized articles for protection against cracking.

Stuff paper in rubber boots or overshoes when putting them away.

To make rubber gloves wear longer, don't wear them to polish brassware or copper kitchen utensils, or when cleaning pans, with a ball of steel or brass thread. These metals are enemies of rubber.

No Scrap Rubber Can be Destroyed

The scope of the regulation making it an offence to destroy tires has been broadened to include all scrap rubber, it was announced today by the Department of Munitions and Supply.

The order now provides that no person shall burn, cut or destroy any tire or tube of a passenger car, truck, motorcycle, bicycle, airplane, or other vehicle, any rubber boots, hose, scrap from repairing or from making repair materials, buffing scrap from preparing for retreading, retread scrap, fan belts, radiator or other used or discarded rubber products or rubber scrap.

An authorized tire dealer must make the best possible use of tires and tubes which can be made fit for further use on the road. He must resell those which are in good condition, and he must repair and recell those which can be made safe for operation. He is allowed, however, to sell to another authorized dealer for repair and resale a tire which he does not want to repair himself. All tires or tubes which cannot be sold, or repaired for sale, to a vehicle owner must be disposed of to a salvage collector such as a local branch of the National Salvage Committee, or sold to a scrap dealer.

Shawville Cemetery Donations

The Cemetery Improvement committee wishes to report to the people who have friends buried in the Main Street cemeteries, either Anglican or United, that the fine work they have carried on for several years in cemetery upkeep will soon have to cease unless these friends come to their help soon. Several years ago a fine donation of funds was received ; but since that time the surplus raised has been drawn upon, as the annual receipts were not sufficient to meet expences. It takes about $300 a year to carry on this work of honor for our dead and last year, to make our burying places beautiful, we spent $100 more than we received. The committee can only do the work if they receive money to hire help, purchase tools, etc, and our only source of revenue is the gifts of the people. Since this committee took over this work, our cemeteries, that once were an eyesore in the community have become places of beauty ; and we are sure all desire to keep them so. Please send your donations in as soon as possible to Dr. D. J. Campbell, who will acknowledge same by receipt and through the pages of the Equity. Do it now.

Making No More Tires for Pleasure Cars

Fewer than one out of every 16 passenger cars in Canada will be permitted new tires and tubes during the next two years, Alan H. Williamson, supplies controller, estimated Sunday.

He said that no new civilian passenger tires are being manufactured, and that even with strict control the existing stockpiles will probably be exhausted by this time in 1944.

"During these next two years only about 75,000 essential passenger cars can be supplied.', Mr. Williamson said in a statement.

"Of the remaining 1,175,000 cars in Canada about 800,000 will not be allowed tires of any kind.

The balance of 372,000 passenger cars are those in class (B) and class (C) The higher of these two groups may be able to buy some retreaded tires or have some of their own tires retreaded. The lowest eligible group will have to get along with any used tires that may still be available.

Mr. Williamson said that good quality second-hand tires have been scarce. Some, however, will become available when owners lay up their cars for lack of sufficient usable tires. "No one is required to turn in surplus tires," he said but it is the patriotic duty of every car owner to sell to an authorized dealer any he has left when he can no longer drive his car."

The controller said motorists should not be deceived by rumors. "There are still those who believe that synthetic rubber production is the answer to all our problems," he said. 'I only wish it were. The facts are that synthetic rubber will not be produced for very many months, and then every ounce will be required for war purposes."

New Magnesia Plant at Farm Point

The first production in Farm Point, Que., of pure magnesia is announced by the Aluminum Company of Canada. Ltd. with the opening of the company's new magnesia plant. "The first run is entirely satisfactory", said F. E. Dickie, manager of the new plant. This magnesia is a highly important war material and is made from Canadian raw materials. Extensive deposits of brucitic limestone in the Gatineau Valley are being used as the ore for the high-grade magnesia which will be produced now in substantial tonnage."

SOLDIER POSTMAN

How often we hear of the action
By our forces on land and on sea,
The lads in our great air-force section
But there's lads with the C. P. C.
They train just like all other soldiers
They too carry rifles and guns,
With knapsacks and kits on their sholders
You can bet they'll help conquer the Huns.
Who helps to keep all our lads happy
By getting the mail out on time,
By fixing some parcels so snappy ?
Why, our posties, right in the front line.
At Christmas when mail is so heavy,
These men have to work day and night,
To keep all the mail sorted and ready,
To fill comrades heart with delight.
When the Christmas rush really is heavy
And the Posties must do without sleep,
He often works twenty hours steady,
Still on with their sorting they keep ;
They know what a letter from home means
To our lads who are over the seas,
Telling of loved ones and home scenes,
Helps to keep their minds always at ease
To you who loved ones out yonder,
Here's something I'd like to say :
Don't make the Posties work longer,
Remember it's more work than play ;
And always when parcels your mailing,
Make sure that they're wrapped good and strong,
It will save much cussing and wailing
For things will go right 'stead of wrong.
Remember all things that's worth doing,
Are always worth doing right,
A piece of strong cloth, with some sewing
Will help keep your parcels real tight.
When a parcel breaks open in transit,
There are candies and biscuits galore.
Till you can't tell the candies from biscuits
As they scatter all over the floor
Sometimes as so often may happen,
Several parcels may split
Things will come loose from their wrappings
It's enough to give Postie a fit ;
They never can tell from which parcel
This thing or the other has come ;
And maybe the Postie must cancel
A parcel from loved ones at home.
Now can't you just see the confusion
That with care you can always avoid,
Believe me there's nothing amusing,
When so many nice things are destroyed
God bless you dear mothers, who mostly
Have sons serving in air, land or sea,
But my heart is with the lads who are posties.
For my son's in the C. P. C.

Hair Returned to Normal With New Acid, Claim

"Silver threads among the gold" are being turned gold again through daily doses of para-aminobenzoic acid, newest publicized member of the vitamin B family. The hair of gray-headed men and women as elderly as 69 years has been turned back to its normal shade in over 30 cases at Boston City hospital. Success in 300 other scattered cases was reported at a recent meeting of the American Chemical society. The newly identified antigray hair vitamin is found in yeast and liver.

Para-aminobenzoic acid is used in synthetic form and costs only around 10 cents a pound in large quantities. It should, however, be used under a physician's guidance because: When the 100-milligram daily doses required to restore hair color are given, blood pressure, in some instances, may be raised slightly. Despite this possible disadvantage no toxic effects of para-aminobenzoic acid have been observed. The antigray hair research has been conducted by the Warner Institute for Therapeutic Research and the International Vitamin corporation of New York city.

No Extra Sugar for Rhubarb

The fact that rhubarb is usually tart makes no difference to the amount of the sugar ration, says the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. This ruling refers, of course, to stewed rhubarb, served as desert.

When rhubarb is to be preserved, however, it falls into the same category as jam or jelly-making and extra sugar may be obtained on the basis of half a pound of sugar for each pound of rhubarb for canning, three-quarters of a pound for each pound of rhubarb to be made into jam.

No Joy-rides in Trucks

Gasoline ration books will be taken away from commercial truck operators who use their vehicles for other purposes, enforcement officials of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board say.

An instance given is the use of trucks for pleasure trips. Oil Controller Cottrelle says the only reason for granting special privileges to truck owners is to keep the wheels of Canadian industry and commerce running.

Seven Out of Fifty

Occasionally we see a person with a small dark disc in his ear, and know he is deaf, but for each such person, there are dozens who should have a hearing aid. The dozens who do not have the aid may not realize that they have become deaf, as the condition developed so gradually as to make them unaware of it. Others realize their condition, but are foolishly sensitive about wearing something that will help them again catch the full sound of the world's voices. One young person out of 75 has difficulty hearing in church, at lectures, and dinner table conversation. Among persons over 50, every seventh one has similar hearing difficulty.

'Bends' Cure

Planes soon will fly at heights of eight miles or more—but medical science has come to the aid of men who pilot planes and who will be subject to "bends," cramps induced by such altitudes.

Dr. Walter M. Boothey of the Mayo's aviation medicine research laboratory said that increased precautions for the safety of pilots would be needed.

Medical science already has decreed preliminary decompression of all high altitude fliers before they take off. New types of oxygen masks have been developed also, he said.

Blue Eyes Straightest

A soldier with blue eyes can shoot straighter than his brown-eyed comrades, on the average, according to officers of the United States marine corps. If this is so it might give this nation at least one important advantage in any shooting war with Japan or Italy. A survey shows that some two-thirds of our marines are blue-eyed. A brown-eyed marksman, it is said, is likely to be bothered by shifting lights and shadows or drifting clouds. He may make a fine score under the most favorable conditions, but his aim tends to waver when heat waves make the target dance.

No splashing of oil—no greasy, insanitary, fly-attracting mixture of oil and milk, making a mess of both machine and floor. The oil necessary to the operation of a Renfrew goes in at the top and remains inside until it is time to change it.

VOICE OF THE PRESS

WHEN A TANKER IS LOST

When we hear that another tanker has fallen prey to Atlantic raiders few of us realize that something like 52 million gallons of crude oil has been lost to the allied cause. (Tanker capacity varies from 20,000 barrels to 100,000, so 52,000,000 gallons is a reasonable average.) Those millions of gallons in pictures might register more effectively. One tanker's average load would supply enough gasoline to drive 1,000 cars as far as the moon and back. That is enough gasoline to take all the cars in Halifax completely around the world. It is enough to supply every ambulance, every police car, every bus, every truck, passenger car and farm tractor—every user of gasoline in Canada, for a whole week. It's quite a loss.

SCOUTING . . .

The difficulty for maintaining suitable leadership for Boy Scout Groups throughout the Dominion, due to the heavy enlistment of Scout Leaders and older Scouts in the Active Service forces, was one of the problems reflected in the annual report of the Boy Scouts' Association for 1941, just issued. The resulting drop in boy membership of six per cent was less than expected, however, and has to a considerable extent been made up since the October Scout census on which the report was based. New leaders for the Scout Troops are being sought among older men and for Wolf Cub packs among women.

Membership Analysis

The 1941 total consisted of 39,552 Wolf Cubs, 41,866 Boy Scouts, 665 Lone Scouts, 974 Sea Scouts, 1,342 Rover Scouts, 168 Rover Sea Scouts and 6,996 leaders (not counting 247 Rovers registered as Scouters).

Number of Units

There were 2,166 Groups, which included 1,601 Packs, 1,965 Troops, 135 Rover Crews, 38 Sea Scout Troops, 4 Sea Scout Patrols and 11 Rover Sea Scout Crews.

Badges

In all, 31,071 Cub Badges were passed, including 18,924 Rank Badges and 12,147 Proficiency Badges. Rank Badges to the number of 25,520 and 21,813 Proficiency Badges made up the Scout total of 47,333. The Rover Badge was issued to 278, and the Rambler's Badge to 8, making the Rover total 286.

"CANADIAN SOLDIER"

For one of a series of portraits of the men in Canada's army, Lilias Torrance Newton, R.C.A., has chosen a typical example of our fighting forces—young, alert, resolute, coolly defiant. The title "Canadian Soldier" is as comprehensive as it is simple. This painting has been reproduced in Post Card size and is being placed free in canteens to be used by men serving the Canadian army.

Bishop Explains Overseas Travel

Wartime Ocean Voyages In First World War and Now

Air Marshall Bishop has hit upon the right way to talk to Canadian fighting men who have been balking at the type of transport afforded them on their voyages overseas, comments the Ottawa Journal. Up until now our officials have been handling them two ways: reprimanding them for lack of discipline or apologizing for the poor traveling conditions.

Billy Bishop put it this way in speaking to a group of airmen at Halifax:

"I can only hope you will be completely comfortable, but I'd like to tell you of my own experience. During the last war I made eight crossings of the Atlantic. My first trip I sailed on the Caledonia out of Mntreal. She was a cattle boat, built in 1890, and we took 16 days to cross and we crossed without an escort. There was not an inch of that ship that did not stink Two hundred horses died on the way over."

That, says our No. 1 airman, was wartime travel in 1914-1918; and that, in one way or another, is wartime travel in any age. The government should do its utmost to provide good passage—and the troops in turn should be ready to take what's coming.

Place Orders Now For Winter Coal

Frank G. Neate, Deputy Coal Administrator for Canada, urges all users of coal, from the small householders to the big industry, to place their orders at once for the next winter's coal supplies. He said the Dominion will be lucky if it gets 500,000 tons of Welsh coal this season, compared with importation of 630,189 tons last year and added the transportation facilities for coal will have to meet the insistent competition for space by priority goods.

Coast To Coast

Postmaster General Mulock has announced that, starting May 1, regular air mail service will operate daily, Sundays excepted, between Moncton, N.B., Sydney, N.S., and Gander and St. John's, Nfld.

"As a result of this new extension of service, the island of Newfoundland, in the Atlantic, will be connected over a 3,918-mile trans-Canada air route, with Vancouver Island in the Pacific, in under twenty-four hours by the clock for the westward trip," Mr. Mulock said in a statement

Spies Of Japan In U. S. Schools

Collected Military Secrets Says Frederick Lewis, In Liberty

Japanese language students—almost always Jap army or naval officers in disguise—were a vitally important part of the Jap plan for spreading subversive propaganda and collecting military and naval secrets. The task was far beyond the resources of the staffs. Hence the idea of "naval attaches" advantageously located and easily accessible to the individual Japanese. For any such unjustifiable distribution of ranking army and navy officers in a friendly country, some disguise must be adopted. Physical disguise was, of course, impossible; Japs carried their nationality in their faces. A vocational disguise therefore must be found. Hence the language students.

These young men, usually lieutenant-commanders or commanders in the imperial navy, were assigned to at least six months' preliminary training in the naval intelligence service in Tokio. On arrival in the United States they reported to the Japanese embassy in Washington, which was the G.H.Q. of Jap activities, and they remained for a brief time on duty in Washington under the watchful eyes of embassy officials.

Then, as fast as they acquired a working knowledge of English, they were told off to take technical courses in American universities, with instructions to travel extensively throughout the United States and Canada during all vacation periods. When their education in American customs and conditions was believed to be complete, they were assigned to residence in American key cities like Boston, Philadelphia and New York on the east coast, and Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles on the west coast.

Once established, they either continued their "education" by enrolling as students in neighboring universities or accepted posts as instructors in Japanese language schools, of which there were a great many, especially on the Pacific coast. These language schools were similar to the German and Italian and Japanese language schools in South America, which have made our good neighbor policy there so difficult.

Britain Improves Her Shipbuilding

Merchant Vessels Built With Eye To Peace

Cargoes can be handled twice as fast as in 1939 by the ships now leaving yards in a steady stream all over the United Kingdom.

Scores of new tankers, large and fast refrigerated cargo vessels, and general cargo carriers of several sizes are already in service—a triumphant vindication of the policy of the British Admiralty not to adopt one standard type of merchant ship but to use a number of types developed before the war for different trades.

Exact plans used in this colossal program have been sent to Canada and the United States where ships are now being introduced at the unprecedented rate of two a day.

Britain's standard ships are a very great advance on their predecessors of 25 years ago; indeed, in many respects they are better than those launched just before the war. Besides possessing twice the capacity of the 1939 vessels in handling cargo, today's, whether steam or diesel driven, have a higher speed.

The new merchant fleet has practically every item which will be needed in peacetime, a useful indication of the official view on the result of the Battle of the Oceans. Accommodation has been improved beyond belief. The fo'c's'le has gone and the modern tramp has deck houses for its petty officers, seamen and firemen specially designed. Here they sleep in cabins with two berths, wardrobes and mirrors. There are bathrooms and they have their meals in separate small messes.

Even passenger accommodation which will be needed when peace comes has not been forgotten, and it has been done as artistically as if there was not a U-boat under the ocean.

THE WAR - WEEK — Commentary on Current Events

German People Become Restive Under Constant Bombardment

Many interpretations have been made of Hitler's latest speech to the Reichstag.

If the speech can be taken at its face value, it is a very encouraging one for the United Nations, claims the New York Times. Hitler found it necessary to repeat once more all his old alibis for his failure to destroy Russian resistance. Winter came four weeks too early, and where Napoleon had to combat temperatures of only 25 degrees below zero, Hitler's men and their equipment encountered temperatures 53 degrees below. He admits that neither German soldiers, tanks nor locomotives were prepared for the sudden onset of cold. He admits that German nerves snapped and that discipline broke down, at least at certain points. He admits, in fact, that his whole army was at one time threatened with disaster. He does not promise now to beat Russia even this year, and he hints that another winter campaign there may have to be faced. His warning that if Germany loses now it can mean its annihilation is not the statement of a conqueror to a nation of people who consider themselves conquerors; it is the cry of a leader on the defensive.

Apology To People

What Hitler hoped to accomplish by this speech it is not easy to see. It is a long apology to the German people for the very existence of the war; Hitler desperately seeks to pin responsibility for it on his enemies and particularly on "the Jews." The world has now listened to too many Hitler speeches of this sort to be influenced greatly merely by one more. However much comfort we may take in his latest admissions or omissions, we cannot allow ourselves to be lulled. Whether the military forces at Hitler's disposal today have some serious hidden weakness, or whether they are stronger than ever, the only policy of the United Nations must be to continue to strike now with all the force at their command.

People Restless

Der fuehrer's words, directed mainly to domestic affairs, may have been an echo of the continuous performance which the United Nations air arm has been staging over Europe day and night, day after day, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Germany has been free from military action on its home territory for so many years that the German people may be showing signs of restlessness under the constant bombardment from the air. Hitler's subjects are not able to take it with the same nonchalance and indifference that they give it. They may lose their taste for war quicker than they acquired it.

How otherwise account for the law, passed by the Reichstag, empowering Hitler to remove any man from office without legal proceedings? There is nothing comic in the Reichstag voting a law. Hitler already had this power. The purpose was to warn the country that disaffection would be swiftly dealt with.

Hitler Worried

This public reiteration of the dictator's powers may have been a means, too, of notifying the German people that no grumbling would be tolerated for failure of the Nazis to achieve the elusive victory they have categorically promised every year since the invasion of Poland.

In saying that German equipment would be better made to stand the rigors of winter in Russia than was the case in the season just passed, Hitler implied that there would be no victory over Russia this spring or summer. But it is not the equipment so much as the human machine both at the front and at home that der fuehrer is worrying about.

Explaining his defensive warfare in Russia on the grounds that 1941-42 was "the worst winter in 140 years," Hitler declared "we succeeded in mastering threatening catastrophe." But another winter? The German people remember what they had to sacrifice to keep the armies in the field in this campaign. Can they or will they continue to do it? Access to supplies is not being increased. Germany was free from the air threat during this period. It will never be free again.

Critical Period Approaching

These facts go a long way to upset the promises with which Hitler, in typical rhetoric, interlarded his address. It is very fine for Hitler to tell the nation that "the Bolshevist colossus will be beaten by us so long and until such time as it has been smashed completely." But what about the air raids? What about the growing threat of a second front in western Europe? With subjugated Europe in revolt where will he obtain the man power to crush Russia—or any other enemy—completely?

The world knows today that Germany's might is not invincible in any field of operations. The United Nations are going forward to crush the nation which has repeatedly launched war on Europe. The end will come sooner if the German people realize this. It is the fear that they will which haunts Hitler.

Some diplomats suspect that Hitler's speech was designed to blind the United Nations to the enormous power that the Nazis will throw into the approaching campaign but officials do no underestimate Hitler's strength. There seems to be a general agreement that the next three months will provide the crucial point of the war.

HOW CAN I?

Q. How can I make a flower sponge?

A. Select a large sponge with large pores, wet it, and place two or three hyacinth bulbs in the pores near the centre. Sprinkle grass or mustard seed around the balance of the sponge. Hang the sponge in a sunny window and keep it damp. You will soon have a pretty flower ball entirely covering the sponge.

Q. How can I cement loose floor on fireplace tiles?

A. A little plaster of Paris mixed with vinegar to a paste should be smeared on the loose tiles, and tiles can then be cemented into place. Do not walk on the tiles until they are dry.

Q. How can I make use of old candles?

A. Melt the ends of old candles and add this to common turpentine. The mixture will make an excellent wax for polishing the floors.

Q. How can I renew an oil mop after washing?

A. Into a tin box large enough to contain the mop pour 2 tablespoons of parraffin oil, or 1 tablespoon each of linseed oil and spirits of turpentine. Tip and turn the box until the interior is fully coated and then pour off the surplus. Put the mop into the box, cover, and allow to stand 48 hours before using.

Q. How can I prevent a bruise from discoloring?

A. A bit of sweet oil applied as soon as possible to a bruise will often prevent it from discoloring.

Modern Etiquette

1. Is it proper when in a group of people, to speak to another person while someone else is already talking to the whole group?

2. How many attendants does the bride at a home wedding usually have?

3. What is the fundamental principle of good breeding?

4. What type of social stationery is in best taste?

5. Is ten cents a sufficient tip for one person, when checking one's wraps?

6. When a girl is introducing her sister to a person, should she call her "Miss Jones"?

ANSWERS

1. No. It is rude to "cross converse." When one attempts to talk with another person while someone is talking to the entire group it probably prevents that person from listening to the first speaker. He may be very interested and wish to listen.

2. The most fashionable home wedding has but two bridesmaids and a maid-of-honor, and many of them have no bridesmaids at all.

3. Consideration for the rights of others.

4. Plain, unruled sheets of notepaper that fold once into their envelopes, the paper may be white, delicate gray, or softly-toned to a pearl or ivory. Subdued tones of blue, green, or buff are not frowned upon, but be sure to avoid exaggerated tones and conspicuous designs.

5. Yes. Of course, some will give more, but ten cents is sufficient.

6. No. "Mrs. Harris, this is my sister, Ethel."

C.P.R. President Resigns Office

Sir Edward Beatty Is Succeeded by D'Alton C. Coleman

Sir Edward Beatty has resigned as president of the Canadian Pacific Railway and is succeeded by D. C. Coleman, vice-president of the company. Sir Edward remains chairman of the board. The change in presidency is effective immediately.

The official announcement said: "At a meeting of the board of directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company held May 1, Sir Edward Beatty, chairman and president, tendered his resignation because of the state of his health.

Taken Ill In March

"Sir Edward was stricken with illness in March, 1941, brought about largely by over-exertion and too close application to his multifarious duties and activities. There has been a marked improvement in recent months, and that improvement, happily, is being maintained; but his doctors have advised him that early and complete recovery can be reached only if he divests himself of some of his burdens and responsibilities. The directors received his decision with deep regret, but agreed that he should not be expected to prejudice his chance of recovery. At their request he will continue to act as chairman of the company, and thus be available for counsel at all times.

"The directors placed on record their appreciation of the outstanding work Sir Edward performed as president during the past 24 years. He brought to the service of the company and its shareholders a rare combination of gifts and qualities, which enabled him to inspire the whole organization with his own zeal and his own devotion to the interests of the property. He was responsible for many improvements in facilities and service; for the rebuilding of the company's mercantile fleet on a scale which made it a source of pride to all Canadians; and he enhanced and enlarged the position of the company in the confidence and regard of the people it serves throughout the world. His administration will be memorable in the history of the company.

"Mr. D'Alton C. Coleman was elected president of the company. Mr. Coleman joined the company in 1899, and after serving it in various parts of the country as an officer, was elected a director and vice-president in 1934. He is the fifth to hold the office of president since the formation of the company in 1891, and like his immediate predecessor was born and educated in Canada."

Took Post In 1918

Sir Edward graduated to the presidency of the company from the law department in 1918 when he was a week under 41.

During his tenure in office the railway expanded to become known as the world's greatest privately-owned transportation system. Under him Canadian Pacific developed railway, shipping, telegraph and hotel services with expenditures of many millions of dollars.

When Lord Shaughnessy retired from the presidency he offered the post to Sir Edward, who at first refused. Shaughnessy is reported to have exclaimed: "My God, Beatty, do you want to be a mere lawyer all your life?"

Sir Edward was an exponent of a unification program for the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways. He wanted the unification to be under private operation. The Government decided for co-operation but with each company maintaining its own management.

Sir Edward was born at Thorold, Ont., in 1877, son of Henry Beatty, Irish founder of the Beatty Steamship Lines operating on the Great Lakes.

He was educated at Toronto. He went to Harbord Collegiate Institute, Upper Canada College, Toronto University and finally Osgoode Hall. Later McGill University and Queen's honored him with chancellorships.

Have You Heard?

An attractive girl dressed in the W.A.T.S. uniform, and a plain middle-aged spinster were waiting for a bus. "Have a cigarette," asked the girl, opening her case.

"What! Smoke in public!" exclaimed the woman, shocked to depths. "Why I'd sooner kiss the first man who came down the street."

"So would I," retorted the girl. "But have a cigarette while you are waiting."

A young fellow had just been introduced to a very deaf old man.

"I beg your pardon," said the old man. "I didn't quite catch your name."

"Rutt . . . Rutt," bellowed the young man . . R-U-T-T."

"Eh, no," answered the old man. "I take a drop occasionally."

There was an earthquake in a South American town which badly scared the inhabitants.

An English family who lived there sent their little son to stay with an uncle in another district for safety's sake.

Two days later the parents received the following telegram: "Am returning your boy. Send the earthquake."

"I wish you'd stop talking about golf."

"Golf! I haven't said a word about golf!"

"You said something about a hole in one. I heard you!"

"I was talking about my only pair of clean socks."

A reporter was interviewing the oldest inhabitant of the village, who had completed his century. "Have you ever been married?" asked the reporter.

"Married!" exclaimed the old man. "Married! I should think I have. Four wives I've had. What's more, one of them was a good un!"

"It says here in the paper that in Egypt women carry baskets of fruit and flowers on their heads."

"That's nothing so remarkable. Women do that over here and call them hats."

"I suppose you find it rather dull in the evenings to the R.A.F. sweet young thing to the R.A.F. pilot.

"Simply nothing to do at all," sighed the pilot. "We just play darts, do the crossword puzzles in the evening papers, drop a few bombs on Hamburg, and go straight to bed!"

GROWN IN SUNNY, SOUTHERN ONTARIO

"Some of you pedestrians walk about as if you'd bought the streets."

"Yes, and some of you motorists drive about as if you'd paid for your cars!"

Jerry: "Why do you say that there's too much favoritism in your family?"

Tom: "Well, when I bite my nails, I get into trouble; but when baby puts his foot in his mouth, it's cute."

Sweet Young Thing: "Why are you running that harrow over the grain field?"

Young Farmer: "Oh, I'm raising shredded wheat this year."

What Science Is Doing

TO CURE "HICCUPS"

The case of a man who hiccuped himself to death was reported recently. The hiccups lasted 26 days and nights; he could neither sleep nor eat, and finally died of exhaustion. The average case of hiccups lasts only from a few minutes to a few hours, but it can be a tantalizing complaint, resisting many kinds of treatment.

Hiccups are apparently due to a spasm of the diaphragm, the broad, thin muscle that separates the abdominal cavity from the chest cavity, says Science Digest.

Scaring the patient is about the most useless of the many "remedies." Other supposed cures include drinking water slowly, holding one's breath, counting numbers, pressing the upper lip, electric shocs to the skin, and so forth.

The following is a reliable method of treatment that has been used successfully in several cases. It is based on the fact that carbon dioxide gas—the gas that is used in soda water and that we exhale from the lungs—can stimulate the respiratory nerve centre.

The only apparatus needed is an ordinary paper bag.. The bag is firmly placed over the nose and mouth of the patient, who is asked to breathe into and out of it. As the oxygen in the bag is used up, the exhaled carbon dioxide gas accumulates, so that in a few minutes there is enough to produce a curative effect.

If the patient begins to hiccup again, the treatments should be repeated. In one case in which this method was used, the patient, a girl of 22, who began to hiccup while convalescing from inflenza, was relieved six minutes after she had been hiccuping continuously for 42 hours. After seven hours, the spasms again began; the bag treatment was again effective, this time permanently.

General MacArthur's Flight From Bataan

"The inside story of why General MacArthur was pulled out of the Philippines can now be told," comments Newsweek. "As long as it was possible to get supplies to Bataan, Washington believed MacArthur's chances of holding out until the U. S. was able to organize an expedition to relieve him were fairly good. However, it was feasible to run the Japanese blockade only from the Netherlands Indies. When Japanese successes late in February made it apparent that the United Nations could not hold Java much longer, it was decided to order MacArthur to Australia."

'Pasteur Ensyme' New 'Traffic Cop' for Foods

The chemical identification of a cellular "traffic cop," which directs the human body's utilization of food along the smooth and efficient road of respiration instead of the energy-wasting detour of fermentation, was announced by Dr. Kurt G. Stern of the Yale university school of medicine.

Without this strategic biological substance, Dr. Stern declared in his address at the meeting of the New York section of the American Chemical society, each adult would have to consume the daily equivalent of 10 loaves of bread.

Dr. Stern and his research associates, Dr. Joseph L. Melnick and Delafield DuBois, named the newly identified substance the "Pasteur enzyme" in honor of Dr. Louis Pasteur, who in 1861 discovered an anti-fermentation effect while carrying out his experiments on yeast and the fermentation of beer. In the cells of the human body fermentation converts sugar into lactic acid instead of alcohol.

A possible new insight into the chemical riddle of cancer was hinted by Dr. Stern in recalling the discovery several years ago by Dr. Otto Warburg, Nobel Prize winner in medicine, that tumor cells are especially active in fermenting sugar into lactic acid. He suggested that this might be due to a shortage of the newly identified Pasteur enzyme.

"In spite of the fact that some tumor strains can derive all the energy they need from respiration," Dr. Stern pointed out, "they may form as much as their own weight in lactic acid per day, provided that they are furnished the necessary sugar."

A sufficient supply of the Pasteur enzyme, he argued, might prevent this diversion of the normal food supply.

Popular Pilots

Most popular men in Britain are the ferry pilots who never fly a plane across the Atlantic without stuffing their pockets full of silk stockings for the girl friends. Of the 5,000 persons questioned—about evenly divided as to sex—only 250 bought overcoats, about half the women and half the men bought stockings and socks, respectively; only 20 per cent of the people bought underwear (miners bought more underwear than anyone else); about 10 per cent of the men bought suits, another 20 per cent bought pants only and the men under 50 went as wild as the girls did on stockings—but the men bought ties, scarves and shirts.

You'll be glad you gave to the Red Cross

One of these days bombs may come crashing down in your neighborhood. Your house may be left in ruins. You or your child may be crying feebly for help. Your friends, your family, may be left homeless.

No matter what happens, you'll never regret that you gave to the Red Cross. Reach out the hand of mercy to help those crushed by grief and pain. You will not turn a deaf ear to the cry of the injured and the suffering.

The Canadian Red Cross is just your heart with other Canadian hearts beating in compassion for suffering humanity. YOU want to be a part of this great mission of mercy. You will give to your Red Cross. Open your heart and purse strings—GIVE generously.

The Canadian Red Cross Society's accounts are subject to scrutiny by the Auditor General of Canada.
