Seeks stern measures for energy crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arthur Burns, chairman of the United States federal reserve board, said Wednesday he advocates "sterner measures" to cope with a worldwide energy crisis.

He warned, however, that such action will almost certainly deepen the recession in the U.S.

Taxes on gasoline, oil imports and large cars were among the measures he proposed for curbing energy consumption in the U.S.

He told a committee of both houses of Congress Wednesday the international energy crisis is so grave that stringent steps are required.

At the same time, the U.S. commerce department announced its index of leading economic indicators dropped 1.3 per cent in October, the third consecutive month the index has declined.

Although President Ford has publicly opposed them, Interior Secretary Rogers Morton and federal energy administrator John Sawhill also have suggested higher U.S. gasoline taxes.

CHANGE PREDICTED

Unless oil prices go down, "there will be a massive redistribution of economic and political power among the countries of the world," Burns said.

"If the weaker countries are left unprotected to face their oil bills, they may be forced into special arrangements with other producing countries."

Burns urged the committee to support a planned $25-billion international lending fund to help oil-consuming countries finance their trade deficits aggravated by rising oil-import prices.

Elaborating on his appeal for a policy of energy austerity, Burns said: "We won't be able to drive our cars or take as many leisure trips as we are accustomed to. The automobile industry, already depressed, will suffer more. The recreation industry also would be affected more. And homebuilding, which is already in a decline, would be hurt more."

Nevertheless, unless stringent energy-cutting measures are taken, "we will be unable to persuade others to do their part."

He said Congress would have to devise a method to stimulate the economy to counter the recession that would be deepened by energy cutbacks.

MORE LOSE JOBS
In reporting the October decline in economic indicators, the commerce department said U.S. unemployment claims jumped 14 per cent with new claims averaging 396,000 a week, compared with 237,000 a week a year ago.

Contracts and orders for factories and equipment dropped 8.2 per cent in October and fewer new building permits were issued, the index showed.

In other economic developments, more layoffs were announced by Ford Motor Co., which said 3,700 workers would be laid off from 28 plants indefinitely and 4,150 more workers would be on temporary lay-off for a week beginning Monday, bringing indefinite layoffs at Ford to 15,000 with 21,400 other workers off for a week; Westinghouse Electric Corp. said it will lay off 3,200 persons for Christmas week and the Whirlpool Corp. said it will lay off 270 persons indefinitely.

Whelan praises farm co-ops

BELLEVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan has praised farm co-operatives as effective inflation fighters.

He told Tuesday's annual meeting of the United Co-operatives of Campbellford, Picton and Foxboro that it took the co-op movement "to bring common sense to the market for farm materials."

"Without it farmers' bills would be considerably higher," Mr. Whelan said he intends to set up a branch in his department involving co-ops.

"It will be a think tank. I want top men in the industry to find out what kind of funds co-ops need and how they can best be used."

Mr. Whelan said taxpayers should give more backing to co-ops through government as in the United States and Britain.

Firemen back after walkout

MONTREAL (CP) — About 500 night shift firemen returned to work early today after a spontaneous walkout in protest of unsanitary working conditions at several stations had closed down the city's 43 fire halls.

The men were ordered back to work by the Montreal Firefighters' Association, representing the city's 2,400 firemen.

Association president Jean L'Abbe said fire director Rene Plaisance had promised to meet with him later today to discuss the firemen's grievances.

A fire department spokesman said the walkout began shortly after midnight following the suspension of 11 firemen in Ville Emard district who then went from station to station asking fellow workers to leave their jobs.

An association spokesman said the men were suspended when they refused to work in the station because of what they called unsanitary conditions. He

Livestock situation topic of Canada-US discussion

WASHINGTON (CP) — Senior Canadian and United States officials met for nearly five hours Wednesday without apparently even discussing the removal of their mutual quotas on each other's livestock and meat exports.

Representatives from both delegations told reporters afterward that the two sides examined the livestock situation "in depth," assessed where their two economies are going and agreed to meet again after "several weeks" of further study and reflection.

"It was not a negotiation," the American representative said. "We did not talk about a change in the situation in any immediate sense."

At another point he said the delegations "did not discuss removal by one side or the other" of the quotas which Canada imposed Aug. 12 on U.S. cattle and beef imports and the retaliatory quota imposed Nov. 9 by President Ford against Canadian cattle, swine, beef and pork.

The news briefing was held with the requirement that the officials involved not be identified.

The officials held out some possibility that market forces would change in a way that would permit Canada to lift its quotas and bring an end to the American retaliation.

At present, they said, with Canadian beef prices higher than those in the U.S.—and a glut of cattle in both countries as part of a world-wide over supply—the traditional balance in cattle trade between the two countries had gotten out of phase.

With indications that prices were strengthening slightly in the U.S., the quotas could conceivably be relaxed if the prices in the two countries converged.

RCMP constable held by gunmen

EDMONTON (CP) — RCMP are withholding the names of two men scheduled to appear in provincial court today after an RCMP constable was driven at gunpoint across central Alberta in his cruiser while police cars and aircraft followed.

Police have not laid charges against the two men who were driven here from Calgary in separate cars Wednesday night.

The six-hour ordeal ended in a hotel parking lot after police rushed the cruiser, scuffled with the gunmen and released Const. Allen John Hurkett, 22, of the Redwater, Alta., detachment. He was unharmed and no shots were fired.

"It was very harrowing because, with a gun at his head all the time, he anticipated they might shoot him," said Supt. Gordon Perry, commanding officer of the RCMP Edmonton sub-division.

"We were very concerned for Const. Hurkett's life. We felt it would be best to wait for the right opportunity."

The drama began Wednesday morning when Const. Hurkett answered an accident report in the Redwater district, 30 miles northeast of Edmonton, involving what police said was a stolen truck.

FACES A RIFLE

He was forced back into his patrol car by the men, one of whom had a rifle, and the trio drove to the foothills of town of Drayton Valley, 60 miles southwest of Edmonton. A passerby informed police of the abduction.

En route, the men told Const. Hurkett to use his car radio to warn pursuing police cars to "get back, stay away."

In Drayton Valley the fugitives stopped at a house for about 30 minutes, leaving the house with a gun pointed at his hostage's head.

Followed by police in cars and an airplane, the gunmen drove to Leduc and then on to Calgary, hitting speeds of up to 100 miles an hour along Highway 2 and stopping twice for gas.

Police stayed back until the car stopped at the Highlander Motor Hotel in northwest Calgary where S.Sgt. Gus Buziak, who was in charge of the chase, decided to rush the gunmen.

"It had to be then or never," he said later.

Supt. Perry said police had no idea of the motive for the incident nor why, after a 380-mile chase, the gunmen stopped at the hotel.

On oil and gas

Accuses Ottawa of slick gamemanship

TORONTO (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield accused the federal government Wednesday of engaging in "slick gamemanship" in dealing with oil and gas-producing provinces.

He told 1,210 party supporters at a $125-plate federal fund-raising dinner that Ottawa had "sucked in the petroleum producing provinces" eight months ago in discussions on resource policy by not revealing budget proposals on resource taxation.

In its budget, the federal government has proposed to disallow deductibility of provincial royalty payments for federal corporate income tax purposes.

Among Mr. Stanfield's audience were Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed, New Brunswick Premier Richard Hatfield and Ontario Premier William Davis in what was billed as the first of two premier's dinners to replenish federal Conservative coffers.

COULDN'T ATTEND

Newfoundland Premier Frank Moores was to attend but sent a telegram of regret begging the start of Newfoundland's legislature today.

The Conservative Leader said the resources dispute is not a private fight but one which threatens to make less secure future petroleum supplies and the spirit of confederation.

Mr. Stanfield said he agrees with Finance Minister John Turner that the issue is too important to be selected by the Supreme Court of Canada. It should be settled by politicians.

But he criticized the federal finance minister for last week's budget which he said was "a cop-out as far as inflation is concerned."

"Instead of a war against inflation we have a surrender on that front."

He challenged the finance minister to reveal inflation and unemployment rate forecasts on which the budget was based.

Premier Lougheed, first billed as the keynote speaker, touched only lightly on energy matters which might affect Ontario and Alberta's dispute with the federal government over taxing on energy resources.

PLANS MORE DETAIL

He said he would expand on trade and energy issues at the second of the two fund-raising dinners today in Winnipeg.

However, he said Alberta was not asking for special privileges but only the removal of obstacles.

Premier Hatfield, fresh from election victory, struck out at his Liberal opponents for what he saw as "lavish" and excessive spending during the provincial campaign.

He said Liberals spent about twice as much in trying to defeat the Tories as Conservatives had spent to remain in office.

He said the campaign convinced him of the need to limit campaign spending and provide public financing through legislation. He promised to introduce some measures of control before the next provincial election.

Mr. Stanfield said the party sustained "a hefty chunk of debt" in fighting the 1974 federal election campaign and he wants to see it in "reasonable financial shape" before stepping down as national leader.

A cheque in excess of $100,000 was presented to the leader as proceeds of the dinner.

Ontario Premier William Davis praised Mr. Stanfield as "a man who is totally honest both intellectually and every other way" and thanked him for what he had done for the party.

Union set to watch sugar prices

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Twenty Latin American and Caribbean countries that produce and export sugar have created a union to protect world sugar prices.

Francisco Cano Escalante, president of the Mexican national sugar commission, said the organization's goal will be to co-ordinate future sugar production and let each producer set its own price.

World sugar prices have skyrocketed in the last few months. The world's average current price is about 63 cents a pound. In Canada the price is approaching $4 for five pounds, almost four times what it was a year ago.

The union, called the Group of Sugar Exporting Countries of Latin America and the Caribbean, was formed during a three-day meeting in Cozumel, Mexico, that ended Wednesday. Cano Escalante said its first formal policy session will be next April in the Dominican Republic.

The union includes Mexico, Argentina, Barbados, Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Guyana, Honduras, Jamaica, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, the Dominican Republic, Trinidad and Tobago and Venezuela. They annually produce 12 million tons of sugar, or 60 per cent of global production.

New session opens in NS

HALIFAX (CP) — The Nova Scotia legislature prorogued Wednesday after a three-week sitting during which the Motor Vehicle Act was toughened, teachers were given the right to strike and members increased their salaries.

The session, which began in May and was adjourned in June, was one of the most contentious in years, with the government being charged with "laundering" an environmental report on a proposed hydroelectric project in the Cape Breton Highlands.

The Liberal administration was also accused of failing to provide the opposition with the facts concerning plans for a new steel plant in Cape Breton.

The most expensive item on the order paper, an increase in members salaries and associated benefits including more support staff for the opposition parties, passed without debate. The salary increases followed the recommendations of a three-member committee which reported while the house was sitting.

Legislators now will receive $14,400 annually in indemnities, allowances and salaries, up from the $7,500 they had received since 1969. They had been the lowest paid MLAs in Canada prior to the increases.

PAY RETROACTIVE

The committee recommended that the increases be made retroactive to last January and members received sizeable cheques Wednesday.

A single amendment to the Motor Vehicle Act to make the wearing of seat belts in automobiles mandatory, however, created a controversy which gathered strength as constituents became aware of the proposed change.

Prorogation was delayed by several hours Wednesday as member after member rose to support or oppose the amendment and the government finally decided that it would not be proclaimed until regulations specifying exceptions are drafted.

Highways Minister Leonard

Pace, who said Nova Scotia will be the only province in Canada with such a law, maintained his defence of the amendment, noting a high number of highway deaths in the province and figures which indicated that similar legislation has cut into the death toll in Australia and New Zealand.

The government came under heavy fire from the opposition, particularly the New Democrats, for an abridged environmental impact study on a proposed hydroelectric project at Wreck Cove in the Cape Breton Highlands.

DEMAND HEARINGS

The three NDP members charged that the government had watered down objectionable sections of the original report and demanded, along with the Conservatives, that public hearings be held before work starts.

Premier Gerald Regan outlined to the legislature the bleak prospects the province faces unless it takes advantage of the Wreck Cove site, the last major hydroelectric site in the province, and finds sufficient coal to build several new thermal plants late in this decade.

The premier finally agreed that meetings would be held in the area where the project will be built but ruled out any widespread public hearings. He assured the house that environmental studies would be conducted as the project proceeds.

The Conservative opposition hammered at the government for its failure to provide more information on its plans for the existing Sydney Steel Corp. (SySCO) plant and the proposed location of a billion-dollar plant in the Sydney area.

The government sought approval, through a resolution, for the way it is handling the SySCO modernization and negotiations for a new plant but gave little new information and failed to win the support it wanted.

Legislation to allow teachers the right to strike was finally passed despite the opposition of local school boards who argued that principals should not be included in the bargaining units.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — After falling severely for seven successive sessions, western oils finally showed signs of recovery with some healthy increases Wednesday on the Toronto stock market.

Slumping oil refining and pipeline stocks also displayed significant gains as other prices were mixed at the close of active trading.

Hitting its lowest point in four years, the western oil index bounced back 4.62 points to 117.38. It was the first increase since before the federal budget was announced Nov. 18.

The industrial index, widely-based indicator of market trend, gained 0.07 to 155.34. Golds fell 12.9 to 415.64 and base metals 0.44 to 61.08.

The oil refining sub-component of the industrial index jumped 9.85 to 159.51 while the pipeline sector gained 2.50 to 130.94.

Petroleum related issues had been dropping for several days prompted by capital spending reductions in the petroleum industry, proposed cutbacks in oil exports and continued uncertainty from the unresolved federal-provincial dispute about resource revenues.

Observers suggested Wednesday's recovery may have been largely due to bargain hunting. Many analysts said the rapid drop in oil prices, left the issues oversold and underpriced.

STOCKS FLUCTUATE

Recording sharply higher prices earlier in the day, the New York market closed only moderately higher in light trading. Investors are still awaiting the outcome of the nationwide, two-week-old coal miners strike in the United States.

PITTSVIEW, Ala. (AP) — A train slammed into a car at a rural East Alabama railroad crossing Sunday, killing five persons, authorities said.

Says London to stay tops

LONDON (CP) — The city of London will certainly retain the lion's share of world banking business, a leading French banker told a London seminar on world banking.

Gilbert Geas, director and managing director of the Banque Nationale de Paris, said he believes that despite the uncertainties and apprehensions which have affected the world banking scene in the last year, the steady stream of banks going to London have, if anything, increased, with a fresh one setting up in London every fortnight. He said that in the last year, 22 foreign banks have opened in London, four new consortium banks have been established and another five foreign banks have taken stakes in London-based banks.

He reckoned the number of foreign banks and affiliates in London at about 170—greatly in excess of those at any other financial centre.

It is true, he said, that some of the decisions to set up in London in the last year were taken "before the events which have shaken the economy of the world quite recently." The evidence was, however, that confidence in the future of London as a financial centre remained unshaken.

Geas attributed the supremacy of the city of London especially to its freedom from restrictive regulation, the advantage of using English, the world's main business language, and the large supply of skilled technical specialists and administrative staff. Another important factor at present was the location in London of a large part of the Euro-currencies market.

PUMPING THE ACCELERATOR — Every "pump" of the pedal means a charge of extra gasoline going through the carburetor. It's a bad habit to pump the accelerator after starting the engine or while waiting for a traffic light to change.

New immigrants must have specific skills

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's planned new immigration policy is expected to retain stiff entry tests requiring new arrivals to possess the skills to fill job vacancies in Canada, Immigration Minister Robert Andras said Monday.

The job requirement is among the "fundamental principles" that the government is not likely to abandon as it begins the long process of overhauling the immigration laws, Mr. Andras said in an interview.

He said the new policy will be based on the prediction that most of the country's future population growth will come from immigration because of a sharply declining national birth rate.

The new policy will almost certainly retain absolute guarantees of universality and non-discrimination against minorities and continue to give some priority to reunification of families, he said.

In addition there will be an unrelenting campaign to increase the proportion of French-speaking immigrants, despite the "apparent contradiction" between this goal and the pledge of universality.

Legislation to replace the existing 1952 Immigration Act is expected late next year or early in 1976 after a long public debate that, Mr. Andras said, will include consultation with the provinces. The debate will centre on policy alternatives to be outlined in a "green paper" the government hopes to publish in January.

"You can't throw a subject open for discussion to the degree that we are intending to and take absolutely hard and fast positions, but I don't think that we are likely to depart from certain fundamentals," he said.

The point system used in the existing law requires prospective immigrants to gain at least 50 of a total possible 100 points to be admitted. Points are awarded for such things as knowledge of English or French, family in Canada, educational or job training and job skills. The government moved last month to ease a sharply increasing immigrant flow by introducing a 10-point penalty for applicants who do not have a prearranged job or the skill to fill a designated occupation.

But, he said the most important thing the department is trying to establish with the public is that there is no need for panic buying.

Mr. Ouellet said there is no indication of a sugar shortage, and speculation is that the prices will come down as sharply as they have risen.

Tries to keep sugar down

SASKATOON (CP) — Andre Ouellet, minister of consumer and corporate affairs, said Monday his department is doing all it can to bring down high sugar prices.

He was speaking during the official opening of the new headquarters of the Saskatoon district office of the Canadian Association of Consumers.

The department is prosecuting three large sugar refiners in Eastern Canada because it felt they were conspiring to fix prices, he said.

Mr. Ouellet said the department also is studying the possibility of setting up a national board to buy foreign sugar in an attempt to offset the high cost of importing the raw prod-

Evening of Scottish fun

SHERBROOKE (RH) — John Bassett, co-chairman of the organizing committee for the 12th annual Gathering of the Clans, says the name of the dance to be held at the William Street Armoury in Sherbrooke is only a figure of speech.

"It's not really an official clan gathering," he explained, "but it is an event devoted to the Scottish members of the community, and as such, it's a clan gathering of sorts," he explained.

The event, sponsored by the Eastern Townships Highland Pipe Band, has attracted well over 700 Scotsmen in the past few years.

"On a few occasions," Mr. Bassett reminisced, "we've had to turn people away. We like to keep it to a comfortable size so that people will really enjoy themselves."

Bert Dewar, of CKTS radio, will have his hands full as the M.C. of the Saturday night dance. Starting at 8:30 p.m., the program will open with organ music — providing the opportunity to meet old friends and to get acquainted with new ones. Following this, the flag-raising ceremony will take place, in which the flags of both Canada and Scotland will be unfurled. Opening remarks will precede the Pipe Band's appearance.

And what an appearance it will make. On tap for the evening are old Scottish favorites to be performed by the band, including Scotland the Brave, Road to the Isles and Bonny Dundee.

They will make two more appearances during the course of the evening with folk tunes performed on traditional bagpipes.

Highland dancers, too, will have their fling. They are scheduled to perform their version of the world famous sword dance, along with others with such colorful names as the Dashing White Sergeant. Of course, no Scottish festival would be complete without a highland fling. This too, will be performed by the local Highland Dancers.

For those clansmen with a more Canadian turn of mind, ordinary North American-type dancing can be enjoyed in between the traditional festivities. Music for this will be provided by the Castello Band.

The high point of the evening, according to Mr. Bassett, will be at 10 p.m. when the grand march through the armoury is scheduled to take place. All present will form two lines in a procession that has historically proven to be quite moving. Special guests are introduced at that time.

Mr. Bassett said that a total of 14 bands will be performing at the event.

To display crafts

SHERBROOKE (RH) — Eastern Townships artisans will have a chance to display their wares at a craft fair scheduled to open at the University of Sherbrooke on December 7.

To be located in the cultural centre there, the event, which has been held annually for the past six years, is entitled The Artisan Today, and will feature many well-known local craftsmen and artists. In all, 17 people will be exhibiting their works, covering the whole spectrum of handicrafts from leatherwork to weaving.

This year, in a break from tradition, the Artists Association of the Eastern Townships chose the exhibitors themselves. Previously, the Cultural Centre's artistic director, Andre Vigeant, made the decision as to who would appear.

"I hope to encourage the artists," he said in a press conference yesterday, "in their recent move to form an association. I feel this is the way to do it."

Ceramists will make up the larger part of the exhibition with their works. A total of nine of these craftsmen will be exhibiting there. Weavers, leather workers, enamelists and woodworkers will comprise the rest of the show.

Mr. Vigeant stated yesterday that the craftsman is finding his own important niche in the culture of Quebec.

"The artisan is becoming more and more significant in our daily life," he mused. "Who do you know who doesn't own some little handmade item of which he is particularly proud? Everyone has a vase or a ceramic coffee cup."

He added that the beauty of craftsmanship lies in the fact that the products created are functional and handsome.

"One tends to ignore the great talent of artisans in light of the exposure other artists receive," he pointed out. "But they are an autonomous group. The ceramist, for instance, occasionally forgotten in the past, is resurfacing today. True, his techniques have changed, but he is remaining true to an ancient craft. The same can be said about potters, weavers and enamelists."

Vigeant remarked that in a mechanized world, the artisan has an even stronger role to play than he did in earlier days.

"Machines, I'm happy to say, have not yet deprived man of his creative imagination, or of his pride in work done carefully and slowly by hand," he mused.

The exhibition, which will be running until December 20, will be open daily from noon until 11 o'clock.

The craftsmen themselves come from diverse backgrounds and places. While the majority are Quebecers by birth, some come from as far away as Yugoslavia, Hungary and Belgium. One exhibitor hails from California; another from Ontario. All have made a name for themselves in their chosen medium, and all but four have exhibited their works previously, in such prestigious places as the Royal Ontario Museum and Man and His World in Montreal.

Coffee and doughnuts will be served from 10 to 11 a.m. and the delicious turkey and biscuit luncheon from 11 to 2 p.m. Tea and sweets from 2 to 4 p.m. Come and get into the spirit of Christmas and do some of your shopping as well, the press release continues.

Views aids for cancer victims

DANVILLE — While in Montreal last weekend to attend the provincial meeting of the Canadian Cancer Society, Mrs. Jerome Olney, local branch president, and Mrs. Leo Proulx, educational secretary, viewed the newest films as well as devices now used by patients who have had mastectomy. Devices help patients to regain the use of their arms.

Also supplied by the society are temporary forms for these patients to use until the time has come when they can be properly fitted with prosthesis.

These are just a few of the many services offered by the society and in this branch there are several members who have undergone such surgery and are ready to help others who need encouragement and advice.

secretary, and Rupert Chamberlain, of Barton, Vt., who is president of the Vermont State Farm Bureau and is a Jersey breeder.

Jersey Club meets

HATLEY (IH) — The annual gathering of the Stanstead County Jersey Club was held on Friday evening, November 22 at the Hatley United Church hall with approximately 60 members and guests attending.

The evening included a delicious banquet, annual meeting and the election of officers and speakers. At tables arranged in banquet style the ladies of the church, served by being excellent cooks, served a hot roast turkey dinner with all the trimmings, topped off by assorted home-made pies. They were warmly thanked by the club president, Leslie Bliss, the MC and by hearty applause.

Mr. Bliss asked each present to introduce himself and the place they had come from. That included Waterville, Sherbrooke, Magog, Lennoxville, Ayer's Cliff, Coaticook, Hatley, Rock Island, Stanstead, Richmond, Barton, Lyndonville, Orleans, Vt. and Massachusetts.

After annual reports of the secretary and treasurer were heard, Mr. Bliss called on Lawrence Taylor, representative to the provincial club, for his report.

Mr. Taylor noted highlights of the past fiscal year: the annual meeting at Shawville, the July calf club rally at St. Hyacinthe and Lower St. Lawrence, the barn meeting at Cowansville and visit "to the most modern barn I have ever seen".

He also noted the Stanstead County picnic at MacDonald farm in Lennoxville, the Provincial picnic. However this was held quite a distance from Stanstead County so not many from this club attended.

Robert Simpson, Richmond, secretary field manager for the Quebec Provincial Jersey club, brought attention to the exceptionally good picnic at MacDonald's, and the exhibit of Jerseys. Exhibitions across the province were well attended, he said.

The rallies showed calves well-groomed and an improvement in showmanship the past few years by the young Jersey farmers. He noted at St. Hyacinthe, a calf from the herd of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Coates was top one, and at Sherbrooke, a calf from Letourneau's herd, exhibited by their daughter, was champion. Mr. Simpson stressed the importance of registering Jersey exhibits their works previously, in such prestigious places as the Royal Ontario Museum and Man and His World in Montreal.

He predicts a great future for jerseys and added, "We are going to come into our own". He said he is glad to work with the farmers and added, "If you need me, call me for special assistance". He wished all a good year and noted the provincial annual meeting will be Feb. 8, 1975 in the Granby region.

A beautiful silver tray trophy was displayed. It was won by Alex and Derwyn McKiven for most points in all dairy breeds at Ayer's Cliff Fair. Messrs McKivens not being present, the trophy will be delivered to them in person.

Among the guests were Robert Chamberlain and Mrs. Chamberlain of Barton. Mr. Chamberlain is the President of the Vermont State Farm Bureau and Jersey Breeders. In his remarks he invited the Stanstead County Club to visit Vermont and said he will make arrangements for a tour in the state. An organized bus tour is indicated in the spring.

Other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Germain Choniere of Orleans and Clyde Dolloff of Lyndonville, M. Taylor of Whately, Mass., all representatives of Old Fox Chemical.

With slides, the three menfolk gave a talk about the advantages and value of liquid stock feed that is a chemical formula feed produced the past four years with tremendous success as a supplement rich in protein and other minerals as a compensator liquid food.

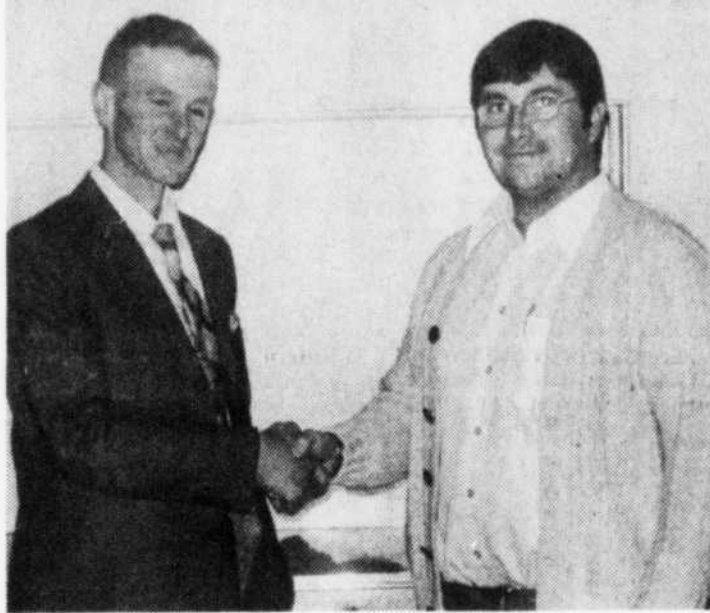

Slides were also shown on the corn field trials in Stanstead County within the Quebec Farmers Club of Ayer's Cliff. They showed many of the area fields of corn "tall as a stock" and ears "fat and long as cucumbers," showing in the trial contests Old Fox taking advantage of minerals for increased production in the shorter growing period of about 90 days.

Turner Hunter won the door prize of a bag of calf starter. Mr. Bliss thanked everyone for their co-operation and support his two years as president.

Donald Coates was in the chair for the election of officers. The directors re-elected and elected were Stan Whitcomb, Leo Roy, Lawrence Taylor, Lawrence Johnson, George Johann, Bill Brus, Leslie Bliss, Alex and Derwyn McKiven, Romeo Lagueux, Albert Gass, George and Hugh MacDonald, Artiste Nadeau, Arthur Jordan and Philip Webster.

The directors elected as their president, Hugh MacDonald, vice-president, Derwyn McKiven, and secretary-treasurer, Miss Cathy Whitcomb. From the floor the name of Philip Webster was nominated to be representative to the provincial club. Mr. Webster, not at the meeting, will be approached to take this office.

Congressman to speak at Champlain

Congressman Tom Railsback, who as a member of the House Judiciary Committee, voted for the impeachment of former President Richard Nixon, will be at Champlain College on Friday to speak on current American Politics.

His first appearance will be at 4 p.m. in McKinnon lounge. This will be a question and answer period dealing with different subjects. A reception will follow.

Then at 8 p.m. in McKinnon Lounge, he will speak on Watergate and why he voted to impeach Nixon, the Nov. 5th elections and his own problems to get re-elected, Ford's pardon of Nixon, and the Committee hearings dealing with the Rockefeller appointment.

The public is invited to the sessions. Mr. Railsback was recently re-elected by his Illinois constituents for a fourth term to the House of Representatives in Washington.

Tom Railsback is a 42 year old moderate Republican congressman who has achieved international prominence in recent months as a member of the House Judiciary Committee. He was included by Time magazine as one of the promising U.S. leaders of the future. He served two terms in the Illinois legislature before going to Congress in 1967. His vote against Nixon was a vote of "conscience". Nixon helped Railsback enter Congress in 1967. He has large support amongst conservatives and union workers and ran unopposed in 1972.

He has worked for such reforms as equal representation for men and women in state delegations to political conventions, and the 18 year old vote. He is Representative of the 19th Congressional District of Illinois. He is a graduate of Grinnell College and Northwestern University Law School, is a U.S. Army veteran and was active in church and service activities prior to his election to Congress. Railsback is considered as an influential man among his Republican colleagues and at his young (?) age may be a presidential candidate of the future.

Time magazine quoted Railsback as saying in reference to the young people that if Nixon was not impeached: "You are going to see the most frustrated people, the most turned-off people, the most disillusioned people, and it is going to make the period of L.B.J. in 1968, 1969... Look tame!"

Oil, meat prominent topics

WASHINGTON (CP) — When Prime Minister Trudeau comes to Washington Dec. 4 for talks with President Ford, the questions of oil and meat are likely to figure high on the agenda.

But whatever accord the two leaders can reach on their immediate problems—and they may agree only to disagree—both are faced with the conclusion that the issues transcend the ability of Canada and the United States to solve them entirely.

The tit-for-tat quotas on each other's livestock and meat exports come at a time of world-wide surplus in beef, with crucial markets in Japan and the European Common Market firmly closed to imports and cattle growers hard pressed for sales from their under-priced herds.

The oil problem has a similar scope, as Western importing countries seek through conservation and diplomatic pressures to lessen their dependence on Arab oil at its current stubbornly-high price.

Canada's decision last Friday to phase out Canadian oil exports to the United States has served mainly to focus American attention on a neglected segment of its oil-import problem—in much the way that English playwright Samuel Johnson believed the prospect of the gallows "concentrates the mind wonderfully."

NEED BROAD SOLUTION

The White House under both Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford has long shared the view held in other countries that world trade problems have become too complex for patchwork solution. Both presidents have urged Congress to approve a bill giving them broad powers to negotiate with other trading countries.

The bill has passed some crucial congressional committees but still must be guided through the scramble of pressing legislation in the month that remains before the current Congress's mandate expires.

The influential Washington Post, making the connection of trade reform with current problems, suggests that the forthcoming Trudeau-Ford meeting is the "worst possible" forum for settling disputes on such issues as oil and beef.

Such trade "is only part of a world-wide market involving dozens of other countries," the newspaper said Monday in an editorial. In addition, a wider list of commodities would allow more room for manoeuvre.

SEEKS ACTION

But the Post said a World-wide process of trade negotiations is "badly overdue" and urged Congress to get on with the stalled Trade Reform Act.

"In the meantime, governments throughout the world are being drawn into angry, festering grievances over trade—of which the U.S.-Canadian beef and bacon war is the most recent and the most ludicrous."

The reaction in the United States to Canada's moves on both livestock and oil, as reflected in news accounts and editorials, has been generally far from hostile. Most reports have balanced the Canadian moves against the reasons for them.

Whether such a measured response reflects the average American's thinking is doubtful. Afflicted from all sides by bad economic news, from strikes and layoffs to inflation and shortages, the American public is more likely to view the Canadian actions as yet another blow at a time of deepening gloom.

Don Oakley

Racism erupts only when it's forced

By Don Oakley

One aspect of the continuing "flight from the cities" that has received little attention from the sociologists and social reformers is the fact that this is far from being strictly a white phenomenon.

Perhaps it was in the beginning, but today, as more and more blacks climb up at least a few rungs on the ladder of affluence, more and more of them are moving into formerly all-white suburbs near metropolitan areas all over the nation.

They are motivated by the same desires as were the whites before them—to live in a decent home in a decent community, to send their children to schools that are not crumbling and plagued with crime and to escape from the deterioration and degradation of the inner cities.

Yet when whites fled from blacks or poor whites, it was called racism or class snobbery. When blacks flee from blacks—and that is what they are doing whether or not anyone admits it—it is called upward mobility, if it is not ignored entirely by those who see only the shortcomings of American society and dismiss its accomplishments.

For the most part, this migration is taking place with a minimum of racial strife and that comes usually in the initial stages. Suburban whites are discovering that when blacks move in, the neighborhood does not automatically go to hell; property values do not fall but continue to rise, as they are rising everywhere in an inflationary economy. They are learning that blacks just want the same things they do. Many white families are realizing that there is no place left to flee and that they have to make integration work.

America's racial problem is not a problem of the suburbs. It is a problem of the cities. And in the cities, the problem is not that of integration per se, either in housing or in schools. The legal aspects of that battle have been fought and won by the blacks. It is when integration is massive and overwhelming or when it is artificially forced that there is conflict.

We see an example of the former in a city like Cleveland, where the black ghetto is expanding into and sometimes around old, established white ethnic areas. We see an example of the latter in Boston, where children of both races are being arbitrarily taken out of their neighborhoods and bused to distant, "quota-ized" schools.

Even there, the conflict has arisen not so much from the fact that black children are being placed in white schools as that white children are being forced to attend black schools of inferior quality. There would be exactly the same kind of resistance from black parents who have managed to extricate themselves from the ghetto if the courts were to order their children back into it.

Rather than permitting, or being able to permit, integration to proceed at its own natural pace on the basis of gradually increasing affluence among blacks, we are trying to compress an immensely difficult and complicated social process into a matter of months.

No nation has ever done this before. No society has ever attempted it. It is not surprising that there should be conflicts.

Stability in Greece

If the Greek general election on Sunday produced any surprises, they were all pleasant. Premier Constantine Karamanlis has won an absolute majority, and there are now reasonable prospects that the quarrel with NATO and the United States will be settled in a way that will save Mr. Karamanlis' face without further weakening the Western stand in the Mediterranean. Moreover, the massive victory of what is basically a centre party should bring cheer to Italy, which has been without a government for weeks and will probably face an early election. Portugal, which has been teetering on the edge of a slope that might lead to a new dictatorial regime, probably Communist, will find the results of the Greek election equally comforting.

Thus at home and abroad the election outcome will be welcomed with relief. The fears that years of military rule would push the Greek electorate strongly to the left have not materialized, nor did George Mavros, the present foreign minister, have any great success with his right-of-centre semi-Gaullist party. Mr. Karamanlis has the mandate he desired. It will now depend on his skill, and the support he secures from the electorate, whether he can successfully tackle the problems that face the country.

Greece has not been exempt from the ravages of inflation, and moreover, there is the unsolved dispute with Turkey over the future of Cyprus to compound the economic problems. Both issues are liable to arouse popular sentiments and explode in popular confrontations not unlike those which have afflicted France. Although Mr. Karamanlis has scored such a resounding victory, one must not forget that more than one fourth of the voters backed the Communists and their fellow-travellers. At present, the Greek Left is split, but should it coalesce into a single movement, as it probably will, it would present a formidable challenge to the regime that in an inflation-ridden world can wave no magic wand to bring back Greek prosperity. The fact that wages have risen by only 10 per cent in a 30 per cent inflation will be used as a powerful stick with which to confound any government stabilization program.

As to the Cyprus issue, the Left will rely on Archbishop Makarios further to muddy the waters. The Greek Cypriots are now willing to negotiate with the Turks on the basis of a federal state. However, Archbishop Makarios is known to be opposed to such plans, and Mr. Karamanlis' expectations that the United States could lean on Turkey and make her turn the clock back are simply not realistic. Neither the United States nor NATO wield the power that would enable them to coerce an ally into accepting a policy that is repugnant to its voters. The Greeks will have to accept a compromise, and in such circumstances it is always easy to blame the universal scapegoat, the wicked United States.

Thus the pleasure at Mr. Karamanlis' handsome victory will be tempered with forebodings for the future. Should State Secretary Kissinger succeed in his newly launched oil policy program, bring the oil prices down and secure some of the petrodollar billions for investment in the crisis-ridden Western countries; and should Dr. Kissinger succeed in averting a new Middle East war, Mr. Karamanlis would have a much easier task in keeping Greece on an even keel. In this interdependent world the stability of Greece depends as much on the stability of the Western world as Western stability is linked with the future of the Mediterranean. Mr. Karamanlis deserves both congratulations and heartfelt wishes for good fortune. So does Dr. Kissinger.

'PETER LOUGHEED ...LAWRENCE OF ALBERTA ...MOST AMUSING!'

The Klassen clam-up

WASHINGTON — A new Postal Service, which was supposed to put the mails on a businesslike basis, was established on Jan. 1, 1972.

Today, mail service has declined; thousands of local post offices have been closed; twice-daily deliveries have been abandoned; Saturday service has been cut; carrier routes have been consolidated; and special services have been trimmed.

The new "managed mail" system has actually lengthened the delivery time in many areas. Indeed, the Postal Service has refused to deliver the mail to some new suburban developments. Every day brings more complaints of mail misdirected or lost. And postal morale is also at an all-time low.

Yet the price of mailing letters has rivaled the price of oil on the inflationary index, rising 67 per cent. This year's postal deficit, nevertheless, is $500 million, and another $500 million deficit is expected next year.

The Postal Service has asked Congress for still another $44 million to make up lost revenue, which the wage-price freeze caused by delaying a postal rate increase. The way things are going, the 25-cent stamp is only a few years away.

The man largely responsible for the postal problems, however, is determined to hang onto his job, come hell or high water. He is Elmer "Ted" Klassen, the postmaster general, whose stewardship of the Postal Service has been a litany of management mistakes and personal peccadilloes.

A gruff, towering man with a blunt charm, Klassen considers himself a fighter. He is determined to battle for his personal career, despite the adverse impact it will have on mail service.

In a series of columns, we have detailed how Klassen dealt out contracts to his friends, improved his lifestyle at public expense, padded the payroll with his cronies and accepted a fee from a postal contractor.

Jack Anderson's

Washington Merry-go-round

As a result, the FBI is investigating whether the fee constituted an illegal kickback and a congressional subcommittee is taking sworn testimony on some of the contracting boondoggles.

Yet Klassen stubbornly refuses to step aside. The Postal Service today is much like the White House in the last days of Richard Nixon. The public business takes second place to defending the boss. Decisions are delayed and programs are postponed.

A fatalistic air stifles postal headquarters. And insiders tell us that morale in the field has never been lower.

Klassen and his cohorts, meanwhile, deserve the Watergate award for the best coverup of the year. Two associates, for example, pressured a postal employee into clamming up before a scheduled FBI interview.

The two heavies told the employee, according to a notarized statement submitted to the FBI, that "the people up front were plenty sick and tired of all this adverse publicity, especially that being generated by disgruntled employees."

If he made any "dumb moves," the postal employee was warned, he would be "eased out of the postal service" and it would be made "virtually impossible" for him to land a comparable new job.

The postmaster general also pulled every wire he could lay his hands on to postpone the congressional hearings.

He called representatives, senators, businessmen and labor leaders in an attempt to bring pressure on Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Calif., to call off or at least delay the hearings.

But the pressure backfired, and the tough Wilson proceeded to put many postal higherups and contractors under oath. He found that Klassen had been less than candid in his public denials of our stories.

The postmaster general struck back through the American Postal Workers Union, which got just about everything it requested at the last bargaining session with Klassen. The union boss, Francis Filbey, put out a poisonous press release calling the Wilson subcommittee members "jackals" and an unnamed columnist a "pygmy journalist."

While postal pay has gone up, it should be added, Klassen's cutbacks in the labor force have caused hardships. Many workers now have to put in long hours of overtime to move the mails.

Filbey told my associate Jack Cloberty that he did not, in Klassen's behalf, ask Rep. Wilson to delay the postal hearings. But we have been informed by unimpeachable sources that Filbey, indeed, did contact Wilson.

In the days of the Pony Express, it took four days to move a letter from coast to coast. Today, 100 years and $100 billion later, it often still takes four days. With new leadership and some structural changes, the Postal Service may eventually be able to outperform the Pony Express.

Footnote: Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., a personal friend of Klassen's, has asked him to resign. Other members of the House Postal Committee are preparing to join the call.

Without the middle class Ford's lost

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — President Ford economically is attempting to be all things to all people — except the middle class.

Psychologically, this may be Mr. Ford's undoing, though he says the surtax, in practice, will be small. For the middle class as individuals — the highly skilled machinist, welder and technician, the office manager, foreman and middle-level manager, blue and white collar alike — are the men and women Mr. Ford must depend upon to provide the brains and resources to make his program a success.

They have been hit by so many discriminatory blows these past few years (in college scholarships for their children for one) that any new tax which focuses on their incomes is sure to create strong resentment. If the morale of this group is shattered, what chance does the Ford program have?

Just as worrisome, an economic grab bag that includes so many compromise half-do, half-don't solutions, is bound to be picked to pieces by Congress with considerable vigor. This leads me to believe the parts which survive may not add up to a workable whole.

But let us suppose, for the sake of argument, that Mr. Ford has his way and that Congress votes him every law he is asking for. He does not have the organization and skilled managers to effectively put an anti-inflation, energy-independence program into effect.

In the main, whatever small numbers of men he can draw in from the outside, he must in the end rely on a bureaucracy which has failed miserably in promoting energy production and conservation and in developing or supervising inflation programs. There has been so much inter-departmental backbiting that some upper-middle-level officials are resigning in despair, being convinced that nothing will happen.

Mr. Ford's proposal is a shopping list, not a program. His speech before Congress, of course, was a mere outline and tells little about how this 31-ring circus is to be handled. The 43-page backup fact sheet adds little more. Officials questioned differ widely in their interpretation and in their evaluation of what is and is not possible.

There are concrete proposals of course. Witness the 5 per cent surtax on corporations and middle- and upper-bracket taxpayers, the 10 per cent allowance on depreciation, and extended and broadened unemployment programs, Congress willing. But consider the bewildering generalities.

Mr. Ford speaks with confidence of billions in budget cuts for this year, but gives no evidence.

He gives lip service to increased productivity and a "revitalized" commission to do the job. Since this body and its several predecessors have accomplished next to nothing, we would have more confidence if the President were to explain how this round will be different.

On food production and prices, Mr. Ford concludes by saying "we cannot expect to see immediate benefits from the initiatives outlined here. We can, however, be confident that policies to maximize food and fiber production and to restrain food price increases are being pursued vigorously."

In simple words, this says that, except for export controls, the President and his aides don't know what to do about today's soaring food prices.

Though it has been abundantly clear for some time that outworn and misguided government regulations seriously throttle competition and force inefficiencies in major areas of the economy, for now Mr. Ford is proposing not a house cleaning but merely a new commission to study the problem and develop recommendations.

NS to build hydro plant in Cape Breton

HALIFAX (CP) — The Nova Scotia legislature gave unanimous approval Monday to a government resolution seeking support for a proposed hydroelectric project in the Cape Breton highlands, but not before a New Democratic Party member accused the government of misleading the people by withholding information on the development.

The resolution, which urged that work on the Wreck Cove project proceed along with a phased environmental assessment, was adopted. Two opposition amendments calling for public hearings into the environmental implications of the work were defeated by the government.

Premier Gerald Regan, who last week told the legislature that the site is the last major hydroelectric possibility for the province and vital to future energy needs, said he would agree to a "meeting" in Victoria County where the project will be located, but ruled out a "travelling circus" of public hearings.

After two days of heavy criticism of the government's handling of an environmental impact study and those seeking more information on the proposed project, the premier appeared jubilant at the opposition support and remarked to members around him that "we smoked them out."

Last week he said that the province's electrical energy picture is the bleakest of any area in Canada and unless the Cape Breton project went ahead Nova Scotia could experience power shortages by 1977.

MEMBER ANGRY
Paul MacEwan (NDP-Cape Breton Nova) accused the government of misrepresenting the legitimate concerns of those who have questioned the environmental impact of the project and the validity of an environmental study prepared for the government.

The government had turned the matter around and said those who questioned the project were opposed to it. They had been referred to as "hippies in tar-paper shacks" and "Upper Canadians and Americans."

The press, and particularly the Cape Breton Post, had been singled out for "churlish attacks and smears" by the premier when they asked for more information and indicated a measure of hesitation, Mr. MacEwan said.

He said the government had presented a toned-down version of the environmental report after it was pressured into releasing its contents.

The government, he said, had opted for Nixon-style tactics rather than a forthright presentation of the facts.

Premier Regan said he was "scandalized" by the irresponsibility of Mr. MacEwan's remarks, which carried "McCarthyism to new depths." Nothing had been hidden from the public and the original environmental report had not been changed in the abridged version. The original was available to the public.

Referring to stories in which the Cape Breton Post had pointed out discrepancies in the abridged report and editorials defending the public's right to get all the facts, the premier said the newspaper's attitude was "highly irresponsible" and appeared to be very popular with the NDP now that they have "infiltrated its editorial ranks."

Students dream of running full radio station

OTTAWA (CP) — The students running Carleton University's radio station have a dream—to broadcast as a full-fledged FM radio station.

They've recently come one step closer to fulfilling that dream. After years of talk and planning, they've made a submission to the Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC) to broadcast on the FM band to a potential audience of more than 500,000 in the Ottawa-Hull area.

Currently CKCU—Radio Carleton—is available only on the Carleton campus using a low-power transmitter. From its studios in the student university centre, CKCU broadcasts 24 hours a day.

Randy Williams, station manager, says the limited size of the audience sometimes is discouraging for the students who act as disc jockeys and technicians.

"How do you develop the esprit de corps you need when you're only broadcasting to 1-300 people in residence?" he asks.

Williams is convinced Radio Carleton can offer programming not now available to the community at large.

DIFFERENT STRESS

The emphasis on commercial hits or middle-of-the-road music on local AM stations would be replaced by underground rock, country music, specialized jazz and classical programming, the 27-year-old manager says.

News programming on the new FM outlet would be provided by Carleton journalism students. Multicultural shows would come from university language departments.

Williams, a former student of English and sociology, points to current programming as proof of what the station might offer with an FM licence.

In a weekly show, No One Came, amateur performers are given on-air experience. Another program features artists at Le Hibou, a local coffee house.

The station's submission to the CRTC is backed by a three-volume report, which sets out the station's intentions in programming, financing and technical matters.

The proposed outlet, which would be owned by Carleton University Students' Association, has the backing of the university's board of governors. It has offered a $115,000 loan for renovations and improvements to the station's studios and equipment.

HAS PRO LOOK

Even now, the station has a professional look about it. It has two studios, a 5,000-disc record library and equipment that Williams says is comparable to what is used by the CBC.

The station manager, his assistant and the chief engineer are all paid, full-time employees.

CKCU's application would not be a first. Queen's University has operated AM and FM stations in Kingston, Ont., for some time. University of Saskatchewan students in Saskatoon run a low-power FM station that can be picked up in most of the city.

The estimated operation cost for the station in its first year would be $75,228. Most of the money would come from the university and the students' association but the station proposes to raise more than $30,000 from the sale of advertising time.

This part of the submission could cause trouble for the fledgling station, Williams says.

LIMIT BLURBS

A decision by the CRTC in July expressed concern that advertising may affect the quality of student-run radio. As a result, it decided to limit commercials to those that don't specifically promote a sponsor's products, plus classified ads and information messages from non-profit groups.

An official at the CRTC said he was impressed with the Radio Carleton set-up but it was a big step from a low-power AM outlet to an FM commercial operation.

CKCU's brief is a detailed one, filled with considerable documentation and technical data. But buried in the brief is an example of student humor. In the biographical sketch of a member of the station's broadcast policy board are these entries:

"Wired his own radio when eight years old."
"Spent 14 years contemplating unobservable planets for the purpose of higher communicational contacts."

One might wonder how the CRTC commissioners will react to this unusual curriculum vitae.

Acupuncture based on stoicism

OTTAWA (CP) — Chinese stoicism is a major reason for that country's successful application of acupuncture analgesia, says a report on a China tour by Canadian anesthetists.

This stoicism was apparent when Chinese patients were in obvious pain after the needles used in acupuncture had been inserted or manipulated, says the delegation's report published in the current Canadian Medical Association Journal.

"It is difficult to imagine many Canadians submitting to the insertion of needles followed by 30 minutes of electrical stimulation, the result only a partial state of pain relief," the report says.

The delegation of one dental and nine medical anesthetists, which visited six Chinese cities in April and May on the Sino-Canadian scientific exchange series, suggests acupuncture has a role in Canadian medicine, but not to the extent it is used in China.

THERAPY ANCIENT

Acupuncture has been used in therapy for thousands of years, but its development as a method of analgesia began in China in 1958.

The knowledge and equipment to administer successfully the western-type anesthesia is another reason for limiting the application of acupuncture in Canadian medicine, the delegation reports.

By comparison, the delegation members, who visited surgical units in 16 hospitals and acupuncture therapy units in seven hospitals, reported a shortage of trained personnel, medication, anesthetic agents and modern medical machinery for the application of western-style anesthesia in China.

They also reported that Chinese hospitals appeared to perform only half as many surgical operations as Canadian hospitals.

"Considering the much heavier surgical load placed on Canadian hospitals and personnel, it is difficult to see how the Canadian anesthetist would be able to carry out the very time-consuming pre-operative discussions and pre-trial needling which are often used to determine a patient's candidacy for acupuncture analgesia."

RECOMMEND TRIALS

The delegation recommends that experimental trials be undertaken in employing acupuncture in operations on the neck, ear, nose and throat, as well as dental procedures and possibly neurosurgery, and some orthopedic procedures on the hip for fractures or dislocations.

For pain relief, the technique might be used in acute and chronic muscle and skeletal disorders, the anesthetists suggest.

Its applicability should also be explored for headache relief, as well as pains caused by infections or trauma affecting nerves and for intractable angina pectoris, chest pains caused by blood-circulation deficiencies.

In Chinese hospitals visited by the delegation, acupuncture analgesia was used in 30 per cent of surgical operations, including 90 per cent of all cesarean sections and 25 per cent of gynecological surgery.

The Chinese reported that one to 10 per cent of surgeries started with acupuncture analgesia required subsequent local anesthetics of intravenous analgesics to keep patients comfortable.

People Helping People

As of Dec. 2nd you'll be able to go shopping at the telephone company store.

Time was, when you ordered a new phone you had to wait at home for installation. Furthermore, you almost never got to see what kind of phone, or phones, you were getting — until they got there.

That's all going to change.

On December 2nd, the new Téléboutique will open up at Carrefour de l'Estrie. What it is, in short, is a telephone store.

You'll be able to pop in and shop around . . . for telephones. You'll get to see all the available colours. And all the styles — regular phones and wall phones and Contempra phones . . . all kinds of telephones.

And after you've seen what you want, you just order them, right there. And then you take the phones home with you. And plug them in — providing you have jacks.

Jacks?

In order to have the Téléboutique concept work — we are installing jacks throughout this area as quickly as possible. (Most of you know what a jack is — it's a prong-type plug that connects up a portable phone.)

Some of you might not have jacks yet — we'll be getting to you as fast as we can — you can probably find out when we'll be doing your block, by asking at the Téléboutique.

By the way, at no charge to you we will install up to five telephone jack outlets in your home and adapt your existing telephones.

So make a note to drop into the Téléboutique after the December 2nd opening. It's a whole new concept designed to give you a chance to see what you're getting; to choose what you want; to save some time and maybe even some money.

And be sure to welcome the installer when he comes, because he's the person who'll be connecting you up to the Téléboutique.

This new service is available to Sherbrooke customers only.

Ann Landers

Ire over ironing

Dear Ann Landers: You really have got to be out of your mind. I refer to your comment to that woman who doesn't iron her sheets and towels. You called her "lazy."

I had an aunt who used to iron shoeleaves, hairnets, dusting cloths, everything she could lay her hands on. Do you have a name for HER? We called her "Squirrelly Sarah."

Have you ever heard of permanent-press sheets? Don't you know that towels are much fluffier when they come right out of the dryer or fresh from the clothesline? Then there's this business of conserving energy.

Ironing uses a lot of electricity. Where's your sense of patriotism, not to mention economy?

I stopped ironing sheets six years ago, and I never did iron towels. Nobody in our house calls ME lazy. I also noted in your reply, you used the editorial "we." You said, "In our house we iron the sheets and towels."

Annie dear, when was the last time YOU ironed anything? — Sensible in Midland

Dear Sensible: Last night I ironed my husband's formal tie — but it's been quite a while since I ironed sheets or anything else. Now that I'm writing 365 columns a year and making about 100 speeches, I figure somebody else can do the laundry.

The word from the Landers Linen Room is as follows: Mrs. Washington irons the sheets. They are not permanent-press. As for towels, I'm willing to eat a large hunk of crow. Mrs. Washington folds the towels when she takes them out of the dryer. She says ironing is not necessary.

My apologies for calling the woman "lazy." I should have done some research instead of relying on my own experience in the laundry room which goes back 25 years.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a kid who is driving me crazy. He is two-and-a-half years old, and runs me ragged from morning till night.

He is up at 5:00 a.m. every day even though I sometimes let him run around until 10:30 at night, hoping he'll get worn out and sleep later in the morning. It doesn't work. I have become so desperate for sleep that I've hired a sitter in the afternoon, taken a pillow and blanket and driven out to the woods so I can take a two-hour nap in the car.

How long will this last? I am 26 years old and have lost 16 pounds in eight months. Because I am always exhausted I can't have a decent social life and even our sex life has gone to hell. My husband is beginning to dislike the child and so am I.

A few months ago I took the boy to a doctor. He said the child has a lot of energy and I should just "put up with it." Many of my friends have small children and none of them have this problem.

Please, Ann, give me some help before I go batty or drop dead of exhaustion. — Newbury Park Cadaver

Dear N.P.: Take the child to another doctor and ask that he be tested. From your description the boy sounds hyperkinetic. There are drugs to control this problem. They have worked wonders, not only for the wall-climbing child but for the bleary-eyed mother. Good luck to you, dear, and please let me know how you get along.

Attending were Mr. and Mrs. Donald Prangley, of Stanstead, Mr. and Mrs. Basil Liddle and Patricia and Mrs. Evelyn Richer of Sherbrooke, Mrs. Gladys Ellis, Mrs. Linda Kilpatrick and Stephanie, Rock Island, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Britch, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wheeler, all of Newport, Mr. and Mrs. Farrow's family, Stephen, Mark, Janet, Judy and David of Rock Island, Shawn Martin and Henry Seguin, the latter of Beebe.

The afternoon was spent chatting and reminiscing. Among the guests were the attendants at the marriage that took place on November 5, 1949, Donald Prangley and Mrs. Liddle. Mr. Prangley proposed a toast for the continued happiness of Gerald and Alice (Wheeler) Farrow.

A buffet was served. The table was centered with the anniversary cake, square in design having a large iced-in blue 25 numeral in the center, outlined with blue roses and scroll and silver leaves. White candles in silver completed the decor.

Another celebrant at the party was the mother of the bride of silver years, Mrs. Gordon Wheeler, observing her birthday. Mr. and Mrs. Farrow were the recipient of gifts as was Mrs. Wheeler. There was also a prettily decorated birthday cake and both cakes were cut and served.

The many friends of Gerry and Alice join to wish them many more of these happy events.

St. Luke's Tea

WATERLOO — A very successful Christmas Sale and Tea sponsored by St. Luke's Church Women was held on Nov. 14. In spite of the inclement weather, a good number attended. Mrs. R. Streeter, Pres., had ably arranged for all tables to be looked after. Mrs. W. Hughes sold admission tickets while Mrs. W. Holloway sold chances on a pair of pillow slips which were later drawn for and won by Mrs. Adrian Whitehead of Foster. A well filled work table was taken care of by Mrs. Donald Wilson and Mrs. M. Emmett.

At opening time, many of the ladies quickly bought from the home cooking table. This was in charge of Mrs. Alan McKergow and Miss Alice Ashton. Greeting cards and church calendars were sold by Mrs. W. Elston and Mrs. H. Roach. Items from a white elephant table were sold by Mrs. G. Williams and Mrs. Musgrave while the surprise packages were sold by Mrs. Needham.

The tea tables were attractive with colored cloths and festive table centres.

Among the waitresses were Mrs. Pugh, Mrs. G. Hollenbeck, Mrs. Hanna, Mrs. C. Caw, Mrs. Venters, Mrs. R. Roach, Mrs.

Padner, and Lisa Elston. Mrs. Buckland, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. F. Marsh, Mrs. Tucker and Mrs. H. Snow poured tea and coffee. This table looked very nice with lighted red candles and Christmas centre decoration. Mrs. Pickford and Mrs. Marsh were replenishers while Mrs. E. Larose kept a good supply of tea made. Mrs. Lawrence was in charge of kitchen arrangements and with her capable helpers served tempting plates of salads, rolls and squares, etc.

The hall was prettily decorated in keeping with the Holiday season, this having been done by Mrs. Pickford. The ladies wish to thank all who helped with this event.

tenth trick with the king of hearts.

We didn't bother to ask East if he had contributed anything to the debacle, because he had already heard from West. It seems East had discarded two hearts and a diamond while the clubs were parading.

East's first discard should have been a spade and his second discard another spade. That would have told West that he could throw spades with complete safety. As it was poor West had been afraid that South held four hearts and that he, West, just had to hang on to all his cards in that suit.

Townships architecture topic at society meeting

SHERBROOKE (RH) — The churches and holy places of the area. Before a group of nearly fifty architecture aficionados, Mr. Tremblay mesmerized his audience by transferring to them his enthusiasm on the topic. An architect himself, he managed to communicate in lay terms and yet divulge a great deal of heretofore unknown facts.

During his lecture he explained the effects that the different cultural influences had on the structures that were built at that time.

"As in most things," he told the Historical Society, the French looked to France for their architectural inspiration, while the English emulated the styles prevalent in England for their early building ideas."

He added that all kinds of styles were evident in the architecture of the Eastern Townships.

"We see examples of Greek, Roman Gothic and Romanesque work here," Mr. Tremblay elucidated. "Eastern Townships architecture is quite varied."

Mr. Tremblay offered an explanation for the unusual sombre quality of the Protestant churches here as compared to their flamboyant Catholic counterparts.

"The reason is theological," he suggested. "The symbolism behind the two churches is different. The Protestants didn't go in for the same kind of architectural drama that the Catholics did."

He marvelled over the cost of construction in the early days of Eastern Townships architecture in relation to building costs now.

"Walton Church, for instance," he went on, "cost a little over $4,700 to put up when it was built in 1902 — and it is a particularly important piece of work. Now it could be sold in the range of $1,000,000, since the property value itself has gone up enormously."

The Historical Society, which compiled facts throughout the summer months on various churches throughout the area, is hoping that more of its membership will participate in different capacities.

"At present, only 10 per cent of our members are actually active within the organization," a society representative claimed.

"We would like to see more people become actively involved."

The organization has also been soliciting funds from individuals and groups in the Eastern Townships, who appreciate its work and would like to see the society expand.

"Sherbrooke Trust gave a $50 donation toward our research," the representative went on, "and we're confident more money will be coming in."

In the summer, the society hosted an Opportunities for Youth group who compiled sociological data on the area by leafing through old local newspapers in search of interesting facts worth preserving and categorizing. They dealt with the economics, politics, social activities, items of historical interest and cultural significance.

"There is a wealth of valuable information in the Eastern Townships," the society representative stressed. "Most people would be fascinated if they chose to delve into the history of this area at all."

"That's what our job is," he concluded, "and we hope people will take advantage of the work we are doing."

Attention turns from pop to rock to jazz

MONTREAL (CP) — One of the most distinct changes 1974 has brought to popular music has been the broadening of the market's horizons. While pop and even rock sectors struggle for new sounds, many record-buyers and concert-goers are turning their attention to jazz.

Several top jazz performers who enjoyed a restricted prominence during the 1960s now are emerging with a newly-defined dimension in jazz, influenced by classical and fine rock structures with an emphasis on delicate improvisation.

Among these performers, Keith Jarrett reflects the new jazz dimension. He is unlike several of his contemporaries, such as the highly successful Herbie Hancock. However, Jarrett bases much of his composition on a classical or avant-garde theme, rather than rock.

By nature a classical musician — he was playing classics in public at the age of seven — Jarrett presents an astonishing range of musical style and expression in his works.

He recently brought his quartet to Montreal's In Concert for a local debut, sold every seat in the house and played for a week to responsive audiences at the newly-established jazz club.

Changing at random from composed to improvised music, Jarrett created an intimate atmosphere of communication between performer and listener. His command of the mathematics of music was especially noticeable during improvisation when, at times, he would pause momentarily before deciding on the next piece of music.

One local jazz musician was staggered at Jarrett's emotional involvement with his music.

"I saw him do a solo piece which had him in tears. When a professional hears his music and hears him give his all to that music, we can have nothing but respect for such a man."

Jarrett's inclusion with some of the biggest names in modern jazz leaves the 29-year-old musician puzzled. Although he served time in 1971 with Miles Davis, the guru of rock jazz, Jarrett feels he has little in common with other Davis disciples. Hancock included, since he expresses a loathing for electronic instrumentation — notably the synthesizer — and the general "hipness" attributed to many successful modern jazzmen.

"The fact is I don't listen to much jazz because there are so many classical works I like better," he said.

"I believe in music to the extent that it was here before we were. In that sense, perhaps I'm not a musician... I don't believe I can create, but that I can be a channel for the creative."

"I do believe in the Creator, and so in reality, this is His music through me to you."

Jarrett's grounding in music started at age three when he first took to the piano. The Allentown, Pa., youngster gave his first solo recital when he was seven and within 10 years was playing concerts of his own music.

Jarrett moved to Boston as a scholarship student at the Berklee School of Music and later trod jazz paths with Art Blakey and Roland Kirk among others. However, he first broke the ice in Europe where he made six tours with the Charles Lloyd Quartet in 1966.

One tour included a visit to the Soviet Union where his composition Days and Nights Waiting opened the quartet's performance at the Soviet music festival. To this day, the quartet is the only U.S. group to have played at the festival.

The following year another Jarrett composition, Sorcery was highlighted at the International Jazz Festival in Prague where many European critics recognized an extraordinary talent.

By 1968, Jarrett's success began to spread to the U.S. and between tours with the quartet, he was able to play occasional concerts with his own trio, bassist Charlie Haden and Paul Motian on drums.

The Keith Jarrett Trio was later signed by a major record company and began recording and touring extensively, especially in Europe.

This quickly earned Jarrett wide respect not only as a pianist but as multi-instrumentalist. On the album Restoration Ruin he is featured on 11 instruments and several vocals.

By 1972 the Keith Jarrett Trio had made two major European tours following which Jarrett added sax player Dewey Redman to his lineup on a permanent basis. Birth and Expectations, two widely-acclaimed albums followed. Expectations winning the French Grand Prix for the best jazz album of the year.

Among his later records, Fort Yawuh won Jarrett the accolade of jazz artist of the year, in 1973, from the music publication Rolling Stone while his triple solo album, Solo-Concerts has been acclaimed as a major breakthrough in the field of solo improvised music.

Star of Duddy Kravitz

His apprenticeship is over

By Ellie Grossman

EDGARTOWN — (NEA) — Good actors can make you believe just about anything.

So when Richard Dreyfuss says, "I'd cut an arm up to here to work with Marlon Brando," it's a bit unnerving.

For a split second, a grisly image presents itself. Dreyfuss picking up a knife from the table, coolly hacking off his right arm (he's left-handed) and marching out of the hotel dining room, off Martha's Vineyard where he's filming Universal's adaptation of the Peter Benchley novel, "Jaws," and straight into a New York stage production of "Death of a Salesman," with Brando, fully armed, as Willy Loman.

"I got a call today to play the role of Biff," he says, "and Brando was mentioned as a possible lead. But I'm too young for the part." (Dreyfuss is 26.)

Still, on second thought, if Brando were to say yes...

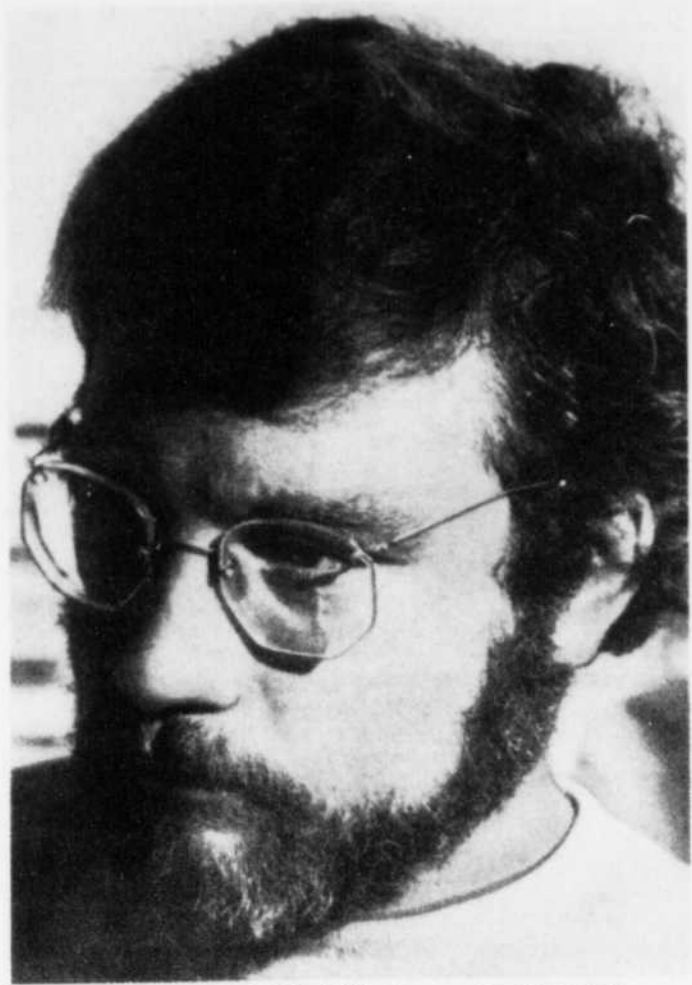

"He's the greatest actor of the 20th century," Dreyfuss states without hesitation. "I've seen 'Julius Caesar' over 30 times. Here's a performance by a man born in Nebraska, acting with John Gielgud and James Mason, and he's the only real Roman in the whole room." He laughs delightedly. "He walked like a Roman, he talked like a Roman, he wore a toga as if he were born in it." Dreyfuss gets up to demonstrate, and succeeds despite his blue jeans and pullover.

"Brando has two gifts," he continues. "First, he looks like a classical hero. Then, he has incredible powers of observation. He can mimic more people's behavior than any other actor."

"Most actors have one expression of anger, let's say, whether they're playing a wino or a prosecutor."

"In 'On the Waterfront,' Brando's anger is inarticulate, uneducated." He imitates the thick-mouthed characterization.

"But in the first scene of 'The Ugly American,' it's all up front, here. His anger was eastern seaboard, Harvard, monied, totally contained."

RICHARD DREYFUSS: An arm for Brando?

He stops a passing waitress to order his fifth cup of coffee and lights another cigarette. Bearded now and wearing glasses, Dreyfuss looks nothing like Duddy Kravitz, the hustling young Jewish Canadian he played to critical acclaim in the film, "The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz." (Jewish himself, he does not think the movie's anti-Semitic.)

True, he's animated and brash and engagingly irrepressible like Duddy. "I love Duddy, I understand him. No other actor could have played that part because no other actor has my energy level."

But unlike Duddy, whose intellectual curiosity stopped with "God's Little Acre," Dreyfuss is a student of politics and American history. A devoted actor who'd chuck it all to publish a metropolitan newspaper because that's where the power is.

He's a Frank Capra "freak," a romantic — "I love to hear my grandparents talk about the old days when they were immigrants" — a self-confessed egoist and womanizer, and a conscientious objector who looks back fondly on his substitute military duty.

"I worked as a medical file clerk for 24 months in '69 and '70 in Los Angeles County General Hospital and I fell in love with file work."

"I volunteered for the night shift because on weekends and holidays I'd have an hour and a half of work a night. The rest of the time I'd sit down with my cigarettes and a cup of coffee and read. I was known as the clerk with the book."

But the real joy was the baby charts.

"No one could do them but me," he says with relish and borrows a pen to draw a facsimile on a paper napkin.

"The serial number has to be repeated here and here. The baby's name goes here, the date, sex, etc. Now I'd never let this go through this way. The 'seven' is casual, the 'one' is fine, the 'three' is not to be interesting. There's the word, baby. I could write it 85 ways. Like this or this. 'Baby,' he says coyly and grins.

He's a harsh critic of everything. Especially his own work. And "Duddy Kravitz," he says, despite the kudos, is "a film I'm not proud of. My work is bad in it. It's mangled."

Still, it opened doors for him and that means, eventually, his own production of "Hamlet." One in which every scene will be interesting because, he says, all but pounding the table, "There's no excuse for a film or a play not to be interesting. There's human behavior in everything. Hamlet is brilliant because there are so many moments that illuminate humanity and reflect what we all do."

And how does Dreyfuss view the human condition? "Did you ever read 'Scaramouche'?" he asks. "The opening line is — 'He pauses, smiling in anticipation while he gets it straight. Then, leaning forward, savoring each word, 'He was born with a gift of laughter and a sense that the world was mad.'"

And one more thing: a great delivery.

Allegro Unit meets

STANSTEAD — The November meeting of the Allegro Unit of Centenary United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Avery Davis in the evening, with twelve members and a guest, Miss M. Eccles, attending.

The Unit Leader, Mrs. Warren Soutiere conducted the opening devotional period which was centered around Remembrance Day and was followed by all repeating The Lord's Prayer.

Everyone was happy to hear the results of the two fall projects of the Unit from the treasurer, Miss Gertrude Ketcham, that of the rummage sale netted a sum of $118.26 and the Christmas tea and sale, $510.25.

Letters of appreciation are to be sent to two supporters of the Unit, one family residing in Ontario, the other in Lennoxville, both having connections with Centenary.

All were pleased to learn the 14 stacking tables had arrived at the church hall prior to the Christmas sale and tea.

It was discussed to make and sell quilts. Mrs. Davis displayed two of her quilts and patterns and at the December meeting, the members are invited to bring in patterns so this may be a winter works program.

Mrs. Howard Majury and Mrs. W.T. Greer were named to the nominations committee.

A sum of $35.00 was voted to be earmarked for the Community Basket Fund if asked to contribute as in the past. It was voted to purchase 25 dozen coffee mugs with pictures of the church, to be sold by the members.

The travelling apron was opened and a sum of $17.77 was found under the patches for the Unit treasury.

The December 10 meeting will be preceded by a joint supper with the UCV and menfolk invited to the church hall for 6:00 p.m. A program will follow, then the Allegro Unit meeting.

The meeting adjourned and refreshments were served by Mrs. Davis and co-hostess, Mrs. Stanley McMullen.

Peace-keeping force needed

NICOSIA, Cyprus (CP) — The leaders of hostile Greek and Turkish communities share admiration for the United Nations Force in Cyprus—known as UNFICYP—and they also agree the international formation should remain on their troubled island.

But separate interviews with Glafcos Clerides, the Greek-Cypriot acting president, and Rauf Denktas, Turkish-Cypriot vice-president, elicited differing views on UNFICYP's future mandate.

UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim has said a new mandate will be decided on in the near future for the six-nation force, whose terms of reference were shattered when a Turkish army invaded Cyprus, occupying 40 per cent of the island's territory in July and August.

The respect gained by the Canadian contingent in UNFICYP during the last 10½ years was reflected in the way a Canadian reporter was received by Denktas and Clerides.

"Canadians are always welcome in this office, in this country—and, in future, in this region," said Denktas, emphasizing the word "region."

SEEK FEDERAL STATE
Turkey and Turkish-Cypriot leaders want to transform Cyprus into a bi-regional federal state. Turkish-Cypriots are outnumbered four-to-one by their Greek compatriots in the island population of 630,000.

"The Canadian contingent has performed its task in an exemplary manner... establishing friendships and gaining the trust of the people of Cyprus as a whole," said Clerides.

The relationship between Clerides, 55, and Denktas, 50, is regarded as one of the bright spots in the Cyprus picture. Both of them lawyers and both educated in London, they have been conducting talks on inter-communal differences since 1968. They are said to have a high personal regard for one another.

"The UN force has contributed greatly in maintaining as nearly as possible conditions of normality on the island, a climate in which negotiations were possible," said Clerides.

Canada's Defence Minister James Richardson said in a visit to Cyprus after these interviews that the Canadian contingent might be withdrawn from UNFICYP if the Turks continued to restrict its freedom of movement.

Clerides had struck a similar theme in his interview, stating that the new mandate must empower UNFICYP to exercise the same freedom of movement in Turkish-occupied areas as it does in areas controlled by the government.

Denktas, envisaging a bi-regional system based on geographic federalism, said a new function of the force should be to "protect a buffer zone" east-west across the island, somewhat in the manner of UN bodies in the nearby Middle East.

Clerides emphasized his concern that the UN be empowered by the new mandate to attend to the safety and security of Greek-Cypriots in Turkish-held areas. He added:

"On our side, I have informed the secretary-general that I was ready to entrust the security of Turks living in territory under the control of the government completely to the peace-keeping force."

PEOPLE SCATTERED
Though the highest proportion of Turkish-Cypriot citizens are found in the north, they are scattered throughout the island in villages which are mainly wholly Turkish but sometimes mixed.

Clerides was asked what he would say to those Canadian citizens who may feel Canada should not be involved—"has no business"—in the long quarrel between Greeks and Turks on this distant eastern Mediterranean island.

"It is to a certain extent an attitude which judged from a domestic angle any nation might regard as reasonable," Clerides replied.

"But if you accept the principle that the United Nations has a responsibility to try to keep the peace in the world, then the only way it can do so is by calling on its members to send contingents to be used in peace-keeping operations."

"Now the Canadian people can rightly ask why should it be Canada, and why shouldn't it be some other country."

"It is obvious that some countries like Canada and the Scandinavian countries—and Britain—which have sent contingents here are more acutely aware of their responsibilities to the United Nations organization."

SENT MONEY
"Other countries, however, who have not provided contingents, have provided substantial sums of money for the maintenance of this force."

"So if you look at it from the domestic aspect of each nation, it may well be said, why should we do it? But if every country adopts that attitude, then you must do away with the principle of peace-keeping forces needed to avoid an escalation which may involve a wider conflict."

Answering questions, Clerides said young people from the two communities tend to go for their higher education to Greece and Turkey respectively, perpetuating the island's division. Clerides said it has always been his dream to see a University of Cyprus but not under government auspices because that, too, would have to be organized on separate Greek and Turkish lines.

The lawyer-politician was keenly interested in the multi-campus United Nations University now being organized, with Roger Gaudry, rector of University of Montreal, as chairman of the international governing council.

District Rebekah gathering

ROCK ISLAND — The members of Crystal Rebekah Lodge, No. 14, entertained in the IOOF hall in Rock Island, on Saturday evening, November 16, for the official meeting of the District Deputy, No. 10, annual visit which was attended by a number of distinguished Fraternal Brothers and Sisters.

With Crystal Rebekah Noble Grand in the chair, Mrs. Kay Brock presented and introduced the District Deputy President, Mrs. Gladys Hunter.

Other introductions were made by Mrs. Brock to include Mrs. Isabelle Rowland, President of Rebekah Assembly; Lawrence Dewey, Grand Patriarch, of the Grand Lodge of Quebec; Mrs. Helen Stickles, Rebekah Assembly Marshal; Mrs. Gwen True, the R.A. Warden; Alvin Smith, Gr. Marshal of Gr. Encampment; Mrs. M. Dezan, D.D.P., District No. 6; Stewart Bullock, Inside Sentinel; Mrs. Marion Rod, D.D.P. District No. 3.

Mrs. Margaret Currier, R.A. Treasurer; Mrs. Lou Brady, P.P.R.A.; Mrs. Clarissa Burt, P.P.D.A.; L.A.R.M.; Mrs. Alice Bullock, P.P.R.A. of Vermont; Howard Keeler, Edward Hyatt, Henry Brock and Richard Middleton, all P.G.P.

In keeping with Mrs. Rowland's theme of the year, "The moon and seven stars," candles made by Mrs. Hilda Hyatt were lighted by Mrs. Hyatt at the table which centered the lodge hall. The candles were in the design of a full moon, the other candles, the stars.

Mrs. Hunter presented Mrs. Rowland with a corsage of pink and white toned feathered carnations and white baby's breath and spoke warm words of welcome to the visitors from Sherbrooke, Lennoxville, Sawyerville, East Angus, Derby and Ayer's Cliff lodges.

Several guests spoke to include Mrs. Hunter, Mrs. Rowland and Mr. Dewey, also Mr. Hyatt, that were complimentary to the Order and its members.

After the session closed, a group of players of Stantead North Women's Institute Branch presented their play, Miss Tillie's Chair. The cast were Mrs.

Edward Simpson, Sr., as Miss Tillie; Mrs. Douglas Cooper as her sister, Clara; Mrs. E.C. Middleton, as a gossip neighbor; Mrs. George Peasley, the new community bride; and Mrs. C. Lee Heath, the new Community medical doctor. They were supported by Mrs. Doris Belanger as announcer and prompter and Terry Cooper, sounds manager.

The enjoyment of the cast was exemplified by hearty applause. Mrs. Doris McHarg won the "surprise box" gift and Frank Anderson of Stanstead won the drawing of the 22 rifle.

Refreshments were served by members of Crystal Lodge. The head table was centered with two special cakes both made and decorated by Mrs. Roland Sheldon. One cake was in the design of the IOOF emblematic three links centered in silver with the initials F.L.T. (Friendship - Love - Truth) the other, a tiered cake was topped with the Rebekah Assembly President's symbols, the bee hive and working bee, the full moon and seven stars and so forth. Both cakes were edged with a delicate pink roses and green leaves.

Gr. Patriarch Lawrence Dewey cut the Three link cake which was served the guests by Mrs. Rowland. The second cake was a gift for Mrs. Rowland to take home. She was further presented with the gift of a wedgwood blue candle, made by Mrs. Hyatt and placed in a grecian designed white holder.

Mrs. Rowland, in her remarks spoke about the warmth of the gathering, which "is true Rebekah-Oddfellowship". She voiced appreciation to the Crystal Rebekah fraternity for the wonderful evening and mentioned the work of Mrs. Sheldon, in spite of her leg in a cast and she in a wheelchair after a fracture a few days ago.

After another short period of chatting the fraternity left for their respective homes, ending another happy gathering.

Crystal Rebekah Lodge
At a recent meeting of Crystal Rebekah Lodge, held at the IOOF hall in Rock Island, Mrs. Inez Middleton was installed as Noble Grand, along with the other officers of the Lodge.

Mrs. Gladys Hunter, immediate past Noble Grand, presently serving as District Deputy President No. 10, was presented with the Rebekah Past Noble Grand jewel from the Lodge members. Mrs. Hunter proudly wore her jewel on her rose crepe gown for her D.D.P. meeting on November 16 in the lodge hall.

Wide Awake initiating team from Derby came in to an October meeting of the Lodge and performed their ritual to initiate into the Order five new members, who were Mrs. Louise Rolleston, Mrs. Minnie Sheldon, Mrs. Ruby Sheldon, Mrs. Doris Sim and Mrs. Beryl Brousseau. This was most gratifying to the long standing members to add these women to their number.

WI meetings

MELBOURNE RIDGE—The Nov. meeting of the Melbourne Ridge WI was held at the home of Mrs. Gordon Beers with Mrs. Thormin and Mrs. Marshall as co-hostesses.

The meeting opened by repeating the Collect and the motto was 'Eat right, you cannot have sweet thoughts on a sour stomach.'

The roll-call was answered by 22 members by bringing a gift for a forgotten patient at the Douglas Home. 20 thoughtful and useful gifts were collected. This is a good cause to give to, as it is so little for one person to give and could mean so much to another person.

One guest was welcomed by the president.

The minutes were read and approved.

Correspondence was a thank-you letter from Mrs. Armstrong for the farewell banquet we catered for, a thank you card from Mary Dalton for gift given her when she returned home from hospital, a thanks for sympathy extended to Mr. and Mrs. E. Crack in the loss of her brother-in-law and a request for a donation to the Salvation Army Christmas Fund.

The treasurer's report was read. An increase in our donation to the county will be made this year. Our regular annual commitments will be paid this month and a donation to the Salvation Army. Outstanding bills were paid.

Convenors' reports were: Citizenship—Marg Smith will buy gifts and prepare candy bags for the children of members for the next meeting.

Festive sale & supper

BEEBE—The annual Christmas sale and supper of Unit one, Wesley United Church was held in the church dining room on November 16.

Several people assembled for the sale which started at four o'clock, and browsed around for a time, then found a comfortable spot at one of the tables to await the serving of hot casseroles supper at five o'clock.

The dining room was in charge of Miss Viola Moraville and Mrs. Gordon Laberee, assisted by Mrs. Stella Eryou, Mrs. Bernard Leney, daughter Sandy, Mrs. Lawrence Goodsell, daughter Kathy.

Jane Blalock closes in on Jo Anne Carner

ATLANTA (AP) — Jane Blalock has moved within $3,430 of Jo Anne Carner as the leading money winner on the 1974 women's pro golf tour with one tournament remaining.

Miss Blalock won the $5,000 first prize in Sunday's Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament at Apopka, Fla., bringing her earnings for the year to $86,442—all earned in events in the United States.

Mrs. Carner won only $115 in Sunday's event, lifting her winnings to $89,872, including $87,894 on the U.S. tour.

In pro basketball name of game is defense — Henderson

Defence is the name of the game in pro basketball, says rookie guard Tom Henderson of Atlanta Hawks—a defensive ace who's not doing so badly on offense, either.

"I really like to play defence more than offence," says Henderson, a No. 1 draft choice out of Hawaii. "Anybody who is good enough to be in the NBA can score 30 or 40 points on a given night. But you really have to be tough to play defence more than offence."

Tom Van Arsdale scored 33 points and Henderson came off the bench to add 27—both season highs—to help Atlanta break a three-game losing streak and upset Washington Bullets 119-102 in National Basketball Association action Tuesday night.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Detroit beat New York 99-88, Buffalo defeated Philadelphia 103-99, Cleveland topped Seattle 102-94, Kansas City-Omaha edged Chicago 93-90, Los Angeles nipped Milwaukee 105-102, Golden State beat Houston 144-124 and Phoenix beat New Orleans 120-110.

The Hawks' backcourt trio of starters Van Arsdale and Dean Meminger and reserve Henderson accounted for 76 of the Hawks' 119 points. Atlanta outscored Washington 32-19 in the final period.

Buffalo's Bob McAdoo poured in 46 points—the most ever scored in a professional game in Philadelphia—as the Braves

Oakland's unsung record-holder

In the beginning, there was Jim Otto

By Murray Olderman

OAKLAND, Calif. — (NEA) — Every game the number mounts... 201... 202... 204. No man in the history of professional football has played more regular season games consecutively than Jim Otto, the bump-nosed center of the Oakland Raiders.

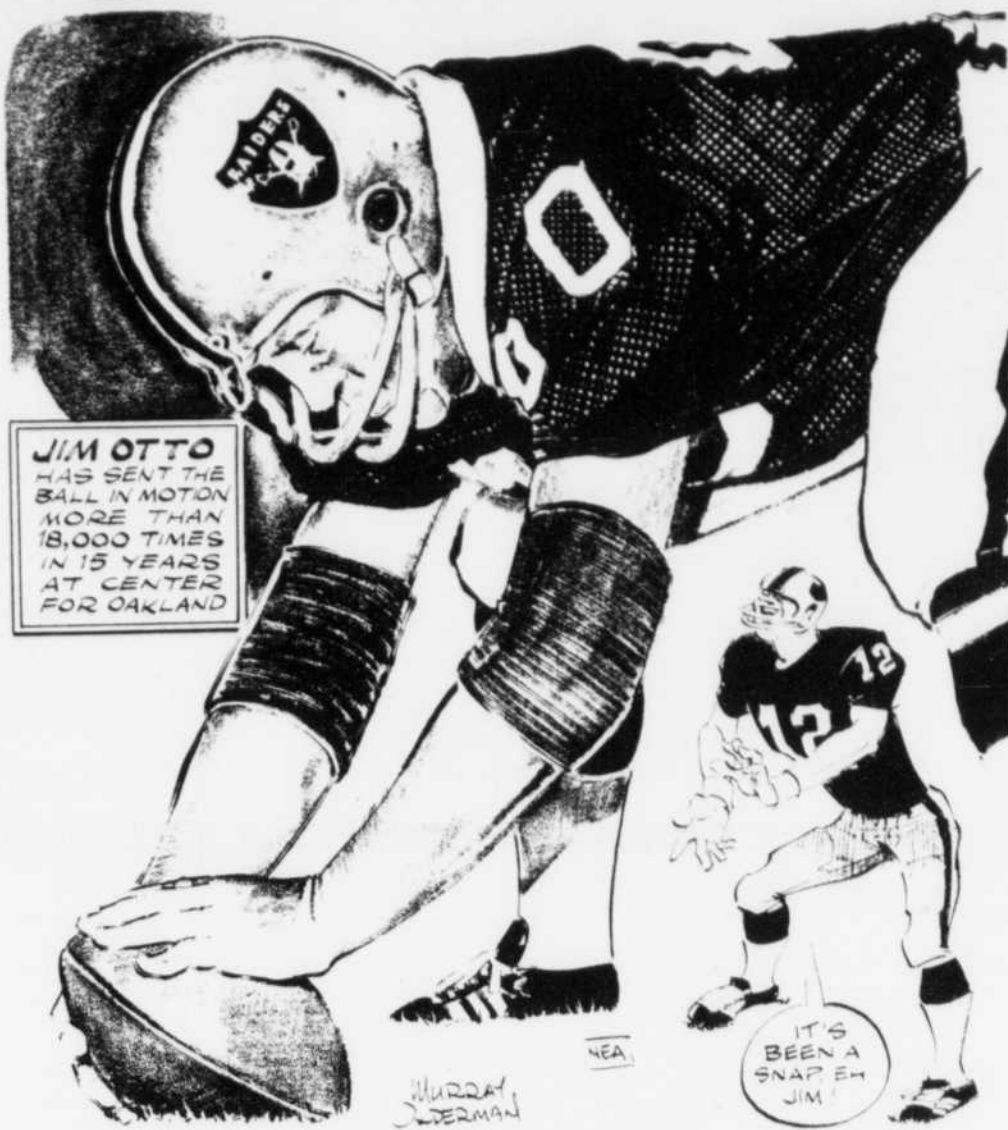

George Blanda, his teammate, shares the record conjunctively as it mounts each week, but where George, an ancient 47, simply wings his right foot in a pendulum at the ball three or four or five times a game, Otto is in on the muscle-taxing exertions and body-bumping violence that go with being in the pit, the front line, of pro football.

Jim has started every regular season and championship game the Oakland Raiders have ever played, going back to their year of beginning in 1960. He is 36 years old, and athletic twilight is beginning to shroud his efforts in a game that was designed for the uninhibited bone-bruising of young men.

Jim Otto still bends over the ball to put the Oakland Raiders offense into action when a game starts, but by the fourth quarter he has begun to ease over to the sideline occasionally so Dave Dalby, who is 23 years old and solidly bunched at 240 pounds, can deliver fresh impetus to the snap of the ball — and accumulate experience for the imminent, inevitable moment that Jim Otto quits playing.

It's really phenomenal that for 15 straight years in as physically arduous a sport as pro football, in the middle of the action, Otto never has failed to come up ready for a game. Or that the demands of his position haven't changed drastically enough to leave him behind.

The closest Otto ever came to being out of commission was in 1961, his second year of pro ball. It was Ernie Ladd's rookie year in pro ball. Ladd was a 317-pound defensive tackle for the San Diego Chargers who stood 6 feet 9 inches tall. Otto was still building up to his present 250 pounds. Otto, having successfully fought off Ladd for an entire game in San Diego, was selected the Raiders' player of the week. When the teams were rematched in Oakland a month later, Jim, with the bluster of youth, showed up at a Raider luncheon and said, "I knocked him on his butt last time, and I'll do it again this week."

A San Diego publicist heard him and conveyed the message back to the Chargers.

"They came snarling out of the dressing room before the game," recalls Jim, "yelling,

"Get Otto! Get Otto!" "They carried me out in the second quarter. I had a hip pointer. I had injured the diaphragm where it attaches to the ilium."

But he started again the next week, and ever after, too, despite a couple of concussions and diverse minor injuries.

"Now," says Jim, "when I talk about my opponents, I use a little diplomacy."

Talent-wise, he doesn't find they have changed, nor physically, because they couldn't come any bigger than Ladd. And the odd-man line, with a tackle playing on the nose of the center, which was so mystifying to NFL centers, was old hat to an AFL product such as Otto.

"Today the defensive tackles are very quick," says Jim, "so you've got to be on your toes. But from a center's viewpoint, I see very little different in the game."

Except maybe for the money.

His first contract for the Raiders in 1960 called for $7,000 for the entire season. He thought he was lucky — they gave a $1,000 advance for signing.

Cards' McBride NL Rookie-of-Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Bake McBride, the speedy centre fielder with St. Louis Cardinals, was named the National League's rookie of the year today by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

McBride ran away from the field with 16 of the 24 votes. Greg Gross of Houston Astros got seven votes and Bill Madlock of Chicago Cubs one.

McBride, who hit .309, knocked in 56 runs and stole 30 bases, became the first Cardinal to win the award in 19 years and only the third in the history of the organization. Wally Moon and Bill Virdon won it in 1954 and 1955 for St. Louis.

Two writers from each of the 12 National League cities voted for the award.

Reacting to the prize, McBride picked up and kissed his wife when he learned that he had won.

CREDITS BROCK

"I was just happy," he said, pointing to the help of teammate Lou Brock as a significant factor in his splendid season.

"I owe most of the honor to Brock. He's some kind of fellow."

McBride teamed with Brock to give the Cardinals the two most effective base stealers on any baseball team in major league history. With Brock's 118, the pair stole 148 bases to better the previous mark by Maury Wills and Willie Davis, who combined for 136 one year for Los Angeles Dodgers.

only two errors all season. He was consistent most of the year at the plate, too, and wound up with a .314 batting average.

Madlock, an infielder, hit .313 and had nine home runs and 54 RBI in just 128 games.

Frazier-Bonavena bout in trouble

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — The heavyweight fight between former world champion Joe Frazier and Argentina's Oscar Bonavena, scheduled for Dec. 14, appeared in jeopardy Monday after one of the promoters withdrew because of "financial affairs."

Another promoter said, however, the bout would be held.

Promoter Jeff Patterson, hired to arrange seating contracts, which had been done, said he walked out after he was told that world television rights for the bout were worth $125,000 in Australian money, whereas, he said "the TV was supposed to be worth $250,000."

"It will be a fiasco with only three weeks to go," he said. "This is the most annoying financial disaster in boxing history."

At the same time, Brisbane promoter Ray Edwards insisted the fight would go on. He said Patterson left the promotion team because his part of the contract had been fulfilled.

In Philadelphia, Frazier said he planned to arrive in Melbourne about Dec. 1 but his manager, Eddie Futch, said he had not received Frazier's $250,000 purse in Australian money and Frazier won't leave for Australia until the money is in the bank.

He has not set many goals for next year, other than winning a pennant.

"I want us to go all the way," he said. "I don't care if I hit 180 or 190. I just want us to win."

McBride's fancy batting average of .374 tied him for the team lead with Reggie Smith, but he was more than just a good hitter and base stealer for the Cardinals. He filled a hole in the outfield and along with Smith and Brock, provided the team with perhaps the fastest outfield in baseball.

Barring injuries Herve Filion can set new record

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Angers, Que., is driving in the Herve Filion, barring an injury, appears certain to break his single-season harness driving record of 605 victories set last year.

The United States Trotting Association said Monday that the Canadian had posted 562 triumphs, counting his six successes Sunday at Brandywine.

"Hockey Night In Canada" presents special program to honor Montreal Forum

Hockey Night in Canada will present a special salute to the Montreal Forum on all three games telecast on Saturday November 30th. Canada's oldest major arena will celebrate its 50th year of continuous operation on that evening.

The original Forum, a roller-skating arena, was demolished to make room for the present building erected in 1924, the forerunner of all major buildings of its kind in North America. It was completed at a cost of slightly over three million dollars. By comparison, a refurbishing of the Forum as we see it today, was completed in 1968 at a cost of over nine million.

Leading off the special guests of the evening will be Rocket Richard, honoured as the top hockey player of those fifty years. Forum film highlights of the half-century will include memorable scenes from the Toe Blake hockey era, when the Canadiens won five straight Stanley Cups, and the famous light-heavyweight title fight between Archie Moore and Yvon Durelle.

Many thrilling moments have occurred in the long and varied history of the Forum. The film package and special guests will recall many of those events.

Viewers in the Southern Ontario region will see the highlights of the game between the New York Rangers and Leafs played on November 27th, as well as the Forum salute. Bill Hewitt and Brian McFarlane will cover the play-by-play and will be joined by analyst Bob Goldham and host Dave Hodge for the game between the Leafs and the new Washington Capitals.

British Columbia hockey fans, in addition to the Salute to the Forum, will benefit from Babe Pratt's commentary on what it takes to be an NHL defenceman. With the help of isolated cameras Babe provides insight and observations on good plays, as well as bad, when the Canucks, sporting a vastly improved defensive corps, face the Islanders. Bill Good Jr. and Ted Reynolds assist play-by-play man Jim Robson.

With the end of November, the first segment of the Montreal and Toronto Molson Cup competitions come to an end. The winners and runnerup will be announced on the telecast of December 4th when Boston visits Montreal.

Five drivers at Blue Bonnets surpass $2,000,000 in earnings, Gilles Gendron setting hot pace

BLUE BONNETS — The top five money winners on the local harness racing circuit this year already have surpassed the $2,000,000 mark in purse earnings.

With just about one month still remaining before the end of the season, the quintet — Gilles Gendron, Jacques Hebert, Gilles Lachance, Andre Boucher and Jean-Paul Gauthier — have accounted for total purse earnings of $2,109,103.

Gendron, who is rapidly developing into Mr. Everything on the local racing circuit, is the individual leader with earnings of $594,851.

For the second straight year, the 29-year-old native of Quebec City is heading for the triple crown — most victories, best driving average and most money earned.

His 240 victories in Canada have already bettered his own Canadian record and with two triumphs in the United States, Gendron ranks second behind world champion Herve Filion in North America.

Jacques Hebert, the quiet-spoken native of Drummondville, is also experiencing his best season ever. His total earnings stand at $476,971 and he should top the half million mark.

Harlem Globetrotters have played to 75,000,000 fans during 48-year club history

The Harlem Globetrotters, who will be at the Sports Palace on Sunday Dec. 15th call themselves "The World's Greatest Family Entertainment." This claim cannot be taken lightly, when you consider each year the Globetrotters shatter their own attendance record.

The 1973-74 Trotter tour of the U.S. and Canada was the greatest in the 48-year history of the Magicians of Basketball. If you include the Silver Anniversary tour of Europe last spring, total worldwide attendance at Globetrotter games was slightly more than 2,600,000. This figure brings the all-time attendance at Globetrotter games to more than 75,000,000 people.

Highlights of the Globetrotters tour last year was the record 33,000 fans at three games in Oakland, California; 63,000 people attended a weekend stand at Madison Square Garden; over 40,000 fans attended Globetrotter games one weekend in the Los Angeles Forum and close to 34,000 people saw the Globetrotters play two games at the new Capital Centre in Landover, Maryland.

While U.S. attendance figures are most impressive, one cannot overlook the 126,000 fans at the Globetrotters games during a fourteen day stand in London, England. That engagement was, as always, sold out before the Trotters cleared customs at Heathrow Airport.

Yes, the Harlem Globetrotters are "The World's Greatest Family Entertainment." If you don't think so, ask the 2,600,000 people who saw the Globetrotters play last year.

Buffalo Sabres have surprising record

Buffalo Sabres keep on surprising National Hockey League observers. Wednesday night, they even surprised their coach, Floyd Smith, with their record of 16 victories and three ties in 23 games.

"If anyone had told me at the beginning of the year that we would have 16 wins at this point, I would have shrugged my shoulders in amazement. I know we have a lot of talent, but we have a lot of kids, too."

It took the Sabres 34 games to record their 16th triumph last season, but Wednesday night's 3-1 decision over Chicago Black Hawks put Buffalo 11 games ahead of schedule.

In other games, Los Angeles Kings tied New York Islanders 3-3, Vancouver Canucks defeated St. Louis Blues 6-1, New York Rangers whipped Toronto Maple Leafs 4-1, Atlanta Flames beat Kansas City Scouts 4-2, Montreal Canadiens edged Pittsburgh Penguins 3-2, Minnesota North Stars topped Washington Capitals 6-4, Philadelphia Flyers beat Detroit Red Wings 6-2, and Boston Bruins downed California Seals 3-1.

It was the first time in NHL history that 18 teams were in action on the same night; a scheduling oddity which will occur again Jan. 11.

LEADS THE LEAGUE

Buffalo leads Division 4 and needs only a third-place finish to gain the playoffs. The Sabres lead the NHL in scoring with 105 goals and in victories and points.

Gil Perreault's power-play goal was the winner for Buffalo, breaking a 1-1 tie. Rene Robert and Brian Spencer got the other Sabres goals while Chicago rookie Alain Daigne ruined Gary Bromley's shutout.

Two third-period goals by Mike Corrigan and one by Mike Murphy with 1:36 remaining gave the Kings the tie with the Islanders.

The Kings, who have lost only twice in 22 games this season, had fallen behind 3-0 after two periods on goals by Doug Romberg, Denis Potvin and Gary Howatt.

John Gould scored his 12th and 13th goals of the year to give the Canucks the win over St. Louis and their 14th triumph of the year. It took Vancouver 52 games to win 14 last season.

KEEPS IT REASONABLE

Only a spectacular 48-save performance by Toronto goalie Doug Favell kept the score respectable at New York. The Leafs, who have won only one of their last nine, lost defencemen Rod Seiling and Jim McKenny early in the game and the Rangers ran all over the place.

Seiling, with a knee injury, and McKenny with a bruised thigh, joined Borje Salming and Ian Turnbull on the injury list, leaving the team with only three regular defencemen—Brian Glennie, Bob Neely and Dave Dunn.

Eric Vail scored three goals on Kansas City for Atlanta, which raised to 15 games its unbeaten string on home ice. It was Vail's second three-goal game this season.

Jacques Lemaire scored the winner for Montreal midway through the third period at Pittsburgh, with Mario Tremblay and Guy Lafleur the other Canadiens marksmen.

Two goals on deflections by Bill Goldsworthy paced Minnesota and handed Washington its 10th loss in as many road games. The Capitals had held a 3-0 lead in the first period.

At Philadelphia, Reggie Leach scored three goals, all on assists by Bobby Clarke, to lead the Flyers past Detroit. The Flyers outshot Detroit 46-16.

Phil Esposito scored his 21st goal in Boston's 22nd game this season to carry the Bruins past the Seals at Oakland.

Czech Vacek Nedomansky gets first penalty of his WHA career

Vaclav Nedomansky of Toronto Toros got a taste of North American hockey on Tuesday night.

Every player on the ice became embroiled in a scuffle between the Czechoslovakian and Minnesota's John Arbour during the first period of a 6-2 World Hockey Association win by the Fighting Saints over the Toros.

Arbour slashed Nedomansky behind the Minnesota net and jumped on his back. The Toros centre reacted by dropping his gloves, but refused to throw a punch.

Nevertheless, referee Bob Kolar handed Nedomansky the first major penalty of his brief WHA career. Nedomansky, a veteran of international hockey, came to the Toros from Czechoslovakia's national team.

Toronto defenceman Brian Gibbons rushed to his teammate's defence and drew a misconduct.

TWO FOR WALTON

Mike Walton scored twice for the Saints, who picked up their first victory in three games against the Toros before 8,127 fans at Toronto.

The loss was a letdown for the Toros, who had strengthened their hold on first place in the WHA's Canadian division over the weekend with important wins against Quebec Nordiques and Indianapolis Racers.

In Tuesday's other NHL games, Vancouver Blazers beat Michigan Stags 5-1, New England Whalers edged Quebec 5-4, Winnipeg Jets blanked Indianapolis 4-0, Phoenix Roadrunners downed Houston Aeros 6-4 and San Diego Mariners beat Edmonton Oilers 5-1.

Assistant coach Andy Bathgate came out of retirement to pick up an assist for the Canucks against the Stags, who lost for the 14th time in 19 starts this year.

Bathgate, 42, scored 349 goals in 16 National Hockey League seasons with New York Rangers, Pittsburgh Penguins, Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs.
