

Townshippers brief: Protect minorities more

By CHARLES BURY

SHERBROOKE — Three directors of the Townshippers Association will appear today before a committee of the Quebec national assembly studying the federal government's proposals for constitutional reform.

Association president James Ross and directors Jacqueline Kouri and Royal Orr will present a brief to "La commission de la présidence du conseil et de la constitution", mandated by the provincial cabinet to look into Quebecers' opinions on the controversial Trudeau patriation package. The Record has obtained a copy of the untitled brief, which explains the little-known plight of the English-speaking minority in the Eastern Townships and suggests six specific modifications to the federal plan.

The brief points out that some 45,000 of the Eastern Townships' 500,000 population are English-speaking and many are descended from the region's original settlers. The association's 6,000 members make it "one of the few organizations in Quebec that represents the beliefs and aspirations of non-metropolitan English-speaking Quebecers."

Townshippers say the British North America Act and its amendments "do not appear to adequately meet the needs of contemporary Canadian society". They add that the new constitution must "recognize and guarantee fundamental civil rights of English-speaking and French-speaking minorities throughout Canada.

Individual rights, they say, must include not only the fundamental freedom of legal and democratic rights,

"but also the right to work, take up residence, invest savings, sell products and purchase supplies anywhere in Canada."

The association accuses the federal proposals of not going far enough to protect individual and minority rights.

It recommends that in any criminal or penal proceedings, the accused have a right to trial in English or French, or for native people, their usual language.

It suggests Ontario become officially bilingual along with New Brunswick, Quebec and Manitoba.

It urges the provision of provincial and municipal services in both English and French, and asks that English- and French-speaking Canadians and natives "have the right to receive health, social and judicial services in their own language wherever numbers so warrant."

The association points out that enrolment in Protestant schools has declined at twice the rate of the Roman Catholic system at the secondary level, and more than three times the rate in the elementary schools. It therefore suggests that all children be entitled to pre-university studies in either English or French or their native Canadian language.

Finally, Townshippers recommend that radio and television services be available in English and French in all parts of the country, and that similar service be available to natives. No mention is made, however, of the minority print media.

The national assembly committee is made up of MNAs from all parties, with the Parti Québécois having an absolute majority. Any member may sit in on the hearings and ask questions.

Challenge headed for SCOC

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada will be asked to rule on the legality of the federal government's constitutional package, the attorneys-general of Manitoba and Alberta indicated Tuesday.

Their comments came just after a ruling by the Manitoba Court of Appeal that Ottawa does not need provincial consent to patriate and amend the British North America Act.

In a 3-to-2 decision, the court rejected claims by the Manitoba government — supported by five other provinces and an Indian association — that Ottawa is overstepping its authority.

Manitoba Attorney-General Gerry Mercier said the decision came as no surprise and is just one step on the road to the supreme court.

Alberta Attorney-General Neil Crawford said the province definitely will appeal the decision to the supreme court.

Prime Minister Trudeau says a senior British cabinet minister assured him in December that the British government would disregard provincial opposition when it dealt with the Canadian constitutional resolution.

He made it clear in the Commons on Tuesday, as he was again hounded by Progressive Conservatives, that if the views of Britain's Conservative government have changed, they can "speak for themselves."

British Tories do not need their Canadian cousins to do it for them, he said.

His statements came when Tories pressed him for more details of his Dec. 19 meeting with Sir Francis Pym, then British defence minister and now Tory House leader at Westminster.

Opposition questions, based on a leaked report of the discussions in Ottawa, suggested that Pym voiced British fears about passing a constitutional resolution opposed by most provinces.

SAY NOT WARNED
 Tories said they don't believe the British were warned of the extent of Trudeau's package, including a charter of rights binding on the provinces.

Trudeau challenged his Tory critics to table the document, saying the complete record would reveal Pym's assurance, but they declined.

The opposition countered by demanding that Trudeau table a letter British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is said to have written last December reaffirming her commitment to deal speedily with the constitutional package.

External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan refused, saying it is up to Thatcher to release it, and he refused to seek British permission to make it public. The British have said they are unaware of the letter.

In Quebec City meanwhile, Leon Dion, a Laval University political scientist, said Trudeau's plans may lead to violence and national disintegration.

He told the national assembly's constitutional committee that unilateral patriation of the constitution is "anti-democratic and illegal" and described Trudeau as a rigid intellectual who feels he is the only Canadian capable of solving the country's constitutional problems.

Dion said he will cling to that view "even if the splitting apart of the country, which he is sincerely trying to save, must follow."

Cookshire's Mary Heatherington

'We're made to move'

By PATRICIA TRACY

COOKSHIRE — For the last 82 years of her life, The Record's Cookshire correspondent Mrs. Mary Heatherington has lived by her many philosophies of life.

"We weren't made to sit still," she says. "We were made to move." And move she does.

She juggles her time between playing organ for two different churches every Sunday, acting as secretary for various church groups and the local historical society and teaching piano and organ to children from the community.

And, as if her duties as a correspondent aren't enough to keep her busy, she paints and hooks rugs in her spare time. As The Record's Cookshire connection, for "at least 30 years", Mrs. Heatherington spends the bulk of her time on the telephone, getting social notes and attending various local meetings.

Pleasing everyone in a small town is not easy, she says. "Some groups want their meetings in; some don't. Some get mad if it's not put in the paper; some get mad if it is."

Mrs. Heatherington's interest in historical events and writing compositions in high school first interested her in a job as a correspondent, but she finds the bulk of her time is spent writing social notes and reporting community meetings. "There are so many people I know who would make interesting stories, but some people don't want a story or a picture of themselves in the paper."

Since coming to Cookshire in 1928, Mrs. Heatherington has noticed many changes in The Record. "I don't always agree with the editor's point of view," she smiles, "but I appreciate it." Historical events are her favorite articles and she enjoys reading the letters to the editor.

In the past 30 years one thing hasn't changed — the Cookshire residents she serves still blame her for all the mistakes in the paper. If a line is accidentally dropped in an article, she receives phone calls all day "and I imagine it's the same with all correspondents."

Changes over the years have not all been for the better. "Today," she says, "people become so broad they lose depth." And she notes a lack of self-discipline among school children "because they never had to do without." As a school mistress, Mrs. Heatherington prided herself on her rapport with the children. "I never had to punish a child. It would have broken my heart." She preferred to talk about the problems rather than hit the child.

Music has been the one constant force throughout her life. Although her teaching load has been reduced to three pupils each week, she still gives them her best. Conducting local church choirs keeps her close to the music. "I'd rather go without food than music."

At 82, Mrs. Heatherington continues to take everything from life she can as her travels each year have taken her all over Europe and Canada. "My philosophy of life is to learn something new every day."

Gallup poll: Majority oppose 65 retirement

MONTREAL (CP) — Opposition to forced retirement at age 65 has increased significantly in Canada within the last 15 years, a new Gallup poll indicates.

The poll, based on in-home interviews with 1,050 people last November and December, shows that 62 per cent of Canadians are against obligatory retirement, while 34 per cent feel it is a good idea. Four per cent of those polled were undecided.

A similar poll conducted in 1967 found that 49 per cent of Canadians supported forced retirement, while 47 per cent were opposed.

The new poll shows opposition to obligatory retirement is highest in Western Canada, where 74 per cent are against the measure and 23 per cent support it.

Fina price too high?

MONTREAL (CP) — The debate has begun: Is the $1.46-billion paid by Petro-Canada for Petrofina Canada Inc. "a good deal on behalf of all Canadians," or an overpriced takeover that will hit consumers where it hurts most — at the gasoline pumps?

The deal for the oil company was announced early Tuesday, and critics and supporters immediately began to line up to praise or denounce the Crown corporation's latest acquisition.

Federal Energy Minister Marc Lalonde said here the Petro-Canada offer of $120 a share — more than $30 above the current market value of the stock — to Petrofina SA, the Canadian oil subsidiary's Belgium-based parent company, is not out of line.

In Ottawa, Finance Minister Allan MacEachen confirmed that consumers will help pay the takeover bill with a special tax on oil and gas consumption as provided for in last October's budget.

But MacEachen said it is still too early to say how much the tax will be.

Quebec Energy Minister Yves Berube said he approves of Petro-Canada's acquisition, but not the price. A recent analysis by a securities brokerage set a fair price for Petrofina stock at $81 a share, he said.

But in Montreal, the founder of Petrofina Canada shook his head at what he called the "exaggerated" price Petro-Canada paid.

Alfredo Campo, an Italian-born Canadian who started Petrofina Canada from scratch at the age of 48 in 1953, says the $120-a-share offer by the federal Crown corporation makes him delighted for his many former employees who own shares and "sacrificed themselves to help me build the company up."

But Campo, retired and just turned 76, said Tuesday he doesn't understand what he calls the "exaggerated" price Petro-Canada is paying. "It's so far beyond what any company would pay for it, or what the market was indicating, that I wonder how it makes sense."

Ironically, Petro-Canada is "Canadianizing" a company that Campo from the first demanded be run with a strong dose of independence from its Belgian parent.

The fate of Petrofina's Montreal head office and the changeover of the firm's 1,100 retail outlets throughout Eastern Canada are unknown, according to a Petrofina spokesman in Montreal yesterday.

"The first news we got was the message on the Telex from head office in Brussels," said public relations spokesman Roger Lhoumeau. "We have no idea what's to happen to the Montreal office."

Petrofina has about 450 gas stations around the province, including franchises, company-owned stations and self-service outlets attached to convenience stores, but Lhoumeau was unable to give a breakdown either by region or relation with head office.

U.S. for neutron bomb, troop deployment?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defence Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Tuesday he would be inclined to recommend deployment of the neutron weapon in Europe and would be sympathetic to requests for stationing U.S. troops in Israel, Egypt or any other friendly country.

Speaking at his first Pentagon news conference since taking office, Weinberger said he "certainly would consider" an Israeli request that U.S.

troops be stationed in that country. But he said he was speaking hypothetically because he doesn't expect any such request.

On the neutron weapon in Europe, he said: "I think that the opportunity that this weapon gives to strengthen tactical nuclear forces is one that we very probably would want to make use of."

"Obviously, with the locations involved and other relationships involved, we certainly would want to consult with all of our allies and friends and try to persuade them that we have a greater degree of constancy this time," he added.

Weinberger said former president Carter's decision to defer deployment of the neutron weapon in Europe in 1978 was wrong and caused consternation in the governments of West Germany and other European allies.

CEASED PRODUCTION

In 1978, Carter ordered production of the enhanced radiation warheads put off indefinitely and then authorized the energy department to manufacture some critical elements in case a decision was made later to deploy the weapons.

Any decision to order production of the neutron warhead, which is designed mostly to offset a Soviet advantage in tank strength, would have to be made by President Reagan.

Proponents of the neutron weapons say they would limit the areas in which life and property would be destroyed in nuclear explosions, while sickening and killing attackers with intense radiation.

"The basic policy is that we don't go where we're not wanted," Weinberger said.

But he added: "We would always examine very carefully and sympathetically requests for the stationing of American troops in countries where they were desired."

Southam reporters rap Thomson

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A royal commission inquiry erupted into a spirited exchange Tuesday between supporters and detractors of Thomson Newspapers Ltd. Thomson lawyer Lorne Morphy responded with adroit cross-examination when two young reporters from a rival newspaper organization accused his group of parsimony and mismanagement.

Kevin Cox and David Judd, representing the fledgling Ontario Reporters' Association and themselves employees of Southam Inc. newspapers, said the Thomson group's record should preclude it from acquiring any more newspapers.

The wide-ranging brief, which Morphy had asked the commissioner to rule inadmissible, accused Thomson head-office personnel of interfering with the policy of its individual newspapers, cutting costs in unorthodox ways and imposing unconventional hiring practices.

One of the mandates of the federal commission, set up last year following Thomson's and Southam's acquisition and shutdown of a number of dailies, is to look into the concentration of newspaper ownership. Commissioner Borden Spears acted as chairman Tuesday in the absence of Tom Kent.

Morphy, who insisted on documented evidence of each of the charges made by Cox and Judd, objected to what he described as general conclusions they had presumed from flimsy reports of particular situations.

In turn, he accused them of doing irresponsible and slipshod research and wondered aloud what kind of balanced efforts they put into their newspaper stories.

Cox, of Hamilton Spectator, and Judd, of Brantford Expositor's bureau in Simcoe, Ont., referred a number of times to operations at Simcoe Reformer, a Thomson newspaper.

Their charges, including one that Thomson "is homogenizing journalism across the province at a very low level," were also refuted later by Reformer publisher J. C. Coward and publisher L. J. Beavis of St. Thomas Times-Journal, another Thomson paper.

News in brief

SCOC: No license, no crime

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada Tuesday struck down as unconstitutional a federal law that makes it a crime to drive with a suspended or cancelled licence.

Mr. Justice Willard Estey noted that the Criminal Code section is used not only to support licence suspensions for criminal behavior such as impaired driving but for a multitude of provincial offences that aren't criminal.

Assembly TV bugging revealed

QUEBEC (CP) — Employees of the Quebec national assembly resorted to electronic eavesdropping to gather evidence against two colleagues accused of trying to discredit their bosses in the assembly's broadcasting department.

Assembly Speaker Claude Vaillancourt Tuesday confirmed reports of bugging and said a number of illegally-made tape recordings of the two men have been destroyed.

Race to mark Quebec anniversary

QUEBEC (CP) — A transatlantic yacht race in 1984 will mark the 450th anniversary of Quebec City, which was an Indian village called Stadacona when explorer Jacques Cartier visited it in 1534.

The race from here to St. Malo, France — the Brittany town from which Cartier set out on his voyages of discovery — will be the first competitive easterly crossing of the Atlantic, organizers said Tuesday.

Rose parole appeal rejected

MONTREAL (CP) — Federal Court has refused a request by lawyer Robert Lemieux to overturn the federal parole board's refusal of parole for Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorist Paul Rose.

Rose is serving concurrent life sentences for the kidnapping and murder of Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte in 1970. He has been eligible for day parole for three years, but all his applications have been turned down.

Danis calls for Clark support

MONTREAL (CP) — Marcel Danis, president of the Quebec wing of the Progressive Conservative party, has called on Quebec delegates to support Joe Clark at the party's national convention in Ottawa later this month.

In a letter sent to several hundred delegates Tuesday, Danis warns that a leadership review in the midst of the current constitutional debate would only harm the Conservative party.

Trade surplus hits record high

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada had a record trade surplus of almost $8 billion in 1980, double the previous record set in 1979, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

"It's a pretty phenomenal performance," said Doug Peters, vice-president and chief economist of the Toronto Dominion Bank.

CBC mediator to try again

MONTREAL (CP) — Guy de Merlis, head of the federal labor department's mediation and conciliation service, is to make another attempt to mediate a strike by CBC journalists in Quebec, now in its fourth month.

De Merlis will meet this week with management of Radio-Canada, the CBC's French-language section, it was announced today. He will also meet negotiators for the union which represents the 180 television and radio journalists.

Budget to help home buyers

QUEBEC (CP) — The next Quebec budget is expected to offer some assistance to those seeking to buy a home for the first time. A spokesman for the Quebec planning department said Tuesday the budget, expected early in March, will deliver on a promise made in the inaugural address to provide a program of home ownership assistance. He did not reveal details.

Montreal's Belmont Park sold

MONTREAL (CP) — Belmont Park, whose rides have thrilled Montreal children for more than 50 years, has been sold to a group of local businessmen for $2.4 million, it was announced Tuesday. The new owners managed the outdoor amusement park last year and invested $1 million in modernizing it, and say they plan to spend more this year.

Quebec crowncorp committee dumped

QUEBEC (CP) — There will be no permanent national assembly committee to watch over the management of Quebec Crown corporations, members of all three parties on a sub-committee decided Tuesday. The sub-committee has been meeting sporadically since 1979 to discuss the forming of a permanent committee but a spokesman said both the Liberals and Parti Quebecois members agreed that it was not the time to create a committee just before an election is due.

Asbestos mine production delayed

THETFORD MINES, Que. (CP) — The provincially-owned asbestos company mine here will not start production before the end of 1982, Daniel Perlstein, president of the Societe Nationale de l'Amiante, said Tuesday. Construction is completed and equipment is now being installed to extract magnesium products from asbestos tailings, but Perlstein said start-up, scheduled for next month, is delayed. But he said the company has already sold its first magnesium products to be produced in 1983.

Teachers: Delay grant reduction

OTTAWA (CP) — Education spokesmen have urged the government to delay the rumored $1.5-billion reduction in Ottawa's annual payment to the provinces for post-secondary institutions.

The Canadian Association of University Teachers and the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada sent letters in early January to Prime Minister Trudeau and individual cabinet ministers calling for a public inquiry before any action is taken.

SNA invests $500,000 in Theford

THETFORD MINES, Que. (CP) — The provincially-owned asbestos company, Societe Nationale de l'Amiante, announced Tuesday an investment of $500,000 here for an experimental plant to produce a new material using asbestos waste. The new material, for which the company sought patents in 40 countries, could be used in roof coverings, heat-resistant plastics and friction products. The company plans to produce 2,000 tonnes of the material by mid-1981.

85 charged in election infractions

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 100 people faced the prospect of losing the right to vote in federal elections and the right to run for seats in the Commons when they were charged with corrupt and illegal practices in the last two federal elections.

Joe Gorman, commissioner of Canada Elections, said in an interview that 85 people were charged under the Canada Elections Act after the Feb. 18, 1980, election and 52 after the May 22, 1979 election.

N.B. demonstrators put on probation

RICHIBUCTO, N.B. (CP) — Three-month jail sentences and periods of probation were imposed Tuesday on four demonstrators involved in a tumultuous protest last spring at Kouchibouguac National Park.

After changing their pleas to guilty, Glen Steward, 40, George Hebert, 28, Meldrice Comeau, 40, and Francis Robichaud, 45, were given the three-month sentences and placed on probation for two years.

Child 'too pretty to kill'

METAIRIE, La. (AP) — A 17-month-old girl snatched from her home by a gunman who stuffed her into a gift-wrapped box was found unhurt after a man telephoned her anxious parents and said she was too pretty to kill, authorities say.

"He called and told us... she was such a beautiful baby, otherwise he would have wasted her," the toddler's father, Ron Hocum, said late Tuesday.

He and his wife found their daughter, Lori, sobbing and wandering alone at the Lake Forest Shopping Centre several hours after Hocum made a televised appeal for her safe return.

Mother blasts murder witnesses

MONTREAL (CP) — Late last November Morris Berg, a 21-year-old student, was stabbed to death at a downtown store.

Jay Berg, his mother, says four teen-aged girls who could identify the killer have been instructed by their parents not to co-operate with the police.

Under Quebec's Juvenile Protection Act, minors can only be questioned by police if their parents or guardians allow it.

"Morris staggered along Mansfield

Street, a knife protruding from his abdomen and blood all over his shirt, trying to get help from passing motorists," Mrs. Berg said.

"He was on the street for 30 minutes and not one motorist would stop to help him. He had to pull the knife out of his stomach himself."

A taxi driver finally rushed the nearly unconscious man to hospital and then wanted to know who was going to pay the fare.

The next day, five teen-aged girls

Deaths

Almonte, Ont. — Joseph William Willard, 63, an economist who was Canada's deputy minister of welfare between 1960 and 1973 and vice-chairman of the Canada Labor Relations Board between 1973 and 1976, after a long illness.

Witness calls rival prostitute

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Jean Harris testified Tuesday that in her last letter to Scarsdale Diet doctor Herman Tarnower she called Lynn Tryforos, her rival for the physician's affection, a "dishonest adulteress," a "slut" and "a psychotic whore."

"A whore is a whore is a whore," Harris repeated on her sixth day on the witness stand, testifying in her own defence against charges she murdered Tarnower in a jealous rage.

Radar little use to dragger captain

LUNENBURG, N.S. (CP) — The captain of a scallop dragger which sank last July, drowning four members of his 14-man crew, said Tuesday he may have been able to avoid the collision had he known how to use his radar.

Captain Robert Mayo was the first of 13 witnesses expected to be called in the public inquiry into the collision of his dragger, the Margaret Jane, and the trawler Cape Beaver, a large new trawler owned by National Sea Products Ltd.

Palestinians, Israelis clash

BEIRUT (AP) — Palestinian guerrilla gunners opened fire Tuesday night on Israeli gunboats and helicopters just south of Beirut and forced them to retreat, the Palestinians reported.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv had no comment on the latest report of cross-border fighting, which would be the fourth cross-border Israeli raid since last Thursday.

Carlos visit sparks violence

BILBAO, Spain (Reuter) — Street battles raged in Bilbao on Tuesday night as Basque nationalists clashed with police over the visit of King Juan Carlos.

The king and Queen Sofia received a mixed reception Tuesday on their first visit to the Basque country. No crowds greeted them in Vitoria, but later in Bilbao people lined the streets.

RC bishop's oppose Trudeau formula

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec's Roman Catholic bishops have come out against unilateral patriation of the constitution.

In a statement, the Quebec Assembly of Bishops says it fails to see how social peace can be built on a constitution that has not been accepted by the constituent parties.

Reagan criticism baffles Powell

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is trying to "have things both ways" when he criticizes former president Jimmy Carter for negotiating with Iran for release of the American hostages, says Carter's White House press secretary, Jody Powell.

Powell said Tuesday that Reagan's criticism was surprising because Reagan had endorsed the negotiations on Sept. 13.

QPF seizes potential weapons

AMQUI, Que. (CP) — Quebec provincial police seized hammers and axes Tuesday from residents of this Gaspé peninsula town on the eve of another planned demonstration to show their displeasure with government failure to remedy chronic unemployment in the region.

There were no arrests, and police said the seizures were made from the automobiles of people on their way to a pre-demonstration meeting.

Norway elects first-ever lady PM

OSLO (Reuter) — Gro Harlem Brundtland, formally appointed today as Norway's first woman prime minister, faces a tough task restoring faltering confidence in the governing Labor party.

The party has been losing ground steadily to the Conservatives in recent opinion polls and has much ground to make up before September's general election.

Prison drug searches recommended

MONTREAL (CP) — Inmates returning from leave, as well as staff and visitors in Quebec's four medium-security penitentiaries, should be searched more thoroughly for drugs, says a report on prison drug abuse.

The report, which is to be released today, was ordered following the death last December of Randy Cameron, a 21-year-old Ottawa native, in a cell at medium-security Leclerc Institute in suburban Laval.

Peru-Ecuador ceasefire confirmed

LIMA (AP) — Military observers from four countries verified a ceasefire Tuesday along the disputed border between Peru and Ecuador, the Peruvian foreign ministry reported.

There was no immediate confirmation from the observers, who included Americans, in the remote jungle region that was the scene of five days of fighting for three military outposts. Both sides reported that the fighting ended Sunday.

Fairmont to expand

By CHARLES BURY

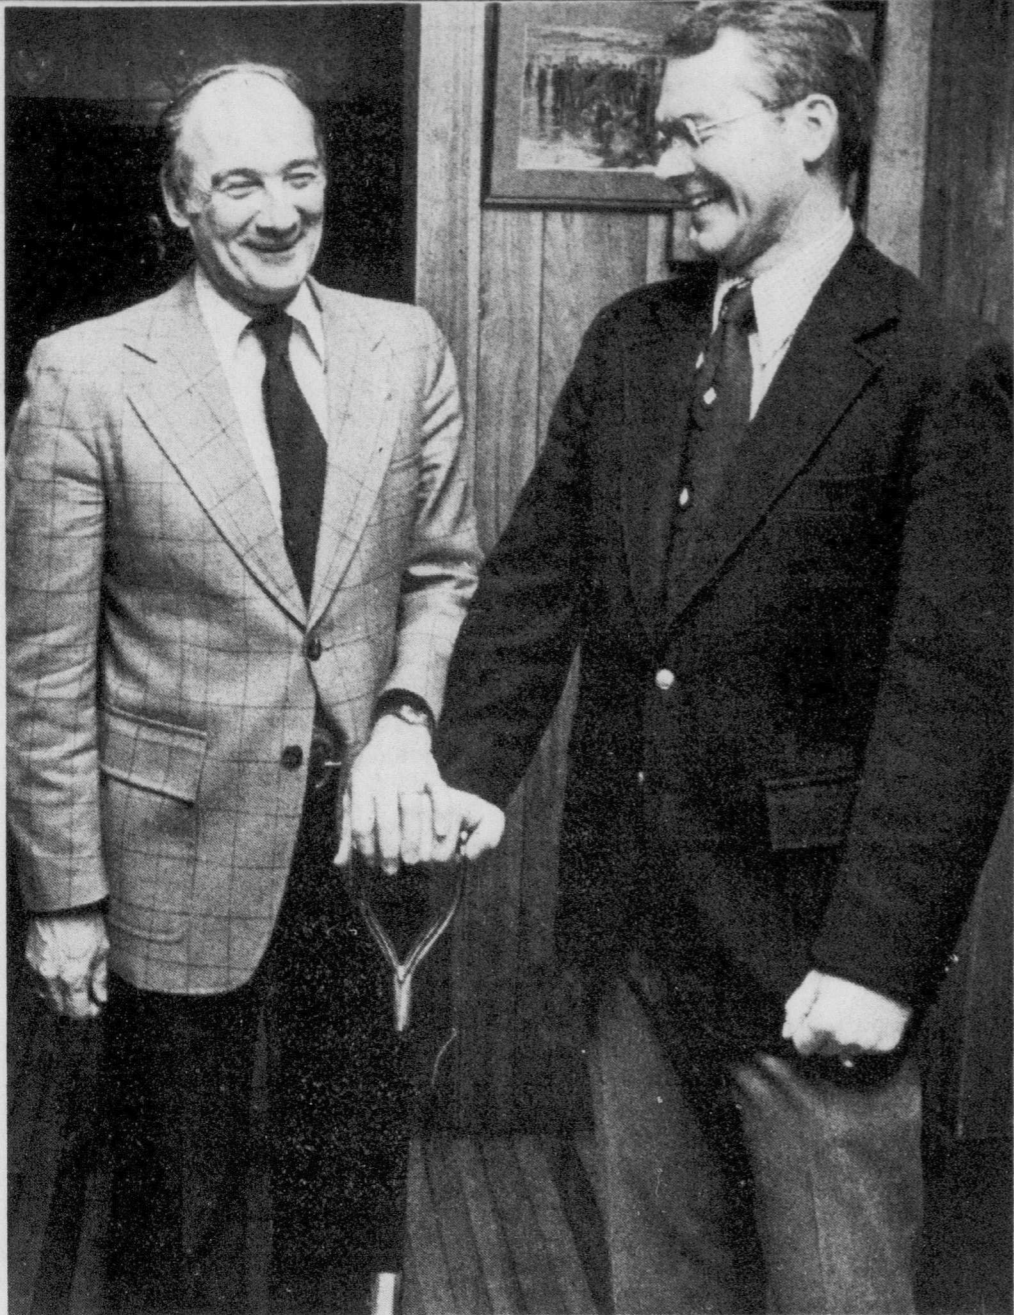

BEEBE — Fairmont Granite, one of this border community's oldest and largest industries, made public a major expansion in a brief ceremony here yesterday.

The company is doubling its production capacity for huge stone "press rolls" used in pulp and paper mills world-wide. A division of the U.S. firm Rock of Ages, Fairmont is North America's only manufacturer of the rolls. It is also a major supplier of monuments, through its Rock of Ages franchises and other retailers.

The giant rolls are machined from solid granite shipped to Beebe from a company quarry at Barre, Vermont. Maximum size is presently about 50 tons per roll, but after expansion the company will be able to turn out rolls up to 130 tons, used in the world's largest mills.

Beebe mayor Lucien Gagnon said, "This expansion is a good thing for Beebe; a good thing for the people." He added that the area had "suffered enough closures. This will create some new jobs."

Fairmont managing director Charles O. Peterson said the Beebe expansion is "the largest Rock of Ages has ever undertaken anywhere." He also said the market for granite products shows potential for steady growth in Canada. "In the past, the granite industry hasn't been given proper service." In order to maintain the market, he said, "you've got to be able to deliver the goods, and this expansion will help us do that."

Because the ground was too hard to break, Beebe mayor Lucien Gagnon, left, and Charles O. Peterson of Fairmont Granite held the silver spade presentation inside the local curling club.

tage, he pointed out, because it has its own quarries, mills and retail system.

Asked whether Rock of Ages was considering the purchase of Delta Granite, another Beebe manufacturer which recently went bankrupt, Peterson said, "It's always a thought, but it's a bit premature at the moment. But there is good potential. A lot of big companies are keen on granite these days."

Jack outsmarts old Ma Bell

Something there is about old Ma Bell that makes me see red sometimes. Something that makes me regard her as a crotchety, self-centered old dictator who insists upon getting her way no matter how her customers may fume and fret about it.

But then what can you expect from her when she has no competitors? What possible way is there for the talkative little people like you and I to outsmart her?

Hear now the story of my good friend and neighbour Jack Johnstone. Jack happens to be one of Quebec's best known educationalists and for many years he served as head of the Protestant teachers union in our province.

Jack lives in a fine old house out here in the country some 40 miles south of Montreal and seven or eight miles away from the nearest town. And that seven or eight miles became pretty important to Jack when he approached Bell about the possibility of getting a private line. While he is no longer president, his union activities made a private line practically imperative, but he was told that the base rate charged him would be calculated in part upon the mileage between himself and town.

"And how much a month would my base rate be then?" Jack wanted to know.

The man from Ma Bell told him it would be $26.

C of C plan info session

SHERBROOKE (AR) — The Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce is concerned over the direction of business in the Sherbrooke region and they will be holding an information meeting in the Cavalier room of the Wellington Hotel tonight at 7 p.m.

The meeting is open to all people who wish to express their points of view on what direction Sherbrooke business should take in the future and what mistakes or gains it has made in the past.

Chamber president, Pierre Robert emphasizes it is imperative that the Sherbrooke business community let their thoughts be known and he encourages everyone to "come and be counted".

The conference's main goal is to establish communication within the business community in order that it might take coordinated action in order to create and preserve jobs in the region. Members of the chamber are also looking for new ideas in how business can be better served in promoting regional development.

No elected officials have been specifically invited and there have been provisions made so that those who wish can express themselves in English.

H. Gordon Green

The base rate for an ordinary party line down our way is only $4.50 a month, and that fact set a few wheels turning in Jack's nimble brain.

"How many parties are there on a party line now?" Jack asked.

You city people may not know this but the days of the old party line which could have as many as 19 subscribers on it are now over. There are regularly four to a party line now.

I am not too sure what subject Jack taught before he lost himself in union activities but one thing sure he is very quick at arithmetic.

Four times $4.50 was only $18. Which was $8 a month less than the price of a single private line.

"And is there any reason why I couldn't have four phones instead of one?" Jack asked. "Any reason why I can't be assigned an entire party line?"

For a moment the Bell people seemed a bit confused, but when they could find nothing in their regulations to forbid such a thing they solemnly set about setting up four phones in Jack's house.

It suddenly occurred to Jack that with each of these phones he was entitled to have four jacks installed, so the operation became quite a spectacle with technicians crowding the place to the sills and four of Ma Bell's trucks pulled up outside.

But the job is done now and everything has worked out fine. I dropped in to see him over the holidays and there were the four phones, each with its own number and ring lined up like soldiers on an antique buffet. And Jack tells me he is now mulling over the possibilities of giving his numbers out so that his business calls would come in on one phone; the ringing of another would mean that his school was on the line; a third would be for personal calls.

And the fourth? Jack hasn't figured that out as yet, but on the whole he is more than satisfied with the deal. Satisfied not only with the unique service he is getting, but with the fact that at long last he has been able to outsmart the omnipotent Bell Telephone Company.

Laurin buying students? Education beat

BY ANTHONY ROSS

On the eve of a provincial election, Quebec Minister of Education Camille Laurin has decided to give Quebec university students more money — while drastically reducing the budgets to primary and secondary schools.

Laurin is acting on proposals that were tabled in 1978 by his predecessor, Jacques-Yvan Morin. The ministry will be granting loans at a frozen interest rate to all Quebec students who cannot find jobs after leaving school. The loans will be given to students after they have proved they cannot find a job and the money will be paid back at a predetermined interest rate lasting for the duration of the payback period.

In his wisdom Laurin has also chosen to provide $1290 to every Quebec student studying abroad.

In his final and perhaps most interesting plan to further deplete the provincial coffers, Laurin is donating $17,000 to Quebec university students to organize a study session this weekend. Laurin believes students are not politically active enough and he wants to sponsor the conference so they can revitalize their student organizations.

Bishop's University Campus editor Bob Palmer is quick to point out that he doesn't know of one university in Quebec where there isn't a student organization. He adds it seems very strange Laurin has chosen this particular time to revitalize Quebec students.

Laurin has also granted CEGEP students observer status at this weekend's conference, the first time this has ever been done. It is surprising he didn't add a further regulation that only CEGEP students of voting age would be allowed to attend.

Champlain College and Bishop's University have finally resolved their differences concerning a rental agreement for space and services. The two contracts were approved by the respective boards in January.

There are two separate contracts, one for the rental of space and the other for the use of services provided to the CEGEP by the university. Both contracts are for five years, beginning July 1, 1981 and running until June 30, 1986. The agreement for space covers classrooms, laboratories, offices and other administration facilities. Champlain has agreed to pay Bishop's about $1.2 million per year with increases indexed to the cost of living.

The second contract for services provided by Bishop's to Champlain includes the sports complex, library and health services, among others. The cost to Champlain in the first year is about $250,000 and is based on a cost per student. This agreement is also indexed to the cost of living over the five-year period.

Champlain does not own any of the facilities or buildings on their Lennoxville campus and the only service they provide to the university is off-campus housing, for which Bishop's pays $4,000 per year.

Also on the university front, the Secretary of State has decided to make some amendments to the Canada Student Loans Act. The major changes are in the duration of study courses required to be eligible for a loan has been lowered from 26 to 12 weeks. This will allow about 100,000 vocational students to become eligible for student loans.

The other major amendment to the act is the waiving of the 12-month waiting period to qualify as a permanent resident which will allow landed immigrants to become eligible earlier.

Jeff Parr of the National Students Union, said these changes were a victory for students but there were a couple of things left out which they had been pushing for.

"We can support this package but I would like to have seen some provisions for part-time students which weren't there. Also a couple of the amendments look fine on paper but they will have to be watched closely because there is room for abuse by the government," said Parr.

The amendment he is most worried about is the one concerning the repayment of loans. The government has said the schedule will be altered depending on the amount of money borrowed. Parr thinks this may allow the government to ask students to pay small amounts back too quickly. "It is just something we will have to monitor closely," concluded Parr. Two to three per cent of all students default on their loans.

In yet another directive from the Ministry of Education, calculators will be allowed in Grade Eleven functions exams this June. Alexander Galt is complying with the directive but at Massey Vanier, director of examinations Herb Bush has sent a letter to the ministry asking for further clarification of the order.

Bush says Massey-Vanier wants to know exactly what type of calculators can be used because some can be more of an advantage than others. For a functions exam in particular it would be possible to go in with a programmed calculator and do almost all the questions without even putting pen to paper — except to blacken the correct box.

GRANBY WORKERS IN FOR LONG STRIKE

GRANBY — The city's white-collar workers are asking for a 13-per-cent wage hike and say they're ready for a long strike, which began the beginning of the week.

City hall is also preparing for a long strike, says Mayor Paul O. Trepanier. All the locks on city buildings and vehicles have been changed and more added to head off what local police say are possibilities of vandalism, since supervisory employees are attempting to maintain essential services.

Telephone queries to city hall are being met with a recorded announcement that due to the current work stoppage, city hall functions have slowed down. Residents wishing to pay tax bills or tickets are being told to come in person or better yet, to pay by mail. Those with problems or requests are also being urged to drop down or communicate directly with supervisory personnel, who are still on the job.

The city's 45 white-collar workers earned between $215 and $268 a week under their old contract, which expired Dec. 31. Wages and the status of seven part-time employees are the main areas of dissension in the current contract negotiations.

The white-collar workers' strike comes on the heels of a threatened blue-collar strike which threatened to disrupt the city's plans to host an international junior hockey tournament. The blue-collar strike was suspended after talks got underway and last Friday, the city's 70 blue-collar workers voted to accept a new contract. The pact, approved by the city Monday, gives the blue-collar a 5.5 per cent increase retroactive to Jan. 1 and another five per cent beginning next July. The average wage goes from $7.54 an hour to $7.95 immediately and $8.39 in July.

Petropig?

No doubt there are those who will drive into a gas station because as Canadians they'll be owning a part of the chain, but it's early yet to say whether Energy Minister Marc Lalonde bought us a pig in a poke with the $1.5 billion Petrofina purchase.

Of the 1,100 Petrofina stations across Eastern Canada, 450 are in Quebec. Some are doubtless in good locations and enjoy plenty of business, while others we know are less fortunate, showing all the symptoms of poor location, indifferent pricing and lack of service — in short, like gas stations anywhere.

It may be a good thing in the long run, Petro-Can owning its own string of outlets bearing the big red maple leaf. The addition of this latest acquisition makes the Crown corporation the second largest oil company in Canada in terms of assets. Wowie.

But in what stead will it stand the consumer? If more of us patronize the chains, will it lower our taxes, however infinitesimally? It should; a capital expenditure of this size should guarantee Canadians something.

Another thing. Will they be moving Petrofina's head office out of Montreal? Petro-Can's headquarters are in Calgary; we see a big clash coming, especially since the beast's headquarters — Petrofina's large and very fragrant refinery — is in Montreal's East End.

What about Americans filling their tanks in Canada at gas stations paid for and subsidized by Canadians? We're not saying we should close the border to our American friends, but what have they given us lately?

Mr. Lalonde has many questions to answer. We suggest that the fullest ramifications of this deal be made known before anyone starts cheering.

Even if it's for that big red maple leaf.

THAT letter

Joe Clark missed another boat and this time we're surprised; it's generally one that he catches. We're talking about what Prime Minister Trudeau told journalists in Britain last July after meeting with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher compared to what he's now telling everyone.

Mr. Clark neglected to call Mr. Trudeau a liar. It appears to have been a serious oversight. As it is, the whole fight has once again become one between Mr. Trudeau and The Globe and Mail. Since each commands its own territory with little overlap, it's a standoff.

Did Mr. Trudeau tell Mrs. Thatcher there was the definite chance the provinces wouldn't back patriation? He says he did, adding that of course he told a Little White Lie to the journalists who besieged the door of Number 10 Downing to ask him whether the British PM would stand for unilateral patriation. Furthermore, says our PM, Mrs. Thatcher promised him — in writing — that she would exercise the necessary clout to see that the patriation package was passed through Westminster.

The general impression now emerging is that Mr. Trudeau was purposefully vague in describing the package, while Mrs. Thatcher didn't see fit to ask. The only thing which can clear up this matter is the production of that letter from Mrs. Thatcher.

Now, Mr. Trudeau may have been hoping that Mr. Clark would call him a barefaced liar so he could produce the letter and humiliate the Leader of the Opposition by demanding that he make a full apology for unparliamentary language (yes, it is unparliamentary to call a fellow MP a liar, even if he is one). In that case, Mr. Clark was wise in not rising to the bait.

But we smell a Trudeau bluff here. He may have A letter, but is it THE letter? He's playing for the highest of stakes, so there's no reason he hasn't resorted to a little trickery.

Now, let's see that letter. JAMES DUFF

Whipped-cream wrestling? In Toronto?

Caution — on Thursdays you might be well-advised not to consider the whipped cream.

Not that there isn't whipped cream on the menu, mind you. There is. Also on the walls, floor and patrons.

For Thursday is the night they wrestle in the stuff down at the Lady's Pink, where every night is audience-participation night. "We're getting excellent crowds," says Sam Garisto, proprietor, who purveys mud wrestling and disco dancing at the Toronto bar.

Mud wrestling is making inroads in many parts of Canada, so it's hardly surprising to learn that the city of churches has been dabbling.

Lady's Pink (and Sam hasn't the faintest idea where the name came from) realized early that there had to be something for those who shrink from the questionable allure of an over-all mudpack.

Bruce Levett

They coupled it with disco dancing. STRIPPERS SQUIRM

The Tropicana features male and female strippers with their grappling and squirming. The outlying Richmond Inn countered with a wet T-shirt contest.

In Toronto the Good? Yup. Well, mud wrestling only takes up Mondays and Wednesdays, so...

"We wrestle in whipped cream on Thursdays," Sam says, employing the royal "we."

Isn't that expensive? Certainly more so than combining water with potting soil?

"Not really," Sam says. "We whip up our own."

The Lady's Pink has a newspaper advertisement running which states in small print:

"Wanted — Girls for mud wrestling."

"We're getting lots of calls," he says.

From?

"Mostly the young. But we do get enquiries from old people in their 40s."

WRESTLERS MATCHED

Wrestlers are matched by size and sex — Sam wants a good, clean, even fight.

He pays $25 for girls and $15 for men because, not only do men appear more eager to get in there and grope, but he needs twice the number of females.

"It's two girls against one man," Sam explains. "The object is to remove the opponents' clothing and pin him or her."

(Up to a point, that is. The G-string is inviolate and Sam has a referee in there to enforce the proprieties.)

Business has been booming ever since a recent television news piece on the subject.

One loser, a mammoth lady who revelled in the nickname Boom-Boom, smiled through the mud at the camera and complained "it's cold."

She looked like Mount St. Helens between eruptions.

But show-business never stands still. With Mondays and Wednesdays given over to mud and Thursdays set aside for whipped cream, what's left?

"We're planning something new for Tuesdays," Sam confided.

"Jello."

Stay tuned — he still has Fridays and Saturdays open.

Khomeini: Reminders of mortality

NEW YORK (AP) — Two years after his triumphant homecoming to the acclaim of millions, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the embodiment of the Iranian revolution, spends his days quietly in a house on Tehran's northern fringes, praying, receiving visitors, submitting to medical examinations.

Despite his relative seclusion, the somber old clergyman remains the ultimate authority in Iran. And his heart disease — along with other reported but unconfirmed ailments — is an ever-present source of concern for his followers.

Reports from Tehran say a white Mercedes ambulance sits in his driveway, a constant reminder of his mortality.

Most observers of the Tehran scene believe the death of the 80-year-old Khomeini will usher in a period of new tension and conflict among the other revolutionary leaders as they struggle for power.

Ayatollah Hossein Ali Montazeri, 57, who currently resides in the holy city of Qom, 160 kilometres south of Tehran, is regarded as Khomeini's most likely successor as the "fagih," the paramount leader of Iran's Shiite Islamic faith. The influential faculty of the Qom theological school has endorsed Montazeri.

PROCEDURE VAGUE

But the constitution of the Islamic Republic of Iran leaves vague the procedure by which the fagih is to be selected, saying only that he should be "known and accepted as the leader by the majority of the people."

The highly charged political atmosphere in Iran could turn the succession process into a free-for-all.

Even after a successor is chosen, he probably will not command the degree of respect and obedience accorded the whitebearded, dark-eyed Khomeini.

When he flew from Paris to Tehran on Feb. 1, 1979, Khomeini ended a 14-year exile during which he had become the voice and symbol of opposition to Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

He landed in Tehran to a tumultuous welcome from more than a million ecstatic Iranians shouting, "Allah Akbar!" ("God is great"). The shah had fled the country two weeks before, and the shah's last government fell two weeks after.

Khomeini, establishing his headquarters in Qom, set about assembling the power structure of the new Islamic republic, overseeing the writing of a new constitution.

HAD HEART ATTACK

He had a heart attack in February, 1980, was taken to a Tehran hospital and later settled down in the Tehran area to recuperate.

Since then his son Ahmad has often acted as his spokesman, but the ayatollah emerges once or twice a week to address crowds outside his house in the village of Jameran. The speeches are broadcast on national television.

No major political decisions are taken without Khomeini's blessing, including last month's release of the American hostages.

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai and the rest of Iran's feuding leaders make regular pilgrimages to Khomeini's home to seek approval or advice from the "Imam."

"In cases where my opinion is not the same as the opinion of Imam, I express my opinion," Bani-Sadr said recently. "But I follow Imam's decision and I believe this is the meaning of being in line with Imam."

In large part, Khomeini has retained his hold on the revolution by not taking sides in the endless political squabbling.

Many middle-class, less religious Iranians were never enamored of the Imam and his puritanical reforms. But according to reporters in the Iranian capital, where Khomeini's face glares from countless posters and billboards, the devotion of millions of others remains unshaken.

They say they admire Khomeini for his honesty, piety and simple way of life.

"I am a poor man because the shah made me poor," Nassroullah Hamzahpour, a one-eyed porter in the Tehran bazaar, told a western journalist. "I am loyal to the Imam because, first of all, he believes in God, and second, because he believes in people and their prosperity."

"If there is inflation and high prices, it is not because of the Imam but because of hoarders who are against the revolution."

"He lives a simple, humble life," said Pari Davari, a 30-year-old nurse. "Compare it to the ostentatious life of the Pope."

Korea seen as next site of international crisis

WASHINGTON — While the foreign policy spotlight has been focused on the Middle East, another area of the world has been virtually ignored: Korea.

But highly classified intelligence reports indicate that the ideologically divided peninsula — scene of the first armed confrontation in the East-West conflict after World War II — may become the next tinderbox that the United States will have to contend with. Indeed, the intelligence estimates give the communist North Koreans an overwhelming edge in any future outbreak.

The consensus of our experts in the Pentagon and the Central Intelligence Agency is that North Korea could roll right over its neighbor to the south — unless there is heavy U.S. assistance to South Korea.

As intelligence sources explained it to my associate Dale Van Atta, it's a matter of cold military hardware: "By almost every measurement,

Jack Anderson

North Korea exceeds South Korea in both quantity and quality of tanks," warns a secret CIA appraisal. "The North has a 2.5-to-1 numerical lead over the South in medium tanks and, within this category, a better than 3-to-1 advantage in numbers of first-line, high-quality tanks."

The two Koreas are approximately equal in ground troops: 520,000 in the South, 600,000 in the North. But a top-secret Pentagon report concludes that "without U.S. combat and logistics support ... (South Korean) ground forces would probably not be capable of successfully defending Seoul against a surprise North Korean attack."

In the air, the disparity is much worse. South Korea has a 33,000-man air force with 424 combat aircraft. North Korea has a 51,000-man air force with 724 aircraft. "Without substantial augmentation, the (South Koreans) would be hard pressed to repel a sizable North Korean air attack," the Pentagon report declares. A small crumb of comfort is added with the estimate that the North Koreans would be "capable of performing a primary mission of air defense and limited offensive operations" on their own, but would need "outside assistance" to conduct sustained operations.

North Korea's navy is "markedly superior" to South Korea's in number of combat personnel, materiel readiness and firepower. It has 31,000 marines to South Korea's 22,000.

All things considered, the Pentagon experts conclude that "North Korea has the ability to launch and support a surprise attack against the Republic of Korea."

What's more, intelligence sources offer the ominous prediction that, despite infusions of aid from the United States, South Korea will be militarily inferior to North Korea for at least three years.

There are two things that make the simmering situation in Korea capable of boiling over at any minute.

One is the possibility that South Korean dissident Kim Dae Jung may be executed by the military régime. This, the intelligence experts fear, could precipitate the kind of unstable domestic situation in South Korea that would encourage the North Koreans to strike.

The other danger is that the transfer of American aircraft carriers and other components from the Pacific to the Persian Gulf might also tempt the North Koreans to launch a sneak attack on South Korea.

IN-HOUSE INPUT: I've often lambasted senior bureaucrats for their Milquetoasty reluctance to stick their necks out. So I have to applaud the half-dozen career civil servants at the Agency for International Development who recently wrote a confidential memo to the Reagan administration, detailing the kind of boss they'd like to have. Agree with them or not, you have to admire their guts in putting their views on the line.

The new AID administrator, they wrote, should be someone who:

"Can awaken this country to a new thrust in foreign assistance ... helping poor countries to develop while they become customers for our products and stable suppliers of the raw materials we need to maintain our standard of living."

Is an expert in the field of food production and distribution as a means of combating hunger, a major cause of political instability in the world.

Is "not afraid to deal up front with all political persuasions in showing them that regardless of their political system, there is a place ... for enterprise and entrepreneurship."

"Can relate to and establish a rapport with Congress" and "has a flair for public relations."

WATCH ON WASTE: The Department of Energy's openhanded disbursement of federal money has given at least one state — Pennsylvania — an unexpected bonanza at the expense of the nation's taxpayers. Under DOE's program giving states federal funds to provide "weatherization" for needy residents' homes, Pennsylvania found itself with more than $1.6 million more money from Uncle Sugar than it could spend. So Keystone State officials prudently put the surplus in interest-bearing accounts.

Cabinet divided on $200 M Massey aid package

OTTAWA (CP) — The amount of possible government guarantees being discussed for Massey-Ferguson Ltd. — critical to its recently-negotiated refinancing package — has grown to $200 million from $150 million, leaving the federal cabinet further divided on aid for the troubled farm machinery manufacturer. Several senior federal ministers are known to oppose a deeper role for Ottawa, sources say, because of changed circumstances since the federal and Ontario governments first offered a conditional government equity guarantee last October. Under the original offer — subject to Massey working out a refinancing package with its world-wide lenders — Ottawa and Ontario would guarantee a substantial portion of a $200 million equity issue so that an investor or investors would not risk losing their investment. Now, however, the federal and Ontario governments are faced with a full guarantee of the $200 million equity issue — seen as an issue of preferred shares instead of common shares.

Last month, Massey negotiated more breathing room when its major bankers agreed to accept shares in the company in return for forgiving $280 million in interest owed on debt.

LISTS CONDITION
However, the bankers made clear that the total refinancing package, worth $720 million, was conditional on government guarantees going ahead.

Discussions are continuing between Massey and the federal and Ontario governments, with a resolution of the governments' positions expected shortly as company creditors are not expected to wait indefinitely for a settlement of the government guarantee question.

From the governments' point of view, a preferred share issue is riskier than other types of guarantees since other creditors stand in line before preferred shareholders in the event of Massey going bankrupt.

Thus, claims of other creditors would have to be satisfied before those of preferred shareholders who, if not paid dividends, could call on the governments involved to repay the investors' original investment.

Ontario sources say the provincial government, which Monday called an election for March 19, wants to see what the federal cabinet decides on Massey before making its own decision on possible involvement.

Financial woes force CNE shakeup

TORONTO (CP) — While the Canadian National Exhibition struggles through what many say could be its death throes, a mammoth amusement park christened

Canada's Wonderland looms as the new contender for the entertainment dollar. Heading into its 103rd year, the CNE is in trouble. Last summer, attendance dropped 227,000 from 1979 and profits dropped to $942,000 from $1,315,000 in 1979. CNE management has begun a shakeup.

A week ago, Michael Warren, who runs the Toronto Transit Commission, was named general manager of the CNE, although he'll keep his TTC job. David Garrick, general manager of the CN Tower, has been hired as consultant. He had been with the CNE before going to the Tower. Conklin Shows, which has operated the midway since 1937, has been given two years notice that its contract will be terminated.

There is a vigorous campaign in progress to spruce up the annual exhibition, which has developed a reputation for being slightly tacky and very expensive.

EX SLIDING
Even Metropolitan Toronto chairman Paul Godfrey says the exhibition is sliding, with a record number of complaints last year about the state of the grounds, prices and short midway rides.

Everybody says there should be changes. Nobody seems to know what they should be.

Robert Yuill, a controller in the Metro Toronto city of North York, wants a re-enactment of the D-Day landings on the Normandy beaches during the Second World War, complete with guns firing blanks, landing craft disembarking and the air force strafing and bombing the Toronto shoreline.

Mind you, the Ex has made previous changes. In 1968 it decided to stay open Sundays during the annual show. Then, in 1969, it even allowed women to attend directors' luncheons during the show.

But kids still wait in line a day or two to be the first in and parents still smile, sigh and realize school isn't far off when their children head to the Ex.

But up at Maple, just north of Toronto, the challenger is almost ready.

Canada's Wonderland has already been nicknamed Disneyland of the North and the publicity mills are grinding for the official opening May 23.

Last Sunday, some nearby residents were convinced they saw an unidentified object. It turned out to be a plane covered with flashing lights, an idea a person from Ottawa was trying to sell Wonderland as an advertising gimmick.

Mike Filey is the public relations man for the Wonderland after six years at the CNE.

He says the biggest thing the CNE has going for it is tradition and should focus on its historic aspect.

Filey says staff is being trained at the Wonderland site and auditions being held for singers and dancers.

Total cost of the 360-hectare site in Vaughan Township is about $115 million, up from the $108 million original estimate.

Wonderland will have more than 30 elaborate rides, including a roller coaster 30 metres higher than the one at the Ex, four live shows running several times daily and plenty of restaurants.

From the top of a 45-metre, man-made mountain, visitors can also look down on a 3,500-seat amphitheatre. Wonderland will hire 2,500 young people for the summer season and crowds will be limited to 40,000 a day although it could hold 60,000.

The park will open daily from May 30 to Sept 30 and weekends only Sept. 12 to 27.

Entertainment industry losses have forced major shakeups at the CNE.

Gold buying: 'Like sheep'

MONTREAL (CP) — The lineups are gone now, but the memory remains for many Montrealers who were burned in the gold-buying frenzy a year ago.

Office workers, salesmen, students and taxi drivers stood outside dealers' offices for up to five hours to get to the counters as the price of gold moved up to $875 U.S. an ounce ($1,015 Canadian). The date was Jan. 21.

It was absolutely frantic, one dealer recalls. But by the end of the day, the price had dropped back to $838.50 U.S.

The next day it had dropped another $175. Looking back, Denis Beaulieu, Montreal manager of Deak-Perera Canada Inc., says a tremendous amount of money changed hands and most who bought at the peak were burned.

It was like the crash of 1929, he says. "Many people put up the farm to get into gold," Beaulieu adds. "People weren't thinking clearly. They weren't satisfied with a 100-per-cent gain."

Peter Hug, chief trader and manager for Guardian Trust Co., agrees: "The uninformed came in and were hurt very badly."

"They were looking to be rich overnight. They were like sheep to the slaughter," he remembers. "There were dozens of people in the room. There's practically no one in the office now."

Gerald Yane, commodity specialist with Merrill Lynch Royal Securities Ltd., says a flood of people poured into his small trading room.

"At that time, you couldn't get into the office," he remembers. "There were dozens of people in the room. There's practically no one in the office now."

Not all were buying gold in direct exchange. Some were selling off family heirlooms to middlemen or refiners to get the cash to buy the gold.

Roger Parisien, manager of precious metals and mining relations for the Royal Canadian Mint, remembers there were lineups half a block long.

"They were tying up the assay department," he says. "The big customers were being pushed back."

For others, it wasn't gold but silver. Only the bottom fell out later.

Steve Varni waited in the January lineups and bought silver near its peak at $50 an ounce. By March, the price was down to $10.80.

It was different for Allen Rosen, a textile machinery agent, shuddering as he remembers the cold lineups. "I'm still shivering, for God's sake."

Rosen managed it better in some respects. He bought silver at $10 an ounce and sold it for $39. But he bought gold at $631 and still has it.

"We were going to sell at $850," he says, "but it was cold and I said no way."

What did he get out of the January gold rush? "I caught a cold," he says. "It wasn't worth it."

Tax tips

Under the new federal child tax credit system, a taxpayer may receive up to $238, for each child eligible for family allowance benefits, even though he or she may not owe any federal income taxes.

Therefore, all families with children, particularly those who have not previously filed a federal tax return should do so for 1980 in order to be eligible for this refund.

If you have a home which is partially rented or used in a business you can avoid tax on capital gains at its disposition if:

You have not claimed capital cost allowance and you file an election in the year of disposal to treat the home as your principal residence.

Depending on your level of income you may choose to report interest income of a particular type on the accrued basis or when it is cashed. The method adopted must be followed year after year. However, you should report at least $1,000 in any year to benefit from the investment income deduction.

The CA reminds you to maximise the $1,000 income deduction on Canadian interest and dividend income and, for Federal, on taxable capital gains, because if the amount eligible for this deduction is less than $1,000 the deduction is the lesser amount.

This deduction can be doubled if your spouse has no eligible investments, through the use of a non interest bearing loan made to him or to her. If he or she is not able to utilize the deduction it can be claimed by you in addition to your own investment deduction.

Did you know that if you have received a refund of your pension plan from your former employer you may exclude the first $1,000 in computing your income regardless of your age?

However, you have to be 65 years of age to exclude the first $1,000 of a registered retirement saving plan annuities.

If you received any pension or retirement income during the year, there exist many tax planning possibilities to further defer and reduce the taxes payable on this income, such as income averaging annuities, registered retirement savings plans, registered retirement income funds.

Simple cooking for the simple hurried cook

Some people can cook. That's fine. Others can't, but think they can. That's not so fine for friends and family who have to smile graciously while they swallow. Still other non-chefs have given up and resigned themselves to eating out -- guaranteed, but expensive.

A friend of mine who prides himself in 'getting by' rather than being a gourmet cook, has a fool-proof solution for kitchen bimbos who don't know the difference between cinnamon and savory. Onion soup mix.

He puts it in everything from chip dip to roast beef to his own special meatball dish. The spices in the soup mix are mild, so the novice gourmet won't have to take any chances at first. I've included some of his favorite recipes plus a few simple meals -- which, after a bit of practice, can be served to company.

His chip dip is simple and much less expensive than the store-bought variety. Simply add half an envelope of onion soup to a small container of dairy sour cream. Stir and let sit until the dry onions are reconstituted.

For a tender roast or beef brisket, shake one envelope onion soup mix over the roast. Wrap in foil and roast according to size.

The meatballs may sound a little odd, but they're worth a try. Form meatballs using one pound lean ground beef, two eggs, one envelope onion soup mix and cracker or dried bread crumbs.

Meanwhile, in a medium saucepan over high heat, combine one 10-ounce can cola or rootbeer, two teaspoons dried strong mustard and 1/4 cup ketchup. Let the mixture boil down until the soft drink has no more bubbles. Add the meatballs and simmer until meat is cooked. Serve with a big salad and baked potatoes.

Cooking in a wok is simple for beginners and the dishes can become more complicated as the cook progresses. Stir-fried Spinach and Lemon-light Vegetables are two fool proof starters.

STIR FRIED SPINACH
2 teaspoons lemon juice
2 teaspoons soya sauce
1 teaspoon sugar

2 tablespoons corn oil
1 cup diagonally sliced celery
5 ounces sliced mushrooms
1/2 cup chopped onion
4 cups spinach pieces
Mix together lemon juice, soya sauce and sugar. Heat corn oil in heavy skillet over high heat about 1 minute. Add celery, mushrooms and onion; stir 2 or 3 times, turning vegetables over and over. Add spinach and lemon juice mixture; cook, stirring quickly about 2 minutes or until vegetables are tender crisp and spinach is limp. Serve hot.

Makes 4 servings.
LEMON-LIGHT VEGETABLES
1/4 cup corn oil
1/2 pound fresh broccoli, cut into flowerets

1/2 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
6 fresh carrots, cut into 2-inch strips
1 cup thinly sliced onion
1/2 green pepper, cut into strips
1/2 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1/4 teaspoon dried thyme leaves
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 cup chicken bouillon, cooled
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon corn starch
In large skillet heat corn oil over medium heat. Add broccoli, mushrooms, carrots, onion and green pepper. Cook, stirring constantly, 5 minutes or until vegetables are tender crisp. Add lemon rind, thyme and pepper. Mix chicken bouillon, lemon juice and corn starch until smooth. Add to vegetable mixture. Stirring constantly, bring to boil over medium heat and boil 1 minute.

Eating in

Makes 4 servings.
Leftovers are a problem for any cook, no matter how accomplished. The two following recipes may be used for either leftover chicken or turkey.

EASY TURKEY STROGANOFF
1/2 pound fresh mushrooms
1 tablespoon butter or margarine

NOODLE SKILLET
4 ounces spaghetti
1 tablespoon oil
1 cup diagonally sliced celery
1/4 cup sliced green pepper
1 1/2 cups water
1 envelope onion soup mix
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 can (14-oz.) chop suey vegetables
1 1/2 cups slivered cooked turkey
1/4 teaspoon ginger
Break spaghetti in half; cook and drain. Heat oil in large skillet; add celery and pepper. Cook and stir 5 minutes until tender-crisp. Add water, onion soup mix, soy sauce, vegetables, turkey and ginger. Bring to a boil, stirring occasionally. Simmer 5 minutes until hot. 4 to 6 servings.

CANTONESE TURKEY
1 envelope onion soup mix
1 1/4 cups water
1 1/2 cups diced cooked turkey
1/4 cup dairy sour cream
Cooked egg noodles
Mandarin oranges, if desired
Cook mushrooms in butter 5 minutes, stirring. Add onion soup mix, water, and turkey. Bring to a boil. Simmer 5 to 10 minutes, stirring. Stir in sour cream just before serving. Serve on noodles garnished with a few oranges. 4 servings.

For the novice cook, a turkey and pasta dish is almost fool-proof.

Dear Ann Landers: I read the letter from the wife who complained that her husband was a workaholic. It really made me mad. What do these women want from their husbands, anyway? If you ask me, they are crazy.

I would rather have a husband who works too hard than not at all, and I have had both kinds. My first marriage was a disaster because the man's main aim in life was to take it easy. He worked about one-third of the time. The rest he spent hunting, fishing, playing golf and poker. His favorite pastime was pointing out in the obituary columns the names of young men who died of heart attacks. "Overwork," he always said. "It won't happen to me."

After working a double shift for six years so we could eat and pay the rent, I got smart and filed for divorce. I am now married to a man who loves to work. Some people say he's a workaholic, but I don't care what label they put on him -- he's full of pep, always has a smile and we don't owe anybody a dime. — Been Both Places And This Is Better

Dear Better: Read on. There's more.
Dear Ann: You advice to the woman who was married to the workaholic was right on. You said, "Stay off his back and keep yourself busy. He's not going to change."

When we were first married I felt resentful because my husband's work was more important to him than I. After I sat down and had a good talk with myself I decided to stop nagging him or he might work even later to avoid coming home.

You were right when you said women marry men for the very qualities they complain about later. I wanted an ambitious husband who would "go places." Well -- I got one. I no longer feel sorry for myself and am looking at the positive side. Believe me, Ann, life is a whole lot better. — Got It All Together In Bridgeport

Dear Ann Landers: Much has been written about the male workaholic. One hardly ever sees a word about the female of the species. I am an authority on the subject, because I am married to one.

My wife does not hold a paying job, but she is busy morning, noon and night doing for our five kids, helping out with church activities, cooking, cleaning, marketing, shopping and reading Time magazine. She manages to do everything except get enough rest and spend time with her husband.

Whenever we sit together to watch a TV show she falls asleep. She also dozes off the minute we get into the car to go someplace. Any loving that can be fitted in must be in the middle of the night. She is never ready to go to bed when I am because there's always something she has to do. I get up before she does and fix my own breakfast. Any suggestions for a husband who doesn't hang out in bars or chase other women? I am — Lonely In The Night In Paterson, N.J.

Dear Lonely: Your problem is not "workaholism." It's a marriage that has gone flat. All the busy stuff that occupies your wife's attention is designed to keep you at arm's length.

Show her this letter and tell her it's yours. Tell her, too, that I hope you will sit down together and talk about what went wrong. If you both make a genuine effort you should be able to get things back on the track. A counselor may be helpful. Good luck, and let me know what happens.

Wine for the season

In response to a request by Mrs. Violet Derby for wine recipes, the following was received from Mrs. Alice M. Mitchell of Sherbrooke in late November. Mrs. Mitchell notes that the recipe was received from her son some years ago, who obtained it from a school teacher. As she has not tried it herself, she adds that she cannot tell us of its merits, but thought it might be appropriate, since at this time of the year, the ingredients are all available.

RICE WINE
2 1/2 lbs. white rice
4 lbs. white sugar
1 lb. raisins (put through food chopper)
1 gallon boiling water
1 yeast cake spread on toast
Put in crock. Let stand for 21 days.

Strain and bottle.
Note: Let water cool before adding yeast cake toast.
Thank you Mrs. M. - and the Kitchen Korner would be happy to receive further wine recipes for Mrs. Derby and other readers.

ORANGE COLESLAW
3-4 oranges
1 small head cabbage
1/4 small onion
3/4 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
1 tablespoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt

Peel oranges and cut into bite size pieces. Shred or grate cabbage; chop onion very fine. Place cabbage, oranges and onion in a large

ACW meeting

SCOTSTOWN — Mrs. Fred Buck was hostess for the January meeting of the Anglican Church Women at her home on Jan. 29.

The Vice-President Mrs. Walter MacKenzie opened the meeting with prayers, afterwards conducting it. Eight members answered the roll call.

Mrs. Bea Atkin read the minutes of the December meeting and Mrs. Fred Buck gave the treasurer's report which was satisfactory.

Mrs. George MacDonald moved that the present officers be re-elected, seconded by Mrs. Susie Wonnacott. The officers are as follows: President, Mrs. Basil Woolley; Vice-Pres.,

shredded or grated
1 white onion, grated
1 green pepper, shredded
Dressing:
1 1/2 cups vinegar
1/2 cup water
1 1/2 cups white sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 tablespoon celery seed
1 1/2 teaspoons mustard seed (if desired 1/2 teaspoon tumeric may be added to give yellow colour)

Mix together vinegar, water, sugar, salt. Put the celery seed and the mustard seed in a cloth and tie. Add to the vinegar mixture and bring to a boil. Make sure the sugar is completely dissolved. Cool.

Combine salad ingredients in a large bowl. Pour dressing over all and mix well. Let stand 12 hours in the refrigerator before using.

When refrigerated this slaw will keep 14 days. It stays crisp and never softens.

Mrs. Walter MacKenzie; Treasurer, Mrs. Fred Buck and Secretary, Mrs. Bea Atkin.

Proceeds from the January card party were very good and the A.C.W. card parties will continue on every third Thursday in the month.

Thank-you notes were received from those who had been remembered at Christmas.

Members were reminded of the Vestry meeting held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Parsons on January 29.

The next meeting to be decided where it will be held, at a later date.

Christmas, Mrs. Gagne received the sad news of the passing of her sister Annie, who lived in New York. She was a lady in her 90s.
 Keith Crawford returned home after spending the holidays in Edmonton, Alta., with friends.
 Arlington Spaulding and friend of Tillsburg, Ont., were callers of Mrs. Evelyn Lister and Alton.
 Terry Perras, of Oakville, Ont., has entered the University of Sherbrooke for courses, and is staying with his grandfather, Mr. W.J. Dawson, for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Batley entertained on New Year's Day, members of the Westgate and Batley families. Mr. and Mrs. Norman Smith of Drummondville spent the same weekend with Mr. and Mrs. M. Westgate.
 Word was received of the passing of Mrs. Everett Keer, (Gladys Westgate) of Montreal, which occurred the first part of December. Mrs. Kerr spent her young days in this area, and is therefore well known, she leaves two brothers, Maple and Roy. She had not been well for several years and at the time was living in a nursing home, she was in her 80s. Sympathy is extended to her family and her brothers.
 Another former resident of this place, Mrs. Edith Hare, has also passed away. She was Edith Miller of Edmonton, Alta. When she and her brothers and sisters were very small, they lived on the place now owned by Billy French. When young, the family sold the farm and moved west. She was 90 years old, and she passed away on the first of January, leaving one brother in Edmonton and a sister in Boston.

 The community was saddened of the news of the passing away of Mr. Stornie Stronach of Sawyerville. He lived in this neighbourhood many years. The place he lived on is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. I. Lemco. He had one daughter, Mrs. Pehleman and her two children of Bury. Sympathy is extended to Fern and her family.
 Mrs. Ileana Burns had as guests, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Ryshpan, two daughters and a son of Montreal, and Mr. and Mrs. Milton Burns and two daughters of St. Rose during the Christmas holidays.

 Harold Lowry of High Forest was also a guest of his sister on Christmas. At New Year's Mrs. Burns joined her brother at High Forest when their brother's three boys came from Ontario to spend New Year's with their uncle Harold.
 Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burns, Dale and Neil of Macdonald College spent Christmas in Bolton Center, with Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Peasley, where there were other members of the Peasley family.

 The Burns' joined the Peasleys again during the holidays, when everyone gathered at Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Peasley in Bolton Center, to help them to celebrate their 64th wedding anniversary. This community sends you both all the best wishes and good health for many more years.
 Mr. and Mrs. Leslie MacLeod had several members of the MacLeod family from Lennoxville, visiting during the holidays.
 Mrs. Terry Howell and Mrs. Ronald Kerr have returned to their teaching duties after the holidays. Mrs. Earl Dawson back to her studies at Bishop's, Keith Crawford also to Bishop's, Neil Burns to Macdonald College, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Mary Jane Lynn to Kemptville, Ont., Andrew Burns back to Champlain, besides all the school children.

School Committee meeting

MANSONVILLE (BN) - On January 6 the Mansonville Elementary School Committee met at the school with six present. Mrs. Andrea Wighton chaired the evening, and Mrs. Lorna Eakins gave the financial statement. A thank-you note was sent to the Chamber of Commerce for their generous donation of $300.00. The Principal, Wally Horn, in his report, dealt with the citrus fruit sale, enlisting the help of the M.E.S. Committee to take over the responsibility of the sales and cost receipt for the fruit and split the profit with Mr. Garnham's Class, who would help with distribution. Mr. Garnham's class are working towards financing a trip to Ottawa.

maintain the status quo for 1981-82, regarding the length of the pupil week.

Mrs. Elaine Young, as Teachers' representative, reported the receipt of the Silver Burdette Set of Music Books. The M.E.S. Committee moved to purchase this set of books for the school, agreeing with Mr. Horn's suggestion that the Fisher Trust Fund be approached for reimbursement.

The QACLD Conference will be held March 18-20 and Mrs. Wighton wishes to attend at her own expense, others may attend if interested.

French Program - the subsequent deficit of tuition for Mrs. Rouleau, teacher, was paid by the Committee, as well as the 12 new workbooks at $7.00 each for the 12 students.

The donation from the Chamber of Commerce was used towards the purchase of 80 new chairs for the school. The old metal chairs will be sold to raise money for more stacking chairs.

Discussions on the following topics filled the remainder of the evening: stationery costs for penpals; library to be run by Committee members; Parent Effectiveness Training Sessions; and Cross Country Skiing which started the week of January 6.

Legion Ladies Auxiliary Branch 10

SHERBROOKE - On Jan. 19, the Ladies' Auxiliary Royal Canadian Legion Col. J.S. Bourque Branch 10 held their first general meeting of the new year, conducted by the President, Mrs. Eileen Aube.

Roll call was read by Violet McNab with 17 members responding.

The Secretary June Webb read out the minutes of the last general meeting and the last Executive meeting, also correspondence. She also read a list of the coming events.

The Treasurer, Gwen Fuller, gave her report, with a fair balance on hand, these reports being appreciated by all.

The President thanked all the girls who made sandwiches and helped to serve lunch at the New Year's Eve party. She also welcomed back to our Auxiliary, a past member, Mrs. Anita Dubois. She then gave a list of some of her committees, which will be working with her during the coming year; Honors and Awards, Mrs. Pearl McDonald, Jean Thorne, and Colombe Mailhot; Dining-room, Aldea Mackie; Membership chairman, Mrs. Lois Distefano; Entertainment, Mary Garand; Gwen Fuller, Lois Distefano, Eileen Kerr, Eileen Aube.

There was a short discussion on new business and workers were solicited to work in the kitchen and dining-room for the wedding on Jan. 24.

Being no further business, the meeting then adjourned with the retiring of the Colours.

Next general meeting on Feb. 16.

LODE holds coffee party

STANSTEAD (IH) - Mrs. Mary Majury was hostess for the January 30th coffee party of the Stanstead Chapter IODE held at her Mountainview Street home, here.

Mrs. Majury served delicious coffee cake with cheese and coffee from her diningtable, centered with a basket of fruit.

Mrs. Dorothy Jackson was in charge of the bring and buy table with several lovely items brought and sold, and Mrs. Faith Fanous had charge of the door prize table. Winners to receive a prize were the hostess, three prizes, plus three not sold from the bring and buy and were Beverly Lepitre, Phillipa Greenwood, Ada Curtis, Jessie Elder, Lexie Rogers and Allison Butler.

Mrs. Thelma Dustin, the Chapter Regent, voiced appreciation to Mrs. Majury for opening her home for the party, to all who brought donations and those who purchased and said it was a pleasure to have several guests attending. She further announced the February 27th party will be at the home of Mrs. Fanous.

Legion Ladies Aux. meeting

NORTH HATLEY - The Royal Canadian Legion Ladies Auxiliary United branch 242 held their first meeting in 1981 on Monday afternoon, January 12. It was decided that during the winter months, meetings would be held in the afternoon.

The president, Mrs. J. Cote was in the chair and opened the meeting. The secretary, Mrs. A. Ditchburn called the roll and read the minutes of the previous meeting. Mrs. W. Woodward, treasurer, gave a very good financial report. Many letters of thanks were read for Cheer received over the holidays.

It was decided to hold the card parties again, the first was held on Jan. 26 at 8 p.m. at the Community Centre. Bingo will resume again at the Community Centre, the first one to be held on Saturday evening, January 31 at 8 p.m.

The installation of officers for 1981 was held at the Legion Home on Monday, January 19 at 8 p.m. The slate of officers for 1981 is as follows: President, Mrs. J. Cote, Ist. Vice-President, Mrs. T. Gilbert, 2nd Vice-President, Mrs. R. Riley, secretary, Mrs. A. Ditchburn, Treasurer, Mrs. W. Woodward, Sgt-at-Arms, Mrs. B. Bergeron, Executive, Mrs. E. Hartwell, Mrs. A. Scott, Mrs. C. Cote, Mrs. Ditchburn, Sr., and Mrs. C. Styan.

The meeting closed in the usual manner, after which a delicious turkey dinner was served.

HOW I FEEL

Driving along the other day
Thinking behind the wheel
Wanted to let it all out
Exactly how I feel

Now it's three days later
And my body has its doubts
Thinking of all the angles
Considering ins and outs

Remembering a round of applause
That I hadn't given any time
Now I'm thinking about it
I'm thinking along that line

I can't thank each individual
Couldn't begin to try
For your honest appreciation
Makes me feel so high

I guess you've figured out by now
That when the evening's through
I start up that old car of mine
My thoughts go home with you

I turn back the covers
And light a cigarette
And wonder about...
the people I forget

'Cause after all I'm only human
And I can't capture every word
And as I drift away toward sleep
I recall the applause I've heard.

STRAGGLER

FAVOURITE FOLK

Folk all have their favourite food
Their erotic edibles
Their succulent sip
Their heady wines
Delightful dip
Onion, garlic, clam
All His children their foils have
Their foibles, have they, as well
And I among the blessed am
It is my lot to tell
The mighty marvels of my God
In all He did create
'Ere time should pass
None can surpass
Favourite folk.

WHY - HOW - WHEN

Can someone tell WHY 'tis
Man can't recognize his brother?
Could it be that he shuts his eyes,
To all but to his "druther"?

Can someone tell HOW 'tis
Man can't comprehend his brother?
Could it be that he shuts his ears,
To just erase the bother?

Can someone tell WHEN 'twill be
Man is to man a brother?
Could it be so, precisely when;
He hearkens to our Father?

ARMISTICE DAY IN RETROSPECT
(Looking from my living room window)

Behold they march!
But do they see
The blood upon the victor's crown?
Behold they march!
But do they hear
The resonance of tortured scream echoed in triumphant battle cry?

Behold they march!
But do they taste
The bitter gall of acrid wormwood in victory's sweet savour?
Behold they march!
But do they feel
The searing breath of sorrowing sigh alloy of the victor's pyre?

Behold they march!
But do they smell
The stench of death perfumed by victory's heady intoxication

Behold they march!
But do they sing
A song n'er heard, discordant, unending?
Behold they march
But do they?

BLUE BLOOMERS AND LONG JOHNS

Mother wore
In days of yore
Long before
The frills of fancy undies
Navy blue bloomers covering sugar bag blunders.

John would done
Days long gone
The thorny long john
The itchy-scratchy armour.

From fairest hip
Per chance would slip
With dainty dip
Enticingly, exposed, would be those blundering undy wonders.

He wouldn't be kind
Well never mind
Bear before — bare behind
Scratched in — itched out
Wear his long johns round-about

They might drop,
She should stoop;
To retrieve she'd scoop.
Dragged down — hitched up
Flea afloat — flee behind
None won't never be that kind!

Thoughts and Afterthoughts
From The Closeted Poet

FLOWERS OF FRIENDSHIP

Touch the heart, O Flower of Friendship
With blossoms of grace, and deep concern
A flower so delicate, ever fragrant
Nurtured subtly, as we live and learn.

Be we true friend, to just one person
If we ease a burden, bring solace there
Live lives more fully, with more purpose
Our record, though not perfect, more than fair...

The Flower of Friendship blossoms spontaneously
Before we are even yet aware
Observed by others with much pleasure
Bringing joy from contacts... just being there...

The perfect Flower, nurtured to maturity
Guarded and tended with loving care,
Perfumed so subtly, with scent of kindness
To all mankind - a blossom rare.

Cut not this blossom - nor disturb it
Leave it to thrive and fully grow,
It depends on us, as to the sunshine;
Develops, matures - its growth will show.

Flower of Friendship, strong and sturdy
Buds of kindness, so closely furled
Seeds of care, concern for others -
Make this a richer, fairer world...

Top score on a board at the Olympiad mixed pairs was 128 match points. Only three pairs reached the excellent contract of seven diamonds. Two made it for 127 and one-half match points each. At the third table West opened the ace of hearts. South ruffed in dummy and led the ace of diamonds.

West dropped the 10! The unfortunate declarer communed with nature, gazed at the ceiling, lit three cigarettes, finally decided that the 10 was a singleton and took an immediate finesse for the jack. Down one for five match points.

A really bad play. There was no reason to go against the percentage here and South was properly punished. Why did South get five match points instead of a zero? Because some players got to six notrump and could only come to 11 tricks.

So much for the play. The bidding to seven diamonds is very interesting. South's jump to three diamonds is subminimum by most standards, but it works perfectly here. North raises to four diamonds and now South abstains from Blackwood and cue bids five clubs.

North can now afford a five heart cue bid of his own and South makes the fine bid of five spades.

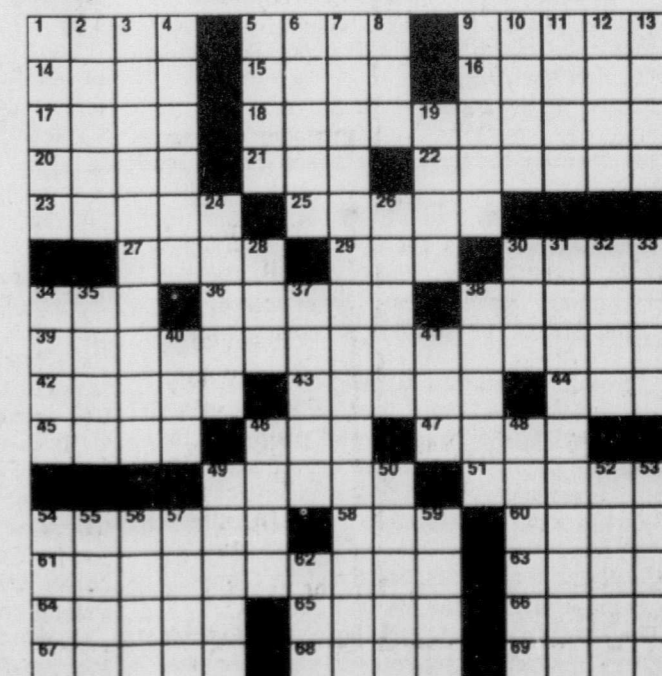

North's five notrump is a multi-purpose attempt to reach a grand slam. North does not know if spades or diamonds should be the final contract, but he wants South to bid seven in either suit in which he happens to hold two of the three top honors.

Sutton rink evens record in provincial bonspiel

Record News Services

QUEBEC — Sutton's Tom Poulton rink evened its record at two wins and two losses at the Quebec men's curling championships Tuesday. Poulton doubled Dieudonnee Palin's Amos rink 8-4. Earlier, Poulton's foursome nipped Kenogami's Richard Potvin 7-6. In Section B, the Asbestos entry is still having its problems. Marcel Duchesneau's rink suffered its fourth defeat in as many starts, a 9-4 loss to Riverbend's Serge Cote. In third-round action, it was closer as Ste. Anne-de-Bellevue edged Asbestos 9-8.

Jack Mitchell of Montreal-Glenmore and Jean Boivin of Quebec-Jacques Cartier kept their respective unbeaten records intact Tuesday as they skipped their rinks to consecutive victories. Glenmore improved its won-lost record to 4-0 atop the Section A grouping with a 9-4 decision over Frank Kinahan's

Montreal McGill rink in fourth-round play. In other fourth-round action, Kenogami upended Quebec-Victoria, 6-4 and Sept-Iles clobbered Murdochville 9-2. Sept-Iles and Kenogami are tied for second-place in the grouping with 3-1 records, while Montreal McGill and Sutton share third spot with 2-2 logs. In other 'R' fourth-round play, Quebec-Jacques Cartier remained unbeaten with an 8-5 triumph over Trois-Rivieres, Dave Moon skipped Ste. Anne de Bellevue to an 8-2 victory over Brownburg and Brian Ness skipped Howick to a 10-2 triumph over Lachine. Howick and Ste. Anne de Bellevue each trail Quebec Jacques Cartier with 3-1 records, while Lachine, Trois-Rivieres and Riverbend have 2-2 records. Asbestos and Brownburg remain winless in four games.

Williams: Raines gets shot at left field spot

By MATTHEW ELDER

MONTREAL — Is Tim Raines ready to start in the major leagues? Will Ellis Valentine be healthy — in mind as well as in body? Is Woody Fryman immortal? These and a host of other questions come to mind with Montreal Expos' season opener a little more than two months away.

The Expos' 1981 training camp opens March 1 in West Palm Beach and manager Dick Williams eased back into the swing of things Tuesday with his annual pre-season press conference in Montreal.

Williams said Raines will get a shot at left field with Ron LeFlore gone. If Raines isn't ready and Willie Montanez is sharp, Warren Cromartie could move from first to left field, his old position before LeFlore was trumpeted into town a year ago. "I'd like to retain the speed at the front of our lineup," added Williams. "It's up to Raines."

"If he can make the lineup and play left field, I'd have him leading off followed by Rodney Scott, Andre Dawson and Gary Carter in that order.

Raines, 21, was named 'AAA' American Association most valuable player last season, with a .354 average and 77 stolen bases. He was called up to the Expos in mid-season but couldn't handle big league pitching and was eventually shipped back to Denver. He returned to Montreal when roster sizes were increased in September, but was used primarily as a pinch runner.

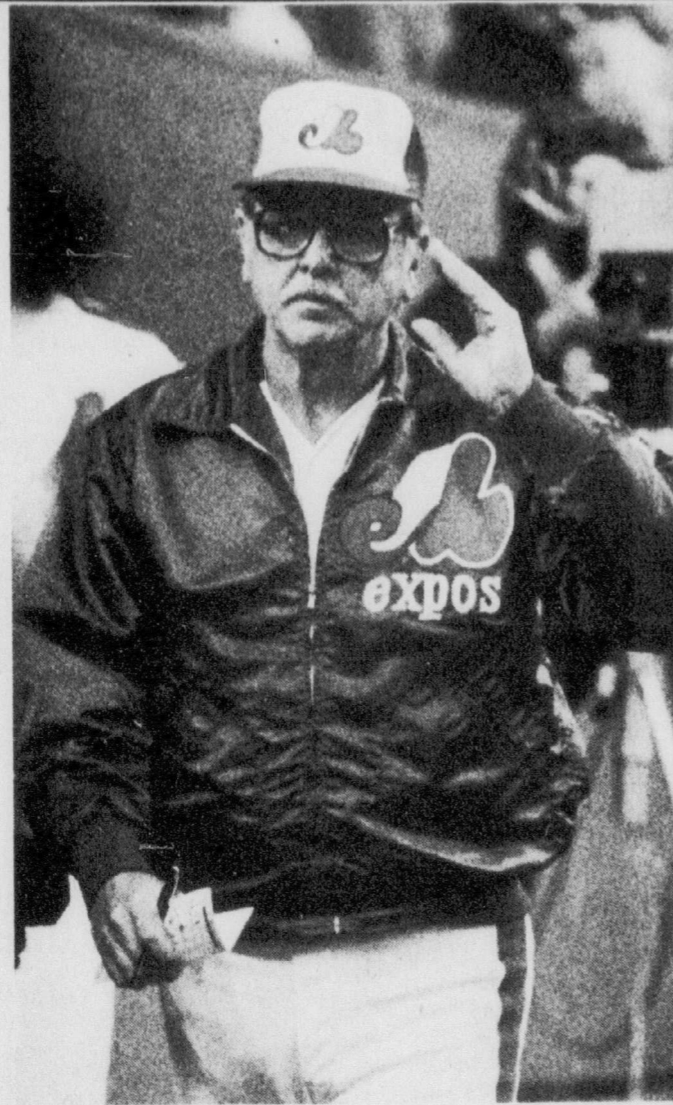

Valentine will be given every chance to prove he's a starter. The right fielder, Williams said, "is paid to start and is supposed to be a regular." If his attitude is good and he can stay healthy, there's no reason to believe he shouldn't be a starter, he added.

"If he's not in there for any length of time he's of no value to me," said Williams. The moody outfielder appeared in only 86 games last season after suffering a fractured cheekbone in May and a hip and wrist injury that kept him out of the lineup for the stretch drive in September.

There's plenty of outfield talent on the bench. Jerry White earned a reputation as one of the top bench men in the majors last year and Roland Office was an able starter when Valentine was out. Office will be hard to overlook at West Palm while Dawson is an obvious shoot-in in the centre field.

Pitching is a hot-and-cold issue. The Expos are rich in starters — Steve Rogers, Bill Bullockson and Scott Sanderson are top-calibre men and David Palmer, coming off surgery, will be ready June 1. Bill Lee and Charlie Lea have good shots at the rotation when the season begins.

The bullpen was a weak spot for the Expos in 1980. Williams refused to admit it will be the same in '81. With Stan Bahnsen, Elias Sosa and Fred Norman, he is confident his team will get the relief job done. And there's minor league talent which may come in handy as well. Steve Tatzler is coming off a fine year in the minors and Richard Wortham is another possible candidate for the big team. And Woodie Fryman, you never know... Asked about the National League East, Williams agreed St. Louis Cardinals will be an exciting team, following a series of blockbuster trades. But he is quick to add the last trade general manager Whitey Herzog made — dealing catcher Ted Simmons and Pete Vukovich — was a mistake and "it'll hurt them." Simmons is a classic Expo-killer (in the mould of the Phillies' Bake McBride) and Vukovich was stingy every time he faced the Expos. To no one's surprise, Williams is optimistic the Expos can win the NL East this year. "Both Philly and the Pirates are getting old," he said, and his squad is a more mature unit after last September's near miss.

Stingers get by Redmen

MONTREAL (CP) — Concordia handed ninth-ranked McGill its second loss of the season as the Stingers nipped the Redmen 67-66 in the only Quebec University Athletic Association basketball game Tuesday night. Mike Solomon, with 16 points, was the high scorer for the Stingers, who also got 14 points apiece from Doug Whaley and John Gissendanner.

Ron Penston led the Redmen's attack with 20 points, while Willie Hinz poured in 19. McGill remains atop the five-team league with a 6-2 won-lost record, while Concordia improved its third-place record to 3-2.

Incident denied — Kush

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Two players who said they saw former Arizona State football coach Frank Kush strike punter Kevin Rutledge in a 1978 game later denied it, Kush testified Tuesday in a $2.2-million damage suit. Gary Bouck, a former Sun Devil linebacker, was quoted anonymously by Arizona State's campus newspaper as saying he saw the incident, Kush said, and word back got to him that onetime Arizona State offensive tackle Steve Chambers "was spilling his guts about the thing."

But Kush, now head coach of Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League, said when he questioned the two players privately about the alleged incident, they both denied making any comments.

Rutledge is suing Kush, the university, former Sun Devil assistant coach Bill Maskill and others, claiming Kush punched him in the mouth following a poor punt during Arizona State's 41-7 loss to Washington on Oct. 28, 1978, in Seattle.

period and beat Colorado Rockies 5-2 Tuesday night, snapping the Canadiens' six-game National Hockey League losing streak. Colorado extended its winless streak to seven games while battling gamely until Mondou deflected a slapshot by Gaston Gingras on a power play to beat Colorado goalie Hardy Astrom at 8:39 of the third period.

Mark Napier and Mario Tremblay rounded out the scoring for the Canadiens while Mike Gillis and Paul Gagne replied for Colorado. The Rockies were short-handed after Yvon Vautour had gone off for hooking when Risebrough scored his first of the night.

Risebrough intercepted a badbounce pass by Colorado's Mike Kitchen, skated in and fired a shot past Astrom for his ninth goal of the season. Then with just 55 seconds remaining in the game, he took a blocked shot in the Colorado end, broke in alone on Astrom and scored his second of the night.

Defenceman Denis Potvin of New York Islanders says intensity and balance were the keys to his club's 8-1 win over Los Angeles Kings on Tuesday night. "We had let ourselves slip a little bit," said Potvin, who had a goal and two assists as the Islanders snapped a two-game National Hockey League losing streak.

"Here comes a team like Los Angeles and we know we have to turn it back on and the intensity is there." So was the balance — eight different Islanders scored on home ice.

Wings 5 Leafs 3 Detroit peppered goaltender Jimmy Rutherford, a former Red Wing, with 47 shots on the way to victory. Chumps in the first half of the NHL schedule, the Wings are only one point out of a playoff spot.

Canucks 3 Caps 3 Brilliant goaltending by rookie Dave Parro and veteran Mike Palmateer, who gave way in favor of Parro after hurting an ankle midway through the game, enabled Washington to earn the tie in Vancouver, where the Canucks outshot the Capitals 41-22. Guy Charron, Dennis Vergeraert and Ryan Walter scored for Washington. Ivan Boldirev, with his 250th career goal, Brent Ashton and Bobby Schmautz scored for the Canucks. Oilers 3 Blues 3 In St. Louis, Risto Siltanen scored on a shot from the blueline midway through the final period to lift Edmonton to the tie. Wayne Babych of the Blues scored his 37th and 38th goals of the season and increased his points total to 67, setting a team single-season points record for right wingers. Jorgen Pettersson added a goal for the Blues.

Beavers upset 4-2

QUEBEC — Marc Roy scored three goals to lift Quebec Remparts to a 4-2 upset victory over Sherbrooke Beavers last night. Roy scored the first of his three goals for the Remparts at 1:27 of the opening period at Quebec, and Reynald Lachance added to the lead with his goal at 7:14.

After a scoreless middle period, Roy scored goals at 7:23 and 13:51 to boost Quebec's lead to 4-0. Tim Cranston and Gerard Gallant replied late in the period for the Beavers.

Quebec, in last place in the Dilio standings, has a 22-30-2 log, while the Beavers fell to 27-25-3 and third place in the Dilio standings. In another game, Trois Rivieres Draveurs beat Hull Olympiques 3-1. The Draveurs improved their won-lost-tied record to 29-22-3 for 61 points and first place in the Dilio Division. Hull, in fourth place in the LeBel Division, slipped to 20-32-3.

Action resumes tonight when Montreal Juniors play host to Sorel Black Hawks. MONTREAL (CP) — Local favorites Claude Langlois and Patric Raux lived up to their early billing as the tandem to beat Tuesday in the first day of the North American amateur six-day bicycle race at the Velodrome.

HALIFAX (CP) — Maine Mariners outmuscled and outplayed Nova Scotia Voyageurs as they grabbed an easy 6-2 win in Tuesday's only American Hockey League game. SILVRETTA NOVA, Austria (CP) — Marie-Claude Asselin of Ste. Agathe, Que., won her second over-all World Cup freestyle skiing title Tuesday on the strength of her fifth-place finish in a gruelling mogul competition won by Hillary English of the United States.

LENOXVILLE (ME) — Hodge Auto took an early Valentine's gift from Waterville Sunday night. Waterville failed to ice the required minimum of eight players and were forced to forfeit an Eastern Townships Hockey League game. Hodge (7-9-1) now is one point behind second-place Waterville (7-8-2). In the other game, Bell Canada pulled further away from the pack with a 5-1 win over Chez Robert. Mario Grenier scored twice and Roger Letourneau, Denis Gendreau and John Colton added other goals for Bell. Jim Harrison scored Chez Robert's lone marker. This Sunday, Waterville will try again — against Chez Robert — while Hodge Auto plays Bell Canada.

Ali may still back N.Y. fight card

NEW YORK (AP) — Muhammad Ali may have changed his mind again, indicating Tuesday that he might step in after all and try to salvage a boxing show tangled in charges of a $21.3-million bank fraud.

Ali said he might back the promotion of a scheduled boxing card at Madison Square Garden Feb. 23, which is rich in purses and talent but in serious jeopardy. Muhammad Ali Professional Sports Inc. was to have put on the card, but the main figures in that group have vanished and on Monday were charged in a lawsuit with embezzlement of $21.3 million from the Wells Fargo National Bank of California.

MAPS, which has raised questions in boxing circles for months about the source of its wealth, paid Ali a promotional fee for use of his name. Otherwise, it had no direct connection with the former heavyweight champion. FILES SUIT The Well Fargo suit, filed in state Superior Court, alleges that the fraud was "accomplished by internal manipulation of funds involving 13 separate accounts."

Among the defendants was Harold Smith, chairman of MAPS, and Benjamin Lewis, a MAPS director who most recently was operations manager of the Wells Fargo branch in Beverly Hills, Calif. Both Smith and Lewis have been missing for about a week.

Ali appeared Tuesday at meetings between MAPS attorneys, its president, Sam Marshall; Sam Glass, president of Tiffany Promotions, which was to co-promote the show, and representatives of some of the fighters. Fighters have been asked to restructure their purses — the four-fight card had purses totalling $8.5 million — but some were reluctant to do so, apparently feeling they could earn as much money fighting on different shows at different times.

Ali's latest ring retirement announcement almost went unnoticed in the shuffle. "All I'm going to do now is promote and lecture," he said yesterday. "I'm going to be a promoter — the greatest. I'm going to stay out of the ring. I haven't retired."

The three-time heavyweight champion was to have fought European champ John L. Gardner next. Ali was badly beaten by WBC champion Larry Holmes last October 2. In Montreal, meanwhile, Canadian lightweight boxing champion Gaetan Hart hopes to go after the WBA title within the next three months. The No. 1 contender is Claude Noel and a fight between the two may take place in February, March or April. Dates in each month have been reserved.

Toronto tennis tourney offers big bucks

TORONTO (CP) — If Bjorn Borg wins the $500,000 Molson challenge tennis tournament Sunday, he could leave with about $200,000 in prize and bonus money.

If one of the other seven players wins the round-robin tournament starting today at Maple Leaf Gardens, the possibility arises that he can carry off $225,000. That added incentive is a $25,000 bonus posted by the organizers for the first person to topple the No. 1-ranked Borg. There's another $15,000 in prize money for the most service aces and another $10,000 for the most six-love games.

"I wouldn't want that kind of pressure if I lost to somebody else," said John McEnroe of the United States, the No. 2-ranked player in the world and second-seeded here behind Borg, the millionaire Swede. "It's an advantage to us to be at the top of our game when we play Bjorn here. At least if we beat him we get $25,000. He's got nothing to gain if he beats me. Of course he get's the prize money, but not that bonus." The winner's share is $175,000 for this five-day tourney in which the players will be divided into two groups of four each for the round-robin section which ends Friday. TOP FOUR ADVANCE The top two players from each group advance to semifinal play Saturday with the first in one division going against the runner-up in the other section.

"I feel he's proved over the last couple of years he's No. 1," McEnroe said of Borg. "If people rank me No. 2, that makes me happy." McEnroe, while admitting he'd enjoy beating Borg for the bonus money, said he didn't think it was such a good idea to put all the pressure on the Swede, who won a similarly-designed Masters Grand Prix tournament in New York two weeks ago.

"It doesn't seem necessary since it's a big enough tournament as it is." Joining Borg, 24, and McEnroe, 22, in the tournament are Americans Jimmy Connors, Sandy Mayer and Vitas Gerulaitis along with Johan Kriek of South Africa, Wojtek Fibak of Poland and Romanian Ilie Nastase. Opening matches today pit Borg against Mayer, Kriek against Gerulaitis, Connors against Fibak and McEnroe against Nastase.

McEnroe, tagged Superbrat by reporters on the international tennis scene when he first became prominent a couple of years ago for his lack of tennis manners, is maturing with experience. NO TIME TO PLAY He admits to having few friends on the circuit yet — doubles partner Peter Fleming is probably his closest — but says that's because the nature of the game allows few longstanding or meaningful relationships to develop.

"Of course I want to have friends on the circuit, since they're around with us all the time. But you just get used to them being around. . . . It's difficult sometimes playing people who you are close to."

McEnroe does not like the image he conjures up each time he has a scrape with tournament officials or opponents. "I just want to go out there and have everything called right," he said. "I don't want to have a reason to complain. I just don't want people to make mistakes, and if they do, to admit it." He said every other sport allows players to question the game officials, so why not tennis.

Sam Huff denied grid honors... again

During the weekend, four new names were inscribed in U.S. pro football's Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio: ageless quarterback-placekicker George Blanda; a two-way iron man of the Golden 20's, Morris (Red) Badgro; and a pair of the late Vince Lombardi's Green Bay Packer stars, Jim Ringo and Willie Davis.

Four good men, tried and true. Yet, down in Washington, in his executive office with a giant hotel chain, a bull-shouldered man in a three-piece suit read the headlines and again felt he had been hit in the pit of the stomach with a bowling ball. "Disappointed?" asked Sam Huff. "Sure. It's getting to be embarrassing."

Huff, a college terror at West Virginia, went on to become one of the most feared and hated linebackers in the pro game — eight years with New York Giants and five with Washington Redskins.

"I keep asking myself: 'What's wrong? Whom have I offended? Why should I be slighted when most of my peers who were outstanding in their day made it in their first year of eligibility?'"

SUFFER REJECTION

It is one of the tragedies of Hall of Fame elections, whether in baseball or football. For every man who enjoys the elation that comes with such an honor, dozens of deserving individuals must suffer the pangs of rejection.

Pro football and basketball players don't become eligible for nomination until five years after they retire. But football, unlike baseball in which the full membership of the Baseball Writers Association of America participates, limits its board of electors to 29 — one for each of the 28 clubs plus an added member of the U.S. Football Writers

Association.

A certain amount of luck is involved. If a player happens to retire along with a bumper crop of standouts, his election might be delayed. As years pass, deserving men tend to fall back in the balloting and as new players become eligible, it becomes more difficult for players of another era to remain fresh in the voters' minds.

Huff, who has encountered this kind of bad luck, has reason to feel like a forgotten man. FEARED BY RIVALS

As the Mean Joe Green of his day, Huff was the middle linebacker feared by every rival coach and running back in the league. "Huff! Huff! Huff!" was the constant chant of delirious Giant fans as the 6-foot-1, 220-pound linebacker led the defensive-minded club to a National Football League championship his rookie year and to division titles in five of the next seven.

He was featured in a TV documentary entitled, The Violent World of Sam Huff.

It is probably significant that after Huff left the Giants to join Washington, the Giants domain fell apart. From an 11-3 season in 1963, the Giants fell to 2-10-2 in 1964.

Six times Huff was named allpro. In 1961, he was named the NFL's defensive player of the year. He was credited with 30 career pass interceptions and recovery of 17 fumbles. The tackles he made were countless in the pre-computer age.

Jim Brown, the all-time rushing record-holder in the NFL, once was asked by Johnny Carson if there was any man in football he ever feared.

Brown thought a moment, then replied, "Yeah, Sam Huff."

Unfortunately, Jim Brown does not vote.

'Mousquiri', the Richmond atom tournament mascot, will be on hand again this year to entertain young and old.

Youngsters ready for atom tourney

RICHMOND (ME) — The 18th annual Mousquiri Atom Hockey Tournament begins here tomorrow with 76 teams signed up for seven categories of competition. Eighty-eight games will be played, from tomorrow's 4:30 p.m. opener between Asbestos Sabres and Pierreville to the invitational class final a week Sunday (the 15th).

The invitational class will see almost every region of the province represented: Richmond, Ancienne Lorette, Quebec City, St. Camille, Montreal, Trois-Rivieres West, St. Maurice, Asbestos and the Eastern Townships. Each team will meet each other once and the second and third-place teams will meet in a semi-final to determine who plays the first-place squad for the championship. Both playoff games will be played on the closing Sunday, as well as the finals of the six other classes.

Townships-area teams which are entered: Class B - Eclairiers de Sherbrooke, Sherbrooke Cardinals, Granby Nordics, Sherbrooke Leopards, Lennoxville-Ascot Lions and Granby Canadiens; Class C - Richmond Braves, Asbestos Sabres, Windsor Beavers, Valcourt Cougars, Richmond Athletics, Caisse Populaire de Farnham, Granby Optimist Canadiens, Plessisville, Coaticook and Asbestos Tigers; Class AA - Mili-vic de Granby and Sherbrooke Beavers; Class CC - Acton Vale, Coaticook Dynamique, Caisse Pop de Warwick, Thetford Mines-H.L. Pepin, Rock Forest Rockets and Windsor Athletics.

The Mousquiri tournament was started in 1963 with 12 teams entered. The entry list grew steadily through the years to last year's 62 and 1981's 76 squads. The budget has increased from 1963's meagre $300 to this year's whopping $28,715. There is no one major sponsor but area businessmen, industries and general population all lend a helping hand, whether it be monetary or physical assistance.

Promoters won't give up

Indoor soccer having tough time

TORONTO (CP) — Promoters of indoor soccer have been hit with hefty financial losses as fans fail to show enthusiasm.

The North American Soccer League indoor season began in November and attendance has averaged just 4,798 after 128 games. However, its promoters are optimistic the game is here to stay.

Toronto Blizzard knows it will lose between $85,000 and $100,000 on the season which ends later this month. Edmonton Drillers will drop about $80,000 and Calgary Boomers and Vancouver Whitecaps will also be in the red.

Only one team, Fort Lauderdale Strikers, will probably give up after one season, largely because it has to play in an old arena about 50 kilometres away from most potential fans. The Strikers have averaged 1,757 fans a game, the league's lowest, and with no wins and 13 losses so far, the future isn't bright.

Strikers general manager Tim Robbie says no decision has been made on the future of indoor soccer, but that world tours during the off-season are more profitable and would benefit the image of the club.

The weather in Florida has also hurt, said Robbie.

"Fans are not accustomed to going to an arena here to see a sport when the weather is so good outdoors. The northern cities don't have that problem."

League commissioner Phil Woosnam said this season cannot be used as a fair assessment of indoor soccer's potential. A labor dispute in the United States before the season started spoiled scheduling plans and forced the hasty formation of a northern, or Canadian, division. The dispute prohibited players on Canadian teams from entering the U.S. to play.

Hardest hit was Toronto, which has to travel to Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver for its away games.

Clive Toye, Blizzard president, said "It's difficult to promote games against Calgary and Edmonton, who are unknown to the soccer public here."

He adds that "it's grossly expensive for us, not only in terms of air fares and hotel rooms, but in man hours."

However, there is optimism for the game.

Calgary general manager Rudi Schiffer said indoor soccer is alive and well. "There have been some bummers, but a lot of clubs didn't put much effort into it. They didn't take it seriously. Our attendance has been going up steadily and once people find out how much fun it is, they come out."

"To me, there's no doubt that it is here to stay. The Canadian Division has hurt us. Playing the same team six times has got to hurt. Toronto, especially, has been put in a ridiculous situation."

NBA mulls Vancouver franchise proposal

NEW YORK (AP) — If a successful tycoon like Nelson Skalbania wanted to join your business fraternity and was willing to pay you and your partners $700,000 apiece for the chance to do so, would you be able to say no to him merely because you suspected your business might already be over-expanded?

That's the dilemma facing the owners of the 23 National Basketball Association teams, who in less than two weeks may vote on whether to award an expansion franchise to Skalbania in Vancouver. That would bring the NBA's roster to a more logical 24 clubs and bring pro basketball back to Canada.

Toronto was a charter member of the Basketball Association of America, the NBA's forerunner, and the site of the first league game on Nov. 1, 1946. That franchise lasted only one season.

Skalbania, who owns hockey and soccer teams in Calgary and has attempted to purchase Seattle's American League baseball team, has agreed to pay the existing NBA clubs an entry fee of $16 million — $4 million more than Dallas paid to join the league last year. In addition, he is willing to waive his share of network

TV money put up by CBS, which amounts to nearly $1 million a club.

HAS THE MONEY

An NBA executive who has looked into Skalbania's financial background says he found "some fancy numbers — very fancy numbers."

"This guy is loaded."

Another reason is that he expects to attract a sizable Canadian television contract for Canada's only NBA franchise.

On the negative side: there is no tradition of basketball in Vancouver; realignment — Vancouver obviously belongs in the Pacific Division, but the Atlantic is the one with an opening — will not come easily; Skalbania was involved in the purchase and quick folding of Indianapolis Racers of the World Hockey Association, which left bad feeling in that city.

Your Birthday

February 5, 1981

This coming year can be a most fruitful one if you continue to use your ideas responsibly. Your fertile imagination can produce a healthy harvest when the seeds are given time to germinate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Ideas which work for you may not necessarily do the job for another. Make allowances for personality differences and talents when giving advice today.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Uncertainty could cause a setback if you begin to question something you were only recently shown to be right. Let yesterday's insights take precedence over today's.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Move cautiously and slowly today, lest you bring someone into your confidence or plans who'll blab exactly what you don't want told.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your chances for success are high today, so long as you stick to your original game plan. Switching horses in midstream could ruin everything.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Having many good ideas and all the enthusiasm in the world won't get things done today unless you discipline yourself to finish what you begin.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) That sentimental you could let someone's sob story cause you to desert your better judgment and take a gamble you normally wouldn't. You may have regrets if you do.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Just when you should be sticking to your guns, as you normally do, today you could be swayed by someone who really doesn't have all the facts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Continue to check each and every detail as you work along today. Don't let someone who would rush your job have his or her way. Something important will be overlooked.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Avoid mixing business with pleasure today, if at all possible. Having a good time may cloud your reasoning and you could agree to costly concessions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'd better stay right on top of something being handled for you by another today, because this person, thinking he is doing right, may do exactly the opposite.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be careful today. You are not too adept at keeping secrets at this time. With a minimum of coaxing, nosey person could have you spilling the beans.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be satisfied with a small profit today, rather than holding out because you hear about a better deal. To expect too much from unconfirmed sources could prove to be disappointing.

gifts for marked napkins were Gertrude Montgomery and Verda Gilbert.

Friends of Dalton Hover are sorry to hear he is a patient in the C.H.U. where he expects to undergo surgery.

The Golden Age Club met on Jan. 29 with a good attendance. Darts, Canasta and 500 were played during the afternoon and a delicious lunch served. Several more paid their membership fee which was due in January. Plans are to have a supper for the members on Feb. 12 to celebrate five years since the Golden Age Group started, also have an entertainment after. The committee for the event met after lunch to make further plans. Gleason Painter won the door prize.
