NEW 17-INCH GUN THOUGHT TO HAVE CONTRIBUTED TO GERMAN STRENGTH AT SEA

Theorists Believe That Enemy Had Modern Contrivances With Which British Admiralty Had Not Reckoned—Germans Believe Heligoland Was Aim

NEW YORK, June 3.—Lacking details in cable despatches from Europe a dozen theories on the North Sea battle are prevalent in this city. Theorists and men without technical training accepted the engagement as a stand-up open sea fight among the biggest vessels of both fleets. Officers of the United States navy held entirely opposite views.

Five officers of American battleships in New York believe the struggle found battle cruisers and armored cruisers and a few destroyers on the part of the English, and destroyers and battle cruisers on the part of the Germans, with the German destroyers bearing the brunt of the battle.

Hudson Maxim, the noted inventor, advanced the novel theory that the Germans used their newly invented self-propelling mines, as well as submarines and Zeppelins, far in advance of their line of capital ships, and that the capital ships were armed with 17-inch guns which far outranged the British metal.

E. H. von Mellenthin, foreign editor and military expert of the Staats Zeitung, had the following theory of the battle:

"The English left Orkney and headed straight for Denmark. Some say they went to protect Norwegian shipping, and others believe that they wanted to force an entrance into the Baltic Sea through the Skager Rak. I believe neither.

"It is the German opinion that the British Fleet was aiming at Heligoland.

"On January 22, a cable from London was published to the effect that the German fleet had been equipped with 17 inch guns. The calibre of these guns is the same as the Austrian skodas or the Krupp mortars. They can throw a projectile twenty-six miles, the projectile taking a semi-circular course through the air, and falling on the ship instead of against it. The presence of these guns explains the big English losses. The victory in a sea battle will be won by the masses of iron and lead ships on both sides can throw. The German victory might be termed a "Watery Liege."

"The public opinion in England for some kind of activity on the part of the fleet was so strong that the British Admiralty was forced to do something."

150 VESSELS ENGAGED.

LONDON, June 3—A report from The Hague as forwarded from Amsterdam to the Central News, is to the effect that six German destroyers were sunk by the British, and that a large cruiser, severely damaged, was towed into the harbor at Kiel.

It is estimated that 150 ships engaged in the battle.

It is not considered probable that the shipwrecked British and German sailors will be interned in Holland, as they have promised not to attempt to escape. The German Minister at The Hague will go to Ymuiden to make an investigation.

FLAGS FLY IN LONDON TODAY IN HONOR OF NEW BRITISH NAVAL HEROES

Official News Today Shows German Losses Heavier Than Admitted—German Grand Fleet Was Fought and Driven Back to its Base by British Cruiser Unit of Inferior Numbers

LONDON, Saturday, June 3.—Careful comparison of the British and German reports of the sea fight off the Danish coast seem to indicate that Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty's cruiser squadron came in contact with the German main fleet, or possibly, in the first instance, a portion of that force.

Although aware that he was opposing a stronger force than his own the official statements make it appear, naval observers say, that Vice-Admiral Beatty courageously engaged the Germans. Later, presumably the whole German fleet appeared on the scene. Vice-Admiral Beatty was then completely outnumbered and before Admiral Jellicoe's main fleet was able to get into action the Germans made off.

No attempt is made here to minimize the seriousness of the British losses in ships and men. According to present information the German fleet had the best of the action.

Strong hopes are entertained, however, that later reports may minimize the seriousness of this British naval setback.

The greatest regret is felt here over the loss of the battle-cruiser Queen Mary, which was one of the show ships of the British navy. She was completed at Jarrow in 1913. Her crew alone was composed of about 1,000 men. The other cruisers were older vessels.

Special Cable from Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, June 3.—Above the Admiralty's buildings, the First Sea Lord's house, Westminster Abbey, the Houses of Parliament and every Government building, flags fly mast high beneath the blue sky in proud honor of the English seamen who have paid the final price of Admiralty.

This official act expresses the feeling of every Englishman one meets this morning. In crowded suburban trains, streets and clubs, everywhere predominates pride and confidence in the navy and a renewed stubborn determination.

The best naval authorities agree that the German account lies when it says that the main part of the English fighting fleet was engaged.

The fighting was between the German battle fleet with a large body of cruisers and torpedo craft, and one unit only of the British fleet, viz., four battleships in addition to battle cruisers and light cruisers.

The British unit engaged, perhaps, as the Times says, with over-confidence in a long running fight against ships more numerous, stronger and more heavily armed? Their tactics were to hold the enemy under fire until the main British fleet arrived.

With the advantage of the evening light behind their target and a longer gun range, the enemy were able to inflict heavy damage, while a most effective Zeppelin observation enabled them to take warning and run away to port before the chief British force reached the scene.

CANADA HAS CHANCE

England's battle fleet is untouched, and nothing material is changed in the naval situation. Other cruisers and other destroyers are ready to replace the ships destroyed.

Unshaken is the British ability to uphold the freedom of the seas for the Empire and the Allies.

The British armored cruisers sunk, viz., the Defence, Black Prince and Warrior, were built immediately before the dawn of the big gun era in Germany. Now it has only one effective unit of armored cruisers remaining.

What Englishmen especially deplore is the loss of the irreplacable officers and men, and Capt. Guinness' mission gives Canadians an opportunity to fill their places.

GERMAN REPORT UNTRUE

LONDON, June 3, 11:10 a.m.—Captain William Hall, chief of the Intelligence Division of the Admiralty, authorizes the Associated Press to say: "The German report is untrue. Both of these dreadnoughts are safe in harbor.

"The German report that the entire British battle fleet was engaged is equally untrue. A portion of the British fleet, much inferior to the total battle fleet of the Germans, engaged that fleet and drove it back into its harbor. The British control the North Sea."

GERMAN LOSSES HEAVIER

LONDON, June 3, 9:50 a.m.—The British public, who retired last night cast down by the first news of the North Sea battle, as contained in the earlier British and German reports, took some comfort from the later British report, which was found in the morning papers. This report, while it did not decrease the British losses except in destroyers, which were reduced from 11 to 8, shows that the German losses were much greater than was at first estimated.

According to this latest account of the great naval engagement, the German losses include two battleships, one battle cruiser, one light cruiser and six destroyers sunk; two battle cruisers damaged, three battleships hit. Naval writers also point out that the German fleet retired as soon as the main British fleet appeared on the scene, so that there is no question about the superiority of sea power remaining in British hands. The loss of British ships is, of course, admittedly serious, while the loss in officers and men has cast a gloom over the whole country.

FRAUENLOB LOSS CONFIRMED

THE HOOK, Holland, June 3, via London.—The tugboat Thames has arrived here with eight men of the crew of the German cruiser Frauenlob, which was sunk in the naval battle off Jutland. They say that the warship went to the bottom ten minutes after she was struck. Nothing is known of the fate of the remainder of the crew of 350.

GERMAN LOSSES COLOSSAL

By Canadian Press.

LONDON, June 3.—An Exchange Telegraph despatch from Copenhagen says the German torpedo boat V-28 was sunk during the naval engagement. The survivors who were rescued from a raft by a Swedish steamship, reported, the despatch says, that all the rest of the crew of 102 were lost.

According to this despatch, the survivors of the V-28 said they believed twenty German torpedo boats were destroyed, and that the German losses as a whole were "colossal."

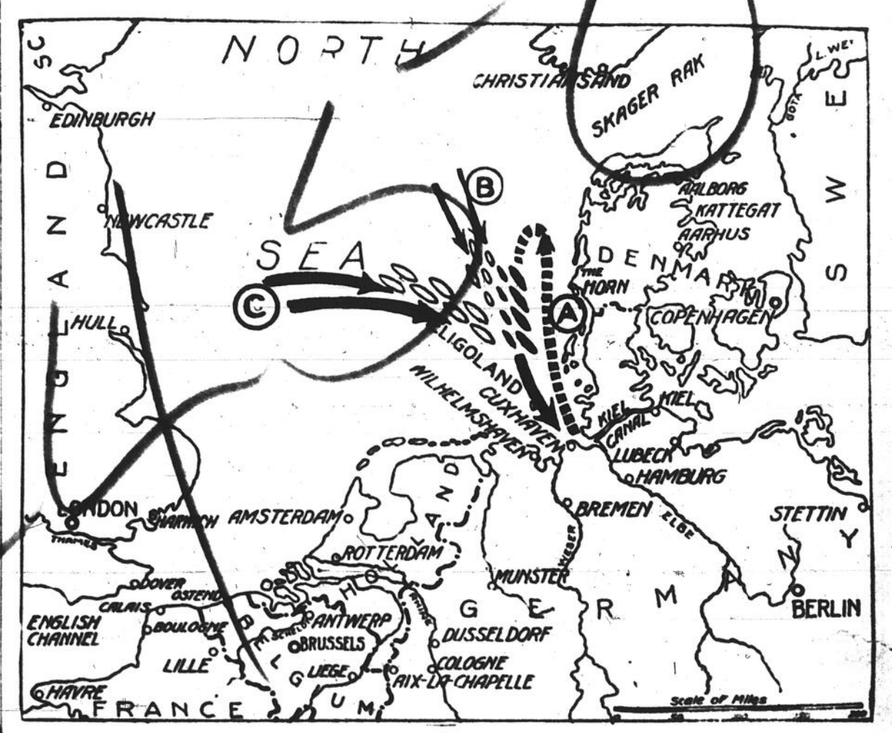

CASUALTY LIST OF CANADIANS IN FLYING SERVICE

OTTAWA, June 3.—A total list of casualties which have occurred among Canadians in the Royal Naval Air Service (not the Royal Flying Corps), was published today by the Naval Service Department. All those mentioned are from the two hundred probationary flight sub-lieutenants who have enlisted in Canada, through the medium of this department. The list is as follows:

Flight Sub.-Lieut. Douglas Hay, killed in a flying accident, September, 1915; Flight Sub-Lieut. J. M. Alexander, killed in a flying accident, November, 1915; Flight Sub-Lieut. Gordon E. Duke, killed in a flying accident, January, 1916; Flight Sub-Lieut. Herbert J. Page, missing since February 15, after proceeding on a sea plane reconnaissance in the North Sea; Flight Sub-Lieut. William F. Cleghorn, H. M. S. Conquest, severely wounded in the jaw on April 25, 1916; Flight Sub-Lieut. A. J. Boddy, killed in action on the North Sea, April 27, 1916; Flight Sub-Lieut. Thomas R. Liddle, killed as the result of a flying accident, at Chingford, April 30, 1916; Flight Sub-Lieut. K. M. VanAllan, missing on May 4, 1916, after an attack on an enemy aerodrome; Flight Sub-Lieut. A. T. N. Cowley, prisoner of war in Germany.

THE SCENE OF THE BATTLE

This map shows the approximate scene of the battle of The Horn and the probable course of it. "A" represents the course of the German fleet until encountered by the British cruising squadron "B," with which it engaged until the approach of the British Grand Fleet, when the remaining German ships prudently withdrew and escaped to their base. The fact that the Germans were accompanied by Zeppelins and that the British report remarks on the "low visibility" of their ships, indicates that the German fleet kept within cover of a low lying fog-bank near the Danish shore, and fought their guns under the direction of their Zeppelins, which in the clear air above could see the British fleet and wireless the range.

COMPARATIVE LOSSES

BRITISH.	No.	Tonnage	Men	GERMAN.	No.	Tonnage	Men
Battleships	0	.....	.....	Battleships	2	48,620	2,146
Battle Cruisers	3	62,000	2,530	Battle Cruisers	1	17,000	900
Cruisers	3	41,700	2,258	Cruisers	3	25,697	1,485
Destroyers	8	7,600	960	Destroyers	6	5,700	720

These figures are made up from such official claims of both sides as are not actually contradicted by the other. Britain, for instance, claims to have sunk two German Dreadnoughts, and one battle cruiser. Germany admits only one battleship, and no battle cruisers, but has issued no official denial of British claims.

ANOTHER GERMAN CRUISER GONE

YMUIDON, Holland, via London, June 3.—Three officers, three petty officers and twelve sailors of the crew of the new small German cruiser Elbing, which was lost in the Jutland battle, have been landed here. One officer said that the Elbing sank after she was rammed by another German vessel, which rescued the remainder of the crew. Another maintained that the Elbing was blown up by the heavy firing of her own guns. One of the Elbing's boats containing some of her crew and some British officers who were picked up by the trawler Bertha are being brought here.

The loss of the Elbing is not mentioned in either the British or German official accounts of the battle, but the British Admiralty statement says that a "light German cruiser" was sunk.

The Elbing does not appear in available naval lists.

TWO MORE LOSSES REPORTED

Special Star Cable by United Press.

LONDON, June 2.—Unofficial reports from the great battle in the North Sea today brought word of the sinking of two additional warships, one a British destroyer, and the other a small German cruiser.

The British destroyer Shark is reported to have been sunk, increasing the number of English ships lost to fifteen.

Survivors from the Shark have been landed at Hull by a Dutch ship. They said the destroyer acted as a decoy for the British fleet.

Forty warships took part in the engagement.

With reports of these additional losses also came despatches, telling how bodies of hundreds of German and British sailors were seen floating in the water near the scene of the engagement by neutral ships which arrived during Wednesday and Thursday.

EYE-WITNESSES DESCRIBE BATTLE OF NAVAL GIANTS

By Canadian Press.

COPENHAGEN, via London, June 3.—The captain of the Danish steamer Naesborg gives the following account of the sea fight: "When the count of Utsire, ninety-five miles west Naesborg was h[illegible]im, on the north- of Cape Hanstholm, a few small west coast of Jutland, steamed, pursued British warships appe[illegible] suddenly the by the German fleet, [illegible] and steam- British warships turned [illegible]led. A violent fight com[illegible] menced. The sky seemed filled with smoke and the sea was in a state of uproar.

"Shells fell around my steamer although we were several miles away.

"During the fight the cannonading was so violent that our crew could not stand on deck. We saw several large warships sunk but I am unable to say whether they were British or German.

"At last the German fleet withdrew southward, pursued by the British while several more British warships appeared coming from the westward. The German fleet was divided into two parts, one of which escaped. The fate of the other fleet I do not know."

YMUIDEN, Holland, via London, June 3.—A graphic description of the great naval battle off the coast of Jutland was given today by Captain Thomas Punt, of the British trawler John Brown, which was engaged in taking soundings in the vicinity of the fight.

Captain Punt said: "The battle began at 5:15 p.m. Wednesday and lasted until 11 o'clock at night. It extended over an area reaching from longitude 56.8, latitude 6.25 to longitude 55.50, latitude 5.50. (These measurements place the scene of the battle about fifty miles due west of The Horn running northward to the Little Fisher Bank.)

"At two o'clock on Wednesday afternoon I saw a great fleet of fifty ships of different kinds, apparently German, cruising from the southeast to the northeast. Two hours later another great fleet, evidently British, appeared suddenly from the northeast and obviously attempted to cut off the retreat of the Germans. The weather was misty, making it difficult to distinguish the outlines of the ships.

"At 4:15 p.m. the first gunshot came from about two miles away. Fifteen minutes later there were more shots and in a few moments there was constant and heavy firing. Many sailing ships passed through the firing line.

"The British ships did not seem to be of as heavy tonnage as the Germans. They were reinforced by smaller vessels which I observed to come up as it was getting darker. The German fleet then began to retire and as they were withdrawing I saw two big columns of smoke, evi-

CANADIAN FORCES REACH TOTAL OF 332,364 JUNE 1

OTTAWA, June 3.—With one military district—Alberta—to hear from, the total enlistments to the Canadian forces up to June 1 were 332,364.

Between May 15 and June 1, enrollments were 5,724, of which No. 1 district, London, contributed 604, No. 2, Toronto, 1,841; No. 3, Ottawa-Kingston, 726; No. 4, Montreal, 534; No. 5, Quebec, 116; No. 6, Maritime Provinces, 355; No. 10, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, 1,763, and No. 11, British Columbia, 781.

The Toronto division heads the total list with 75,341 enlistments since the war began, while Manitoba and Saskatchewan come second with 68,746. Alberta is third, but as the fortnightly returns are not yet in the exact figure cannot be given.

Distinguished Public Careers of the Men Honored by His Majesty

SIR PIERRE LEBLANC, K. C. M. G.

Sir Pierre Evariste LeBlanc, K. C. M. G., has been Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Quebec since February 9, 1915. Born at St. Martin, Laval County, on August 10, 1853, he was educated at the Jacques Cartier Normal School in Montreal, and was for several years a teacher. He was called to the Bar in 1879 and practised in Montreal. Elected to the Legislature as a Conservative at a bye-election in 1882, but was unseated. He was defeated at the new election in 1883, second election in 1884 and also in 1886. Being again unseated he was re-elected in 1888 and again in 1890, 1892, 1897, 1900 and 1904. In 1908 he was defeated by four votes. He was Speaker of the Assembly under the De Boucherville, Taillon and Flynn Governments.

SIR JAMES LOUGHEED, K.C.M.G.

Sir James A. Lougheed, K.C.M.G., is the Government leader in the Senate and has been a member of the Borden Cabinet, as a minister without portfolio, since its formation in October, 1911. Born at Brampton, Ont., in 1854, he practised law first in Toronto and after 1883 in Calgary, Alta. He was made a Queen's Counsel by the Dominion Government and called to the Senate in 1889. When Sir Mackenzie Bowell retired from the leadership of the Conservative party in the Senate, during the session of 1906-07, Senator Lougheed was chosen to succeed him, and he has acted in that capacity ever since.

Born at Antigonish, N.S., in 1848, he was educated at Acadia College, and called to the Bar in 1871, becoming a Queen's Counsel in 1881. He was standing counsel in Nova Scotia for the Dominion Government for eight years. He was appointed on a commission to revise the Statutes of Canada in 1883, and to revise the statutes of Nova Scotia in 1898. In 1889 he was appointed a Judge in Equity of the Supreme Court and of the Court for Divorce in Nova Scotia.

SIR PIERRE LANDRY.

Sir Pierre Armand Landry is Chief Justice of the King's Bench Division of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick. Born in 1846, he was educated at St. Joseph's College, and Laval University, and was called to the Bar in 1870. He was a member of the New Brunswick Legislature from 1870 to 1874, and again from 1878 to 1883. He was Chief Commissioner of Public Works from 1878 to 1882; Provincial Secretary from 1882 to 1883; and a member of the House of Commons for seven years. In 1893 he was appointed a Judge of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick.

Lalonde-Jackson

Miss Ada Helen Jackson, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jackson was married to Mr. Emile Alphonse Lalonde, third son of Mr. and Mrs. Damien Lalonde, at eight o'clock this morning in the Church of Notre Dame de Grace which was effectively decorated for the occasion with tall palms massed at the chancel railing, and white lilacs arranged on the altar. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Turcotte, and during the service solos were rendered by Miss Germaine Joubert and Mr. Blanchard. The bride wore a navy blue taffeta costume with hat of grey straw and crepe de chine trimmed with an old rose bird, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. She was given away by her father, and was attended by Mrs. J. A. Jessup as matron of honor, who wore a costume of tete de negre taffeta, and a leghorn hat with trimmings of French flowers, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The bridegroom was attended by his father. The ceremony was followed by a reception and a buffet breakfast at the residence of the bride's parents, 258 Old Orchard avenue, where white lilacs, and pink and white peonies formed the floral decorations, a wedding bell of lilacs being arranged over the table in the dining room. Mr. and Mrs. Lalonde later left for a motor trip in the United States before taking up their residence at 1168 Lajoie avenue, Outremont. Going away the bride wore a Palm Beach suit, and a brown sailor hat with a mustard-colored bird.

Dobson-Fortier

St. Andrew's Church, Westmount, will be the scene of a quiet wedding this evening, when Miss Aimee Fortier, daughter of Mr. Joseph Fortier, will be married to Mr. Anthony Dobson, of Toronto. The Rev. Dr. W. J. Clark will perform the ceremony at half past seven o'clock. Miss Fortier will be given away by her father, and attended by her cousin, Miss Edith Rose as bridesmaid, and her brother, Mr. Robert Fortier, will be best man. At the conclusion of the service Mr. Dobson and his bride will leave for a trip to New York and Atlantic City.

A roof garden party in honor of the graduating class of the High School for Girls will be given by the Alumnae Society on Wednesday afternoon, June 7.

Kilgour-Eager

At Morrisburg, Ont., Wednesday, in St. James Church, Mary Raymond, eldest daughter of Mr. William Eager, was married to Mr. Ralph Wilson Kilgour, only son of Mrs. William Kilgour, of Beauharnois, Que. C. O. Carson officiating. T... who was given away by ... wore a gown of whi... chiffon over palest ... ming of silver ... shower bouquet ... of the valley. Her veil was of tulle, arranged in a cap effect caught with orange blossoms. The bridesmaid, Miss Ruth Eager, sister of the bride, wore a gown of maize taffeta and a leghorn hat with wreath of yellow rose buds and carried marguerites. Mr. R. Cecil Kilgour, cousin of the bridegroom, was best man and the ushers were Mr. Arthur Parrish, of Brockville, and Mr. George H. Challis, of Ottawa. A reception was held at the home of the bride's father. Mrs. Breckenridge, grandmother of the bride, receiving in a gown of embroidered chiffon over black satin, with touches of pink in her hat and wearing a corsage bouquet of pink sweet peas. Mrs. William Kilgour, mother of the bridegroom wore black satin, and carried mauve sweet peas. Mr. and Mrs. Kilgour left later for New York and Atlantic City, the bride travelling in a green silk suit and a black hat with white wings.

Handkerchief Shower

A pleasant social event yesterday afternoon was a handkerchief shower given by Mrs. J. M. H. Robertson, 483 Roslyn avenue, Westmount, for Miss Ethel Perrigo, whose marriage to Lieut. E. Carleton Brown, takes place this month. The drawing room was prettily decorated with pink sweet peas and snap dragon, and the tea table was arranged with a silver basket filled with white lilac and sweetheart roses. Miss Mabel Perrigo poured tea; Miss Sadie Robertson cut the ices; and assisting in serving were Mrs. J. O. Otto, Mrs. T. H. Taylor, Miss Perrigo, Miss Beryl Leger and Miss Clare Fauteux.

Saville-Buchanan

At the Church of St. James the Apostle at half-past five o'clock yesterday afternoon, Miss Valerie Louise Bancroft Buchanan, Youngest daughter of Mr. Reginald H. Buchanan, was married to Mr. Richard Getchell Saville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Saville, of Boston, Mass. The Rev. G. Abbott-Smith, D. D., was the officiating clergyman. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of ivory white taffeta and a tulle veil arranged with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white lilacs and orchids. She also wore a pearl necklet, and an emerald and diamond ring, the gifts of the bridegroom. There were two bridesmaids, Miss Alice Frances Cross, who wore a pale pink gown, and Miss Edith Cushing in a gown of apple leaf green. Their hats were of black lace and each carried mauve lilacs and ophelia roses. Mr. C. D. Fraser was best man, and Mr. R. J. Donald and Mr. Eric Binks were the ushers. Upon their return from their honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Saville will reside at the Pine avenue apartments. Going away the bride wore a pearl grey serge costume and a grey hat to match.

Charlton-Clapin

A pretty wedding took place this morning in St. Viateur Church, Outremont, when Miss Gabrielle Clapin, daughter of Mr. Leopold Clapin, was married to Mr. Reginald E. Charlton. The Rev. Father Clapin, uncle of the bride, officiated. The bride was given away by her father, and Mr. E. W. Charlton acted as witness for his son. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Charlton left for a two months' trip in the Maritime Provinces.

Brown-Harvey

The marriage of Miss A. Harvey Hodgson to Mr. S. Crozier Brown was quietly celebrated, on June 2. The Rev. Hugh Pedley, of Emmanuel Church, performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Brown left for New York and Atlantic City.

Ross-d'Airenburg

The marriage has taken place in the Chapel Royal, Savoy, London, of Mr. A. Ross Owen, son of Mr. A. Wallace Owen, of Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, to Olive, daughter of the late Arthur d'Airenburg, of London.

Approaching Marriages.

The marriage of Miss Florence Mattison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mattinson, Tupper street, to Mr. John Wilbert Henderson, Montreal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Henderson, Napanee, Ont., will take place quietly in St. Martin's Church on Tuesday June 6th.

The marriage of Miss Eudora Boucher, eldest daughter of Mr. C. C. Boucher of Montreal, to Mr. S. Godin, Jr., of Ste. Anne de Bellevue, will take place in Montreal on Monday, June 12.

The marriage of Miss Winnifred Turner to Mr. Edward Danaher has been arranged to take place very quietly on Wednesday, June 7.

Engagements Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Harry Stone announce the engagement of their youngest daughter, Charlotte Gladys, to Mr. Harold Drummond Laurie, of Montreal, son of the late Justus A. Laurie, and of Mrs. Laurie, of Toronto. The marriage will take place quietly, late in June.

Mrs. C. P. Thayer, 188 Broadway, Lachine, Que., announces the engagement of her sister, Miss Hazel K. Adams, youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Adams, formerly of Three Rivers, Quebec, to Mr. William S. Howard, of Sherbrooke, Que., son of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Howard. The wedding will take place very quietly the latter part of June.

Social and Personal.

A quiet house wedding will take place at the residence of Mr. Amos J. Lawrence, 341 Oxford avenue, at half-past four o'clock this afternoon when the marriage will be celebrated of his daughter, Miss Marguerite Burns Lawrence, and Mr. Walter Scroggie Sutherland, son of the late Dr. Walter Sutherland of Valleyfield. The Rev. Dr. Clark, of St. Andrew's Church, Westmount, will be the officiating clergyman. The bride, who will be given away by her father, will be unattended. She will wear her travelling suit of navy blue silk with hat to match. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. Sutherland and his bride will leave for a trip on the Hudson River to New York.

Mr. George W. Shefler has left for New York where he will stay a few days and then go to Atlantic City for the summer months.

Mrs. Alfred Sargent, of 770 Sherbrooke street West is opening her country home "Rocklands," at Ste. Rose for the summer.

Special Notice.

Mr. George W. Shefler, before leaving for Atlantic City, wishes to thank his pupils and friends for their patronage and appreciation of his work during the past season, 1915-1916, and to inform them that the Studio will be closed for the summer months.

The studio will be renovated for the coming season, and will re-open early in September, as the most elaborate modern studio in Canada. Ritz Dancing Studio, Montreal's Fashionable Dancing School.

Help Us Save the Babies this Summer

Every Summer, thousands of innocent little ones die in the poorer quarters of Montreal, and the great majority of these deaths is directly attributable to impure milk and improper feeding.

THE IVERLEY SETTLEMENT MILK DEPOT

is doing its best to combat this terrible infant mortality in the Richmond Square district by the supplying of pure milk and ice from the Milk Depot and by excellent classes in hygienics, etc.

Out of 105 Babies Last Year Not One Died!

But we are sadly handicapped by lack of funds to carry on this good work as extensively as we could wish.

We appeal confidently to the generosity of the people of Montreal to help us.

Tuesday June 6th will be a TAG DAY

REBELLION HAS BROUGHT HOME RULE NEARER

All Parties More Tolerant Now, Says T. P. O'Connor — Has been Demonstrated that Nine-tenths of Irish People are Loyal

(Copyright, 1916, by Central News.)

Special Star Cable by T. P. O'Connor.

LONDON, June 3.—Seated in his room in the Hotel Metropole, which he annexed some time ago for the Central Munitions' office, David Lloyd George has spent hours daily hearing all sections of Irish opinion. He invited the attendance of all the Irish leaders without distinction, listened to all, kept his temper with angelic patience, smiled off difficulty and turned angry remonstrances with a soft word. In short he never displayed with greater effect his immense ability as a negotiator.

He also steadily maintained the position of supreme negotiator, acting as go-between and seeing the different parties separately, not together. This method avoided all friction, personal and political, has kept all parties comparatively free and has avoided exasperating haggling.

ALL SHOWED GOOD SPIRIT.

Mr. Lloyd George has been helped also by the excellent spirit in which nearly all the different groups met him. The determination to reach a settlement is equally keen in nearly all sections. This was shown by the willingness of all sides to make concessions. Ulster to the South's national demand, and Southern Ireland to Ulster's present objections to enter a Home Rule Parliament.

The final basis of an agreement is not yet reached, and especially as it is in the hands, not of the Irish leaders, but of Mr. Lloyd George, who will make proposals on behalf and responsibility of the Government. Apart from the fact that Mr. Lloyd George has not yet completed his proposals, the Cabinet cannot discuss or accept them till next week.

A further cause of the delay will be the necessity that the Irish leaders consult their followers before accepting Mr. Lloyd George's proposals, and these consultations may not begin till the Whitsuntide holidays, but settlement is certain.

MAY RESULT IN HOME RULE.

It would be just like the tragic irony of Irish history if the last insane and ghastly attempt to defeat Home Rule was to result in the advent of Home Rule. Undoubtedly the present feeling in England, except among the incurable irreconcilables, is to approach the Irish question in a new spirit and to push forward the settlement of Ireland on lines which will be acceptable to the Nationalists and the Unionists.

It is hard to say exactly how this spirit arose, but the spirit exists. It was partly due, of course, to the fact that the supporters of Sir Edward Carson, both in military and civil life, were brought up with a shock to the results of their policy of gunrunning and organized rebellion in Ireland. It is partly due to the reaction from the severity with which the rebellion in Ireland was put down.

Our papers have contained serious and disturbing cablegrams from America indicating the strong feeling of condemnation which these executions have caused among general American opinion.

ENGLISH LIBERALS PROTESTED

I may say that this feeling is not confined to America nor to Ireland. The first people to protest against the continuance of these executions were the English Liberal press, the Daily News, the Daily Chronicle, and more than all, the Manchester Guardian. I understand that some of the Unionist organs, though they spoke with more caution, had their misgivings.

The curious transformation of Irish opinion was that when first these lunatics seemed not only to imperil, but to destroy all chance of Ireland getting Home Rule, there was a feeling of such fierce revolt against them that no punishment was too severe for them. In a few days' time all this was changed, while during the insurrections period nine-tenths of Ireland were fierce anti-Sinn Feiners, it looked as if nine-tenths of them would be in sympathy at least with the Sinn Fein element.

This feeling runs very strong at the present moment, and undoubtedly it is a serious obstacle to a calm consideration of the manner in which the Irish cause is to be rescued from the ashes to which these misled men, organized by subsidized German agents, had reduced the cause.

GOLDEN MOMENT FOR REFORM.

In London the feeling of course is a great deal less swayed by these natural and tempestuous emotions, and from almost the first moment after the suppression of the rebellion the feeling seemed to rise spontaneously and almost universally among men of serious thought and purpose, that this was the golden moment for putting an end to the disastrous state of things in Ireland.

Mr. Asquith's visit to Dublin came as a surprise to nearly every member of the House of Commons, though hints had been given the day before to some of the Irish leaders. The question at once arose whether Mr. Asquith had gone to Ireland simply for the purpose of making inquiries, and whether with that extraordinary power of getting to the kernel of a subject which he so often displays, he will be able to come back with an entirely new view of Dublin Castle machinery and a new policy of Irish reconstruction.

It was confidently hoped that he would not have a word to say for Dublin Castle; indeed one result of the Sinn Fein movement and of the practical impotence of the British Government to deal with it was the final extinction of all faith, practically in almost all quarters, in Dublin Castle.

ALL READY FOR DEAL.

It was thought, however, by those who knew Mr. Asquith best that his visit to Dublin had a much more serious purpose and that it was regarded as the first move in a great and vast political game.

The moment this hint was given the movement for an arrangement spread like wildfire. I took the trouble one evening of going to a big public dinner and afterward to a big reception at the Russian Embassy for the members of the Imperial Duma, for the purpose of sounding opinion. I spoke to all sorts and conditions of politicians, Tories as well as Liberals, and I found that the opinion in favor of a deal was universal. The curious thing was that man after man repeated the same words, "This is the golden moment."

How far will these efforts succeed? It is certain that the Irish position has undergone an entire transformation since the war and a second transformation since the Sinn Fein rebellion.

OLD SUSPICION GONE.

The splendid response which Ireland made on the whole to the recruiting campaign, the consistent and courageous stand which Mr. Redmond has made for the cause of the Allies, above all the incomparable bravery of the Irish soldiers in the various battlefields, almost obliterated that old feeling of suspicion against Ireland which has been the chief weapon of the enemies of Home Rule.

Though the Orange newspapers in Ulster still maintain their old rancorous attitude though some of their leaders in Parliament remained and still remain incorrigible, this phenomena had produced a profound impression on the sane and moderate section of even the Tory party.

The very day that Mr. Redmond made his great speech in favor of the Allies, Tory after Tory came up to me to say that he could never again feel about the question of Home Rule as he had before the war.

REVEALED FRIENDSHIP.

Then came the Sinn Fein movement and once more the fact that nine-tenths of the people of Ireland remained outside the movement and hostile to it added conviction to the idea that the old suspicion of an irreconcilable hostility must disappear. The Sinn Fein insurrection indeed might be described as important, not because it revealed the hostility, but because it revealed the friendship of the Irish people to the cause of the Allies. It was in fact a revelation of that new liberated and prosperous Ireland which the movement of Butt and Parnell has created, and which of course in its essence is anti-revolutionary.

The attitude on the other hand, of the Nationalist toward the Organemen, has also undergone some modification. It became clear at the very opening of the war that any attempt to settle the question of Ireland, either in Ulster or the South, by means of arms had become an impossibility. Mr. Asquith, in his speech at the Mansion House in the very early days of the war, laid down the doctrine that force could not be used against either one or the other. That declaration stands, and it has been confirmed by events.

ARE MORE TOLERANT.

The result of it is that the same Nationalists now approach the question of Ulster much more tolerantly. They were willing, when the Home Rule Bill was under discussion, to let four counties of Ulster stand out. The historic conference at Buckingham Palace broke down on the question whether to these four counties should be added Fermanagh and Tyrone.

These two counties were in some respects the crux of the whole difficulty, largely because the forces of Orangism and Nationalism were so near in political strength, and because, as a natural consequence, feeling ran more high there than elsewhere.

BOTH FANATICAL.

The Orangemen were fanatical; the Nationalists were fanatical. The difficulty of Edward Carson was to give up these fanatical supporters; the difficulty of Mr. Redmond was to accept the principle that a Nationalist majority in these two counties should not be allowed the same quality of right as in the Orange counties to decide their future fate.

Various conferences were proposed by the members at the conference, and on the whole there was a disposition to make a distinction between these two counties and the other four counties of Ulster, and to give them special treatment in the form of an interregnum or something of that kind.

This close approach to a compromise recurs to my mind at a time when the vastly larger issues of the war place such a difference of opinion in a different perspective, and when the fate of civilization and liberty is at stake such differences appear much less important. I cannot yet say how all these things will end, but I retain the confident belief that we are nearing the end of the Irish trouble.

GERMANS PRAYED FOR SEA BATTLE, SAYS NEWSPAPERS

COUNTRY ORDERED TO CELEBRATE

Papers Describe Action in North Sea as Blow to Britain

By Canadian Press.

AMSTERDAM, via London, June 3.—The Berlin newspapers, commenting on the naval battle off Jutland, declare that the German navy longed fervently for this sea battle fo rtwenty-two months. Admiral von Hofe describes the course of the battle in the following manner:

"The German High Sea fleet was steaming northward with its scouts pushed forward in all directions when the British High Seas fleet appeared from the direction of Scotland in full strength, and confident that it was about to gain the mastery of the North Sea. Great Britain's Allies had clearly pointed out the inadequacy of her blockade and demanded stronger pressure.

"Great Britain' sfirst step was to send out the fleet, but, as in the action of January, 1915, German skill and accurate firing stood the test in squadron action against the heavy calibre guns of the British dreadnoughts.

"The German torpedo flotillas first successfully attacked the British ships of the line. Several engagements took place and the British used their superiority in an attempt to cut off the retreat of the Germans to the south with their fastest and strongest armed units.

They also attacked continuously during the night by sudden dashes of their torpedo flotillas. That the German torpedo defenses worked splendidly is shown by the heavy losses incurred by the British flotilla."

ESTIMATE OF LOSSES.

Captain von Kuhl Jetter, writing in the Lokal Anzeiger, estimates the total German losses at 23,000 tons and the British losses at 133,000 tons, with the loss in big ships at 13,000 tons for the Germans and 103,000 for the British.

"Great Britain, since the beginning of the war," says Captain Jetter, "has used her older vessels in the distant theatres of the war and has also lost a number of them. This permits the conclusion that the Home Fleet was composed of only the latest and best ships. The German sailors have never under-estimated the British fleet but have considered it the best of all except the Germans. Today we know that we can accomplish more than the British and that Great Britain is not what she believed herself to be—ruler of the seas."

The Tageblatt comments briefly that "The British losses represent no decisive factor but a severe blow."

GERMAN PRESS COMMENT.

BERLIN, June 2, via London, June 3.—The German press comments extensively on the battle in the North Sea. Capt. Persius, naval expert of the Tageblatt, says:

"Our High Seas fleet in open battle and without any support of coast fortifications gave a victorious battle to the mightiest fleet in the world. The whole of Germany thanks the commander-in-chief and the commanders and crews. Our losses were extraordinarily small, while England's were extraordinarily large."

The Tageszeitung says: "Our fleet has resisted brilliantly in this battle —the greatest which has been fought since the invention of steel plated armor—and our flag has been covered with everlasting glory."

In the Reichstag, Dr. Johannes Kaempf, president of the Chamber, in referring to the battle, said that though Germany's losses had been heavy those of Great Britain had been heavier. Dr. Kaempf expressed the nation's gratitude to the navy.

An army order was issued today commanding that flags be raised throughout the city and a holiday declared in the schools in celebration of what is claimed as a German naval victory.

WANTS EXPERTS TO REPORT UPON ALL CIVIC DEPT'S

Controller Villeneuve Will Present Motion to This Effect When Board of Control Meets Monday—Suggestions for Cutting Expenses Should Come from Impersonal Judges

Controller Villeneuve announces that when the Board of Control meets on Monday he will present a motion asking that experts be appointed to go over all the departments and report how they can be remodelled.

"I have already had a motion adopted by the Board of Control," said Controller Villeneuve "notifying all the permanent employes of the corporation that their services will not be required after December 30 next. The idea of the new motion, which I shall make on Monday, is to have a report from experts as to just what employes are really needed in the various departments. When this is known, it will not be difficult for the controllers to engage the exact number of employes required to look after the city's affairs. Some days ago I presented a motion in the Board of Control suggesting that experts probe into the administration of the public works department and ascertain what reforms could be brought about there. Fault was found with this motion because it did not embrace all the departments. I have come to the decision to do away with this opposition; and so my motion on Monday will embrace the entire administration."

IMPERSONAL ADVICE.

Going into further details Controller Villeneuve said that not only did he desire the experts should go into the question of congestion of pay lists, but that he would like advice from them on other matters concerning the administration. He said it would be but little use asking the heads of departments to send in reports showing what number of employes they did not need. It was not to be expected that these heads would like suggesting any marked reduction in their staffs. The value of expert advice would be in that it would have no personal interest whatever.

Moreover, it was well known that there were officials, drawing good salaries at the City Hall, who spent but a meagre portion of their time in the city's service. The reorganization of the departments must embrace the heads as well as the rank and file of the employes.

"In addition to the loss that we are suffering from having too many employes," continued Mr. Villeneuve, "we are losing an immense sum every year by not having proper competition for our public works. For some years past the custom has been in vogue at the City Hall of having a great deal of the permanent paving work, sewage, etc., done by what is termed 'day' work.

THE WRONG PLAN.

"I do not think this 'day' work business is working to the city's advantage. By the scheme it is possible to give a great many men civic employment, it is true; but the work is dragged out to such lengths that the final cost is much greater than it would be if contractors had it to do. I have facts, which I intend submitting to the Board of Control, which will prove this to the hilt. Now I have no axes to grind for any contractor; but I do say that it is most unbusiness-like for the city to undertake works without calling for tenders and seeing what contractors will do it for. The city can send in tenders with contractors; and if the tender is the lowest, of course, the work will go to it. The trouble is, and I will prove it, that even when the city has sent in low tenders, and been awarded contracts, it has frequently not kept within the bounds of its tender, with the result that additional sums have had to be voted. The final cost, in consequence, has been immensely higher than what was contemplated. Now it needs no extended argument to show that such a system of handling work is radically wrong. I have also proof that, in more than one instance, where 'day' work has been adopted, that such work has been done in a most slipshod manner. If it is just to reduce expenditure, by cutting the number of employes, it is also just to stop other avenues of useless expenditure."

KELLY TO KNOW MONDAY IF HE MUST BE TRIED

Special to The Montreal Star.

WINNIPEG, June 3.—Thomas Kelly, millionaire contractor, charged with stealing $1,650,000 in the construction of the Parliament Buildings, will know on Monday whether he must stand trial on the five indictments. Arguments, which have consumed most of the week, were concluded yesterday afternoon, and the prisoner was taken back to his cell.

Judge Prendergast said he would decide the point of law on Monday morning. Lawyers who have crowded the court-room during the discussions of Messrs. Dewart and Anderson, for the defence, and Bonnar, Coyle and Craig, for the Crown, suggest that Kelly will win three and lose two counts. In other words, they think he must go to trial on the charge of perjury and upon the chief count of theft.

The day was confined largely to the arguments for the Crown, in which the contention was put forth that every count was sufficient and that every detail of Kelly's extradition was regular. The court's view was suggested when he said, in reply to the statement by the Crown that the indictment sets forth in sufficient detail what kind of property it is charged Kelly stole, "Now, does the indictment say that?" At this ray of sunshine the gray face of the prisoner was wreathed in smiles.

The count alleging that Kelly both stole and received moneys, etc.; the one charging him, with his sons, with conspiracy, and that charging that he stole money, property or bonds, etc., are those which lawyers think will be declared void.

The first week of the big trial closes with indications that the real issue may be reached next week. A. J. Andrews, chief counsel for the ex-Minister, informed the court that they would be ready for trial on Monday, and that they had had all the time they required to examine the jury panel. As a matter of fact, both sides have been busy this week sending men into the province to look closely into each of the one hundred individuals composing the jury panel.

NEW POINT RAISED IN TRAMWAYS' SUIT

Is it an inexcusable fault on the part of the Tramways Company to have reduced the number of its cars on a given street?

This is the question which the courts will have to decide in a case which is about to open. Romeo Savignac, a repair workman, employed by the company, claims $21,000 for the loss of both legs. He was on board the repair waggon, rushing to respond to a call, when the waggon was struck by a street car while crossing St. Denis street at Dorchester street. He claims that the street car was going at a greater speed than that allowed by law; that this greater speed was directly attributable to the fact that the company had reduced the number of cars operating on St Denis street, and in order to maintain the service had to run the remaining cars with greater frequency — hence greater speed. Thence the alleged inexcusable fault and negligence. Mr. Justic Bruneau granted Savignac's permission, asking authorization to sue.

DESPERATE STRUGGLE IS STAGED AT VERDUN TO STOP ALLIED OFFENSIVE

Battle Reached Point of Unprecedented Fury During Last 48 Hours—Germans Try to Mass Troops on Right Bank of Meuse Supported by Guns

By Canadian Press.

PARIS, June 3.—The battle of Verdun reached a point of unprecedented violence in the last forty-eight hours. The Germans made a formidable effort to mass reinforcements on the right bank of the Meuse supported by a great number of heavy pieces drawn from other fronts.

The concentration of the German forces is taken here to indicate a supreme attempt to bring the long drawn out attack on the fortress to a successful issue and to prevent a general offensive by the Allies. Despite the intensity of the attack, involving enormous losses, the French official accounts show that the main lines are not essentially changed. The furthest point reached by the Germans was houses on the outskirts of Damloup.

The main portion of the town is strongly held by the French.

FIERCE FIGHT GOING ON.

ROME, via London, June 3.—An intense and desperate struggle between the Austrians and Italians is proceeding in the southern part of the Asvalley, according to an official nouncement by the Italian War Office. The statement follows:

An intense and desperate struggle is taking place along our position south of the Assa valley, as far as Asiago. Our troops are still masters of the lower plateau of Monte Cengeo where they are resisting vigorous and incessant infantry attacks supported by a bombardment of extreme violence.

"On the part of our front parallel with Asiago and Gallio on the Valdi-Campomuto road, yesterday our counter offensive, although seriously impeded by the artillery fire of the enemy, enabled us to make some progress.

"The situation is unchanged in the Suzano valley. On the Isonzo front there is artillery activity on the heights northwest of Norizoa in the Monfalcone sector. The enemy's movements in the neighborhood of the Oveladega railroad station have been hindered by our artillery fire."

GERMANS CAPTURE DITCH.

PARIS, June 3.—In the course of repeated and violent attacks last night on Fort Vaux, on the Verdun front, east of the Meuse, the Germans penetrated a deep ditch north of the main French position. The interior of the works, the War Office announcement of today says, is still held by the French.

Except for this gain, the statement says, the Germans were repulsed with heavy losses.

SIR PIERRE LEBLANC CHEERED IN THEATRE

The present Lieutenant-Governor of the Province will probably ever associate the theatrical with his new title, for it was in a theatre that he received first intimation of the honor of knighthood conferred upon him by The King, and it was in the same theatre that he was first addressed as "Sir Pierre Leblanc." It is also a coincidence that the news should be first conveyed by a newspaperman, who also was first to address him under his new title, for of the public men of the province during his active days none numbered so many friends amongst newspapermen, as P. E. Leblanc.

The Lieutenant Governor occupied a box at the Racey lecture in His Majesty's theatre last night when the news of the new honor was received from Ottawa. A. G. Racey, The Star cartoonist, communicated the news to His Excellency and announced it from the stage. The Lieutenant-Governor was warmly greeted with cheers and responded by acknowledging the greetings from his box.

Maine and New Hampshire being horrible examples on the other side of the fence, practically their entire areas having passed into private ownership.

CANADIAN CLUB HOLDS A LUNCHEON

James Woods of Toronto, Theo. Wardleworth and Frank Pauze, of Montreal, Edmond Dupre of Quebec, George Allan of Winnipeg and other Trade Commissioners received a cordial welcome at today's luncheon by the Canadian Luncheon Club.

George McLaren Brown of the Canadian Pacific, presided in the absence of Sir George Perley, over the gathering of the representatives of the Canadian Government finance and banking industrial interests.

The Commissioners said that they had been greeted with the utmost kindness by the Government and Canadian Exporters Association, whose manager, Mr. F. C. Armstrong had been especially helpful.

They found that British feeling ran most strongly in the direction of encouraging Canadian trade, and the belief was expressed that the British Government, even in the midst of war preoccupations, were preparing to take practical measures to secure the consolidation of the economic interests of the Empire.

THE WEATHER:

PROBABILITIES.

Fresh southerly, shifting to westerly winds; showers and thunderstorms at first, then clearing.

The depression which approached the Great Lakes Thursday night passed yesterday to the northward of Lake Superior. It caused general rains and thunderstorms over Ontario, the latter being especially heavy in the vicinity of Lake Ontario. Elsewhere in Canada the weather has been fine.

Chicago River Flood to Be Considered

OTTAWA, June 3.—The old question of limiting the flow of water from the Chicago river is to be considered at a conference here on Monday. The Senate of the United States has amended the Harbors and Rivers Act so as to restrict the amount to be diverted through the drainage canal, but a big fight is expected before the House of Representatives.

As the amount to be diverted affects vitally the levels of Lake Michigan, Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, the interests of Canadian Navigation are involved. The Hon. J. D. Hazen is having a conference here on Monday with the Dominion Marine Association, the Shipping Federation and the Montreal and Toronto Harbor Boards. Canada is asked to support the bill as amended.

BRITISH CONFIDENCE IN BATTLE FLEET UNSHAKEN BY THIS WEEK'S LOSSES

German Loss Much Heavier Than Report From Berlin Admitted, Including 11 Vessels, One a Dreadnought—Zeppelins Aided Hun Fleet in Making Rapid Retirement to Mine Areas

LONDON, June 3.—The official announcement of the sea fight was given out at the Government's Official Press Bureau at seven o'clock yesterday evening and spread with almost unbelievable speed to the remotest corners of the Kingdom. All the London evening newspapers rushed special editions into the streets, and the presses were still turning out papers at ten o'clock at night, although virtually nothing was being printed beyond the bare official announcements.

As an illustration of the rapidity with which the British newspapers and telegraphs work when a great occasion arises it may be stated that the news of the naval battle reached Cardiff and Edinburgh two minutes after it was given out at the Press Bureau and the newspapers of those two cities were displaying it to the public a few minutes later. In London copies of the official statement appeared as if by magic in shop windows, clubs, theatre lobbies, hotels and restaurants, while huge posters put out by evening newspapers stared the populace in the face at every street corner.

It was remarked how the feeling of confidence in the great British fleet kept its hold on the populace, despite the undeniably heavy losses chronicled in the official accounts of the fight. Everywhere the talk was not so much of the loss as of confidence in the future, and a determination to prepare to carry on the struggle against Germany with increased force.

EIGHT DESTROYERS LOST.

The latest British official statement issued says:

"A further report has been received from the Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Fleet, stating that it has now been ascertained that our total losses in destroyers amount to eight boats in all.

"The Commander-in-Chief also reports that it is now possible to form a closer estimate of the losses and the damage sustained by the enemy fleet.

"One dreadnought battleship of the Kaiser class was blown up in an attack by British destroyers, and another dreadnought battleship of the Kaiser class is believed to have been sunk by gun fire. Of three German battle cruisers, two of which it is believed were the Derfflinger and the Lutzow, one was blown up, another was heavily engaged by our battle fleet and was seen to be disabled and stopping, and the third was observed to be seriously damaged.

"One German light cruiser and six German destroyers were sunk, and at least two more German light cruisers were seen to be disabled.

"Further, repeated hits were observed on three other German battleships that were engaged.

"Finally, a German submarine was rammed and sunk."

Great Britain's admitted loss in tonnage is 114,810 for the six battle-cruisers and cruisers. Germany admitted loss, excluding the tonnage of Wiesbaden, of which vessel there is no record, was 15,712.

The tonnage of the capital ships sunk by the Japanese in their fight with the Russians in the battle of Tsushima in May, 1905, aggregated 93,000. Twenty-one Russian craft were destroyed in this fight, including six battleships and four cruisers. The remainder of the sunken craft comprised coast defense and special service vessels and torpedo boats.

FIRST OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

The first official statement read as follows

"On the afternoon of Wednesday, the 31st of May, a naval engagement took place off the coast of Jutland.

"The British ships on which the brunt of the fighting fell were the battle cruiser fleet, and some cruisers and light cruisers, supported by four fast battleships. Among these the losses were heavy.

"The German battle fleet, aided by low visibility, avoided a prolonged action with our main force.

"As soon as these appeared on the scene the enemy returned to port, though not before receiving severe damage from our battleships.

"The battle cruisers Queen Mary, Indefatigable and Invincible and the cruisers Defence and Black Prince were sunk. The Warrior was disabled and, after being towed for some time had to be abandoned by her crew.

"It is also known that the destroyers Tipperary, Turbulent, Fortune, Sparrowhawk and Ardent were lost, and six others are not yet accounted for. No British battleships or light cruisers were sunk.

"The enemy's losses were serious. At least one battle cruiser was destroyed, and one was severely damaged. One battleship is reported to have been sunk by our destroyers. During the night attack two light cruisers were disabled and probably sunk.

"The exact number of enemy destroyers disposed of during the action cannot be ascertained with any certainty, but must have been large."

EYES OF THE FLEET.

The Daily Express says: "Undoubtedly Zeppelins aided the German fleet to return to port. These monsters of the air have shown themselves of small military value in raids over the British counties. Their real function, however, is to play the part of eyes of the fleet, and the withdrawal of the German ships before the British giants could deliver effective blows, suggests that they were the far-seeing eyes.

"If our losses were three times as great, and the enemy had not lost a ship, maritime superiority would still be ours. We deeply deplore the deaths of so many gallant sailors, but we must accept the episode as the fortunes of war. And we may well be thankful that it can have no sort of effect on the final issue.

"The British fleet will continue to hold the seas, and the best reply to any German boasting concerning Wednesday night's battle will be to give an additional twist to the navy's stranglehold on Germany's overseas commerce."

"Whatever the balance of the loss," says the Daily Telegraph, "we are poorer by precious lives and valuable ships. But let us be on guard against undue pessimism. The outstanding fact is that our battle fleet has not been touched. It remains today in all its magnificent power. It is on that embodiment of might that our fortunes in the last resort depend, and on that our confidence rests today as unfalteringly as it did a week ago."

The Daily Graphic says: "The statement published by the Admiralty is perhaps the worst piece of news that the Government has yet had to communicate to the country. It may be that our cruiser squadron was deliberately trying to draw out the German main fleet and that the arrival of our main fleet was expected. Or it may be that the Germans, with the advantage which the Zeppelins gave them, were able to swoop down upon our too-venturesome vessels. The grave fact is that we lost splendid ships and guns that it will take many long months to replace, and that we have lost forever several thousand gallant seamen.

BRITISH ARE STILL SUPREME.

"All we can note on the other side of the account is the recognition by the Germans of the superiority of our main fleet. As soon as our battleships appeared the Germans withdrew to the shelter of the Kiel Canal. Nor is there the least reason to fear that the terrible losses of Wednesday will leave us with an inadequate margin of naval strength."

Six Zeppelins participated in the naval engagement off the coast of Jutland, Wednesday, according to a despatch from Copenhagen to the Daily Mail. One of the dirigibles, the L-24, was hit several times and badly damaged, the report says, but she was able to reach the Schleswig coast after a narrow escape. Several of her men were wounded and all of her supplies had to be thrown overboard.

A despatch from the same source declares it is generally stated in Berlin that the activity of the German fleet was due to the energetic demands of Emperor William to his brother, Admiral Prince Henry, of Prussia, commander-in-chief of the navy, and Admiral von Capelle, Minister of the Navy, on the Emperor's visit last week to Wilhelmshaven.

LOSS OF BRAVE MEN.

Commenting on the sea fight off Jutland, the Daily Chronicle's naval correspondent, says this morning:

"We must assume that some enterprise was in hand by the British fleet.

"Possibly the Grand Fleet was making a sweep through the North Sea, but of that there is no evidence. More probably there was a desire to test the German position.

"We can hardly suppose that the battle cruiser and other squadrons were intending to enter the Baltic.

"The battle cruiser squadron, which suffered heavily (the press bureau describes it as a fleet), bore the brunt of the fighting with some cruisers. The light cruisers would be the Black Prince and Warrior of the Duke of Edinburgh class, and the Defence of the Minotaur class, all three of which have been sunk. They were supporting four fast battleships.

"The German official mentions the Marlborough, of the Queen Elizabeth class, as having been injured by a torpedo. All these ships were evidently acting in concert.

"The force engaged included battleships of modern class, doubtless dreadnoughts, battle cruisers, other cruisers, light cruisers, destroyers, and, according to the German statement, submarines.

"It is no light thing to lose that noble battle cruiser, the Queen Mary and two other battle cruisers of the Invincible class, the Invincible herself, which was in the Falklands Isles battles, and the Indefatigable.

"We do not know, but it is possible that Sir David Beatty was in command, with his flag on the Lion, though that ship is not mentioned. He is an officer of great experience, and tried service, but presumably his senior officer would have his flag on one of the battleships.

"We have, happily, according to the official statement, lost no battleship, but six vessels are unaccounted for. Presumably these are destroyers additional to the list of those which are officially stated to have been lost. The Tipperary, which has gone down, was a new flotilla leader of 1,850 tons, and doubtless it was her flotilla that was engaged.

GERMAN LOSSES HEAVY.

"We do not know by what agency our ships were sunk, whether by gun fire, submarine, or mine. We carried the war to the enemy's side of the North Sea, and he observed cautious tactics in withdrawing before a superior force.

"The Germans have suffered also, as was to be expected. The battleship Pommern was sunk by our destroyers in a night attack. She was a pre-dreadnought, dating from 1907, and was the same ship which was torpedoed without being sunk in the Baltic in July, 1915.

"There is some evidence that their battle cruiser squadron suffered. According to our official statement at least one battle cruiser has been destroyed and another damaged. They lost another small cruiser additional to the Wiesbaden, as well as many destroyers.

"The German official statement, as might have been expected, does not tell the whole tale of their losses, but they were near to their own waters and had a naval base approach, being protected by mine fields behind them.

"There is no reason for alarm at what has occurred. The public must leave the navy to do its own work in its own way. Unhappily, we have lost many brave officers and men, and that is a reflection more than that caused by the loss of the vessels which have gone down in action."

There were no more celebrated battle-scarred veterans of the British navy than the battle-cruisers Queen Mary, Indefatigable and Invincible. The Queen Mary played a prominent part in the Heligoland Bight engagement under the command of Captain William Hall, who has since been prominent as chief of the Intelligence Division of the Admiralty. The Queen Mary missed the Dogger Bank action by being in drydock for minor repairs. A few weeks ago a large part of her crew came to London on shore leave and upon their departure Captain Hall, their old commander, came to say farewell to them.

The indefatigable and Invincible bore scars from the Falkland Islands encounter, where they had a prominent share in sinking Admiral von Spee's squadron, and from the Dardanelles, where they played a leading part in the bombardment of the straits. They had also been in previous North Sea actions.

WAS KNOWN IN HALIFAX.

HALIFAX, N. S., July 3.—One of the officers lost on H. M. S. Indefatigable was Lieut. de Quetteville, who last August married Phyllis, daughter of W. J. Fisher, Italian consul at Halifax. Mr. Fisher is at present in New York, and his daughter is in a town in Scotland. A cable was received tonight announcing the loss of Lieut. de Quetteville.

A large number of Halifax ladies are married to officers in the British navy, including the daughter of Chief Justice Graham, but so far as could be learned tonight none was in the latest North Sea fight.

GERMANS ARE JUBILANT.

BERLIN, June 3.—The reported victory of the German high sea fleet in the greatest naval battle of the war has electrified even the Germans, who have long been accustomed to digesting good news soberly. The report even temporarily eclipsed the news of the restrictive meat ordinances in popular interest, which is saying a great deal nowadays.

The satisfaction over the reported defeat administered to the British Grand Fleet is particularly intense because the dreadnought at last has been engaged in open battle. It is pointed out here that the sinking of the battleship Warspite, the battle-cruisers Queen Mary and Indefatigable and two armored cruisers of the Achilles class, cost the British navy a loss of more than 100,000 tons, where as the only big German unit lost, the Pommern, was less than 14,000 tons.

Captain Persius, writing in the Tageblatt, says: "The great naval battle, which by many on both sides of the North Sea was expected at the opening of the war, now, after twenty-two months, has been fought out, and the result is of a kind to evoke the liveliest joy and satisfaction throughout Germany. Until further details are available, the only general verdict we can give is that our high sea fleet has achieved success over the English fighting forces. What arm in the first line led to this success, whether artillery or torpedo-boats, or submarines, is at the present writing unknown, but so much is certain, that the English losses were excessively heavy. Ours, in comparison with the success achieved, were extraordinarily slight.

SOME SELF CONGRATULATION.

"The losses of the English fleet include the most modern ships; on the German side the line ship Pommern has been repeatedly reported by the English as lost. The Weisbaden, one of our newest cruisers, is not yet contained in the fleet lists, which were closed at the outbreak of the war. Our High Sea Fleet returned safely to home ports after the worlds mightiest fleet, and that without any assistance from coast fortifications,

"All Germany thanks its leader, all commanders, and crews."

Captain von Kuehlwetter, in the Lokal Anzeiger, says: "At last! We had hardly dared to hope any longer that England's fleet would show itself again in the North Sea, after giving the lie to the boasting wish to dig us out of our holes by keeping their ships in safety while our fleets vainly cruised about the North Sea and found them not. Our fleet was eating its heart out with a burning desire to get at the enemy, and couldn't get at him. It was forced to wait, ever wait, while the army fought glorious battles. What joy, what relief, when at last the enemy's main battle fleet was sighted. What anxious expectations whether they would really stand and fight it out. As in the battle off the Doggerbank, here, too, the odds were on the side of the enemy, but the odds have never frightened us in this war. At last the big brothers of our submarines have been able actively to help.

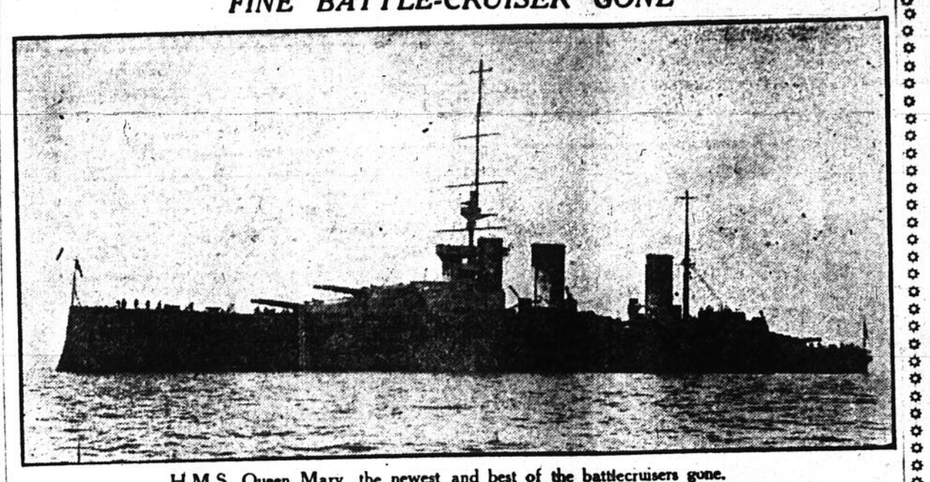

"We will not underrate the enemy. Honorably he fought and held out, but wasn't equal to us. For the first time our High Sea fleet is able to inscribe victory over the English fleet in history's book. We know now that no goal is unattainable by us. The crushing import of this victory does not lie in the ships that England lost, but that it lost the victory. Coronel, the Dardanelles, and the battle of the North Sea are facts that shatter British prestige to bits. Perhaps Great Britain has now begun to realize that its trade men calculations regarding a cheap economic war against a whole people were false. In that case we shall come nearer to the end.

"From full hearts we cheer our fleet which at last could harvest what was sown in so many years of labor."

NEW BIG GUN WAS GERMAN AID SAYS HUDSON MAXIM

NEW YORK, June 3. — Hudson Maxim declared last night that the British people had consistently underrated the strength of the German fleet and had overrated their own strength.

He drew a picture of the German battle line waiting for the attacks of the enemy with an advance guard of Zeppelins, selfpropelling mines and submarines, far ahead of the main line of capital ships, protected by squadrons of cruisers and destroyers.

"Months ago," said Mr. Maxim, "I predicted that the Germans, when they were ready for battle with their main fleet, would attack in some new order, probably in Macedonian phalanx formation, I believed that they would make full use in the battle of the co-operation of every division of the Navy that they could bring to bear.

'For a long time I have been aware that the German navy has been building a formidable type of selfpropelling mine the largest able to carry five hundred pounds of picric acid.

It is more than probable that they waited for the attack of the enemy, launched a great number of these underwater mines, two or three hundred feet apart along the entire line, and then when these mines and the advance guard of submarines had done their work the dreadnoughts went into action. I can imagine that many of the British ships were injured before they were ready to fire a shot.

GERMAN NEW ARTILLERY.

"It is most unfortunate," continued Mr. Maxim, "that the British saw fit to ridicule the story of the German 17-inch gun mounted on their ships. In the first battle in the North Sea the Germans discovered that the ship with an 8-inch rapid-fire gun is ineffective against a ship armed with 11-inch weapons. It should be apparent to anyone that they are not the people to go to sleep on so vital a matter. They have been dreadfully busy in their naval yards in these last two years, I am convinced that it will be found that they armed their ships with bigger guns than any on the British fleet.

"The Zeppelins, which were reported to be used in the battle, could not have done much actual damage. I imagine their duty was undoubtedly to find the British fleet far ahead of their own battle line, and thus warn their own ships and give them time to make proper disposition of every unit of the German fleet from the submarine to the super-dreadnought. If the selfpropelling mines were used, as I have indicated, they must have inflicted great damage."

dently some vessels which had been badly hit. The next movement I observed two large vessels, one of either fleet, burning.

"The British fleet pursued the Germans to longtitude 56.40 and latitude 5.50 when it noticed two torpedo destroyers and three submarines dashing towar dit at full speed, apparently heralding further reinforcements for the Germans. The British ships then drew off."

FULL GERMAN FLEET TOOK PART

AMSTERDAM, via London, June 3.—Advices from Berlin say that Vice-Admiral Scheer, commander of the German battle fleet, was in personal command of the German forces in the battle off Jutland, while the scout division was under the direction of Vice-Admiral Hipper. The German forces consisted of the German High Seas Fleet with dreadnoughts, older ships of the line, battle cruisers, all the light sea forces at present in the North Sea, torpedo destroyers and submarine flotillas.

Admiral Hipper came into contact with the enemy about five in the afternoon, when he engaged a squadron of British battle cruisers and light cruisers. Subsequently the whole fleets on both sides engaged and the fighting lasted until nine in the evening.

Later on in the night there were sharp engagements between torpedo destroyers and cruisers. The leading German vessels sank six modern destroyers.

All reports from the German sea forces which participated in the battle agree on the bravery shown by the enemy in the long battle. The crews of the Grman torpedo boats which were sunk have not been heard from, but the majority of the men on the other vessels which were lost were rescued, despite the unfavorable weather.

ZEPPELINS GAVE AID.

Naval airships gave valuable aid in reconnoitering before and after the battle.

Vice-Admiral Scheer was appointed commander of the German battle fleet in February of this year, succeeding Admiral von Popl, who retired on account of ill health. Admiral Scheer is considered one of the ablest tacticians in the German navy. He was for a long time director of the general marine department at the Admiralty, and also served as chief of staff of the High Seas Fleet, and as commander of a battle squadron. Admiral Hipper was in command of the German squadron, under Admiral Sir David Beatty, off Heligoland in January, 1915. It was in this battle that the German cruiser Bluecher was sunk.

Special Cable by United Press.

LONDON, June 3.—In the face of the heavy losses admitted suffered by the British, England stands grimly determined, and confidence in the fleet remains unshaken.

In clubs, Government offices and from men in every walk of life, comes the expression that while the British suffered the greatest losses, the encounter need not be regarded as a defeat, as the Germans were forced to flee so soon as the full force of England's Grand Fleet could be brought into action.

Facing a superior force, the light cruisers, battle cruisers and destroyers fought gallantly, disposing of ships of their own class, despite the low visibility favoring the Germans. The inference is drawn that the greatest execution was done by the German battleships which were in action from the start, but that once their equals in armament drew near they retreated.

FORTY-FIVE TO ELEVEN.

A Copenhagen despatch declares that the steamer Naesborg, arriving there, reported that the German fleet consisted of forty-five vessels of all classes. In the British fleet there were only eleven vessels at the start of the fight. Later eight English warships of the first line joined in the battle, members of the Naesborg crew declared.

The fact that Zeppelins participated in the battle was confirmed by the Naesborg crew. They reported sighting one Zeppelin. With the arrival of the British reinforcements, the German fleet retired southward. Heavy gun fire was heard far into the night.

The captain of the Naesborg declared that concussion from the firing was so great that members of his ship's crew could not stand on deck, although the Naesborg was several miles from the scene of action. Shells dropped all about the Naesborg.

The action opened, he said, with several German vessels in pursuit of smaller English craft. Within a few minutes British cruisers were sighted headed toward the Germans under full steam. The fleeing British craft then turned, and under heavy fire, steamed into action against the enemy. The warships were first sighted 120 miles off Hanstholm.

GERMAN STORY OF FIGHT.

BERLIN, via Sayville wireless, June 3.—At least, thirty-four great British battleships were engaged in the fight with the German squadron off Skagerrak. This was announced today in a communication from Vice-Admiral Hebbenhause. The report of Admiral Hebbenhause read in the Reichstag declared:

"On the afternoon of May 31 part of our fleet engaged in combat with a very superior British fleet of at least thirty-four modern great battleships.

"The battle went on until 9 p.m. when it became dark and during the night a series of single cruiser and torpedo boat attacks took place. The result of these connected engagements is a very satisfactory success of our fleet against a much stronger adversary.

"It was ascertained that the losses of the British, which were partly confirmed by rescued British sailors are the Warspite. Indefatigable and Queen Mary, two armored cruisers of the Achilles type, one small cruiser and the destroyer flagships Turbulent, Nestor and Alcaster, and further nine or ten destroyers, of whom our battleship Westphalen alone sank six during the night attacks."

The report continued that the German losses included the Pommern and Weisbaden and several torpedo boats.

Admiral Hebbenhause mentions that the cruiser Frauenlob was seen by a torpedo boat to be heeling during the night so that she must be considered lost. The crews and materials of the fleet proved excellent. The navy is in brilliant spirits, the Admiral reported.

WAS IT POLITICAL?

LONDON, June 3.—"We fear that policy which resulted in the loss of so many lives and ships is directly traceable to the influence upon naval strategy of civil alarm on the east coast and the demand of some of our emotional people that the fleet do something spectacular," says the Chronicle.

"In his letter to the mayors of Yarmouth and Lowestoft on May 8 A. J. Balfour, first Lord of the Admiralty, distinctly foreshadowed a change of naval policy. It was not specified, but one gathered that in future we would not wait for enemy warships to make a runaway bombardment of an east coast town and endeavor to intercept them on their return.

"Can it be that the very unsatisfactory battle off the Danish coast is the result? If so, the new policy stands condemned. Exclusively naval considerations would never have induced the commander to send an inferior force almost within sight of the enemy coast, enabling it to be taken in detail by the full force of the enemy before our own big battleships could reach the scene. Nothing but harm can result when naval strategy and the activities are allowed to be overborne by civilian craving for the spectacular or deflected by subtle political influences. Admiral Jellicoe and his staff should be left untrammelled to make their own plans and elaborate their own policy. We can trust them absolutely to do what is right and wise."

SHARK'S CREW MOSTLY PERISHED.

HULL, June 3.—Eighty-five members of the crew of the destroyer Shark are believed to have perished when the vessel was sunk. The Danish steamer Vidar has arrived here with seven survivors. They are believed to be the only men of the Shark's complement of 92 who were saved. The survivors said the Shark was used as a decoy for the British fleet. They were in the water six and a half hours before being picked up.

UNTIRING ENERGY OF EYE-WITNESS HAS ITS REWARD

Special Cable to The Montreal Star from our London Correspondent. (Copyright).

THE MONTREAL STAR OFFICE, 17 Cockspur Street, London, June 3—Sir W. Max Aitken's baronetcy has been accepted as a recognition of his untiring energy as military representative for the Canadian Government here and also for his graphic penmanship as a Canadian eye-witness. The Chronicle remarks:

The Times, Telegraph, Morning Post, Express, and other journals, pay high tribute to Sir Max's ability, energy and versatility. The Daily News says:

"Aitken's steady progress shows what can be made out of cement by the persevering."

Especial pleasure is expressed in the baronetcy conferred on Sir Arthur Pearson, who, after a meteoric newspaper career, completely lost his sight, and has now become the most successful champion of blind soldiers and other Englishmen similarly afflicted.

KNOWN BREEDER OF HORSES DEAD

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 3.—The death of Woodford Clay, 43, of Paris, Ky., breeder of thoroughbreds and widely known among turfmen, was announced today. He died at a hospital here last night after having been stricken with apoplexy. He had raised and raced a number of horses which had gained distinction on American and foreign tracks. Among them were Roamer, which is entered tomorrow in the Kentucky handicap at Douglas Park, Louisville, and Kilmarnock, a notable contender on European race courses.

REV. MR. CLARKE CHAPLAIN.

COBOURG, June 3.—The Rev. W. G. Clarke, pastor of the Bevemanville Methodist Church, and an expresident of the Bay of Quinte Conference, has been appointed chaplain of the new 235th Northumberland and Darborn Battalion, which Lt.-Col. Scobell has been authorized to organize for these counties.

CANNOT POSSIBLY EXERCISE EFFECT ON NAVAL POSITION

By Canadian Press.

LONDON, June 3. — The morning newspapers, while admitting the serious nature of the British loss in the naval battle off Jutland, uniformly insist that the battle cannot possibly have any adverse effect on the naval situation. Most editorials moreover declare that in its ultimate effect the battle must rank as a British victory because the Germans were finally compelled to flee, owing to the arrival of the British main fleet on the scene of action.

"Whatever may be the full story of this engagement," says the naval expert of the Daily News, "it must rank as one of the most considerable of which naval history has any record. The ships engaged belonged to the largest and most modern and powerful types, while the losses in the aggregate enormously exceed those of Trafalgar."

TRYING TO COME OUT.

The Daily Graphic's naval expert says: "It is quite clear that the main German fleet was trying to come out and that our battle cruisers intercepted them and held them up, and that they finally were forced to return to port. In other words Admiral Jellicoe's Grand Fleet came up after our battle cruisers had held the enemy, and the enemy retired. The German fleet admitted its inability to meet our Grand Fleet and is as securely locked up, despite its success, as it was before.

"There remains, nevertheless, a black page in our naval history insofar as loss of splendid ships and splendid lives are concerned. It is illumined, however, by glorious fighting against vastly superior weight of metal, but the blow remains and it is a desperately heavy one."

The Times says: "It is clear that we have suffered the heaviest blow at sea that we have met with during the war. Our Admiralty had taken the wise course of making no effort to undertake the gravity of the British losses. We engaged, perhaps, with over confidence, in a long running fight against ships which were more numerous, stronger, more heavily armed than our cruiser fleet and we suffered heavily. But the event will not impair the effectiveness of our blockade or our ability to uphold the freedom of the sea nor will it dispose the Germans to encounter that main part of the British fleet in avoidance of which they have shown such diligence and alertness.

TO FRESH EXERTIONS.

"The Germans doubtless hope that the battle will impress credulous neutrals and even cause some discouragement among the Allies. As to the British people the result of the fight will sting them to fresh exertion and will dispel much idle and harmful optimism. It will steel that unalterable resolution to win or perish that has ever been the consequence of untoward fortune to our race when they are entered upon a quarrel which they know to be just."

The Morning Post says: "German heavy metal got British lighter metal at close range and gave it severe punishment. The fight must have been at close range and the German battleships, well protected by their armor, outmatched our cruisers in a fight for which they were not suited. Our advance guard, in fact, engaged the German mainguard and the result could not be otherwise than serious for the lighter vessels. But when our main forces came into action the position was reversed and the German main fleet was driven into port.

"There is one thing, however, which we have the right to demand in the face of our losses. There must be no more trifling with the powers of our fleet. For the sake of the miserable Declaration of London our politicians have doubled the work and the strain upon our fleet and have made the greater part of its labors of no account. If our sailors had been free from the beginning the war might now have been over. As it is, we see no end in sight. Let us therefore determine that there shall be no more surrenders of our sea power. We advise our parliament to insist upon a plain statement by the Government as to the somewhat disturbing misson to Paris on which Sir Edward Grey maintains his usual attitude of pompous infallibility. The situation is too serious for any more trifling."

No information has reached this country of any recent mission undertaken by Sir Edward Grey to Paris. His last known visit to the French capital was to attend a general conference of the military and political heads of the Allies on March 27. Nothing was made public as to the results of this conference.

HEAVY SLAUGHTER IN LATEST TRY IN VERDUN REGION

French Batteries Spread Havoc in Ranks of Assailants

HEAVY FIGHTING IN YPRES SALIENT

German Infantry Penetrates British First Line Trenches

LONDON, June 3.—Again the Germans have tried, but ineffectually, to breach the French line near Fort Vaux, northeast of Verdun. In fighting, characterized by Paris as having been of unprecedented violence, the Germans threw attack after attack against the French line, but the French guns and machine-guns tore great holes in their ranks, and threw them back.

In addition, reinforcing battalions were caught by the French guns as they essayed to throw themselves into the fray and were forced to retreat in disorder northeastward upon Dieppe.

At one point, however, in the sector of Damloup, east of Fort Vaux, the Germans captured a portion of the village, the other parts of which are occupied by the French. To the west of the Meuse, around Hill 304 and Le Mort Homme, both sides are engaged in heavy artillery duels.

On the Russian front the Germans again have brought the Ikskull bridgehead under bombardment, and at several other points along the line are using their big guns against the Russians. An infantry attack near Newzelbourg was put down by the Russians.

Rome reports desperate fighting between the Austrians and Italians between the Adige and Brenta Rivers. Along the Posina and southeast of Arsiero, Austrian attacks were repulsed, with heavy casualties. Bombardments predominate along the greater part of the remainder of the front.

Constantinople says the Russian centre in the Caucasus region has been forced to retire twenty kilometres in the face of Turkish attacks, and that the Turks repulsed a surprise attack on the Turkish left wing.

GREAT HUN LOSSES.

PARIS, June 3.—The War Office last night issued the following communication:

On the left bank of the Meuse there has been great activity on the part of the two artilleries in the sector of Hill 304, and between Le Mort Homme and the Meuse.

On the right bank of the Meuse the Germans attempted against our positions between the Vaux pond and the Village of Damloup a powerful offensive action, which lasted the whole of the day. Continuous attacks, carried out by compact masses, followed one another in this region. The magnificent resistance of our troops withstood the efforts of the enemy.

To the west of Fort Vaux our counter-attacks against every German attack stopped all progress by our adversary in front of the Vaux Fort, which the Germans were bent on carrying at any price. The fighting reached unprecedented violence. The attacking columns were mown down by our guns and machine-guns, and suffered enormous losses.

The German masses which were coming to reinforce the battalions engaged in the fighting were caught under the fire of our heavy batteries. They retreated in disorder as far as Dieppe.

In the sector of Damloup, at the foot of the Cote de Meuse, the enemy succeeded in penetrating a village, the largest part of which is in our hands. The artillery fighting continues very violent on the whole of the right bank of the Meuse.

The Belgian communication reads: There is nothing to report.

ENEMY ARE THROWN BACK.

PETROGRAD, June 2, via London, June 3.—The following official communication was issued today:

Enemy artillery has repeatedly bombarded the Ikskull bridgehead. Thursday morning the Germans suddenly opened fire with all arms — heavy and light guns, machine guns, bomb throwers and rifles—on the sector south of Newzelborg (northwest of Jacobstadt). Under cover of this fire the enemy debouched three times from his trenches, but on each occasion, after passing the entanglements, was thrown back into his trenches by our fire. About seven in the morning the fire died down considerably.

In front of the Muzgal Station, north of Dvinsk, our Cossacks carried out a dashing reconnaissance on the left bank of the Dvina. Enemy artillery also was active in the region of the Dvinsk positions.

During the night of May 31 the enemy opened violent artillery and rifle fire for a short time against our positions south of Smorgon and attacked the Village of Sutzkoff, but was repulsed by our rifle fire and bombs.

ITALIANS HEAVILY ENGAGED.

ROME, via London, June 3.—The official statement given out by the Italian War Office last night follows:

The battle between Adige and Brenta is growing continually more desperate, especially along the front of the Posina Torrent and in the Sette Comuni zone to the south of the Assa Valley. In the Lagarina Valley an intense artillery duel continued yesterday, our fire greatly impeding the enemy's movements. Our attacks in the Upper Val D'Arsa succeeded in gaining some ground.

Along the Posina front on Wednesday night repeated violent enemy attacks against the northern slopes of Forni, in the Alt Valley and in the direction of Quaro, southeast of Arsiero, were repulsed, with enormous losses to the enemy, while the rapid and precise fire of our artillery completed the destruction of the attacking columns.

There was an intense and uninterrupted bombardment, by numerous batteries of all calibres during yesterday against our lines from Colle di Zomo to Rocchetti. On the left wing, where the enemy had amassed strong forces between Posina and Assine, he made sanguinary but vain efforts to advance in the direction of Monte Spiri. On the right wing, strong enemy columns in the afternoon opened violent attacks against the Segliaschiri front, but after a desperate action were completely repulsed.

TURKS CLAIM SUCCESS.

CONSTANTINOPLE, via London, June 3.—The Russian repulse in Armenia, in the face of a Turkish offensive, which compelled Grand Duke Nicholas' forces to retire from Kamakhartum, fifty miles west of Erzerum, has been followed by a further retirement of the Russian left wing for a distance of more than a dozen miles, according to an official statement issued today by the Turkish War Office. The statement says:

Caucasus front—In the centre, the enemy, after our attack against the left wing, completely abandoned his positions, retiring twenty kilometres. On our left wing we repulsed a surprise attack which the enemy attempted.

FIGHTING AT YPRES.

LONDON, June 3.—The following official statement was issued from British headquarters last night:

"Sharp fighting occurred today (Friday) in the Ypres salient on a front of approximately 3,000 yards between Hooge and the Ypres-Comines Railway. Following the artillery activity in this neighborhood reported in yesterday's (Thursday's) communication, the Germans began an intense and sustained bombardment at 9:15 a.m., which extended not only over the fronts mentioned but on the area behind. This was followed about midday by hostile infantry attacks, which succeeded in penetrating our first trenches at several points, but which we repulsed elsewhere. At 6:30 p.m. the enemy's artillery fire was less intense, but the fighting continued in this locality.

"Last night we blew up some craters on Vimy Ridge, and, in combination with our artillery bombardment penetrated German trenches at a few points, from which our infantry subsequently withdrew.

"The repulse of strong British forces in this vicinity referred to in today's (Friday) German communication is not correct. Hostile artillery activity from the Vimy Ridge to the neighborhood of Loos is below normal today (Friday).

"North of the La Bassee Canal we breached German parapets. Between Arras and the River Somme there was the usual artillery action on both sides, except about Thiepval where the hostile fire was above normal.

"Clear weather enabled much successful aerial work to be done yesterday (Thursday). A certain amount of fighting in the air was done as a result of which one of the enemy's machines was obliged to come down and subsequently was set afire by our artillery and another was driven to the ground damaged just behind the enemy's lines. One of our balloons was carried away by a sudden gust of wind and driven over the enemy's lines, but both occupants of the car reached the ground safely inside our lines by descending with parachutes.

ON MACEDONIAN FRONT.

PARIS, June 3.—The following statement on operations of the French forces in Macedonia during the last half of the month of May was issued yesterday afternoon by the War Office:

"Army of the Orient—Operations between May 16-May 31; on the right bank of the River Vardar advanced guards of French troops and of their enemies have been showing great activity. As a result there have been several minor combats. Sometimes these were fairly spirited, as, for instance, on the 22nd of May at a point south of Ljumicaet, and on May 26 and May 31 in the region of Kupa.

"On the front between Gievgeli and Doiran our artillery and that of the enemy was active during these entire fifteen days. There was, however, no infantry fighting.

"To the east of Doiran Lake a reconnoitring party of the enemy advanced on May 30 as far as Poroj, where an attack was made upon one of our smaller posts. This post was forced back.

"In the Valley of the Struma, Bulgo-German forces crossed the Greek frontier on the 27th of May and occupied Fort Rupel. They pushed their advance posts upon the crests which command the Valley of the Struma to the north of Demir-Hissar. The Greek population fled before these forces.

"The fresh occupation of Fort Rupel brought about some spirited occurrences. At Salonika there took place on May 28, in the streets of the city a well attended manifestation in favor of the Allies. French gendarmes contributed to the maintenance of order on this day.

"On the 19th of May aviators of the enemy threw down bombs on villages in the region of Kokus, but without doing any damage. On May 24 some of our aviators bombarded Zanthi Meinig as well as camps of the enemy in the vicinity of Uskub. On the 20th of May our aviators bombarded the new camp places of the enemy in the region of Gievgeli."

U. S. NAVAL PLANS MAY BE AFFECTED BY GREAT BATTLE

Special to The Montreal Star by the United Press.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—News of the naval battle in the North Sea aroused keen interest in naval circles here. When the first unofficial reports reached the Navy Department, routine business was suspended, while groups of officers from the various bureaus met in consultation and eagerly sought additional news.

The consensus of opinion based on latest reports, was that British naval prestige has suffered a severe blow. The fact that the German and British battle fleet was apparently not engaged explains, according to a naval officer, why the British battle cruisers fared so badly in the fight. It is believed here that the German squadron had the support of at least a portion of the German High Sea battleship fleet.

MAY CHANGE U. S. PLANS.

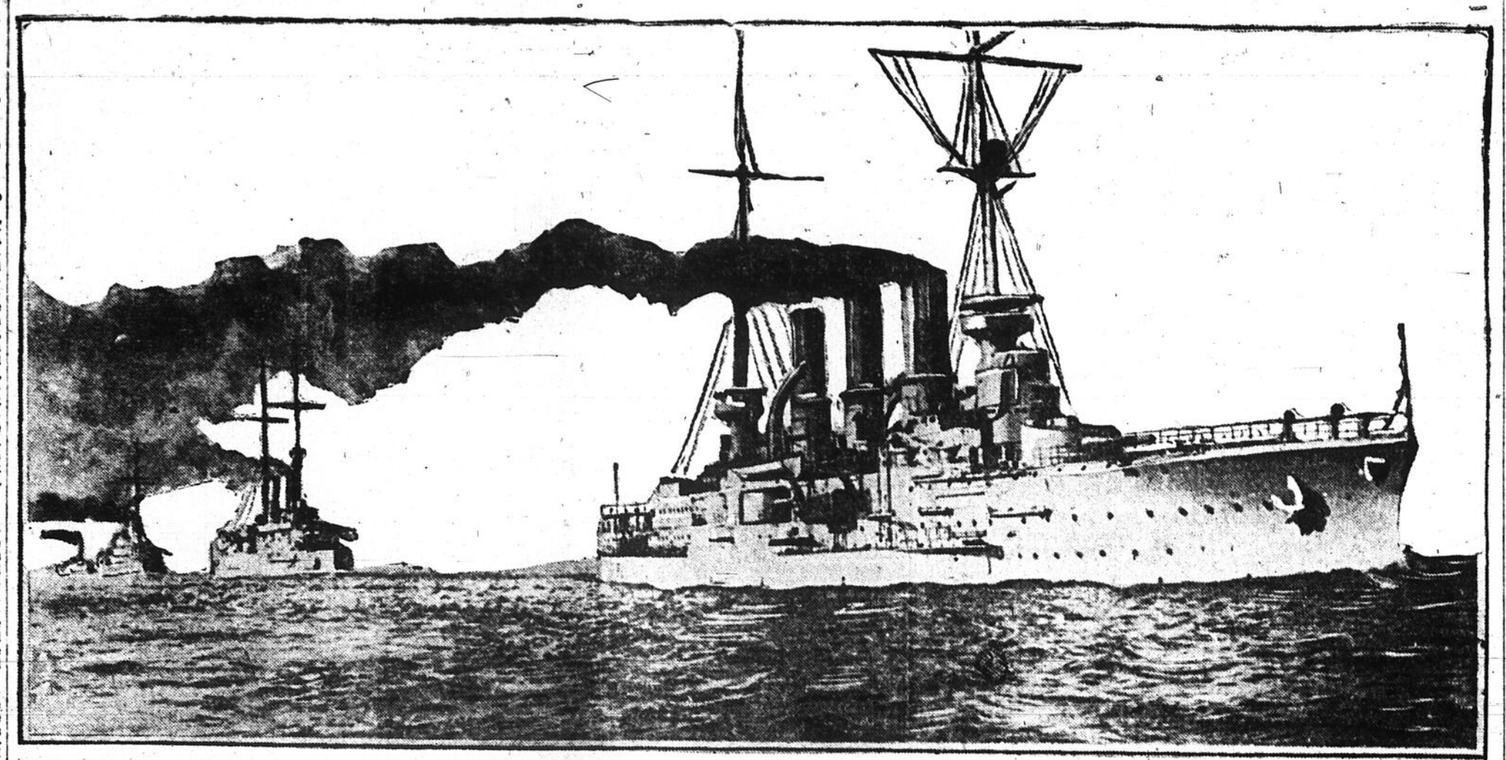

Secretary Daniels said that the result of this engagement might change the program of the United States navy for the building of capital ships. He said that neither Commander Symington, Naval Attache at the London Embassy, nor Commander Gherardi, naval attache at the Embassy in Berlin, had yet reported on the battle. Detailed reports are expected and will be closely studied by the Navy Department.

The most severe losses to the British Navy are felt to be the battle cruisers Queen Mary, Indefatigable and Invincible. The Queen Mary's 13.5 inch guns assured her a hitting power equal if not superior to that of any German battleship, but being a battle cruiser and built for speed her armor was comparatively thin. She had a nine-inch armor belt amidships and armor four inches thick at the ends. The Indefatigable and Invincible each carried eight 12-inch guns and had armor 7.4 inches thick.

Both the armored cruisers Defence and Black Prince were outclassed by the most modern type of cruisers in either the British or Germany navy, it is said, although they were both very serviceable ships. The view of one of the ranking line officers at the department is that the British squadron got too far from the support of the main fighting fleet and found itself opposed by German battleships and unable to call the fleet to its aid in time.

It has been the consistent policy of the British Navy, it is explained, to keep the Grand Fleet in touch with British auxiliary forces and to have plans so arranged that the fleet could be put into action in support of these forces at any time they were threatened by the battleships of the German navy.

THE GERMAN GRAND FLEET PUTTING OUT TO SEA

NEW CARLISLE MOURNS DEATH OF C. R. SCOLES

NEW CARLISLE, Que., June 3.—News has been received here of the death at Bermuda of Charles R. Scoles. Mr. Scoles had been in indifferent health for some time and went to Bermuda thinking that the change might benefit him. Up to a very short time before the end came he seemed to be slightly improved and the news of his death was a shock to all.

The funeral was held here from the residence of the deceased. The remains were brought from Bermuda by his wife and daughter and were met in New York by his son-in-law, Senator Casgrain and many other friends. At Quebec the bereaved family were joined by Rev. E. A. Dunn, son of our late Bishop.

The funeral procession left the residence in the following order: Guard of Honor, numbering about 100 soldiers, commanded by Lieut. J. Belanger; the hearse; the pall bearers, namely Hon. J. H. Kelly, W. Hamon, Dr. Maguire, W. M. Sheppard, R. Montgomery, R. N. LeBlanc, A. E. Boullion and J. O. Sherar; an extra carriage carrying the flowers; chief mourners, namely son-in-law and daughter; the clergymen; the railway employes and the public.

An impressive service was held at the church, which was so crowded that a large number of friends were not able to get admittance. The officiating clergymen were the Rev. W. Harrison, rector of New Carlisle, and the Rev. E. A. Dunn, of Quebec, assisted by the Rev. A. R. Warren, of Cape Cove, the Rev. A. J. Vibert, of Shigawake, and the Rev. H. Whitley of Port Daniel.

The late Charles R. Scoles was born at Grantham, England, August 27, 1856. He was educated at Bedford College, Bedford, England.

Among the various railway enterprises with which he was connected were the building of the Caraquet Railway, the Central Railway of New Brunswick, the Atlantic and Lake Superior Railway and several others including the finishing of construction of the Atlantic, Quebec and Western Railway to Gaspe.

In 1890 he was appointed manager of the Salisbury & Harvey Railway. In 1900 manager of the Atlantic and Lake Superior Railway and in 1911 manager of the Quebec Oriental and Atlantic, Quebec and Western Railways.

He was a member of the Anglican church. As such he was one of the leading members of St. Andrew's Church, New Carlisle, and his generosity and help towards that Church is known to all. All societies in connection therewith found in him a willing and earnest helper.

He was a very good friend to the poor, and he was never known to turn away a deserving case of charity. His whole support was always given towards any movement for the betterment of this community. During the present war, he contributed liberally to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, the Red Cross Society and Machine Gun Fund; neither did he forget the boys at the front, as he personally remembered each unit from New Carlisle.

WAKEFIELD BACK IN TOWN AFTER FIGHTING LAW

Alleged to Have Been Connected with Celebrated Bank Robbery

William Wakefield, alleged to have been connected with the notorious robbery of the Bank of Montreal at New Westminster, B.C., in September, 1914, was brought back from Chicago by Deputy High Constable Cyr and Lieut. Savard last night and is now in the cells at headquarters. He will be arraigned on Monday, charged with having in his possession some of the money stolen from the bank and knowing it to have been stolen.

Wakefield gave no trouble while on the way from Chicago to Montreal, but both detectives were fully prepared in case of any emergency.

Wakefield's fight against extradition to Montreal had been before the Chicago courts for the past fourteen months. He was arrested there in March, 1915, when, it is claimed, he attempted to change some of the stolen bills in a broker's office. John C. Bingham, alias Bigelow, alias Benrested in Chicago at the same time as Wakefield, is still fighting extradition against being brought back to Montreal for trial. The only difference between the case of Wakefield and that of Bingham is that some of the stolen money was found on Wakefield when he was arrested.

It is understood that arrangements have been made for counsel to appear for Wakefield when he comes before the courts on Monday.

BOY HIT BY RIG DIED IN HOSPITAL

Knocked down by a newspaper delivery rig early yesterday afternoon, Leopold Masse, seven years of age, living with his parents at 899 Aylmer street, died a few hours after being taken to the General Hospital.

The accident occurred at the corner of St. James street and Victoria square, when the boy, in attempting to cross the street, dashed in front of the rig, which was driven by Ernest Hodgson, sixteen years of age, of 444 Aylmer street, the wheels of the rig passed over Masse's abdomen. At the hospital he was found to be suffering from severe internal injuries.

Hodgson reported the case to the police of the Chaboilez police station last night.

One of the New York theatres has installed a new booth in the lobby of that house that promises to be popular. Its purpose will be to provide privacy for women patrons who still have faith in the stability of the lisle thread bank, and who are not provided with sufficient change as they approach the box office.

Every Man admires a workmanlike job

And that is why any man who is thinking of installing a heating system should examine the Sunshine Furnace. It is a piece of work he will take to.

Every part is well thought out. The sections are carefully made. The whole is substantially and accurately put together.

And there is a sound reason for every feature. Take the shape of the fire-pot as an example. The straight walls allow the ashes to fall instead of lodging against the sides where they would interfere with the free passage of heat from the burning coal.

See the large double tight-fitting doors. Notice how easily the dampers are controlled. Not much trouble to shut off the fire and hold the heat with this furnace. See how dust is directed up the chimney whenever the fire is shaken down. Note the large radiating surfaces and wide passages for heating the air.

It was a man who knew his job that designed

McClary's Sunshine Furnace

If you wish to know what it will cost to place this fine furnace in your home, write us about it. Our Heating Engineer will send you full information. He will show you how to arrange the distribution of heat so as to get the most out of it. There is no charge; no obligation to buy a Sunshine Furnace. And if you would like a copy of our booklet "Sunshine" enclose the coupon with your letter.

LT.-COL. TRIHEY TO KICK OFF AT PATRIOTIC SOCCER GAME

VETERANS WANT TO ENTER CANOE MARATHON

Everything Ready and Canoes from St. Rose and Longueuil at Grand Trunk Wharf Ready to Take Part in Strenuous Race

Three boats arrived at the Grand Trunk Boat Club house yesterday from the outside clubs whose members are competing in this race. Two boats arrived from St. Rose and one from Longueuil, which the competitors mentioned below will use. These boats apparently seem well inside the specified rules and regulations.

Letters have been received from the outside commodores promising their assistance and support for the race, also in addition to this word has been received from the secretary of the Verdun Motor Boat Club offering their support in the way of supplying as many boats as will be necessary to pilfol the course. The committee in charge will surely make use of the opportunity in availing themselves of this kind offer.

This race, is has been widely published and advertised, will afford all people an opportunity of being able to witness it in the club house and grounds, on the dyke, or Nun's Island.

CREWS ENTERED.

Laing and Clements, G.T.B.C.
Griffin and Bowden, G.T.B.C.
Duck and O'Brien, Harp Canoe Club, St. Rose.
Render and Morrison, G.T.B.C.
Wilson and Hollingsworth, G. T. B. C.
Coleman and Pitt, G.T.B.C.
Clarke and Filiatreault, Harp Canoe Club, St. Rose.

As the secretary did not report yesterday what mail he received, it is thought that probably a couple more entries are yet to be heard from.

Two old members of the club approached the captain of the club last night, and asked if they could make an entry in the big race; they said that they had been practicing hard in one of the local gyms for the last two weeks, and assured the captain and the racing committee that they would make the young boys hustle.

Race to start at Club House and proceed toward Lachine Rapids as far as the Verdun Water Works, where there will be a portage along the dyke to the old Latortue wharf. Competitors again taking to the water, and paddling to buoy No. 4 at the short channel, proceed down the short channel, as far as the Island, paddle up the river around buoy No. 6 at the end of the weeds and pass by the lower end of Princes Island to the Club House, and report to the official in charge. After reporting repeat the same course as far as buoy No. 6 opposite the lower end of Princes Island, from this buoy paddle up the river between the weeds and the intake, around the upper end of Princes Island and down the Bay to the finishing line.

RULES.

1st—This race is open only to amateurs in good standing with the C. C. A. and other amateur bodies.

3rd—No racing canoes will be allowed; being restricted to pleasure canoes only, of not more than sixteen feet in length.

4th—Only single blade paddles to be used.

5th—Two paddlers to each canoe, who must carry one life preserver each.

6th—There must be four canoes to start or no race.

7th—All portages will be marked by red flags, and must be made at these points only.

8th—Competitors must report at Club House before starting on second round.

Note—Entries close May 31st. No entrance fee will be charged, but any competitor not complying with the rules will be disqualified.

C. C. A. declaration must be signed and sent in with entry.

RACING COMMITTEE.

ROUTE OF THE GRAND TRUNK BOAT CLUB'S MODIFIED 200-MILE CANOE RACE

The race will start from the Grand Trunk Boat Club, west along the Verdun dyke to the pump house, where a mile long portage will start, to be finished at the old La Tortue wharf.

The course will continue to the north side of Nun's Island and past Grass Island to the foot of the Lachine Rapids and then down the short channel on the south side of the two islands. At the foot of Nun's Island another passage is marked, cutting off the bottom corner by a trek of about three-quarters of a mile. The course then continues above Birk's Island and below and to the north of Price's Island, and the entire route is gone over for a second lap.

When the portage cutting off the lower corner of Nun's Island has been made for the second time, however, the finish is varied. The competitors, instead of going below Price's Island, will mount to the head of it on its south side, and rounding the head descend to the Grand Trunk Boat Clubhouse and the finish.

TENTH SEASON OF BLUE BONNETS JOCKEY CLUB WILL OPEN TUESDAY NEXT

New Grand Stand Will Be Complete for Spring Meeting with Double Seating Capacity of the Old Structure

The tenth season of the Montreal Jockey Club will be inaugurated at Blue Bonnets on Tuesday next when the Spring Meeting will open. Preparations have been going on apace and now all is in readiness for the horses to go to the post.

The stables at the track have been filled up for a week with the best horses that will be seen on the Canadian circuit this year and owners and trainers have been taking advantage of the excellent track conditions to have their charges in the best possible condition for the opening day.

The new Grand Stand is now completed and the seats have been put into place. It is a commodious and convenient structure and although covering only the space of the old stand it has been so laid out that it will have double the seating capacity.

BEST OF OFFICIALS.

As in the past the meeting at Blue Bonnets will be conducted under the guidance of officials who have the best interests of the sport at heart. In the stewards stand will be Lt.-Col. Wm. Hendrie, whose absence last year was accounted for by his going to the front, Mr. Wm. P. Riggs, Mr. Frank J. Bryan, Mr. Colin Campbell and Mr. Joseph Murphy. Mr. Francis Nelson will be the presiding judge, Mr. A. B. Dade, the starter, Mr. Wm. Northey, the clerk of the course, Mr. Joseph McLellan the clerk of the scales, Mr. Walter C. Hagar, the timer, Mr. J. J. Mackessy, the paddock judge and Mr. George Cornell, the patrol judge.

NEW PLAYERS IN CITY LEAGUE GAMES TOMORROW IN THE DELORIMIER PARK

Four Teams Appear Strong and Evenly Balanced —Sprague Cleghorn and "Lefty" Spear Out with the Stars

With the playing of the weekly double header in the City League tomorrow afternoon at Delorimier Park, the fans will be treated to what is expected to be one of the best double offerings of the season.

New players are expected to make their initial appearances with all four clubs, Sprague Cleghorn and "Lefty" Spear the University of Vermont twirler with the Stars, catcher Wingo and outfielder Cranze with the Indians while La Casquette and Crescents have each a new infielder and outfielder signed. Indians and Stars meet in the first encounter, while La Casquette will tackle the champion Crescents in the sun set game.

BIG ATTENDANCE.

A big attendance is expected. President Chamberland has appointed Larry Weatherbee and "Jud" Burden, the latter former first baseman of the old Mascotte's to handle the two matches.

The teams and batting orders are as follows:

1:30—Indians vs. Stars.

Indians: Maiden, 3b; Heffernan, rf.; Hannaford, ss; Wingo, c; Pittman, 2b; Campbell, lf; Cranze, McCabe or Kavanagh, cf.; McGrane, or Nelson 1b; Malcolm Fraser, p.

NATIONALS TO SHOW HOW STRONG THEY ARE ON OWN GROUND AGAINST CORNW'L

Military Band and Men of the 206th Battalion Will Enliven the Lacrosse Match Saturday Afternoon

An opportunity will be offered the many followers of lacrosse, Canada's national summer pastime, to size up the two National Union clubs who have not appeared here as yet. Last Saturday Ottawas and Shamrocks were seen in action and today Nationals and Cornwall will provide the attraction which will mark the inauguration of the champions' season at home.

It is far too early in the season to size up the respective merits of the teams, but at present Nationals and Shamrocks, two local clubs are on equal terms for the leadership. A victory for both of the local teams seems probable though not without a tough argument, and in this event it will be next to impossible to hold the crowd at the East End grounds on June 10 when the two local clubs clash.

SHOW THEIR STRENGTH.

Today's game will offer a chance to the many followers of the game to judge whether the Nationals show sufficient strength to down the Irishmen, as with the addition of many of last year's M. A. A. A. players, it is Shamrocks that look like formidable contenders for the title.

Cornwall have a record for gameness when playing away from home that always makes them dangerous opponents for any club, and with the addition of Eddie Degan, Oaker and John White, besides an abundance of substitutes, they can be counted on to give a good account of themselves.

A large crowd will no doubt turn out to give the champions a good sendoff and the 206th Battalion band will give a holiday aspect to the occasion. The tiresome waits between the quarters will be eliminated through the running off of several track events and for those who come early, a junior game will furnish amusement. The ball will be faced promptly at 3:15 in order that the spectators may return home in time for their evening meal. The probable teams:

Watching the Score Board

Yesterday's homer: Myers, Dodgers, off Mammaux, Pirates.

Wellman, of the Browns, had his jinx sign working on the Indians. He held the Clevelanders to six scattered hits and one run, after his pals clinched the game in the first with two runs.

The Indians dropped back to second place.

The Giants lost their first game on their home grounds since they started their spectacular winning streak. It took the Cincinnati Reds thirteen rounds to turn the trick.

Hal Chase stole home in the thirteenth while Merkle held the ball.

The Dodgers seem to be losing with great regularity. The Pirates bunched hits on the Brooklynites in two innings and won, five to two.

Ninth inning rallies gave the Cubs and Cardinals the long ends of the scores in games with Boston and Philadelphia respectively.

The Cubs won after two were down. Tyler pitched what should have been winning ball. He allowed the Bruins four hits. Three of them were made in the ninth.

CHARLEY WHITE DEFEATED MITCHELL

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 3.—Charley White, Chicago lightweight, won the fastest battle of his career here last night when he defeated Ritchie Mitchell, Milwaukee's pride, in a ten round bout. White turned every trick he knew to slip over the "sleep punch," but failed. Six rounds were White's, two Mitchell's, and the other two even.

STILL BANKING ON THE GIANTS

NEW YORK, June 3.—"But they'll make a fresh start," was the comforting philosophy of the 20,000 Giant fans who saw their favorites lose their first game on the home grounds after their unprecedented feat of winning eighteen games on the road. Each of the Giants received a silver loving cup from Eddie Leonard, the high and mighty, though unofficial chief of hitters.

OUTSIDER HOME IN FRONT IN FEATURE EVENT AT DORVAL

The Fleetwood Handicap, the feature event of yesterday's card at Dorval was captured by Harbard, a horse that was practically overlooked in the betting. Celto broke in front in this event and outran his field down the back stretch where King Hamburg and the winner fought it out. Indolence ran a disappointing race.

The attendance was well up to the high mark of the week, while the track was the fastest of any day of the present meeting. Long shots were again very much in evidence.

The closest finish was that in the event won by Detour, which won from Wavering by a neck. Detour went to the front at the head of the stretch and outgamed his opposition from there to the wire.

The selling race war was again in evidence when Captain Parr won the sixth race. This horse was bid up to $605 and retained by his owner. This was an advance of $305 over his entered price. The boosting was done by A. C. Parreto.

First Race—Purse $600, three-year-olds and up, five and a half furlongs—Thesieres, 109 (Wolstenholm,) won Montreal, 107, Ward, second. Odd Cross, 109, Mott, third. Time, 1:09. Short Ballot, Rip Van Winkle, Margaret G. Borel, Captain Elliott, Phil T. Ray R. Miller, Arcene also ran. $2 mutuels paid: Thesieres — Straight, $5.10; place, $3.60; show, $3.20. Montreal — Place, $16.20, show, $8.20; Odd Cross — $7.50.

Second Race — Purse $600, two-year-olds, selling, four and a half furlongs — Bon Otis, 106; Dishmon, won, Golden Bantam, 109, McAtee, second. Lucille P., 109, Mott, third. Time, 56 3-5. Positano, Cadillac, Incog also ran, $2 mutuals paid: Bon Otis—$22.60, $10, $3.70. Golden Bantam — $3.90, $2.60. Lucille P., $2.60.

Third Race, purse $600, three-year olds and up, one mile — Cooper King, 99, Cruise, won; Froissart, 110, Warrington, second; Prince Philsthorpe 108, Wolstenholm, third. Time 1:44. Gartley, Pepper Sause, Harry Bassett II, Duke of Chester, Irish Heart, also ran, $2 mutuals paid: Cooper King, $21.80, $9.60, $7.00. Froissart, $10. $4.30. Prince Philsthorpe, $4.10.

Fourth Race — Fretwood Handicap, three-year-olds and up, one mile — Harbard, 100, Anderson $29.60, $9.50, $4.90, won; King Hamburg 101, Ambrose, $5.80, $4.20, second; Phil Ungar, 109, Schamerhorn, $5.90, third. Time 1:42 1-5. Dryad, Celto, Indolence, also ran.

First Race, purse $600, selling three year olds and up, five and a half furlongs — Detour, 11. Acton, $9.80, $4.90, $3.80. Wavering, 109 Cruise, $12.30, $6.70. Marie OBrien 103. Buckles, $4.60. Time 1:09. Littlest Rebel. Neville, Billy Stuart, Lost Fortune, Casco also ran.

Sixth Race; Purse $600, three-year olds and up, selling, one and a sixteenth miles — Capt. Parry, 116; McAtee, won. Fenrenrock, 118, Moultain, second; Phil Mohr, 21, Acton third. Time, 1:50 3-5. Love Day, Durin also ran. $2 mutuals paid. Capt. Parr, $4.20, $3.30, $2.80; Fenrock, $6.80, $3.50; Phil Mohr, $3.30. Final Dorval results altheti Det

SEVENTH RACE: Purse $600, three-year-olds and up, selling, five and a half furlongs — Gordon, 112, Wafrington, $13.10, $7.10 $4.50, won; Minda, 107, Ward, $5.70, $4 second; J. D. Sagg 103, Wolstenholm, $7.70, third. Time, 1:08 3-5. Miss Gayle. Perpetual. Jack Nunnally, Torson d'Or, Nigadoo, Pampinea, Will Cash, Peach Blossom also ran.

Lieut.-Col. Harry Trihey, Sportsman and Soldier, to Kick-Off at Soccer Game

Lieut.-Col. Trihey, of the Irish-Canadian Rangers, will kick off at the Patriotic soccer game, which is to be played on the M. A. A. A. grounds this afternoon. Both teams are strongly represented and several entries have been made already for the track events in spite of the post entries being allowed.

INDEPEND'T SENIORS OPEN THEIR LACROSSE SEASON AT ST. HENRI TOMORROW

St. Pierre-Aux-Liens and St. Henri All-Stars Start the Season While "Newsy" Lalonde Will Be the Referee

The Independent Senior Lacrosse League will open its season at the St. Henri Lacrosse Grounds tomorrow with a match between St Pierre-aux-Liens and All Points.

Three clubs compose the League: St Henry, All Points and St. Pierre-aux-Liens and a triple schedule will be played. Newsy Lalonde is to referee the opening game. The grounds are situated two blocks west of Atwater Ave., at the corner of Rose-de-Lima and Workman street and any St. James or Notre Dame car will take the public direct to the grounds.

The management of the grounds has made arrangements to have the stand covered, so that the public will be able to enjoy the games rain or shine.

SENSE AND NONSENSE

IF JOHNNY EVERS scuttles on the field sideways you know it is going to be a hard summer for the umps.

YOU'RE a pessimist when you can get a cinder in your eye on an oil burning road.

POLO probably came to us indirectly from Trebizond where the Kabak-Meidan, or Pumpkin-square, was the site of a mediaeval polo-ground. The game found great favor with the nobles of Trebizond, and was played on horseback much in the same way as modern polo. It produced intense excitement among the spectators, rivalling that of the hippodrome, possibly because it was dangerous as well as fashionable. Polo caused the death of one Emperor of Trebizond—John the First—who was killed by a fall from his horse.

WAR HITS "PUGS."

THE war has now hit the "pugs." Fighters whose eyes come into contact with his opponent's glove is experiencing difficulty in removing the black and blue decorations. The leech, heretofore used to blot out tints about the eye, has become scarce since the war. Although shipments of leeches have been received from Norway and Sweden, few druggists are able to get them, so declares a pharmacist who specializes in this treatment for "black eyes." But the black eye painter is still on the job

NOT A FISH STORY.

PLAYING over Harrow golf links, a golfer drove a ball into a hedge. Subsequently, it was discovered in a nest in which there were several young birds. The birds were uninjured.

SIR Frank Benson—our new actor-knight—has one passion that is not connected with the stage. He has always been a keen athlete. On one occasion his fondness for sport led to a curious misunderstanding. He was touring in the provinces at the time, and he wanted a certain young actor in London for the part of Rugby in "The Merry Wives of Windsor." So he wired: "Can you play Rugby? If so, come at once." The reply, when it came, was unexpected: "Arrive at 4 p.m. Played half-back for Stratford."

THE SECRET.

"What is an amateur?" is still one of the raging queries of the hour. But, in spite of all the recent discussion, we haven't changed the answer we evolved four years ago, viz., "Any one who can get away with it?"—New York Tribune.

GETTING 'EM STRAIGHTER.

"I think I'm improving in my golf game, although my score doesn't show it."

"What makes you think so, then?"

Dodge—Your friend Diggs has a fine coat of tan. He must be fond of out-of-door sports.

Hodge—He is. That fellow spends two hours every afternoon standing in the hot sun in front of a baseball bulletin board.

THE NEW PERIL.

The baseball manager had gathered his athletes together in the clubhouse for a heart-to-heart talk.

"You have been playing rotten baseball," he said. "You have been playing as if you had put fourteen quarts of redeye beneath your hides every afternoon. And yet seldom enter saloons. You, Jim Hoosit, are the only member of the club to break the training rules openly. Every night during the training season you have leaned against the hotel bar and punished a dozen highballs. I have refrained from plastering a fine on you because you are the only member of the team who shows up sober in the morning.

"I am not accusing the others of drinking hard liquor. You have kept out of grillrooms and cabarets and so forth. You have observed the training rules to the letter.

"But, having read a lot of current news in the papers, I have decided to fire any member of this team caught coming out of a drug store." — Geo. B. Phair.

TORN APPENDIX MAY CAUSE DEATH OF BAT NELSON

Special to The Montreal Star.

DETROIT, Mich., June 3.—Batting Nelson former lightweight champion of the world, is in a serious condition at Providence Hospital here, the result of an operation for appendicitis, which was performed yesterday. The battler came to Detroit to fill a vaudeville engagement at a local theatre and was stricken while on the stage last Wednesday.

Dr. Francis Maguire, who operated stated that the appendix had been ruptured previous to the incision and was in a malignant form when the patient went under the knife. It will be several days before it can be determined whether or not the fighter will recover.

Preparing for Big Lacrosse Match in Chicago

Special to The Montreal Star.

CHICAGO, June 3.—With brand new lacrosse sticks imported from Toronto, former players of the game began a short season of practice last night at Grant Park, in preparation for the game with the Sportsman's Association team from Toronto on Saturday, July 1. The International match is to be played as one of the features of the Canadian Red Cross Field Day at the Cubs new grounds. The practice sessions will be continued tonight, Sunday morning and alternate nights next week. They will afford the public a chance of seeing something of the national game of Canada.

ROYAL LIFE-SAVERS GIVE DEMONSTRATION

The weekly demonstration of the Royal Life Saving Society took place last night at the St. Denis Bath, when Captain Carle had charge of the display. The team comprised R. McNamee, A. McNamee, S. Avery, H. Brafstein, H. Schneider and A. Lefebvre, A. W. Ross had charge of the swimming events. After the various strokes were shown handicaps were held. A. McNamee winning the 50-yard race and R. McNamee's team the relay.

MORAN AND DILLON MATCHED AT LAST

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 3.—Frank Moran of Pittsburg and Jack Dillon of Indianapolis were matched last night to box at Washington on Thursday evening, June 29.

Moran is to receive $25,000 with the privilege of 40 per cent of the gross receipts. Dillon is to get $15,000 with a privilege of 25 per cent of the gross. Five thousand dollars will be posted this evening when the formal signing of the articles will take place.

EASTERN LEAGUE PROGRA MTOMORROW

The double bill in the Eastern League for tomorrow, which will be played at Maisonneuve Park, opposite the market, is Locomotive against Tetreauville at 1:30 and Canada Cement against Maisonneuve at 3:45.

While Locomotive and Cement are picked as the winners, both Tetreauville and Maisonneuve have been strengthening up their teams in preparation for tomorrow's contests, and both games should be closely contested.

Cement will have the same lineup as played against Locomotive in their draw game. Locomotive will be without Turner and Lafond, both of whom have been released.

Tetreauville will have a new pitcher in the box, who is expected to baffle the Locomotive batters. Maisonneuve will have quite a bunch of new players and should be a great deal stronger than in their previous game.

Umpires Dugranier and Daze will handle both of tomorrow's games.

CRICKET NOTES

The Mount Royal Cricket Club will be represented at Westmount in their scheduled game against Westmount today by the following players: H. C. McNeil, H. Henry, G. Adams, A. Sargeant, E. A. Reid, L. Smith, L. Cowan, R. Edwards, D Salzado, J. Scott, (captain), M. Broomes. Reserves— C. E. Stucker, E. A. Simms, C. Dent, H. Maidment and B. Travers.

The following players represent the West Indian Cricket team in their match with the C. P. R on the C. P. R. Angus grounds, game commences at 2:45 p.m. precisely, G. Lynch (Capt.), C. C. Jones, F. Louis, S. S. Bowen, D. Bernard, O. Spooner, F. Mol, G. Besson, A. Hunt, Cecil Farnum and C. Hasell, Reserves, A. Scott, T. Wilson.

PETER Latham, ex-champion of tennis and rackets, has been appointed head professional at Queen's Club of these games. Latham, who was born in 1865, was first engaged at Manchester and was head professional at Queen's from January 1, 1888, for a period of some 12 years. He then left to become professional to the late Sir Charles Day Rose at Hardwick and Newmarket, and was with him until his death in 1913.

THE CASE OF FLEMING VS. EDDIE WALLACE

Frankie Fleming's manager continues to protest that Wallace is treating the Laprairie boy badly by not giving him a match. No doubt if he will come to Wallace's terms and the promoters think such a match worth while, he will get one.

'HAPPY' L'HEUREUX' NAMESAKE MAY DEFEAT WILLARD

W. B. ("Bat") Masterson writes in the New York Telegraph:

"California is about to turn out another heavyweight champion of the world. California has done very well in the production of champions of the prize-ring in the past and it may be that she, he, or it, as the case may be, is in line for more. Jim Corbett and Jim Jeffries were worthy champions of the, heavyweight class for a number of years.

Young Mitchell Dal Hawkins, Solly Smith and Frankie Neil were among the best the country had in their day in the lighter divisions, and the old Golden Gate State is still going strong in its output of fighting material. At least that is what we've been led to believe from reports that have reached us from the Pacific Coast.

Out in Oakland, which is just across the bay from San Francisco, they have a native son, although his name sounds like something else, who has been cuting up all sorts of capers in the heavyweight class. The name of this new wonder is Fat L'Heureux, whatever that means. But no matter about that. Fat has the endorsement of Jack Welsh and Jack Kearns, both of whom are well known in prize-ring circles, and whose judgment in the quality of fighting material is of the very best.

"I like the way he boxes," says Welsh, "because he has speed and a powerful punch, and for a big fellow he looks to have a world of stamina." Continuing, Mr. Welsh said: "Willard is a great fighter. I refereed his bout with Jack Johnson at Havana when he won his title, and he displayed a lot more form than most persons were willing to admit that he possessed. Jess is a wonderful man, but I believe this L'Heureux, if trained properly and handled judiciously, would have a better chance with Willard than any of the heavyweights before the public."

"I've seen L'Heureux box," said Jack Kearns, "and take it from me, he can beat all the Frank Morans, Jim Coffeys, Soldier Kearns and Battling Levinskys that can be thrown into a ring with him. It's a joke," continued Kearns, "to hear fellows like Danny Morgan and other managers of fighters say they have the man who can beat Willard, when as a matter of fact the only man who has a real chance to beat the champion is Fat L'Heureux, and he lives right here in Oakland, my home town.

"Why it's a jest to hear them talk about fellows like Fred Fulton and that sort. I can make L'Heureux beat all that kind in five rounds each. I've seen all the heavyweights box, and L'Heureux is my choice to give Willard the argument of his life."

Now, boys, you've heard what Jack Welsh, the famous referee, and Jack Kearns have to say about Fat L'Heureux. What do you think of it Why not bring Fat to New York and give him a tryout with Al Reich?

ONE TIME STAR OF TURF DEAD.

Banastar, winner of the Brooklyn Handicap in 1889 as a four year old and the Metropolitan Handicap in 1901, when the race was run at Morris Park, died at Huntington, L.I. Many lovers of racing heard the news at Belmont Park with regret.

Banastar was purchased as a yearling by the late W. H. Clarke, who was Corporation Counsel at that time, from Howard Oots, of Lexington, for $10,000, and developed into a horse of high quality.

After winning the Brooklyn Handicap in 1889, he was left at the post in the Suburban of the same year, after delaying the start on a scorching hot day for more than an hour. Danny Maher, the jockey, famous in this country and England, had the mount, and pulled up as Chris Fitzgerald, the starter, dropped his flag. He was favorite for the race, and the unfortunate incident aroused much comment.

Mr. Clarke was so incensed because Maher abused the horse with his whip after being left, that he would not let the boy, who was under contract to him, ride for several months.

Later Clarence H. Mackay bought Banastar for $10,000, but he broke down shortly afterward. Recently he was standing at Huntington, L.I., where his owner, Capt. De Boise, of Squadron A, was breeding cavalry horses.

BERT SPARGO, feather-weight champion of Victoria, outpointed Llew Edwards in a 20 rounds contest at Melbourne.

T. BATE, a finely-built boy under 15, won four events at the Westminster School Sports. The quarter mile open challenge cup went to H. S. Salwey.

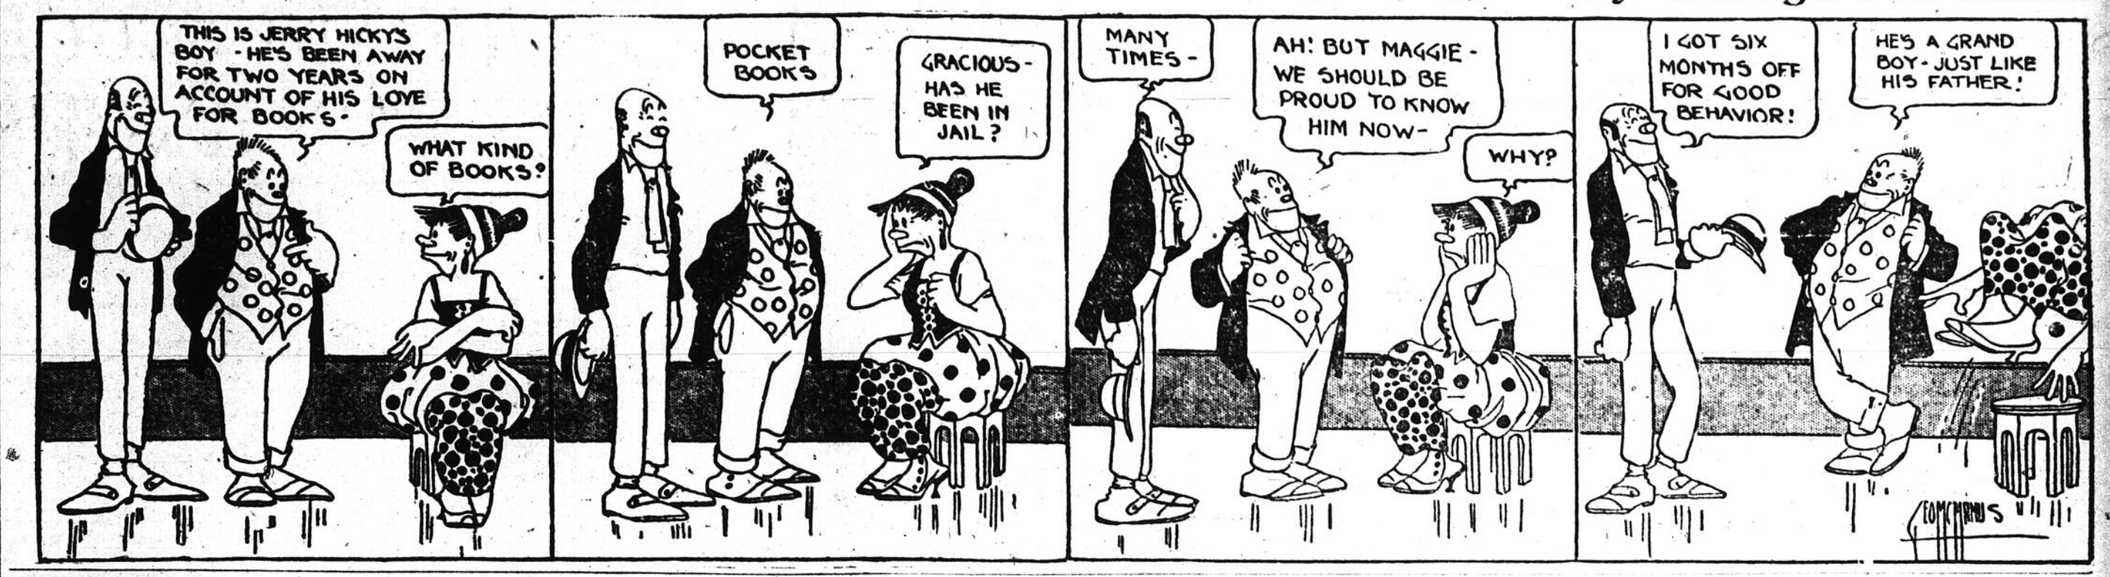

DORVAL RACE TRACK.

TURN PRISONERS INTO ATHLETES; THIRTY TRAINED

NEW YORK, June 3.—By turning prisoners at Sing Sing into athletes, an added agency for reform is believed to have been started through the efforts of a group of women reformers, headed by Mrs. F. C. Bishop and Mrs. Rott de Gallatin, who have provided a fund for expenses, so that the leaders of the physical department of the West Side Y. M. C. A., 318 West Fifty-seventh street, might train a body of thirty men selected from among the prison population, in physical exercises.

They have been put through a strenuous course of setting-up exercises and gymnasium games and have just graduated. They are to start at once training the rest of the convicts, and within a week there will be all sorts of physical stunts indulged in by the men who are sentenced to confinement and hard labor.

PRISONERS TO BE TEACHERS.

The agency of the West Side Y. M. C. A. leaders was simply to train a group of leaders to be teachers, themselves, in the prison. The West Side men will go back again in the fall to check up the work done in the prison and probably add to the curriculum. For the present only volunteers will take the exercises, but the prison authorities expect in a short time that each convict will be compelled to go through a course of physical training.

"The men sit inactive in their cells for long periods," said Dr. Louis R. Wellmiller, physical director of West Side. "It makes them morose, dyspeptic and billious and they are more than likely to become vicious and sullen and desperate. A good many of them have a tendency to constipation, these will be given exercises to develop the chest and lungs and all will be given the largest possible muscular development so that those who feel despondent and have a lack of ambition, just from physical inaction, will be put in good mental and physical condition. As the basis of cure is right muscle habits we are starting there and trying to regenerate them.

INCREASES HIS CHANCES.

"The man who comes out of prison in poor physical condition doesn't stand much chance of re-establishing himself if he wants to, but if he is made firm-muscled his chances for success are greatly increased.

"So many men are poisoned as the result of accumulations in the alimentary tract that no matter how hard they try, it is sufficient cause for a break—they cannot get results. The average citizen has a hard enough time to keep straight where he has everything on his side, but where a man has everything against him it is almost impossible for him to come through and take his place in the world of work once more.

"We expect, from the result of this campaign of physical development, to increase the percentage of men who are able to keep out of prison after being released. They will feel that they are fit men and certainly will have a much better opinion of themselves, which means a whole lot in the battle of life; certainly they will be in better condition to receive moral and spiritual advice.

CHINA TO THE FORE.

The Chinese are becoming a factor in pugilism. Out in Portland, Ore., they have discovered a bantam who is touted as the coming champion of the midgets. He is a full blooded Chinese, but has taken the ring name of Tommy Howe as being more snappy than his original cognomen. He weighs 110 pounds and has great speed and a powerful kick. In Philadelphia, a Celestial, who attracted some attention in local ring circles some time ago, has returned to the game and is doing well. The University of Pennsylvania lightweight champion is a Chinaman and a very clever boxer. He thinks so well of the game from a hygenic standpoint that he is ambitious to go to China and teach the youth the mysteries of the jab and uppercut. Most of the Chinese seem to be little fellows so that there is no immediate danger of the heavyweight title going abroad.

WOMAN GOLF PRO MRS. WEBB TAKES CHARGE OF LINKS

NEW YORK, June 3.—Not content with being the only woman golf professional in the country, Mrs. Dunn Webb will be the first woman to take charge of a golf club. Wentworth Hall is the name of the course and it is situated in Jackson, N.H. It is a short nine hole summer course. The lady "pro" will give lessons, sell goods and have a repair shop, assisted by Joe Lally. The latter, who up to last year was an amateur, will do all the repairing.

A year ago James Conners was in charge at Wentworth Hall, and two years before that Jack Shea, now of Kenwood, held it down. The latter made a double circuit of the course, which measures something like 2,600 yards, in 59, going around the first time in 30 and the next in 29. Mrs. Dunn Webb will have her work cut out for her, therefore, if she tries to make a record card.

Mrs. Webb is the daughter of the late Tom Dunn, who was a noted golf instructor and golf architect. She was the first woman instructor in England and taught golf in 1904 at the Princess Golf Club, near London, an organization devoted entirely to women. At the present time she is giving between eighty and ninety lessons a week, and her pupils include two women champions. She is the wife of Prof. Webb, the new professional at the Brae Burn Golf Club.

NAME OF HORSE MAKES MR. COX VERY SICK MAN.

Every time Walter R. ("Long Shot") Cox hears the name of Peter Scott he erperiences a sea sick feeling. The Dover N. H. trainer and reinsman once owned the fleet trotter. He sold him for $15,000 to Tommy Murphy, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. And last season Peter Scott won $50,535. This year he looks good enough for another huge winning.

Is it any wonder that Barton Pardee the owner of the sensational Mabel Trask, has ignored Cox's advice to sell his horse for $25,000. Pardee feels that Mabel ought to win at least that much this summer —and she probably will.

MONTS WANT BASEBALL GAMES.

The Montefiore Baseball Club would like to arrange out of town games with any amateur team in the Province of Quebec. Any team wishing to play them can communicate with J. Grinstein, secretary, 514 St. Urbain street, Montreal.

The Montefiores of the Spalding Montefiore Junior Baseball League are looking for a catcher, pitcher and infielder. Anyone wishing to play for them should see J. Grinstein, 514 St. Urbain street or phone c. 4548.

SPORTING ANSWERS.

J. E. Jackson—Your question is a difficult one of answer and is largely a matter of opinion—On paper Moranville ought to be preferred over Bancroft, Snyder over Archer and MacInnes over Saeir. Their records last year were as follows: Moranville hit 244 in 149 games, and had 55 errors in 932 chances, finishing with an average of .941. Bancroft hit 254 in 153 games and had 64 errors in 892 games, average being 928.

Of the catchers Snyder worked in 144 games, batted 298, had 204 assists, 14 errors and 12 passed balls. His fielding average was 983. Archer batted 243 in 97 games, he had 124 assists, 13 errors and 14 passed balls, standing ninth among the catchers with an average of 977. MacInnes hit 314 in 119 games while Saeir hit 344 in 144 games. MacInnes stood second in fielding with 1,123 put outs, 83 assists and 13 errors, his average was 989. He is placed sixth in the standing, but four of those ahead of him only played a few games. Saeir has a fielding record of 1,348 put outs, 65 assists and 21 errors. His average being 985.

Hosiery Scarce

The war has cut off big hosiery importations. The better grades, particularly, are scarce.

Fortunately, we made arrangements some time ago for raw materials and dyes to produce hosiery for the spring trade up to the capacity of our mills.

The finest imported lines do not surpass Mercury Hosiery in quality, durability or finish. No hosiery has more graceful lines or feels more comfortable on the foot.

Mercury has THE class. You can see it, feel it, and prove it by wearing it.

SAMPLES OF WORK DONE BY STUDENTS OF THE COUNCIL OF ARTS AND MANUFACTURES

COUNCIL OF ARTS DOES GREAT WORK IN FREE CLASSES

Annual Exhibition Opens in Monument National Next Wednesday

TUITION GIVEN VERY PRACTICAL

Boys and Girls Taught Trades and Painting Also

If a school, like the Biblical tree, is to be judged by the fruit it bears, or the pupils it turns out and their work, then the standard attained by the Council of Arts and Manufactures, of the Province of Quebec, is very high indeed.

The Council of Arts and Manufactures, the annual prize distribution, of which, is to take place on Wednesday next, in the Monument National; is the only institution in the province where an education in various industries and arts, thorough and precise in all details, can be obtained without one cent of cost to the pupil. The school has a reputation that it has taken long years of careful study to bring to perfection and one which is jealously guarded by the management and honored and respected by the pupils.

The school was first instituted in 1872 by the Provincial Government of Quebec, under the direction of the department of the provincial secretary, and during the forty-four years of its operation, has done much to help the boy or girl not able to afford the expense of a technical education, to become expert in his or her chosen line of industry. The council has now nine schools in all, throughout the province, affiliated with the Montreal Council. There are schools at:—Montreal, Quebec, Three Rivers, Sherbrooke, Valleyfield, St. John, St. Hyacinthe, St. Rosmuald and Sorel. There are in all, this year, 2,700 pupils, of which 1,786 attend the Montreal School.

SUBJECTS TAUGHT.

The courses that can be taken by the pupils at each school, and for which qualified and competent teachers are provided and paid for by the Government, are given in the following subjects:—Freehand drawing, painting, architecture, sign painting, modelling, lithography, mechanical drawing, stair building and carpentering and joinery, plumbing, ladies' dress cutting and sewing, millinery and solfeggio.

A special grant of $16,000 per annum is made by the Quebec Government for the upkeep and maintenance of the schools. The City of Montreal this year, for the first time, voted $2,000 to the Montreal school. The class of men from which the teachers are drawn will be appreciated when but two instances are given; A. Laliberte, the famous sculptor supervises the modelling classes, while in the course of mechanical drawing the head teacher is the assistant head draughtsman of the Grand Trunk Railway. In addition to the expert at the head of each course of instruction, there are also numerous deputy teachers but each fully qualified in his own department. The school is more especially for artisans and apprentices and it is the aim of the council to make the instruction as practical as possible, in order that the pupils may later profitably apply the knowledge gained in the various trades and branches of industry in which they are engaged.

A specially arranged exhibition of the pupils' work from each of the nine schools will be opened in the Arts room of the Monument National on Wednesday next and will remain open to the public for one week. To those who are interested in this work a visit to the exhibition will be amply repaid, and to those who are ignorant of the work conducted by the school and done by the pupils, the exhibition will prove a very agreeable surprise.

GOOD EXHIBIT.

The large room, decorated with the flags of the Allies, is divided into sections, in which the various classes of the nine schools have their own display. Arranged round the four walls of the hall are specimens of the free hand, architectural and mechanical drawings, each one a work of interest and showing a deep technical knowledge of the pupil of his subject. It is rarely that such a collection of finely made drawings is to be seen on exhibition, and most of these done by boys still in their teens and early twenties.

At the far end of the hall, arranged in tiers, is a collection of the modelling class of the Montreal school.

The above picture shows a number of samples of the work done by the pupils of the Council or Arts and Manufactures, whose annual prize distribution is to take place in the Monument National on Wednesday.

The statues of Venus de Milo and the Roman disc thrower represent classes of the fourth and third years respectively, and were both modelled by the students from casts. The small picture to the bottom of a cluster of grapes, is a bas relief panel, modelled in plaster of paris, the work of a first year student.

The two sketches of women's heads were taken from life and represent the progress of the art student into the fifth year. The plaster bust to the right is the work of a second year student.

The picture of the washbasin with open plumbing will give an idea of the wide diversity of the subjects taught by the council. The ladies' hat also shows the nature of the work taught to women.

The Council of Arts and Manufactures is a Provincial Government institution, and all courses are open to men and women absolutely free.

While many of the plaster of Paris busts are taken from old works of the master sculptors, there are numerous and excellently modelled pieces from life.

From small bas reliefs of fruit and patterns to an almost life size statue of Venus de Milo, one is able to trace the work of the pupils from the first year to the third and fourth years. There are also screens of oil and water colors. Running down the centre of the room are displays of various forms of carpentry and joinery, all wonderfully well executed. The plumbing section is a very outspoken testimony of the thoroughness of the teaching. Were all plumbing done in this manner there would be little need to hide pipes and points. The dress making and millinery sections speak well of the training given the women in these two classes. Not only does the teaching fit a woman for the trade or calling she desires to follow, but renders her independent in the making of her own clothes.

The prize giving is to be presided over by the president, Thomas Gauthier, while the speaker of the evening will be the Hon. J. L. Decarie, provincial secretary. Other representatives of the Government will also be present as well as delegates from the Montreal Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce and the Labor councils.

PILGRIMAGE TO ST. ANNE.

St. Mary's parish are to hold a pilgrimage to St. Anne de Beaupre on Saturday, June 17, by the steamer Montreal. The Rev. A. I. Walsh will accompany the pilgrims. He also has all the arrangements in hand.

BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society will be held in the Warren Home, 43 Belmont Park, on Monday next, at 8 p.m.

There has been recently shown by an American manufacturer of airships a model of the only kite balloon ever constructed for the United States Government which is now being completed for the Navy. The actual balloon will be 175 feet long, 50 feet high and 35 feet in diameter, and is of the type used by the German army. Thousands of such balloons are being used in Europe, both on land and on water and have proved of immeasurable value in directing gunfire.

FRAE AULD SCOTIA.

Special to The Montreal Star From Our Own Correspondent Resident in Glasgow.

GLASGOW, May 12. — Room for the Lewis! If there's a place in a' the British Empire, frae the southmost peak o' New Zealand to the northmost glacier o' Canada, that can show a better record o' patriotism than the Lewis noo is its time to speak up or be for ever silent. For oot a total population o' some 30,000 the Island o' Lewis has sent 4,320 men to fecht against the Kaiser an' his hordes. To put it anither way, the percentage o' the total is 15, an' if we coont men an' boys only the percentage is 33. What it wad be if we had the figures o' the number a' men o' military age in the island I dinna ken, but it wad be 75 per cent sure. For if ilka third male person in the island is a soldier at least three-quarters o' the possible men maun be fechtin' for their country. In ae district—that o' North Tolsta—the percentage o' the total population is 22, an' o' the 400 men 189 are on service—some 47 per cent. After that wha wadna mak room for the Lewis?

A man o' figures has been thinkin' ower this, an' has come to the conclusion that if a' the British Isles had done as weel as the Lewis we wad hae had an army o' 6,500,000 men, no coontin' ae man frae ony o' the Dominions or colonies. An' supposin' a' the Empire, at hame an' ower the seas, had done the same, what an army Britain wad hae had! An', he says, there arena mony folk livin noo wha think it disna maitter whether men, or sheep, or deer inhabit the Hielan' glens. Hoo onybody could hae been sae stupid twa generations syne, as to think that it wad pay the country to evict men to mak room for sheep an' deer is past comprehension. It was just a way o' tryin' to mak the country commit suicide. An' if there hadna been sae mony evictions in the past, or if the government had evicted the lairds, an' encouraged the crofters an' cottars, there wadna hae been sae muckle trouble noo gettin' up an army. There wad hae been Hielan' regiments by the dizzen. Maybe the men are comin' frae Canada, an' Australia, an' New Zealand, an' what was Scotland's loss is the gain o' the Dominions, but we canna help being sorry that the country's rulers in the past were sae wofully stupid.

Noo we talk, an' talk, an' talk—when there isna a war on—aboot gettin' the folk "back to the land," an' aboot encouragin' local industries, an' inventin' new ways o' makin' the glens attractive, but it is a' ower late. The men are awa', an' they winna come back. Ye canna ship cargoes o' humanity frae a country in ae generation, an' get their descendants back in the second or third generation. An' if ye aince gie the hill an' glen folk the habit o' shiftin' to the big toons because they can-A mak a livin' on their hills an' in their glens. Ye winna get them to stop their habit by reducin' the rents o' crofts, or puttin' slated roofs on their hooses. There are some things that can be done but canna be undone, an' the clearin' awa' o' the folk o' a countryside is ane o' them. But the Lewis figures should waken us up a little. For if the Lewis has raised 4,320 soldiers oot o' a population o' 30,000, what wad it hae done if it had ne'er had ony evictions, an' what wad a' the Hielan's hae done if they ne'er had ony?

"HOME INDUSTRIES."

Noo we talk o' "Highland Home Industries!" No lang syne there was in Edinburgh the annual meetin' o' the co-operative Council o' the Highland Home Industries (or a name somethin' like that) an' it was reported that last year the association had paid nearly £3,000 for socks an' yarns, an' ither goods made in the Highlands an' Islands, lots o' it by workers wha used to live by makin' tweeds, but wha couldna get a market for these because o' the war. That's aye a little, but it only helps to keep livin' the folk wha remain. What is needed is some big new law that will mak it worth the while o' the young men as they grow up to stay on the lan! Nae amount o' weavin' o' tweeds, or spinnin' o' yarn, or knittin' o' socks will dae this.

Speakin' o' Highland Home Industries, there's aye somebody talkin' kelp. There seems to be a fixed idea in some folk's heids that an awfu' lot could be done by gatherin' the seaweed o' the seashore, an' dryin' it, an' burnin it, sae as to get the chemicals oot o' it—especially as we canna get these particular chemicals noo-a-days frae Germany. An Aberdeen Professor was lecturin' on this subject in Edinburgh the ither day, an' he admitted that it was difficult —afore the war—to compete wi' Germany, but he didna see why we couldna organize the trade, an' rin it on scientific lines, an' mak it "a flourishing industry."

Maybe aye an' maybe no. Aince upon a time there was decent money to be made oot o' Kelp, but it wasna properly organized when the German competition cam', an' it went under. Germany gets the same chemicals in ither ways, an' will continue to get them after the war, an' if we dinna start at aince, an' hae the Kelp business in proper workin' order afore the war is ower there winna be muckle chance for it. An' just at present we seem to hae ower mony things to think aboot to hae ony time for industries in the Hielan's. The gettin' o' recruits for the Army, for example. If only ilka place wad dae as weel as the Lewis that wadna trouble us muckle.

CLYDE CREDIT SAVED.

The credit o' the Clyde has been saved aince mair. I dinna ken hoo mony times folk hae risen up an' said that the workers o' the Clyde were a bad lot, an' didna dae their duty by their country or themsel's. But the limit was reached twa-three months syne, when ane o' the hapenny Glasgow papers began a series o' articles tryin' to prove that there really were men in the shipyairds an' engine shops that were gettin' "German gold" for makin' trouble in the works, keepin' back ships, an' engines, an' guns, an' shells, that were needed for the navy an' the army, an' daeing' a' they could to encourage strikes, an' a' sorts o' disturbances. The paper began the series, but it ne'er finished it. For the workin' men themsel's rose up in their wrath, an' denounced the wicked libel, an' dared the paper to prove that ae man on the Clyde e'er got a shillin' frae Germany, directly or indirectly; an' threatened somethin' serious if that particular editor didna climb doon.

Which the editor proceeded to dae, wi' a' the dignity he had left, pretendin' that he had ne'er meant that there were traitors amang the real honest workers, but only that some o' them werena exactly discreet in the way they kept their grievances aye afore the public.

This wasna exactly the same thing, but it made peace, an' the "German gold" story got the dull thud. Now we hear frae London that the Government an' the trade unions concerned wi' Clyde labor hae made "a searching inquiry" into the hail business, an' hae come to the conclusion that "while certain features of the disputes gave rise to strong suspicion," there was nae evidence o' the workin's o' German agents.

CANADIAN FORCES HOLD THEIR OWN IN TRENCH ACTION

By Canadian Press.

OTTAWA, June 3.—The following eye-witness story was received from the Canadian representative at the front by Sir Sam Hughes yesterday.

No special operations occurred on the Canadian front during the past week but on both sides artillery was very active. The enemy's front line support trenches, strong points and observation posts were consistently shelled.

Whenever ordinary retaliatory measures failed to check a hostile bombardment the fire of our field, heavy and trench batteries was concentrated on sections of the enemy's defences, with excellent effect. The German parapets were breached and trenches damaged in many places. On various occasions large working parties employed in repairing the damage were caught by our artillery and machine-gun fire.

Fine weather afforded us opportunity for aerial reconnaissance. Several encounters in the air took place. A hostile plane was forced down by anti-aircraft guns but landed behind the German lines.

Bombs and grenades were freely used, particularly at night. In the number of missiles thrown our men had the better of the exchanges. The vigilance and enterprise of our patrols was well maintained.

An excellent reconnaissance was carried out by Lieut. C. G. Power, of Quebec. On the front of a Winnipeg battalion a hostile patrol was attacked with bombs and easily driven off.

Lieut.-General Sir Julian Byng, K. C. M. G., took over command of the Canadian corps fr[illegible]eut.-General Sir Edwin Alders[illegible]

Seeding is General All Over Alberta; Conditions are Good

So far as Alberta is concerned, the weather conditions for farming in the districts served by the Canadian Pacific Railway have been excellent. Ploughing and seeding are general. The land is in a good condition of moisture and the seed being put in is in first class shape. Along the main line and branches north to Red Deer and on the branches south of the main line, 25 per cent. to 30 per cent. of the seeding is completed.

Business conditions in Alberta are considered to be in better shape than at any time since the commencement of the war. There is a steadily increasing demand in practically every line of staple goods.

The past winter has been the best in the history of dairying in Manitoba, thirty creameries working the entire twelve months of the year.

Apolima, the smallest Samoan island, and one of those taken from Germany by the British, will be fortified by the latter into an impregnable work, its natural configuration as an extinct volcano readily lending itself to that purpose. The inhabitants will receive land on another island.

$110,000 FOR THE EMPRESS' VICTIMS, COURT DECIDES

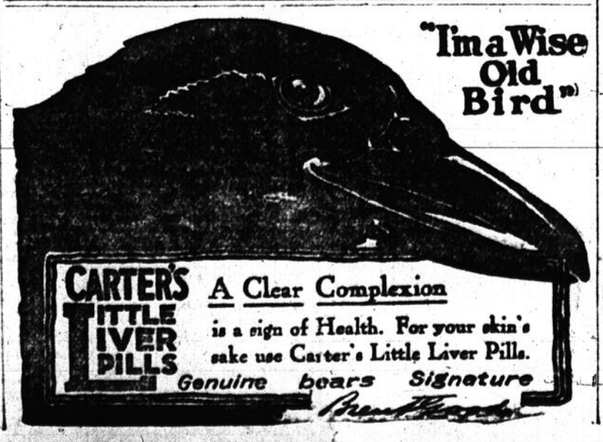

W. Simpson Walker, registrar of the Admiralty Court, announced yesterday his decision in the Empress of Ireland-Storstad suit. He had on hand $182,242 gotten from the sale of the S.S. Storstad, which sank the Empress. Against this claims totaling several millions had been presented. The expenses were $28,140, made up as follows: Sale of ship, $2,004; Judge, $30; registrar, $320; lawyers, $25,784. This left $154,102 to be distributed. His awards were as follows:

To the victims' relatives, $110,128.

This will allow a very small sum to each. One will receive $8,000, another $6,000, and others $3,000 and less.

Nothing was allowed for personal losses.

SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1916.

GENTLEMEN, THE KING!

THROUGHOUT the British world today, we doff hats at the name of the King.

War causes a great people to rally to the institutions and symbols of its greatness—to the men who represent them—with especial fervor. It is now that we feel the deepest thrill as we see the meteor flag flaming red against the blue sky—it is now that we rise with the most complete unanimity and pride to the strains of the National Anthem—it is now that we honor the Crown most highly and raise the heartiest cheer on the birthday of our King.

Nothing solidifies a nation like outside attack. We are fighting for our lives and liberties; and we feel again the old personal loyalty to the Royal house which has ever represented political liberty—not only to us, but to the whole human race. So we turn our faces today toward the centre of the Empire and cheer again for King George V!

Long live the King!

THE NORTH SEA NAVAL BATTLE

THE first startling news of yesterday afternoon is bettered today by the supplementary report of our Commander-in-Chief. He speaks more definitely of the enemy's losses, and puts them at a higher figure than was either claimed or admitted yesterday. Yesterday we would only say that "one battleship is reported to have been sunk by our destroyers." The Germans admitted this in the loss of the Pommern. But today our report says that "one Dreadnought battleship of the Kaiser class was blown up in an attack by British destroyers."

The Pommern is far from being in the Kaiser class. It has only about half the tonnage, and only four 11-inch guns, as against ten 12-inch on ships of the Kaiser class. As the Admiral is positive that we got a battleship of the Kaiser class, it looks as if the Germans are seeking to fool us into thinking that it was only the Pommern. It is "believed" that we got another of these ships by gun-fire; but, of course, this is not yet certain.

Then it is reported today with equal positiveness that a battle-cruiser of late construction—possibly the Derfflinger or the Lutzow—was blown up, and that two others were badly damaged. None of these losses were admitted by the Germans yesterday, though we claimed all except the disabling of the third of this group. We are more positive today, too, about the enemy losses in lighter craft; while we are now able to limit our loss in destroyers to eight. Altogether it is a better report than that we went to sleep on last night. But it is sufficiently grievous.

Our losses are chiefly centred in the three battle-cruisers sunk. These are "capital ships" and of a class which this war has proven to be of the greatest value. Naval experts frequently claim that they are worth more than Dreadnought battleships. The Queen Mary is the best; the Invincible is of the first vintage of this crop, being classed with the Indomitable, which Canadians will remember was the "mystery ship" that brought King George (then Prince of Wales) over to the Tercentenary; the Indefatigable is a sister-ship to the New Zealand, which makes it of especial interest to Canadians. For, if we had been allowed to build our three Dreadnought cruisers as our contribution to naval defence, they would probably have been of this class. Would the British Admiralty and the British Empire like to have these three Canadian ships today, on the morrow of losing three similar ships from the most necessary and denuded arm of the navy; or would they not?

* * * * *

While yesterday's news came as a shock and an amazing surprise, it is no occasion for pessimism. We still have an overwhelming superiority in sea power. Our battleship fleet is undamaged. There is no more danger of the invasion of the British Isles than there was a week ago. The Germans have too much leeway to make up to render them dangerous at sea, even if they win other victories like this. It is altogether probable that their escape on this occasion was due to exceptional and accidental circumstances, against which our naval leaders will carefully safeguard themselves in the future. Fortune will not always favor the cowardly. We are prepared to out-manoeuvre and out-point the Germans; but we cannot always be ready to out-point chance.

THE ENEMY AT HIS BEST

THE Germans pretend to be indulging so openly in peace talk because they are in such a strong military position as not to fear that their advances may be misunderstood as confessions of weakness. Yet every German who knows anything about the real situation, must know that this is by no means the truth. He must know—even if he be impervious to the plain evidences that the Allies will eventually win—that his own nation is today at the apex of her achievement. She cannot hope to get into a better military position than that she now occupies. And even if our imaginary intelligent German does not believe that his rulers see Fate stalking toward them with grim and thunderous strides, he cannot escape perceiving that they are eagerly talking peace because they will never be in a better position to do so.

They have given over all hope of piercing the Western front. Their determined and desperate assault against the Verdun salient betrays unmistakably this hopelessness. If they hoped to smash through the Allied lines, they would never try to make this gap so far from Paris. They would be attacking near Soissons and not near Verdun if this were their idea. The very fact that they are attacking at Verdun reveals that all they seek is a victory of prestige—and they will not get that. So, by their own confession, they have reached the apex of their achievement on the Western front.

On the Russian front, there is nothing to be gained. They know this so well that they have not even yet opened their much-advertised spring offensive. They failed definitely and finally here when last summer they did not succeed in surrounding and "Sedaning" any of the brilliantly-led Russian armies. A few miles this way or that for the line they hold, matters nothing. The Russians are more apt to drive it toward Berlin than the Germans are to bend it toward Moscow; but they have obviously given up all hopes of putting Russia out of business—which was their sole hope in this direction. Russia will fight "for twenty years."

They have made their last possible "killing" in the Balkans. They occupy Serbia, Montenegro and Albania, except Avlona. They have apparently paralyzed Roumania. Greece is neutral with Bulgar troops on her soil—the last test! What more can they hope for here? Austria has undertaken the task of pushing down into Italy; but—unless the Allies have failed to learn the lesson of Serbia—Austria will have no chance whatever of success. The Italians are most gallantly holding back the invaders now; and, if they should happen to feel any doubt in the future about their ability to do so, single-handed, they ought to get immediate support from the rest of the Entente.

The threatened Turk attack on Egypt was never delivered. The Turks had an army to spare after our withdrawal from Gallipoli; but they did not send it across the Arabian sands to the Suez—though Cairo is to them what Constantinople is to Russia, a city of great desire. The reason why they did not even attempt this campaign to recover their empire on the Nile, was because the British were so strongly entrenched and garrisoned in Egypt that the Turks knew in advance that their hopes were nil. And what they could not do last winter, under most favorable conditions at home, they will never be better able to do.

In fact, they have now lost Armenia and are fighting for the defence of Baghdad. Thus they have nothing to hope and much to fear from a prolonged war. Bulgaria is in a similar position. She has got Macedonia, for which she went to war—she has got a part of Albania, which Austria will never permit her to keep, if the decision be with the Teutons—she has penetrated Greek Macedonia. There is nothing further for her to win. There is much for her to lose. So she is for peace.

Plainly the Allies are not to be caught in this obvious trap. They see that every change in the military situation is likely to be to their advantage. Our game is clearly to hold our ring firmly at every point, and fight on. Only when in a much better military position can we enter a peace conference with anything like a prestige which is ours for the taking. We must not permit the Germans to buy themselves out of their final fate by offering a spot partial cash payment, as it were—that is, by admitting now a measure of defeat if we will let them off from the rest of the debt.

George V.—born June 3, 1865. God save the King!

"If blood be the price of Admiralty, Lord God! We have paid in full."

There is no reason why the suggested recruiting campaign for the British navy in Canada should not be successful We have a maritime population which long ago established its name throughout the Seven Seas. There is no service on earth which would appeal to them more.

THE WORLD'S PRESS

Enough Talk

New York Herald:—The President has, perhaps, done as much talking about peace as is wise at this time if he expects to be accepted as one of the council to bring about the first armistice.

Declaration of Independence a Blunder?

New York Sun:—The pacifist who told the crowd in Madison Square that Canada was politically as well off as the United States and therefore the Revolution was an unnecessary war is as poor a student of history as he is republican. The British imperial policy was modified in many important details because of the lessons taught by the American rebellion.

An Unfortunate Illustration

French Tribute to the Anzacs

Le Journal (Paris):—There is no finer title to glory in this war than that gained by the heroes of Gallipoli. Their sacrifices were made in vain, but gained them undying fame. History will tell again and again the story of the great deeds of these improvised soldiers from the Antipodes who struggled vainly in those tragic days to wrest the key to the Straits from the enemy. These brave men of Anzac are now to take part in our battles, and they will find here brothers-in-arms worthy of them.

"Hold Fast to This"

Westminster Gazette:—The relative insignificance of the rebel movement and its swift condemnation by the Parliamentary leaders tell their own tale. If the greater part of Ireland has rallied to us in this war, if the Irish members have joined with the British in keeping the unity of Parliament in face of the enemy, it is because of the efforts which have been made in recent years to heal the old quarrel and to pave the way for Irish self-government subject to the supremacy of the Imperial Parliament. Whatever we do, let us hold fast to this.

Preparedness Rests on Common Sense

Boston Transcript:—There can be no adequate preparedness in this country unless the people, who are not militaristic and never can be, are for it. Evidently they are for it, and will have it, in spite of illogical pacifists and German-vote-fearing Congressmen. It is only as a national spontaneous and fundamentally civil movement that preparedness can succeed. It rests on the plain every-day sense and prudence of a people who do not like to fight but can fight very successfully if they have to, and who are beginning to realize that in this epoch fighting is carried on with things which have to be got ready.

For the Sake of Democracy

Boston Transcript:—It is quite certain that only through universal military instruction and service, made compulsory, just as other education is made compulsory, can a sufficient degree of preparedness for defence be attained and maintained. Thomas Jefferson, the greatest of all our early apostles of democracy and of peace, held exactly that view more than a century ago, and urged it upon the nation. But if such were not the case, if it were possible to have satisfactory preparedness without it, we should still advocate such a system because it is so perfectly accordant with republican principles and is so strongly demanded by them. It is not preparedness against or in spite of democracy, but preparedness in the name of and for the sake of democracy.

The Larger Good to Come

Springfield Republican:—Men and nations are the creatures of circumstance, but the story of mankind does not let it go at that. Always we must cling to the thought of an overruling Providence, with a larger plan than heated men can see at the moment. If, in the scheme of God, moral forces are bound to prevail and the ultimate good to come, it might well be that the struggle of today will serve to bring in that which has been the highest aspiration of the human race, and that which ought to be in reality. We could not see the end of the path while our civic war was being fought, but that out of the passions of that time came the larger good of all concerned we can recognize in the backward look. From what has been we all the time argue to what will be again.

Three Hundred Years Ago

London Telegraph:—It is difficult to realize the strained exettement in England three hundred years ago while our ancestors were waiting for the dreaded invasion. There were no Allies to help England, the people of the Netherlands were too hardly pressed to give us aid. The Spanish fleet was three times as great as ours, and according to the doctrine of probabilities, there ought to have been no disputing its command of the sea. Liberty was at stake, the very existence of our country menaced by a danger far greater than that which threatens us nowadays, because the national services had been starved, and the balance of strength was so decidedly against us. We know what the issue was. "Jehovah blew," and his enemies were scattered"—such was the proud inscription on the medal which signalized the safety of the Netherlands.

After the War Trade

London Chronicle:—It is comparatively of little use to starve the German trade organizations unless we establish trade organizations of our own permanently to take their place. To this end the Government offer every encouragement; but they can do little, unless British commercial men and producers make a real effort to co-operate with them and with each other. The enterprise is important, not only for the morrow of the war (when the need for exports and the slump in belligerent markets will render these neutral markets of the utmost consequence), but also for bringing pressure on the enemy while the war lasts. It means hitting Germany in one of her most sensitive spots, and doing much to deprive the German Government's war policy of the support of the very influential German business magnates.

The Best Rubber Heel Made Costs You No More Than Other Brands

There is a vast difference between Cat's Paw Rubber Heels and ordinary rubber heels. Yet no difference in the price you pay.

Cat's Paw Heels wear longer than the ordinary rubber heel because they are made of specially selected rubber and reinforced with a Canvas Friction Plug. This Plug prevents slipping on wet, icy, or polished surfaces.

CAT'S PAW CUSHION RUBBER HEELS

Make your step lighter and your walking easier and safer than you have ever experienced. Cat's Paw Heels give enough sound to every step to keep you out of the "Gum Shoe" class. The hard surface of the Canvas Friction Plug does away with this rubber heel weakness.

Cat's Paw Rubber Heels for both men and women. All sizes and shapes to fit any shoe. First class dealers carry them at standard prices—50c attached.

Remember, don't ask merely for rubber heels! Ask for "Cat's Paw" and be sure you get them. Look for the black cat on the box and the Canvas Friction Plug in the heel.

THE PASSING HOUR

Two travellers just back from their holiday trip were disputing as to which had experienced the greatest cold. Said one:

"In the part of Ireland where I was the ground is frozen so hard all the year round that when they want to bury a man they just sharpen his feet and drive him in with a pile driver."

The other replied:

"Yes, I know that place. Didn't stay there long; found it not bracing enough for me; went on to a small town further north. The hotel where I was staying caught fire. No fire escapes or ladders in that primitive settlement. Staircase burned away. Luckily kept my presence of mind. Emptied my bath out of the window and slid down the icicle."

There recently entered a Washington shop a dusky person who announced that he wished to purchase a razor.

"Safety?" asked the clerk.

FROM THE STAR FILES

THIRTY YEARS AGO.

The Late Grover Cleveland.

"WASHINGTON, June 3. — Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, and Miss Frances Folsom were married at the White House last evening. The city was gay with interest. Queen Victoria sent a cable of congratulation." — From The Montreal Star, June 3, 1886.

The late Grover Cleveland (1837-1908) was the only President to serve a second term, with another (Harrison) in office between the two periods. Mr. Cleveland's first term was uneventful, but marked by firmness, justice and steady adherence to the principles he deemed salutary to the nation. He made large use of the veto power upon bills passed by Congress, vetoing or "pocketing" 118 bills, more than two-thirds of which were private pension bills.

Mr. Cleveland ran a second time for the Presidency in 1888, but Benjamin Harrison (Republican) was elected. Mr. Cleveland retired to private life and resumed the practice of law in New York.

In 1892 Mr. Cleveland was nominated for the third time in succession, and won. His second term embraced some notable events, the most important being the repeal of the silver legislation. It was in the course of his second term that Mr. Cleveland added 44,004 places to the classified civil service, and became known as the "gold" Democrat.

After his second term expired, Mr. Cleveland retired to Princeton, New Jersey, where he was Stafford Little lecturer on public affairs at the university. He was the author of "Presidential Problems," and "Fishing and Hunting Sketches."

"Thirty-five candidates presented themselves today in William Molson Hall, McGill College, for examination for the degree of associate in arts. Twelve were ladies."—From The Montreal Star, June 3, 1886.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

(Written for The Star.)

To the Editor.

With the great influx of French and Belgian immigrants probably many families instead of taking the long journey to the North-West will scatter over the beautiful Laurentian Hills.

A little over a hundred miles from Montreal, after travelling up steep mountains by the C. P. R. train, we reach Nominingue, a vast plain of several miles on the very top of high mountains. The boon of having a level surface for a village, or city, should be appreciated, because a town all hills and dales has numberless disadvantages.

On the other hand, when a colony is established which affords an even surface, the residents certainly have the convenience of level roads, pleasant for pedestrians, and preferable for horses and automobiles, but, in rainy weather and in spring after the melting away of tons upon tons of snow the moisture of low-lying land is depressing and unhealthy.

A person who had travelled extensively in Europe, and over a great part of the Dominion, said to the writer, "I am lost in astonishment at finding at the top of these high mountains—what I have never seen before—so vast a plain, the residents have the benefit of bracing, invigorating air, without the inconvenience of hilly streets."

Even after a week or ten days of steady rain, on the following day the dust is blowing, the rain having quickly found its way to the numerous lakes and the river.

When we daily read of the magnificent vigor and prodigious strength of our brave Kilties from the Hielands of Scotland, we ought to understand the value of living in mountainous regions.

On the vast plain of Nominingue, within a radius of twenty-five miles, there are eighty lakes, some of them full of salmon trout and dore, and all of them having abundance of pike.

Lake Bourget, ten minutes' walk from the C. P. R. station, joins a little lake (Lafleche), which empties itself into what is called little Lake Nominingue. A stream connects this lake with Great Lake Nominingue, and finally all these waters find their way to the Red River, passing through Labelle and many other towns and villages in its course.

The stream connecting the two large lakes, if properly damned, would form a water power of great force, capable of working extensive machinery, besides supplying electric light to the railway and at least two small towns. The stream passes under the railway bridge, where a station could be established.

Those interested in placing newly arrived and enterprising immigrants in regions not too far off might do well in suggesting Lake Nominingue.

ROK.

A BELIEVER IN CHURCH UNION.

The Editor, Montreal Daily Star.

Sir,—Permit me through The Star to make comment upon Rev. Mr. Lee's letter regarding church union. In face of his being an ardent advocate of church union, his argument against same, because of a "want of unanimity" is in my opinion somewhat lame. Where in Christendom can you find "unanimity" in religious matters, far less in the polity of same? Is there ever "unanimity" in the calling or selection of a minister for his own church? If a call is agreed upon by the majority it is "made" unanimous. If ministers of the gospel, knowing the supreme benefits to be derived from union wait for "unanimity," no wonder the average member and adherent who constitute the "large majority" wait as they did. "Enforced church union" of course we would rather avoid, but a much smaller majority for prohibition have often forced it upon communities and the strong and determined minority had to abide by it—albeit they soon found out that no calamity or disaster occurred, but rather a blessing to all concerned was the result. In a Presbyterian church not a hundred miles from Renfrew a former pastor was in favor of union, and logically advocated it, with the result that the congregation shared his views. The present minister is against union and the congregation gave a majority against union when the last vote was taken. Let ministers who have given their life's work to preaching of the gospel and know the roorbacks encountered in propagating same, preach, as Mr. Lee confesses, "that more efficient work can be done for Christ in Canada by concerted Christian love, and a fair degree of unanimity will quickly manifest itself. Why is it that this "fair degree of unanimity" has been shown by the Methodists and Congregationalists and not by the Presbyterians? As a Scotchman bred and born, I reluctantly answer, by blaming to a large extent the hard-headed, bred-in-the-bone Presbyterians from the old land, and, after all, they were not Presbyterians there, but something akin. The late Rev. Dr. Campbell, speaking upon the topic "Why Am I a Presbyterian," found it unusually hard to answer the question, and quoted the old Scotchman as saying "It wad be too muckle of a departure to be onything else!" From what? The teaching of Christ? Well, notwithstanding such "material opposition," the sister churches who desire union have done a glorious work for the Master, and it is solely because they believe they can do even better that they favor union and have no fear for a divided Methodist or Congregational Church."

I am, yours truly,

A. W. EASTON.

At Kenton, Tenn., after a courtship of forty-two years, P. L. Yates and Miss Kate Reager have been married. The groom is sixty-seven years old and the bride is fifty-six. Their courtship began in their school days. Yates said he never believed he could afford to marry until he had paid for 1,000 acres of land, had $10,000 in a bank and had built and furnished a home for his bride.

Bread Lines Lengthening in Suffering Belgium

Hungry Women are Grateful for Scanty Fare Provided by Belgian Relief Fund

So long as their heroic husbands and fathers are fighting with the Allies, Germany will not raise a finger to save from starvation those Belgian women and children in the territory she has overrun. She permits the Belgian Relief Commission to feed them, but her heartless attitude is indicated by the recent torpedoing of two relief ships. Their cargoes were fully insured, of course, as are all shipments made by the Commission, so no contributions were lost. But much anxiety is felt lest even the delay in getting food over may cost precious lives.

For all Belgium is dangerously short of food. Nearly three millions are penniless as well—and the number of these is growing fast as accumulated savings are exhausted.

This means continually growing demands on the Belgian Relief Fund. To meet them more Canadians must contribute, and those who have been giving must be even more liberal. The only alternative is to let our devoted Allies perish!

This is a plain statement of perhaps the most appealing cause in history—a cause that has stirred the hearts and opened the purses of thousands. Has it opened yours? Have you in your security done your share for those sufferers who, but for an accident of geography, might have included your own wife and children, or yourself?

Books Worth Reading

CHRONICLES OF CANADA—the second issue, ten volumes, edited by G. M. Wrong and H. H. Laugton (Toronto: Glasgow, Brook & Co.).

When the first twelve volumes of this series were issued in the summer of 1914, they were noted in these columns as something decidedly new and "worth while" in the writing of Canadian history. The second issue, of ten volumes, more than conforms the earlier impression.

It has been the aim of editors and publishers alike to produce a series of books of Canadian history, which will strike the middle line between the elementary text book of the school room, necessarily condensed and wholly unimaginative and the scholars history, compiled from documents, elaborate, often complicated and so long as to make it practically unavailable for the ordinary reader. With this very common-sense object always before them they have followed the wise course in most cases of selecting single phases and personalities and devoting to each a volume, well bound, printed and illustrated and of a size which will conveniently slip into a coat pocket. This second series consists of the following volumes: "Tecumseh," by Ethel T. Raymond, "The War Chief of the Ottawas," by Thomas Guthrie Marquis, "The War With the United States," and "The Great Fortress," by William Wood, "The Founder of New France," by Charles W. Colby, "The Day of Sir John Macdonald," by Sir Joseph Pope, "The Tribune of Nova Scotia," by William L. Grant, "The Family Compact," by William Stewart Wallace, "The Red River Colony," by Louis Aubrey Wood and "Pioneers of the Pacific Coast," by Agnes C. Laut.

This is an attractive list, alike of titles and authors. Unfortunately it is impossible to give the individual volumes the notice they deserve. The work has most worthily done; the result is a racy always interesting series of narratives which rest upon a solid foundation of fact and have not been allowed to be swayed from truth and ...ice by any considerations whatever. In several of the volumes popularly accepted beliefs have been subjected to courageous handling and many a new light cast upon familiar objects. There are, thank Heaven, no mere adulations in the books on our great men, dead and gone.

In a word, on "The Chronicles of Canada" series the editors, Professor G. M. Wrong and H. H. Langton, of the University of Toronto have given us a number of volumes, any one of which can safely without fear of boredom, be slipped into a pocket or a suit case to read on train or holiday—and what more severe test than this can there be? We have waited many years for just such a series as this.

Mrs. Atherton Has Picked a Regular Bad 'Un as Heroine

MRS. BALFAME, by Gertrude Atherton (Toronto: McClelland, Goodchild and Stewart).

"Mrs. Balfame has made up her mind to commit murder."

This is Mrs. Atherton's opening sentence. After that, what is there to do but stick closely to the book till one finds out whether or not Mrs. B's nefarious projects matured and what happened?

Mrs. Balfame—who was a married lady of twenty-two years' standing—was a strong feminist, although she had no particular desire to vote. She was a passionless woman, and in the course of years, as the lives of her and her husband developed, the drawbacks and irritations of the situation became more apparent to her. Mrs. Balfame had been suggesting to her husband a change in their mutual domestic arrangements. She had been thinking again upon an ambition to have an apartment of her own, chastely papered and furnished in cold pale blue, "having an uneasy instinct that pink and lavender were immoral." You may be surprised to know that it was her husband that Mrs. Balfame decided to murder. Once before she had contemplated divorce, but had turned away from the idea as unprofitable. It would destroy her social scheme. Now the idea of disposing of Balfame by poison suddenly occurred to her as she, the president, sat listening at the Friday Club to a stirring address by a star speaker from New York on the subject of "The European War vs. Women," and she thought that matter out very thoroughly while the speech was being delivered, even to the method of poisoning, for which she had an excellent idea—to poison, by means of cholera, typhus, or small-pox germs, instead of with the usual stuff kept in blue bottles, which made detection certain afterwards.

In other words, Mrs. Balfame is a thorough going bad 'un and we could have borne up well had she come to a sudden end on the scaffold. But she didn't. Balfame was murdered all right, but it wasn't Mrs. Bal—but not another word about that! Mrs. Atherton's story shall remain inviolate. It is a clever book as Gertrude Atherton's always are clever in plot, dramatic in sequel, puzzling, fascinating and absorbing all at once.

From the North Sea to the Vosges by the Trench Route

VIVE LA FRANCE! by Alexander Powell (Toronto: McClelland, Goodchild and Stewart).

"To France whose courage, serenity and sacrifices, in a conflict which she did nothing to provoke, have won her the sympathy, respect, and admiration of the world," runs Mr. Powell's dedication. The author is a citizen of a neutral country, but as the above inscription and, indeed, the title of the book itself, suggests, his neutrality has been completely forgotten in contemplating at very close range, the glorious achievements of our great ally.

Mr. Powell has been given exceptionally good opportunity to see things for himself along the lines. Apparently also he has been accorded equal liberty among the Belgians. The illustrations of his book are unusually interesting and vivid photographs, and one wonders how he got either permission or opportunity to take the pictures he did. He made the "grand tour" of the trenches from the sand dunes below Ostend to the pine clad hills of Alsace, and he is in consequence at once a proud and a humble man.

An able writer, perhaps the climax of the whole book is reached in the chapter in which he describes the immortal fight at Ypres, St. Julien and Langemarck. There will not be a Canadian who can read the too few pages which he has been able to devote to this story without feeling a quickened heart beat. It is a splendid story, splendidly told. He visited the French front in Champagne not very long after the great French drive of a year ago, and his descriptions of the sights and sounds and smells are often terribly realistic.

There have been a great many volumes written by correspondents who have seen a certain amount and imagined more. Mr. Powell has seen so much that his imagination is not called into play. Consequently, "Vive la France!" is worth reading.

A DELICATE OPERATION.

The Sweet Singing of Sara Teasdale

RIVERS TO THE SEA, by Sara Teasdale (Toronto: The Macmillans, $1.25).

Most of us who are old-fashioned enough to be still somewhat bewildered and made uneasy by vers libre and all the rest of it, will welcome this book with open arms. The one quality which more than any other will endear Mrs. Teasdale's poetry to her readers, is that it sings most melodiously. And as good singing sets up a melody in the heart of the hearer till there is song there too, let us be grateful for "Rivers to the Sea."

It is a collection of lyrics, at first mainly concerned with love themes, then wandering happily away to other things. Although essentially of a quiet and sometimes quaint character, occasionally one comes across a bit of pure abandon, such, for example, as the little poem "I Am Not Yours."

In the one longer poem, "Sappho," with which the book closes the poetess shows herself a quite sufficient mistress of blank verse. In this poem also the singing quality is ever present, and, being sweet singing, ever agreeable.

None of it may be poetry of the highest mark, but in these days when so much that passes for the best in poetry, limps and halts and struggles by on crutches, let us thank heaven for gentle little warblings that will scan!

All Diplomats are Liars, Says This Author in Haste

WHAT IS DIPLOMACY? by Charles W. Hayward (London: Grant Richards).

To the question asked by his title, Mr. Hayward answers by several "short and ugly" words. Diplomacy is lying, diplomacy is cheating, diplomacy is deceiving, diplomacy is everything but mayhem and stealing goose eggs apparently. Naturally, therefore it would seem to follow that a diplomat is a man who commits all these crimes, a man who would climb a porch when the family is out, or steal a dead mouse from a blind kitten. The author doesn't say all this in just these words, but he says a good deal more in better language. Moreover, he cites innumerable instances from history to prove his case. To do him justice though, he "backs up" a little when it comes to the diplomats. They are, he admits, a little better than the systems under which they work.

If we follow Mr. Hayward's advice we shall arise and demand that truth, justice and candor shall take the place of the present method of doing diplomatic business, which is quite the reverse of all this. Perhaps Mr. Hayward is quite right in all he says, but what he has written does not contain any suggestion as to how we shall remedy matters. We can arise and demand till we are blank in the face, and not get anywhere in particular until human nature changes a little. A futile book, this.

A Little Bundle to Take on Holidays

MADCAP JANE, by C. A. Dawson Scott (London and Edinburgh: T. Nelson & Sons, Ltd., 15 cents).

A whimsical little tale is "Madcap Jane," the story of a little unsophisticated girl who marries Sir Julyan George, a widower, much older than she is and very dignified, the county magistrate. Jane rebels against all the dignity and in a fit of petulance, runs away and takes a position as housemaid in the establishment of Sir Julyan's first mother-in-law. Complications ensue as they naturally would, and the little Lady Jane finds the servant's hall with its loves, and jealousies and near-tragedies just as absorbing in its way as life abovestairs. Her experiences give her a new viewpoint on life, and she finds her solution, just as many other people have found the solution of life-problems, through her first, real work.

"Rancher Cartaret" is one of the characteristic Bindloss Canadian novels. Sydney Cartaret is a fairly well-off young Englishman who comes over to Canada on a trip intending to spend some time visiting his Canadian relations in British Columbia. Before he arrives, however, he receives word that the Cartaret bank has failed, and his brother has met death in an accident which looks suspiciously like suicide. He pluckily decides to take what is left of his travelling allowance and to use it to make good in Canada. He buys a small ranch and then proceeds to go through the trials of the "tenderfoot" Englishman, such as Bindloss loves to depict. It is a good story of its type, and will doubtless interest the Englishmen who regard Canada as the natural goal of the younger son.

DO THE DEAD KNOW? by Annesley Kenealy (London: Stanley Paul's Empire Library).

Sylvia Gerard, a beautiful young heiress, died in the house of a wealthy aunt, and the aunt sends her to a "mortuary," to await burial. But Sylvia was not really dead, and what happens to her, and to the aunt, who schemes with a rascally solicitor to cheat Sylvia's fiance out of his inheritance, make a thrilling tale, of the sort which Miss Kenealy's readers have grown to expect from her. It is rather difficult to understand the title "Do the Dead Know?" as from it one would expect a tale of mysticism, of transmigration of souls, or of some other occult doctrine, but there is so much of death, and of people who are dead in the story that possibly that explains the title. The undertaker, who is in charge of the mortuary and his assistants, are criminals of the meanest type, and the whole story is gruesome and flesh-chilling, even though it sustains the interest to the dramatic finish.

CREAM TOASTS, by Fred Emerson Brooks (Chicago: Forbes & Company, 15 cents).

Just a little book of everyday verse is "Cream Toasts," but it carries its own message because it sings the song of the workaday world and everyday life. One of the prettiest bits in the book is called "To Create":—

To think a thought which no one thought before;
Create a joy in some poor, ragged breast
To bear a gift unto some longing lad
Who little wants and little makes so glad.
Creating bliss in some unwonted heart
Makes you Creator and of God a part.

Mr. Brooks has no great thought to give to the world, but he will find his own audience.

One of the latest of the useful Nelson library is "Donald Ross of Heimra," by William Black, an interesting novel set in the Highlands of Scotland, and dealing with the adventures of a charming young English girl who inherits an estate which her uncle has bought from Donald Ross. Mary Stanley, the heiress, has pronounced ideas of the duties of the land-owner, and she decides to live on her estate with her companion and friend, Kate Glendinning, in order that she may settle any differences and see that justice is done to her tenants. When she arrives, however, she finds that the stubborn highlanders still regard young Ross as their laird, and wish to hove nothing to do with her. It is only when young Ross himself comes to her rescue that she begins to make any progress in the affections of her people, and in the end her problem is satisfactorily solved in the usual and appropriate way. It is a pretty story and will be of particular interest to those who are acquainted with the Scottish mind.

DEAL WOODS, by Latta Griswold (The Macmillan Company of Canada, $1.25).

Given a boarding-school for boys, and the usual varied assortment of boys and their masters, you have a fairly familiar background for a story, but Deal Woods differs from the average boy's story in that it treats less of the pranks of the students—though there are enough of these chronicled—than it does of the school politic and the school ideals. That makes interesting reading, both for boys and grownups, because it gives you a clearer insight into the boy's habits of mind. Victor Orofino, hero of the story, if here you can call the main character in such a book, is a romantic figure, because of the fact that he is heir to an Italian prince, although he is himself a sturdy, democratic American. How he overcomes the various faults he has when he enters college and works out his own redemption, assisted by his little chum Ned Trelegar, gives you a great deal of respect for the American-Italian princeling, and makes you realize that a boy's school is something else than merely a training ground for athletics and a place where you learn Latin and Greek. If you are a boy or you have to train boys, you will find Victor and his friends interesting.

SIR WILFRID IS SPEAKING TONIGHT

Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier arrive this morning to attend the "soiree de gala" tonight at the Monument National for the benefit of the 178th Battalion, commanded by Lieut.-Col. R. de la Bruere Girouard. Sir Wilfrid will give a patriotic address.

Sir Wilfrid will be received at the Monument by Hon. Lieut.-Col Perreault, Col. Girouard, and officers of the 178th and members of the ladies' committee. During the speech of Sir Wilfrid officers of the 178th will be around him as a guard of honor.

HAPPY FIELD DAY OF 150TH TROOPS ON AMHERST SOIL

Soldiers of French-Canadian Battalion Excelled Themselves in Sports

Forming the chief attraction to the citizens of Amherst the field sports of the 150th French-Canadian Carabiniers Mont Royal, proved beyond all expectations. Under a warm sun the contestants and spectators enjoyed themselves fully. The popularity of the 150th Battalion was made evident, when over 2,000 eye witnesses gathered on the track side and over the Freeman Field to watch the largest military athletic meet ever held in that section of the Maritime Provinces.

It is well known, that among the ranks of the 150th, some of the best athletes in the Province of Quebec can be found.

MANY PRIZES.

The local merchants willingly made up an exceptionally long list of prizes. The khaki clad runners who were declared winners, felt delighted at the suitability of the various donations.

Commencing the day with a parade of the streets of Amherst, the 800 men in the battalion marched to the grounds to the clear musical strains of the bugle band, together with inspiring martial airs rendered by the Regimental Brass Band. Passing through streets gay with flags and bunting, in honor of the late Queen Victoria's Birthday, the 150th Battalion, presented a spectacle of interest to the many citizens on the street.

Then the day's fun started. The kitchens were erected upon the grounds, and from the time the cooks started the day duty, the gallant but boy-like soldiers were taking care that they did not starve themselves. The regular dinner was served on the grounds at 12:15 and at 5:15 p.m. the men were one and all ready to consume another meal, which they did.

HUMOROUS RACES.

Many of the races were very funny. The sack race, the wheelbarrow race, obstacle race, etc. In the last named race, the quartermaster is alleged to have left numerous nails in the bulky barrels. The contestants in several instances who entered the barrels clothed in conventional running garb, emerged destitute of considerable clothing, but wiser in experience.

The tug-of-war was the great feature of the day. After a long drawn contest, No. 4 Company was acclaimed victorious.

Major Stern, Capt. Hinton and Capt. Leprohon, as judges, arbitrated all serious questions in a manner decidedly peaceful. Always they arrived at an unanimous decision. Capt. Louis Keene officiated in the capacity of starter. After a few expressive phrases, such as "Are You Ready," "Set," Capt. Keene would point his weapon of war skyward, and invariably the men got away with the detonation.

Lieut. Caddotte occupied a prominent position as clerk of the course. With such a committee of officers in charge the sports could be nothing else but successful.

SUMMARY OF EVENTS.

100 Yards Dash—1st, Corp. Hall; 2nd, Prefontaine; 3rd, Mectaau.

Sir Roger Casement's brother Tom, who lately kept a tourists' hotel on the Drakensberg, near Harrismith (Orange Free State), is now serving with the transport corps of the Union contingent in East Africa. He also went through the South-West Africa campaign.

Dean Inge, in a sermon at St. Paul's cathedral, London, urged the amending of the church calendar so as to always bring Easter in mid-April.

A Monthly Income for Life

SUPPOSE you knew for certain that when your earning days are over your present income would be replaced by another—one which would be adequate for the support of yourself and of your family! And suppose you were sure that income would continue as long as the need for support exists! Can you imagine anything more comforting?

For Yourself in Old Age

NINETY-FIVE out of every hundred men who live to be sixty years of age are then dependent upon their daily earnings or upon charity for their support. It was this condition that caused Lord Rothschild, the eminent banker, to say that "while it required a great deal of boldness and of caution to amass a fortune, it required ten times greater wit to keep it."

But you can easily escape the misfortune of being dependent in your old age. Simply invest a portion of your earnings for a few years in an Imperial Monthly Income Endowment. Then, beginning when you are 55 or 60, or at whatever age you choose, we will send to you—regularly—each month—for the rest of your life—a cheque to provide for your comfort and independence.

If you should die before the policy matures the Monthly Income will be paid to whomever you have named as your beneficiary. And these Monthly Income payments will be made to you or to your beneficiary for not less than 20 years, no matter when your death may occur.

For Your Wife in Widowhood

YOUR salary will stop with your pulse. But your widow and children will still require shelter, food, clothing, education.

You can provide now for these needs by means of an Imperial Monthly Income Policy. Then after you're gone we will send to your widow—regularly—each month—a cheque for $25, $50, $100, or whatever sum you may choose. These Monthly Income payments will commence immediately after your death. They will continue as long as your widow lives. Should she not live to receive at least 240 Monthly Income cheques, the balance of that number will be paid to her estate.

There is no other provision you can make for her that is so sure and, at the same time, so convenient. Just think! She will have no worry or bother or expense in looking after the investment of her legacy. She can't lose it. Neither can she be swindled out of it. And it will earn a rate of interest far beyond what could be secured by an inexperienced investor, without danger—great danger—of losing the principal sum.

NOW—while you are insurable and can spare the money—ask us to tell you how small a yearly saving will put an Imperial Monthly Income Policy between you and a penniless old age—between your family and a life of hardship. Just fill in the information called for on the coupon at the side and mail it to us and we will send you full particulars without delay.

It will cost you nothing to learn all about this most modern form of life assurance. Sign the coupon and mail to us to-day—to-morrow may be too late!

GERMAN MASSES GROAN UNDER WAR TYRANNY OF PRUSSIAN MILITARISM

Graphic Story of May Day Riots When Herr Liebnecht's Brave Indictment of Prussian War Lords Brought His Arrest on Treason Charge—The War Based and Continued on a Lie He Said

Special to The Montreal Star.

BOSTON June 3. — The first full account of the German Bread Riots in Berlin on May Day, and of the arrest of Herr Liebknecht, the Socialist Leader, now on trial for treason, has reached here in a private letter from a German Journalist on the staff of a Socialist paper in Berlin. Dr. Liebknecht's speech was forbidden publication by the German censors, and this letter had to be smuggled out of Germany.

SCARCITY OF FOOD.

April 24, 1916 I have returned to the local committee our complete report resulting from our interrogation of 825 families. I am the chairman of this committee. Out of the 825 families whom we have questioned, we find 97 of them had not been able to buy meat of any kind since December last. These 97 households represent 487 persons. The rest of the 825 households whom we have questioned can only buy meat at the rate of 1 mark (20 cents) per person per week. Of the 825 families, 72 could buy no milk. The rest could obtain milk only 4 pfennigs' worth (5 pfennigs are equal to one cent) of milk, per week per head. Nearly one-half of the families whom we have questioned had a weekly income of less than 24 marks (five marks are equal to one dollar). Families of five persons have only 12 marks to spend for food and clothing; and the price of food is so high.

Out of the 825 households interrogated, we find 67, representing 324 souls, had an income of only a little less than 5 marks per week; and we find this group had sent from 1 to 2 soldiers to the front, and yet their families of from four to seven persons had to subsist on less than 5 marks per week.

This is only a partial investigation. Other locals have made other like investigations, and the result of their house-to-house interrogation is similar to that of ours, if not worse. Is there, therefore, any further need of writing about the condition of the poor German workingman? Is it not possible to imagine what grim tragedies are being enacted behind the curtain of the allpowerful censor? And this misery is increasing day by day. Every hour sees the price of food going up higher and higher and will soon become beyond the reach of even the middle-class Germans. Yet, not only our officials and military masters, but many of our well-nourished Pharisees have the effrontery to ask where want and scarcity of food is to be located!

April 30— I receive word from my editor that there is to be a May Day demonstration near the Imperial Palace. "Keep your mouth shut," is the whisper. I go on the street, and every person I meet whom I know to be Socialists, I greet with the words, "May Day demonstration near the palace grounds. Pass it to the comrades. Keep your mouth shut!"

THE MAY DAY RIOTS.

May 1. — Very early in the morning. With three other comrades I reach Tortenserstrasse, where Comrade Liebknecht lives. We enter No. 14, climb up the stairs, ring his bell. Comrade Liebknecht opens the door himself. I am surprised, also my companions. He is thin, his hair looks unusually black and his face is deathly pale. He walks like a dead man walking with grim steps. He leaves us and soon returns with his wife. She is a Russian. She nods welcome to us all. Suddenly a terrible fear comes to me. It takes hold of me. I watch my companions and observe that they also share it with me. No one has spoken a word, yet we all feel that we are all in the presence of a supreme moment.

From Comrade Liebknecht's grim silence we judge that he is about to hurl prudence to the four winds and defy the government. He has defied the government before in the Parliament, but that is different. What he had said in the Parliament was not given to the public. The almighty censor is the faithful ally of the government. Now he would hurl the unpleasant truths which he had repeatedly spoken on the floor of the Parliament, at the people from street corners! He hands out, one to each of us, a copy of the speech which he will deliver. So far not one word is spoken. While we are hurriedly reading his speech, which is to be delivered within a few hours, he remarks, "I have several thousands of these printed."

We have finished reading the prospectus which will make history and send him to prison. Then we go into conference . . .

We have been with him just an hour. We leave him.

Shortly after 2 p.m., same afternoon, May Day—I have taken a hasty lunch at the Central Hotel. As I near the door I hear the footsteps of great multitudes. I rush to the street and find my passage blocked by a moving crowd that fills the wide street from sidewalk to sidewalk. Suddenly it becomes apparent to me that there are more children in the crowds than men and women together. As they march I notice that I cannot see one in the crowd who has a smile on her or his face. Along the route no one is cheering them. I say to myself. "Perhaps no one who is not in the crowd knows where the multitude is marching!" I had never seen such immense crowds in the streets of Berlin. Not even during the Agadir crises had the streets of Berlin held such multitudes. The crowds move as though they are a part of a funeral procession. They are all sad—very sad.

IN THE PALACE GROUNDS.

On reaching the palace grounds I see in the distance five persons, from their elbows up they tower over the heads of the multitude surrounding them. I leave my friends and elbow my way through the thick crowd. On my right and on my left, behind me and ahead of me, everyone is reminding me of gross rudeness. I justify my impolite advance on the ground that I am a reporter on a party (Socialist) paper. I finally reach near the spot where Comrade Liebknecht and other comrades are standing. The crowds are close where they are standing and I cannot make out whether they are standing on a raised platform or in a motor car. I am about 20 or 25 feet from the doctor.

Suddenly one of the comrades near Doctor Liebknecht raises his hand and at once proceeds to speak. I have not heard one word of what he had said. The multitudes are anxious to hear him. Everyone is sounding "hush" in order to obtain silence and thus making more noise. The speaker is silent. Perhaps he has announced the real speaker of the day; very likely. Doctor Liebknecht uncovers his head; someone nearby offers to relieve him of his hat. Deathly silence reigns all about the grounds. The interior of a cathedral cannot be more silent. The doctor begins:

DR. LIEBKNECHT'S SPEECH.

"Comrades and friends." They start to cheer him. He holds up his hand forbiddingly, then he resumes:

"Some years ago a witty Socialist has observed that in Prussia we Germans have three great rights, which are: We can be soldiers, we can pay taxes and we can keep our mouths shut. The Socialist who made this observation has made it with a grim humor, but today the humor of it must be disconnected from it, it is all too grim. Especially in these days this observation is too true. Today we are sharing these three great Prussian state privileges in full. Every German citizen is given the full privilege to carry a rifle in any manner.

Even the boy scout has been incited to play the ridiculous role of a soldier. They have thus planted the spirit of hate deep in his youthful soul. Meanwhile the old Landsturmer is forced to perform forced labor in invaded countries, in spite of the fact that under the laws of the Imperial constitution he cannot be called out for any other purpose than for the defence of the fatherland.

"As for the second privilege—his right to pay taxes—in this respect the German citizen is, up to the present time, far ahead of his brothers in foreign lands whom he is engaged in exterminating. And yet more privileges of this kind are awaiting him in the days to come—after the end of this war. The high taxes which the German people have so far paid are insignificant compared to the great burden which he must carry after the war, and for which his masters are daily preparing him with such touching delicacy of patriotic sentiment through the medium of the official press.

"The new Germany has the unquestionable right of maul halten (holding his tongue). Recently our official press has been flooded by authoritative and pharisaic exhortations to soldiers' wives, that they must, for God's sake, not complain so much about the scarcity of food. Keep your mouth shut tight when hungry, keep your mouth shut when your children are hungry, keep your mouth shut when your children want milk, keep your mouth shut when your children cry for bread, keep your mouth shut and write no letters to the front!"

"FEW DRY EYES."

Outside of Germany these remarks might sound like the stock phrases of a professional agitater, but not so in Germany, at least not in these days. I carefully watched for the effect of these remarks all about me, and I saw no pair of dry eyes.

"'Our soldiers do not always receive from their dear ones at home the best encouragement to hold on. A soldier on furlough, who, before obtaining his leave, had performed his duty to his fatherland unflinchingly, and went through many hardships with good humor, but, however, after a visit home, returned to the front with a sad face, worrying day and night about his dear ones and the pretended scarcity at home.'

"Pretended scarcity certainly is palatable, especially when one is reminded of the fact that our police is weighing the bread, that the butter is out of the market, that fat, meat and margarine have reached a price that is beyond the probable reach of the working man!

"The old proverb says, 'The mouth speaketh out of the fullness of the heart.' And, if her children's stomachs are empty it is hard for the wife not to mention the fact to her far-away soldier husband that it is hard to provide his children with food while he is offering his life for his country. But if it is not found possible for your masters to prevail upon you to 'Keep your mouths shut,' then they resort to a more practical means. They have a very simple means of stopping these annoying complaints. The Prussian censor is now supervising these letters of wives at home to their husbands at the front. They simply do not allow this objectionable correspondence to go through. Poor and unfortunate German soldier! He deserves pity! At the command of the militarist government he has gone into the enemy country and at the command of the government, he must steal from other nations. He is required to perform difficult services. The sufferings that he endures are past description."

SILENT SUFFERING.

"About him everywhere shells and bombs sow death and destruction. His wife and children at home are suffering want and hardship; she looks about her and finds her children crying for bread. She is desperate, but she must not appeal nor complain to anyone. She must hold her tongue and suffer inwardly. But how can she silence her children? She must not even share the sympathy of her husband at the front, because that cripples her soldier-husband's fighting powers. Her soldier-husband must hold on and steal in the land of her neighbors. He must hold on and suffer because the capitalists, the hurrah patriots, and the armor-plate kings have willed it so. Everyone must keep his or her mouth shut, for the war-profiteers must make money out of the want and misery of the wives and their husband-soldiers at the front.

"By a lie the German working men were forced into the war, and by like lies they expect to induce him to go on with the war!"

Doctor Liebknecht had scarcely finished this last sentence when, as if by magic, a sudden excitement broke out. Near the spot where the doctor and his friends had been standing the crowds surged back and forth. The great multitudes in the grounds had the appearance of an immense sea whose surface was every inch covered with human heads, those of men and women. The shouts of the grown-ups and the terrified shrieks of the children added vehemence to the scene. The next moment I see Comrade Liebknecht pulled down from the stand. His friends also follow. Then I see fists raised. I suddenly discover that the jostling of the crowds about me has carried me farther away from the spot where a riot is in progress. I again elbow my way toward where the doctor and his companions have been pulled down from the stand. I had made some progress when suddenly I find myself being swept backwards by a huge human wave.

In spite of my wish to see what is going on behind me, I am being carried away further and further. Several hundred thousand panic-stricken souls are rushing towards the streets and the avenues that lead to the grounds. The scene is frightful. Everyone is shouting. I steal a glimpse of the spot which is now the centre of the sudden panic. I gasp with fright. I see numberless mounted soldiers with large black whips, in their hands, lashing the crowds. Their mounts are so close to the struggling and frightened men and women, yea, even children, that it is a miracle that thousands are not pinned to the ground. I see many people lying on the ground. I cannot tell whether they are killed or fainted. But there are many of them. I myself was forced to step over several persons. I tried to lift up the body, but in the next moment was carried away.

ORAL EXAMINATIONS AT MOUNT ST. LOUIS

The Mount St. Louis Institute will hold the annual oral examination of the graduating class on June 5, 7, and 10. Mgr. G. Dauth, canon and rector of Laval University will preside. CONGRESS PASSES ADMINISTRATION'S NAVY BUILDING BILL

Measure Goes Through by Vote of 558 to 4—Gardner Declares it Provides for $100,000,000 More Expenditure Than Original

Special to The Montreal Star by United Press.

WASHINGTON, June 3. — The House yesterday passed the Administration Naval Bill.

The vote was 358 to 4.

The four men who voted against the Bill were Browning of New Jersey, Republican; Graham, of Pennsylvannia, Republican, London, of New York, Socialist; and Randall, of California, Democrat.

Gardner, of Mass., big navy advocate, declared the Bill as passed, authorized $100,000,000 more in expenditures than was authorized in the original Bill as it came from committee.

A last minute effort by Republicans to obtain a larger building program failed, when the House rejected by a vote of 189 to 183 Rep. Browring's motion to recommit with instructions to the committee to change the Bill so as to provide for two Dreadnoughts, six battle cruisers, six scout cruisers, fifty submarines, twenty-eight destroyers, two fuel ships and material increase in personnel.

EXPERT IN SAND FROM NEW YORK TO GIVE SERVICE HERE

An expert in sand was wired yesterday to come from New York, to pass judgment on the sand being used by the contractors on the filtration plant, as the result of a conference between the Board of Control and the contractors, yesterday afternoon.

J. W. McConnell and C. Deacon, representing the contractors, appeared before the board to explain that they had some disagreement with F. E. Field, the city engineer in charge of the work, and that delay was due to slowness in delivery of sand, while the delivery of sand was slow because Mr. Field refused to accept at least one half of the cars sent.

The contractors claimed that they had done all that they considered possible to get the best sand available, but that the specifications were so drastic they gave them considerable worry. The contractors claim that they built two expensive screens, have the sand washed by a powerful stream during the screening, and that they still fail to give satisfaction to the engineer in charge. They submitted a sample of sand from a car that had been accepted and another from a car that had been refused.

None of the controllers wanted to commit himself on the question of sand, and Mr. Field explained that a car of sand can not be judged by one sample of a pint in quantity; many should be taken as the cars are unloaded, and the quality is determined not by the naked eye but by the chemical analysis. In the present case, the trouble was the presence of dust.

Mr. McConnell represented that he was anxious to see the work completed at the earliest possible time and that he was willing to do anything that would be satisfactory to the city; on the other hand he did not expect the city to cause the contractors any undue embarrasments.

It was finally suggested to have an expert from New York, recommended by the firm of Fuller & Gregory, which was assented to. The expert will be here on Monday, and with Mr. Field, will visit all the sandpits.

DANCERS MEET.

Prof. Frank Norman leaves for New York next Tuesday to attend the 23rd Annual Convention of the International Association Masters of Dancing of America, to be held at the Hotel Martinique during the week.

McCormick's Sodas
JERSEY CREAM
So good that butter seems unnecessary.

Crackers and milk! "My goodness," you say, "it's a long time since I have enjoyed anything like that." But of course you remember how good it used to taste — the crisp, crackly bits of golden-brown biscuit floating in a bowl of sweet country milk. And it was nourishing. Children thrive and have always thrived on it, because it is a natural pure food.

What is good for wee folk will, as a rule, be found good for grown-ups, too.

The condition of scrupulous cleanliness under which these biscuits are baked corresponds in effect to the cleanliness of your home kitchen.

Anxious forethought

The decision as to what to give Baby if he is denied his natural food rests chiefly on one point. The alternative nourishment must correspond as closely as possible with healthy human milk.

Cows milk diluted with water and modified under disadvantages in the home does not provide a satisfactory food.
Further—cows milk as usually distributed is infected with germs; a grave danger to Baby.
The quality of cows milk varies—a serious drawback. In the spring it is subject to changes, and in the summer it is a cause of infant mortality.

Careful tests of the milk values; the necessary modifying, the making up of deficient cream and milk sugar to ensure Uniformity of Nourishment and Complete Digestibility are more than can be managed in the home. All these steps are carried out with expert skill in the manufacture of the 'Allenburys' Foods.

The Milk Food No. 1—identical in composition with maternal milk, pure and germ free, is the ideal food for the youngest baby. Made immediately by adding hot boiled water only.

Having decided what Baby's food shall be at first, one naturally looks forward. Experience has proved that for the hand-fed baby a progressive system of dietry is advisable.

KITCHENER REPLIES TO HIS WAR CRITICS IN SECRET SESSION

By Canadian Press.

LONDON, June 3.—Earl Kitchener had yesterday what was for him the unique experience of being heckled by the Parliamentary critics of the War Office.

Complying with the premise made on his behalf in the House of Commons by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for War, Harold J. Tennant, in response to complaints of members that they had not had opportunity to question the Secretary for War, the famous General went to one of the committee rooms of the House, prepared to make a statement on the conduct of the war and reply to questions.

Earl Kitchener was accompanied by several members of his staff and the political heads of the War Office. He faced some 200 members, including what are known as the "ginger groups," composed of men who demand more vigorous prosecution of the war. The public was excluded rigorously. Indeed, the whole of Westminster Palace was shut off, to avoid leakage of any secret information that might be elicited.

Earl Kitchener was cheered to the echo when he arrived at the committee room. He made a brief speech and then for two hours answered the questions put to him. Many of the members took part in the heckling.

BURNED HOME TO GET HUBBY, BUT IN VAIN

In the criminal court of Lunenburg Mrs. Anna Barge, the young widow of a soldier, has just been convicted of arson and sentenced to one year imprisonment.

Her husband, a small farmer, was called to the front shortly after his marriage at the beginning of the war. Last fall he wrote of the terrible battles in Russia and said that he expected to be killed sooner or later.

His wife brooded over the letter, and decided to apply for a leave of absence for him. To give more weight to her petition she made herself destitute by setting her house on fire.

The investigation started by the police led to the arrest of the woman and while in prison she received the news that her husband had been killed by a Russian shell before she applied the torch to her home.

The National Museum at Washington, contains a notable display of the bones of several species of extinct mammals which, if seen alive in the ocean, would be called huge sea serpents. They were carnivorous and their long, slender jaws were armed with formidable teeth. Although a few remaining individuals of the group may have given actual basis for the sea serpent stories, these extinct animals were not reptiles, but mammals which, like the whale and sea and otter, had happened to evolve in an aquatic environment.

RESTRICTS RIGHTS OF NON-CHRISTIANS

BERLIN, June 3, via London.—The Austrian Supreme Court has decided that the law prohibiting marriages between Christians and non-Christians applies to marriages contracted outside Austria.

The court held invalid the marriage of Count Rudolf Schirding and a Protestant woman of Berlin. The Count left the Roman Catholic church in 1913 and was married here in August of 1914. In the following October he returned to the Catholic faith. The lower courts held that the marriage was invalid and this decision is now sustained by the Supreme Court. Under the Austrian law non-Christians may marry Jews, but not Catholics or Protestants.

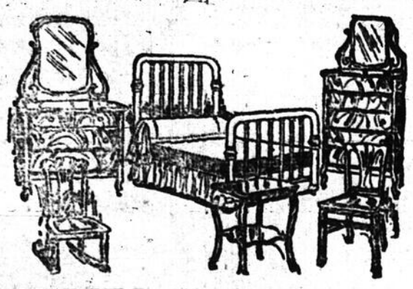

TWO CHARGES IN B. C. PERJURY CASE

VICTORIA, B.C., June 3.—The perjury charges laid against Robert Gosden by M. A. MacDonald, M.P.P., were separated by Mr. Justice Murphy in the assize court. There will be two trials instead of one.

Gosden is charged with testifying falsely to meeting Liberal members and being paid $50. He will also be tried in connection with Gosden's assertion that he had heard John T. Scott accuse Ashworth Anderson of "swiping" $2,000 from Liberal campaign funds "and putting it in his jeans," without "doing a darn thing for it."

MacDonald denied on the stand yesterday afternoon meetings alleged by Gosden to have taken place. The member said that as far as he knew Gosden was not working on wages for the Liberal party.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS IN CANADA--BEARS CONTROL WHEAT

Time for Reflection Before Sacrificing Stocks Needlessly

The most startling development affecting the stock markets came in the second half of the day's business yesterday when news of the great naval battle in the North Sea was received and caused somewhat of a shock owing to the severe losses sustained by the British fleet.

The declines in the local market were not of a serious character, but it was pointed out that the news was known by but a limited circle in the street up to the time the market closed, so that so far as the general public was concerned, it could not be said that the period between the receipt of the news shortly after one o'clock and the closing at 3 o'clock was a fair test of what might have happened to prices had the news been more generally known.

It is possible that some people might have been unduly alarmed into sacrificing stocks without waiting to reason the matter out, but the Canadian markets are closed today and by the time business is resumed on Monday calmer reflections will possibly have shown the folly of getting excited and making needless sacrifices.

As is generally the case, the market here will be guided largely by the action of the New York market which closed steady yesterday after some stocks had had a break of one to three points.

In the long run the battle will resolve itself into one of the memorable features of the war on land and sea. While the loss of ships and lives is to be keenly regretted it is one of the incidents which coming as a shock gradually wear off. The British Navy is big and strong enough to bear the loss, and apparently its prestige has not suffered in view of the exceptional circumstances which made their losses at this time of writing apparently the greater of the combatants.

Taking all these things into consideration it is hard to reason why this should prove of more than momentary disturbance to the markets.

It is difficult to estimate how the market here, under its present changed conditions, would act under any startling reverse to the fortunes of the Allied forces, particularly on land, but the record since the war began is something to go on, and it can be said in that connection that it has passed through many depressing moments without flinching.

It is reasonably safe to assume that the war, particularly on the western front, is approaching a stage of great importance and all indications point to a great blow being soon struck at Prussianism. It would seem to be a good time for faint hearts to get out of the market, or at least see to it that their margins are in such shape that a disturbance to the extent of a few points in the market will not throw them into a state of panic.

Market values have enjoyed considerable appreciation during the past few months, and it is not impossible that there are some weak spots which would stand correction, but on the whole the real values are behind the prices of most stocks in the way of increased earnings, a condition which there is no reason to believe will not continue for some time to come no matter how the tide of battle ebbs or flows.

Taking them all combined the price movements of the week were quite interesting. Iron led off with an advance to a high level at 59⅜, from which the lowest point of the reaction yesterday was 56½, closing at 57. Scotia revived interest by an advance from 128½ to 133 and the extreme point of reaction was 128¾, closing at 129. Steel of Canada weakened from 64 to 62½ as the result of the battle, but in the ordinary course of the market's fluctuations, it had been down to 62⅝ earlier in the week, so that there was nothing that might not have taken place in the ordinary routine. Its high was 64⅝.

Later on in the week Canada Cement, Canada Steamships, Smelters, and a few others, developed considerable strength, and they all had moderate reactions when the naval news reached the market, but the general feeling was that the market had experienced the worst of the effect by the time of closing.

BIG PROFITS SHOWN BY BIG DIVIDENDS

That these are the days of division of big profits created by war's abnormal demand is the emphatic testimony of the second big special dividend which the Du Pont Co. has just declared on its $58,854,200 common stock.

This extra comes three months after the declaration in February of a 25 per cent extra dividend on the common, but 18 for 23¼ per cent instead of 25 per cent. It would seem as if the du Pont people were fairly confident of being able to distribute in 1916 close to 100 per cent in extra dividends on the common. This in turn, of course, would seem to promise that profits will outstrip even the wonderful 1915 showing when a net balance of profits was rolled up of $57,840,757 against $5,603,000 in 1914.

The February declaration took the form of an extra of 3½ per cent in cash and 22½ per cent payable in Anglo-French bonds at 95. The May declaration is for 23.5 per cent, of which 4.3 per cent is in cash and 19.2 per cent in Anglo-French bonds, which are, however, taken at 96, instead of at 95 as the time before. The company has simply taken advantage of the slight advance in market price.

This 19.2 per cent entails the issuance to shareholders of $11,770,840 Anglo-French bonds against $11,741,400 three months ago. The total of these bonds distributed to stockholders so far this year is, therefore, $23,512,240.

Although the du Pont interests have not stated publicly the exact amount of Anglo-French bonds which they took at the time of their flotation, the company's balance sheet as of Dec. 31, 1915, the close of the last fiscal year, showed an asset item of $49,332,874 entitled "Investments in short term notes and quickly marketable." There are good reasons to believe that the great bulk of this $49,000,000 item was made up of Anglo-French bonds which will gradually be paid out to stockholders as a dividend.

AMERICAN INTERESTS IN PORCUPINE CROWN

A good many reasons were advanced to explain the recent strength in the market for Porcupine Crown shares such as an impending dividend increase and developments of a favorable nature in the mine.

While officials are quoted as disclaiming any knowledge of this character it is evident that there is a keen demand for the shares. The truth in that connection seems to be that an option on a good sized block of the shares secured in Toronto has been transferred to Boston and New York interests which have determined to exercise the option. At $1 a share the stock yields 12 per cent, which is not considered high for a mining property.

The shaft on the property is down to the 700-foot level, and equipment was recently installed which will permit of the continuation of the workings to a depth of 1,000 feet. In this respect the company is preparing to take advantage of the recent indications demonstrated in the Hollinger section of the camp that values at depth ensure profitable deep mining. On the Hollinger operations at depth are proving highly satisfactory, and as the Porcupine Crown adjoins that property, it is believed that a corresponding measure of success will be experienced.

Ore has been located on seven different levels on the Porcupine Crown, and at a depth of 300 feet from the surface the vein has been followed for a distance of 1,000 feet. The mill is handling about 125 tons of ore a day, but is equipped to treat up to 180 tons, and with such ample ore reserves available, it is likely that production will be materially increased.

The stock was put on a 3 per cent quarterly dividend basis in April, 1914, and has paid 12 per cent per annum since then. Even on the present basis of operations, earnings are running well in excess of dividend requirements.

Canadian Northern Increase for April

TORONTO, June 3.—Canadian Northern Railway system's net earnings for April were $5,500 in excess of the corresponding period in 1915, the total being $544,000. Gross earnings increased $75,400. During the fiscal year of the company, net earnings have increased $1,847,700. Following is comparative table:

	April.

PARIS, June 3.—The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes: Gold in hand increased 7,721,000 francs; silver in hand, decreased 100,000 francs; notes in circulation increased 96,158,000 francs; treasury deposits decreased 50,990,000 francs; general deposits decreased 3,181,000 francs; bills discounted, increased 20,337,000 francs; advances decreased 2,184,000 francs.

BUSINESS IN CANADA WEST KEPT QUIET

Speaking on conditions as he found them during a recent trip to Winnipeg and through certain of the Western States, James Carruthers, of James Carruthers & Company, grain exporters, told The Star representative:

"I noticed a marked contrast between conditions in the Canadian West and those across the border, on account of the fact that there is lot of building going on in Minneapolis and Chicago and throughout the Western States generally, while there is very little building going on in Canada, as evidenced in Montreal. This condition exists all over Canada, and there is a tendency to keep things quiet.

"The farmers in the West are well off. I was talking to the agent for one of the large implement companies and he said that his business was advanced 20 to 30 days ahead of last spring and that payments showed increases between 200 and 300 per cent in some cases. The farmers are paying off their debts and seem to be well supplied with money.

"In general, however, business is rather quiet. Of all the articles and goods imported into Canada from England and other European countries, there is very little going West, and, as far as I know, these things may be produced in Canada now. It is much better for Canada if we are producing them ourselves."

As to the present crop outlook, Mr. Carruthers' opinion was published in The Star on Wednesday. He added that if the weather conditions turn dry and hot, the plant will not be strong enough to stand the test. "The quality of wheat was magnificent in Manitoba last year and this year we cannot expect anything like it. The wonderful quality of our Manitoba wheat is becoming known and the demand will steadily increase as this develops. The British Government has just bought four cargoes more of Manitoba wheat—about one million bushels in New York. There is at present a great demand for Manitoba wheat on account of its magnificent quality. We have already sent forty steamers loaded with Manitoba wheat to Italy, out of the wheat commandeered by the Government last winter. This will prove a great advertisement for Canada in the future.

"I believe that on account of the tremendous crop in the Northwest last year," said Mr. Carruthers, "it will take us all of the next three months to get rid of our old stocks. By the time they get them moved, the new crop will be in, and we are looking for a big amount of business all through the summer.

"There has been an enormous demand for Manitoba oats," Mr. Carruthers continued. "The bulk of the oats which the Allies have been getting has been of Canadian origin. We have shipped millions of bushels of oats and we expect to continue to do so all through the summer. We will ship 2,000,000 bushels within the next few weeks, and the demand is going to keep up for our oats.

"Another feature is our oats in Chicago, where we are now selling above the American product. Our May oats are selling five or six cents higher in Chicago than theirs—in fact, today our oats sold at 45c a bushel, while Chicago oats sold at 40c a bushel."

Press Opinions on N.Y. Situation

NEW YORK, June 3.—American: After more than a dozen new high records had been made in the stock market yesterday, and after the whole list had begun to show buoyancy as a result, news came of the German naval victory in the North Sea, and started a selling movement in which quotations melted rapidly.

Sun: A movement in continuation of tendencies toward rising strength, with some increase of animation, was interrupted in the stock market yesterday by the early afternoon news of the great naval battle fought in the North Sea, with an apparent advantage won by the German fleet. The session had obviously set out to be more active than the average scale recently established.

Times: For the first time in a long period the stock market yesterday was affected directly and strikingly by news of battle. The wireless from Berlin announcing a naval engagement in which nine or more British ships had been sunk proved the signal for a rapid selling movement.

Herald: Like the Wasp, the stock market of yesterday carried the sting in its tail. It was on the Berlin version of the battle in the North Sea that prices fell sharply in the afternoon, and at the same time wheat contracts in Chicago were sold down two cents a bushel on the theory that the alleged German naval victory would render shipping conditions more serious.

N.Y. STEADY, MOTOR BOOM WENT AHEAD

NEW YORK, June 3.—Uncertain tendencies were manifested at the opening of today's market with strength in specialties, notably Motors and the sugar issues. Anglo-French bonds shaded.

Overnight details of the engagements between the British and German fleets contributed to the irregularity of the early dealings.

With the exception of Norfolk and Western, which opened at an advance of 1 3-8 points, rails showed only slight changes either way and other standard shares moved with similar uncertainty.

There was a revival of yesterday's sensational advances in the motors and shipping issues, Willys-Overland again leading the former group with an initial advance of five points to the new high record of 299, to which it soon added another seven points, while Chandler Motors rose 5 1-2 to 115, also a new record. Marine pfd. made up practically all of the preceding day's late setback with a gain of 2 1-2 points. The sugar stock also rose vigorously with gains of 12 to 14 points for Cuban American and South Porto Rico sugar. Anglo-French and Canadian War Bonds were moderately reactionary.

At eleven o'clock prices of leaders stood: C.P.R., 174 1-2; Am. Beet Sugar, 77 1-2; Am. Car, 55 3-4; Am. Steel Foundry, 60 1-2; Am. Can, 55 3-4; Am. Zinc, 82 3-4; Smelters, 96 3-4; Am. Loco., 71 1-4; Anaconda, 83 1-2; Atchison, 105 1-8.

Superior & Butte, 89 1-2; Baldwin, 88 1-2; Balt. & Ohio, 91 1-2; Chino Copper, 52 5-8; Ches. & Ohio, 64; Col. Fuel & Iron, 42 1-2; Crucible Steel, 82 1-4; St. Paul, 98 1-2; Erie 38 7-8; Erie First, 53 3-4; Gt. Northern, 121 5-8; Great Nor., Ore, 39; Gen. Electric, 169 1-2.

Inspiration Cop., 44 1-2; Kennecott Cop., 53 1-2; Int. Nickel, 45 1-2; Int. Marine, 25 1-8; Int. Marine pfd., 57 1-4; Lehigh Valley, 82 1-4; L. & N., 129; Miami Cop., 35 1-2; Mo. Pac., 6; N. Y. Central, 106; Nor. & Western, 132 1-8.

Ray Con., 22 5-8; Reading 101; Republic Iron, 47 1-4; Shattuck-Arizona, 31 1-4; Studebaker, 141; So. Pacific, 98 1-2; Utah Copper, 81 3-8; Union Pac., 137 1-2; United Fruit, 109 1-4; Steel Com., 63 3-4; Tenn. Copper, 42 1-2; Mex Pet., 106 1-4; Westinghouse, 61 1-4.

Those who were bargain hunting in the New York market this morning were sadly disappointed, for the market opened with a decidedly firm tone. Details of the fighting in the North Sea showed that the German victory was not by any means as decisive as yesterday's reports indicated, and there was a general feeling of optimism about local brokerage offices this morning.

Motor stocks led the New York market in the early trading. Willys-Overland which closed at 293 yesterday opened this morning at 299 on the strength of the merger story, and sold up as high as 307 1-4 in the first half hour, but sold off later to 303. Chandler was another strong point, and opened at 110, compared with 109 1-2 at the close last night, and during the first hour advancing another five points to 115.

Marine preferred advanced more than two points, selling at 97 7-8 in the first hour, compared with 95 5-8 at the close. U.S. Steel was strong at 84.

WAR LOAN INTEREST, FIRST INSTALMENT

The first interest on the $100,000,000 war loan subscribed for in Canada was payable on Thursday, and to many of the owners of the "baby bonds" as those of $100 denomination are designated, it would be their first experience of "clipping." Andrew Carnegie, when speaking of his first return from an investment, said: "Here was something new to all of us, for none of us boys had ever received anything but from toil. A return from capital was something new." And, no doubt, this week there were cases where similar thoughts were evoked.

According to the allotments made, the small investors receive as their share of interest approximately $325,000, life insurance companies $300,000, and the banks $550,000, the balance going to the ordinary investment spheres. Brokers at the present time have difficulty in filling orders for war bonds, and the price has advanced to 99.

While Canadian Government securities have been issued in Canada before, this loan was the first popular issue ever made in the Dominion. British investors for many a year have eagerly taken up all Dominion loans offered, and seeing that it is not likely that a public Canadian loan will be floated in the London market before the next birthday of the Dominion, the present occasion seems a suitable one to present a complete list of public bond issues made in London since Confederation. The loans issued were as follows:

Year	Per Cent.	Amount.
1869	4	$7,300,000
1869	5	2,433,333

GASOLINE INQUIRY REPORT ISSUED SOON

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The report of the Federal Trade Commission on the gasoline inquiry ordered by the Senate will be made public within the next week. The investigation is about complete and is now being considered by the commision before final report is submitted to the Senate.

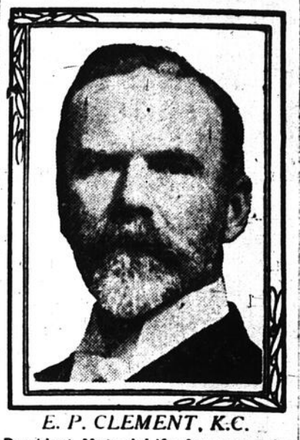

It is believed that the report will not be sensational in any details, although the commission will point out that price setting shows to some extent an interlocking interest between corporations handling oil and by-products. In this respect, it was learned, the commission's report refers mainly to the Standard Oil Company.

For several weeks the Department of Justice in conjunction with the Federal Trade Commission has been making an investigation of the high price of gasolene. An independent inquiry was also conducted in certain places by the Department.

These inquiries were for the purpose of discovering whether the Standard Oil corporation was in any way violating the mandate of the Supreme Court of the United States in divorcing interlocking directorates and company interests.

Assistant Attorney-General Todd, who has conferred with the Trade Commissioners several times declared today that he had nothing to say regarding the gasoline probe. It is known, however, that the Department of Justice is awaiting the commission's report before taking further action in the case, if legal action is warranted by the facts obtained in the various inquiries that have been conducted by the Government.

Topics of the Street

All the Canadian stock exchanges are closed today in honor of the birthday of King George. The New York market is open as usual.

New capital issues—bonds, notes and stocks—are still being created on an extensive scale, according to compilications made in New York, but they do not involve the huge amounts recorded in recent months. In May corporate financing indicated $191,914,400, compared with $98,308,000 in May a year ago.

Moreover, bank officials report that numerous new underwritings have been arranged, suggesting further large demands upon the capital market from railroad and industrial companies, and at the same time in connection with new promotions. Of the foregoing totals more than 25 per cent was used to pay off or refund maturing obligations.

Official figures available show that in June the maturities will amount to $85,374,000. No account is taken in this compilation of foreign loans, or municipal or State issues.

Corporate borrowing since January 1 reached the enormous sum of $1,184,491,200. This is an increase of $483,371,100 over the corresponding period of last year.

The Bank of England's weekly statement was interesting, first because of a further $18,900,000 decrease in loans to private borrowers—which are now nearly down to the total of August 12, 1914; but also because of the institution's gain in gold. The Bank shows a gain of $911,000 for the week; but what is more to the point, its total gold reserve is now $9,000,000 above what was held on the 11th of May. Yet, during precisely the interval between that date and today, $27,000,000 gold has been sent to New York on London account from Ottawa. It is a reasonable inference that the English reserve of gold, which was drawn upon at the Canadian depository, was not the official reserve of the Bank of England.

To the general public and those who have no particular interest in the metal, "dollar an ounce silver," which has come to be the slogan of many producers and metal specialists, has not, perhaps, much significance. Nevertheless, the advance in silver, which has continued for weeks is of extreme importance in that it is highly probable that great and far-reaching changes in the monetary world will result. Authorities say that silver will replace gold as the monetary standard of Europe for 25 years after the war. Aside from this it is very evident that an immediate result will be a strong movement in the stocks of silver producing mines in this country.

The causes for this advance in price of the white metal are very evident and can all be summed up in the law of supply and demand. When the war first broke out the hostile nations immediately began to hoard gold and within a very short time the enormous gold coinage of Europe had been practically withdrawn from circulation. Most of the warring nations merely appealed to the patriotism of the people while Germany went so far as to impose a law enforcing the people to give up their gold for paper. Gold was needed in enormous quantities both to stabilize exchange and for purchases in neutral countries. European gold was soon tied up and the mints have since been working industriously turning out silver coins and even Japan has assisted by coining silver for Russia.

The world's supply is not increasing to a sufficient extent to meet this demand, and, although the mines are working at capacity to take advantage of the demand and the prevailing high prices, there will probably be a scarcity and incidental high prices for many years to come.

NEW INCORPORATIONS

OTTAWA, June 3.—New incorporations include the following: Canadian Forestry Products, Ltd. Montreal, $9,500; Johnson and Johnson (Canada) Limited, Montreal, $200,000; Sorel Shipbuilding and Coal Company, Montreal, $100,000; Maple Leaf Tires, Limited, Toronto, $500,000; Tobacco Products Corporation of Canada, Montreal, $250,000; Lowe's Montreal Theatres, Limited, Montreal, $1,750,000. Incorporators include W. R. L. Shanks, advocate; Cobourg, Ontario, $200,000; S. S. White Company of Canada, Toronto, $50,000.

CONDITION OF JUNE CROPS IS VERY LOW

Special to The Montreal Star.

CHICAGO, June 3.—B. W. Snow's June crop report says in part: "Condition of winter wheat 75.5, the lowest, with one exception, in more than ten years, with a decline of 3.6 points during May. Heavy losses in Kansas, Oklahoma and on the Pacific Coast, resulting from Hessian fly in Kansas and dry weather in Oklahoma and California. Decline in prospect is also shown in Tennessee and Kentucky and in Illinois and Missouri. The decline during May is about as usual, so that the condition is translated in bushels per acre, the aggregate crop prospect shows little change from a month ago, the present crop indication being for 489,000,000 bushels, against 492,000,000 on May 1.

"Spring wheat acreage is reported at 17,813,000 acres, or a decrease of 8 per cent, equal to 1,522,000 acres. The crop is very late, has been seeded under unfavorable conditions, and the June 1 condition is reported at only 89.5. This is the lowest June 1 condition since 1907, and it is significant that in the past twenty-five years no crop that started with a June condition below 90 has ever made a good yield per acre. The present condition indicates a yield of 13.8 bushels per acre, or a crop of about 246,000,000 bushels.

"Excess of rainfall prevented seeding as large an acreage of oats as was intended, and the actual breadth is reported at 39,538,000 acres, against 40,024,000 harvested last year. The decrease of 48,000 acres is practically all in the south, where a very heavy acreage was sown last year. Conditions of the crop is reported at 87.4, which is considerably below the average for a series of years, and gives a crop indication at this time of 1,230,000 bushels, against a crop of 1,540,000 last year."

Business Improved in the Far West

CHICAGO, June 3.—President Darling, of St. Paul Railway, back from the Pacific Coast, says that far Western business conditions have shown an exceedingly decided improvement in the past thirty days, and that traffic to the Orient is enormous. He also says prospects for growing crops in Washington could not be better.

Considerable percentage of fall seeding in Montana was winter killed by cold weather, and has been re-seeded to spring wheat, but season is two weeks late there. Conditions in southern North Dakota and South Dakota are exceptionally favorable. Corn is backward, due to moisture delaying planting.

WILLYS AND DURANT SAID TO HEAD MERGER

NEW YORK, June 3.—John N. Willys, president of the Willy-Overland Company, and William C. Durant, head of the Chevrolet Motors Company, are mentioned as the leading spirits in the proposed $200,000,000 motor combination, which is said to have the promise of ample financial backing by banks in this city, Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit.

The preliminaries of the merger are being handled by the Chatham and Phoenix National Bank which is said to be organizing a syndicate to manage the underwriting.

New high records were made by some of the motor stocks and issues of affiliated companies on the exchange and in the open market today. Chief among these was the movement in Willys-Overland, that stock rising 19 points to 294 on very large transactions.

LIVERPOOL, June 3.—Supplies of cattle to Birkenhead continues short and the high quotations have been well maintained, best quality Irish oxen and heifers making 26 to 27 cents per pound, sinking the offal. Chilled beef is also up in sympathy and is now making 21¼ cents per pound for the sides.

PORCUPINE AND COBALT MINING STOCKS

We advise the purchase of Porcupine Crown, West Dome, Vipond, McIntyre Extension, Porc. Imperial, Temiskaming, Beaver, Trethewey, Bailey, etc. Not for a number of years has there been such a demand for Minerals and Mining Stocks.

Many closed down mines have been reopened.

Now is the TIME to buy and sell

METALS SPECULATION IN LONDON MUST CEASE

All speculative accounts on the London Metal Exchange in copper have been closed out by order of the British Government. This official ruling, promulgated some time ago, named May 31 as the date on which all speculation in metals must cease.

Hereafter, every trade in copper metal, whether it be for 25 tons or 5,000,000 pounds, must be for account of a purchaser who intends consuming it in his own plant. It applies not only to trading on the London Metal Exchange but also to dealings among all metal dealers.

Dealers have been supplying a considerable quantity of copper to consumers, this metal having been bought almost entirely from American producers or their agents. Under the ruling now effective no British dealer may buy a pound of copper, either in his own country or the United States, unless he has a consumer ready to take the metal off his hands.

It follows that no more "short" selling will be allowed on the London Exchange or in the open market. The ruling was drawn up to remove speculation and its injurious effect on metal prices during the war crisis.

More Cobalt Mines to Resume Operations

Advices from Cobalt state that arrangements have been completed for the resumption of work on the People's Mining Company and the Ophir. Through a splendid arrangement by which great economy can be effected in development by both companies this work will be gotten under way at an early date and will be done by contract. B. Neeley is consulting engineer and the plan of development outlined is to work through the People's Mining Company shaft (formerly the John Black Co.) The shaft will be sunk approximately 250 feet from the present depth of 310 feet and from that point doing about 200 feet of drifting and crosscutting. The extra 250 feet of sinking will take the shaft down to the contact where a crosscut will be made over to the vein. Drifting will then be gone on with over to and across the line into the Ophir.

Bears in Control Of Wheat Markets Of U. S. and Canada

By Joseph F. Pritchard, regular correspondent of The Montreal Star on the Chicago Board of Trade.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 3.—Conditions surrounding the wheat market continue to grow more and more bearish through the disappointment of the army of speculators who were long the deferred months, and who were forced out of their position at losses.

The bears are now in full control of the situation, not only in the Chicago market, but in the smaller markets of the United States and Canada, as well as at Liverpool and London.

The great losses that were shown in the southwest crop have, it is believed, been partially regained by the rains which have fallen recently and the late seeding in the spring wheat country has been overbalanced by the most excellent weather conditions since the grain was planted.

Nearly all of the big grain speculators at Chicago are out of the market save in a scalping way. They believe that wheat must do better later on, although the harvesting of this grain in the far southwest is now only two weeks to three weeks distant. Those who believe that wheat will do better are men who have had a great deal of experience in the matter of handling crop reports as well as in personally inspecting the plant. They figure that, while the rains may have been of some assistance to the growing plant where it was not dead, there is no help for millions of acres of the plant. Large areas have been plowed up and seeded to corn and oats, thereby reducing the area greatly and the prospects are that in some sections the poor-appearing wheat will be plowed up and seeded to other products than wheat.

The more bearish conditions seem to come from Liverpool and London. The United Kingdom visible supply increased 6,864,000 bushels the past week and is now 101,736,000 bushels. The world's available supply, as compiled by Bradstreets, increased 5,838,000 bushels the past week to a total of 218,213,000 bushels, compared with a decrease of 7,869,000 bushels to a total of 105,230,000 bushels for a like period a year ago.

It will be seen that with the foreign figures on wheat quite bearish, there is still a liberal supply of this grain held in the United States and Canada, and that with the grain heading out in the far southwest and cutting of it near at hand, conditions point to still lower prices. It is said by the cash grain handlers at Chicago that foreigners bought considerable wheat on their recent decline in prices. A great many vessels are now loading with wheat at the eastern seaboard, and large numbers are waiting their return at the various ports in the east.

Corn has sold lower, and oats have also declined. There has been considerable liquidation in both of these grains, and there has been an absence of buying of the cash oats by foreigners, as Argentine is supplying the demand abroad.

Foreigners are giving Canadian oats the preference and liberal sales have been made by that country during the past few weeks.

The larger packers are working for longer prices for both hog products and hogs, and this has been a drawback to the market at large. Exporters have bought more sparingly of salted meats, as well as of lard.

CORNWALL CHEESE BOARD

Special to The Montreal Star.

CORNWALL, Ont., June 3.—Cheese boarded and sold here yesterday were 1,749 colored and 430 white, a total of 2,179, the colored at 15⅞c and the white at 16c. Last week the prices paid were 18¾c and 18 7-16c for colored and 18⅝c for white.

For the first time in many seasons butter was offered for sale today on the board. There were 25 boxes offered by the Cornwall city dairy and it was sold to Mr Reddick at 29½c. The dairy will board butter every week. At this date last year, 2,305 boxes of colored cheese sold at 17½c.

GERMAN CHANCELLOR HAS MAD PROPOSAL AS BASIS OF PEACE

Declares Present War Map of Europe Must Be Taken to Express Germany's Terms—Seems to Think Trenches are Boundaries

By Canadian Press.

LONDON, June 3. "The present war map must form the basis of peace. Let the statesmen of the Entente Powers look at the facts as presented by this map and they will know Germany's terms."

Thus spoke Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German Imperial Chancellor, in the course of an interview with the correspondent of the Berlin Neueste Nachrichten, during a visit to Munich, says Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent.

The Chancellor's words, says the correspondent, have attracted the widest attention. The Lokal Anzeiger, commenting on the interview says:

"We interpret the Chancellor's words to mean that the trenches which the Central Powers have erected east and west are an impenetrable German wall of soldiers which must be the frontier of a peace treaty. In no war yet has this been the case, but a military achievement which has been gained with so much blood must form the starting point for any negotiations for peace."

ROME, via Paris, June 3.—Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State, in an interview today with a representative of the Associated Press declared that the Pope was influenced in his peace efforts solely by a desire to stop the "suicide of Europe."

"The Holy Father," said the cardinal, "in his most ardent desire for peace has no particular interest in view, despite what newspapers that are enemies of the Papacy state to the contrary.

"If peace is concluded through the friendly intervention of the President of the United States or through His Catholic Majesty, the King of Spain, His Holiness will equally thank the Almighty that an end should at last have been put to the butchery which is the suicide of Europe."

MONEY GRANT TO UNBORN CHILD OF DEAD MAN

Compensation for a child yet unborn, to become effective at birth and continue until the child is sixteen years old, is awarded by Referee W. W. Champion, of Williamsport, Pa., in a decision of the Workmen's Compensation Board today.

Robert C. Kehres was killed January 4, on the dock of the Williamsport Coal Co. Referee Champion awarded the widow, Mrs. Helen Kehres, $7.20 a week from January 18 to date, when her child is born, or 40 per cent of Kehres' wages, which were $18.70 a week.

From the birth of the child and until three hundred weeks afterward the widow and child are to receive $8.41. At the end of the 300th week the child itself is to receive $2.80 a week until it becomes sixteen.

The referee took the position that the child, actually in being, and entitled to compensation the same as a born child.

GIGANTIC AUTO MERGER

NEW YORK, June 3.—Furious activity in the shares of automobile on the stock exchange and the curb, or outside market, yesterday was attended by circumstantial rumors of a gigantic merger of those interests, with a capitalization in excess of 200,000,000. The companies mentioned in the reported consolidation include the Willys-Overland Company, Chalmers Motor Company, Hudson Motor Company and the United Motors Company, together with special concerns engaged in the manufacture of automobile supplies.

A., 122 St. James street, Montreal.

THIS PILGRIM'S QUEER JOURNEY TO TAKE YEARS

The Rev. Joshua Value, of Shanghai, speaking at the annual meeting of the China Inland Mission in London told of a priest whom he had met in Western China.

The man, he said, had boards on his hands and pads on his knees. He was going along the road by means of stretching himself at full length on the ground, getting up, walking to where his fingers had reached, and then prostrating himself again. The priest said that he had come from the north-east of Peking, a distance of over 2,000 miles, in that manner, and that it had taken him eight years to reach that point. He added that he was going to Lhassa, and expected that the journey there would occupy another eight years, as it lay over snow-capped mountains.

The reason he gave for making the journey was that he was born under an unlucky star, and could have no happiness and no peace. If he could see the great Buddhist at Lhassa he would get great merit for his journey, and his sins would be forgiven him.

UNITED STATES TRADE MAY BE AT MAXIMUM

WASHINGTON, June 3.—"Business activity in the United States has perhaps reached the maximum of the present movement," the Federal Reserve Board's monthly bulletin says.

The reasons given include: Orders covering factory outputs to the end of the year. A more cautious attitude as to the future. Considerable unrest on the part of labor, "even where most highly compensated."

A slightly less favorable outlook for some of the growing crops. On the other hand, the report says:

Mines and oil wells are exceedingly active. Lumber and building show great activities. Railroad earnings are generally excellent. Post Office and similar receipts are at a maximum everywhere.

BABY PEGDEN.

Astonished at improvement after Pneumonia.

Mrs. Pegden, 58, Knowle Road, Brixton, says: "My boy at the age of nine months had a very serious illness (pneumonia and inflammation of the bowels). He was too ill to take milk, and being advised to try Virol we were immediately astonished at the improvement shown. You will see by his photo what a fine bonny little chap he is now (3 years old), and whenever he is run down we immediately fly to Virol. It has, I consider, saved many a doctor's bill.

GASPARD

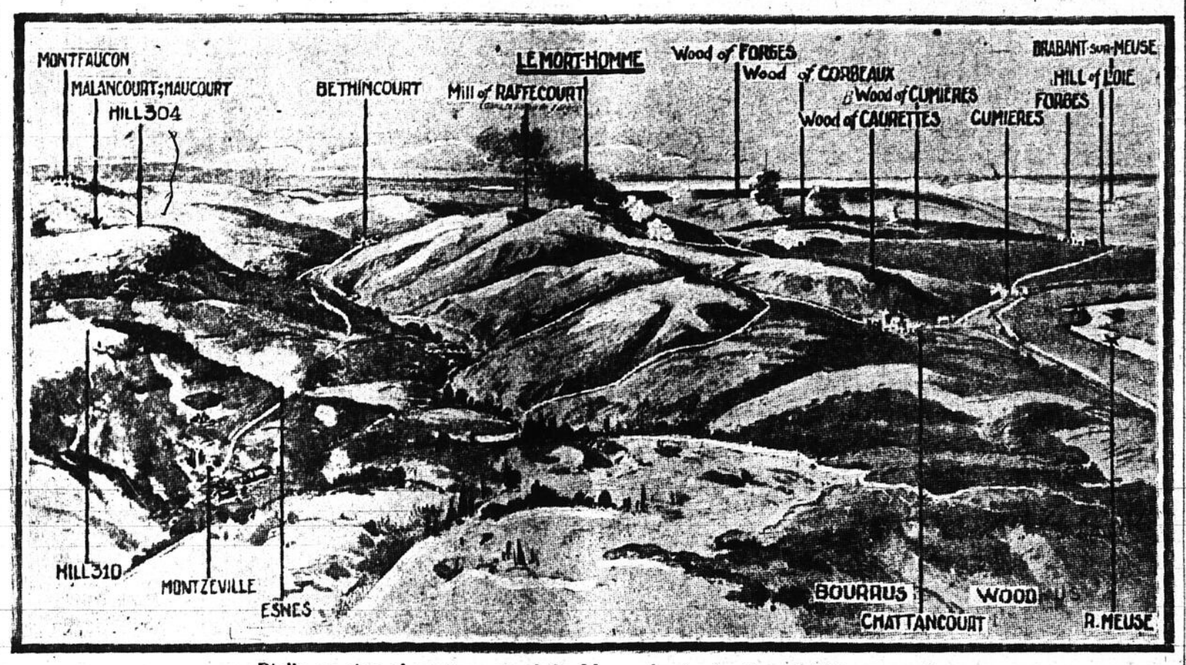

THE WAR STORY OF FRANCE. A STIRRING AND POWERFUL NOVEL BY A WRITER WHO HAS BEEN THROUGH THE TERRIBLE MILL. TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH FOR THE MONTREAL DAILY STAR.

EXCLUSIVE CANADIAN PUBLICATION RIGHTS HELD BY THE MONTREAL DAILY STAR.

By RENE BENJAMIN.

Rene Benjamin, the author of this remarkable war story, which has had a phenomenal success in France, is a French officer who has been through the scenes he so graphically describes. The initial chapters of the book were published anonymously, but its merit soon attracted attention and won M. Benjamin the most coveted prize of Academie de Goucourt.

SCENE OF DESPERATE BATTLES AROUND VERDUN

Thanks to these three liters he was able to remain with Gaspard. The man in the storehouse locked the door with a key and the "unfit" professor spent a wonderful day folding up soldiers' trousers. He was delighted. He kept at his work assiduously, doing it over and over again while the hours went by. But the end soon come when the Lieutenant arrived on the scene.

He was furious when he came in because he had found the door locked.

"What are you doing here? . . . Didn't I tell you . . get out of here quick!"

This was a blow to Mousse.

"What shall we do, Lieutenant?"

"I told you before that all you were to do was to rest."

The two wanderers were more than ever at a loss to know what to do with themselves. They went on aimlessly through the halls, and some one called out:

Another voice was heard:

They took advantage of these contradictory orders to disappear once more, and again they were out in the yard. Most of their day was spent there, and they even ate their meals at the same place. The rest of the time was devoted to dodging the Adjutant and the sergeant. They knew every hiding place in and around the yard, every tree which might afford protection and concealment in case of the sudden arrival of one of their tormentors.

Sometimes they would run to the canteen, but it was not always open. There was no use trying the shower baths, for the water was never hot. The kitchens offered no shelter, for the cooks lost no time in expelling them. It was no use going to the infirmary because the surgeon's assistants would immediately want to vaccinate them. Having thought of all these places, the professor had an inspiration and suggested to Gaspard that they go a corner of the barracks, where the man in charge of the lamps help away.

Off they went at once and soon came face to face with a peculiar sort of individual, whose clothes seemed impregnated with oil, gasolene, and petroleum. He proved quite willing to take them in, and greeted them with open arms.

"All you have to do is to buy me a drink and then make yourself right at home. Nothing to worry about here. Why, the air is bad enough to keep any one away. All you have to do is to live on your income and take life easy."

"But do you think that we who are unfit will be allowed to remain here?"

"That's right," said Mousse. "I had forgotten."

The lamp men took the money, went out and came back with the wine, which he and Gaspard drank; the professor didn't touch it on account of his enteritis. He did his share, however, in cleaning every one of the lamps. He forgot all about his worries and the time passed quickly.

This went on for a day or two and then came the inevitable disaster. The adjutant, who in another life had probably been a shepherd's dog, came sneaking around, and discovered the peculiar odor with which the clothes foboth Mousse and Gaspard were impregnated.

"Where do you two come from?" he said. "What have you got to with the lamps?"

The shock was almost too great for the professor, who could hardly reply.

The Adjutant was furious.

"You're a fine lot, you two! Good for nothing and still bothering the whole regiment. Do you think we have nothing else to worry about than to think of you, and to waste our brains trying to find work for you? Don't you know this is war?"

"All we ask is something to do,'" said Gaspard.

The Adjutant was too excited to reply and all he could do was to murmur in a tone of supreme contempt the one word "unfit."

Providence, however, was watching over our two men. The orderly whose function it was to carry from the storerooms to the kitchen the meal and vegetables required for the daily meal, was suddenly taken ill. Gaspard and the professor quickly offered their services and the corporal in charge of the kitchen accepted.

Despite the wound of the one and the illness of the other, they began at once the arduous task of moving pushcarts from one end of the barracks to the other. Mousse looked particularly funny in his new role. The cart was heavy and difficult to move. Every once in a while the effort would be too great for him and in his excitement his glasses would fall to the ground. His part was to pull the cart along, while Gaspard pushed in the rear. When the stops became too frequent Gaspard became impatient and offered to take his comrade's place.

"It's too much for you, pal . . . . let me take it. You look like a rabbit trying to haul a trolley car."

The professor insisted on keeping his place. He was eager to wear himself out in order to better kill time. The butcher sneered at the care with which the professor would carry huge quarters of beef, which generally were tossed around like bags of flour, but the college man cared little for the other's sneers and went on with his work, hopeful that in another week or two he would be able to do it in a more skilful way.

He had forgotten that all human joys are short-lived. Just one week later the sick man had fully recovered, and the two "unfits"—Gaspard and Mousse—were once again out of a job.

One morning the professor, pale and feverish, went to see the captain.

"I'm cured, captain. I want to go to the front.

"See the surgeon," said the captain.

He went at once to the surgeon and told him the same story.

"I am cured. I want to go to the front."

"Look here," said the surgeon. "I knew what I was doing when I found you unfit for active service. The question is not whether you are cured, but whether or not you are going to stay cured. Come and see me again in six weeks, and meanwhile be patient."

He came out with tears in his eyes. The same day he received a letter from his sister-in-law which began as follows:

My Dear Gustave—Louis and I are just as patriotic as ever, but we feel that a man can do his duty wherever God has chosen to place him. I have prayed so much for you, and I imagine that heaven is keeping you among the unfit, because you are to return to us and to your pupils."

He thought at first this letter would drive him mad. He went up and down the yard murmuring to himself:

"God! What fools these women are. And yet my sister-in-law is an intelligent woman . . . at least I thought so. . . but, my God! what a fool she is!"

"Eh, friend! I have found something to do."

"Really?"

"Whenever there is a death in the hospital——"

"Well?"

"Well, we're going to be detailed for the funeral service."

"Do you mean it?"

"The corporal just told me."

"But are there many funerals?"

"Yes, they are doing pretty well just now."

On the average there was a death every three days at the hospital. Every third day, therefore, Gaspard and Mousse could be seen wearing their belts and their bayonets and marching slowly behind the hearse. The first few times they were both very much upset by the sobs of the relatives and the speech delivered over the grave by the Prefect, a big, stout official, who had the most impressive manner of saying, "Good-bye, little soldier . . . Good-bye."

In order to brace themselves after the ceremony they took advantage of their freedom to make a stop at a wine shop. After a few weeks they knew every cafe in A—, although A— has as many cafes as it has houses. There are ten of them watching the trains opposite the railroad station, twenty others around the church in active competition with the priest, and in the two shopping streets they stand side by side, just like fish dealers in a market place. This was all right for Gaspard, but to the professor it was just as monotonous as the yard in the barracks.

This man, generally so quiet and calm, was beginning to grow bitter and rough. Even on Sundays, when they were no longer compelled to remain in the barracks, when the gate was opened and when he and Gaspard could call themselves free, they were just as unhappy and dissatisfied. Nowhere to go, nothing to do, no one to see . . . a little town in Normandy on a Sunday afternoon in winter is one of the saddest places ever conceived.

The points of interest include a chateau, a prison and a public square, through which the northern winds send their chilling blast; even the river seems ashamed of its discolored, uninviting water and turns around the town as if it were eager to get away as quickly as possible.

Although the seat of the departmental prefect, A—— is a town where nothing happens, where no one comes and where everything is dull and monotonous.

There are no useless monuments, neither fountains nor old towers in ruins, and not even a statue. Others may indulge in such luxuries, but the men of Normandy are above everything else careful and prudent, and the best proof of that is found in the fact that A—— has no less than four lawyers.

All the natives can show you is the lunatic asylum, but even the 2,000 inmates are of no interest whatever. It is a mediocre town of which history will never have anything to say and of which the good points can only be learned in a geography. Its name recalls painful studies in school, but is completely ignored in any account concerning the glory of the nation. No one seems to know just why the town really exists.

After travelling through A—— the occasional visitor finds nothing at all to tell to his friends about the place.

It is a town through which one should pass quickly without stopping. The cloth market is square, the corn market is round and the post office has the sole advantage of being practically new. And there is all that any book or directory will tell you about A——.

There is only one single house which offers any kind of interest to the visitor. It is a modest and very small cottage where lace making is taught. The lace makers are not pretty, but the lace is, to say the least, curious. It is a miracle of feminine ability which never fails to amaze newcomers.

Coming out of this house, the remainder of the town is to the left and the railroad station to the right. The only thing to do is to turn to the right as quickly as possible.

This, however, is impossible so far as the soldier is concerned and more particularly an "unfit" soldier. Every time they went out our two men felt the same weary and dejected feeling, the same thorough discouragement, and there was nothing to do but to start all over again the same foolish questions, the same empty talk.

"What time is it?"

"Ten minutes past eight."

"And to think that it's that swine of a Kaiser who is responsible for all this!" Gaspard went on. "And there he is, living in luxury while we, who have done nothing to deserve it, are around here like a lot of kids . . . . Gee, I often wonder why I was born."

His friend approved with a wink of his eye, too dejected even to talk.

"What time is it?" said Gaspard.

"Eleven minutes past eight," said the professor.

The worst of it was that although disgusted, Gaspard was at heart delighted at the thought that he did not have to go back to the firing line, and when the professor displayed too much eagerness to go to the front Gaspard would say:

"Well, you'd leave nothing behind you, but what will become of my kid if the Germans kill me? Do you think he'll get his breakfast from the members of Parliament?"

For this reason he remained patient and was growing slowly accustomed to his pitiful fate.

His patience, however, was to receive a severe and unexpected shock.

It was bound to come. Gaspard had always been essentially a creature of impulse. Despite his activity he was able to get along in this monotonous life until temptation came his way. Then all his fears and worries vanished.

The change came when the sergeant inadvertently remarked:

"All those who are going back to the front are entitled to three days leave."

"Three days!" exclaimed Gaspard. "To be spent where?"

"In Paris?"

"Anywhere."

"Do you mean it?"

Paris! The thought went through him like a stroke of lightning. To see his mother, his wife and his child again and also the Rue d'la Gaite! He was half choking with joy just at the thought of it. He lost no time in telling Mousse about it.

"But we are unfit," said his friend bitterly.

"Unfit! You're a fine kind of a fool . . . . take it from me, they need men and they're not going to be so particular. Only we must keep away from the surgeon; we'll go straight to the office."

"Well, I'm willing to try."

This was Gaspard's supreme argument and it generally worked. He went into the office and, thanks to his bottle, quickly overcame every argument advanced by the man in charge of the lists. The latter promptly surrendered, saying with a superior air, "Well, so long as you insist, all I have to do is to put your names on the list and you'll go out with the next batch. If it's found out, well, I'll just say I don't know, how it happened . . . . Pretty good little wine, this is."

The professor was full of admiration for his friend and the latter had recovered all his fine spirits. He was gay and happy and laughed out loud as he said:

"Paris! and after that the boches! Fine! I'm willing. They only got part of my back last time; I'll give them the rest now. But that's all they ever will get! As for Paris, it's not for von Kluck. Paris is for me!"

He took Mousse along with him to the canteen and on their way they gathered up a few others. He emptied his purse, keeping no more than the exact amount required for his trip. Then he went around the yard, laughing at the others.

"We're going to leave you here in your chateau! You ought to be ashamed of yourselves. Where's your nerve?"

He spoke to many men whom he had never seen before.

"Eh, you! Are you satisfied with staying here? Well, believe me, I'm not. Three days of Paris and then on to the boches; that's what I call living."

They went toward the paymaster's department, where about fifty men were busy all day scribbling figures.

"A fine lot, a fine lot of lazy devils!" said Gaspard. "Let's go in and have a look at them."

He and his friend went in and looked through the wire netting in front of the desks. Suddenly he discovered a picture on the wall and exclaimed:

He was highly indignant, and after looking at the picture for a few moments, added "It's a wonder he doesn't turn around!"

In the afternoon when the papers permitting the men to go on leave were distributed he looked at the one which had been given to him and said:

"Three days . . Just three days! I wonder if it would have cost them too much ink to add one more to the three."

Like a good watch dog Gaspard was wont to grumble even when he was pleased.

As soon as his train reached Versailles he stuck his head out of the door window; at Malakoff he already had one foot outside of the door and at the Montparnasse railroad station in Paris he was the first to jump from the train. He ran all the way to his home.

He reached the Rue d'la Gaite at midnight, happy at the thought that his arrival would be a complete surprise. He rang the bell merrily and his mother was dumbfounded when she saw him.

"Is it really you? . . . Marie! here he is!"

Marie could hardly believe her eyes.

"Is it really true that you are back, right back here with us?"

He took them both in his arms and hugged them tightly.

"Where is the boy?"

"He is asleep."

"Well, what do you think of that!"

He went to call the child himself and covered him with kisses, while his eyes were filled with tears. Marie began at once to make him a cup of coffee, while his mother put on all the lights in the place. Marie said:

"So you have really been out at the front! How many of them did you kill? . . . How did it feel when you were wounded?"

Still holding his boy in his arms he replied:

"I'll tell you all about it. Just give me a chance."

He told the whole story of the campaign and of his life in the hospital and in the barracks.

"Believe me, we're all ready . . and we've got them now! . . . You ought to see their mugs! . . . They look like a lot of swine . . . and a fine lot of fools, too. Why, they think nothing of beginning to blaze away at you all of a sudden without even a word of warning! . . . They never look to see if you are there; they just go ahead and shoot their guns over the country. I might have brought you a piece of their skin as a souvenir, but it is too tough."

He inspected the house with great pride and was especially impressed by how well everything was kept.

"Well," said his wife, "it's always easier to keep the place clean when there is no man around."

the buffet was a portrait of Joffre. He looked at it and said:

"It's a pretty good likeness."

"Did you see him?"

"Well, no, but I saw a letter from his chauffeur. They tell me he's a real good sort."

"Really?"

"Yes, one of the best."

All three were laughing. Gaspard was so happy he could hardly believe he was really back in his own dear Paris. Suddenly he jumped up.

"How about the store . . . and the snails?"

He went downstairs into the shop with a lighted candle in his hand, saying to himself:

"It's war time . . . maybe they too have been mobilized."

During the night of his arrival, after drinking the coffee which she prepared for him, all the memories of the past months came back to him; he was happy to find his home in such good condition and looked affectionately first at Marie and then at the boy. While thinking over the past he became suddenly aware of a deep feeling of gratitude toward this brave woman who had brought up his son and taken such good care of him. He said:

"I'll tell you what we'll do . . . I just got an idea . . . This is war, you know . . . and there is nothing like war to give you an idea . . . not that there's anything new about it, but war changes everything. . . . Listen here, Bibiche" (this was his pet name for Marie) "don't you think it would be better . . . if we went out . . . and got married?"

This was entirely unexpected and she was so happy she could hardly reply.

Gaspard, with all the frankness of his simple soul, went on:

"I just came to think of it. . . . and when you think of it you might as well do it. . . because, you know. . . later on we might forget all about it."

His mother began to worry.

"You're not afraid that you're going to be killed when you go back, are you?"

"Killed!" Gaspard cried. "Killed! Well I don't think! Never . . but this is the way; so long as we're doing a general clean-up we might as well settle our own private affairs. Here's a little kid who doesn't know just what he is. That was all right before the war. But when it is all over everything will be straightened out and we don't want to be behind the others."

Turning to the boy, he added:

"What do you think about it, kid? Am I right, yes or no?"

The two women looked at him with tender eyes and the mother, deeply moved by her son's generous thought, said:

"Yes, my boy, you are right."

Having made up his mind, nothing could make him change it. It was clear to him that the very best thing he could do during his three days' leave was to get married, and there was no time to be lost.

The next morning at 9 o'clock he ran to the Mairie.

Discouraging news awaited him there, however, for an employee abruptly said:

He displayed his papers.

"I tell you, I only have three days leave."

"It'll take five."

"Well, then, what's the use of being at war?"

"Don't ask me. . . get out of here."

He came back disgusted. His little boy ran up to greet him.

"Tell me, papa, you're not going to let them kill you are you?"

The sight of the boy brought back the thought of the determination he had arrived at the night before. Bent on legalizing the child's position before returning to the front, he went back to the Mairie.

He had decided that he would go right ahead with the marriage formalities and that so long as five days were needed, well the only thing to do was to take the five days. He worried little about what might be the consequences. They wouldn't put him in prison; he would go right back to face the boches.

He came back home with a broad smile on his face, and said to Marie and to his mother:

"Well, it's all settled, and, just my luck, I met a General and he gave me two days more leave."

Marie could hardly believe it.

"Some of these Generals must be fine men. . . who would have believed it before the war?"

"Right you are," said Gaspard. "Nobody knew them before the war. Why, in the hospital I saw real society women who were doing all the hard work. They were wonders!"

Had it not been for the employee who had rebuked him at the Mairie Gaspard would have been convinced just then that there were none but good people on the surface of the earth.

He went around to see all the neighbors, exhibiting his coat, torn by a German bullet. At the corner saloon, kept by old man Criquenot, he inquired regarding the new law prohibiting the sale of absinthe.

"Well, how about it, no more absinthe?"

"Don't say a word. . . and step inside."

He went into the back of the store, where the saloon keeper prepared for him a large glass of the forbidden drink. In return Gaspard confided to him his scheme of getting married and legalizing the position of the boy. He was so proud of his plan that he also told the butcher and the baker and soon the entire neighborhood knew it.

As he was eager to buy a new bonnet for his wife and his mother for the wedding day and in view of the fact that funds were running low, he arrived at an almost heroic decision, which was to sell the collection of books which he was still proud and which he had so often described to his friend Mousse, the professor. He pulled them out from under the bed, where they had been stored away since the 2nd of August, and took them all, Dumas as well as Victor Hugo, and piled them into a pushcart with which he went to the Quai des Grands Augusttins. He was sad at the thought of losing his books, but the thought of his boy made him forget everything else.

All he could get for the fifty odd volumes was eight francs. He was so angry at the bookdealer that he was almost arrested.

"You old miser! You thief!" he called him. "Don't worry, we'll give you to the boches in exchange for Alsace-Lorraine!"

The bookdealer was a hideous fellow upon whom Gaspard's insults had not the slightest effect. Just as he was turning away Gaspard noticed, on the top of a pile of old books, a little green volume with the name of his friend, Gustave Mousse, printed on the cover. He grabbed it at once.

"Well, this will go to settle the bargain."

The bookdealer objected and tried to regain possession of the little green book, but Gaspard opened the door and ran out and soon reached home, proudly carrying the work of his friends.

He opened the volume and saw a few lines in Greek, which he could not understand. It was a classical work, compiled and analyzed by Mousse, but it was too much for Gaspard, who put it away with the intention of asking Mousse later to explain it to him.

He gave the eight francs to the two women at home and the wedding took place on the fifth day.

He was married at the Mairie and also at the church, this latter concession having been obtained from him by his mother, who had said:

"I have a little savings bank and I'll pay the cost."

"Let's talk about something else," said Marie.

There was indeed something else which they might have talked about had they known how it was worrying Gaspard. He kept on saying to himself, "I should have been back forty-eight hours ago." An the thought was bothering him so much that he kept on talking about other things in an attempt to forget it. He began a long discussion as to whether it was preferable to lose a leg or an arm. Contrary to the majority of opinions, Gaspard announced he would rather lose an arm. Roaming around from one place to another was all his pleasure in life.

He told them wonderful stories of the exploits of the big French guns, and as he practically never stopped talking his thirst was everlasting, and they stopped for a drink with almost every acquaintance they met. He was in fine spirits when his mother, his wife and his boy went to see him off at the Montparnasse station. The railroad employe, after examining the soldier's leave, said:

"Did I ask you for any information? Mind your own business!"

His wife, however, had overheard the employe's remark. She became anxious. Gaspard reassured her.

"Didn't I tell you that I met a General? . . . Why, this leave is just like an excursion ticket; it can be extended for any number of days."

The woman accompanied him through the gate and onto the platform, where the train was waiting. His mother took him in her arms and holding him close to her said in a trembling voice: "Good-by, my big boy . . . good-by, my boy" . . .

The old woman did not go up to the train for a special ticket costing two sous was required, and it had been decided that she would wait with the boy while only his wife saw him safely in the train. He gave her a long, tender kiss and looked at her with all the pride of a newly-married man. He was deeply moved himself, but seeing her worried look, he forced himself to smile and said simply:

When he reached the barracks fifty-three hours later than the scheduled time the corporal exclaimed:

"Well, my friend, there is something in store for you!"

Gaspard assumed his most dignified air:

"Have I asked you any question? Mind your own business and don't be so familiar. Who do you think you are?"

The adjutant came hurrying along. For two nights he had hardly been able to sleep for the thought of what he was going to say to the missing man.

"Well, it's coming your way, all right, and you're on active service, too! Court-martial and hard labor, that's what you'll get."

Gaspard was still very dignified.

"I'll explain to the officers."

The lieutenant soon arrived.

"Ah! ah! So here is the deserter . . . . Well, what have you got to say for yourself?"

Gaspard replied with the same dignified air:

"I want to speak to the captain."

The captain had been out at the front. He was a Parisian and a friend of Puche. For these reasons Gaspard had no fear of him. He lost his assurance, however, when he saw the officer, who gave him a very severe look.

"Captain," he stammered, "it's all the fault of the Mairie. I explained to them all about my leave, but they wouldn't listen to me and told me it was the only way I could straighten out my little boy's position. . . . I couldn't go away with that thought in my head . . . I wouldn't like to have them say that if I should be killed at the front . . . Now my boy's name is Gaspard, and if the Germans begin it over again twenty years from now, well, he'll be ready."

"Captain," replied Gaspard, "I would like to return to the front at once to fight the Germans."

"At once!" said the captain. "Well, you know, the trains are not running every three minutes, like the trolley cars back home in Paris. There will be no departure before ten days."

"You see, captain, it was all for the sake of the kid."

"Yes, but yours is not the only kid . . . and then there is a story about a gendarme. We have received a report. What did you do on your way home? Did you insult a gendarme?"

"Insult him?" said Gaspard. "Oh, the liar! I'll tell you, captain, just what happened. You see, I was walking along. All of a sudden I turned around and saw this man coming along behind me. He seemed to be trying to catch up with me, so I kept on going right ahead faster and faster.

"I said to myself that if he thought he had something on me I would make him run for it. He finally caught up with me, but was almost exhausted after his long run. He said, 'Why are you running?' and I said, 'Because I am in a hurry.' Then he said, 'Why should you be in a hurry?' 'Probably because I am late,' said I.

"He didn't seem to like that and told me that I seemed to be trying to run away. Then he asked me if I was on leave, I told him, 'Of course I'm on leave,' . . . and then he wanted to see my papers, and then——"

"See here," said the Captain, "are you trying to make a fool out of me just the same as you did to the gendarme? The point is, did you tell him that you would rather be a boche than a gendarme"

"Captain . . . let me explain."

"No . . . that will do. First of all, you will go to prison and then we will see."

This was final, and Gaspard hardly had time to shake hands with Mousse, who had returned to the barracks in good time and had been greatly worried over Gaspard's absence. Gaspard spent the night in the prison and the next morning when he came out he looked as if he hadn't had a minute's sleep. The men who had been with him said that he had cried almost all night and had kept on saying:

"There is no justice any more! It's a fine country to be working for! They throw you in jail just because you want to give your kids a name and a chance to live."

Gaspard's despair impressed the Captain, who said to him:

"Gaspard, you won't have to serve your eight days sentence. There is a call for twenty volunteers to start out in forty-eight hours. Do you want to go?"

"Do I want to go!" exclaimed Gaspard.

"Well, then, for the next two days you can help us out in the storehouse, where we are equipping the new recruits."

Gaspard was delighted. But suddenly the Adjutant appeared on the scene. He held the report in his hand and an ugly flame could be seen in his eye. The trouble this time was a complaint against Gaspard from the police department in Paris.

The Captain turned red with anger.

"What! . . . in Paris too! . . . Did you fight with a policeman too?"

"Gee! Captain, that's a shame . . . just listen . . . I'll tell you all about it . . . Well, I just reached the Montparnasse railroad station with my mother, my kid and Blanche . . . Bibiche, you know, is my wife . . . Well, at the gate I turned around to give the place a last look when this brass buttoned fool . . ."

"I have always told you to use more decent language."

"Well, this . . . whatever you call him, walks up to me and says: 'Come in or go out, but don't stand there,' Well . . . I suppose I was wrong, I admit I probably was wrong, but I just said to him: 'You'll just keep your high talk till the war is over. Are you going to try to give orders to a poilu?' Why, Captain, his face turned just as red as my cap, and then he asked me for my name, my number and the age of my mother. . . . I thought it was pretty decent of him to take so much interest in myself and my family, and then, as a sort of parting salute I just simply said: 'I don't have to ask you for your name because I know it must be fool; nor do I have to know your profession, for with a face like that it's a sure thing that you have never done a real day's work.'"

"You told him that?"

"You bet I did!"

"And you seem to be proud of it too! Go on back to the prison, and quick!"

"But how about equipping the recruits?"

"You heard what I said. Back to prison you go."

While talking to the Captain he had recovered his good spirits, but he became deeply depressed as soon as he was locked up again. He came out of the prison, however, after twenty-four hours instead of forty-eight, as it had been decided to advance the hour of departure of the volunteers.

The Captain called him.

"You are going to start right away. Are you glad?"

"Right away! . . . Really! . . . Are you coming with us, Captain?"

"Come and see me when you get all your equipment ready," he said.

Gaspard was overcome with joy and forgot all about the prison. He had hardly left the office of the Captain when a note arrived from the Major, together with a report from the internal revenue officials, complaining that the soldier Gaspard had been found carrying a bottle of alcohol under his tunic and that he had been insulting to the inspectors who spoke to him about it.

This was too much for the Captain, who hardly knew whether to laugh or to grow angry again. He took the report and wrote clear across it in large letters, "This soldier has left for the front." Then he called out to his assistant:

"Get that lunatic off right away and don't keep him here another second. Why, he would wind up before a court-martial!"

"I told you so," said the Adjutant.

"I don't want to see him again under any circumstances. Tell him to clear out."

When Gaspard was informed of the Captain's decision he was very much worried. He was all ready to start, with haversack on his back, canvas bag hanging from his shoulder and rifle in hand. Although he had developed almost a feeling of contempt for Moreau, he went up to him and said.

"Listen here, pal . . . The Captain is angry. I know it. I admit it. I have done a lot of fool things, damn fool things, but . . . I don't like to go away like this, because you know . . . he's a good sort . . . I bet he wasn't afraid of the boches . . . So this is what I wanted to tell you: I wanted to go to to him just before starting for the front and give him . . . just as a souvenir of Gaspard . . . some snails which I brought from home, from Paris . . . here they are.

"You take them and . . . give them to him. Just say: "Don't be angry, Captain. This is a souvenir of the wedding of Gaspard, who wants to thank you for sending him off like this . . . and then . . . write me a letter and tell me how he took it and if he smiled . . . I'd be real pleased if I thought it could make him smile.

"You see, I'm going away and I'm smiling . . . and my pal, Monsieur Mousse, who is a real pal, you see, he's smiling too . . . It's just like a show: You take the tickets and you start all over again right away."

They were only twenty when they left the barracks this time; it was no longer the imposing departure of a regiment, but merely a small reenforcement for a company at the front. But with Gaspard among the number even so small a group assumed an air of importance.

He was in the first rank, marching beside his pal, and once again he was going to battle with a smile on his lips and humming a merry tune. Mousse, who didn't know just how to feel, marched alongside of his friend wondering that this little insignificant town should suddenly assume so much importance to him, and he feared that he was never going to see it again.

At the railroad station an officer was waiting for them. Gaspard's jovial air appealed to him, and he said:

This pleased Gaspard immensely.

"We are all good pals," he said. "And we're going to go out and get the boches if we have to get killed to the last man."

"Vive la France!" shouted the officer, and the men repeated the words in a long powerful cheer.

The officer watched them pile into two third class compartments and then left them. In taking off his bag and belt Gaspard dropped a photograph on the floor.

"You're losing your wife and your kid," said Mousse quietly.

These words impressed Gaspard, who replied:

"I'm losing them, but I'll get them back all right."

"If you don't" said one of the soldiers, "there won't be much harm done, seeing that you told the officer that you were willing to get yourself killed."

Gaspard looked up quickly and felt for a moment worried at the thought that he might have gone too far in his patriotic outburst. He felt that he needed some advice from Mousse, who knew more about such things, but Mousse had nothing to say. Eager, however, to reconcile his contradictory statements, he said philosophically:

"Well, you see, the Captain is a good sort and this is his game . . . He was pretty decent with . . . us . . . and believe me, that's the stuff he like to hear . . . so why not give it to him?"

CHAPTER VII.

After twenty hours of weary travelling with practically no sleep beyond an occasional nap Gaspard and his comrades disembarked from the train in a gray, cold and foggy country where a thin rain was falling. On the mud covered platform of the little railroad station a big stout territorial who was on guard inquired whether they were new recruits.

"Well, what about it?" said Gaspard.

"Because if you are newcomers you would have done better to stay where you were."

"You poor fool!" said Gaspard. "Where do you come from?"

"All right," said the other. "You'll find out for yourself."

"Well, I should worry," said Gaspard.

"Maybe you will worry later on . . . This is Dead Man's Wood, and no one comes back from it."

"Well, why tell it to me?" exclaimed Gaspard. "Put it to music and sing it."

"That will do," said the sergeant. "Form fours and forward march!"

The wind blew the rain into the soldiers' eyes and in the distance heavy firing could be heard. Mousse had nothing to say; he felt a chill in his heart. The little group of men marched along through a small wood covered with fog and their steps could hardly be heard, so thick were the dead leaves under their feet.

Suddenly they turned into a main road where a battery of artillery emerged unexpectedly from the mist, with horses, cannon and gun carriages. The horses were wading through pools of mud and water was dripping from the wheels. The men were endeavoring to protect their mounts as much as possible with their coats, which were covered with mud. But they looked nothing like the twenty infantrymen after they had passed them on the road, for the horses' hoofs and the heavy wheels had covered Gaspard and his comrades from head to foot with a thick layer of mud. They called out a protest to the artillerymen, who went on without replying, riding their horses as though they were glued to their saddles and dragging behind them the squeaking gun carriages. They seemed to have little but contempt for these men who went to war with small rifles in their hands.

The twenty volunteers marched on silently for about fifteen minutes and then reached a mass of ruins which still bore the name of a village. Only a few walls were standing; most of the houses had been reduced to stone heaps from which here and there a shaft would emerge, seemingly calling out for help. But no more help was needed there. Everything was death and desolation. Not a living soul was to be seen. . . It seemed, however, as if some of the stone heaps were moving and black shadows could be discerned around them.

"What is it?" some one asked.

"Soldiers," Gaspard replied.

"What are they doing there?" asked Mousse.

"They are encamped there," said the sergeant. "And that's just what we're going to do."

He halted the men in front of the remains of a stone wall with one solitary window which no longer had anything to protect. They advanced along the wall and suddenly came to a hole in the ground from which the top of a ladder emerged.

"Go to it, one by one, and watch your step."

"It looks as if we were going down to hell," said Mousse.

The sergeant replied:

"We are going to reenforce the Tenth company."

An objectionable odor greeted the men as they entered the cellar where shadows could be seen seated or lying along the walls.

"New recruits!"

Gaspard did not care much for the atmosphere, but he called out nevertheless:

"Is there any one here from the Rue d'la Gaite?"

"Here you are," some one replied.

A big tall soldier stepped out from the shadow.

They shook hands laughingly. Gaspard tried to get a good look at the man who was greeting him so genially and said with a suspicious air:

"Do you come from the Rue d'la Gaite?"

The other, who did not seem to have a tooth in his mouth, replied, his jaws wide apart:

"No mistake about it. My home is right close to the canal."

"The canal?"

Gaspard laid his hand on the other man's shoulder.

"What is this? A joke?"

"No, I tell you. My home is in L——"

"L—— Why is that what you call the Rue d'la Gaite? . . . Don't you know there is only one in the world? What a fool! And to think that's what they permit to vote!"

Mousse had found a stack of hay on which he seated himself and Gaspard stretched himself out alongside of his pal.

"This place is pretty damp," said Gaspard.

A voice replied:

"Don't worry," said another. "You'll soon get something better than that."

"Well, if you're hanging around to see me worry you'll have a long wait," replied Gaspard.

Three men were playing cards in a corner, and their voices calling out their hands were all that was heard in the next few minutes. When they stopped talking water could be heard trickling through the earth above and Mousse felt a chill run through his body. He said quietly:

"This thing will kill us."

"Poor mother! If you could only see your son now," said Gaspard jokingly.

"By the way," he added, "when are we going to eat?"

The big toothless soldier was quick to supply the information that the others had already had their meal. Gaspard again lost his temper.

"You! Who asked you about yourself? All I have had to eat is a biscuit. Do you think that's enough for a man on a day like this? I am willing to belong to the Government, but they'll have to feed me or there'll be some noise. You can bet that the Cabinet Ministers have more to eat than they want and are getting fat!"

"Do you want a piece of my chocolate?" said Mousse, still talking in the same quiet and unexcited way.

The sergeant, who had gone out for a while, came down the ladder again and said:

"Up, men! Reenforcements are needed."

"Where?"

"Where do you think Out in front, of course."

Murmurs of discontent and complaints were heard on all sides, and protests came from almost all the men, "I am sick" . . . "So am I" . . . "I'm not going to move" . . . "I'll wait for them here."

But despite their protests all of them got ready, and still murmuring and cursing each other they crawled up the ladder out into the fresh air.

"But we," said Gaspard, "we just got here. Surely they don't expect us to go."

"Why, of course not," said the sergeant. "You're going to be exempted and live on your income."

AMERICA'S SOUL IS ASLEEP, SAYS EARL GREY

CANADA'S FORMER GOVERNOR-GENERAL IN NOTABLE INTERVIEW SCORES THE UNITED STATES FOR BLINDNESS TO HUMANITY'S WRONGS AND SELFISH DEVOTION TO LOCAL INTERESTS WHILE CIVILIZATION IS IN DANGER

By Edward Marshall.

London.

Here is an arraignment of the United States by a great Englishman, an Englishman who knows the United States, who loves her, who, indeed, has been one of her best friends among his countrymen.

"Humanity," said Earl Grey, tall, cadaverous from illness, "has come to the parting of the ways. The world is engaged upon a struggle in which are arrayed upon the one side those who uphold the ideals of freedom, law and democracy and the equal rights of all nations and upon the other those who uphold the divine right of the strong to live at the expense of the weak and to crush all who may stand in the way of their aggressive and selfish development. This struggle is of an importance as great to the United State as to England."

"Ever since I left college," he said, "it has been the cherished dream and ambition of my life to see before I die such a co-operation in the field of disinterested endeavor of the English speaking peoples as will enable them by the moral force of their common ideals and the power of their joint strength to secure for suffering humanity the blessings which flow from the safe enjoyment of equal rights and the prompt and effective enforcement of international law.

THE MEANING OF THE WAR.

"The great war on which we are engaged is a war not so much between rival nations as between the contending and eternal principles of right and wrong, and it is my belief that on our victory, for the achievement of which we are prepared to sacrifice, if necessary, our last dollar and our last drop of blood, depend the hopes not only of the whole world, including the United States, but of the Germans themselves. That our two nations are not standing side by side in this great struggle I confess appears to me to be an anomaly, for it is my belief that British and American ideals are the same.

A NEW RESPONSIBILITY FOR US.

"It is my hope that out of the great crisis may come a recognition of their joint responsibility by the two English speaking peoples, who have similar ideals of liberty, law and democracy, and the degree of my hope may be measured by the depth of my conviction that if this does not occur the highest and noblest interests of the world may be endangered.

"England's greatness in the past is due to her national tradition that no individual should have rights who does not also accept the burden of corresponding duties. The most definite and gratifying result of this war so far has been the clarity with which this old and sometimes forgotten truth has been revealed.

"It is an ideal by no means solely England's. It has been that of the United States. It has been that of every worthy religion since the world began.

"Under the operation of this ideal the family and the country are two circles within a larger circle which contains them both, namely, that of humanity. They are two steps of the ladder of ascending civilization. Without them ascent is impossible. Upon them it is forbidden to rest.

"No individual, no nation, can divorce its life with impunity from that of humanity. As Owen Wister, has pointed out, no country can proclaim itself the champion of the brotherhood of man and then claim for himself the right to a separate soul.

THE BURDEN OF GREAT DEMOCRACIES.

"Man has no right because he lives, but has rights and has rights only if he lives nobly. I believe we all must come to recogniton of this universally accepted but not universally applied principle.

"The old English idea was that a man's power in the State must depend upon his service to the State, and I believe a return to that ideal as the governing principle of democracy is esential, if the world is to progress steadily. When the principle of duty, based on the foundation of liberty, is recognized as the saving principle of democracy, it is possible that in the most enlightened democracy no person shall have the right even of suffrage unless that person has earned the right through service.

"Picture to yourself a boat in which the stout hearts are breaking as they tug at their oars while the 'conscientious objectors' sleep as passengers and occasionally wake to congratulate themselves upon the whiteness of their garments and the stainless purity of their hands. What do you suppose is the feeling of the workers for the shirkers in the cabins?

'England is not shirking in this war. With the exception of a few whose only idea of liberty is that they have a right not to serve the State, and to throw the burden of necessary duties on the volunteers, all her men, and women too, are at the oars, and they recognize that the battle they are waging is not theirs alone, but yours as well.

"The greatest danger which now threatens that much to be desired co-operation between the Anglo-Celtic peoples, on the existence and strength of which the future happiness of the world depends, is that the British democracies may begin to feel toward the United States as the men bursting their hearts at the oars of the boat feel toward the idle people in its cabin.

"Believing as I do that the future peace and righteousness of the world depend in large measure, on the near approximation in ideals of the Anglo-Celtic peoples, I should regard it as a disaster of the greatest magnitude if the British democracies should be taught by Americans to think of them in the same way as they are beginning to think of the 'conscientious objectors.'

"What weighs down my heart at present is the fear that the official attitude of America to the war may postpone the realization of my cherished ideal of a close Anglo-American concert for the protection of mankind; of a moral if not a material Anglo-American combination for the promotion of a higher and better civilization.

"England's entrance into this war was absolutely non-selfish. She drew the sword that she might keep her word with a friend and enforce international obligations. We learned later that our own self-preservation would have required us to protect Belgium and France from conquest by Germany. But when war was declared this was not understood by the people, who had not realized the true character of German ambition.

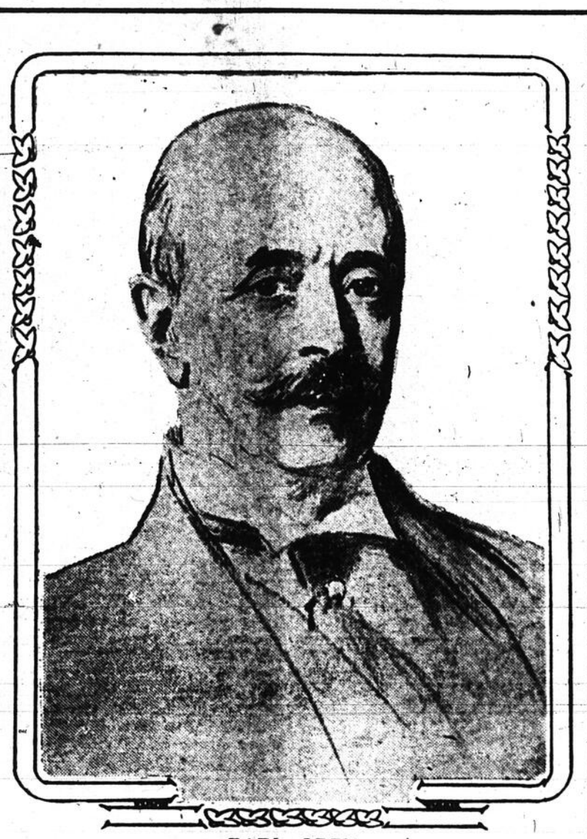

CARNEGIE'S PLAN: UNIVERSAL WAR FOR UNIVERSAL PEACE.

"It was from my friend Andrew Carnegie that I learned that the best way to insure the peace of the world would be through the establishment of a general readiness of the civilized nations to wage universal war for universal peace and, through the collective employment of an organized force, for the arrest and punishment of the violator of international rights. It is obvious that the peace of each community can only be guaranteed by its determination to wage universal war against the wreckers of universal rights by keeping its armed forces, its police, ever ready to do battle with the disturbers of the peace, and to fight if need be for the freedom of the individual and the safety of his home.

"So international peace must be preserved by its policemen, organized and trained and paid for watchfulness and readiness, and when occasion comes for the subjugation and arrest of any one who may violate international rights.

"This idea is the great contribution which Carnegie has made to the cause of advancing civilization.

"I have always regarded that as the essentially American ideal — the thought that every nation must do its share in the protection of the interests of the commonwealth of nations, must contribute its proper share of force toward the maintenance of international law. England now is doing that and more than that. America is doing very much less than that.

EARL GREY.

"If Andrew Carnegie's plan had been realized three years ago I do not believe the present war would have taken place. It is not an impracticable plan. It can be realized as soon as the world has been educated up to it.

"Now what the enlightened nations of the world must bend their energies to accomplish is the education of the world up to that plan, and it is my firm belief that this can best be accomplished through cooperation between England and the United States.

"That is why, looking to such cooperation as the best means of securing for all peoples a happier existence, I dread the possible effect of the present aloofness of official America from the war. The fact that folded arms while international law was being stabbed and murdered may lessen the desire of those who regard her as responsible for setting back the clock of civilzation to cooperate with her in the future.

"The only explanation I can find for this extraordinary, this entirely unexpected course upon the part of the Americans, is that in this great nation a false ideal has been set up — a narrow-minded ideal, considering only and exclusively the rights and material happiness of the American people, forgetting those of others. The present difference between British and American ideals, as expressed through our respective governments, is that America apparently is only interested in maintaining the rights of Americans, while it is the ambition of every Briton to safeguard and promote the rights of men.

"Long ago it was pointed out by the Italian, Mazzini, the greatest prophet of the last century, that any conceivable doctrine of rights and material happiness only as opposed to that of duty will but result in that worst of crimes, a civil war between class and class. Mazzini referred to national psychology. The identical rule applies with equal force to international psychology.

"From the same lips came the statement that both individual and national responsibility begins upon the very day when either individual or nation realizes fully what path should be followed to transform society and neglects to pursue.

"That would appear to be the crime against themselves and against civilization which in the time of this great crisis has been committed by Americans. They knew the path which they should follow, yet they did not follow it.

"Americans like Roosevelt, Root Eliot; the American press which in many instances and in the very early days of the war analyzed its true meaning with splendid and uncompromising ability, pointed out the way, yet America would not follow it, and there came from the people no protest of a vividness sufficient to cause the Government to take action."

"To what do you attribute this which you believe to have been the failure of the United States?"

"I cannot definitely say," Earl Grey replied. "It may be that the Government and people feared internal trouble, due to the mixed and unassimilated population. Governments have often brought on wars to avert domestic friction. It may be that in this instance the American hesitated, and not unnaturally, to contemplate war which would, in all probability, up to quite recently have created serious domestic friction.

THE GREATEST MISTAKE IN AMERICAN HISTORY.

"I am sure it is true that the majority of people in the United States wish to act, if possible, in accordance with the highest ethical motives upon which national actions can be based. I am entirely willing to declare my faith in that.

"Personally, I am sure, although there are many who are not, that as a whole America is always ready to place in abeyance her own temporary and temporal interests in favor of disinterested action in furtherance of the highest ideals.

"But in this supreme crisis, in which the best hopes of humanity are involved, it appears to me that the United States has failed, hereby making the greatest mistake in your history. Belgium has lost everything but her soul. What shall be said of America?"

"You ask me what can be done to correct this dreadful situation for more dreadful for Americans than for those whom they should have helped but did not. I would say, if I may do so without presumption, let their old ideal of the rights of man replace their present ideal of the rights of Americans only.

"This can be done now at the eleventh hour by giving a lead where in the hours already passed forever the United States has refused to lead.

"It can be done by the United States assumption of her proper and her natural role of champion of international rights. She can regain standing with herself and with her fellows among nations by resuming her trusteeship — that trusteeship which in days gone by, Americans have so proudly valued.

"I remember now the feelings of exultation which filled my heart when I read President McKinley's message to Congress in April, 1898, when after recounting the cruelties and barbarities, the bloodshed, the starvation and horrors in Cuba which shocked the sensibilities and offended the human sympathies of the people, he recommended forcible intervention as a neutral, because it was required by the higher dictates of humanity.

"Nor do I forget the message of President Roosevelt to Congress in 1904, when he stated that it was intolerable that the United States should desire eagerly to give expression to its horror at the systematic and long extended cruelty and oppression of which the Americans had been the victims, and which had won for them the indignant pity of the civilized world.

"These actions caused us to expect confidently an indignant protest from America at Germany's inhuman barbarities and her shameless violation of international law, but none came. Why was it? The historian will want to know.

"The aloofness of the American people from the struggle which affects them almost as closely as ourselves makes me for the first time apprehensive as to the future. If the moral note remains unstruck at this time, when we had a right, in accordance with the teachings of history, to expect it to be ringing loudest, I fear we must prepare ourselves for a period of coldness between the British and American democracies, instead of that warm reciprocal feelings of mutual esteem and affection which it has been the hope of my life to see fulfilled.

ONE OF THE WORLD'S TRAGEDIES THAT AMERICA HAS NOT EMERGED SUBLIME.

"I am a great admirer of and sympathizer with America. When I was in Canada I was most favorably impressed with the large proportion to the American population of civic heroes and heroines who devoted themselves to the public good. I have watched with thankful and rejoicing heart the streams of moral earnestness issuing from your universities and cities charged with the sacred mission of cleansing from the land the polluting stains of all forms of evil. It has been a great surprise and disappointment to me that these forces have not rallied in action as they have in sympathy to the cause of righteousness."

I asked Earl Grey if he believed that the United States should still enter the war.

"Many people here say," he answered, 'For Heaven's sake don't bring America into this war. We don't want it to happen. We can finish it and we would rather finish it without her help.' It is this sort of answer that gives ground for the apprehension which I have ventured to express. My reply to those who say this is that they are entirely wrong. Their conclusion indicates to me that they have not thought out the world's requirements, and have not realized that really close co-operation between the democracies of Britain and America is required for the safeguarding of those principles of law, liberty and democracy which are the living principles of a noble, and enlightened commonwealth.

"Please do not think I condemn America because her soul seems dormant. The soul of England has also been dormant.

"Our people have been taught for over fifty years to worship the false gods of comfort and of mammon and to claim the right of every individual to shirk performance of his duty to the commonwealth.

"The souls of France and England have now found a new expression, sloughing off the paralyzing influence of a selfish materialism under the strong stimulants of the necessity for self-preservation.

"America has not yet understood that the preservation of her highest ideals is equality at stake. When she does her soul, like ours, will also be reborn."

Says German Note Repudiates Liner Pledge

By JAMES M. BECK

Formerly Assistant Attorney-General of the United States and Author of "The Dual Alliance vs. the Triple Entente" and "The Evidence in the Case."

When the present world-war broke out, no principle of international law was more securely established than that war should be so conducted that injury and death should be spared to noncombatants, so far as was humanly possible. The principle was as old as civilization. The idea that it was of modern origin is largely due to the fact that the horrors of the Thirty Years' War, with its sack of Magdeburg and other atrocities which are a parallel to the rape of Belgium, caused the great philosopher and jurist, Grotius, to present in his classic treatise this principle of humanity, which in times of war marks the chief line of demarcation between savagery and civilization.

Grotius abundantly proved by citations from Cicero, Sallust, and Seneca that to spare noncombatants and treat even captured soldiers with humanity and moderation was a basic principle of civilization. The excesses of the Circus Maximus and the Coliseum marked the baser days of Nero and Caligula and their successors. In the application of this principle, Grotius quoted Seneca as holding that "in the calamities of war children are exempted and spared on the score of their age and women from respect to their sex." In his noble oration in defence of Ligarius Cicero voiced to no less a Judge than the greatest of the Caesars the virtue of moderation to the vanquished and uttered the immortal truth that "man can approach no nearer to the gods than in giving safety to man."

The principle, thus recognized even in the times of the earlier Caesars, received a powerful impetus with the advance of civilization and the growth of Christianity, and in the days of chivalry became one of general recognition. No one can assert that this ideal was always observed in the passionate strife of the Middle Ages, but it was an ideal, consistently avowed, which generally moderated the excesses of war. The mediaeval knight disdained to use his sword upon a noncombatant; but now, to quote Burke's sad lament, "The age of chivalry is gone — and the glory of Europe is departed."

Such was the undoubted law of civilization at the outbreak of this war. It is no answer to say that international law is a misnomer and means little more than the etiquette of nations, to be observed or disregarded according to the pleasure or necessities of the combatant, for it may be said of this great principle of humanity, as Alexander Hamilton so eloquently said:

> The sacred rights of man are not to be searched for in old documents and musty records. They are written as with a sunbeam in the whole volume of human nature by the hand of Divinity itself and can never be erased by mortal power.

The clearest recognition of this principle of humanity is evidenced by the fact that for five months after the war began it was never asserted by any belligerent that any right existed to slaughter indiscriminately noncombatants, whether citizens of belligerent nations or not, in order to destroy an enemy's commerce. The first intimation to the contrary was an authorized interview by Admiral Tirpitz, given to the world on the eve of Christmas, 1914 —God save the mark!—in which that chief of pirates, whom history has recorded—for no buccaneer of the Spanish Main ever did a fouler deed than the destruction of the Lusitania —stated that it was his intention to torpedo every merchant vessel belonging to the Allies, and, directing his challenging to America, he asked, "What will America then say?" Had our President then called upon Germany to affirm or disaffirm this threat of its chief Naval Commander under penalty of an immediate severance of diplomatic relations, this black and shameful chapter of history would possibly never have been written.

This was followed on February 4, 1915, by a proclamation which established a war zone around the British Isles, and said:

> Every enemy merchant ship found in the said war zone will be destroyed without its being always possible to avert the dangers threatening the crews and passengers.

We accepted that challenge in the most direct and unequivocal manner, when our Government on February 10, 1915, called the attention of the German Government "to the very serious possibilities of the course of action apparently contemplated," and added as our warning that if such course of action caused the death of any American citizens, it would be difficult for the United States to view the act in any other light than as an indefensible violation of neutral rights, for which the Government would be concerned to hold the German Government to a strict accountability, and to take any steps it might be necessary to take to safeguard American lives and liberty and to secure to American citizens the full enjoyment of their acknowledged rights on the high seas.

Thus was the issue joined with brave words, and if we had then begun to make adequate preparations to vindicate these words with deeds, it is reasonably possible that the Lusitania would never have sunk.

Whether the German Government was indifferent to our hostility or misled by the assurance which our then Secretary of State is said to have given to the Austrian Ambassador that our notes were to be taken in a Pickwickian sense and as chiefly intended for home consumption, we do not know; but it is certain that the German Government shortly thereafter determined to test the sincerity of our brave protestations.

On March 28, 1915, it sank the British steamer, the Falaba, without any warning, and destroyed a number of lives, including that of an American citizen.

It followed this a month later by firing on our flag and sinking the American steamer, the Gulflight, and three more of our citizens became the victims to their piracy.

On May 24, a German submarine torpedoed the American steamer, the Nebraskan, and the German Foreign Office then assumed its attitude of almost contemptuous indifference by sending to us the extraordinary explanation that the commander of the submarine could not see because of the gathering twilight what the nationality of the vessel was, and therefore torpedoed the unknown ship on general principles, and it was sardonically added that on this account the shot must not be regarded as intended for the American flag, but simply as an unfortunate accident."

On April 22 the German Government determined to direct on our own soil the actions of American citizens, and in defiance of the principles laid down by our Government. At that time a large number of our citizens were preparing, in full confidence that their rights would be vindicated by their Government, to sail on the Lusitania, and the German Embassy, by an advertisement dated April 22 and published May 1, warned the citizens that if they sailed on the Lusitania they would do so "at their own risk." This meant, and could only mean, that the German Government on our soil forbade our citizens to do that which our Government had told them they had a right to do.

This violation of all diplomatic proprieties and virtual defiance of our Government on its own soil was intensified when the German Foreign Office, after the Lusitania had been sunk, ironically expressed its regret that Americans felt more inclined to trust to English promises than to pay attention to the warnings from the German side.

When Genet made a similar but far less reprehensible attempt to appeal over the head of the President to the American people, President Washington, although our country was then in its infancy and ill-prepared to defend its rights, promptly demanded his recall. De Lome went home because of one slur on our then President in a private letter, while Sackville-West was given his passports because he expressed an opinion in another private letter how an American citizen should vote. We compelled Spain to disavow the murder of the crew of the Virginius and we sought to compel Mexico on short notice to salute our flag because some of our officers had been arrested by some over zealous Mexican subordinates.

If Count Johann Bernstorff had been given his passports then, it is again possible, and perhaps probable, that the Lusitania would never have sunk. Our Government was not unaware of the gross impropriety of the action of the Germany Embassy, because it called its attention to it as a "surprising irregularity," but with this very mild rebuke, it permitted the German Ambassador to remain, and he has since influenced the action of our Government as no other foreign diplomat ever has done. Emboldened by his immunity, his military and naval attaches, von Papen and Boy-Ed, outraged every principle of diplomatic intercourse by making this country a base of operations for hostile attacks upon our friendly neighbors.

The impropriety of the German Embassy was emphasized when Dr. Dernburg, the semi-official representative of the Kaiser in this country, cynically added to the formal warning of the German Embassy:

> If after such warning and publication of the fact that a ship contained contraband, as I have suggested, people want to travel in her it is their own affair. Nobody can prevent their committing suicide if they wish.

This brutally cynical remark also went unrebuked, until, with his exultant justification of the massacre of the Lusitania, public opinion—and not a laggard Government — drove him from our shores, whose hospitality he had so shamefully abused.

The Lusitania sailed on May 1 with 2,500 noncombatants on board, and on May 7, without the slightest warning or an opportunity to escape, it was cruelly and treacherously torpedoed, and over 1,000 men, women, and children were thrown to the waves.

Two days later the President of the United States spoke in the City of Philadelphia and the entire world listened with bated breath to what the first citizen of America would say in relation to this outrage. He had only to lead. The American people were then at least ready to follow. He knew and must have known that every syllable he then uttered would be necessarily construed as having a direct reference to his attitude and that of his country. He must have been conscious of this, and this was his message to the world:

> Is not there such a thing as a man being too proud to fight? There is such a thing as a nation being so right that it does not need to convince others by force that it is right.

The German Government thereafter not unnaturally paid little attention to successive notes, which it and the world generally regarded as more voluble than valuable.

Was it not Wilkins Micawber, the original advocate of "watchful waiting," who always wrote a note while "wanting for something to turn up"?

On May 13, 1915, we did protest against this inhuman outrage, but all that we said was the the Imperial German Government will not expect the Government of the United States to omit any word or any act necessary to the performance of its sacred duty of maintaining the rights of the United States and its citizens and of safeguarding their free exercise and enjoyment.

Thereafter no "word" was omitted. The President mobilized the dictionary industriously, if not effectively, and vigorously opposed German submarines with a typewriter.

On May 28, 1915, the German Government justified the sinking of the Lusitania upon grounds, all of which were untenable and some of which were false in fact.

On June 9 we again wrote a note to the German Government and demanded assurances that the Imperial Government will adopt the measures necessary to put these principles into practice in respect to the safeguarding of American lives and American ships.

While this ineffective interchange of notes was taking place the German Government was indicating by its acts in no unmeaning way its intention to carry on the policy of frightfulness on the high seas.

On June 28, 1015, it sank the Armenian and killed eleven American citizens, and nineteen days later it attacked the great transatlantic passenger ship the Orduna, and only a missed shot prevented a repetition of the Lusitania massacre.

On July 21 the German Government, having persistently refused to disavow the Lusitania outrage, our Government addressed to it another note in which we simply emphasized the rights of our citizens as neutrals and concluded by saying that friendship itself prompts it (our Government) to say to the Imperial Government that repetition by commanders of German naval vessels of acts in contravention of these rights must be regarded by the Government of the United States, when they affect American citizens, as deliberately unfriendly.

It will be noted that in this demand our Government commenced to modify at least the ground of its contention by omitting its previous wholly creditable assertion of the rights of noncombatants on general principles of humanity and by restricting it to the rights of our citizens to be in any event immune. As I shall venture to show hereafter, this modification of our attitude compromised the principle upon which our whole contention was necessarily based. This distinction between the rights of neutrals and the rights of noncombatants was not an inadvertence. The note was prepared by the great rhetorician with the utmost care, and it is said that he spent many hours in considering whether he would use the words "deliberately unfriendly" or "an unfriendly act," although it would take a mediaeval scholiast to recognize the precise distinction.

While these innocuous notes were being exchanged, Admiral von Tirpitz and his subordinate pirates were not idle, for on August 19, they destroyed the Arabic and killed some more American citizens. This act and the subsequent inaction of our Government raised so strong a storm of protest among the American people that the sagacious Bernstorff evidently advised his home Government that, while it could trifle with some American officials, it could not thus deal with impunity with the American people, and thereupon the German Foreign Office attempted to give the impression that the sinking of the Arabic had been contrary to authority and it authorized its Ambassador at Washington to give this Government a solemn pledge that liners will not be sunk by our submarines without warning and without safety of the lives of noncombatants, provided that the liners do not try to escape or offer resistance.

This pledge was given not in Bernstorff's language but in formal terms conveyed through him to our Government by the German Foreign Office. The pledge was absolute and without restriction as to the war zone. And yet in its note of May 5, 1916, as we shall presently see, the German Foreign Office denied that any such assurance was ever given as to the so-called war zone.

That was not the only pledge, for Secretary Lansing states in his later note of April 18 that again and again the Imperial Government has given its solemn assurances to the Government of the United States that at least passenger ships would not thus be dealt with.

As recently as February last it promised this, except as to armed merchantmen, but these promises have proved only "scraps of paper."

The assurances that have been given our Government that the attempted torpedoing of the Orduna and the torpedoing of the Arabic and the Ancona were in violation of instructions would belong to low comedy if it were not in results the subject of high tragedy. Remembering the incalculable consequences that might befall Germany if our Government had proceeded to vindicate the rights of its citizens and the principles of humanity, it is altogether incredible that any commander of a submarine would have acted in violation of the instructions given to him by his Government. Remembering the discipline of the German army, navy, and civil government, it is morally certain that whatever assurances have been given through diplomats or whatever ships have been sunk by submarine commanders have been by direct authority of the respective heads of these departments and with the express authority of the supreme War Lord. When, therefore, assurances were given to this country that no more liners should be sunk without warning, and when submarine commanders subsequently proceeded to sink such ships without warning, the conclusion is irresistible that the same responsible ruler and War Lord, who gave the pledge through his Chancellor, violated it through his submarine commanders.

The false pledge, thus given to our country to lull us into a false sense of security, was accompanied by another policy of sinister significance. In our country, public indignation was steadily increasing at this ineffective change of notes; and the German Ambassador insidiously suggested to our Secretary of State that the policy of publishing notes should cease, and that further communication should be conducted by confidential "conversations," which left little scope for the influence of public opinion either in Germany or in the United States. Thus was the policy of "pitiless publicity" vindicated in a grave matter! Undoubtedly diplomatic communications may often both advantageously and properly be conducted in camera, but this controversy had hitherto been conducted in the forum of public opinion, and its sudden transfer to "secret diplomacy" by the great apostle of "pitiless publicity" was but another surprising change of policy.

While these confidential "conversations" were proceeding the horror of the Lusitania was repeated on November 7, 1915, when a submarine carrying the Austrian flag sank the Ancona, and nine more of our citizens were sacrificed. Once again we received the familiar excuse that the commander had acted in excess of his instructions, and it was agreed that he should be punished. If he has ever been punished, the fact and nature of his punishment have yet to be made public. His punishment may have been to be decorated, as was the commander of the submarine which sank the Lusitania.

On Sept. 30 another passenger steamer, the Persia, was sunk, and another American life, that of an official of the United States, was sacrificed. As the Persia presumably did not commit suicide by torpedoing itself, and as the scene of disaster was beyond the region of mines, it is not a very rash assumption that either a German or an Austrian submarine sank it.

After these confidential conversations had proceeded for about six months more, announcement was loudly and triumphantly made last February that the submarine controversy had been finally settled. It would have been consummated but for the fact that the issue of armed merchantmen suddenly arose, and proposed settlement was again postponed. Had that settlement been consummated, it would have involved on the part of our country a compromise of the principle of humanity involved.

As that proposed settlement may yet be revived in the tortuous course of future negotiations, it is of importance that its nature should be clearly recognized, so that public opinion may, if possible, prevent it.

The proposed settlement, which was for a few fleeting days proclaimed from Washington as a great diplomatic triumph for the United States, commenced with a promise to pay cash for the lives of the American citizens who were slaughtered on the Lusitania. The German Government then agreed to conform its future warfare to the recognized principles of international law, and then, as a disavowal of the Lusitania outrage, the German Government was to make substantially the following acknowledgment to the world:

> Germany, while considering reprisals against an enemy legal, but knowing that the United States regards reprisals as illegal, admits that the attack on the Lusitania was an act of retaliation, that was not justifiable so far as it involved the loss of neutral lives and also assumes liability for such loss of life.

Such was the nature of the settlement, as semi-officially given to the press of the country both by our State Department and the German Embassy at Washington.

At the time that this proposed settlement was interrupted by the new issue of arming merchantmen, our State Department and the German Ambassador were discussing whether Germany would "assume" liability or would "recognize" liability. This was the merest verbal hair splitting in view of the express admission by the German Government that the attack on the Lusitania was unjustifiable "so far as it involved the loss of neutral lives."

Had this qualified disavowal been accepted by our Government, it would have compromised the justice of our cause and profoundly modified the existing law of humanity.

If the attack on the Lusitania were not justifiable "so far as it involved the loss of neutral lives," then the implication is not unreasonable that it was justifiable so far as it destroyed the lives of noncombatants of belligerent nations. It is true that it does not expressly say so, but the "disavowal," which we had insistently demanded for nearly a year, was to be a full recognition of a wrong, and to the extent that the wrong was not admitted it was by implication justified by this attempted "accord and satisfaction."

This distinction was indefensible either on grounds of humanity or of international law. If Germany had a right without visit or search to attack the Lusitania because it was an English vessel and was believed to be carrying contraband and had a right in so doing to destroy English noncombatants, then that right could not be impaired by the accidental presence on the Lusitania of American citizens. No American would contend that the army of the Crown Prince was prevented from bombarding Verdun if some American citizens were accidentally in the beleagured city.

The German contention that the rights of neutrals on belligerent merchant ships cannot rise higher than noncombatants of belligerent nations seems to me entirely sound. There is also much force in Germany's contention that under changed conditions armed merchantmen should not have the immunity of unarmed merchant vessels, but as existing international law is to the contrary, our Government was fully justified in declining to change an existing rule of law without the consent of all the belligerents.

> The massacre of the passengers and crew of the Lusitania was unjustifiable not because American citizens were sacrificed, but because all on board were noncombatants.

Its sinking without previous visit or search and without making any provision for the lives of the passengers and crew would have been in gross violation of the previously accepted law of nations even though no neutral happened to be on board. Germany had always asserted and even insisted upon this contention. Indeed it had formerly carried further this principle of immunity by asserting that the crew of a belligerent merchant vessel could not even be made prisoners of war. Such was the contention of Prince Bismarck in the Franco-German war of 1870, when a French warship seized a German merchant vessel and thus treated its crew.

Our own Government had in the earlier stages of the diplomatic controversy clearly recognized this fact, and had very properly and justly rested its contention upon the rights of noncombatants, but in its later notes and until the final note of April 18 it so far modified its claim as to rest it upon the immunity of neutrals from the effects of reprisals. Most fortunately, after the destruction of the Sussex had again aroused our Government from its policy of inaction, our claim was again securely rested not merely upon the rights of neutrals, but "upon manifest principles of humanity." Unfittingly and forcefully denounced submarine warfare as "utterly incompatible with the principles of humanity, the rights of neutrals, and the sacred immunities of noncombatants." It is most gratifying that our Government thus returned to the broader and nobler ground of its contention.

Unless we are to retrograde to the principles of savagery, which prevailed in the dark ages and before the Roman Empire, then the fundamental and all-comprehensive restriction on the rights of war must be based on the broad and humane consideratioin that as noncombatants make no pretense to fight, either by way of offence or defence, their lives shall be spared so far as is humanely possible, whatever their nationality. No other position can be reconciled with the rights of civilization.

To any humane man it cannot matter, whether the women and children, who were so ruthlessly thrown to the waves, were Americans, Germans, Austrians, French, English, or Russian. They were women and children, and that ought to have been the true ground of their immunity. If this principle were ever important to humanity, it is infinitely important today, when the methods of destruction have been horribly and infinitely multiplied by the agencies of chemistry.

Undoubtedly a siege of a city incidentally involves both injury and death to many noncombatants. The blockade of a country has of necessity a like effect. Prince Bismarck in 1881 and Count Caprivi in 1892 both contended that a blockade to cut off foodstuffs was not only legitimate war but a comparatively humane way of ending a war. The coercion of a nation by a food blockade is often an incident of warfare, but it does not follow that an aeroplane, a Zeppelin, a submarine, or a platoon of soldiers can deliberately and intentionally destory noncombatants to terrorize and coerce a belligerent nation.

The indiscriminate dropping of a bomb on a city like London, Freiburg, or Stuttgart, which are not within the true war zone, is wrong, whether done by English, German or French viators, as a deadly affront to civilization. I share with Lord Bryce the profound regret that the Allies have occasionally resorted to reprisals of this character.

Fortunately this proposed compromise of the underlying moral principle as to the sacred immunity of noncombatants, without distinction of nationality, was forgotten in the issue as to armed merchantmen; and, while that was pending, the German Government committed what up to the present time is its crowning outrage, by sinking, on March 24, 1916, the Sussex, a Channel ferry-boat, and again destroying many women and children.

When challenged to justify this act and other acts of a similar character, and to reconcile these murderous deeds with the solemn pledges given to this Government, the German Government on April 10, 1916, replied with a cynically insolent note. It said, in effect, that although a German submarine did on the same day, at about the same hour, and in the same locality, and in the same manner, sink an English boat, yet that a sketch drawn by the Captain of the submarine through his periscope did not correspond with the picture of the Sussex in a London illustrated paper, and that it, therefore, must have been another vessel. This transparent falsehood has since been disavowed and the responsibility of Germany formally admitted.

This note would be comic if it were not so tragic. It was an obvious insult to our intelligence and measures the contemptuous indifference which the German Government then had as to the attitude of our Government. As to the three other ships, destroyed about the same time, the German Government replied by admitting the fact and justifying the deed without even deigning to give a reason.

We have, therefore, a course of conduct, now running over a year, in

TO DANCE OR NOT?

A week or so ago a woman correspondent asked if I thought she should give up dancing because her husband did not wish to dance. I asked for opinions on the subject and here are some that have come in response to the request:

If the husband can go to the dances and enjoy himself playing cards while his wife has a good time dancing, why, then, let her dance! But if he does not care to go to dances at all and seems "put out" by his wife dancing, I should think any wife worthy of the name would be willing to forego this pleasure in order to keep harmony at home.

NANCY NORLIGAN.

"I see no reason why a woman should give up dancing for the reason that her husband is too busy or too lazy to learn.

"Although the husband may be too busy or lazy, he may yet be interested, and for ever objects to brace himself up for the exertion which this pastime requires.

"On the other hand, if he is against it and is 'put out,' surely love will conquer. No happy couple would allow such a trifle to come between them. No. They wisely esteem their love for one another. Life is too short to quarrel.

"I wonder why he is 'put out'? Would not any man be 'put out' whose wife goes to dances with only a relative? If she goes at all, I say let them go together. If they cannot go together, let them stop at home.

"What will he think of her when he knows that because he does not hold with dancing, she has willingly put it aside for him?

"Why, he will smile and say, 'I have the most unselfish and loving little wife in the wide,wide world.'"

TRUEBIRD.

An indignant man writes:

I have a brother who is married and who's wife does hardly anything else but dance and run about the street. She never looks after her house. I know if ever I get married and my wife runs around like my respective sister-in-law, I would run away and leave her. JOHN E. J.

May I accept the invitation you extend and express my thoughts on "B. R.'s" question as to whether a woman should sacrifice certain pleasures (dancing, more especially) in order to coincide with her husband's wishes?

If "B. R." is a wise woman, she will look very keenly on both sides, and every side, before deciding. Men are so often very, very selfish and so are women, but in such different ways.

If "B. R.'s" husband comes home from a heavy day's strain of work and his wife wishes him to accompany her to a dance or a dancing lesson, I am sure she is wrong, decidedly so.

If his work does not involve great physical or mental strain and he feels fit for divers pleasures, I think her side of the question should be considered. If he refuses to, and she cares for certain gayety, then he is wrong decidedly so.

Methinks I see in the not far distant future this ever so small incident looming larger in the lives of "B. R." and her companion.

Margaret Currie, my heart aches so often for the tragedy that sets in from such petty misgivings. In such a time as this, when men are quarrelling, fighting, gaining, losing, dancing seems so empty. So far removed from everything sound and true, and methinks "B. R." cannot risk the beginning maybe of a "dark cloud" in what is now a happy home for this? Thanking you.

A. A. E.

A practical wife who realizes that there must be "give and take" in married life, writes as follows:

"Don't go if it is going to cause any unpleasantness in the home. Life is too short to risk our happiness over such a trifle as a dance or two. My husband never went to a dance in his life. He will let me go if I want to, but I know he doesn't care for parties or dancing, and why should I leave him alone at home and go to dances, and I was once very fond of dancing. Men have, nearly all of them, a queer streak somewhere in their make-up, and if we start doing something they don't approve of they will come back at us and do things we won't like and if they once start they are not easy to stop."

MAB.

Quite another type of woman is represented in this letter:

My husband is my senior by twelve years, and is very settled and cares for nothing but his pipe and our little one, twelve months' old.

Now, I can hardly see any fault in my going to dances, etc., with a friend of ours, whom we both respect.

Sometimes we have words over my going out so much, therefore my advice to girls is, "Stay single or marry a man fond of dancing, too, or you will not be happy."

Do you think it undignified for a married woman to go out in the evening with an old boy friend, whom she knew well before she was married?

A LOVING MOTHER.

Why risk your happiness? is the pertinent query of this writer.

Why risk your happiness for the sake of a one-step or fox-trot? I love dancing, but I think if my husband did not dance or it "put him out" I would give it up unless I did not dearly love him. Besides, you are liable to get talked about.

LAKESIDE VENUS.

Still another woman writes:

It seems to me that if "B. R." really loved her husband she would not hesitate for an instant as to what to do. I would say, "Give up dancing and keep your husband" instead of risking your happiness for such a trifle. A business man generally comes home tired with the day's work and worry and looking forward to a happy evening with his wife. Instead of that he finds that she is going out to a dance, and he is left alone. Why should he not feel "put out," I wonder? And who will be to blame later on when the husband finds the club more attractive than the home. Perhaps then, when the wife has to spend the evening alone and realizes that they are drifting apart, as so many others have done before them, she will see her mistake, but it will be too late perhaps to regain the love she has lost for the sake of a dance.

It seems to me that it ought to be a pleasure for any woman to spend the evening quietly at home, at a theatre or elsewhere with the man she loves than at a dance without him.

PEGGY.

A man says:

If a lady cannot persuade her husband to dance, then she should not dance unless he is near at hand.

No man likes to see his wife deriving pleasure from dancing with another man, unless he himself likes dancing with ladies. Personally, I love dancing.

J. S.

The concensus of opinion seems to be that she should not dance. But no matter what you and I think, she will probably keep on dancing, just as long as dancing appeals to her.

LITTLE STORIES for Bedtime

OLD GRANNY FOX MAKES FUN OF DIGGER.

(Copyright, 1916, by T. W. Burgess.)

From the time he first came to live on the Green Meadows, Digger the Badger had been rather looked down on by Reddy and Old Granny Fox. Not that there was the least reason in the world why they should have looked down on him. There wasn't, not the very smallest reason. But this didn't make the least bit of difference. You will often find it to be just that way with people who think they are a little better than their neighbors, and so look down on them. Usually they are not one bit better themselves and often not as good.

At first Granny and Reddy had thought that perhaps Digger might some day make them a good meal, and while they had looked down on him they had been very polite. They were too smart to quarrel with him until they had made sure in their own minds that he was a safe person to quarrel with. When they had once seen the set of his stout jaws with their long sharp teeth and had had a chance to see how strong he is they decided that he was quite able to take care of himself and took care not to get near enough to him for him to get hold of them. If the truth be told, they were afraid to pick a quarrel with him, although they would not admit this for the world.

Instead they pretended that he was quite beenath them. When they met him they held their heads very high and pretended not to see him at all. They told every one that Digger was a very common person who could do nothing but dig in the ground, and every chance they had they would sneer at him. If Digger minded this he never showed it. He just minded his own business, but it was noticed by his neighbors that when he met Granny or Reddy Fox he never stepped out of their way. No, sir; he never stepped aside for them, so much as an inch. On the other hand, they always stepped aside for him.

One day Granny Fox met Digger some distance from his home. It was very unusual to find him so far from his own doorstep. As usual, Granny Fox stepped aside for him. Then she sat down a little way off to watch him. Digger paid no attention to her. He went about his business, which happened to be the finding of a Bumble-bee's nest at that particular time. He had taken it into his funny head that he would like a taste of honey.

"Did you ever see such a homely, clumsy fellow?" said Granny Fox to Blacky the Crow, who happened to be near but loud enough for Digger to hear. "His running is a joke. His legs are so short that I wonder he doesn't bump his nose when he tries to run. And did you ever in all your life see such a shape? He looks as if Old Mother Nature sat down on him and flattened him out. I should think he would be ashamed to be seen. I don't wonder he seldom comes out in the daytime. I wouldn't if I were in his place. I don't know what you think, but I think that he is a disgrace to the Green Meadows. I wouldn't say so to him, but that is what I think. I notice that no one but Old Man Coyote has much to do with him."

When They Met Him They Held Their Heads Very High.

Now, Digger had heard every word of this and he had seen the sneering look in Granny's eyes, but he took no notice. He went on about his business, which was looking for a Bumble-bee's nest, and to have seen him you never would have suspected that he knew that he was being made fun of. He went this way and that way with his nose to the ground, and all the time without seeming to do so he was getting nearer and nearer to Granny Fox. If Granny noticed it she didn't mind. She knew that when he got near enough to be dangerous she could get out of his reach with a couple of bounds, and to move before she had to would be to lead Blacky the Crow to think that she was afraid, and this would never do.

Now, what was in Digger's head I don't know. It may be that he had it in mind to get near enough to Granny to run at her and show Blacky that she was afraid of him. Whatever he was planning to do never will be known, for not far from where Granny was sitting he made a discovery. It was what he had been looking for — a Bumble-bee's nest. Digger looked at old Granny Fox, who promptly turned her back on him. Then he chuckled and there was a gleam of mischief in his eyes. He took one more look at old Granny Fox and then pulled open that nest and greedily ate the honey.

Of course, those bees came pouring out mad clear through. They did their best to sting Digger, but his thick skin and coat protected him so that he didn't mind them a bit. Then some of them saw Granny Fox and in less time than it takes to tell it they were all about her and all over her. With a yell Granny started for home, and the last Blacky and Digger saw of her she was running as if the ground burned her feet.

ECONOMY CORNER

FOR STOUT WOMEN.

While stout women can do little by their clothing to make themselves look thinner than they really are, they can do a great deal to keep themselves from looking larger by the way the dress they choose is cut or trimmed.

Stout women have not till recently been able to get clothes ready made. Now certain shops have given this matter attention and stout women can have the pleasure of getting a dress in a hurry and without the bother of dressmaking. Perhaps, too, you may not have realized there are several types of stout women—those stout all over, those stout only in the upper part of their body, and those who are very stout of bust—and all these have been provided for by the "ready to wear" merchant.

Trimming lines which go diagonally over the figure are always most becoming to a stout figure, and even if a woman is not well proportioned it gives her the appearance of so being. Encircling bands, contrary to a well grounded idea that they are unbecoming and cut the figure, do not do so if they are folds of the same material of which the skirt is made. It is wrong when it is the contrast of a light band on a dark skirt, or the reverse. When banded this way, like barrel staves, it makes a woman look like a tub.

Encircling belts, when placed at the right depth and diagonally instead of horizontally, if of the same color as the coat or dress, helps rather than mars a stout figure. Belts placed only at the back or the front are also becoming.

If these rules are followed any dress design may be chosen by a stout woman even though it is shown on a mannequin or in a sketch of sylphlike proportions.

BEDBUGS.

Could you let me know through your very helpful column, what is the cause of bedbugs, and if there is any way in which they can be kept out of a new bed? I have been bothered considerably in the past by these pests and have just recently bought a new bed, etc., and am very anxious to do anything to keep it clear of bedbugs, and trust you will be able to help me?

"AUDREY."

Ans.—Some writers recommend white lead and sublimate of mercury pressed into the crevices of the bedsteads and other places likely to harbor these insects, but these substances must be used with very great care for they are poisonous and easily get into sore places on the hands of anyone moving the furniture. There are special remedies sold at every drug store.

PINEAPPLE MARMALADE.

Can you, or any of your readers, furnish me with a recipe for pineapple marmalade?

R. W.

Ans.—Cut, pare and weigh the fruit, then grate and press through a colander, saving all juice separate; add one pint of water to each three pounds of fruit, boil till tender, then add three-quarters of a pound of sugar to a of fruit, juice of one lemon to three pounds of fruit, and the raw juice of pineapple; boil about ten minutes.

LEMON CHEESE OR (CURD.)

Six eggs, rind of two lemons and the juice of three, one pound lump sugar, 1-4 pound butter, put ingredients in well lined saucepan, and stir until sugar is dissolved. Place in boiling water or double boiler, and stir one way until mixture has consistency of honey or thick cream. If sealed and put away this will keep good for months.

COCOANUT CREAM BARS.

Melt two teaspoonfuls of butter, add 1½ cups white sugar and one-half cup milk. Heat slowly to boiling point, boil twelve minutes, remove from fire, add one-quarter cup shredded cocoanut and one-half teaspoonful vanilla. Beat with a spoon until creamy and the mixture begins to sugar at edges then pour into buttered tin and cut in bars? The tiniest drop of bluing water will make the candy snow white.

PUFFY.

RHUBARB RECIPES.

With the coming of the wholesome and appetizing rhubarb, which when rightly prepared will be found as delicious as it is inexpensive, the provident housewife should make use of it on every possible occasion, as well as acquaint herself with the best methods of preserving it for future use when its season is past.

Preserved Rhubarb With Nuts.

This is a delicious conserve to use as a filling for afternoon tea sandwiches. Peel and cut up the rhubarb boil with little water until reduced to a pulp and allow one pound of sugar, one ounce of almonds (blanched and chopped) and half a sliced lemon to each pound of the fruit pulp. Boil slowly for one hour in a granite saucepan and stir frequently to prevent scorching; then remove the lemon and seal air-tight in small glass jars.

Spiced Rhubarb.

This will be found an excellent relish to serve with cold meats when a pickle that is different is desired. To five pounds of rhubarb, washed and sliced, add one pint of vinegar, four pounds of brown sugar and two teaspoonfuls each of whole cloves and allspice, tied in a small cheesecloth bag. Boil in a preserving kettle steadily for forty minutes and turn into jelly glasses. Cover when cold with melted paraffine.

Rhubarb Lemonade.

This furnishes a very refreshing drink for a sultry spring day. Wash a dozen stalks of rhubarb, cut them up and cook for fifteen minutes in three pints of water. Put into a large jug or pitcher one large cupful of sugar, the thinly peeled rind of two lemons and the juice of one. Mix well and then strain the liquid from the rhubarb over the lemon and sugar. Set on the ice until thoroughly chilled and serve, with a light dusting of grated nutmeg over each glass.

Rhubarb Jam.

Peel and cut the rhubarb into small pieces and to every quart of the fruit allow one pound of sugar. Place the rhubarb in the preserving kettle, sprinkle over the sugar and allow it to stand for twenty-four hours to extract the juice. The sugar will sink, but it will not all dissolve. Skim out the rhubarb the following morning and boil the sugar and fruit juice for twenty minutes; then add the rhubarb and cook for about twenty-five minutes after it again begins to boil. It should be of the consistency of any other jam. Seal in small pots as for the spiced rhubarb.

Rhubarb Fool.

Cut up a bundle of skinned rhubarb into small pieces and stew it gently with a heaping cupful of sugar. When the fruit is very tender add the juice of half a lemon; mash well and turn into a large mixing bowl. Place on the ice and when chilled beat in the stiffly whipped white of one egg and a cupful of double cream that has been beater, solid. Whip the whole with an egg beater and fill into a glass bowl that has been lined with slices of sponge cake or halved lady fingers. Serve immediately.

Rhubarb With Figs.

Take six pounds of rhubarb weighed after it is peeled and cut, one pound of figs, five pounds of sugar and a quarter of a pound of candied lemon or orange peel. Arrange the fruit and sugar in alternate layers in a large preserving kettle and strew over the top the candied peel. Cover the kettle, allow it to stand until the next morning; then boil slowly for one hour. A sharp knife or scissors may be used to cut the figs into strips.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENCE

All correspondence for this department should be addressed to Margaret Currie.

All communications must have name and address signed.

Please address legal and military questions to Editor Notes and Queries.

AREA OF CANADA.

1. What is the approximate area in square miles of the Dominion of Canada? Also the distance from Halifax to Vancouver via C.P.R. route?

2. Should a young lady rise when introduced to an elderly gentleman?

3. Should she when being introduced to another woman either old or young?

4. Would it be permissible for a lady to refund to a gentleman a car ticket which he has put in for her when boarding a car together? Or, would it be proper for a lady to put in her own ticket when in company with a gentleman?

5. Are oranges an aid to digestion or otherwise?

"JUANITA."

Ans.—1. Total land area, 3,603,910 square miles. Halifax to Vancouver, 3,655 miles.

2. No. 3. For an older woman, not to a young woman. 4. If the gentleman asked to take her out, he would naturally put in a ticket. If you met by accident, put in your own ticket when boarding the car, but if the gentleman has put in a ticket thank him and do not offer to refund.

5. Orange juice the first thing in the morning is an aid to digestion. If taken to excess, it would cause too much acid in the blood.

GENEVIEVE.

1. Empress of Ireland sank May 29, 1914.

2. Miss Cavell was executed October 12, 1915.

3. Will answer other questions in Economy Corner.

"YOUNG MAID."

It will not cause any trouble to a soldier officially if he gets permission to marry and the girl decides not to, but if the girl changes her mind again and wants to get married he will find it difficult to get a second permission.

PRISONER IN AUSTRIA.

Please tell me how one may send money or a parcel to a Russian, who is a prisoner in Austria.

I'M AWAITING.

Ans.—Send it registered and properly addressed to the camp he is in and he may get it eventually.

TOMMY.

Please send stamped, addressed envelope, repeating your request, for information you wish.

SOPHIE S.

Please send stamped, addressed envelope, repeating your request, for language of stamps.

FAIRY.

Kitchener is not married.

BETTY.

(1) Try ether on the stain.

(2) A tonic for oily hair was given a few days ago. You have probably seen it.

NATHALIE.

1 and 2. Send short story manuscripts to magazines and book manuscripts to any reliable publishing firm.

3. Brush your hair well, using brilliantine, to get out the curl.

4. If your fiance's parents have invited you, it would be correct for you to go.

ENGAGED.

(1) I have a young friend visiting me who is to be married six weeks or seven from now. Her engagement has not been formally announced yet. I want to give her a kitchen shower. Would it be proper to give the shower before announcement of engagement is made?

(2) How many weeks before this marriage is to take place should a shower be given a bride?

(3) Is it proper for a young girl to write to several of her schoolmates who are now on active service?

(4) Is it proper for a young lady to take walks with a young man if she is not engaged to him?

"RITA."

Ans. — (1) No. Announcement should be made first.

(2) Any time in the last two months.

(3) Yes, if they are all just friendly letters.

(4) Certainly. It would be a sad thing if you couldn't even walk with a man to whom you were not engaged.

WAR WORK.

1. Is there any war work of an outdoor nature of any kind other than that in the munition factories, for women.

2. To whom should one make application for such work.

3. Are there any such positions in England? If so, how would I get in touch with them?

AN ANXIOUS READER.

Ans.—Get in touch with the Soldiers' Wives League, Guarantee Building, Beaver Hall Hill, or Red Cross Society, Belmont Park, or the Patriotic Fund, Drummond Building, and they will give you details possibly. In England there are plenty of women ready and eager to do this work.

VACATION.

It is absolutely correct to take a steamer-trunk for a two weeks' stay at a summer resort hotel. Your wardrobe sounds very attractive to me and quite correct. Of course you have a long kimona as well?

WEDDING QUESTIONS.

My married sister intends giving a china shower for my fiancee in the near future and she wants to invite our boy friends also.

1. Would it be correct to invite the boys for the afternoon, or will it be better to make the shower on a Saturday evening and invite the boys then.

2. What would be a suitable wedding gift from the groom to the best man and maid of honor?

3. How soon before the ceremony is the groom to arrive in the bride's house?

B. D.

Ans.—1. Better make it an evening affair if you want to get the men there.

2. The best man, cigarette case, pipe, scarf-pin, initialled cuff-links, silk umbrella, good cane; to the maid of honor, signet ring, hand-bag, pendant, brooch, bracelet.

3. About half an hour.

A SUBSTITUTE.

The Westmount Soldiers' Wives' League and the Daughters of the Empire are collecting old papers for charitable purposes. There are boxes at various corners of the city streets in which you deposit these things or you may write to the Westmount Soldiers' Wives' League at Victoria Hall, Victoria Avenue, Westmount, or to Mrs. C. E. Neill, 503 Sherbrooke street west, for information on the subject.

ANXIOUS (DOROTHY R.)

The best thing for you to do is to interview the managers of the various lunch-rooms and cafeterias in town. Salaries and necessary qualifications differ with different places.

COMPETITION RESULTS AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

For Home Comfort

By MAY MANTON

9045 (With Basting Line and Added Seam Allowance) Surplice Apron or House Dress, Small 34 or 36, Medium 38 or 40, Large 42 or 44 Bust.

Price 15c.

Nothing contributes more completely to the comfort of the busy woman than the simple and satisfactory gown that can be worn during the morning hours. This one is known as "bungalow," because of its extreme simplicity, and it may be worn as a gown or as an apron to protect the gown beneath. It is made in the kimono style that means few seams and simple making, combined with graceful lines. The fronts are lapped well one over the other, and three buttons and buttonholes are all that are necessary for the closing. Here, there is a shirring at the waist line in which ribbon is inserted to regulate the size, but a simple belt can be used instead.

For the medium size will be needed 6¼ yards of material 27 inches wide, 5¼ yards 36 or 44, with 1 yard 36 inches wide for the bands.

The pattern No. 9045 is cut in three sizes, small 34 or 36, medium 38 or 40, large 42 or 44. It will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of fifteen cents.

DAILY STAR PATTERN COUPON

The price of each pattern is 15c. City readers must call at The Star Branch Office, 45 Union Avenue, above St. Catherine street, for patterns. Out-of-town readers will be served by mail. Orders are filled from our factory in New York, and take a week or ten days, for which readers should allow.

Today's Household Affairs

BY MARY LEE.

It is amazing how youngsters (and sometimes grown-ups) will eat potato and onion soup when they are supremely disdainful of those humble vegetables in any other form.

These soups are hearty and may readily serve for the main luncheon dish on a hot day, and topped off with a bowl of fresh or stewed fruit will constitute an ideal meal as regards food values.

One of our correspondents has sent us these recipes, and we pass them on with pleasure:

"Thick Potato Soup — First cut up in small pieces three thin slices of bacon, slice very fine one medium sized onion and cook in the bacon fat. Do not let it brown very much. Pare and cut up into dice four or five medium-sized potatoes, and place the bacon together with the onion and fat and the potatoes in a kettle and add one quart of boiling water. Let this cook very gently until the potato is thoroughly done. Add a pint of milk. Cream together two level tablespoonfuls of butter, and two level tablespoonfuls of flour and add to the kettle of soup. This will make the contents of the kettle rich and creamy. Over the top before serving scatter a generous supply of well buttered croutons, and sprinkle with the finely-chopped tender yellow leaves of celery.

"Thick Cream of Onion Soup—Onions are so desirable as a food, especially for children, that we should use them more in every possible way. Chop finely four medium-sized onions and put them over the fire with three cupfuls of cold water and a very little salt. Cook them until they are sufficiently tender to put through a sieve. Add the pulp and liquor left from the onion to one pint of cream sauce. Stir very carefully together and heat slowly for five or ten minutes. Just before serving sprinkle the top with finely chopped parsley. Slightly toasted whole wheat bread may be served with this soup or crisped graham crackers.

"Thick Lima Bean Soup — Soak a cupful of dried lima beans (if the fresh beans are used soaking is not required) over night, put them on in cold water, and cook until tender over a slow fire. When they are thoroughly cooked put through a sieve. Add the puree of beans to a rich white sauce, seasoning with salt and a dash of paprika. When this is ready to take to the table have ready a finely chopped sweet pepper, from which the seeds and white pulp have been removed. Sprinkle this over the top, together with a teaspoonful of dry grated cheese to each plate."

PARENTS' INTEREST IN FILM PLAYS

From the number of communications received by the writer during the week the question of better films for juveniles is one that is agitating many parents. It seems to be generally realized that the sort of films now being shown are not interesting to the young, when they are not actually damaging. This is considered a grave matter as pictures appeal even more to the juvenile than to the grown up. Most of the letters are along the same line. The one given below is deemed worthy of reproduction in full:

* * * * *

"My dear H. M. B.—Reading, in last Saturday's Star, your comment on children and moving pictures, I am impelled to say 'Thank you' and 'Please keep up the good work.' If you will awaken people to the necessity of reform, you will make your column a strong lever to the lifting of heavy social and educational burdens.

"Students of juvenile crime in Montreal are more inclined than you appear to be to blame the movies for many of the offenses so adventurously committed by the small boy. Bearing this in mind, social workers advise parents and guardians to keep their children away from the pictures. The children, knowing this much but seldom knowing (or at least seldom realizing) the reason for this prohibition, are naturally puzzled. Why shouldn't they go to moving pictures? they ask, and naturally. Books, games or sports are not withheld if they can be obtained. The children see the movie theatres crowded with grownups and are told in effect:

'This won't do us any harm but it's bad for you.' It is manifestly unfair and hurts the child's growing sense of his own intelligence. Once forbidden of course, the movie theatre exercises a stronger lure than ever.

"The question seems to be, not of keeping children away from the movies but of providing suitable pictures for the children to see. One night last week I went with a boy not yet in his teens to an uptown theatre reported to be one of the best half-dozen in the city. On the program was a long, involved story of a married man who made love to a woman not his wife. She resisted temptation and effected a reconciliation between the estranged husband and wife, so that the play had nothing immoral in the tone of it; but, my young friend was both puzzled and bored and how could I explain? (Anyway, the laboriously explained picture is hopeless under any circumstances.) Next we saw current (or nearly so) pictures of happenings in England. These were interesting, but too scrappy to afford any consecutive interest and were very soon over. Then we got a 'comedy.' This was more understandable to my friend, as it contained rough and tumble fun of an obvious sort; but even this was not free from the marital infelicity touch, the last scene being that of two men at grips because one had flirted with the other's wife.

"This week I heard that Billie Burke would appear in a play which featured the adventures of a little girl in fairyland. This, I thought, was what I should have seen with my young friend. Partly in search of a true children's story and partly because fairies attract me as strongly as ever they did, I went forth to see. The fairy episodes in the story were merely incidental, charming while they lasted, and of a character to stimulate chivalrous imagination, but only one link in a long chain of other happenings. There followed a detailed 'filming' (I hope I use the right word) of painful scenes consequent upon the betrayal of a grown-up girl. I have no quarrel with the picture as a play; it was wonderfully acted and (like the other long story) perfectly moral in its nature; but as a whole it certainly was not a film for children. One may admire George Elliott and boy before her passionate sincerity without placing 'Adam Bede' in the hands of a child.

"It seems to me that the loss we suffer in this regard is incalculable. And when I say 'we' I mean grown-ups as well as the kiddies. Have you ever met man, woman or child who did not revel in the wholesome, happy whimsy of 'Alice in Wonderland' and 'Peter Pan?' When Maude Adams packed theatres nightly for months with the Barrie fantasy, did her audiences consist only of children, or of children and their escorts? If Maude Adams came back tomorrow in 'Peter Pan' would not you go to see the piece, with or without a child companion? Believe me, many are the Tinkers whose lives are endangered owing to the indifference of thoughtless scenario-writers and producers.

"Think of what might be done in the movies for the children! The possibilities are limitless. Think of the educational, instructive films that might be produced. (I know there are some of this variety, but they appear to be in the minority.) Think of the chance for theatrical illusion, beauty and fantasy—to say nothing of humor—in plays of the 'Peter Pan' order. I believe that steps are being taken in England to incorporate films into school curriculums. So far so good; but such steps do not cover all the distance to be tred. Children want, must have, recreation as well as labelled instruction; and it is their right in the moving picture world as elsewhere.

"There is another and vital point. I am informed the greatest damage is wrought in the poorer sections of the city, where children can see blood-and-thunder-wild-and-wooly stories for five and ten cents. Many of these children are without the refining influences that help, among the better situated, to counteract the insidious ideas generated by the 'filmed' shrieks at midnight as the burglar shoots the bank teller, etc. Even the 'comedies' are coarse, the laborious humor being usually manufactured by somebody getting slapped in the face by a pile of bricks. (I forgot to say that side by side with the Billie Burke picture I saw a 'comedy' in which a jealous husband discovered an unfortunate and innocent man in his wife's room, the husband later being pitched out of a window to land in a water barrel.)

"It is as everybody knows, among the children of the poor that the gravest danger lies. How stop it? My humble theory is, by public and concerted effort, such as is manifested in the activities of the Parks and Playgrounds Association, the settlements and kindred societies. You say visionary? Not more so than many a broad movement safely accomplished. Expensive? Less so than dealing with crime, incipient or otherwise, which students agree is fostered by the wrong kind of pictures.

"Yours sincerely,
"NANA."

In the Film World

IMPERIAL.
Press Agent's Notice.

Charlie Chaplin again made a big hit last night in his new comedy, "Police," when he opened a four days showing exclusively at this theatre. There seems to be no end to his originality and his funny walk and his funnier run kept up a roar of laughter with the big audiences. The action of "Police" moves more quickly than any comedy in which he has yet appeared; there are never dull moments in any of Chaplin's comedies, yet the events of this one follow each other in such quick succession as to make laughter more spontaneous than ever. In "Police" Chaplin is a discharged convict who cannot seem to keep out of the clutches of his cellmate and is therefore being constantly hounded by the police. The acrobatic "stunts" he utilizes to evade the officers of the law are very funny. His favorite trick is a handspring in front of an oncoming blue coat, which plants his feet in the face of the officer. Edna Purviance, who played "Carmen," is playing with him. There will be five performances of "Police" today, tomorrow and Monday, at 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9.

"The Feud Girl," with Hazel Dawn, will be shown tomorrow, Monday and Tuesday in addition to the Chaplin feature. For the feud scenes, mountaineers, many of whom had fought in the feuds in the hills in which the production was staged, were engaged to appear.

Another attraction which will also be an additional picture on the week's program, is the much-heralded "Martyrdom of Nurse Cavell," which will be screened on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. It is a biographic tribute to the memory of Miss Cavell. The play is impressive. The picture was staged in Australia and was endorsed by the Government, clergy and press of that country.

May Robson makes her film debut in "A Night Out" at the change of program on Wednesday. The play has a refreshing originality that will be appreciated by all who like light comedy. Miss Robson is cast as a grandmother who has been held in restraint all her life by a domineering, austere, husband and whose girlish impulses are still checked by an austere daughter. Grandmother persuades her two grandsons to take her to an all night cafe. The cafe is raided and in the confusion she drops her purse, yet manages to escape and be at the breakfast table with her daughter, looking as demure as ever. Then the police arrive to interview the owner of the purse and all is pandemonium.

Pathe's latest news and Gazettes complete a good program.

A local artist with a wide reputation. Mlle. Paple Sebronie, has been engaged for the coming week. She is a pianist and soprano. Her voice is of rare purity and she sings in English, French and Italian. Her piano numbers will be a dance by Brahms and an Andante for left hand only.

DOMINION.
Press Agent's Notice.

Clara Kimball Young, the popular screen star, will be seen for the last time today in "Trilby."

For tomorrow (Sunday only)—the World Film Corporation presents George Beban in "The Pawn of Fate." Mr. Beban has for years enjoyed the distinction of being a fine portrayer of Italian types.

For Monday and Tuesday—William Fox presents Frederick Berry and a distinguished cast of players in "The Family Stain" adapted from the "Widow Lerouge." It is a mystery story of more than usual interest. The second episode of "Peg o' the Ring," featuring Francis Ford and Grace Cunard, will be shown.

For Wednesday and Thursday Metro offers Julius Steger in "The Blindness of Love." In this production, Mr. Steger, is provided with an excellent role, that of a tender-heatred old man devoted to his only son. It is in such parts as this that Mr. Steger excels. "The Girl and the Game" and other pictures will be shown.

For Saturday and Sunday, June 11 and 12, Charlie Chaplin will be seen in "The Floorwalker."

LONDON.

"Madame X." the Henry W. Savage production that has run for seven seasons on the American stage, has been adapted for the screen and will run for the first time in Montreal at the London, beginning today. It will continue for one week.

Dorothy Donnelly who created the part in English appears in the title role. The difficulties of changing the part from conditions in which the spoken word was the greatest factor, to others equally powerful without the help of audible speech, were obviously great. Miss Donnelly

REPERTOIRE FOR MONTREAL IS THE RESULT OF MERGER

Montreal is to have a repertoire theatre. This will be brought about by the amalgamation of the Keith and Canadian United Theatres, Limited interests in this city, just announced. It is the intention of these interests to install a permanent high-class stock company in the Orpheum theatre as soon as the new Orpheum theatre for vaudeville from the Keith circuit is built here.

As the Orpheum has always proved a successful playhouse for stock during summer months, in the past, the management have come to the conclusion that a permanent stock company will be a success in this city if conducted upon broad lines.

The company will be composed of the best stock actors and actresses available, and the cutting down in expenses in operation will not be a feature.

A permanent stock company of real merit is wanted in Montreal, and there is no doubt it will be supported. Work on the new Orpheum theatre for high-class vaudeville is expected to commence in about two or three weeks time. Architects are working upon the plans. The theatre will be the last word in playhouse construction. Should the work commence in three weeks on the new Orpheum, it means that the repertoire company will be in operation at the present Orpheum about Christmas of this year.

"A regular matinee is given every day at two o'clock, including Sundays. In the evening two shows are given. If late for the first, patrons can remain until the full show has been given. This means that the shows during the evening are continuous. The motto of the Orpheum is 'Come early and stay as long as you like.' There is no difference whatever in any of the shows. Five acts from the Keith circuit appear, five pictures are shown and there is the Orpheum orchestra."

Next Week's Shows

Press Agents' Announcements

THE PRINCESS
Press Agent's Notice.

With the passing of the first, and the beginning of the second week of the popular high-class vaudeville at the Princess Theatre, indications are that the summer season will be a big success. For next week the management announces another tip top bill which will consist of three big features.

One of the feature acts will be the dance spectacle offered by Pernikoff and Rose, the wonderful Russian dancers, for three successive years featured in Shubert productions at the New York Winter Garden. They were members of the "Honeymoon Express" show, "Maid in America" and the "Passing Show of 1914." They always led the ballet and staged the ballet productions in all Shubert shows. They will be assisted in the act they will present here by one of the best ballet choruses ever seen in vaudeville.

The second big feature will be Lamberti, the great impersonator and musician, who features his lifelike impersonations of great musicians and masters of the past. He represents Gounod, Verdi, and other great composers and illustrates how they play. The third feature on the bill will be Frank Bush, called "the greatest story teller," a veteran of the stage, with a limitless fund of funny stories, picked up in every corner of the world. Bush has appeared privately before most of the people of wealth and distinction in America and England. He has so many stories that he changes his routine at every performance, and tells stories which suit his audience, and in almost every known dialect.

Harry Norwood and Alpha Hall will apear in a skit entitled "Sense and Nonsense." Harry Gerard and Clara West will offer a dainty sketch which they call "A Breeze from Musical Comedy," a combination of fun, song and dancing. The Welling Levering Troupe of wonderful cyclists, Ward and Faye, and several others will be shown on this big bill.

For the convenience of patrons seats can be reserved now for four weeks in advance, and special care will be taken of seats owned by 'phone, which will be held at the box office until 8 o'clock for the evening performance and 2 oclock for the afternoon performance.

THE ORPHEUM
Press Agent's Notice.

Three shows a day has proved a success at the Orpheum theatre and will be continued throughout the summer until the regular season of vaudeville. A matinee is given every day and by the new system anyone who is late for the first show can remain during the second evening show until the whole of the program has been seen.

The second bill of summer vaudeville will be headed next week by Fred J. Ardath & Company in what is said to be the funniest farmyard comedy in vaudeville. It is a rural farce put together for laughing purposes only. A troupe of finely trained animal "actors"—pigs, cats and dogs—help the fun along.

Le Roy and Harvey will appear in a Western comedy playlet entitled, "Rained in." The Florenze Duo have a magic act and introduce a clever European novelty, original and new to Montreal. The Valentine Sisters, "The Venusus of the Air," and the Morin Girls, dainty singers of popular songs, will complete the summer vaudeville end of the program. Every act is a turn from the "Big Time" circuit.

The motion pictures, which will include the first run of the Pathe Gazette, will be fully up to the Orpheum's high standard of the past. The picture portion of the program will in future be changed every Sunday and Thursday.

Three shows are given every day including Sunday.

LADY CYCLISTS HAVE EXPERIENCE OF ONTARIO ROADS

Rode from Montreal to Ottawa and Found Conditions Indescribable

The scathing criticism which two young Montreal ladies who essayed to cycle from Montreal to Ottawa a few days ago, pass on the roads, gives some first hand information which might be useful to other cyclists—even if it only prevents them from undertaking the journey in blissful ignorance of the terrible conditions that still exist between the capital and the metropolis. It may be of some use also to motorists, but judging by the experience of these two young ladies' motorists are not very numerous on this road—perhaps they know it.

"Having lately come across in an old "Star" an account of the condition of the roads from Montreal to Ottawa as seen by a motorist in the autumn of 1915, I thought it might be of interest to note their present condition and lack of improvement.

About a fortnight ago my sister and I left Montreal for a trip to Ottawa on our cycles. The general impression most people met on the way had was that we were either doing it for a bet or to write a book. However both ideas were far from our thoughts. We merely went for a novel holiday and to get a better view of the country through which we have so often been whirled on the flying train. We took our time staying at night with friends in different places "en route."

We rode to the far end of Western avenue and thence by the Upper Lachine and Lakeshore roads to Ste. Anne de Bellevue, from there crossing by ile Perrot to the South shore at Vaudreuil. The road follows the bend of the river from here to Rigaud and is all that can be desired in the way of a good macadamized, country road.

At Rigaud we took the shorter route through Vankleek Hill which leaves the Ottawa, and runs beside the Rigaud River to St. Eugene. Once across the bridge which spans this river the roads took a decided change for the worse. The soil is clay and has been ground into deep ruts, too narrow to stay in and too irregular and winding to avoid, but we jogged along, here and there striking a short stretch of smooth road, and now and then a sandy patch, which, when dry makes very heavy riding, in places attempts had been made to repair holes by throwing on loose stones, which are left to be smoothed down and beaten in by the passers-by—most improving to rubber tires of any kind, especially soft ones!

Near Vankleek Hill the roads became slightly better, but were nothing to boast of. However it gave us more opportunity to lift our eyes from the road and look around to see a beautiful country just then standing "in a mist of green and nothing perfect."

Leaving the Hill we proceeded through Caledonia Springs to Alfred. We had scarcely left the latter place when the rain which had been threatening for two days, started in showers. So we kept on now through a more wooded district and six miles of deep sandy road. How any automobile goes through these remains a mystery.

Within sight of Plantagenet the clouds burst and the rain descended in torrents. Here the road changed to clay and such clay! We skidded from side to side and were soon so clogged, there was nothing to do but get off and walk to the nearest shelter, a small wood-shed where we remained for two hours with a pig and several hens for company. Then as we were drenched in spite of waterproofs, we put up for the night in a hotel.

Next morning it was still pouring. The Castor River, more swollen than usual by the spring floods, had risen still higher. The roads were over a foot deep in clay and we did not need our host to inform us, "Twill be three, four days before you can ride these roads." My heart went out in sympathy for "our boys" floundering through such roads and far worse in France. To stay there was not to be thought of, so we decided to take the train to Ottawa, and ride the longest mile and a half I have ever gone in the rain to the station, mostly on broken wooden side-walks where one is never sure when a loose board will rise and strike you in the face. We were not sorry soon, to find ourselves in the train, though it was rather disappointing to have come ninety-two miles, and not be able to finish the journey on our wheels; but we determined if the rain never ceased, to take the road on our return trip.

After staying a week at the Capital, to give the roads a chance to dry, early in the morning of the 24th May we started for home. The weather was perfect, not a dark cloud in the sky all the way. The fruit trees were now in full blossom and the air was filled with their perfume. Blue birds, golden, orioles, robin red-breast, little yellow canaries, swallows and many others, flitted across our path or sang in the trees. The country was a series of beautiful pictures, and the people all along the way were most kind and hospitable, but the road—well I could not be sure if we had not struck a ploughed field, except that the few vehicles we saw passed along it. To Orleans ten miles from Ottawa, the road is macadamized, but after that there is no one word in the dictionary fit to describe it.

On good roads our average is nine miles an hour, but here we scarcely went two. Riding was impossible except here and there, where a little cow path ran along through the grass, and every time we could we rode there, but it was a case of "off again, on again, gone off again" every twenty yards, for, if there was nothing else, through every field there runs a ditch anywhere from a foot to three feet wide, which one could seldom cross without dismounting, picking up bicycle, baggage and all, and jumping over. The hills were the most aggravating part, for here the road was always worse with no possible side-track. Up, one would have to walk anyway, but to walk down, what should have been a beautiful clear "coast" was rather hard. When we walked we had any amount of attentive followers, the mosquitos, and in places the clay, still wet came over our shoes.

Speaking to some of the farmers, they expressed a great wish for better roads as it would make it much easier for them to get their products to market. Now it requires two horses, with a lighter load than one could draw on a good road. They told us also that there was a machine, a sort of road-scraper, drawn by six horses, owned by the municipality, for which each farmer lent his horses to do the road through his farm, but we saw no trace of it.

"Pretty rough riding, and the roads are worse further on," was the general greeting we received. However, as we neared Plantagenet the roads became better, more traffic having been over them since the late rains, and what before had seemed bad, now appeared fairly good in comparison to what we had just passed over.

In the matter of roads the Province of Ontario is far behind Quebec, though both would stand a lot of improvement. It speaks for itself when I say that from the time we left the Island of Montreal till we reached it again, except in Ottawa, we met or passed seven motors, two on our way up and five down.

However, from Rigaud all was plain sailing, and we made short work of the remaining miles. We took three and a half days to do 132 miles, riding from 9 a.m. till 7 p.m. Tell an Englishman or an American that and he would laugh at you. Why, one could do that easily in less than a day! Yes, on good roads. Personally, I would go again tomorrow to see the beautiful country but, unless you are unbreakable or made of cast-iron, take my advice, and never venture by road from the commercial metropolis of Canada to the capital for some years to come, especially after a heavy rain.

IMPERIAL THEATRE GARAGE FOR PATRONS

To accommodate the automobile public attending the Imperial Theatre, the management has decided to open a garage behind the theatre, with entrance on Mayor street. Automobiles of patrons will be checked free during the performances and a uniformed man will be in attendance. The danger of loss and damage to cars when they are left on the street will therefore be eliminated and patrons will feel as secure as if their cars were garaged in a private garage.

Commencing Tuesday, June 6th and each week day thereafter until June 13th inclusive, the Canadian Pacific will operate special trains leaving Windsor Street Station at 1:32 p.m., and 1:50 p.m.; returning, trains will leave race track after last race. Tickets 15c single, 25c return. Ticket Office, 141-143 St. James St. Windsor Hotel and Windsor St. Station.

MAXWELL AUTOS MAKE FINE CLIMB UP STEEP GRADES

Ascent of Mount Chamarel Feat Difficult to Accomplish

Maxwell cars have often demonstrated their superior powers as hill climbers, but the work of three stock touring cars in Mauritius, an island in the middle of the Indian Ocean, is specially gratifying.

News of the latest Maxwell feat, in which a trio of touring cars climbed the hazardous paths of Mount Chamarel, has just been received.

The following brief description of the mountain and its roads will give some conception of the difficulties that had to be overcome. Mount Chamarel rises from a flat plain a few feet above the sea level to an altitude of 1,200 feet. The road zigzags in a series of sharp curves at angles of about 38 degrees.

The car attempting the climb has before it the difficulty of getting up speed after slowing down to a foot pace to negotiate the curves, which have to be taken with the utmost care, for the precipice is always at one side of the car.

In spite of these difficulties, the Maxwells used their second speed and occasionally their third speed in the straight stretches and their first speed only in the curves. The three Maxwells topped the mountain with no apparent difficulty and journeyed down the other side in safety.

"The performance of these Maxwells is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that heavy rains had fallen during the week preceding the trial, and during the run it rained so hard that water was running down the road.

Mount Chamarel is an object of wonder for all tourists. It has been a source of interest because it offers the unique spectacle of earth of no less than seventy-two distinct and separate colors on a small space of two acres of ground. This spot forms a series of mounds a few feet high, long and narrow and bellowing one after another with startling regularity.

From a short distance, the various colors are easily discernible one from the other and the seventy-two colors may easily be pointed out. The greatest peculiarity of these mounds is that they can be levelled and the earth mixed so as to form an uniform color. A few weeks later they will have formed again and the earth will resume its primitive colors. Scientists have never been able to account for this phenomenon. The colors are attributed by some geologists to ferruginous exhalations from the earth, but this does not explain why the earth will not remain level.

In an attempt to simplify the process of repairing the inner tubes of motor car and cycle tires a novel vulcanising device has been introduced which mends a break in a few minutes without requiring the use of cement, acid, or gasoline. It comprises a clamp and a number of prepared patches, each of which consists of a metal pan that has a piece of raw rubber on one side and holds a combustible material. When the latter is ignited, after being placed over a puncture, it culcanizes the rubber to the tube.

MOTORS MUST DO THIRTY MILES TO THE GALLON SOON

"Look out for sensational improvements in motor car building in the next five years," says Earl G. Gunn, chief engineer of the Premier Motor Corporation. "Some have jumped at the conclusion that we have arrived at motor car perfection. Nothing could be farther from the truth. There is so much yet to be accomplished that the work ahead of us is little short of appalling to the initiated. Engineers know that there are still some very stubborn problems to be solved—the problem of fuel economy is an example in point. The average seven passenger touring car must be made to give thirty miles to the gallon of gasoline or we must find a substitute fuel that shall be half as expensive. There must also be no difficulty whatever about getting instant and perfect combustion, even in the coldest weather, the moment the motor is started. Tire trouble must be reduced to such a minimum that it will become practically negligible. The old hand gear-shift must go. We must get seven passengers into the body space formerly allotted to five—and we must obtain added comfort at the same time that we decrease the wheel-base. We must absolutely silence the motor to a point where its explosions, even at high speed, are not audible. The motor car of the future is to be a soundless, odorless and trouble-free equipage—which shall give transportation, the time spent in transit considered, at less cost than can be obtained in any other way. It is to come into universal use. For the wealthy will be developed still greater luxury; the middle classes will be given vastly better automobiles 'at less cost per fuel-gallon-mile; and for the masses there will be motor transportation on an economical basis, cheaper, better, and a hundred times more satisfactory than modern day methods, such as street cars and present elevated and subway transportation.

gram announcing the death of Georges Boillot, he would not go after the track record, which was made by Boillot of 2 1-2 miles in 1:30:13. The telegram advised that Boillot had been killed fighting for France in an aviation duel with five German aeroplanes. He raced at Indianapolis track in 1913, the year his team mate, Jules Goux, won. Christiaens had raced with Boillot in many European contests, and although he had never seen him during the war, he, of course, knew that they were fighting in the same cause. Out of respect for him the British aviator kept his machine idle all day.

The 1917 Grant Six with its wonderful Overhead-Valve Motor

1917 GRANT SIX 1917

TAKE the time to make comparisons and we believe you will agree that the 1917 Grant Six, improved and up to the minute, clearly exhibits values unheard of in a car priced around a thousand dollars.

Comparison is the acid test. Comparison reveals values.

We do not and have not urged buyers to buy the Grant Six because of hidden values.

The values in the Grant Six are obvious values.

The 1917 Grant Six needs no adjectives to make enthusiastic buyers. The car itself is a beauty. Its mechanism is thoroughly tried out and developed. There is nothing about it that savors of conjecture, speculation or experiment.

Come and see the 1917 Grant now. Come, make your own comparisons.

With some purchasers it is the full floating rear axle with equalized 12-inch brakes that determines the sale.

With others it is the Overhead-Valve motor, the Wagner Two-Unit Starting and Lighting System, the Stromberg Carburetor, or perhaps the Stewart Vacuum gasoline feed with 12 gallon tank in the rear.

Many speak of the beauty of the Grant Six body—the finish, the upholstery, the comfort, the width of the seats and depth of the cushions, the ample leg room in both front and rear compartments. Others exclaim at the easy riding qualities, due to the long cantilever springs in the rear and semi-elliptic front springs.

Again it is such details as the big, drop-forged front axle with large, strong steering connections, the 18-inch steering wheel, the aluminum covered running boards, the neat fit of the curtains and top cover, the simplicity and neatness of the instrument board, that command attention. Comparison brings out the value of even these little points.

But, generally speaking, it is the strength and beauty of the entire job, the ample seating capacity and the wonderful flexibility of the exclusive design Grant Six Overhead-Valve motor that makes the sale.

This motor has won for the Grant Six the reputation of being an extraordinary hill climber. It takes almost any grade on high gear—because of light weight and great power. Throttles down to two miles an hour and speeds up to fifty.

Owners of 1916 Grant Sixes report an average of 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline—some say 28 miles: and 900 miles to the gallon of oil. The 1917 Grant Six does just as well.

Here again comparison proves Grant Six value. We do not know of any car that offers more in style, more in economy, more in real, tangible value.

See the 1917 Grant Six, ride in it—measure up its roomy body—test the flexibility of its wonderful motor. Prove its easy riding qualities and convince yourself by careful comparison that it offers you just what you want in a six-cylinder car—and more of it for the money than you can get in any other car.

Announcing the Arrival of Pathfinder

the "GREAT"
King of Twelves

WITH its twelve cylinders, valve-in-head motor and its super-standard units, "Pathfinder the Great," we are convinced, is by far the most powerful, most flexible, most desirable and road-worthy car that has yet been produced regardless of price. 130-inch wheelbase. $3695. f. o. b. Montreal.

The twelve-cylinder motor in "Pathfinder the Great" adds to known twelve-cylinder advantages the superiority of the valve-in-head construction. The power which twelve perfectly co-ordinating cylinders generate when combined with valve-in-head construction is beyond comprehension—until one has actually driven "Pathfinder the Great," and compared its performance with other cars he has known.

76 MILES AN HOUR FOR 24 HOURS

Ralph Mulford, the famous racing star, and his Hudson Super-Six stock chassis, which he drove for 24 hours at Sheepshead Bay Speedway at the average speed of 76 miles an hour. All four of the wheels were equipped with Goodrich Silvertown Cord Tires and all except one went the entire distance. The fourth one was removed as a precaution at the 1520th mile, though it was afterwards found that there was actually nothing wrong with the tire. The winner of every race in 1915 and so far in 1916 has won on Silverton tires, which is an indication of their quality, for no more severe test than racing at high speed can be put on a tire.

SPLENDID ROAD IS AVAILABLE FROM CITY TO BUFFALO

Motorists who want to spend a pleasant week touring from Montreal may find many charming routes and places of interest to visit but it is doubtful if anywhere there is a better road than that running from Montreal to Buffalo, a distance of just over 530 miles. The Secretary of the Automobile Club of Canada, G. A. McNamee, has just made the trip and he reported that with two small exceptions the highway for the whole distance is in perfect condition —just as good as Sherbrooke street for travelling over.

The two exceptions are a stretch between the Country Club and La Prairie which is badly worn and the entrance to Plattsburg, which is very dusty, but otherwise there is smooth macadam, brick, asphalt or cement roads all the way, and one that any careful motorist could travel over. Through the Adirondacks the roads are narrow and winding and drivers should exercise caution because of the sharp turns, but the road surface is all that can be desired, and the whole of the surface has a binder on it.

The route includes the King Edward Highway to Rouse's Point and it may be mentioned that a start has been made to place the surfacing on this, nine miles having been done near Napierville, and the contract has been given to place the binder on the remainder of the road. A start will be made very shortly with this work, and the contractors hope to complete one and a half to two miles a day once they begin. The plank road is now in good shape for travelling over in any kind of weather. The route follows the shore of Lake Champlain to Plattsburg the entrance to which is very dusty, and then it goes to Keesville. There are two ways of going to Elizabethtown, one the short cut through the Ooco Moonshine mountains, over a dirt road which is not advisable in wet weather. The preferable way is to go round by Upper Jay, Jay, and Keene—this is sixteen miles longer but it is all improved roads. From Elizabethtown the route goes via Schroon Lake and Lake George and then either via Glen Falls or Lacerne to Saratoga, both being good roads. From Saratoga the road is through Scotia to Utica, passing through Little Falls and Ilion to Syracuse and then a straight run south of Rochester for forty-six miles into Buffalo.

The mileage from the centre of the city to Plattsburg is seventy-eight miles, to Keesville fifteen miles, Elizabethtown twenty-nine, Saratoga, ninety-six miles, Scotia twenty-two, Utica seventy-nine, Syracuse forty-nine and Buffalo 154 miles, with some odd fractions of miles in between. For the first day's run Lake George could be the stopping place, 197 miles, stopping at Bluff Point, Plattsburg, for lunch or if Lake George is too far for the first day there are some excellent places along Lake Schroon. The second day's run could be 178 miles to Syracuse, where there is good accommodation, and a side trip into Albany, sixteen miles from Scotia for lunch would enable tourists to see the capital. The journey can easily be completed in the third day past Lake Geneva and Lake Canadiagna, where lunch could be obtained.

The route is through the Adirondacks and the Mohawk Valley and along the shores of many lakes, and the return trip may be made via Rochester to Syracuse and thence up to Watertown, Canton, Malone and Moore's to Rouse's Point, this route being about a hundred miles shorter, and all paved roads.

GOODRICH TIRE GIVES $10,000 IN RACING CONTESTS

AKRON, Ohio, May 27.—Although Goodrich Silvertown Twin Cable Cord Tires are accepted tires of racing drivers, and are bought and paid for in every case, a recognition of the selection by outright purchase by drivers of racing cars of the Silvertown Twin Cable Cord Tires, for use in contests under no influence of money consideration for so doing, has just been announced by the B. F. Goodrich Company.

The American Automobile Association, the official association of car owners of this country, has prepared rules to govern the determination of the champion for the season of 1916, and will be the sole arbitrator regarding such award.

The Silvertown Cord Tire is universally recognized as the type of construction insuring good results in speed contests and is much used by racing drivers. There is no reason why the Goodrich Company should extend any award for the purpose of inducing the use of the Silvertown Twin Cable Cord Tire, and it does not, but gives outright without a string tied to it of any kind whatsoever, $10,000 divided between the authoritatively determined champion, the second and third in order quite irrespective of the make or kind of tire that may be used by the winners.

PHYSICIAN SAYS SPINE COMFORT IS NEEDED IN MOTOR

This is the story of a new approach on the subject of automobile comfort; it is the approach from the standpoint of an expert, so to speak; in other words, a physician. For it cannot be gainsaid that the physician, with his knowledge of the human anatomy, is in a position to tell just what it is about an automobile that tends to make it comfortable to sit in, and restful to ride in. The physician knows more than anyone else, for instance, what part of the human system is most affected in the consideration of a matter like comfort, as it relates to motoring.

For obvious reasons the name of this doctor is withheld. There is a sort of gentlemen's agreement among the medical fraternity that they shall never seek personal publicity in print. Suffice it to say, the observations of this physician are based on his experience as the owner and driver of a Studebaker car.

"I have made a study of my Studebaker car, and I find that what makes it comfortable is the fact that the seats and seat backs are in such a position as to allow the spine to rest against the seat backs in a comfortable manner," says this physician. "There is no necessity for sitting up straight, or in any other unnatural position, so that there is no fatigue on long journeys.

"The experienced camper can spend a night sleeping right on the ground, and wake up the next morning without aching bones. Why? Simply because before he goes to sleep he digs two holes in the ground, one to rest his head in and the other to rest his hips in. The result is that his spine reclines flat on the ground instead of being arched, as would have to be the case were it not for the holes that he dug. Now, when it comes to comfort in an automobile, the same principle obtains. The whole idea is to have the spine rest firmly on or against something, and to have that something soft, like the seat back in an automobile.

"It is an easy matter for any one to prove this fact. Just sit for five minutes or so with the spine away from the seat back, and a decided feeling of uneasiness will be noted, as compared with the feeling of comfort when the spine is reposed against the soft cushioned back.

"Of course, there are other considerations that have their effect upon automobile comfort, such as the depth of upholstery, the design and resiliency of springs, the height of the seat from the floor of the car, and the amount of leg room for driver and other passengers. Every car should have ample leg room for the tallest person. But fundamentally, the secret of comfort is to be found in the support and rest given to the spinal vertebrae, not only when sitting in a car, but when touring, whether over boulevarded roads, or rough highways."

Ontario to Have Good Roads Meet at Belleville

The Ontario Good Roads Association are holding a meeting in Belleville on June 6 and 7, which will largely comprise motor trips over the district. On Tuesday the trip will be through Hastings, visiting among other places the Dominion Fish Hatchery and a number of mine plants. There will be a meeting of the executive at the City Hall in the evening. On Wednesday there will be a motor trip along the Bay of Quinte via the Dundas road with luncheon at Belleville and in the afternoon a trip through Prince Edward county, visiting Wellington and the famous Sandbanks, returning to Picton for a dinner given by the warden and members of P. E. County Council. Members of the Provincial Legislature are to be present at the gathering which is being arranged by Lucius E. Allen, county engineer of Belleville.

GOOD ROADS HELP AUTO SALES AND AUTOS AID ROADS

The unprecedented demand for motor cars that is responsible for many automobile factories working day and night is attributed in a measure to the work accomplished by good roads advocates during the past few years. In turn the automobile itself is accountable for many good road movements. The two are closely linked.

"The awakening of public interest to the importance of good roads has done more toward facilitating the sale of automobiles than probably any other one thing since the advent of the 'self-starter,'" says Mr. John N. Willys, president of The Willys-Overland Company.

"Show me any section of a state or county where the roads recently have been put in proper shape for driving, and I'll show you a number of automobile dealers nearby, who have increased their business.

"The best salesman in the world cannot sell a car if the prospective purchaser lives in a locality that is literally surrounded by muddy and impassable roads. All arguments as to why he should purchase a car, whether it be for recreation or for business fall flat, if on the very first trip he has to wallow through a sea of mud. The improvement of ten or fifteen miles of roadway offer the greatest inducement in the world to invest in motor cars."

Probably no class of men in any business or profession have done more toward furthering the good roads movement than have the automobile dealers themselves. To them good roads are as much of a necessity as they are to the car owners in their respective territories. If the highways that lead to their salesrooms are neglected, their business suffers in consequence. The average motorist will travel twenty miles over a good road in preference to driving two miles over a poor one. Is it any wonder, then, that the big majority of automobile dealers are staunch supporters of all good road movements, whether the measures be of national character or of a local nature?

"In the case of the Overland," continued Mr. Willys, "we encourage this kind of work among our dealers as much as possible. With 5,000 of them scattered throughout the country, they form a Good Roads Boosters' organization that is in itself a power, for it helps keep alive and growing the spirit that has been responsible for much of the good roads work accomplished during the past year or two."

Brass Buttons on Soldier's Coat to Disappear Soon

"Travel light for speed" is the slogan of the army commanders in Europe and it has fallen to the lot of the American manufacturer to provide new and significant method of relieving the soldier of weight. And, strangest of all, it is by way of the buttons on his uniform coat.

The aluminum company of America has been called upon for large orders of aluminum for use as coat buttons. They will be lighter than the heavy brass fasteners and they will not be in need of the everlasting polishing to keep them in order.

This is but one form of the battle for light travel. Most striking is the introduction of Lynite aluminum into the make-up of the Marmon "34", the most remarkable automobile of the year. The car weight has been reduced several hundred pounds by the extensive use of aluminum in motor and body.

A portable bed which can be folded into very compact form and is designed to be carried on the running board of an automobile has been put on the market. The bed is 48 in. wide and of usual length. When folded up the bed measures 9 in. wide and 8 in. high.

TOURING WILL BE POPULAR AT HOME FOR THIS SEASON

Now is the time to prepare for summer touring. This bit of advice might be well adopted in the nature of a nation-wide slogan because, since the automobile has become such a popular commodity, practically every family, in which a car is owned, is making some plans for country driving during the vacation time. Besides the present owners, there are tens of thousands of prospective buyers who are looking forward to the same pleasure and to this latter class the preparedness advice is especially applicable. In the first place, the prospective buyer must obtain the car most suitable for general purposes, city driving and country touring and the purchase in itself is a matter worth serious study and investigation. The careful consideration necessary in the selection of an automobile is obviously essential because among the many different makes of pleasure cars only a few are efficient for all purposes.

That automobile touring will be more popular this year than ever before is evident, says A. F. Knobloch, of the Cole Motor Car Co., builders of the Cole "Eight." In nearly every state the Good Roads enthusiasts have accomplished great things in the way of highway improvements and the highly commendable work still goes on. The prolongation of the world war will also greatly increase the number of tourists in this country, as a matter of course, and almost every city in every section of the land is pointing proudly to some natural advantage which will appeal to the automobile traveler.

Every third garage in Canada is a Ford sales and service station

Service is only important to you when you need it—then it is very important.

Even the best of motor cars, sometimes require attention. If you are a Ford owner, a third of Canada's garages assure you this attention when you need it—without inconvenience and at a minimum of expense.

Every single one of the seven hundred Ford Dealers in Canada carries a complete stock of Ford spare parts and is competent to make repairs and adjustments when occasion demands.

No matter where you go, Ford Service is never out of reach if you drive a Ford.

Like the Ford car itself—Ford Service is universal.

What Do You Know About The Maxwell Car?

THIS is the time of the year when more people are considering the question of "what car to buy" than at any other time of the year.

This community has its full share of people who will soon be driving their first car or a new car to replace the old one.

Now, we know that we are going to sell Maxwell Cars to a great many of these people—depending upon how many we are able to acquaint with the merits of the Maxwell.

The generous value offered in the car is so evident—its past record is so full of good performance—owners speak so well of it—that when the buyer knows these things, he is eager to buy a Maxwell.

In order to tell as many people as possible about the merits of the Maxwell Car we are going to spend a lot of money in the next few weeks in this paper advertising Maxwell merits to those who do not know them.

The reason—we want to sell as many Maxwells as possible this season. Our future allotments will depend upon how many Maxwells we sell now.

You may know that the Maxwell market is a buyer's market, not a seller's market—broadly speaking. The demand for Maxwells the country over is greater than the supply.

For this reason cars are allotted to dealers by the factory according to the size of the dealer's business.

We want to make a showing and be in a position to get a generous allotment of Maxwells hereafter. Because the more Maxwells are sold in any community, the greater is the future demand. We realize the opportunity to do an ever-increasing Maxwell business.

This is only the first of the several messages we are going to print—a few days apart—concerning the Maxwell Car. But we don't expect to be able to adequately present Maxwell merits in printed words alone.

If you are one who is going to buy a new car you will find it decidedly to your advantage to find out all you can about the Maxwell before you place your order.

Come in and talk it over with us and let us demonstrate the car to you. Then, don't take our word alone, but ask those who now own Maxwells.

Get "posted" about the Maxwell and you will realize more satisfaction and get more "value received" for your motor car money than ever before.

And we are just as willing to have you investigate other cars just as fully as you do ours. The Maxwell will not suffer by the comparison.

Why not start your Maxwell investigation today?

ONTARIO MOTOR OWNERS TO BOOST GOVT. HIGHWAY

Big Reliability Tour from Ottawa Starts Next Saturday

In spite of the war a numerous party of Canadian automobile owners are going to participate in a stiff competitive tour this season, that carries more of a reliability feature than some of the tours that have been staged, since the memorable Glidden tour of 1910 in the United States.

This tour is in the nature of a good roads boosting trip as well as being competitive and will probably be the first organized party to go into the United States from Canada since the license reciprocity between the province of Ontario and the border states has been consumated.

A great deal of the credit for securing the legislation for reciprocity in licenses in Ontario is generally conceded to the Ottawa Valley Motor Car Association, a large and live organization of motor car owners in the Capital of Canada.

This Association has also been active in securing the co-operation of the city of Ottawa, the province of Ontario and the municipalities en route, in a plan to build a provincial highway from Ottawa to Prescott, Ontario, across the St. Lawrence from Ogdensburg, N. Y.

The success of this scheme is almost assured and the reliability tour has been undertaken and promoted to celebrate the success up to this point and to give the scheme its last necessary boost.

All class of cars are eligible to compete, and the participant will be penalized on mechanical breakage and adjustment as well as a time schedule and fuel replenishments. The cars are divided into separate classes, based upon the market selling price of the model, and different time schedules have been prepared for the three classes.

Only private owners are eligible for the contest and an observer will be carried on each car to check up on delays and repairs on the road.

The Tour, while it is only 140 miles in length, is laid in Ontario and New York state and includes the ferrying of the St. Lawrence river between Prescott and Ogdensburg. The tour will start from Ottawa the morning of June 9th and the night control will be in Prescott.

At Prescott a monster Good Roads demonstration will be held at which the Hon. Finley McDiarmid, the Ontario Minister of Highways and his deputy, Mr. W. A. MacLean are expected to be present. The Hon. Dr. Reid, Canadian Minister of Customs also will be there, as well as the Hon. Howard Ferguson, Ontario Minister of lands and mines, through whose home town the tour will pass. President Baucus and Secretary Baker of the New York State Automobile Association has promised to be on hand as well as Mayor Frank of Ogdensburg and a large body of citizens from the American town. The Ontario Motor League will be represented by President L. B. Howland and Secretary W. G. Robertson. The Mayor of Ottawa, Nelson D. Porter, will accompany the tour with his two cars.

During the night the cars in the tour will be placed on ferries and taken across the border to the New York State side. The next morning the tourists will proceed over state roads to Alexandria Bay where entertainment will be provided at the big Thousand Island summer resort. In the afternoon the return will be made to Ogdensburg and the tour will finish at that point. Many of the Canadians will afterwards participate in more extended trips to northern New York.

A portion of the final league of the run will be made on a secret time schedule which the referee will lay down according to ideal touring conditions.

The Grand prize will be a sterling silver shield mounted on mahogany and presented by The Ottawa Free Press. The second prize will be sterling cup given by Mayor Julius Frank of Ogdensburg, and the third prize will be another cup given by Mayor Nelson D. Porter of Ottawa. Many other prizes are also being put up.

The referee of the tour will be Mr. W. D. Edemburn of Detroit, the official representative for Michigan of the contest board of the American Automobile Association. Mr. Edenburn has had considerable touring experience. He has acted as official on Glidden tours and has managed numerous automobile events in the middle states. He has piloted three transcontinental parties.

In either the United States or Canada few routes could be selected with greater scenic attractions. The cars will strike direct for the Government Driveway in Ottawa, skirting the Rideau Canal, and through the Canadian Experimental Farm. The route then follows the banks of the beautiful Rideau river for thirty miles swinging over to the town of Kemptville and then direct to Prescott.

On Saturday evening June 10, the New York State Automobile Association and the Ogdensburg Automobile Club will hold a celebration in Ogdensburg of the establishment of reciprocity in licenses. Secretary of State Lugo has accepted the invitation of the city of Ogdensburg to be present. A strong citizens' committee has been organized by Mayor Frank to look after the welcome of the Canadians, and the Hon. Edgar Newell, President of the Ogdensburg Automobile Club has appointed a committee of motor car owners.

The tour promises to be the greatest auto event ever held in Eastern Ontario. It will likely comprise more cars than have ever crossed the border at one time.

A joint censor board of moving pictures has been named by the Governments of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, one member being a woman, Mrs. H. R. Patriarche, of Winnipeg.

Car Allotments Too Small for "Eight" Dealers

That the demand for eight cylinder automobiles this year will be even greater than predicted by the most optimistic manufacturers of that particular type of car, is indicated by reports received from dealers throughout the country. In many instances, these dealers, who during the early part of the year, were filled with more or less misgiving, because of the unusually large allotment of cars assigned to them for the 1916 trade, are already sending into their factory for more automobiles and begging for early shipments on the second order.

Speaking of the situation in Montreal, Raoul Aubertin, of the Forum Building, says: "Selling the Cole Eight is no problem this year. Getting cars from the manufacturer is another matter, however. This being practically the opening of the spring season, we are able to make deliveries now, but it looks as if our allotment would have to be considerably increased to go all the way around.

"There need be no alarm felt by the man who will be satisfied with any old make of car, or even a good used car, as there will be plenty of those for sale. It is the purchaser who will be satisfied with nothing less than the latest in automobile design and improvements who should take immediate action, if he intends to get a machine of that description this year."

General Manager A. F. Knobloch, of the Cole Motor Car Company, admits that the demand for eight-cylinder cars is little short of amazing.

"We knew that in the end the 'eight' would be the most popular model of the modern automobile," he said, "but we were modest enough to expect that it would take considerable time to educate the public to the many advantages of that type of car. The public, however, is not slow to learn where it can get the most for its money and this business sagacity on the part of buyers was never more noticeable than in the way the 'eight' car has been taken up."

FERRY CHARGES

A regular charge of fifty cents each way for the ferries between Montreal and St. Anne de Belleville has now been established, so that motorists can visit this resort and return for two dollars. There is a dozen miles of excellent road round Ile Perrot, and the standardization of the ferry charges will be a great convenience to motorists who have in the past been charged anything from a dollar to three dollars on each ferry to cross. The ferries run on signal.

Realizing what proper recreation means to the average workman, The Thomas B. Jeffery Company of Kenosha, which just now is straining every facility in an effort to keep pace with the tripled demand for Jeffery cars, has encouraged its three thousand employes to organize an Athletic Association and begin the construction of a baseball field. The company will bear a generous share of the expense of the project.

The Reason and Reward of Success

Success is measured solely by sales. Automobile sales are the direct result of performance.

Therefore, the consistent, insistent and increasing demand for the famous Cole Eight must be directly credited to its unapproachable performance.

There now seems to be little chance of our ever catching up with immediate orders.

From a standing start to sixty miles an hour, in less time than you can say it; for swiftness without noise, rattle or vibration; for soft, smooth and perfectly balanced operation; for real economy; for the last word in comfort and smartness—get a Cole Eight.

It's the car of today—and the future. It's the automobile you want.

PRESENTATION TO THE PIONEERS OF THEIR COLORS

Details of Ceremony on at Point St. Charles Today

TO AWARD MEDAL ON THIS OCCASION

Corp. Edmund Casstles Receives Honor for Bravery in Action

The presentation of colors to the 8th Pioneer Overseas Battalion, by members of St. Matthews Presbyterian Church, which takes place this afternoon on the Grand Trunk football grounds, will be one of the most interesting military events yet held in the city in connection with overseas troops.

The order of ceremony has been forwarded from Ottawa, and a rehearsal yesterday showed it to be a beautiful and interesting one.

The spectators are requested to be in their places sharp at three thirty, at which hour the battalion marches on the field. A surpliced choir of some fifty voices, accompanied by the 4th Field Company band, will sing the authorized hymn for the occasion, previous to the consecration of the colors. The hymn is "Brightly gleams our banner, pointing to the sky, cheering tollworg soldiers on to victory."

BATTALION DRILL.

Previous to receiving the colors, the Pioneers will perform several movements in battalion drill, concluding with the battalion in line to receive the reviewing officer, Lieut.-Col. J. A. Fages, the acting O.C. of No. 4 District. After the inspection the battalion will march past and will then reform line, facing the grand stand to receive the colors.

The drums will be piled in front of the centre and the flags encased will be laid against them. The senior major and senior lieutenant will uncase the King's color, and the regimental color will be uncased by officers next in respective ranks. The colors will then be consecrated, this ceremony being in charge of the Rev. Dr. G. E. Ross, who is the officiating chaplain. The senior major will hand over the King's color to Mrs. Robinson, the vice-president of the ladies committee, of St. Matthews' Church, who will present the color and then the regimental color will be presented. The address will be given by Sir Herbert Ames, after which the colors will be taken to their position in line, at a slow march, the band playing the National Anthem.

The regiment will afterwards march past in column and close column, subsequently leaving the ground in column of route.

The colors will temporarily be deposited in the window of a large building on Wellington street, and there kept on view, under guards, for the inspection of the citizens, later they will be removed to the up-town quarters.

D. C. M. PRESENTED.

Corp. Edmund Casstl-- will be presented with the Distinguished Conduct Medal at this ceremony. Corp. Casstles was severely wounded on the May 2, 1915, during operations around Ypres while repairing lines of communication between the firing line and headquarters. He lay for two days under fire before he could be brought in; and was very much injured when rescued.

This is the first D.C.M. to be presented in Canada. Corp. Casstles was too ill to receive it in England when his time came, and later His Majesty's accident caused further delay. Corp. Casstles is well known at Point St. Charles in connection with Athletic circles, both as a foot-baller and swimmer. He was a member for three years of the Grand Trunk First Aid Team, which won the championship and the Nesbit Shield, also one of the International Team winning the Hutchison Shield, and the team winning the Dominion Bridge Cup. Corp. Casstles commanding Officer, in writing recently, referred to him as an excellent soldier, and a thorough sportsman. He has always been held in high opinion by the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of his old corps, the 4th Field Company of Canadian Engineers. Corp. Castles will be brought down from the hospital by Lieut.-Col. H. R. Lordly for this occasion.

BROTHERS WITH COLORS

Left, Corp. Charles Wren, in the trenches. Right, Corp. Eric Wren, with a Vancouver battalion. He had an honorable discharge from the United States army and left the navy to fight for Canada. Their mother lives at 134 Palm avenue. In addition to her sons, Mrs. Wren has seven nephews and a brother with the colors.

One brewer in the State of Washington has discovered that the prohibition law, instead of destroying his brewery, has opened up to him a much more profitable business. He is now bottling pasteurizing milk and manufacturing cheese. His big beer trucks are hauling milk instead of beer. His steam plant and refrigerating apparatus are cooling milk and cream and curing cheese, and he finds it necessary to employ even more men than before.

which not only the acknowledged rules of international law and the principles of humanity but the solemn pledges to this country have been ruthlessly and cynically broken. And yet, after all that experience of deception, cunning and violated promises, all that our Government did by its note of April 18, 1916, was to command an immediate cessation of these practices (a demand already made in almost the same terms on June 9, 1915,) accompanied, however, by the threat that if the demand were not complied with, diplomatic relations between the two countries would be severed, which practically amounts to our returning the visiting card of the German Government and asking back our own.

I am not unaware that the German Government bases its justification of these outrages upon the principle of reprisal; and that the law of reprisals may, to the extent that they are justified, modify the ordinary rules of war should be freely conceded; but reprisals must be equivalent in degree, if not in kind, and cannot override fundamental principles of humanity.

If England is violating international law by shutting off the food supplies of the German population, then Germany would be equally justified in cutting off by lawful methods the food supplies of England. If in such a blockade England, without preliminary visit and seizure, sunk German merchant vessels and massacred noncombatants, then Germany would, as to the noncombatants of the offending country, have the right of reprisal. But it does not follow that a blockade of a country, with the incidental result of economic suffering to the civilian population, justifies, by way of reprisal, the deliberate massacre of noncombatants on a merchant vessel. Did the German Government recognize, when Paris was besieged in 1870 and its people were dying from starvation, that such injury to thousands of noncombatants would justify the French Army in murdering every German noncombatant who happened to be in the besieged city? Logically this is Germany's contention today. To admit that the suffering, which with the civilian population of any country incidentally suffers through a blockade, justifies a resort to savagery would be the complete negation of international law.

Our note of April 18 demanded an immediate reply. Germany showed its indifference to this request by waiting more than a fortnight, although the Teutonic powers gave Serbia only forty-eight hours to consider far more sweeping demands. This delay might be excused if the reply were in its form conciliatory. On the contrary, the note in places is insulting in terms, and at no place gives an unqualified acceptance of our just demands.

Replying to the assertion of our note that the submarine methods had resulted in the "indiscriminate destruction of vessels of all sorts, nationalities, and destinations," the German Foreign Office, having passed through the various stages of a quarrel referred to by Touchstone, finally reached the "lie direct" by the amazing statement that it emphatically repudiated the assertion, adding a charge that our Government had made a grave charge without any specification of facts. It then proceeds to repudiate altogether the express pledge, which was given by Count Bernstorff to our Government on September 1, that no liners should be sunk without preliminary compliance with the rules of international law as to visit and seizure, by stating that it never agreed to limit its method of warfare "in the war zone surrounding Great Britain." It adds: With regard to these, no assurances have ever been given to the Government of the United States.

Few more amazing incidents have happened in diplomatic history. At a time when our Government was pressing for a disavowal of the sinking of the Lusitania and asking for explanations as to the Arabic, both destroyed in the so-called war zone, Count Bernstorff stated that he was authorized by his Government to give the very assurrance which his Foreign Office now repudiates. As all the vessels, of whose destruction we were then complaining had been sunk in the war zone, and as our demands for a disavowal and cessation of these murderous practices had their principal reference to the war zone, the pledge of September 1, phrased by the German Foreign Office without respect to locality that liners should not be destroyed, could have only one meaning. If the war zone was to be exempted from the operation of the pledge the German Foreign Office should have said so. That office never qualified that pledge, although its Ambassador at Washington did state some months later, on January 7, 1916, that in the Mediterranean German submarines had from the beginning orders to conduct "cruiser warfare" against enemy merchant vessels only in accordance with the general principles of international law and in particular measures of reprisal, as applied to the war zone around the British Isles, were to be excluded.

Little attention was paid to these words at the time, but it is most clear that as to the so-called war zone, Germany never intended to respect the principles of international law regarding warfare against merchant vessels, and that the pledge of September 1, which wholly failed to give this warning, was a palpable attempt to deceive this country and all neutral nations by a false promise.

More than eight months afterward the German Foreign Office publicly disavows a pledge, publicly made in its name by its own Ambassador. Either that Ambassador made a false assurance to our State Department or the present German note contains a deliberate falsehood.

The note of May 5 then contains a gratuitously insulting sneer by suggesting its regret "that the sentiments of humanity, which the Government of the United States extends with such fervor to the unhappy victims of submarine warfare, are not extended with the same warmth of feeling" to the civilian population of Germany.

It is true that the last note of the German Government states that it has decided to make further concessions in the methods of submarine warfare, and renews its promise, subject to immediate cancellation without warning, to conform the activities of submarine warfare to international law both within and beyond the war zone; but what assurance can our Government have that these pledges will be better respected than their predecessors? How soon will the new condition arise, when, dissatisfied with our dealings with Great Britain, Germany again murders our citizens on the high seas? For the present the pledge, caused by political considerations and the hope that our nation may "pull the chestnuts out of the fire" for Germany, may be sincere. But is this conditional and possibly temporary concession the "disavowal" of the Lusitania which we have demanded for a year past?

"Remember the Maine" was once a rallying cry of potent force; and yet how shallow it was when we realize that it is altogether improbable that Spain had anything to do with its destruction, and yet on the contrary belief awakened in the soul of a proud people the passionate resolve to end forever the misrule of Cuba.

"Remember the Lusitania!" Yes; it, too, will be remembered by our people—not with a proud consciousness of a work well done, but with the humiliating regret of a great work for humanity as yet left partly undone through the supine inaction, if not moral cowardice, of those officials to whom the dignity and honor of the Republic are for the time being committed.

It is true that Germany has for the time being agreed to discontinue its piratical methods, but with what delay and at what a sacrifice of life and treasure this result has been most tardily secured! The result, temporary or permanent, cannot alter the fact that this submarine controversy presents easily the most unnecessary and discreditable chapter in the diplomatic history of the United States.

In a larger aspect and judged by divine and not merely human justice, the crime of the Lusitania will never be redressed until it is known of all men that the watery grave of its victims was the lasting grave of the Hohenzollern dynasty.

The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council is the only British law court whose business has not diminished as a result of the war.

EMBARGO ON HAY EXPORT REMOVED

OTTAWA, June 3.—The embargo on the export of hay from Canada except under special license has been removed after being in force several months. The purpose of the restrictive order was to conserve the Canadian hay crop for the use of the Allies, but at this season it is found to be no longer necessary.

Charlie Chaplin, the movie comedian, has been refused a $50,000 life insurance policy, because of the health record of his family.

IMMIGRATION TO WEST INCREASES

An interesting phase of recent immigration into Western Canada from the United States during the last five months has been the very material increase in settlers' effects. For a period of three months the cash value of these show an increase of $480,000. For the week ending April 18, the Canadian Pacific Railway reports immigration of 473 persons into Western Canada from the United States as compared to 304 last year. Of these 137 were farmers and 135 laborers. During the same week there were 525 homesteads entered as compared to 460 last year.

ST. ANNE DE BELLEVUE, on Maple avenue, opposite Macdonald College; 22,500 feet of land, with large house occupied year around. Particulars on application, Dr. McAuley, 579 Dorchester St. West.

ST. HUBERT

Stop and consider what it means to own a farm near Montreal, say in one of the future suburbs, rather than 50 or 60 miles away. Is not a ten arpent farm (over 160 ordinary city lots) only ten miles from Montreal more valuable than a larger farm five or six times that distance. Consider the markets, transportation, conveyance and the advancing value of your land. Montreal needs eggs, chickens, milk, vegetables, berries, yes, everything you can produce on a farm. Ready made farms with ten arpents of choice land. Buildings to suit. Water, sidewalks, etc., provided for. Electric cars stop on the property. Low prices and easy terms. Investigate. Moring, 108 Dominion Express Building.

ST. ZOTIQUE—Three miles from Chateau Junction, nice five room cottage, furnished, lot 80 x 200, on St. Francis Lake shore. Good bathing, boating, fishing and shooting; sell for $1,200; rent for $25. F. B. P.O. Box 2063, City.

ST. ROSE—Bellevue Cottage for sale, near the water, and all modern improvements, partly furnished if desired. Mrs. Fillcau, St. Rose.

VAUDREUIL, Lake St. Louis Lots, on private point, beautiful situation, near station; will sell cheap. Russell Straud, 84 St. Antoine st. 132 2

VILLAGE HOME, seven rooms, cottage, cellar, water, conveniences, lot 155 x 90, fruit, shade trees, $1,650; half cash. O. N. Hull, Coteau-du-Lac.

MR. ROGERS THINKS HUGHES ACCUSERS SHOULD RESIGN

"Unfortunately united effort in Canada in the prosecution of the war for the past two months has been impossible," said the Honorable Robert Rogers, who was in the city yesterday. "Ever since Sir Wilfrid Laurier led his party, assisted by Carvell and Kyte, under the white flag of truce, in their sniping campaign against the Government and Sir Sam Hughes in particular, it has, of course, been impossible to concentrate all our efforts on the winning of the war. This action has not only injured recruiting, but has delayed and hampered munition production at this solemn moment, when all our energies should be united as one in putting our every effort and every energy forward to assist Great Britain and France at the crisis of the great struggle in which the liberties of humanity and the very existence of these two great nations hange in the balance. For I am sure that there is no patriotic citizen in Canada today who does not honor and respect the great energy of the Minister of Militia. Unfortunately as a result of this investigation that great energy and untiring work of Sir Sam Hughes has been lost to Canada and to the Empire during the past two months. The unpatriotic course followed necessitated the Minister's return from England, where his services were so urgently needed, and for two months he has been prevented, as the head of the Canadian forces, from giving his time and his great energy to the work of the war. Great danger and serious loss has resulted from this. Recruiting has been delayed, munition production has been hampered at a time when we are faced with such great national danger.

"Is the investigation all over?" was asked of the Minister. "As far as I can see, it

however, was able to alter her style of acting and to convey her emotions by gesture and expression to such an extent that the picture is one of the truly worth while photoplays of the year.

The story is one with a strong appeal. The play is by Alexander Bisson. The final act shows Madame X, on trial for murder. Her son, a rising young lawyer, is chosen to defend her. Although unknown to each other at the start the mother slowly comes to a realization of who her defender is and her only desire is to hold him in her arms again before death comes. The son although unconscious of his client's identity, works on the sympathies of the jury to such an extent that Madame X. is released.

STRAND.

Press Agent's Notice.

The story unfolded in the William Fox presentation in film form of "A Modern Thelma," is laid in the romantic realm of Scandinavia, and told with a photographic and dramatic perfection which makes it stand out as a master work in motion photography. The play stars that ever popular screen celebrity, Vivian Martin, who scored such a success in the picturization of "Merely Mary Ann," at the Strand a few weeks ago. In "A Modern Thelma," from beginning to end, there is a freshness and an exactness of detail which makes the spectator forget that he is living in the twentieth century. The pictures were taken only by great pains in an isolated mountain place in Georgia, the only section of the American continent where scenery like the Scandinavian could be found. The cast with Miss Martin is exceptionally strong, including Harry Hilliard, William Tooker and other favorites.

The fifth episode of the circus serial "The Adventures of Peg o' the Ring," featuring Grace Cunard and Francis Ford; and the Universal Weekly will also be shown three days commencing Monday in addition to the Fox feature.

Next Thursday and Friday the two Metro stars Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne will be presented in their latest wonderplay, "A Million a Minute."

FRENCH COMEDY TO BE PRESENTED BY THE DHAVROLS

The program for next week at the St. Denis Theatre has been very carefully arranged.

The French players, under the clever leadership of M. Dhavrol, will present for the first time in America the famous farce "J'attends Ernest" (I expect Ernest), by Paul Bilhaud and Albert Barre. This is a marked contrast to the tragedies of the past weeks, and will test the versatility of the Dhavrol troupe. This little company of players is undoubtedly one of the best seen in Montreal for several years. It is a delight to witness their artistic acting and to hear their impeccable diction.

The management has secured as an added attraction the famous Cadets of Gascogne, four of the best singers in Vaudeville. They have just returned from South America, where they played in the most important theatres. They sing in French Italian and English. They begin tomorrow, and will sing at every performance next week.

The special photoplays are "The Resurrection of Hollis." "The Return to Youth," two comedies, "Botus' Ghost," and Baby Doll," and Pathe's Gazette.

SOHMER PARK BILL HAS GOOD NOVELTIES

The opening week of Sohmer Park has been exceptionally successful, and large audiences have enjoyed the fine program offered. That for the coming week is one of unusual novelty, including numbers which only the conditions on the European continent enable audiences to have in this country at this time of the year.

The headliners are the Billy Bouncer Circus, a company of five with one of the best comedy novelties in vaudeville. It has come direct from the Olympia of London, where it made a big hit. Redford and Winchester are a couple of comedy jugglers, of the best in their line, carrying their own special scenery. Their act is full of surprises. The Dorothy Southern Trio of singers, musicians and dancers offer a refined and entertaining number. One of them is an accomplished violinist. The Montfords, two men, are clever trapeze artists from France. Their act is of the sensational character, including a "loop the loop." Helen Nordstron the female baritone, has a phenomenal voice. She is from Europe, where she has been heard in the leading music halls.

The Park Military Band of thirty artists is at its best this season, and offers a particularly good program. The gala nights on Wednesday and Friday are as popular as ever.

C. P. TELEGRAPH OFFICIALS CHANGE

Promotions of officials of the Canadian Pacific Railway Telegraphs were announced yesterday, the principal figuring therein being A. C. Fraser, superintendent of the eastern division, who becomes superintendent of the Atlantic division, with headquarters at St. John, N.B.; W. D. Neill, superintendent of traffic at Montreal, who becomes superintendent of the eastern division; and William Thompson, chief operator at Montreal, who succeeds W. D. Neill as superintendent of traffic here.

Other minor appointments were also made. The promotions are effective from June 1.

A. H. Goodwin Heads Laymen's Association

SMITH'S FALLS, Ont., June 3.—The organization meeting of the Laymen's Association yesterday afternoon elected the following officers for the coming year: President, A. H. Goodwin, Montreal; vice-president, Elmer Davis, Kingston; secretary-treasurer, J. S. Eagleson, Ottawa; past president, C. W. Catlke, Sherbrooke; executive committee, Dr. W. D. Lambly, J. H. Carson, A. D. Vancamp, Irwin Hillard, K. C., M. P. P., and J. A. Jackson.

Adjournment was made to this afternoon.

ONLY CANADIAN WINNER IN "BEAUTY AND BRAINS" CONTEST

Though there were a score or more "entries" from Montreal young ladies, Winnipeg has the distinction of having in her midst the winner of the contest conducted by Photoplay Magazine and the World Film Corporation. There were over 10,000 entrants and eleven were chosen. They will be given a chance to become Movie stars. The Canadian winner, shown above, is Vivian Suckling, said to be a descendant of Lord Nelson and Sir John Suckling. She is 21 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 125 pounds, has dark brown eyes and brown hair.

BILLIE BURKE IS VERY ATTRACTIVE IN "PEGGY" PLAY

"Peggy," the first photoplay in which the famous Billie Burke appeared and which took New York and other American cities by storm, will be presented at the Regent Theatre, Park and Laurier avenues, for three days commencing Monday. Before she accepted the Triangle's offer and made her first screen play "Peggy," Billie Burke was one of the handful of stage stars who could go out any season, in any play, over any route, and pack every theatre she played in. She makes a distinct personal appeal that has given her a wonderful following. And all the charm and the dramatic ability, all the winsomeness that have contributed to her remarkable stage success are transferred to the screen in "Peggy." An unusually good assisting cast includes Wm. H. Thompson, William Desmond Charles Ray and Thelma Salter.

A synopsis of the story is as follows: Peggy is a "whirlwind" from America, who bursts into a little Scotch hamlet, and sets everything topsy-turvy. But her uncle is a crabbed old man, and the villagers are for the most part a forlorn lot. Peggy wins the hearts of the little children, and gradually she brings about a great and wonderful change in their elders.

In addition to this seven part production, the fourth episode of the serial "The Adventures of Peg o' the Ring," featuring Grace Cunard and Francis Ford will be shown.

Life and Character Reading
JUNE 3

Nervous restlessness and constant desire to travel are the chief characteristics of this nature.

While the mind is brilliant and intuitive with high intellectual abilities, the instability of character sometimes makes them appear unstable and not to be trusted, yet these people are honest at heart and over-generous.

This nature needs the quiet influence of a harmonious, unruffled nature and one born the last two weeks in January will be a suitable mate.

Domestics and cooks will find excellent positions by advertising in the Montreal Daily Star Want Ads during the present month.

How You May Change Your Face Completely

Any woman not satisfied with her complexion can easily remove it and have a new one. The thin veil of stifling half-dead cuticle is an encumbrance and should be removed to give the fresh, vigorous, young skin underneath a chance to show itself and to breathe. There's a simple, old-fashioned remedy which will always do the work. Get an ounce of pure mercolized wax from your druggist and apply it at night like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. The wax will gently absorb all the lifeless skin and leave a healthy and beautiful complexion, as fresh as a child's. Naturally it takes with it all such facial blemishes as freckles, moth patches, sallowness, liver spots, pimples. It is pleasant to use, and economical. The face so treated soon looks years younger.

To keep the skin free from wrinkles there's nothing quite so good as the old reliable saxolite lotion. It is only necessary to dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel and bathe the face in this as required.—Advertisement.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm at least 80 acres on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section along side his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent, also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

VILLENEUVE SAYS RATEPAYERS MUST PROTEST TO CITY

He Will Not Attend Further Meetings of Board to Talk of Viaduct

Controller Villeneuve did not attend the meeting of the Board of Control yesterday afternoon, though he was at his office in the City Hall.

After the meeting he explained that he would refuse to attend any meeting at which the aqueduct was being discussed, unless Messrs. Martin, Ainey and Cote changed their views and sided with him and Mr. Ross in their desire to hire experts to pass on the whole matter and stop the enormous wastage complained of by thirty-one engineers in a recent petition.

"I am not against municipalization as a principle," he said to The Star, "but I am against it when it is detrimental to the interests of the ratepayers. In the present case, I am against the principle of municipalizing the street lighting because I am under the impression that it will be too expensive. I will say more—I am against the city generating its own power for pumping water. I believe that is a bad investment. The aqueduct should give us only a supply of water which we can not buy elsewhere. It is not the same for power. We can buy that cheaper than the city can generate it. The Montreal Water and Power Company buy their power and pay only $20 per horse power for it. I understand that the cost of each horse power to be developed by the aqueduct, if it is ever completed, will be several hundred dollars, and I hold there is no reason why we should create an artificial hydraulic power for the generation of electricity when we can buy the same electricity at a much lower rate. I look at the proposition from a commercial point of view. That is why I want experts to tell us what will be the cost of the aqueduct alone and what it will be with the power house and auxiliary plant. I believe that such a report will show that the cost of the power house and the widening of the canal it requires, will place the cost of electricity at a figure much higher than what we can get in the open market. All that I ask is that experts be consulted; if their report shows that the cost of power will be $20 per horse power, I will be the first one to support the scheme. On the other hand, can anyone explain their reluctance to grant expert consultation? I can not depend on the city engineers; in spite of all their qualifications and their good will, they are liable to be partial in the matter, and it would be too much of human nature to expect that they would in a few days, condemn the work they have been at for the last few years.

"We certainly need outside experts. I think the people should now talk, and delegation after delegation should come to the City Hall, and ask the suspension of the undertaking until we have had real figures. It would mean a suspension of about five or six weeks, and it might mean a saving of many million dollars.

"Mind you," added Mr. Villeneuve, "I do not intend to protect the interests of the electric companies; I intend to protect the citizens of Montreal and prevent the city manufacture power at around $20, higher than that of the open market when I am shown that the city can manufature power at around $20, you will see how quickly I will change my views. If it is possible, why not say so and come out with real figures, and not mere guessing?"

NOTES AND QUERIES

THE PRINCESS ROYAL.

Q.—Who is the present Princess Royal of Great Britain? I am of opinion that this title belongs to the eldest daughter of the reigning sovereign, but I am told that I am wrong and that Princess Mary, daughter of King George V., is not Princess Royal. Will the Editor of Notes and Queries clear up the situation?—W. M. M., Westmount.

A.—The present Princess Royal of Great Britain is Her Royal Highness Princess Louise Victoria Alexandra Dagmar (born February 20, 1867), eldest daughter of the late King Edward, and widow of the Duke of Fife, who died in 1912. She was preceded as Princess Royal by the late Empress Frederick, daughter of Queen Victoria, and mother of the present German Emperor. The eldest daughter of the Sovereign does not bear the title of Princess Royal until it is formally conferred upon her. The present Princess Royal did not receive the title until November, 1905, when the notification of honors in connection with the King's birthday contained the following announcement: "The King has been graciously pleased to declare that His Majesty's eldest daughter, Her Royal Highness Princess Louise Victoria Alexandra Dagmar (Duchess of Fife) shall henceforth bear the style and title of Princess Royal."

NEW YORK IS GOTHAM.

A.—Gotham, as a nickname for New York, was first used by Washington Irving, in "Salmagundi," a humorous work, in 1807, because the inhabitants of the city were reputed to be such wiseacres. The original Gotham is, or was, a village in Nottinghamshire, England, the natives of which were made a laughing-stock for their foolish sayings and doings, an instance of the latter being their alleged joining hand in hand round a thornbush to hedge in a cuckoo so that it would sing all the year. They became known far and wide as "the mad men of Gotham." But if tradition is to be believed, there was method in their madness. The story is that King John wanted to establish a hunting lodge in the neighborhood, but that the villagers unwilling to contribute to the cost of supporting the Court or entertaining their monarch, feigned to be imbeciles when the King's messengers arrived, and so managed to get out of it. The "wise men" later boasted, "we ween there are more fools pass through Gotham than stay in it." A collection of their jests was published about 1568, under the title of "The Merry Tales of the Mad Men of Gotham."

"HIGH-WATER MARK."

Q.—What is meant by the term "high-water mark"? Is it the highest point to which storms may send waves ashore?—A. W. M., Montreal.

A.—"High-water mark" is the line ordinarily reached by the sea at high tide. The general high-water mark of the sea is taken as the line at the limit of the rise of the medium tides between the spring and the neap tides; and that of a body of fresh water in which there is no ebb and flow tide, is taken at the limit of the soil that is so affected by the water as to be marked with a nature and vegetation distinct from that of the banks.

ALBANIA'S STATUS.

Q.—Is Albania an independent kingdom? If not to whom does it belong, and what is its capital?—W. J. P., Montreal.

A.—Up to 1912 Albania was a Province of European Turkey; then, as a result of the Balkan War, it became an independent state; but now in the welter of the great war, the country is again its original state of anarchy. It is wild in character, and its people, numbering about 1,500,000, of a turbulent lawless character. Albania's future will be settled after the war. Durazzo, is the capital, but Scutari is the most important town.

"ALL MEN ARE LIARS."

Q.—Where can I find the quotation to the effect that "all men are liars"? Who is the author of it? — W. B., Westmount.

A.—It is as old as King David, the Psalmist of Israel. In Psalm 117, verse 11, you will find the words: "I said in my haste, all men are liars."

CARDINAL TASCHEREAU.

Q. — When was Cardinal Taschereau appointed to the Sacred College? Was he not the first Canadian Cardinal?—W. W. D., Montreal.

A.—At a Consistory held at Rome on the 7th of June, 1886, the Most Rev. Elzear Alexandre Taschereau, Archbishop of Quebec, was created "Cardinal Priest, of the Holy Roman Church." He was the first Canadian Cardinal.

THE SINN FEIN SOCIETY.

—What is the Sinn Fein Society? — A School Girl.

A.—The Sinn Fein Society was the organization which fomented and carried out the recent insurrection in Ireland. "Sinn Fein" is Irish Gaelic for "Ourselves," and the organization stood for the complete separation of Ireland from the United Kingdom and the British Empire, with return to ancient Irish laws, customs, etc. It was always an extremist body, from which the great bulk of the Irish people stood aloof.

"THE SEVEN SEAS."

Q. — What is the meaning of "The Seven Seas?—R. D. O., Montreal.

A.—The phrase "the seven seas" is used to denote the world over. The seas referred to are: the Arctic, Antarctic, North and South Pacific, North and South Atlantic, and Indian Oceans.

BIRTH STONES.

Q.—Would be be kind enough to let me know what are the birth stones for the months of the year?—"Canadian Girl."

A.—January, garnet; February, amethyst; hyacinth, pearl; March, jasper, bloodstone; April, diamond, sapphire; May, emerald, agate; June, cat's-eye, turquoise, agate; July, turquoise, onyx; August, sardonyx, carnelian, moonstone, topaz; September, chrysolite; October, beryl, opal; November, topaz, pearl; December, ruby, bloodstone.

POPULATION OF JAPAN.

Q.—What is the population of Japan? —D. G., Maisonneuve, Que.

A.—The population of Japan, according to the census of December 31, 1914, was 53,696,858, exclusive of Formosa, the Pescadoes, and the south half of Sakhalin. The total population, including Korea, Formosa and Sakhalin, was 72,867,377 in 1914.

BRITISH CONSERVATIVE LEADER.

A.—The Right Hon. Andrew Bonar Law, M.P., who is now a member of the Coalition Government, under Premier Asquith, holding the portfolio of Secretary of State for the Colonies.

SETTLEMENT TAG DAY.

The patronesses of the Iverley Settlement Tag Day on Tuesday, June 6, are Lady Allan, Mrs. William Angus, Mrs. Andrew A. Allan, Mrs. Charles Archer, Mrs. Fayette Brown, Lady Graham, Mrs. C. R. Hosmer, Lady Hingston, Lady Lacoste, Mrs. E. Lafleur, Mrs. D. Lorne McGibbon, Lady Tait, and Lady Williams-Taylor.

Mr. Gales has promised the services of his managers and stenographers for the day, as well as ten per cent of the sales in the store. Mrs. Andrew Allan will be in charge of the shop in the morning, and Mrs. Herbert Molson during the afternoon.

JAMES J. HILL, RAILROAD KING, SIGNED NO WILL

Special to The Montreal Star.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 3.—James J. Hill's estate, valued variously at from $90,000,000 to $150,000,000, will be divided among his heirs, according to the Minnesota statutes, one third of the proceeds of the estate held intact in trust to the widow, and the remainder among his three sons and six daughters. The railroad builder left no will.

Tomorrow morning or Monday at the latest, a statement will be issued through the Northwestern Trust Company to the effect that a search begun last Monday, the day of Mr. Hill's death, has failed to reveal a will, and that the heirs are convinced that no will ever was made. The announcement will say that the Hill estate will be placed in trust, the proceeds of the trust to be shared by the heirs in the same ratio in which they would share if the property were distributed under the law.

The papers in this trust agreement were being drawn late today by George P. Flannery, president of the Trust Company, former chief counsel for the Minneapolis Trust Company, and the man who, in all probability, would have drawn the Hill will had the railroad magnate made one. From a reliable source it was stated that the present condition of the Hill estate is due entirely to the failure of James J. Hill to realize that he was near death. He refused to make a will, and as he was the dominating force in his family and among his advisers, no argument had any effect on him.

The conclusion of the heirs, reached today, that there is no will, was based upon two chief points. No attorney has been found who drew a will, and all the private and other papers of James J. Hill were in systematic shape. He was a man of system. Had he left a will it would have been found easily.

AN AMBASSADOR AND OTHERS ON THE HONOR LIST

LONDON, June 3.—Sir Cecil Arthur Spring-Rice, British Ambassador to the United States, is made Grand Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George in King George's Birthday Honors List, which was made public today. Sir Gilbert Parker becomes a Privy Councillor, and Baron Reading, Lord Chief Justice of England, is given the title of Viscount. The honors' list is unusually large this year and the rewards are chiefly for national services of various kinds in connection with the war. Six new peers are created, with twelve Baronets and thirty-one Knights, and there is a long list of promotions of military and naval officers.

Baronies were bestowed upon the following: Sir Arthur Nicolson, former permanent under-secretary for foreign affairs; Charles Colston; Geo. Coats, director of J. & P. Coats, Limited, Sir Savile Crossley, prominent in politics and in the army; and Tonman Mosley, a barrister. Arthur J. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, is awarded the Order of Merit in recognition of his services in philosophy and literature. E. W. Moir, representing the Ministry of Munitions in the United States, is made a baronet.

Two members of the House of Commons, C. W. Bowerman and Christopher Addison, are made Privy Councillors; and two others, C. Arthur Pearson and Sir William Maxwell Aitken are made baronets.

The long list of military honors includes the names of the Prince of Wales, who receives the Military Cross, and Lieut.-Gen. Sir William Robertson, Chief of the General Staff, who is promoted to the rank of General.

THE BLACK HOLE OF CALCUTTA IS DECLARED MYTH

The four words, "The Black Hole of Calcutta," for 160 years have visualized the height and depth and breadth of all horror. Nothing in frightfulness and human torture could go beyond what those 146 men suffered that hot Indian night, stuffed so tightly into a small underground room that the door had to be forced shut. In the morning only twenty-three were alive. The others had been suffocated, smothered to death.

No one has even doubted the truth of that story. It has been accepted as an established historical fact for a century and a half. Every encyclopedia gives the same account of it. Poems have been written about it. It is in some of our school readers. One of Henty's best books was written about it, and his hero was one who spent the night in that hell hole of horrors and lived. The Black Hole has been the synonym of human agony and torment. If some one somewhere suffered greatly, as men adrift for weeks on the ocean in an open boat without food or water, we said they suffered the torments of the Black Hole of Calcutta.

And now, says the Kansas City Star, we are told by a man who seems to have considerable evidence in support of his contention that the historical version of the Black Hole tragedy is a "gigantic hoax." It never happened, he asserts. All the shudders, all the sympathy, all the oceans of tears shed over it have been wasted. The man who thus tears down this story is J. H. Little, who is vouched for as a man of reputation and a careful investigator. In an article in the current number of Bengal, Past and Present, he writes that he has made a special study of the Black Hole incident, has very closely examined the archives of the East India Company and overhauled contemporary French and Indian records, and has demonstrated that there is no truth in the story.

He asserts that the account was invented by a notoriously mendacious chronicler—J. Z. Holwell, a British official—to cover up his own stupid blunders, which contributed to the defeat and slaughter of the East India Company's men by the troops of the Indian Nawab. As a matter of fact, says Little, the Nawab stopped the slaughter as soon as he arrived on the scene, and the so-called Black Hole was a room in which only nine prisoners of war were detained, including Holwell himself. Two of the prisoners had been wounded in the fight and died in the room; and another, who been ailing, succumbed to his illness. This, says Little, is the whole truth about the Black Hole in a nutshell.

The historical story now disputed by Little is that in an Indian uprising in June, 1756, the English garrison of 146 men was put into the underground dungeon of Fort Williams in Calcutta. It was a strongly barred room only eighteen feet square, with only two square windows. The night was excessively hot. The men were not given water or air. They became delirious, they raved, they fought, prayed and cursed. In the fearful struggle to get near the windows the weakest were pressed to death and suffocated.

An obelisk of white marble fifty feet high marks the spot where the dungeon was, and it is visited by nearly every traveller who goes to Calcutta.

REPAIRED RUDDER IN STORM AT SEA

When 450 miles off Newfoundland the steamship Hogland, bound from New York to Gothenburg, Sweden, recently broke its rudder control during a heavy storm and for two days and nights drifted about helplessly. All attempts to repair the break from the inside proved futile. At last, when all other measures had failed, the ship's carpenter was lowered over the stern into the sea, where, buffeted by the waves, he managed to pass a chain through the rudder and make it fast before finally being knocked unconscious. Cables were subsequently secured to the free ends of this and extended for some distance around each side of the boat and carried forward into the deck, where they were passed about the mast and wound on the windlasses used in handling freight.—From the Popular Mechanics Magazine.

THE ROMANCE OF A VIOLIN.

M. Gabriel Faure, of the Paris Conservatoire, has been relating a strange incident.

At the outbreak of the war M. Eugene de la Haye Duponsel, a native of the British West Indies, engaged himself in the British army to fight for Great Britain and France. He was a musician by profession, and possessed a valuable violin, which, in the event of anything happening to him, he bequeathed to Paris Conservatoire of Music, so that it might serve for the use of some student too poor to obtain a good instrument. The patriotic young musician was killed "somewhere in France" in October last.

His father immediately took steps to forward the violin to its destination, but as it had been shipped on the topedoed Sussex, it was given up as lost. It turned up, nevertheless, safe and sound, and is now at the Paris Conservatoire, where it will be utilized as directed by the testator.

WATCHING TEUTON TRENCH SHELLED FROM A BOX SEAT

Correspondent Gives Impressions of Artillery Observation Post

FRENCH CAN GIVE TEN SHELLS TO ONE

Bursting of Shells Cannot Be Heard for Guns' Uproar

Special to The Montreal Star by Herbert Corey.

(Copyright, 1916, by Herbert Corey.)

IN THE ARGONNE, May 6 (by mail).—"We must hurry," said the general officer, who accompanied us. "At 4 o'clock the guns begin."

We squashed breathlessly through wet and muddy woods, on paths that wound painstakingly behind hillocks and clumps of bushes. Sometimes an open glade presented itself. Then we turned in our tracks and circumnavigated the opening.

The verb has been carefully chosen. Walking in the Forest of the Argonne closely resembles navigation. One goes by compass and the stars and fixed points on the horizon. Underfoot the forest is loose and sloppy. The soupy mud spurted under our boots.

In ten minutes the civilian members of the expedition were completely lost. Sometimes we walked boldly across wide spaces. One road we encountered was labelled quite safe. The next road—an equally wide, equally wet road, running in the same apparent direction—was out of use.

By some legerdemain the Germans were able to see stretches of it. The shelling of these stretches impaired its efficiency. We panted loudly behind the officers. The Russian correspondent took off his cap and perspired shamelessly. His head is large and very bald.

"Down here," said the general officer.

LIVELY AS BOY AT 50.

Fifty years old, this general officer, and as lively as a boy. More lively than most boys. His eye shone, and he crinkled his face in the most friendly way when he laughed, which was often. His cap perched jauntily on one side of his head and he switched at weeds with his cane. A tremendous walker, this general officer. He would pause to tell us a story and we would thankfully stop and listen to it. Then he would be off at full speed. We splashed after him, our feet slipping on things that turned in the mud.

What he called "down here" was the line of communication trenches. They were very narrow and at times very deep. Sometimes they burrowed through the shoulder of a hill and sometimes it was twenty feet to sunlight and sometimes we stooped as we walked, lest the alert German see our caps above the battlements.

All the trenches were muddy. When we met soldiers coming out we passed them by a half-turn motion. We climbed up a slimy cleft in the hill by putting our hands on either side. That climb would have bothered a goat, it was so steep and slippery.

SEEING BATTLE FROM BOX SEAT.

We had been invited to watch the French shell the German trenches. We do not know that the shelling was arranged for our especial benefit. We preferred not to ask. All we knew was that the shelling would begin at four o'clock, and that if we were in our seats we would see it.

"The 'balcony' to which the general officer referred was an artillery observation post. We raised a curtain of sacking and stepped into a cell cut in the side of the hill. A narrow slit ran across it horizontally, and there was a rough bench and a place on which to rest our elbows. The curtain behind us was pinned tight shut. If it had been raised some German watcher might have seen the light shine through the cell from the trench behind. Then——

The trenches in one angle of which we sat ran along the face of a shallow hill. Across the valley was another hill, identical in slope. Both slopes were bare and brown, with blackened patches here and there. Once they had been well wooded, but the shells had cut down the trees. For the most part they persisted only as shredded and shattered trunks.

That whole slope of the other hill was covered with pockmarks where shells had exploded. Between them a faint tracery of spring green was beginning to show. Not a sound could be heard in this forest of the Argonne except a venturesome bird that whistled as it brought straw for a nest it had blithely located in the fork of a shattered tree.

Some one, somewhere, gave a signal. Perhaps it was only that the long hand of the watch had crossed the mark of the hour. On either side—back of us—guns began to thump. On the other hillside bursts of earth and smoke told where the shells were landing.

At first the sounds of the guns seemed scattered, methodical, precise. It seemed the French were firing very slowly. I was thoroughly surprised when I found my hands cupped about Washburne's ear, and realized that unless I shouted he could not understand me. The snapping of the guns had mounted into a roar. We knew that the Germans were firing back because we could hear shells whistle overhead and see them burst near us. But we could not hear their guns. We did not even hear a shell that burst thirty feet from us. We only knew of it when an officer spoke.

TEN SHELLS FOR ONE.

The distant slope of the hill was disappearing from sight under a cloud of dust and smoke. The afternoon sun shone full on it, so that we could plainly see the clean-cut belt picked out by the French shells.

At first we had been able to see them strike on the lips of the German trenches. Sometimes it seemed as though they went in, from the nature of the explosion.

Later there was just a dull band of tan and black drawn across the hill. It mounted higher as more shells fell. Then the French guns stopped short. It was not a silence that followed, for the German shells were still breaking near us. But it was almost silence. After a moment we stopped shouting. We were abashed, as people are who are talking in church during a pause in the hymn.

"We can give the Germans ten shells to one," said the general officer, as we splashed out of the trenches. "No matter how many they send us we can send them ten for one."

NORTH END HOTEL CLOSED BECAUSE OF GAMING DEVICE

The National Hotel, 274 St. Lawrence boulevard, was closed yesterday by F. Archambault of the Provincial Revenue Office on the complaint of John H. Roberts, secretary of the Dominion Alliance.

The complaint was that J. H. Martin, the holder of the license, had pleaded guilty a couple of weeks ago to having a gambling device in his house. He was condemned to a fine of $25 and costs or one month in jail. Under article 1076 of the license law it was pointed out that the hotel had been conducted as a common gaming house and that the plea of guilty meant that Martin could not hold a license again for three years from the time of the conviction. Awaiting the necessary delay of eight days in which the holder of the license is supposed to sell his stock, and finding that the provincial authorities had not paid any attention to the case or may not have heard that Martin had been convicted for having a gambling machine in his possession, Mr. Roberts wrote to Collector Boisseau drawing his attention to the conviction.

The letter was forwarded to Quebec but in the meantime Mr. Roberts took out a writ in the Superior Court to prevent a new certificate being issued to Martin. The hotel was closed yesterday on orders from Quebec.

TRAMWAYS COMPANY MUST COME TO CITY

The city of Montreal will not go to the Tramways Company to offer a renewal of franchise, but the company will have to come to the city, if Controller Villeneuve's views are supported by the Board. Asked yesterday if he had seen a published report of a statement attributed to the mayor stating that the granting of a new franchise to the company would be discussed by the Board within two weeks, Mr. Villeneuve said:

"No project will be sent to the company by the City of Montreal. If the company wishes to negotiate with the city the proposition must come from them and then I will be willing to discuss it on its merits."

EASTERN TOWNSHIPS BOY'S AWFUL DEATH

SHERBROOKE, Que., June 2. — Alex. Dubois, eleven years of age, was burned to death today at the Albert Mines, Capelton. Entering a shed where powder was stored, Dubois opened one of the barrels, took out a handful and struck a match to see if it was dry. A spark from the powder went into the barrel, which exploded, and set fire to the shed. The flames spread rapidly. Dubois was burned to death. His three companions did not venture into the shed.

ELEVEN BILLS ARE RETURNED BY GRAND JURY

Eleven persons, including three charged with murder, will have to stand trial in the Court of King's Bench, as a result of the first day's work of the Grand Jury yesterday. Of all the accused summoned for the opening of the court, presided over by the Chief Justice of the province, Sir Horace Archambault, but four appeared, including, of course, the three detained on a capital charge who could not be granted bail. Crown Prosecutor Walsh asked that Bench warrants be issued for the absent ones, and that their bail bonds be forfeited. This will be done. It is understood, however, that the Crown Prosecutor will not insist on the forfeiture of the bail if the absent ones turn up by Tuesday next, when the Grand Jurors will have completed their work, and the petit jurors will have started to sit.

The true bills returned were: Joseph Raymond, alias Racine, alias Raymond, murder; Isabella Dominicain, murder; Phillip Lacerte, murder; William Menard, Manslaughter; Ovila Boyer and Jean B. Cote, shopbreaking; Florence Irons, causing bodily harm; Wilfred Picard, obtaining money and valuable securities by false pretences; Trefflee Picard, selling lottery tickets; Max Sabbath, aggravated assault; Paul Boulard, false pretences; Phillip Duval, aggravated assault.

The two indictments marked ignoramus were: Ildege Frennette and Arcade Frennette, theft; Georgina Lafortune, wounding.

SOLDIER KILLED BY LIGHTNING SHOCK

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, Ont., June 3.—A flash of lightning during a severe electric storm yesterday, killed Pte. William Cresor, of the 169th Battalion, of Clinton street, Toronto. Lieut. Mathews, also of the 169th Battalion, and thirty-three others are suffering from shock. At the camp hospital it was stated that while all of the stunned soldiers were suffering from their experience, no serious results are looked for. One man is reported to have a broken leg and fully a score were more or less severely burned.

OPEN ARMS

The arms of opportunity are always open to the man, or woman, who will but seek them. No one lives who has not at one time, or another, had the opportunity of "making good" presented to them. The failures are the ones who did not grasp opportunity.

Every day in The Montreal Daily Star Want Columns there are opportunities galore presented to men and women.

Are you one of those who let these slip by because you will not even take the pains to read The Montreal Daily Star Want Columns. If so, change front and this month of June determine that you will become a daily reader and frequent user of the Wants.

Alexander McEachern, of Port Huron, who crossed the line and joined the Canadian overseas forces, has been formally expelled from the Michigan National Guard for violation of President Wilson's neutrality proclamation. This is believed to be the first case of the kind.
