It is now reported that, owing to his differences with certain leaders of the Republican party in Congress, Mr. Blaine will shortly retire from the Harrison Cabinet.

It is not improbable that he would carry his party to the best part of it, and that he would be able to take the step indicated. These dissensions in the Republican ranks over vital questions of policy will for the success of that party in the next presidential election.

It should stop there. If the city would subsidize swimming baths to the extent of granting free water, we have no doubt that private enterprises would soon bring about the construction of the baths in many localities. There are many people able and willing to pay for superior accommodation, and provision ought to be made for them as well as for the large class who are not able to pay. Quite apart from the drowning question, bathing ought to be encouraged in every possible way in the interests of public health, and it is as legitimate to spend public money on swimming baths as it is to spend public money on disinfectants and the money would be spent to greater advantage.
