Chrétien: Separatists are intellectually dishonest

QUEBEC (CP) — The Parti Québécois government is trying to trick voters as it prepares for its constitutional referendum, Prime Minister Jean Chrétien said Sunday.

Instead of trying to fool people with a question linking Quebec sovereignty to association with Canada, Chrétien said the provincial government should be more straightforward.

"They should not try to trick people into saying yes," Chrétien said in a radio interview.

"We should have a yes or no based on a very honest question.

"And it's not very complicated.

"Do you want to separate — yes or no?"

Anything else, he said, "is trying to get by the back door what they don't want to give you by the front."

His comments followed a decision by the PQ and the Bloc Québécois to base strategy in a referendum this autumn on a call for a sovereign Quebec which would ask for economic association with what is left of Canada.

On Saturday the chilly relations between Chrétien and the mayor of Quebec City may have

Government's goofs and gaffes

PQ is odds with the press over contrary commentaries

By Norman Delisle

MONTREAL (CP) — The honeymoon appears to be over.

Elected less than a year ago, the Parti Québécois government sometimes seems at daggers drawn with the media.

In the provincial capital's corridors of power, it appears to be a given that the media here serves federalism because most newspaper owners unreservedly support the concept of Quebec within Confederation.

Premier Jacques Parizeau and his cabinet ministers have made that point several times.

In February, Tourism Minister Rita Dionne-Marsolais was fired as cultural affairs minister for publicly discussing the political role of Radio-Quebec, the province's television network, and then appointing a former PQ campaign worker to head it.

Shortly afterward she told a meeting of her riding association that "the mass media belong to interests linked to federalism. We must expect them to try to destabilize the government and constitutional option of the Parti Québécois."

The same month, after a series of Quebec government gaffes were reported, Parizeau accused the media of being soft on CBC president Tony Manera for meeting with members of the federal Liberal caucus.

Then at a news conference Parizeau warned newspaper owners, editorial writers and

Montreal police officers on trial

MD who saved cabbie back on the stand

MONTREAL (CP) — Taxi driver Richard Barnabé has been in a coma since Dec. 14, 1993, after he was arrested by Montreal police. The closely watched trial of five officers charged with beating him senseless resumes today.

Barnabé — arrested in a conscious state after a high-speed chase that ended in nearby Laval — was later diagnosed as having suffered severe brain damage, head fractures and a heart attack.

The trial, which is expected to last two more weeks, will hear again from Dr. France

Caza, who has testified that Barnabé stopped breathing for at least 20 minutes before he was revived in a hospital emergency room.

Caza will be cross-examined after testifying last week that she attempted several resuscitation techniques on Barnabé and had to remove clots of blood blocking his throat to make room for an oxygen tube.

Constables Pierre Bergeron, Manon Cadotte, André Lapointe, Louis Samson and Michel Vadeboncoeur have been suspended without pay pending a verdict. Each is charged with aggravated assault with a maximum sentence of 14 years in prison.

Their jury trial, which is entering its third week, heard startling testimony last week as various Crown witnesses gave their version of what happened between the time Barnabé was transported to a north-end police station and the time he was taken to hospital.

Two ambulance attendants testified that within 10 minutes Barnabé went from being conscious and alert to being comatose with severe head injuries.

Cocaine seized at border

CHAMPLAIN, N.Y. (CP) — Two Quebecers are under arrest after U.S. Customs found an estimated $120 million worth of cocaine destined for Montreal during a random check.

Customs officials are calling the 300-kilogram cache the largest seizure of drugs on the U.S. side of the border.

The cocaine was found May 9 behind a fake wall in a trailer used to transport antique cars that was being towed by a pickup truck.

The truck and trailer were randomly chosen for export examination at the U.S. Customs Export Building.

"This is the largest export seizure of cocaine on record for the northern border of the United States," said Daniel H. Letourneau, of U.S. Customs. "It is a significant disruption of the supply of cocaine to Montreal."

The driver of the pickup truck, André Chapdelaine, 50, of Laval, was charged with possession of cocaine. On May 13, further investigation led to a sting arrest of Montreal resident Lucien Rocheleau, 45, in Plattsburgh, N.Y. He has been charged with conspiracy to possess cocaine with intent to distribute.

Customs officials had been investigating the movement of commercial vehicles from the U.S. into Canada for the last six months but did not have any prior information about Chapdelaine and his vehicle.

become colder, with Chrétien on the receiving end of a public snub from the man who suggested he presides over a "banana republic."

Chrétien and Mayor Jean-Paul L'Allier attended a ceremony marking the opening of a training school for full-time and reserve naval officers.

The ceremony came 15 years after the 1980 Quebec sovereignty referendum, though Chrétien did not speak about the anniversary.

In his speech, L'Allier thanked former Tory minister Gilles Loiselle — who was a local MP — for his role in bringing the naval centre to Quebec City. The mayor did not mention Chrétien.

In the Commons late last week, Chrétien referred to Quebec City's "separatist mayor." He said the city isn't getting federal money for a new arena for the NHL Nordiques — who may leave the country — because the mayor hadn't asked for it.

"I wonder why the Parti Québécois and the Bloc Québécois are opposed to the idea of respecting the wishes of Quebec City's separatist mayor," Chrétien said in response to criticism from Quebec nationalists.

The college could have been saved — in some form, at least — he suggested, if, instead of squabbling, Ottawa and Quebec had been willing to work together.

Although Ottawa did agree to pony up $5 million a year for five years to help with such a transition, "the whole thing became a pre-referendum issue, and we weren't able to depoliticize it," he lamented.

Seventy-five of the college's 345 students were to graduate Friday and Saturday. The remainder will be transferred to Kingston next year.

Of the college's 70 professors, about 20 have agreed to be transferred to Kingston, 35 have taken severance packages and 15 are awaiting placement somewhere within the federal bureaucracy, said Daniel Lefebvre, a college spokesman.

Modernization, budget cuts close the doors

Environment Canada to close Sherbrooke office

SHERBROOKE (DW) — Environment Canada's chief meteorologist in Quebec says Townshippers shouldn't expect the quality of forecasts in the region to decline the day he pulls the plug on the Sherbrooke weather station.

"I don't see any negative impact in closing it at all," said Pierre Ducharme Thursday.

All eight of Environment Canada's regional stations in Quebec are slated to close their doors June 9, partly in response to federal budget cutbacks. But Ducharme said forecasters have been preparing to modernize operations for several years. "The Martin budget just gave us the push to go ahead," he said.

In fact, added Ducharme, weather forecasts for the Eastern Townships are already being produced at Environment Canada's Montreal offices, thanks to the development of sophisticated radar sensors.

Two new bureaus, one in Rimouski and one in Quebec City are to be added to Quebec's weather-data network. One employee at the local weather office has already found employment in the private sector, and the other will be transferred to one of the other bureaus, Ducharme said.

Although access to general weather information will continue to be provided free of charge through telephone answering services in Granby and Sherbrooke, Environment Canada is introducing a new fee-based service for clients requiring site-specific or detailed forecasts.

For instance, if a building contractor planning to pour concrete tomorrow in Scotstown needs assurances that it isn't going to rain, a meteorologist in Montreal will provide the information over the telephone for about $3.95, Ducharme said.

Of course, this fee applies only to the first three minutes of consultation; if while on the phone you also ask whether you should throw a barbecue party at your cottage on Brome Lake this weekend, you'll pay $1.50 for each additional minute it takes the meteorologist to punch up data on the computer and answer your query.

These custom climate readings are available by dialing 1-900-451-4455.

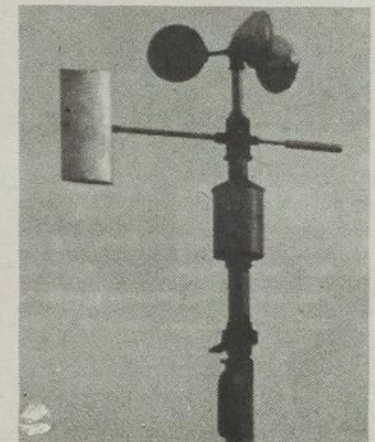

If you have a touch-tone phone, recorded weather forecasts for other regions of the country can be had for 95 cents a minute by dialing 1-900-451-4199.

Because of its topography, coming up with regional forecasts for the Eastern Townships is a particular challenge for meteorologists, Ducharme added in passing — especially in summer.

Rain systems, influenced by mountains and lakes, tend to develop suddenly and move quickly.

Wind speed and direction are still measured the old fashioned way.

"You never win," Ducharme lamented.

Part of the equipment used to predict weather in the Townships is actually located at McGill University. A radar system is used to measure the density of water droplets. This is combined with other factors such as wind speed and temperature — information collected by electronic sensors spread across the region — to come up with forecasts.

Environment Canada weather reports free — except Hidden charges lurk in weather information lines

By Sharon McCully

KNOWLTON—Country folks will have to call the city to hear Environment Canada weather reports in the future — and pay the long distance charges as well.

Gilles Brien, a spokesman at Environment Canada's new weather bureau in Montreal, explained that weather bureaus across the province are gradually being phased out, following federal Finance Minister Paul Martin's February budget. He said by this fall, meteorological services will be delivered from three major centers in Montreal, Quebec City, and Rimouski. Those living in communities outside these cities will have access to pre-recorded messages in 25 of Quebec's largest centers, Brien added.

But thousands of Quebecers living in small towns and villages outside the telephone exchange of the major centers, will incur long-distance charges to hear the weather, even though Environment Canada insists its services are free and accessible to all.

LONG DISTANCE

"Services are free wherever callers are within the telephone exchange," Brien said. "It's impossible to put answering machines in every small town, so people living in the country will have to pay long distance charges."

Last week, Communications Quebec issued a press release declaring Environment Canada's new automated, toll-free weather service was available throughout Quebec, allowing callers to communicate directly with a meteorologist in Ville St. Laurent.

Communications Quebec spokesman Olivier Dubé explained that callers are only charged for the call "if they remain on the line after someone at Environment Canada answers."

"If they stay on the line to speak with someone, they have to pay a fee, but they don't have to pay long distance charges," Olivier said. The "fees" are charged by Bell to the callers telephone bill.

One Brome Lake caller, expecting to get a weather report using the toll-free number, discovered it cost him $3.95 for the first three minutes, and another $1.50 a minute to have an Environment Canada spokesman explain the service is free of long-distance charges, but charges for the conversation will appear on his next phone bill.

Brien said the telephone company and Environment Canada will split proceeds from the calls placed to the Environment Canada line using the toll-free number.

Brien said there are no charges whatsoever to hear a pre-recorded weather report for callers able to make a local call to Granby or Sherbrooke. The number in Granby is 777-3401.

But country folk may find it cheaper to look out the window.

With its varied terrain and numerous lakes, meteorologists find it difficult to predict the weather in the Eastern Townships.

Sheep dogs and woolly charges show their stuff in Lennoxville

"I've learned more about sheep in the 24 hours than in the last three years of working at home," novice handler Fran Wheeler told organizer Dave Young after last weekend's Sheep Dog Trials at Bishop's University in Lennoxville.

Gary Caldwell's Polypay ewes were not the casual course runners of other competitions, nor the trained rats of the sheep world who have learned that trotting around the course promptly leads to the peace and security of a holding pen with their fellows; no, these sheep stood up for their right to do whatever they wanted. It took a dog of great cunning and power to march these sheep around the course.

Judge Alistair Gilchrist from North Wales found himself closer to the action than he wanted when one group of sheep thought he and Mary Ellen Young could provide security from the tedious dog that kept pestering them.

Spectators had a wonderful view of the course behind the John H. Price Sports Complex from bleachers set up for the event, and seemed to be rooting for the sheep as often as they did for the canine competitors.

Ulverton woman identified

Man to be charged in Maricourt murder

SHERBROOKE — A 46-year-old man will be arraigned in Sherbrooke Tuesday on charges stemming from the death of an Ulverton woman two weeks ago.

Nancy West's charred remains were found in a woodlot near Maricourt May 7, but her identity remained a mystery until late last week. Quebec Police Force detectives were able to confirm the woman's identity over the weekend after matching her teeth with dental records.

Last Thursday, parents of the 37-year-old woman reported her missing to the Richmond detachment of the QPF. This led quickly to a break in the investigation's impasse, QPF spokesman Cst. Serge Dubord said.

Police believe the woman was strangled to death, her corpse then doused with gasoline and set on fire. Their prime suspect in the case, also from the Eastern Townships, was arrested and detained hours after West's identity was confirmed, Dubord said.

The suspect is reported to have been an acquaintance of the victim.

Marine Transport trial back on track Paulin Bolduc back in jail after South-American trip

SHERBROOKE — Accused drug lord Paulin Bolduc has been settled into new digs at the Talbot Street Jail after a last ditch attempt to evade authorities in Colombia apparently failed.

The 41-year-old former resident of Sherbrooke and Massawippi fled the Eastern Townships in Nov. 1993, before the completion of a trial for his part in an alleged plot to import illegal narcotics into Canada.

La Tribune reported Monday that Colombian justice authorities rejected an appeal by Bolduc to quash his deportation orders, clearing the way for his return flight from Bogota to Montreal last Friday.

Bolduc still stands accused of conspiring to import $1 billion worth of illegal narcotics that authorities believe was aboard the freighter Marine Transport just before it sank off the coast of Newfoundland in April 1991.

Today Bolduc will appear before a judge in Sherbrooke on additional charges including breaking conditions of his bail. The trial in the Marine Transport case is expected to resume June 13.

Provincial police first arrested Bolduc in April 1991, a few days after the freighter's sinking.

Police divers only ever recovered 35 kilograms of cocaine from the sunken ship, but Crown prosecutors maintain the Marine Transport was carrying about 1,500 kilograms of the drug.

After his escape, investigators working with Colombian drug-enforcement officials traced Bolduc to the town of Santa Marta last April, where he was apparently living in a condominium under an assumed name.

Colombian police who arrested him on a tip from Quebec authorities found Bolduc using a phony Canadian passport.

Quebec police suspect Bolduc had connections with the infamous Medellin drug cartel.

The captain of the Marine Transport, Modesto Valerio, from the Dominican Republic, also skipped bail in 1993, just three weeks after Bolduc's disappearance.

Valerio had been awaiting trial at a commune in Ogden. He remains at large, still facing charges in connection with the case. At least some police believe he committed suicide after becoming depressed over his prospects.

Security around Bolduc is very heavy.

Gun-control 'is part of their job'

Chrétien: Provinces to pay for registry

QUEBEC (CP) — It's one issue that may well unite Quebec and several other cash-strapped provinces against the federal government.

Prime Minister Jean Chrétien says the provinces will have to foot the bill to apply Ottawa's controversial gun-control law.

"When federal governments pass laws, it's up to provincial governments to apply them," Chrétien said.

"The provinces are responsible for the administration of justice and that (gun-control) is part of their job."

Quebec's Parti Québécois, which will undoubtedly jump on the issue in its endless squabbling with Ottawa, has said it will seek up to $300 million from Chrétien's Liberal government to cover the cost of applying the law in the province.

An aide to Quebec Environment Minister Jacques Brassard says it would cost that much to set up a firearms registration structure for all the guns in the province.

That figure is a far cry from the $85 million Justice Minister Allan Rock estimates it will cost to register the six million or seven million firearms legally owned in all of Canada.

Anti-gun control groups have pegged the cost at between $600 million and $1 billion.

Ottawa hopes the gun-control bill will be law by summer.

Chrétien, who was in Quebec City on Sunday to open the first World Forum on Physical Activity and Sport, also delivered a veiled warning to Liberal MPs who vote against the legislation but stopped short of saying they would be expelled from caucus.

He said MPs opposed to the bill have had ample opportunity to express their views in caucus and elsewhere.

"I don't win every debate in caucus but I always rally to the majority."

Three Ontario Liberals who voted against the government when the gun-control bill was granted approval in principle last month were punished by being suspended from duty on Commons committees.

The prime minister finally spoke briefly about the 15th anniversary of the Quebec referendum on sovereignty-association. He had refused to comment Saturday, the anniversary of the vote on May 20, 1980.

"For me, it's not a very happy event," Chrétien said. "I get no joy from celebrating it because, among other reasons, it divided families, villages in 1980.

"We won but others lost." Quebec Premier Jacques Parizeau said he was pleased Chrétien had "the good taste" not to mention the 1980 campaign on Saturday.

"I think it's good that he not return to it," said Parizeau. "That being said, the page has been turned. We're getting ready for the 1995 vote, we're preparing the future."

Chrétien has long been criticized by Quebec nationalists for his role in the 1980 referendum campaign when he served as then-prime minister Pierre Trudeau's Quebec lieutenant.

Quebec may bill Ottawa $300 million

QUEBEC (CP) — If the federal government's gun-control law is passed, Quebec will demand "between 250 and $350 million, closer to $300 million" an aide to provincial Environment Minister Jacques Brassard said Friday.

That's what it would cost to set up a firearms registration structure for all the guns in the province if the law is passed as it now stands, the aide said.

Quebec government departments affected by the bill — including Environment, Public Security and Justice — are preparing a common position, the aide said.

Among other things, they are examining what it would cost for the province to administer it.

Federal Justice Minister Allan Rock has said it would cost about $85-million to register the six to seven million firearms legally owned in Canada.

Anti-gun control groups, including a coalition of Quebec gun owners represented by the Reform Party, have argued that the cost would be between $600 million and $1 billion.

"It costs $85 million just to buy the hardware," said Brassard's aide.

"Besides that you have to create an entire administrative structure across the province." Current firearms legislation is administered here by the Quebec provincial police.

Brassard's aide said that "since Ottawa maintains that it wants to pass the gun-control bill to protect all the citizens of Canada," Quebec gun owners shouldn't be asked to pay the $300 million required to register their weapons.

"If Canadians decide that passage of the law is necessary for their safety, they should agree to pay the whole cost," he said.

This would not be the first time the Parti Québécois government asked the rest of Canada to cover its administrative expenses. Earlier this month Quebec asked Ottawa for more than $300 million to help it defray among other things police costs arising from the 1990 Oka crisis.

That 78-day standoff was sparked when provincial police bungled an attack on native protesters upset over a golf course expansion. A policeman died in the attempt. The crisis ended only after the Canadian army intervened.

Brassard's aide said that, aside from the cost implications, the province supports most of the proposed law's provisions.

Gun laws designed to keep lid on idiot fringe

If nothing else, Justice Minister Allan Rock's new gun-control bill has shown just how large an arsenal of loose cannons exists out there.

Some of the more colorful quotes which have emerged from the debate on gun control include a clip from Reform Party Justice critic Myron Thompson in which he quotes Adolph Hitler to illustrate the 'underhandedness of governments'. (Some guys always have a copy of Mein Kampf at their fingertips.) Thompson called gun ownership "the freedom that individuals fought for in the war".

The Reform caucus passed a resolution supporting "the right of citizens to protect themselves and their property against criminal acts using all reasonable means, and their right to do so has priority over the offender's rights."

I get a little bug-eyed when I hear chest-thumping gun-owners defend their God-given right to bear arms to protect their families. I read the papers too and I don't remember too many cases of heroic stand-offs between intruders and gun-toting knights in shining armor — at least not in comparison to the number of drunk and depressed gun owners who suddenly find relief in the barrel of a shotgun. There have been a few dead heroes too, who discovered too late that a weapon is no match for a gun-wielding thief with an itchy trigger finger.

Then the U.S. based National Rifles Association joined our own bright lights, threatening to boycott hunting expeditions to Canada if this country has the temerity to irritate members by imposing gun controls. One association member went so far as to compare the Canadian bill compelling gun-owners to register their guns, to Nazi Germany, claiming "registration is the prelude to confiscation." Give me a break.

This is the same gang that solicited funds criticizing the U.S. government for banning assault weapons and "giving jack-booted government thugs more power to take away our constitutional rights, break in our doors, seize our guns, destroy our property and even injure or kill us."

It's precisely because of these armed and dangerous yahoos on both sides of the border that peace-loving Canadians have been forced to consider sweeping new regulations. Sportsmen and responsible gun-owners will have to pay the price the same way law-abiding citizens are subjected to laws designed to keep the lid on the idiot fringe.

The reasonable controls outlined in the bill hardly constitute the hooplah. Mandatory registration of all firearms, controls on the sale of ammunition, a ban on military assault weapons and some handguns, as well as tougher sentences for those found with illegal or unregistered weapons and measures to reduce the illegal importation of guns into Canada seem a reasonable balance between the rights of gun-owners and the rights of Canadians. Whether or not it will work is another question.

Letters to the Editor

We must all stick together

Dear Sir,
Re: Sovereignty Referendum.

Upon my recent stay at the Sherbrooke Protestant Hospital, last February, I noticed that over ninety per cent of the patients were French-speaking.

But they got along very well with the English patients. So why should we separate from Canada?

We do not want to separate from Canada. There is no better place to live than in Canada, and our beautiful province of Quebec is now, in Canada, so let's each one of us keep it there.

In April, I was a patient at the CHUS, when one of the doctors had told me that Quebec belongs to the French people, so, I reminded him of the war between General Wolfe, and of General Montcalm who did win that war?

I have not read in any papers since that day, when the French folks has won it back again.

During my 47 years of work, in the three different factories, in Sherbrooke, the French folks got along well with the English folks, so, let's keep it that way.

I am a captain at the Salon de Quilles Jeannot Inc., in the league #321, on Tuesdays, and in the league #522, on Thursdays, French and the English plays together, we all speak both languages.

I pray to our Lord Jesus, each day, to keep Quebec, in Canada, we must all stick together, with our Lord Jesus, ask Him, He will supply us with all our needs.

NO SEPARATION — PLEASE... KEEP CANADA TOGETHER.

Yours truly,

A distorted picture

The Editor, the Record:

Continued defiance by Marie Malavoy in light of exposure of illegal activity on her part — voting and contributing to a political party without being a citizen of the country — tells us what kind of person she is. And the attitude doesn't stop with Ms. Malavoy. Continued insufficient and/or inappropriate action by Jacques Parizeau and the PQ will confirm what they are.

Malavoy's insistence on staying on as an MNA because she was "democratically elected" (the Record, May 16) paints a highly distorted picture of democracy. Surely most voters in the Sherbrooke riding had no way of knowing last September 12 that they were choosing someone who knowingly deceived them and they should be allowed to reconsider.

If Ms. Malavoy lacks all sense of integrity and refuses to provide electors the opportunity, the party whose banner she flies ought to demonstrate that it is above such behavior. Otherwise, voters will take out their wrath on the whole party when the time comes to judge, and it will come.

Armed Forces search and rescue squad hone skills in Sherbrooke

Canadian Forces search-and-rescue workers dropped into Sherbrooke Friday for a series of exercises on Lac des Nations. Two SARTEK technicians parachuted into the lake from a C-130 transport plane flying above Sherbrooke at levels as low as 200 feet. On shore they carried out emergency first-aid on one 'victim' who had parachuted into a nearby field, and on a second who had been 'rescued' from the lake. The mission proved to be a complete success, providing practice for the rescuers and an afternoon's entertainment for the many people gathered at Jacques Cartier Park.

Feds break up cheese cartel

TORONTO (CP)—The federal government will gut the 20-year-old cartel that now controls Canada's $100-million-a-year cheese industry, the Financial Post said in a report Monday.

By allowing imported-cheese quotas to be publicly traded, the government will break up an exclusive club of 229 Canadian companies that has held a tight grip on the cheese importing business since 1975, Agriculture Minister Ralph Goodale said Friday.

"What we have provided for the first time is the legitimate opportunity for quotas to move around," Goodale said.

To protect Canadian dairy farmers from cheaper international competition, the government imposed strict import quotas on foreign cheeses in 1975. Only those companies that were importers at the time were allowed to own import quotas.

However, much of the 20-million-kilogram quota has been illegally changing hands over the past 20 years through complicated deals that often included the buying and selling of companies that had quotas, the Post said.

Quotas for cheese imported for as little as $1 per kilogram were sold for as much as $25 per kilogram, it said.

That led some companies to complain they were being unfairly shut out of a highly profitable market.

Besides opening up the quota system, the government is also screening all quota holders to ensure they are actually involved in the cheese industry rather than being shell corporations that simply rent out their quota each year.

Alcan U.S. to fight labor suit

MONTREAL (CP)—Alcan Aluminium Ltd.'s U.S. subsidiary will fight off a wrongful-dismissal suit filed by its former president.

David Hackbirth, dismissed in February as president of Cleveland-based Alcan Aluminium Corp., filed a $20-million lawsuit in an Ohio court Tuesday.

Hackbirth claims he was fired after he objected to a proposed study on whether the company could save money by not complying with health, safety and environmental regulations.

Patrick Carpenter, a spokesman for the U.S. unit, said Friday the company will launch a "full and forceful response on all of the allegations."

He said the suit's claims "are not supportable by fact."

Hackbirth has said the U.S. company did not violate any laws or regulations.

Carpenter said Hackbirth was let go during a corporate reorganization.

Schools recycle old computers

TORONTO (CP)—Old computers need never die, if Ron Smith's dream comes true.

He wants to take the old clunkers off the information highway and give them to students and others on the sidelines of the technological revolution.

Three years in the planning, the TLC Project is showing early signs of success. Already hundreds of computers have been rebuilt, tested and delivered to technology-deprived students.

A warehouse in Toronto, space donated by the provincial government, is jammed with almost 4,000 machines.

So far, the donors Smith has lined up include the Royal Bank, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Toshiba, KPMG, Microsoft and Compaq.

"Over the next five years, thousands of machines are going to be replaced as companies switch to the latest software version and need faster equipment," said Rainer Beltzner, a volunteer director of the Learning Support Council of Canada, the non-profit parent of the technology program.

The TLC in the name comes from "technology, learning and community," the three elements of the program.

Smith hopes some of the computers can be used to train homeless youth for roles in the mainstream.

Responding to a plea from the Hospital for Sick Children, Smith helped several youngsters with cystic fibrosis get refurbished computers that let them keep up with their school work even when they're too ill to attend classes.

In a pilot program this summer, some Toronto students will be trained to rebuild computers, which will then be sent to needy schools.

With up to 20 school boards angling for machines, Smith will need to hit his projection of 10,000 donations this year to keep everyone happy.

"Wouldn't it be great if we got some old copiers and had a couple of retired copier technicians volunteer to train students on how to fix them?" Smith said.

Former finance minister seeks open budget process

TORONTO (CP)—Former Tory finance minister Michael Wilson is calling for an end to the secrecy surrounding federal budgets.

Details should be released in advance to allow the public to react, the markets to pass judgment and the government to make changes before it presents a final budget, Wilson said.

"The result is that budget night would not make for good theatre, but it would make for much better policy," said Wilson, who now advises Canadian companies on international business dealings.

"Today's budget process needs to be more open, not only for pure democratic reasons but also because a mistake in judging financial market expectations can inflict heavy, lasting costs on the economy."

Wilson, who made his comments in an opinion piece published Monday in the Toronto Globe and Mail, took the first steps toward opening up the budget process to involve caucus members and the public in 1984.

Over the course of his seven budgets, he moved to expand "pre-budget dialogue."

Former finance minister Don Mazankowski and the current Liberal finance minister, Paul Martin, have extended those efforts, Wilson said.

For Martin's first budget in 1994, he held four pre-budget conferences across the country to hear from the public. This year, a Commons committee toured the country and issued a report to Martin.

But Wilson said the process should be much more open. Among his suggestions:

—If the minister of finance were to release a white paper or budget plan, including a deficit target, it wouldn't commit the government in the way a formal budget would.

—The white paper would be the subject of broad public debate that would be more meaningful, he said. Interest groups would still have a say but they would have to justify their positions in competition with other budget priorities.

—The financial markets would be able to react to the proposed budget. If the deficit target wasn't acceptable to the markets, the government would have an opportunity to make adjustments.

Wilson said one risk to his suggestions would be that tax proposals would be known and people could manage their affairs to benefit in advance.

Short Cuts

Young winners

TORONTO — A Vancouver pianist won the CBC Radio young performers competition Friday night.

Michelle Mares, who turned 24 Sunday, won the $8,000 prize, plus $2,500 when the audience at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa voted her favorite performer.

Mares and Karina Gauvin, 29, a Montrealer who won the voice category, also receive scholarships to a fine arts school.

The second prize winners who received $5,000 each were Daniel Moran, 24 of Calgary in piano and Sherri Karam, 31, a Montrealer born in Wolfville, N.S., who took the voice category.

Movie villain Elisha Cook Jr. dead at 91

LOS ANGELES — Elisha Cook Jr., the villain in more than 100 movies, including his role as a sycophantic, frustrated killer in The Maltese Falcon, has died at the age of 91.

The Los Angeles Times, quoting a Screen Actors Guild spokesman, said Cook, who had been in failing health for several months, died Thursday at Big Pine, Calif.

Cook played shifty-eyed gangsters, hired guns, vengeful ex-convicts and quiet, psychotic killers in a career that spanned 54 years from the feature movie Her Unborn Child in 1930 to television's It Came Upon the Midnight Clear in 1984.

Cook's filmography includes some of Hollywood's most memorable films, among them Tin Pan Alley, Sergeant York, Dillinger, The Big Sleep, The Great Gatsby, Rosemary's Baby, The Champ, and Hammett, his last feature film, which he made in 1982.

But he is best remembered for his role as Wilmer, Sydney Greenstreet's twisted henchman in The Maltese Falcon, which starred Humphrey Bogart and Mary Astor.

It was also Cook's favorite movie.

"There wasn't one decent person in the whole film," he once said.

Show Boat named best musical by Drama Desk

NEW YORK (AP) — The Canadian-produced Show Boat was named best musical production of the New York theatre season on Sunday by the Drama Desk, a group of theatre critics, editors and reporters.

The nearly 70-year-old musical by Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein beat Andrew Lloyd Webber's Sunset Boulevard for the top musical prize, which included new shows and revivals in the same category this year.

Show Boat is staged by Garth Drabinsky's Live Entertainment Inc.

The musical won four other awards including best director of a musical, Harold Prince, and prizes for sets, costumes and lighting.

Show Boat has also been nominated for 10 Tony Awards. The Tony winners will be announced on June 4.

The Drama Desk named Love! Valor! Compassion! by Terrence McNally the best play. It is the story of eight gay men who share a house during three summer holiday weekends.

Glenn Close was named best actress in a musical for her portrayal of Norma Desmond in Sunset Boulevard. Matthew Broderick picked up the actor-musical prize for his work in How To Succeed in Business Without Really Trying.

Ralph Fiennes, who plays the title role in Hamlet, won for best actor. Cherry Jones received the best-actress prize for her performance as a shy spinster in a revival of The Heiress. Its director, Gerald Gutierrez, took the award for best director of a play, and the production was named best revival.

Because of the meagre musical season, no awards were given for music, lyrics, book of a musical, choreography and featured supporting acting in a musical.

Unlike the Tony Awards, which recognize only Broadway productions, the Drama Desk honors Broadway and off-Broadway plays and musicals.

Stanstead Chapter IODE Marathon Bridge finale

STANSTEAD (IH) — In September 1994 until May 8, 1995, a group of Stanstead Chapter IODE members and friends have played in marathon bridge games organized by Ruby Greer as a benefit for the Boundary Villages swim project.

The grand finale took place the evening of May 8 in Centenary church hall here with several tables of bridge and two tables of 500 cards.

Gertrude Ketcham, Chapter Regent, extended a very gracious welcome to everyone and in conclusion asked for a standing ovation for Mrs. Greer.

The hall was decorated with potted plants in bloom and the refreshment table was centered with a pink African violet flanked by mauve candles in silver holders.

The table was arranged with plates of luscious home-made pies and the players chose their favorite. Beverages were also served.

The refreshment hostesses were Gertrude Ketcham, Rheta Taylor, Ursula Ruf, Carol Emslie and Aurelie Farfan assisted by others.

As the evening scores were tabulated Janice Smith was introduced. Janice is the president of the Swim Project, a fully qualified instructor in Life Saving, swimming and water safety.

In her report from the 1994 project she noted 118 youngsters registered with 103 of them achieving their Canadian and American Red Cross badges. Janice also spoke historically about the project which began some half century ago and has benefited so many youngsters over the years. She added that this project is still beneficial in this area of lakes. It also teaches leadership.

Speaking financially Janice said it has always and still is supported by local towns and municipality individuals and such organizations as the IODE and others in the communities.

The 1994 financial report was very satisfactory because the season ended with a surplus of $299.00 for the first time in years.

Janice said the total costs in 1994 amounted to $5209.65. She thanked the Chapter for the support over the years and stressed the importance for the continuance of this program.

Mrs. Greer presented Janice with a cheque for $500.00 for the 1995 summer program. She was graciously, thanked as were the card players for this donation.

Mrs. Greer announced the marathon winners: Shirley Rivard and Malcolm Stone; Claude Ostiguay and Denis Martin; Rita Cloutier and Gwen Berry.

The evening winners were Jean Graul and Phillipa Greenwood. All the winners were recipients of a prize.

Public Speaking Contest

The Sherbrooke & District University Women's Club sponsored its third annual High School Public Speaking Contest which took place at 4:30 p.m. on Tuesday, May 2 in Bandeen Hall, Bishop's University.

Fifteen high school students representing Alexander Galt Regional High School, Bishop's College School, Richmond Regional High School and Stanstead College took part. The students chose their own topics and it was obvious that they had all put a lot of effort into researching their subjects. They demonstrated insight and a depth of feeling for many important issues. The judges, club members Jan Draper and Marjorie Goodfellow, and Ian Gaskell from the Drama Department at Bishop's University, had a very difficult task when the time came to choose the winners. All the students who took part deserve an honourable mention.

Cups were presented to:

Senior Division (Secondary IV and V)

Winners: Joe Rideout - Are Bacteria a Threat to Society?

Runner-up: Amanda Loney - "The magic of the tongue is the most dangerous of all spells"

Junior Division (Secondary I, II, and III)

Winner: Spencer Whipple - The World is Unfair to the Small and Feeble

Runner-up: Billy-John Klinck - Over-industrialization.

Right — Ruby Greer presenting $500. cheque to Janice Smith.

Women's Institute meeting

CANTERBURY — The May 2nd meeting of the Canterbury branch of the W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Muriel Mayhew.

Following the opening exercises, the President read the motto: Health is wealth and it is tax free. Roll call: What would you like to do if you only had more time?

The members talked about learning to crochet, having more time to knit socks, reading, travel and do more sewing. Let's make more time for things we would like to do.

The reading of the minutes of the previous meeting was accepted. The treasurer's report was given showing all bills paid and a good balance on hand.

No correspondence was read at this time.

Convenor's reports: Agriculture — The convenor talked about Jerusalem artichokes. Being a native plant they are easy to grow, make a good wind breaker, can be eaten raw or cooked like potatoes and are pest and disease free.

Citizenship — Canada is the best place to live according to the U.N. Of the 160 countries where studies were made, Canada ranks first in the world, was our convenor's reading.

Education — This convenor gave us something to think about in asking us — Has Education become a convenient scapegoat, it is easy to blame teachers who have carried all the responsibilities society has chosen not to handle.

Publicity — Report of our activities were sent to the local paper by the Secretary.

We were reminded of the public speaking contest to be held in Bury on May 30 at the Pope Memorial School at which time a member of our branch has been asked to act as one of the judges in the event.

Pennies for friendship and tea money were collected. The lucky draw was won by Mrs. Marion Goodwin.

There being no further business the meeting came to a close and lunch was served by our hostess, bringing an enjoyable afternoon to an end.

Wales Home News and lots of activities and social events for the residents

May has arrived, so the residents are happy to see the green grass and spring flowers popping into bloom. The residents are wishing all their friends and relatives a happy spring time, also.

April has been a busy month with Kelly and all her activities. There were exercises, carpet bowling, Thursday trips to town, bingo, Friday afternoon teas, cards, 500 and Bridge, reading groups, videos, happy hour, and Sunday afternoon church services conducted by different denominations each month.

Rev. Patricia Lisson conducted

Bible study each Tuesday morning during Lent, which was very instructive and enjoyed by all. Then the Monday after Easter, Rev. Pat Lisson presided over a communion service in Solarium 1 to a very large group. It was very impressive and meaningful. Thank-you Rev. Pat.

Every second Tuesday evening Dr. Blake entertains us with special taped music. Excellent music, sometimes variety and sometimes by different composers. Thank you, Dr. Blake.

April 4. A special video was shown by Kelly of the Six-Horse-

Hitch (Belgians) on their historic trip from coast to coast. David, the driver, drove in the waters of the Atlantic, and then leaving the East at Kennebunk, Maine. Meeting bad weather in Iowa, California, until weather conditions were suitable, they then started back to Iowa, but first splashing in the Pacific Ocean. A very interesting video. Thank you Kelly.

April 10. Another video was shown entitled The Resurrection which was indeed very good. Very interesting and meaningful, and Easter near at hand.

April 11. This was a very interesting day here as the Grand Master of Masons, Charles Ramsey visited the Wales Home Lodge of Instruction. A dinner was put on by the wives and widows of the Masons at the Home in the Recreation Room on 4th floor, after which the Masons held their meeting. They adjourned to the main living room where the Masons and many residents were entertained by the Snow Shoe Club from Sherbrooke. It was an excellent entertainment. Please come again, boys.

Then the Grand Master presented Roy Johnston and George Skilling each with their 60 year bars denoting 60 years membership of the Lodge. The Master of Waterloo Lodge, Shefford #18, presented Myrtle Pope with a Mason's Widow Pin honoring her husband's long membership in that Lodge. We all thank you.

April 17. There was a special Easter Concert by violinist Elizabeth Stovensky and pianist Francine Beaubien. It was enjoyed by all. Thank you, ladies.

April 18. Ruth Lemoine and her group served Easter Tea to the residents in the infirmary in Norton 2 Solarium. Thank you, ladies.

April 19. Rev. Harding and Rev. Ruth Matthews served Easter Communion to the residents on Norton 2 and 3 and also those in Central. Thank you both very much.

In the afternoon of the same day was the birthday party for the residents whose birthday was in April. It was put on by the Danville ACW. They played a card game and then bingo with prizes. Lunch was served consisting of birthday cake, ice cream and tea. Each person received a gift. Thank you, ladies.

April 21. The students from the Bromptonville Private School were entertained at dinner by their hosts and hostesses. Then after dinner we all went to the main living room where each of the boys entertained us by giving a speech in English telling us they enjoyed coming to the Wales Home on their visits and what they planned on doing next year. Some to CEGEP in Lennoxville, some to the University of Sherbrooke, some to the University of St. Hyacinthe, and others. They have left us with their thank-yous and mementos.

April 22. The Beavers, assisted by their elders held a bake sale in the Main living room. Hope you did well. Thanks for coming.

The Friday afternoon tea on April 7, was sponsored by the Richmond Group. Those serving were Doreen Waterhouse, Marion Patrick and Wilfred Lancaster. Thank you ladies and gentleman.

The April 14th Friday afternoon tea was furnished by the Danville UCW. Those serving were Helen Healy, Evelyn Leet, Isabell Mosher and Eleanor Besmargian. Thank you, ladies.

The April 21st Friday tea was served by the Ulverton-Kirkdale group. Those serving were Pauline Smith and Helen Mallette. Thank you, ladies.

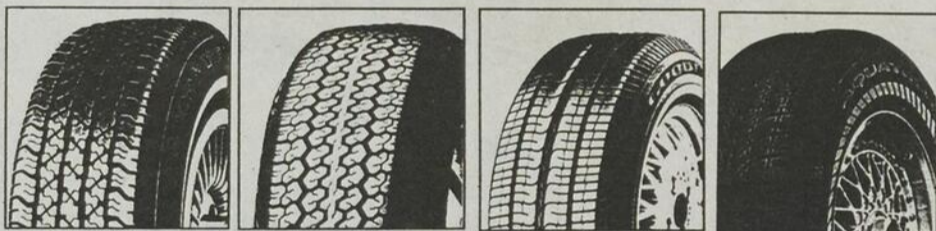

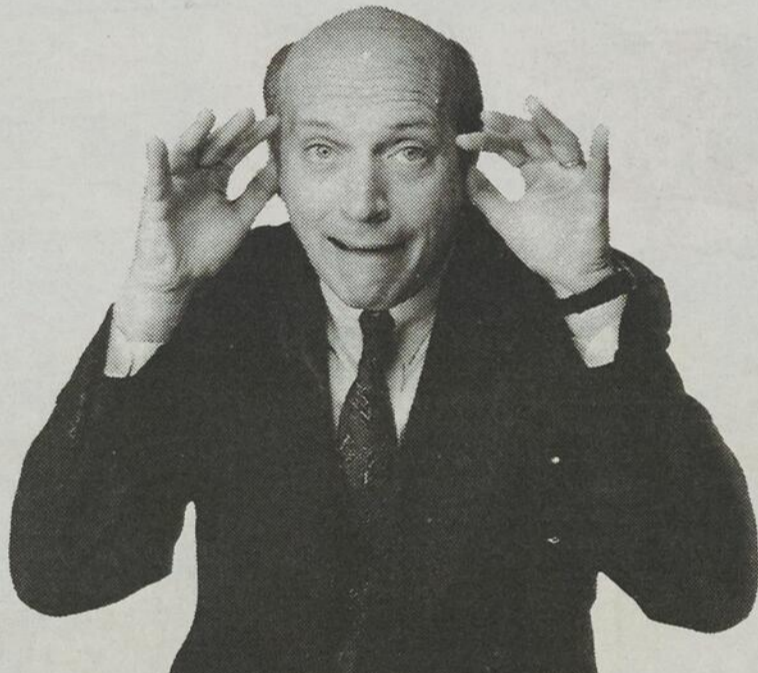

The April 28th tea was served by the Dewars. Thank you all very much. The Friday teas are very much appreciated by everyone.

We welcome Ruth Graham to the Wales Home. She is living on the 4th floor. We trust you will enjoy your home here.

Edward Loomis ended his earthly journey in April. Would the family please accept our sympathy from the Wales Home.

Women's Missionary Fellowship of Grace Chapel holds regular meeting

SHERBROOKE — The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Fellowship was held on Saturday, May 6 at 7 p.m. in the main auditorium with Clair Fisk's group in charge.

While the guests arrived Mrs. Virginia Strout played a number of selections. At 7 p.m. Mr. Fred Warnholtz, who chaired the meeting, welcomed all those who had come in from the outlying areas for this special missionary meeting when Miss Pearl Winterburn would tell us of her work in Zaire.

The meeting opened with the singing of "Rescue the Perishing" with Mrs. Virginia Strout at the piano and accompanied by Lois Shunk on the trumpet.

Mr. Warnholtz gave a few opening remarks about having met Pearl Winterburn at Bible School quite some years ago, then read from John 4:29-42 speaking of the Saviour of the World. At this point he asked Mr. Norman Buchanan to come forward to tell us of the Lord's leading him to offer his services for a few weeks in Zaire, helping them in the setting up of a computer system. He leaves around the end of May.

Prior to Pearl coming forward to give her presentation of the work in Zaire the trio, David Heath, Edna Walker and Doris Pitman accompanied on the piano by Lois Shunk sang, "He Was Not Willing That Any Should Perish". Then David Heath on his omnichord and Lois Shunk on the trumpet played "So Send I You".

Pearl, who is a nurse began by telling us about her work at the Nyankinde Mission station for 15 years, then how the Lord led her to go to another area, Lolwa, where she spent 10 years in the medical work in an organized mission setting, but now the elders came to her and asked her to consider going to a remote area in the bush to open a medical work. After much prayer and consultation with others she felt it was the Lord's will for her to move out to Tchabi which was a three or four day journey through the bush by car, but which by air takes about 15 minutes. The initial trip of course was made by car. There was nothing there, not even a house to live in so it was a new beginning. Once there the people were gathered together and told that in order to open a work there, one of the basic needs would be for an air strip. The local folk rallied and an air strip was made ready. The second necessity was for radio contact with Nyankunde and the Lord provided a radio. Children had never been to school there so a school was started. They had no idea of what school was but all concerned settled on the price of a chicken for anyone wanting to attend school so a school was started.

Pearl told of some of the existing conditions in the country and the reasons for rebellion etc., and the difficulty in finding the basic needs in life. Because of the economic situation in the country and government teachers not paid salaries to teach, schools became basically non-existent so the church elders decided they would start "Church Schools". Once again the local people rallied and built a permanent building for their school which the elders oversee and the teachers paid by the parents. Little by little the work has developed and the Word of God is taught daily despite the rebel activity and unrest in the country.

Pearl showed a video of the various aspects of the work including brick making and a brick kiln for burning bricks, the obtaining of lumber from the bush in the area, carpentry where furniture and other necessities are made, the school, the religious services including the singing, etc. Pearl also spoke of the Mission Aviation Fellowship work in the area and what an asset it is with radio contact to get supplies in and patients out if necessary.

There are two main languages in the area, Swahili and Lingala though there are also the tribal languages and French is taught in the schools.

After an opportunity to ask questions, the trio came forward and presented their second number, "Speed Away". Fred Warnholtz asked Doug Buchanan to come and close the meeting with prayer and thanks for the refreshments served upstairs when there was an opportunity for a time of fellowship with the many friends from outlying areas. The hostesses were Clair Fisk, Bea Stark, Phyllis Johnston, ably assisted by Evelyn Baker and Janet Sparkes.

Wellness Floor offers a getaway from student parties

Dear Ann Landers: This letter is for "Parents in Davenport, Iowa," whose daughter was having a rough time at college due to all the drunk and noisy students in her dorm room.

Please inform "Parents" that many colleges now offer part or all of a dorm floor and designate it the "Wellness Floor." Sometimes, an entire dorm is set aside. This program is strictly voluntary and open only to students who choose to live there. On the Wellness Floor, no alcohol or illegal substances are allowed. Smoking is not permitted.

Students sign an agreement to live by the rules of the floor. The agreement must be renewed every semester. This arrangement is ideal because it is completely voluntary, and the students who choose to live on that floor are happy to abide by the rules. The Wellness Floor at the college I attended housed students who had the highest grade point averages in our dorm building.

I believe all colleges should offer this alternative. It costs the school practically nothing to start up, and the college can actually save money because the dorm rooms and bathrooms on these floors do not get trashed and destroyed as they do in other places. I am hoping you will print this. -- GREAT NECK, N.Y.

DEAR GREAT NECK: I am pleased to share your letter with my readers. In my opinion, it is a splendid idea whose time has come. Here's another letter on the same subject:

Dear Ann Landers: Thanks for printing the letter signed "Parents in Davenport, Iowa," whose daughter is enrolled in an Ivy League school where drinking is rampant. We, too, have a daughter who doesn't drink or smoke, has high moral standards and must put up with that very same nonsense.

Ann Landers

Besides hearing about the drinking off campus and the alcohol in the rooms, we are upset about the back-and-forth visiting between men and women that goes on throughout the night. This night traffic is very unsettling for the students who are not sexually active and don't wish to be. They don't want to tell on their roommates for fear of losing their friendship, so they end up spending evenings studying outside their dorms and are ridiculed for being square.

What is happening to our universities and colleges? Are they so afraid of losing students that they are lowering their standards? Why do the authorities make it so easy for students to behave so recklessly? If it were more difficult, they would have to think twice before getting drunk or leaping into bed.

We are tired of hearing, "They are young adults, and we encourage them to make decisions for themselves." Not exactly. Many of them are still minors. We parents send our sons and daughters to your institutions in good faith, and we trust that such behavior will not be tolerated. We realize times have changed, but do they have to change for the worse? -- MIDWEST PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: So far as I know, the "standards" you refer to have been the same for the last several years.

Although college does offer a great many students more freedom than they have ever known, I believe most of the fast and loose crowd didn't suddenly get that way when they enrolled. They were that way in high school. If I'm wrong about this, I hope you readers will tell me so. I would like to hear your opinions.

Gem of the Day: To get back on your feet, miss two car payments.

One of the world's best bridge writers, Hugh Kelsey, died last March 18 at his home in Edinburgh. Kelsey wrote almost 50 books, including the classic "Killing Defence at Bridge," which improved my game more than any other book. As a player, he won Britain's premier event, the Gold Cup, twice and every Scottish national title several times.

This deal is vintage Kelsey. Sitting West, defending against four hearts, Kelsey led the diamond queen: three, two, ace. Now came a low heart. How did Kelsey defend?

Three no-trump over the double showed a game-forcing heart raise with at least four trumps.

From partner's diamond two at trick one, it was clear declarer had both top diamonds. So, three black-suit tricks had to be found. East could hardly have the club ace, but he might have the spade queen.

A spade switch was clearly indicated. However, Kelsey saw that if he led the spade 10, the "normal" card, South might get home by playing dummy's jack. After winning the second spade with dummy's ace, South would draw trumps, eliminate diamonds and exit with a spade, endplaying West to lead away from the club king or concede a ruff-and-discard. (If East switches to a club at trick four, dummy's suit supplies two discards for declarer's remaining spade losers.)

Instead, after winning with the heart ace at trick two, Kelsey switched to the spade king. And when East won a trick with the spade queen, he pushed a club through South, establishing West's king as the setting trick. No other defense would have worked.

Canada surprises Northern Ireland in soccer

By Charlie Gillis

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada climbed a few more notches on the soccer respectability scale Monday — thanks largely to Paul Peschisolido.

The tiny Torontonian thrilled 12,112 fans at Commonwealth Stadium with both goals in a 2-0 exhibition win over Northern Ireland.

The game was one of three to be played between Northern Ireland, Chile and Canada in the Canada Cup tournament in Edmonton.

For the Canadian players, Monday's triumph couldn't be overstated. It was just the third time the team has beaten a European side since 1984.

"It's great," said Peschisolido, who plays for Stoke City in England's Second Division.

"We can just build on this. We know we're a good side and we can beat the best of them. What we're trying to do here is put ourselves on the map."

Added Canadian coach Bob Lenarduzzi: "This means that Sunday we'll be playing (Chile) for the first Canada Cup. Even before the game that was our goal. Not just to be competitive or to put up a good showing."

Canada set the game pace with its speed in the first half, pressing the Northern Irish defenders to move the ball quickly. When they did, Peschisolido and the rest of Canada's speedy midfielders were quick to pounce.

The forward struck nine minutes into the match after Northern Irish defender Darren Patterson tackled Canadian Geoff Auger in desperation and the ball popped loose. Northern Irish goalkeeper Alan Fettis had no chance on the kick Peschisolido launched from the top of the goalkeeper's box.

Canadian midfielder Nick Dasovic nearly made it 3-0 before the half was finished, bouncing an arrow-straight shot off of the cross-bar.

At the other end, Canadian keeper Paul Dolan enjoyed better luck against Northern Ireland's own forwards.

Iain Dowie, a striker who plays for Crystal Palace in England's First Division, found himself alone in front at 27 minutes — only to land his attempt squarely on the Canadian keeper's midsection.

Ireland poured on more pressure in the second half. By the final whistle, they'd rapped 12 shots at Dolan — eight of them decent scoring chances.

But Dolan was solid on the shots, most of which originated just inside the penalty area.

"The keeper played a bit inspired," said Bryan Hamilton, coach of Northern Ireland. "We missed chances and defended badly on three occasions — all credit to Canada."

Hamilton refused to attach much significance to the loss. He said his team would learn to come out faster in its Thursday meeting with Chile.

But Lenarduzzi wasn't afraid to voice some excitement.

"For me it's another brick in the wall. Every game is a means to an end and the end is qualifying for the 1998 World Cup."

He then made it 2-0 midway through the half, romping past an uncertain Fettis with a pass from midfielder Colin Miller. Fans leaned to the edges of their seats as Peschisolido waited what seemed an interminable time before punching it home.

"I wanted to make sure I got around the keeper, and regained my balance before I fell or anything like that," he said afterward.

U.S. women too strong for Canucks

EDMONTON (CP) — Natalie Neaton's goal in the 85th minute gave the United States women's team a 2-1 victory over Canada in an exhibition soccer game Monday.

Neaton, a forward who didn't enter the game until the second half, redirected a cross from teammate Holly Manthei low into the net past Canadian goalkeeper Carla Chin.

The goal came 27 minutes after teammate Tiffany Milbret tied it by heading a high cross through heavy traffic over Chin's outstretched arm.

The goal seemed to deflate the Canadian women, who haven't beaten the defending world champion Americans in nine years. On Friday, the Americans hammered them 9-1 in an exhibition match in Dallas.

But the Canadians were more competitive Monday when they took advantage of U.S. coach Tony DiCicco's decision to rest six of his top players.

Canada kept up with the powerful Americans for much of the first half, which was cheered on by about 500 people scattered around Commonwealth Stadium.

They were rescued a few times by Chin, who tipped a kick by Milbret past the post to her left in the 26th minute. Seven minutes later, Milbret hit the same post and Chin fell in front of her attempt on the rebound.

In the dying seconds of the half, Canada took the lead on a goal by forward Charmaine Hooper. The speedy, compact Hooper took a cross from Angela Kelly and punched the ball past U.S. goalkeeper Saskia Webber into the corner of the net.

It was just the second lead Canada has enjoyed against the U.S. since a 1986 win.

Both teams are preparing for the women's World Cup next month in Sweden.

Canada's Rusedski will play for British

LONDON (AP) — Canadian Greg Rusedski, who possesses the fastest serve in tennis, has been granted permission to help revive Britain's desperate Canadian-born Greg Rusedski will play Davis Cup for Brits.

Davis Cup fortunes. In a decision Monday that upset some British players, the International Tennis Federation granted the Canadian-born Rusedski's request to play for the country where his mother was born.

For the Lawn Tennis Association, the news couldn't come soon enough. Britain has lost six consecutive Davis Cup matches and has sunk to its lowest-ever position in the tournament.

"I am very pleased the ITF granted Greg's application," LTA chief executive Ian Peacock said. "He is an exciting young player and I am sure he will be a great credit to British tennis."

Rusedski, who earlier this year set the ATP record for fastest serve at 220 kilometres an hour, instantly becomes Britain's highest ranked player at No. 47. Jeremy Bates, who has retired from Davis Cup play, had been the only Briton in the top 100 at No. 81.

Rusedski, who also lives in Pointe-Claire, is likely to play in Britain's next match, a relegation playoff against Monaco in Eastbourne in July. A loss would drop Britain to Euro-African Zone Group 3, the basement of Davis Cup play.

Britain's Mark Petchey said his fellow players do not want Rusedski as a teammate.

"All of us feel he shouldn't become British," Petchey said. "He played all of his tennis in Canada. He is Canadian."

"He came up through the junior system in Canada and the politics of coming through that system. Now he's got a girlfriend here and wants to buy a flat and he wants to play for Britain.

For the last three years, Rusedski has lived periodically in Surrey with his English girlfriend Lucy Connors, and possesses a British passport. Earlier this month he asked the ITF to let him play for Britain.

Rusedski's decision has not only upset British tennis players. Members of Canada's Davis Cup team feel the 21-year-old should play for his birth country and not Britain.

"With Rusedski we'd have a World Group-calibre team," said Sébastien Lareau, Canada's top-ranked player. "With (Grant) Connell, (Daneil) Nestor, him and me, we'd have four great doubles players, three good singles players and two guys in the top 100."

"In a few years we would have had a great chance to be in the top group," Lareau said while in Lennoxville last week. "Now we're in the same spot."

"With Greg it would have been a lot easier, but it's his decision. We just have to do it on our own I guess."

The ITF said Rusedski satisfied its rules on eligibility because of his established London base, and that Canada had not objected to his application. Rusedski has not played Davis Cup for Canada.

Rusedski is ranked No. 2 in Canada this year behind Lareau of Boucherville.

Haller — another ex-Canadien — scores winner Flyers enjoying overtime against New York

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Kevin Haller took a pass from Mikael Renberg on a 2-on-1 rush and planted a wrist shot in a top corner of the New York net 25 seconds into overtime to give the Philadelphia Flyers a 4-3 victory Monday night over the Rangers.

The Flyers take a 2-0 lead into Game 3 of the NHL Eastern Conference semifinal series Wednesday night in New York.

"It was a great play by Johnnie (LeClair) to get the puck to Mikael at the blue line," said Haller. "I just had the easy part, burying my head and shooting."

Renberg gave Philadelphia a 3-2 lead 25 seconds into the third period and Brian Leetch's third goal of the game for the Rangers forced sudden death.

As two Philadelphia defencemen converged on Adam Graves coming down the right wing, Graves spotted Leetch alone on the other wing. Leetch took Graves's pass and beat Flyers goalie Ron Hextall between the legs with a slapshot from the top of the faceoff circle.

Renberg snapped a 2-2 tie 25 seconds into the third period after sneaking behind the Rangers' defence.

Karl Dykhuis's pass reached Renberg at the Rangers' blue line and he went in alone on Richter, beating him with a short wrist shot high to the stick side.

As was the case in Sunday's first game, the Rangers jumped out to a 2-0 lead but couldn't keep it.

Brian Leetch... His hat trick wasn't enough.

Philadelphia used a giveaway by Rangers defenceman Kevin Lowe to cut the lead to 2-1 at 6:15 of the second period, then got the tying goal 11 seconds after a power play ended later in the period.

Lowe's giveaway behind the Rangers' net led to a point-blank shot by Renberg. Richter made the save, but the puck went to Eric Lindros, who moved out from behind the net and whirled the puck around Richter.

The Flyers tied it 2-2 at 16:36 after Rod Brind'Amour made two nice passes from behind the net.

Brent Fedyk missed the net with his shot on the first pass, but Brind'Amour got the puck back and fed Dmitri Yushkevich, who one-timed the shot past Richter.

New York went ahead 1-0 at 7:35 after Yushkevich, who'd hit the post a minute earlier, was called for high-sticking at 6:54.

The Rangers passed the puck freely on the power play before Mark Messier faked a shot from the boards, then passed across to a wide open Leetch. He closed to about 12 feet before lifting a wrist shot just under the crossbar.

The Rangers made it 2-0 five minutes later. Alexi Kovalev crossed the blue line, then chipped a pass to the Leetch, who was streaking down the left side. He one-timed Kovalev's pass just inside the far post, along the ice.

Claude Lemieux nets pair for New Jersey Devils take home-ice advantage with 4-2 win

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Scott Stevens's backhander from the slot off his own rebound with 29 seconds left prevented another third-period New Jersey collapse and the Devils beat Pittsburgh 4-2 Monday night, tying their Eastern Conference semifinal series at a game apiece.

Claude Lemieux scored twice, including an empty-netter with a second left, as the Devils got back on their game with tight checking and mid-ice traps to neutralize all of Pittsburgh's big scorers except Jaromir Jagr.

The Devils, 0-2-2 previously against the Penguins this season, again outplayed Pittsburgh at both ends of the ice and overcame Jagr's two goals to seize home-ice advantage.

Game 3 will be Wednesday in the Meadowlands.

New Jersey outshot Pittsburgh 2-to-1 for most of the game, and led 2-1 on Lemieux's goal at 7:49 of the third before Jagr tied it at 18:45, flicking a shot off defenceman Tommy Albelin's skate and by goaltender Martin Brodeur.

The goal was reminiscent of Luc Robitaille's game-winner with 1:16 remaining in Game 1 as the Devils clearly outplayed the Penguins, only to lose on a bad line change that left Robitaille unprotected.

But the Penguins couldn't hold the momentum this time, as Stevens jumped on his own missed slap shot, took goaltender Ken Wregget off his skates by faking a shot from the lower left circle and flicked the puck into a wide-open net.

The Penguins, still playing without big-hitting defenceman Ulf Samuelsson (bruised ribs), had four of the NHL playoffs' top six scorers, but only Jagr scored. Pittsburgh also lost an apparent first-period goal when Shawn McEachern's stick was ruled to be too high as he directed in Kevin Stevens's shot.

The Penguins had some scoring chances, but Brodeur, who made 26 saves, either directed them harmlessly away or the too-eager Penguins couldn't convert them. François Leroux and Robitaille both clanged shots off the goalpost and, with the score tied 1-1 early in the third period, Troy Murray badly muffed a shot on a two-on-none break with Joey Mullen.

New Jersey took a 1-0 lead for the second straight game as Scott Stevens' shot from the top of the slot on a power play deflected off John MacLean's stick and by Wregget at 6:53 of the first. Wregget had allowed only three goals in his previous three starts.

McEachern appeared to have scored the tying goal at 11:32, and it was posted on the scoreboard. Jostling for position in the slot, he raised up his stick as Kevin Stevens threw the puck on the net from just inside the Devils' blue line, and it ricocheted by a surprised Brodeur.

But officials supervisor Jim Gregory, sitting in the press box, ruled McEachern's stick was above the goalpost, and called to the ice to reverse the call. One TV angle seemed to show McEachern's stick about chest-high, but another showed the puck striking midway up his stick.

Jagr later tied it — officially — at 16:34 of the first, and the 1-1 tie held until the first of Lemieux's two third-period goals, which gave him a team-high five in the playoffs.

Hawks happy to have all-star back in lineup Roenick's quick return bad news for Vancouver

CHICAGO (AP) — The wait is over for Jeremy Roenick. It's time to play hockey.

Out since injuring his knee on April 2, the Chicago Blackhawks' best player and emotional leader will return tonight against the Vancouver Canucks in the NHL's Western Conference semifinal. Chicago won Sunday's series opener, 2-1 in overtime.

"I expect my best," Roenick said Monday. "God knows I'm not going to be the most dominant player. But I expect to make good plays."

Roenick, an all-star centre and the only player in Chicago history with three consecutive 100-point seasons, will be used mostly at left wing. His linemates will be centre Denis Savard and Tony Amonte.

"Playing wing will take some of the focus and pressure off him," Amonte said. "It's a big deal for me, playing with two of the top centres in the game."

The big deal for Roenick is that he'll be playing at all.

"The way I felt a month ago, it's ... a miracle that I'm playing now," he said. "I'm fortunate and thrilled."

After colliding with Derian Hatcher of the Dallas Stars, Roenick was told he might not even be back by the start of next season. But after undergoing tests, tests and more tests, it finally was determined that he had neither ligament nor cartilage damage to his left knee and that he might be able to return during the playoffs.

Then the soap opera began. Roenick's timetable kept getting pushed up and moved back. His agent, Neil Abbott, said he wouldn't let Roenick play for fear of further injury. Team officials — and even some of Roenick's teammates — thought Abbott was holding his client back in a bid for a renegotiated contract. Blackhawks general manager Bob Pulford even fined Roenick for missing a few rehabilitation assignments.

Finally, Roenick felt ready and got clearance to play from both a team doctor and his own physician.

He dismissed all the contract-related innuendo as "garbage."

"I never worried about it because I knew in my mind that I wasn't doing it," said Roenick, who'll wear a light brace on his knee. "I give my heart and soul to every guy on this team and I expect the same thing back."

He certainly has the Canucks' respect.

"Roenick has the heart of a lion," said Gino Odjick, the rough Vancouver forward who is coming off a two-game suspension for trying to fight the entire St. Louis team in an opening-round game. "He can play any style. He's tough. He'll hit you and you can hit him. He doesn't shy away from contact. He's the kind of player any team would want."

Montreal snaps losing streak Perez's pitching the difference for Expos

By Terry Scott

MONTREAL (CP) — Carlos Perez did everything asked of him Monday night, except maybe put extra people in the seats at Olympic Stadium.

Perez, the Expos crowd-pleasing, flashy left-hander, pitched three-hit ball and had a career-high seven strikeouts in six innings, helping Montreal end a four-game losing streak with a 5-2 victory over the Florida Marlins.

The Marlins have lost six straight and 13 of the last 15.

An announced crowd of 12,716 — second-lowest at the stadium this season — was on hand as Perez won for the third time in as many starts.

Perez, who yielded two first-inning runs, allowed a lead-off single in the third inning and then retired 12 straight batters before walking Greg Colbrunn opening the seventh inning. Perez was replaced by Tim Scott.

"I was surprised nobody scored in the first inning in my first two starts because that's been a problem for me in Double-A and Triple-A ball," said Perez. "After the first inning, I started using my split-finger fastball more because my changeup wasn't working that well.

"I got five of the seven strikeouts with the splitter."

Scott relieved and struck out the side in the seventh. Mel Rojas worked the final two innings, posting his seventh save.

Rojas, who entered the game with a slender 3-2 lead, was provided a cushion in the Expos' eighth when Roberto Kelly delivered a two-run, bases-loaded single off reliever Randy Veres.

It was the third RBI for Kelly, whose bases-loaded single brought in a second-inning run.

Mike Lansing's solo home run leading off the third inning against starter David Weathers snapped a 2-2 tie.

It was the third homer for Lansing, who leads the Expos with 14 runs batted in.

Weathers had praise for his mound opponent.

"He's got really good stuff," said the Marlins right-hander. "He's got all the antics out there but he gets the job done."

Expos pitching coach Joe Kerrigan was especially impressed by the way Perez recovered from the first inning, when he threw 25 pitches.

"He kept his poise and came back really well from that," said Kerrigan. "He shook it off like nothing happened."

Perez fell behind 2-0 in the first when three of the first four batters he faced reached base. Quilvio Veras singled, Gary Sheffield drew a one-out walk and Terry Pendleton stroked a two-run single.

The Expos scored a run in the first and second inning, although they left the bases loaded both times, drawing boos from the crowd, who seemed in a surly mood from the start.

Tony Tarasco, snapping an 0-for-11 slump, doubled to open the first and scored when Wil Cordero followed with a single Kelly tied it 2-2 in the second with a bases-loaded single.

Mel Rojas picked up seventh save of season.

Expos give Greg Harris the call Bullpen gets veteran reinforcement

By Terry Scott

MONTREAL (CP) — Greg Harris pulled on a Montreal Expos' jersey Monday, 11 years after he first played with the National League baseball club.

"I found it a little weird," he admitted prior to Montreal's game against the Florida Marlins on Monday night. "Things have changed, but there's still some deja vu."

That was certainly the case in the Expos' clubhouse a few hours before the game. The first person Harris met up with was Gary Carter, his catcher back in 1984. Carter was in Montreal in his capacity as a broadcaster with the Marlins.

Harris is 39-years-old, but the Expos are hoping his experience and savvy can help a sagging bullpen, which was lit up for 10 runs in a three-game weekend sweep by the Houston Astros.

Joining Harris in a recall from Montreal's Class AAA Ottawa affiliate was left-hander Joey Eischen. Heading to the farm team were left-hander Bryan Eversgerd and right-hander Reid Cornelius.

"Tim Scott and Mel Rojas are the only two relievers who've been throwing well each time out," said Expos manager Felipe Alou. "All the others have been inconsistent."

The earned-run averages attest to such inconsistency.

Jeff Shaw's ERA is an inflated 8.36. Cornelius and Eversgerd were at 8.00 and 7.36 respectively. Luis Aquino is limping along at 6.59. Even Scott is struggling at 4.38.

Harris, who has 12 years of big-league service, signed with the Expos as a free agent on March 27. He spent the previous six seasons with the Boston Red Sox and pitched briefly for the New York Yankees, who released him last July 13.

Harris was trimmed from Montreal's spring-training roster on the final day of camp. It left him with a tough decision — retire, seek employment elsewhere or report to Ottawa.

He chose Ottawa "since they (Expos management) kind of said the right things," explained Harris. "They told me to stay ready and they would likely make a move about May 15.

"It got a little hairy when the 15th went by and they had already recalled two pitchers. But my patience paid off."

Harris was 3-0 in Ottawa with a 1.06 ERA in 11 outings.

"I still wanted to prove I could pitch," said the bespectacled right-hander. "Actually, it might have been even tougher pitching at Triple A."

"The hitters at Triple A are free-swingers and they're aggressive. Up here, they take a longer look at the pitcher."

Alou, who has winced as his bullpen has taken its recent battering, says he won't be afraid to use Harris in any situation.

"He's a veteran and he knows how to pitch," remarked the manager.

Blue Jays take a holiday as Kansas City wins

TORONTO (CP) — Cito Gaston, like Queen Victoria, was not amused.

The Blue Jays manager watched his lineup take the Victoria Day holiday off while Kansas City hitters put on the fireworks display as the Royals beat Toronto 7-0 Monday.

"Pitching is a concern and we haven't been hitting the ball real well the last couple of days," said Gaston. "It just kind of reminds me of last year when we didn't pitch well and after a while, the hitters just stopped hitting."

It doesn't help that two key hitters — Paul Molitor and Joe Carter — are injured. Molitor played despite a sore right quad muscle. Carter sat out his second straight game with a sore wrist.

It also doesn't help that the opposing pitcher was Kevin Appier, who now leads the majors with a 5-1 record and 53 strikeouts, seven of which came Monday against Toronto.

"Kevin is a real good pitcher, but it's better to get runs on the board in order to help him in any way we can," said Royals shortstop Greg Gagne, who went 2-for-3 with a homer and three RBIs. "Anytime that Kevin is on the mound, if we get a couple of runs, we have a good chance of winning."

Appier allowed just two hits over seven innings.

"He's one of the best pitchers in the league," said Gaston. "You're going to need your A-game to beat him."

The Jays got about a D-game. They didn't hit or play sound defence. The only positive was reliever Edwin Hurtado, who struck out three over two innings and allowed only an unearned run in his major-league debut. He was called up to replace the disabled Juan Guzman.

Appier pitched a gem. The only trouble he faced was in the seventh, when Toronto had two runners on. But he struck out Ed Sprague to end the inning.

"You can't win if you can't score," said Sprague, who singled in the fifth to extend his hitting streak to 15 games. "I'd prefer a winning streak right now."

The loss was Toronto's third in a row and dropped the Blue Jays into a tie with Baltimore for last place in the American League East, five games behind Boston.

The freefall through the standings began with a 3-6 road trip that ended with a pair of losses — 10-6 Saturday and 2-1 Sunday — to the Tigers.

Is crown coin worth a king's ransom?

By Anne B. Adams and Nancy Nash-Cummings

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: Could you place a value on a 1937 Coronation Crown coin in good condition? It was found in 1945 on Omaha Beach in France. — W. SPINNING, Coos Bay, Ore.

DEAR W.: A few more details about the coin you have would be helpful. In "Warman's Coins & Currency" (Wallace-Homestead Books, 1995), there is one 1937 Crown listed with a value of $20. It's an Australian coin and it has a picture of George VI on one side and a picture of a crown on the other.

The book notes, "As many colonies gained their independence after World War II, and the British Empire became the British Commonwealth, many of these new nations kept their close ties with Britain, and retained the monarch's portrait on their coinage."

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I am unable to find an automatic turntable record player system — a plain simple one not combined with a CD system, etc. Failing that, can you get me a source for an old-fashioned portable record player with a carrying case? — ANONYMOUS, Temple City, Calif.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: The J.C. Penney catalog has a simple turntable that needs to be connected to a receiver or an amplifier. It's item #R873-2696A. To order, call 1-800-222-6161.

Now, if you decide that you want a portable record player we have two sources for you. Both are companies that sell to schools that, thank heavens, still use record players! When you call, ask for a distributor near you: Valiant I.M.C. 1-800-631-0867 and MPC Educational Systems, Inc., 1-800-243-2108.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I have been looking for a metal, not plastic, gallon water jug, with the spigot on top. So far I have had no luck. My husband farms and often leaves early in the morning and doesn't return home until late in the evening. The plastic jugs simply do not keep the water as cold as the old metal type. Also the spigot is on the bottom is not near as handy as on top, if you just want to tip the jug for a drink. — KATHY ALISON, Lyndon, Kan.

DEAR KATHY: The best we've been able to come up with is a metal half-gallon thermos bottle. Plastic has taken over the one-gallon market. The half-gallon thermos bottles are available from Aladdin/Stanley. Call 1-800-251-4535 to find a dealer near you. Readers, have you any suggestions?

STUMPED: PHONEY GOURMET — S.I. Nelson of Deerfield, Ill., saw a TV show where two women, called "Phoney Gourmet," were doctoring (improving?) TV dinners. Does anyone know who they are and if they have a cookbook out?

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: Could you tell me the best way to rid my house of silverfish without using strong harsh chemicals? I have a breathing problem. — A.C.J., Orangeburg, S.C.

DEAR A.C.J.: We turned to one of our favorite references, "Common-Sense Pest Control" (Olkowski, Daar and Olkowski, The Taunton Press, 1991), and learned silverfish like moist habitats. Often they come into a home when you bring in boxes that have been stored in a damp basement. Once they find a good source of food they stay put.

The book states, "Their primary conflict with humans arises because of their love of starch... such as paste, glue (as in book bindings) starched cotton, linen, silk and certain synthetic fabrics (particularly rayon, starched curtains, cereals, wallpaper paste and paper." Look for them around water pipes in your basement; in attics of houses with wood-shingled roofs, in crawl spaces under the house.

The first thing to do is to find the reason for the moist conditions silverfish like and try to correct them. Use dehumidifiers, increase air flow or focus heat on the damp areas to dry them out. There are dehydrating agents you can use, such as diatomaceous earth and anhydrous calcium carbonate, which is sold in hardware stores. It usually comes in small packages and can be dried out in the oven when saturated, and reused. Clean and caulk crevices and cracks where lint accumulates and allow these creatures a place to feed and breed.

Finally, try trapping them. They can be caught easily in small glass jars. Wash the jars thoroughly in hot water and detergent to remove all traces of food and oil; make sure the glass is clean and smooth on the inside. Put some masking tape on the outside so the silverfish can crawl easily up the outside. No bait is necessary. There is no point in trapping unless you dry out the moist conditions, which if uncorrected will continue to attract pests.
