News in brief

Nationalization

MONTREAL (CP)—Last November, Quebec's Liberal government won an election on the issue of a government takeover of privately-owned power companies.

Friday, the government made the issue good.

A terse announcement from Jean-Claude Lessard, president of the government-owned Quebec Hydro-Electric Commission, said that the commission now has effective control of eight privately-owned power companies.

NB election

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—New Brunswickers vote Monday for the second time in two weeks, this time in a provincial election.

Campaigners played second fiddle to the federal election until April 8. Since then they have made up in heat what they lacked in time. The result has been one of the bitterest if shortest campaigns in local annals.

Executed

MADRID — Spanish Communist leader Julian Grimau Garcia was executed at dawn today despite a clemency appeal from Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

Grimau, 52, chief of Barcelona police during the 1936-39 Spanish Civil War, walked quietly, blindfolded, to his execution before an army firing squad.

No invasion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy has denied ever promising a U.S. invasion of Cuba and has ruled out that kind of venture now. "It would be a mistake," he said.

But "time will see Cuba free again," the president told the American Society of Newspaper Editors Friday, "and I think when that happens the record will show that the United States has played a significant role."

Priest shot

VANCOUVER (CP)—A suspect was arrested and a rifle seized only a short time after a middle-aged priest was gunned down as he answered the door in a Franciscan monastery in Vancouver's east end Grandview district Friday night.

Police said the man they took into custody at a Vancouver home was a parishioner of St. Francis Church where the dead priest was rector-superior.

Rev. Cuthbert Seward, 51, was felled by a shot from a rifle at the chapel door of the monastery.

Changeover

OTTAWA (CP)—The big decisions now are up to Lester B. Pearson.

The Liberal leader, reported to be confronted with personnel problems in making the last few decisions for his new cabinet lineup, will be formally sworn into office Monday.

But Prime Minister Diefenbaker told reporters Friday that if any big government decisions have to be made this weekend, Mr. Pearson will be consulted.

Dalai Lama would welcome offer from Canada Rockies home for Tibetans?

From the frozen slopes of India's Himalayan foothills comes a suggestion that would chill the heart of any Canadian immigration official.

The Dalai Lama says he "would welcome" an offer by Canada to resettle Tibetan refugees in the remote regions of the Rocky Mountains.

The refugee God lives in an isolated bungalow on a 6,000-foot mountain ridge 300 miles northwest of New Delhi at Dharamsala, near the junction of the Kashmir-Pakistan-India borders.

He sees few visitors, and seems to welcome the chance to talk with someone who comes from the tumultuous and exciting "outside."

Sitting cross-legged on a cushion at his feet, I asked him about the fate of his people. Since his escape from Tibet four years ago, he has become resigned to the plight of his people and looks with rather despairing hope at the future.

He said the northern Canadian Rockies would make a likely home for Tibetans accustomed to the rigors and barren friendliness of Tibet.

"Anyway Tibetans would be far happier in the cold Canadian north than they are in the hot south of India," he said. "But there have been no proposals from Canada."

He said there were about 80,000 Tibetan refugees now, some of whom have been resettled in Switzerland, France and Denmark. There is even a scheme to send some to northern Scotland.

Tibetans settling in Canada is not as wild as it may at first seem. They are hardy, law-abiding, industrious and have, for some inexplicable reason, an amazing cheerfulness and good humor that never seems to leave them despite hardships and oppression.

By PETER WORTHINGTON

The Dalai Lama receives up-dated accounts of what is happening inside Tibet from recent escapees.

The crewcut God Without a Job claims the Chinese are trying to annihilate the Tibetan race. He estimates that about 1,000,000 of Tibet's 3,500,000 people have been killed, jailed or exiled during the past 11 years.

He says the Chinese are forcing Tibetan men and Lamas to work 20 hours a day building roads; they get insufficient food.

"It's so dreadful the death rate is climbing — and so is the suicide rate," he said with an enigmatic but sad smile.

He said Chinese troops are methodically making Tibetan women pregnant (to "weaken the Tibetan strain") and that children are taken from homes and re-educated to oppose Tibetan ways.

Metal religious images are melted down and forged into bullets; clay or pottery sacred artifacts are smashed on roads and Lamas are forced to trample them to dust; holy prayer scriptures are used as toilet paper or ground into manure.

Unarmed Tibetan civilians were used in the van of Chinese "human wave" assaults against the Indian army last fall.

"They are trying to exterminate our race, our culture, our religion," said the Dalai Lama flatly.

It's impossible to be in contact with Tibetans and NOT to feel a great warmth and sympathy for them.

Their courage and cheerfulness serves, somehow, to emphasize their plight and hopelessness. (TNS)

White Angolan nationalists threat to Portuguese colony

By RONALD LAWRENCE

LUANDA, ANGOLA — (TNS) — White Angolan nationalists are the real threat to Portugal's dominion in this west African territory.

The ragged UPA "army," barely 800 strong and ringed by veteran Portuguese troops, has little chance of upsetting Lisbon's control.

But a tide of nationalist feeling that is spreading among the Portuguese settlers throughout this land is a danger Portugal is trying frantically to remove.

Some of the settlers are newcomers from Portugal, the majority are third, fourth and fifth generation Angolans, who call themselves White Africans.

A large group of mulattos is ready to step into the ring and second the aims of its white cousins and some 3,000,000 peaceful Negroes would quickly throw in with the nationalists.

The settlers want autonomy and they want to create a multi-racial republic similar to Brazil.

"They want to be rid of 'Metropolitan Government,' as they refer to Lisbon's control, and they want to be free to encourage foreign migrants and investors into their country.

A coffee planter in the north told me, "Portugal has been milking Angola for two many years, taking out, but putting very little back in. Right now some development is taking place, but that is because of the terrorism, which has forced the issue."

A rancher in the south said this: "We don't want to break completely with our mother country—we'd like to work with Lisbon, in a mutually profitable partnership—but we must have control of our own land and our own destinies."

Political situation improved

Social Credit novelty wears off

QUEBEC CITY — (TNS) — Although the country as a whole has elected a third minority government in less than six years, the Canadian people may look forward to the future with confidence.

The deadlock it was feared Quebec would produce again has been removed from the political scene, thanks to an excellent Liberal performance. It is most likely that we may now on expect Quebec to contribute its share to stable and sound government, which Canada needs so badly at the present time.

The climate of uncertainty and dark forebodings which had been created following the June elections has been cleared to a great degree.

Although the Social Credit Party has gained two more points in the percentage of the Quebec popular vote, from 25 to 28 per cent, the spreading of the vote given to that party throughout the province has resulted in a loss of six of the 26 seats it had in the last short-lived Parliament.

The huge majorities Social Credit obtained last June in many constituencies have mostly been sharply reduced. For example, Dr. Marcoux, who had been given a majority of more than 20,000 votes in Quebec-Montmorency, this time won by a mere 2,000.

The Sacred vote in Montreal area was better than expected. However, the expected Sacred wave in the Lower St. Lawrence and Gaspé region failed to materialize. This was the hardest blow the Sacred received in the election.

The great Conservative Party has once more virtually disappeared from the political map of Quebec. It retained eight of the 14 seats held previously.

But, far more important, the percentage of the popular vote given to that party reached an all-time low (except for the aberrant 1947 election) of about 19 per cent, a sharp loss of more than 30 points from its record performance of 49.5 per cent. In 1958 and a drop of more than 10 points as compared to June last.

The NDP will take solace in the fact that its percentage of the popular vote has climbed from four to seven per cent. But not only did it fail again elect a single candidate; it was unable to capitalize to a noticeable degree on the issue of nuclear armament and it was frustrated in its ex-prediction of important gains in Ontario.

The national Liberal Party has regained its former stature in Quebec.

The electoral returns bear, of course, no absolute comparison with 1953 and 1957, neither in terms of percentage of votes or of seats won. The Liberal Party's percentage of votes is even a little lower than in 1958, when it elected only 25 candidates. However with 46 per cent of the votes it elected 47 candidates, which is an impressive performance under the circumstances.

More important still, most of the outstanding Liberal candidates were elected, among them Maurice Lamontagne, Jean-Luc Pepin, Rene Tremblay, Guy Farreau, Lionel Chevrier and Maurice Sauve.

Mr. Pearson will find himself in an uneasy predicament when the time comes for him to exclude some of those and also some other able men from cabinet posts.

The election returns indicate that the provincial election of November last, which ended in a big triumph for Mr. Lesage and the Liberal Party, markedly influenced the April federal election.

I would suggest that many people were impelled to vote the Liberal ticket for considerations of provincial policies. In launching personal attacks against Premier Lesage, Real Caouette put on Daniel Johnson's boots a d got out with similar results.

The Sacred Party could not have the same appeal this time as in June last. It had lost its character of novelty. Many people who voted that party's ticket then only wished to register a vote of protest against the Diefenbaker Government. They did not intend to elect Sacred MPs.

This time, the Liberal Party was aware of the danger the Social Credit Party represented to it and to the country.

Assailed by the unremitting and harsh attacks from the Liberals, decry by many independent-minded people, the Sacred finally yielded to their adversaries.

They lacked both the money and the organization to counteract successfully the all-pervading Liberal propaganda.

However, with 28 per cent of the popular vote, the Social Credit Party still commands respect and attention as a movement of protest. But it has lost the strategic position it held in the past Parliament. And it is probable that the Sacred will be completely dropped by the electorate at the next turn of the road.

From sheer fatigue perhaps more than from conviction, a decisive fraction of the electorate in Quebec shifted from Social Credit's slogan: "You have nothing to lose..." to the Liberal plea for a stable government.

PAYOLA RUNS NIGERIA

By WARD CANNEL

LAGOS, Nigeria — (NEA) — Leaving aside your two-penny morality, there is considerable advantage in a government run by payola.

In Nigeria today — usually held to be the West's staunchest ally in Africa and the continent's most stable democracy — a shilling strategically placed on the bank counter avoids a tedious wait in line, and a strategic official rightly buttered expedites all manner of necessary documents.

"A little corruption in high places is a big help," says an investment counsellor in Lagos. "It oils the wheels of progress. It makes the right officials easier to find. It is the businessman's friend in a country that needs business."

It is also a great consolation to any young Nigerian who can read and write and has a relative in office.

Under British colonial rule, a sixth-grade education for a Nigerian was the route into the civil service and an assured future. But today over half of the sovereign country's budget is going into education and it's obviously who — not what — you know that counts.

If you're that relative in office, what system of government could be better than Nigerian Democracy.

It is a comfort to know that you don't have to rely on your salary. It is equally reassuring to know that your station is your brother. In a federation shot through with tribal, religious and sectional antagonisms one can hardly be too careful about one's allies.

This is not to say that the system in Nigeria is perfect — although one European diplomat with global experience insists that it is the most corrupt administration he has ever seen. But the country is only three years old and there are bound to be some dislocations resulting from youth.

For one thing, there is the Swiss manufacturer who says: "I paid off an official for a permit, but he was apparently not the correct official. I paid off several others before I found the right one. It has been very costly."

There is, too, the U.S. businessman who says: "I didn't mind paying off. But why did I have to wait three years on top of it before I got the okay to go ahead?"

But if the operation is not yet working smoothly for the outsiders, it is equally difficult for the establishment.

In the first place, the country's three regions are divided as much by religion and heritage as by geography. Where a Moslem from the North works on the age-old principle that "God will help a Christian from the West contents staunchly that "God helps only those who help themselves."

Consequently, it is difficult to inspire agricultural, industrial or educational change in the North which dominates the federal government.

On the other hand, self-help in the West has led to the jailing of a political party leader, Chief Obafemi Awolowo, and the disappearance of at least $70 million from the regional treasury.

They lacked both the money and the organization to counteract successfully the all-pervading Liberal propaganda.

However, with 28 per cent of the popular vote, the Social Credit Party still commands respect and attention as a movement of protest. But it has lost the strategic position it held in the past Parliament. And it is probable that the Sacred will be completely dropped by the electorate at the next turn of the road.

From sheer fatigue perhaps more than from conviction, a decisive fraction of the electorate in Quebec shifted from Social Credit's slogan: "You have nothing to lose..." to the Liberal plea for a stable government.

Emigration to the United States

Manpower drain may be sapping country

While Canadians keep a wary eye on the 56 per cent of Canadian industry owned by Americans, a manpower drain may be sapping the country without much being done to stop it.

The question is: How many Canadian brains are being skimmed along with the cream of the profits?

Money lured 47,470 Canadians south in the year ending June, 1961. But it wasn't the only reason they went.

Neither does the figure of 47,470 tell the real story. It doesn't because there are more traps in statistics than is generally realized.

The flat fact is no one knows precisely how bad the situation is.

Those who should know are aware only that Canada loses more engineers, doctors, technicians teachers and scientists than it gains by immigration.

If it is possible to set up a foolproof system, the federal labor and immigration departments have never got around to it.

Yet, this does not stop them from spouting yards of statistics and charts. They go on doing it year after year — with one set of statistics often contradicting another.

The Canadian government leaves it to Washington to report that 3,541 of the 47,470 entering from Canada in one year were professional or technical personnel.

But even the hawk-eyed U.S. Immigration Department does not define how many of the 3,451 carried diplomas and how many toiled tools.

DOCTORS
The Canadian Medical Association recently cited one Labor Department report, which listed only two Canadian doctors taking post graduate training in the States.

The CMA called it "a totally unrealistic figure", because Canada's 12 medical schools graduate around 900 doctors a year — 25 per cent of whom take their first internship in the United States.

The Labor Department says in a recent booklet: "To evaluate properly the contribution of immigrant professionals or the loss represented by the emigration of professionals would require statistical and other data that are simply NOT available."

But, on the same page it declares: "Looking at the outflow of Canadian professionals to the United States, there is NO denying that this movement constitutes a SEVERE

Show Business

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The time has come for our annual dirge for television's losers, the shows that won't be back next season.

It's a sad business, saying farewell to those series that started out with fond hopes of being another Dr. Kildare or a Hazel but never made it.

Is event sadder to bid goodbye to those successes that have lived their span and must shuffle off to syndication. All series must face it some day, unless they're Ozzie and Harriet or Ed Sullivan.

And so, so long to The Untouchables; too bad you ran out of ammunition.

Goodbye Hawaiian Eye and Going My Way.

McKeever And the Colonel and Ensign O'Toole, you're discharged.

Rifleman, you've shot your wad.

Lloyd Bridges, back to your aqua-lung.

The Voice of Firestone will be stilled. Sadder yet is the loss of Dick Powell Theatre.

Sam Benedict, you've handed your last case.

CAR 54 IS LOST

Car 54, Where Are You? cancelled, that's where.

The network ride was too rough for Stoney Burke and Wide Country.

And Laramie. The Dakotas and Empire will be riding off into the sunset.

There have been a lot of laughs with Dennis the Menace, Real McCoys and Dobbie Gillis, but not any more.

I'm Dickens, He's Fenster are finished, as are Our Man Higgins and Leave It To Beaver.

Jet off, Jetsons.

Goodbye, too, Naked City. Coming back soon, Fred Astaire.

Goodbye, too, Naked City, Stump the Stars.

Goodbye, all of you. Sorry you have to move over for the bright new shows that will be taking your time slots this fall, most of which—alas—we'll be saying goodbye to at this time next year.

INVERNESS — Rev. Canon Meade, of Theford Mines, officiated at the communion service held on Easter morning in the Church of the Ascension. At the same service the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Patterson was baptized, receiving the names, Wilma. The beautiful flowers on the altar were in memory of the late Mrs. Daniel Lunnie, given by the family.

Mrs. Geddes, of the teaching staff of the Inverness school, is spending her holidays in Sherbrooke.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Lunnie and family, of Waterville, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Little.

Rev. Mr. Durrett was in Theford Mines recently as a guest of Rev. Canon and Mrs. Meade and assisted at the Easter services.

A joint service of the United and Anglican congregations was held in St. Andrew's church, Mr. MacNeil in charge, Rev. Mr. Durrett delivering the sermon.

Mr. Walter Cook spent the weekend in Montreal, with relatives.

About Television

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — In the good old days of television the presumption was that programs starring Loretta Young, Barbara Stanwyck, June Allyson, Jane Wyman and other female stars interested primarily the women of the audience.

One of the ratings services recently made a special survey among women viewers and reported (in the current issue of the trade magazine Broadcasting) the evening network programs most appealing to feminine viewers.

Not surprisingly, the survey found women enjoy all the medical shows, with Ben Casey and Dr. Kildare in the top spots, and The Nurses and 11th Hour not far down on the list.

But all of the programs dearest to feminine hearts are drama—not a comedy effort in the batch: The Defenders, Dick Powell Theatre, Going My Way, even Lassie.

There is just one western in the top-10 list: Empire, a contemporary show and not really a classic western. Its plot lines often are loaded with soap-opera dramatic clichés.

Take, for instance, the tale to be told in the April 30 episode: The hero, Jim, is paralysed by a fall and faces a life in a wheelchair. Will Jim ever walk again? Yes, because a beautiful paraplegic (played by Inger Stevens) falls in love with him and they decide to face risky operations together.

'STONEY' FOLLOWS

By a curious coincidence, there is also the May 13 episode of Stoney Burke, hardly a sentimental woman's show because it concerns a rodeo rider. In this program, Stoney is trampled by a wild horse and can't move his legs. Will Stoney ever walk again? Yes, because a 15-year-old invalid boy inspires him to get back on his feet.

And how about the number of amnesia cases encountered on the rugged, man's-world evening action shows? Scarcely a hero is shooting and riding, including good strong Hoss Cartwright of Bonanza, who hasn't suffered a touch of this complaint, so popular this season. Amnesia of course, has been epidemic on the hospital shows.

Meanwhile, it's been a long time since a writer of a daytime serial touched such tired themes.

Broader in scope Photo contest starts on April 22

Amateur photographers are again being given the chance to compete in the Sherbrooke Daily Record's annual spring photo competition.

The opening date is April 22 and entries will be accepted until midnight, May 24.

This year we have broadened the scope to include all aspects of spring from the sugar bush to blossom time. There will be a ten-dollar first prize and two honorable mentions. All three winning pictures will be published in the Record on the completion of the judging.

By including the beautiful transition of spring we hope that sometime during this period our photo fans will be able to capture, in their own style, a photographic image of spring, displaying mood and simplicity.

What will the judges be looking for? The winning print will have sharpness and will definitely include some subject related to spring.

This will probably include subject matter such as sugar bush scenes, crocuses, and perhaps later, apple blossoms, or you may have your own ideas on what represents spring.

We might add that the judges may favor pictures which include human interest, although a word of warning is in order. Don't have more than two people in the picture, one would be much better. This will facilitate better composition and grouping, and control of the subject is more easily obtained.

Rules and regulations are simple.

1. The contest opens April 22 and closes May 24. All entries must be postmarked not later than May 24.
2. Any photograph, color or black and white, may be entered. Photographs will be judged by their originality and composition, and not for color value.
3. Pictures must be sharp. Those that are blurred or badly-exposed will be automatically disqualified.
4. Picture size may be from 3x3 inches up to 8x10 inches (glossy preferred).
5. Color transparencies and slides are acceptable.
6. Pack for maximum protection and mail photos to Sherbrooke Daily Record, 119 Wellington Street North, Sherbrooke, P.Q. Write the words "photo contest" clearly on the outside of the package.
7. Be sure to include your name and address, which should be typed or block lettered on a piece of paper and attached or glued to the back of the picture. Writing on the back of a print may damage the picture for purposes of reproduction.
8. All entries will be returned if desired.
9. If people are included in your photograph, give their names and from what city or town.
10. The decision of the back of a print may damage the picture for purposes of reproduction.

To describe goods tests at meeting

Work done by the provincial branch of the Consumers Association of Canada, particularly the testing of consumer goods, will be explained in Sherbrooke April 29.

Mrs. S. Charters, president of the Quebec (Provincial) branch will address a special meeting of the Sherbrooke-Lennoxville CAC at Mitchell School, starting at 8 p.m.

All members, as well as the general public have been invited to attend.

Products made by Sherbrooke manufacturers will be displayed. Contributors are Domil, Dominion Textile, Paton Manufacturing, Prospect Shoes, Austin Glove Manufacturing, and G. Morgan Gloves. Glenhill Knitwear will display sweaters.

judges will be final. All entries, while in our possession, will receive maximum care but we cannot accept responsibility for any damage or loss.

With the opportunities unlimited we feel the photo fan should enjoy many hours of photo fun, and by entering the contest will have the chance of winning $10 or honorable mention for his effort.

WHAT A TIME FOR PICTURES! This is what the lamb above seems to be telling the photographer. But there should be no complaints because they are getting an extra meal. Grain was sprinkled on the ground to center their attention and keep them in one spot. One of the signs of Spring are young lambs. These frisky lambs were taken at Wes Nichol's farm, Lennoxville. They will perhaps give you ideas for the Record's photo contest. Taken with a Rollicord Camera 1/250th of a second, F16, Verichrome Pan film. (Record photo by Doug Gerrish)

Judge didn't think so 'Moonshine' in water main?

Worms, leeches and twin-tailed eel-like creatures have all come out of Sherbrooke water taps in the past.

Friday, however, the court of sessions in Sherbrooke was presented with the idea of "Moonshine" in water main? By LEONARD RYAN (Record staff reporter) that the city's pipes run with "moonshine."

During the trial of Renaud Martel of Stratford on a charge of possessing illicit alcohol, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police produced an analysis of the contents of a bottle found during a raid at Martel's home.

It contained a high percentage of alcohol, according to tests made in Ottawa.

Martel said the contents of the bottle taken from him could not have been the same liquid that was sent to Ottawa.

He said he had been taken by the RCMP to Sherbrooke after they raided his home last December.

He had been left alone in the Sherbrooke office for a few minutes while Constable G. A. Rugenius made a telephone call, he said. The bottle was on a desk, he said, and he emptied it down a sink drain and refilled it with water from a tap.

It had contained wood alcohol, and he had thrown this away "to protect his reputation," he added.

"If it was water, how did it happen that the analysis showed it was alcohol?" asked Judge Evender Veilleux. "As far as I am concerned, it was Sherbrooke water," Martel said.

Constable Rugenius said that he and the other men were under orders never to leave unattended anyone taken into custody. He denied that Martel could have had access to the bottle at any time after it had been seized.

The bottle had contained three ounces of liquid, he said.

Gerard Chapdelaine, attorney for the defence and Social Credit MP for Sherbrooke, said it was unreasonable to charge a man for the possession of such a small

His farm is refuge for geese From huntsmanship to conservationist

GRANITEVILLE — (Special) — A Rock Island machinist who lives on an acre of farmland beside a brook here is a convert from huntsmanship to conservation.

Clifford Rediker's land is populated with five species of ducks and geese he raises, and is visited every migration season by wild cousins of his birds.

"In the old days, I used to go up north and bring down the limit—20 birds. Now if I go out it's more likely to be with my binoculars and movie camera than with a shotgun," he says.

He has also become a bird surgeon, patching up the injured birds that come to him from various sources — neighbors who know of his work, or passing flocks which seem to sense that leaving their maimed members on the Rediker property is leaving them in safe hands.

On April 5, for example, Mrs. Rediker saw a migrating flock of white snow geese alight on the property, leave an injured goose on the ground, and fly off.

She fed it, and it stayed several hours, but it was able to fly again before Mr. Rediker got home from work to try some repair work on it.

An injured Canada goose which landed last November, however, had its wing stitched up with nylon thread and is still here. Mr. Rediker hopes it will feel equal to flying out on its own this summer.

The Redikers, who have a son, Dale, 18, living with them, have mallard, wood and muscovy ducks and Canada and snow geese nesting on their property. Most were bought, or hatched by birds they bought. Others arrived, tame or wild, injured or sound, and stayed.

Mr. and Mrs. Rediker have both observed flocks flying around injured birds to encourage them, and even giving apparent buoyancy to the injured by flapping their wings immediately below them.

It is the resident birds on the ground or water which seem to attract such wild birds to land at the Redikers'—and the attraction is so strong that Mr. Rediker has twice had to sign a commitment to pay $300 if he ever uses his flocks to decoy wild ducks into shooting range.

The Redikers do kill the odd bird to eat, however, and Mrs. Rediker says duck eggs are excellent for cooking. "They're richer than hen's eggs," she says, and is speaking from experience, because she has raised chickens longer than she has ducks.

Friday night, April 26th, is Pond Inlet night at Lennoxville High School for all the Cub Packs in the Sherbrooke district. The purpose of this evening is to learn from films, facts, and activities, a little more of the kind of life our Eskimo "Twins" lead. The Second Lennoxville Pack will play host for the event and a snack may be provided afterward. Pond Inlet is located at the northern tip of Baffin Island. Two RCMP officers run a Cub Pack consisting of fourteen Eskimo boys.

TRAINING
Applications for Scouter Training are still being accepted by provincial headquarters. These courses are invaluable to all leaders and of great benefit to a group. Group committee members are urged to encourage their leaders to take advantage of every available course. The monthly newsletter from provincial headquarters gives details as to the courses to be presented during the summer months.

DISTRICT MEETING
An executive meeting was held April 16 with the following executive attending: Stan Lothrop, Fred Hicks, Don Atto, Ray Thorne, and D. Durrant. The agenda was drawn up for the district council meeting to be held at the Bury Legion Hut on April 23 at 8:00 p.m. The items of new business on the agenda are of interest to all groups so make a point to have your representative attend.

YAMASKA VALLEY
Correspondent Pearl Page of Cowansville reported that over four thousand used stamps have been collected and sent to Ottawa. These stamps will be used to help finance World Scouting for the handicapped.

A successful plant and flower sale was carried out on April 13 by the Cowansville Red Pack. Thanks are extended to the fathers who gave their time and cars to help make this project a success.

AGAINST RULES
The group of Scouts of the Bund Deutscher Pfadfinder had planned their Good Turn project — on Sunday J. 20th, between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m., fifty of their members ranging in age from 15 to 18, would work to clear the streets of snow as a service to the town. This caused a great deal of consternation to the municipal authorities however — five hours did not constitute a full shift, the workers were under age, and an entry of "no payment" would upset the accounts. So a compromise was offered: the boys should work a complete shift and receive 20 Marks each for the job, but no one under the age of 16 should take part in the project. The workers were adamant however, and held out for their rights — no victimization on account of age, and no remuneration for Good Turns. It is reported that the authorities were finally forced to accede to their terms! From: "Jungelleben" — Bund Deutscher Pfadfinder)

Better hunter-farmer relationship

Hunting has long been a free and uncluttered sport, with the appeal of wild, wide-open spaces and unchecked roaming chief among its attractions.

But, in populated areas of the country at least, this atmosphere may well be coming to an end. Hunters are growing in number every year. Land development continues apace. Those wide open spaces of forest and mountain are becoming more and more crowded. Some sort of regulation is obviously needed in the interests of all concerned.

Many hunters are, in the strictest sense of the world, trespassers. They enjoy their sport, when it is not on some sort of club property, on land that doesn't belong to them and seldom do they pay for the privilege. Up to a point, this causes little trouble. But when farmers and other land owners have their property invaded by hordes of free shooting sportsmen whose concern for the chase is matched only by their unconcern for the property on which they are enjoying themselves, then the situation sometimes becomes a bit sticky. Quite rightly, the landowner doesn't see why he should leave his stock, fences, buildings and trees open to possible damage by every Tom, Dick and Harry with a rifle and a penchant for roughing it.

The Quebec Federation of Fish and Game Associations is presently circulating a questionnaire which it hopes will provide the basis for the development of better hunter-farmer relations in this province.

The Association points out that the alternative to this development is either no hunting in many areas, or "pay hunting" in which landowners are paid by hunters who want to shoot on the former's land.

The Federation's attitude is a healthy one. It reflects a growing concern on the part of both farmers and responsible hunters that already exists in many parts of Quebec. In Brome county, for example, hunter-farmer developments to regulate the sport have begun. There are signs that similar projects will shortly be undertaken in Compton county.

All of this is directed towards a common end: to protect hunting and the resources that contribute to it from the damaging effects of haphazard, uncontrolled sport.

Mr. Pearson strong on experience

When Hon. Lester Bowles Pearson takes over as Prime Minister of Canada at noon on Monday, he will have reached the zenith of a career in public service which began thirty-five years ago. Thus, while a newcomer to the post of chief executive, Mr. Pearson has had a great deal of experience in governmental affairs, as a civil servant, as a diplomat, as a Member of Parliament and as a cabinet minister.

The new Prime Minister first entered the public employ in 1928 as first secretary to the Department of External Affairs. During the next few years he served in London and Washington. In 1944 he became Canada's minister to the United States and the following year was named ambassador to Washington. He culminated his career in the diplomatic service with his nomination as Undersecretary of State for Foreign Affairs in 1946, the top post in the diplomatic service.

Two years later he joined the Liberal Government of Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent as Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in which post he earned an enviable reputation through the world which was highlighted by his winning of the Nobel Peace Prize in 1957. Early in 1958 he succeeded Mr. St. Laurent as leader of the Liberal party and leader of the Official Opposition.

During his long experience in governmental and civil service fields, Mr. Pearson has displayed those qualities of prudence and diplomacy which should serve him well in the days ahead. Lacking an overall majority in the Commons, the Liberal Government will have to blend its program of positive action with a degree of caution and compromise which can win for it the support of one or more of the Opposition groups. In this respect, the new Prime Minister appears especially well equipped.

Haydn S. Pearson's COUNTRY FLAVOR

More to fishing than the catching

Psychologists tell us that men and women have basically different reactions to certain activities. This is not news to men who are blessed with a wife and daughters. A man learns early that his approach to certain situations and that of his women folks is fundamentally different.

Fishing is an apt illustration. A man knows that fishing is essential to his well being. He feels justified in expending capital resources for rods and reels and other accoutrements. As he gets out his equipment and prepares it, the remarks he hears concerning the cost per pound of fish do not discourage him.

The point is that a man who enjoys fishing knows that fish per se are a side issue. Of course, a man is not disappointed when he brings home a good catch. Women folks think a man should always catch fish when he goes fishing.

A man knows that fishing is much more. It is the chance to get off by himself beside a singing brook or on a peaceful woodland pond. It is the feel of warm sun on the back of one's neck and the whisper of a south breeze. Fishing means time to sit by a creek and watch the waters pour by on their way to the sea. It is the chance to listen to bird calls from meadow and woodland, and to hear Nature's music instead of the cacophony of the marketplace.

We do not know why some men like to fish and others prefer a different form of recreation. That is not important. A man must march his trail according to the drum beat he hears. But those men who feel the call when spring is here, know that when they go fishing they always have good luck. A day in the open with the sun and the wind brings something that they cannot find elsewhere. They agree with Isak Walton who said, "I have laid aside business and gone fishing."

Other papers say:

Kennedy in new approach to steel

The latest encounter between President Kennedy and the U.S. steel barons is a delicate minuet beside the head-on collision that occurred a year ago.

The steel companies have waited a decent interval before trying again what they so conspicuously failed to do last year. This time Mr. Roger Blough, the president of U.S. Steel, did not bluster into Mr. Kennedy's office with the news that Big Steel had increased its prices; the first moves came quietly from smaller producers. Now larger companies are following in their turn.

Ottawa Journal.

The President must quickly take the companies in the restraint of his first reaction. While his victory last year as dramatic, it has resulted in a profound and continued suspicion of his administration by the business community. Mr. Kennedy will not fulfill an election pledge he has not so far delivered, the pledge to "get the country moving again" without the support of business.

John Maynard Keynes, called the patron saint of Mr. Kennedy's economists, wrote that the "animal spirits" of businessmen are indispensable to a buoyant economy.

The President must quickly take those spirits.

Mr. Kennedy wants to stimulate business activity, improve the climate for investment. But he must also prevent inflation. U.S. prices must be kept competitive with world prices to protect the American balance of payments position.

The whole operation requires the most deft adjustments.

The President, recognizing that steel prices can't stand still indefinitely, probably would welcome some selective increases. The steel industry badly needs new incentives.

Adventures with God

Miraculous touch of the Divine needed to cure many heartills

God is the great heart specialist. He alone "knowest the hearts of all the children of men." 1 Kings 8:39. And His judgment of us will not be made on the basis of our stature or our beauty but on the condition of our hearts.

Like the heart specialists of our day God begins his examination of men by putting His stethoscope on our hearts. He has declared in His word: "A sound heart is the life of the flesh." Prov. 14:30. He warns: "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life." Prov. 4:23.

The Divine Diagnostician is a master at pin-pointing the contributing causes of weakness and failure, of lassitude and pain. There is not one factor unknown to Him when "the Lord looketh upon the heart."

He can tell at a glance what is causing the trouble. And He has gone out of His way to prescribe a remedy for all the heart diseases peculiar to mankind.

He can give you case histories of thousands of men and women and children who have been helped back to health and happiness by submitting to His treatment, which is sometimes very drastic. He, too, goes into the heart and deals with the trouble, wounding to heal.

BELOVED SURGEON

Twenty years ago, when heart operations were rare, the late Dr. E. Robertson of Moose River mine fame operated on a niece in the Hospital for Sick Children.

The decision to submit their child to surgery was a difficult one for the parents to make but her chances to live were lessening with every passing day. The child came through the ordeal and was in hospital for several months.

Today she is the happy mother of three teenage children, taking full responsibility and accomplishing a great deal more than many of her contemporaries who have been blessed with strong hearts.

The beloved surgeon, had diagnosed her case correctly and knew what could be done to lengthen her days and bring fulfillment. She is deeply grateful to the late physician who helped her back to a normal life.

But there are other heart conditions that earthly surgeons cannot heal or earthly poisons relieve. They need the miraculous touch of the Divine heart specialist.

DIVINE THERAPY

What are some of these conditions that are beyond the skill of the local heart specialists? There is the sinful heart that churns like a troubled sea casting up mire and dirt.

"There is no peace," says the Divine Diagnostician, "to the wicked."

But God doesn't leave His wicked patients in hopeless despair. He comforts and reassures them that there is a balm in Gilead to heal the sin sick heart.

The divine therapy is a strange one but effective. No one but God can apply it or supply it. This unusual and rare antidote for sin is the blood drawn from the veins of one who became sin for us and suffered from (not with) the effects of sin.

"The blood of Jesus Christ cleanses us from all sin" and by His wonderful love and sacrifice and skill He creates a new heart within those who will submit themselves to His hands for treatment.

Gerald Waring REPORTING

OTTAWA — Various sources including Liberal MPs-elect are suggesting that the new prime minister will, or should, seek to engineer the election of the former Commons speaker, Roland Michener, as permanent speaker of the House.

This would take some engineering, inasmuch as Mr. Michener is not a member of the newly-elected Commons. He was defeated in his Toronto riding of St. Paul's on June 18, and declined to be a candidate on April 8.

Normally, when a prime minister wants someone in the Commons he "opens a seat" by persuading one of his MPs to resign — usually for appointment to the Senate or some other office in the PM's gift. Then the individual the PM wants contests the by-election.

But Mr. Pearson would be loath to lose a single one of the Liberals votes — three short of a majority — that he has in the Commons. Besides, what would Mr. Michener run as? He's a life-long Conservative, the right hand man of George Drew at Queen's Park who followed his chief to Ottawa. Would Tory opposition leader John Diefenbaker, who has no love for Michener, allow the former speaker to run as a Conservative candidate just to pull a Pearson chestnut out of the fire? If Michener ran as an independent Conservative, could he be elected? Would he run as a Liberal? Would Liberals vote for him?

Alternatively, Mr. Michener might be brought to the speakership by amending the law.

Years before Frank McGee, the late brief Tory minister for Toronto, proposed the plan in a bill that got nowhere, this column reported the suggestion that a new constituency of Parliament Hill be created as a personal fief for a permanent speaker of the House of Commons.

It would be a simple matter to restore the speaker to the state of residency in the Parliament Buildings that speakers enjoyed before the 1916 fire, and with only himself and his family as his constituents in the riding.

But seemingly this plan is not being considered by the Grits-for-Michener-for-speaker clique. Instead, they propose to amend the constitution. Section 44 of the BNA Act states that "The House of Commons on its first assembling after a General Election shall proceed with all practicable speed to elect One of its Members to be Speaker". The proposed amendment would make the section read "... One of its Members or Former Members to be Speaker".

Such an amendment is within the competence of Parliament, without reference to the provinces or Westminster. Advocates of the plan suggest the Commons could operate with an interim speaker pending passage of the amendment and installation of Mr. Michener as permanent speaker.

The proposal has two damning disadvantages. One is that it would reduce the speaker to the status of a paid official of Parliament. No longer would he be the "first among equals."

Second, in case of a tie vote in the Commons — as could easily occur in this House — the speaker casts the deciding ballot. It would be repugnant to the democratic process to have a non-elected official decide whether legislation should or should not pass.

If Mr. Pearson wants to "do something" for his old friend Rollie Michener, let him make Mr. Michener an ambassador, even high commissioner in London. Mr. Michener's many fine qualities that made him such an outstanding Commons speaker would serve the nation well in a senior diplomatic post. Then let Mr. Pearson look for a speaker among his MPs.

TAKE IT FROM KATHY

ALLOWANCE IS NO REWARD
Dear Kathy: Do you think an allowance should be stopped every time you do something that makes your parents angry? This has happened twice in the past month without any notice. My brother and I don't think it's fair. What do you think?—J. Q.

Twice in a month is a bit often to make parents so angry that they cut off an allowance. You can behave better than that! Recall—it's a parent's right to make rules and expect them to be kept. When you ignore important things, reprimands are in order. However, I think that removal of allowance as punishment should be a last resort.

Most authorities agree that an allowance should be some- thing you can count on regularly. The purpose of an allowance is not to reward, but to teach you to budget and handle finances. This wouldn't be possible unless a certain amount was available regularly. Removal of dating privileges or other special rights can be just as effective—or more effective—than stopping an allowance, without disrupting financial training.

loss of Canadian talent and ability."

So we're losing our brains. Or are we?

The layman in the statistical jungle would think so until he comes to yet another paragraph in the same booklet.

It reports that 1950 "was the ONLY year in the period covered (1950-60) in which net immigration was negative that is, that we LOST more professionals than we gained."

A GAIN?

In another contradiction, it was recently widely reported that Canada was not losing brainy people to the United States. It was, in fact, gaining brains.

The story was based on a National Research Council news bulletin which summarized a combined study made by the NRC and the Department of Labor.

The NRC bulletin crowed that the survey "helps to explode the long-held belief that there is a 'drain of scientific brainpower' away from Canada toward the United States."

That seemed conclusive enough. Result: a sweeping statement covering a restricted area — Canadian doctors and masters of science and engineering studying in Canada and the U.S.

As the report dealt only with students, it told only part of the story. In fact, MOST of the professionals who move to the States are already practicing their professions.

Rev. Carl Gustafson, of St. Andrew South Church, who was the guest speaker, chose for his topic, Bible Study, and gave a helpful discourse on this subject, bringing to the attention of the group many aids in the form of books, films, and other literature, which would enliven the discussion in Bible Study groups.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

WHAMMY HAND PEAKS TOURNEY

No par contest would be complete without one freak hand and Bill Root and Barry Rossler concocted a humdinger when they prepared the hands for the Association of American Playing Card Manufacturers' intercollegiate tournament.

South has a really big hand and should be amazed to find his partner able to make a positive response to his opening two bid. He seems to be cold for 13 tricks if his partner can show the missing ace. South uses Blackwood whereupon North bids five diamonds to show that one ace.

South can now get a bidding par for either seven clubs or seven no-trump and then finds that in order to get points for playing the hand he must play at seven no-trump against a spade lead.

Par contest or no par contest South can count all the tricks he needs and then some unless all four diamonds are held in one hand against him and should try to find a play to guard against this.

The play is to win the first trick with dummy's ace of spades, then discard his ace of hearts on dummy's queen of spades.

This establishes three heart tricks in dummy and South now throws his ace, king and queen of clubs on them.

Then he leads dummy's jack of clubs and when the ten spots drops the rest of dummy's club suit is good and South makes the hand in spite of the bad break in diamonds.

Beauty Tips

Oh, Those Elbows

Pity our poor elbows. They are probably the most neglected pair of our anatomies. This is unfortunate because our elbows are constantly on view.

Hold your arms in front of the mirror and take a good look at your elbows. Are they clean and do they appear to be soft and smooth? Or, are they a dingy gray and tend to look rough and scaly? If the latter is true, it is time to treat them more kindly.

Start by using a brush on your elbows while bathing. After your bath, smooth a moisturizing lotion or cream over your elbows.

To bleach away discoloration, you might try a lemon. Rub each elbow with the hollow shell of a lemon half.

Smelt season is near

Cook and enjoy those tasty morsels

The smelt season is near and if you enjoy the sweet gamy flavor of these tasty morsels, I hope you will be fortunate enough to enjoy a feed, for nothing is more enjoyable than a platter of smelt fried a crispy golden brown.

Because of their size it is a tedious job to clean them but they are well worth the time and effort of preparation.

Smelts have a sort of second cousin relationship to the trout, the whitefish and herring. They run about 10 to 12 to the pound, either fresh or frozen, and now is the time to enjoy them.

You may scale the smelt if you wish but it isn't necessary. Remove the head, slit open the belly with a sharp knife and remove the innards, including the silvery lining of stomach. Smelts are then ready for the pan.

Dipped in cornmeal and fried in bacon fat or butter they make a delicious meal with good bread and butter and a green salad. The simpler smelts are cooked the tastier they are.

In eating smelts lift the backbone away from the white flesh, although some gourmets eat bones and all.

CRISPY FRIED SMELTS

For 4 to 6 servings allow 2 pounds smelt. Clean, trim of heads and tails (unless the fish are frozen); then they are already dressed. If fish have been frozen, allow to thaw completely. Bone or not before frying. It's easier to lift out the backbone after cooking.

Combine 1 beaten egg, 2 tbsps. milk, 1 tsp. salt. In a separate bowl put 1/2 cup flour and 1/2 cup dry bread crumbs or finely crushed crackers. Dip smelt first into the crumbs, then in the egg and again in the crumbs.

Have enough vegetable oil or melted butter to cover bottom of pan about 1/4 inch, or to come up half way of sides of fish. Heat fat until very hot but not smoking. For best results cook a small amount of fish at one time. Overloading the pan reduces temperature of the fat with the result that the fish take longer to cook and become greasy soaked.

Fry fish on one side until golden brown, turn and brown other side. Drain and serve at once.

The fish should be dry and crisp on the outside.

TO DEEP FRY

Heat vegetable oil or shortening in a deep fryer to a temperature of 375 F. Place one layer of breaded fish in the fryer basket and immerse in the hot fat.

As in pan frying it is important not to cook too many fish at one time. Fry smelt until a golden brown.

Remove from fat and drain on absorbent paper. Serve at once.

BAKED SMELT

Thaw 3 pounds whole smelt, if frozen. Dress fish by removing entrails. Wash and drain on absorbent paper.

Place in a single layer in a well greased baking pan—butter gives a much better flavor.

Combine 1 tsp. salt, 1 tsp. paprika, 2 tbsps. lemon juice, 1 tsp. grated onion, dash pepper, 1/4 cup butter or other fat melted.

Pour over fish and bake in moderate oven 350 F for 20 to 25 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with fork. Serves 6—maybe.

To dress up the platter, add sprigs of parsley or watercress, lemon or lime wedges, sticks or curls of carrots, radish roses, stuffed olives or dill pickle fans. Slivered toasted nuts such as almonds make not only a pretty garnish but add a tasty flavor.

VIVALDI: L'Stro Armonico, Concertos Nos. 1 to 12, Opus 3; Paris Chamber Orchestra, Paul Kuentz cond. (DECCA, three volumes, stereo DL 710070 to DL 710072) — Canadian audiences had the opportunity of hearing the Paris Chamber Orchestra during a tour of this country last season, and the acclaim which they won here (as elsewhere) can also be lavished on this series of performances. They must be regarded as some of the highlights of the 1963 recording year. Vivaldi has always been one of the favorites of this very fine chamber orchestra, and the twelve delightful concertos performed here cannot fail to become the favorites of anyone who thrills to the sound of a perfectly-trained string group. One cannot choose among the three volumes. Each is a gem of sweet sound, each a rapturous and joyful tribute to the stringed instrument, each an example of musical and recording craftsmanship of the highest order.

BEETHOVEN: Piano Concerto No. 1 in C, Leonard Bernstein plays the piano and conducts the New York Philharmonic (COLUMBIA stereo MS 6407) — Mr. Bernstein's musical versatility is well-known, but it has never been more eloquently expressed than in this performance.

Mr. Bernstein, both as conductor and soloist, does an amazingly creditable job in both roles. However, even his most ardent admirer will not claim his is more than simply a creditable job. On this recording, Mr. Bernstein as a conductor (no doubt considerably occupied with the piano keys) allows the Philharmonic a looser rein than is his usual practice. And, as a pianist, Mr. Bernstein (no doubt considerably occupied with conducting) makes his way through the music with too-obvious care. The result is that the performance as a whole is a rather diffuse if expert one.

For centuries it was the custom of the reigning monarchs of England to wash the feet of indigent citizens on Maundy Thursday, the day before Good Friday, as an act of Christian humility. Gifts of money, clothing and food were also distributed by the monarch.

Although the foot-washing has been dispensed with, James II having been the last king to perform the rite, the Maundy ceremony is still performed. It is the occasion for distribution of a portion of the royal largesse to as many men and women as the years of age of the monarch.

Maundy Thursday takes its name from the Latin version of the account in St. John's Gospel of Jesus washing the feet of his disciples when he gave them a new commandment, or mandatum novum.

Silver coins are specially minted for the Maundy Ceremony and are the only silver coins issued by the British government, all other British coins being of either cupro-nickel or bronze.

They are issued in denominations of one, two, three and four pence and this year, as the Queen is in her 37th year, the Maundy gift was 37 pence, consisting of three pennies, three two-pence, four threepence and four four-pence, given to 37 men and 37 women. The special Maundy coins date back to Charles II only, current silver coins having been used prior to that time.

The ceremony is colorful and full of symbolism. The details of the ceremony and its history have been published in a booklet entitled The Royal Maundy. The proceeds of the sale of this booklet are devoted to King George's Jubilee Trust, a welfare fund which was inaugurated in 1935 as a memorial to the late King George V.

The booklet may be obtained by sending a postal note for 50c (do not send coin) to the Royal Almoner, Buckingham Palace, London SW 1, England. This small sum covers postage, exchange and the cost of the booklet.

Some of the previous kings and queens did not make the Maundy distributions themselves but had the Lord High Almoner do so. Queen Elizabeth II, however, has distributed the Maundy gifts in person each year except in 1954 when she was on a Commonwealth tour and in 1960 when the Queen Mother made the distribution on her behalf.

Tale of minister's son

THE SECRETS OF ALEXANDER HARRIS by Alexander Harris, illustrated with reproductions, Ryerson Press, 245 pp., $6.50.

The Secrets of Alexander Harris might be called a 19th century Pilgrim's Progress, for it is the story of the regeneration of Alexander Harris, the harum-scarum son of an English Congregational minister, who lost his faith in the city of London and found it, after many years and dreadful adventures, in the Australian bush.

The first 47 pages of this unusual and interesting book contain an introduction by the author's grandson, Grant Carr-Harris of Ottawa, and a preface by Alec H. Chisholm, former president of the Royal Australian Historical Society. Preface and introduction are necessary because much of Harris's life is surrounded by mystery.

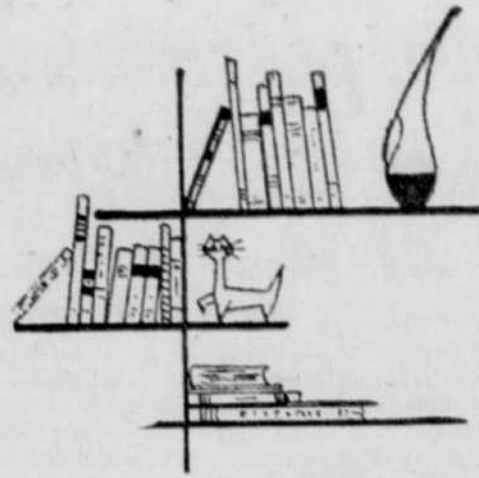

He claims, in the present autobiography, to have been an enlisted man, under the Iron Duke — there is no record of his having ever been enlisted in any of His Majesty's forces; he went to Australia, but how is not known, for there is no record of his having been a passenger or crew member on any boat.

Carr-Harris and Chisholm clear up some of the mysteries or give reasonable suggestions clarifying them. Mr. Carr-Harris, from his grandfather's notes, covers the period of the old man's life from the close of The Secrets of Alexander Harris to his death in Ontario, for his last years were spent in the United States and Canada.

If the reader can forgive that author's constant moralizing, he will find The Secrets very absorbing; Harris's second wife could not. Perhaps part of the cause of the unhappiness in the second marriage lay in the author's first marriage to a childhood sweetheart, following the author's regeneration and return to England.

Harper Prize novel

God and man on the Yangtze

THE SAND PEBBLES by Richard McKenna, Harper and Row, New York, 597 pp., $6.55.

When it was announced some four years ago that John Drainie and Robert Weaver, founding fathers of a new radio series to be called STORIES WITH JOHN DRAINIE were in the market for short fiction, every short story writer crying the "no-market-for-short-stories-in-Canada" blues, pricked up his ears and happily changed his tune.

It would be difficult to assess just how much the STORIES WITH JOHN DRAINIE series has done to raise the sagging morale of the Canadian writer, but it is certainly a good deal.

So much so that we are proud to devote this week's column to Mr. Drainie and to what he has to say about short story writing—most of his comments being very revealing of the short story picture in Canada.

Quoting freely from Mr. Drainie's preface to the recently-published book STORIES WITH JOHN DRAINIE (RYERSON PRESS, 220 pp., $3.95), a book which, incidentally, is quite understandably dedicated to "The Authors of Canada," we find him saying:

There was some doubt expressed at the beginning of the series back in 1959 as to whether there were enough writers in Canada to supply the programme with 180 original stories a year. We were determined not to borrow from non-Canadian writers. "The art of short story writing was still very young in this country," and those authors who had gained prominence were used to writing much longer works than we required. We needed stories of from 1,700 to 1,800 words in length.

"Many authors expressed interest, but gave way to fits of despair over the demands for stringent economy that allowed them a mere 9 or 10 minutes' reading time. (Commercials, music and announcements filled the other five minutes.)

"Nevertheless the stories started to come in almost immediately. Guided by the sympathetic and instructive coaching of Dorothy Jane Needles, our manuscript reader, many "first story" writers began to develop style and technique. . . . Very soon such names as Lesley Conger, Robert Green, Lyon Todd, W. T. Duncan, Leslie Gordon Barnard, H. Shirley Fowke, Marguerite Carriere, to mention a few, began to appear regularly on the program.

"Each week new names were added to the list. We had thought there were about 50 or 60 short story writers in Canada. It was a poor estimate.

Mr. Drainie continues his preface by pointing out that although this is a comparatively large market, the rejection slip ratio is still high (one accepted to ten rejected), and concludes by thanking "our Canadian authors for their excellent writing, and to congratulate them for what is—to many in this anthology—a well-deserved first appearance in book form."

There is little doubt that many Canadian authors will join me in what this column is intended to do—to thank Mr. Drainie and Mr. Weaver for giving Canadian writers the "shot-in-the-moralie" this new and sizable market has been to them.

the crew's shocking disregard for the engines. Jake "loved machinery in the way some other men loved God, women and their country."

Stalwart among writers of the sea and ships and the men who adventure with them is Joseph Conrad; his stories begin with a quiet insistence that mounts in intensity and in the end leaves the reader with a hunger.

The very first paragraphs of McKenna's The Sand Pebbles brings to mind Conrad, for McKenna starts his magnificent saga of a ship and its crew with Conrad's quiet insistence, giving the reader an immediate awareness that the author is knowledgeable and that a kind of submerged vehemence drives him.

Mr. McKenna ends his story in the Conrad vein, so one feels carried beyond the story's ending. The language is different from Conrad's, as suits a different era, a different breed of men and different circumstances, being not quite so literary in the dialogue.

Nevertheless, the dialogue is indicative of character and of the eventual purpose of drama, for McKenna is an indicative writer; even when the action is slow one is aware of tensions and of fore-gathering storm.

The story is laid in China, in the distressed China of the 20s, and begins on board the U.S.S. San Pablo, dubbed the Sand Pebbles, a ship to which engineer Jake Holman has just been assigned. The San Pablo is "one of the ancient gunboats captured from Spain and sent to form the Yangtze Patrol during the Boxer Rebellion." . . . Now the old gunboat and its crew protect the Americans who live along the Yangtze River.

Holman thinks the boat "funny-looking" and is distressed at what he considers Light, a missionary colony whose leader is the fierce, stubborn and God-fearing Mr. Craddock. Craddock loves his God and his Chinese converts so much he will die for them and sacrifice others, too.

To Craddock, loyalty to God and his work comes first; to Lt. Collins, commander of the San Pablo, loyalty to one's prison camp authors should be the subject if they are unable to cope with it adequately.

Therefore, if nothing else,

Vincent Hallinan

A lion in court, a hyena in print

A LION IN COURT by Vincent Hallinan, G. P. Putnam's Sons, 319 pp., $5.95.

Some American authors seem to enjoy a good game of "Let's Club Uncle Sam."

A Lion in Court, the autobiography of Vincent Hallinan, a California lawyer who may be remembered as the lawyer who defended labor leader Harry Bridges, is the fourth book I have read in fewer months that takes a really malicious blow at the foundations of American democracy in action, so violently and malevolently that even those who might normally agree with the authors versions doubt the veracity not only of their intention but of their facts.

Mr. Hallinan thinks of himself as a rebel in the classic sense; like many rebels he becomes the victim of his own tyranny, his rebellion is the result of a violent animosity, and so he rather defeats his own purpose.

This is particularly regrettable since the lawyer is brilliant, dynamic, dedicated to winning his cases, and much of what he has to say, while not original, is socially and politically sound.

Born of Irish immigrant parents, Hallinan was brought up in squalid surroundings and in a religious atmosphere that he claims was compounded of bigotry and superstition.

He early developed religious indignation and became an atheist, though his actual acceptance of this negative belief was decided by a superficial, easily refutable and country is paramount. There is a most impressive scene when these two men oppose each other in the mission house in the face of almost certain death while Holman and some of his mates watch them form outside the window.

Added to Holman's engrossing love of machinery is his growing love and admiration for Shirley Erkrigh, a young American missionary who works with Mr. Craddock and his assistant, Gillespie, at China Light. Holman's love is destined to be unfulfilled for two reasons: one, his dawning realization that the kind of life he has led makes him unfit to marry the girl, and two, Shirley's own feelings.

Like Craddock, she is utterly dedicated to the Chinese and willing to die to prove her "higher loyalty," and though she is aware of Holman as a strong and fascinating man, she realizes that her co-worker Gillespie is the one with whom she will be able to carry on her work, a man she can always rely on.

Holman never speaks of his love, but he proves it in the dramatic climax of The Sand Pebbles.

Essentially a man's story, this winner of the Harper's 1963 Prize Novel contest, teems with the excitement of action, of intra-national disputes, of ship-to-ship and hand-to-hand fighting, and with underlying human passions in combat with each other.

It is the story of a few people, but it is also a timeless story of all people, of the violence of rivaling loyalties and of the growth of man's awareness of the subtle as well as the obvious in ideals and ideologies, both personal and national.

BLUEBELL PHILLIPS

Sick, sick, sick

FAMOUS ILLNESSES IN HISTORY by R. Scott Stevenson, M.D., F.R.C.S., Ryerson: 239 pp., $4.50.

This collection of miscellaneous medical memorabilia is almost as intriguing as its title.

Dr. Stevenson writes with a fine historical sense of some of the more serious ailments of famous men and women. He speculates in passing as to the course history might have taken had modern diagnostic techniques and methods of treatment been available for such fatal illnesses as that of the Emperor Frederick — was it cancer of the larynx or syphilis?

Had Frederick lived it is doubtful whether World War I would have ever occurred.

Equally fascinating is the realization that if the physician attending Princess Charlotte's confinement in 1817 had been more prompt in the use of obstetrical forceps, Queen Victoria would not only have reigned, but would in all probability never have been born!

What really ailed Napoleon during his exile on St. Helena? Was Charles Darwin a hypochondriac? Could Franklin Roosevelt's paralytic poliomyelitis have been prevented?

In seeking the answers to these and other medical "mysteries," Dr. Stevenson is a disciplined detective and an accomplished narrator.

If there is a fault to find in this excellent book it is perhaps the author's assumption that his readers are familiar with medical terminology, but don't let this deter you, with dictionary at hand Famous Illnesses in History will both edify and divert you.

(3)—Because my support is "plowed back" to yield many-fold benefits in new industries, increased payrolls, health, safety legislation, business protection and community advancement.

(4)—Because I believe that the man who helps his community through active participation in the work of his Chamber of Commerce will develop his own powers and broaden his own views.

(5)—Because through the Sherbrooke Chamber, I can best discharge my obligations to this community in which I live and earn my living. I realize that every man owes a debt to the community that cannot be paid in taxes, a debt of personal service.

(6)—Because the Sherbrooke Chamber cannot carry out its broad program of work to protect and advance business without personal service and adequate financial support.

(7)—Because the Sherbrooke Chamber unifies the public spirit of all and directs it into useful and constructive channels.

(8)—Because the Sherbrooke Chamber helps create and express sound opinions on questions affecting the welfare of Canada.

(9)—Because without a strong, effective Chamber of Commerce, we would be less able to compete with other towns for new industries and new payrolls.

(10)—Because I believe it is essential to progress to have a central organization eternally watching community welfare and development, I believe the Sherbrooke Chamber is the central organization adequately equipped to do this work.

(11)—Because the most effective and constructive influence is the force of organized business functioning through the Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce for the purpose of improving our city. We can, through organized effort, make the kind of city we determine it shall be.

Chamber of Commerce Week to be observed April 21 to April 27

Chamber of Commerce Week has been established to bring to all Canadians a concept of the role of the local Chamber in community building for the national good.

Here are cells of democracy — independent and vigorous — binding citizens together to make their community better places in which to live and in which to earn a living.

Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce can truly be called the conscience and the will of their communities / the conscience to see and recognize the needs of the community and the will to take effective action.

It has been said and well said that a community is poor in purse and poor in purpose that has not a strong, vital and active Chamber of Commerce or Board of Trade.

What is the Sherbrooke CofC?

It is a voluntary association of citizens to promote the commercial, industrial, agricultural and civic welfare of the City of Sherbrooke.

The interest of the Sherbrooke Chamber is not, however, confined to local matters only. Just as a citizen of his province and of his country, so the Sherbrooke chamber of Commerce has provincial and federal interests in addition to its local activities.

In Quebec, there is the Chamber of Commerce of the province of Quebec and indeed many regions within this province have their own associations known as Regional Chambers, to advance and promote the interests of their particular region.

At the provincial level, the activity of the Sherbrooke Chamber is coordinated and presented to the provincial government through the Chamber of Commerce of the Province of Quebec, the provincial federation which

president

Sherbrooke must have a strong and lively Chamber of Commerce if it is to make the most of its potentials and if community life is going to be as pleasant as possible.

Therefore, the Sherbrooke Chamber deserves and needs your support. If you are not yet a member of your Sherbrooke Chamber, do not wait and postpone any longer. Get in touch with the Recruiting Chairman, Aime Bergeron, at LO. 2-7082 or phone the Chamber's office, at LO. 9-3133.

The same applies on the national scene. Canada needs a strong national group to speak on behalf of business generally and it has such a groups over 220 Chambers and Boards of Trade across the province of Quebec.

At the federal level, the activity of the Sherbrooke Chamber is co-ordinated and presented to the federal government through the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, the national federation of more than 850 Chambers and Boards of Trade across Canada. The policy of this national group is determined by the majority vote of the member Chambers and Boards—each of which has one vote of equal strength.

The Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce is affiliated both to the Chamber of Commerce of the province of Quebec and to the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Stabilizing Influence
An organization of this kind is a stabilizing influence on a community. It is instrumental in focusing greater attention on municipal, provincial and national affairs. It brings about greater understanding amongst various segments of the community and it makes the community voice in the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Canada has a great future and the cities and towns of our country are going to share in it, in proportion to the effort and intelligence they individually put forth.

The Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce is a chief means for employing this effort and this intelligence.

For that reason, it deserves support.

The Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce was founded in 1889 and is one of the oldest Chambers of Commerce in the province of Quebec.

The Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce has presently some 425 corporate members, and is directed by a Board of directors composed of a president, two vice-presidents, a treasurer, a minimum of ten directors and the president ex-officio.

This Board of Directors meets regularly every Monday morning at 8:00 a.m., to study and consider present-day problems, not only on the local scene, but also on the provincial and national scenes as well.

The Sherbrooke Chamber is affiliated with the Chamber of Commerce of the province of Quebec, a federation that includes over 220 Chambers of Commerce in the province of Quebec. It is also affiliated with the Canadian Chamber of Commerce in the province of Quebec. It is also affiliated with the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, which is in effect the official spokesman of all Chambers of Commerce from coast to coast in our Dominion.

MAPLE LEAFS RETAIN STANLEY CUP
For the second consecutive year Coach Punch Imlach has guided his Maple Leafs to the Stanley Cup. They whipped the Montreal Canadiens and then turned around and knocked over the Detroit Red Wings to earn the old mug.

The Leafs possessed the better club with lots of depth, which was a big factor in their favor. Coach Imlach had a strong defense brigade and up front had plenty of reserves. It made no difference who was on the ice one unit was just as strong as the other.

It was nice to see a small player emerge as star of the series. Dave Keon, tips the scales at 163 pounds, but this made no difference as the little pivot spear-headed the Leafs' attacks while making himself a general nuisance to the opposition.

The Wings certainly surprised the so-called experts. In the first place they weren't supposed to make the playoffs and were never considered as finalists but they upset all by battling their way right into the finals. They possess a good team and within a year or so will be able to hold their own with the best.

The veterans on both clubs came through in fine shape as time after time they made the key saves and blocks. The Leafs had the better defense and handed out some pretty tough checks. The Wings had only two, Gadsby and Pronovost, who were dishing out the checks. This made a big difference in the outcome.

It was the first time in the history of the National Hockey League that there was no overtime in the semi-finals or finals. All games were won in regulation time. It was only the second time the Leafs have been able to win the NHL championship and the Stanley Cup. They did it before in 1948.

Norm Ullman must have felt terrible after the game. He missed a wide-open net which would have tied the game in the closing minutes of the game. The Wings were forcing the play at this stage. It was a tough break but the puck just wasn't rolling for the Wings.

Anyway it is over and Punch Imlach and his crew deserve plenty of credit for winning their second straight sweep. The other clubs will now start to build up their teams for next season. It will be interesting to see the changes which will be made.

A Winnipeg group is making a bid for the 1967 Pan-American Games as athletes from 24 countries prepare for this year's Games in Brazil. Cool weather is causing plenty of trouble for the contestants while members of the Canadian group ran into food poisoning from eating cream puffs on the plane. Mark Danzker, spokesman for the group, was confident Canada would be awarded the Games.

The Coaticook Golf Club will be open to members and the public today. All nine holes will be ready while the new clubhouse will be available for use. Coaticook is looking for a good season and from all reports they have a nice layout and those playing there will find a very nice course to test their skill.

The Allan Cup finals opened last night in Windsor with the Bulldogs at home to the Western champs, Winnipeg Maroons, in a best-of-seven series for the Canadian senior championship.

The two teams have never won the big prize in 10 years of operation. It will be the second try for the Maroons, who lost to the Galt Terriers 4-1 in 1962. A Winnipeg team last won the Allan Cup in 1932. The Bulldogs, OHA champs, have lost only four games in their last three series and playing on home ice are favored to win the mug. It should be a tough battle. Bill Juzda, coach of the Maroons, is a former teammate of Harry Watson, Windsor's coach.

Bill Yocke, a former member of the Quebec Athletics back in 1940, dropped us a note saying he was going to make a trip up here this summer and would like to hear from some of his friends he met during his playing days. Bill was a hurler for the A's and a good one. His address is no 246 Ritchie Ave., Winton, W. Va., U.S.A.

The World's longest rally, a 4,000-mile grind across Canada, opened Thursday in Vancouver with 47 cars on the starting line. They make overnight stops across the country and it's a test for driving skill, navigational ability and endurance. Speeds are averaged at least 10 per cent below local speed limits along the route. Points are lost for being early or late at a check point.

The foremost driver in the event is Belgium's Olivier Gendebien while among the women drivers are, Maria Van Niftrick of New Orleans and Montreal's Juliette Legare, John Jones and Lou Lalonde, last year's winners, are back to defend their laurels. It ends in Montreal April 26.

The Sherbrooke Racing Club announced that Miss Eileen Morgan will be the racing secretary for the coming season. Miss Morgan is not new in the game having a stable of her own and has raced horses throughout the Province the past years.

Miss Morgan held the post at the end of last season and this year applied for a licence and passed her examinations for the post. She is the first lady in Canada to hold such a post but she is well qualified for the job. She knows her horses and this is a big thing as she must classify them for the various classes during the meet.

President Roger Trudeau has announced several other changes at the track. For the first time a saliva test will be held and this will be under the supervision of Louis St. Cyr and Roger Roberge, president judge. This should be a big improvement and the fans no doubt should be glad to hear this. The season will open Sunday May 19.

Lou Fontinato says he'll never play hockey again even if doctors say he can, takes his first steps

By JOE DUPUIS

MONTREAL (CP)—Tough Lou Fontinato, his head immobile in a plaster cast and his face set in a grimace, vows he will never play hockey again even if doctors someday say he still can.

"No sir," he said Friday, "the risk is too great."

Leaping Lou, a bone-crunching defenceman for Montreal Canadiens, had just finished taking his first wobbly steps unassisted after lying six weeks in hospital flat on his back.

He was cheerful about his progress in recovering from a broken neck suffered in a National Hockey League game in Montreal March 9.

"If I can keep on improving like I am now," he said from his hospital bed, "well, heck I'm laughing."

"Look at this," he said quickly lifting up a powerful-looking right hand.

"A few days ago I couldn't do that," he clenched his fist, and beckoned. "I'll bet I can even throw you."

TO LEAVE HOSPITAL

Fontinato, a grey-haired, muscular type who has averaged more than 145 minutes in penalties in each of his eight full NHL seasons, expects to leave the hospital sometime next week to return with his family in their Montreal apartment. The heavy cast won't be removed for a few more months.

Selke visited Lou once in the hospital but they didn't talk business. Lou said if Selke's offer means he was prepared to offer him some kind of job "then naturally I'd be interested."

Lou said he would seek a winter job, electing to work his farm in the summers.

He said he would be interested in coaching, "perhaps a junior team, somewhere."

BLAMES HIMSELF

Fontinato blamed himself for the injury that occurred when he was checked by New York Ranger winger Vic Hadfield.

"The puck was shot into our zone on the left side. I went after it and saw Hadfield coming towards me to forecheck. I was skating pretty fast toward the boards, and when Hadfield came near, I ducked down thinking I could get under him and flip him over my shoulders."

"I knew he was going to check me good because... well—I had sort of roughed him up earlier," Fontinato hit the boards head-on, and collapsed in a heap.

"Hell, it wasn't Hadfield's fault," Lou said. "He only got a little piece of me. His check was so light I hardly noticed it. He may have propelled me a bit towards the boards, but I did it all myself."

No. 8...Work Back

A great many golfers start putting practice from way back and work up to the short ones. It is much more advisable to start a foot or two from the cup and gradually lengthen the distance to 15 feet or so. It seems much easier to develop a smooth stroke on short putts. Smoothness is what counts. So much so that many great golfers concentrate on their stroke when practicing. They know if they are stroking the ball properly, they will get their share in the cup.

Most players have a tendency to drive the ball down when putting. They don't get all the ball and have to hit it hard to get distance. This can ruin smoothness.

Bobby Jones addressed the ball on the green almost like a chip shot. Walter Hagen used a blade with a shade of loft. This enabled them to start the ball up, hitting it dead center or a bit below so they got all of it.

When you practice on a hard surface, you will easily discover if you are striking the ball above the centre line.

If this fault is pronounced enough, the ball will actually bounce when you stroke it on a hardwood floor or some other unresilient surface.

Eagles can be bought for $4,500,000

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Stockholders of Philadelphia Eagles voted Friday to sell the National Football League club for not less than $4,500,000.

The decision opened the door for a specific bid from Paul Brown, deposed coach and general manager of Cleveland Browns, who has inquired about buying Philadelphia franchise. It also will permit bids from any other interested buyers.

The stockholders' approval came at a special meeting called by club President Frank McNamee to clear the air on rumors the Eagles were for sale.

Early Wynn still waiting for his chance.

VENICE, Fla. (AP)—Early Wynn is like the guy in the downstairs apartment waiting for the other shoe to drop.

That shoe would be an offer of a job from a major league club.

The job could lead to Wynn's pitching his 300th win, placing him in an elite circle with the 13 pitchers who have achieved this goal.

Wynn admittedly is nervous and somewhat impatient.

"I would like to get my game, but it's kind of hard to work hard without a direct incentive," he said in an interview.

Wynn has been working as a free agent with the White Sox farm club in Sarasota. He pitches batting practice every day.

At 43, Wynn says he still has the old steam to win his 300th game and possibly a lot more.

"I had a better spring this year than I had in the last couple of years," Wynn said. "I think I could pitch every fifth day for somebody."

That somebody could be any of several clubs Wynn says he has had contact with during the past few weeks.

Two clubs are believed to hold major interest in Wynn. They are St. Louis Cardinals and Houston Colts.

Wynn was dropped from the White Sox roster this spring after the management decided to go with younger pitchers. He won seven and lost 15 with the White Sox last season and then drew his release to make a deal for himself this season.

His 23-year record is 299-242.

Wings to give Doug Barkley $1,000 bonus

DETROIT (AP)—Bruce Norris, president of Detroit Red Wings, and Manager Coach Sid Abel agreed Friday to present defenceman Doug Barkley a $1,000 bonus for his good performance this season if he doesn't win the National Hockey League's Rookie of the Year award.

The Wings obtained Barkley last summer from Chicago Black Hawks in a trade.

Mayor Summerville declares Friday "Maple Leaf Day" as City fetes Leafs, 100,000 pack half-mile route

TORONTO (CP)—Thursday night Toronto Mayor Leafs won the Stanley Cup, top prize in the National Hockey League.

Friday afternoon they won a ticker-tape parade, a civic reception, tie clips and the deafening applause of thousands of fans.

An estimated 25,000 persons were in the immediate area around the city hall—termination point of the parade—police officials said.

One police officer estimated more than 100,000 persons were packed up to six deep along the half-mile parade route up Bay Street, the heart of Toronto's financial district.

Most of the ticker tape that rained down on the open cars as they moved slowly up the street was that speared out by machines taking stock tabulations.

There was no doubt about the stock of the Toronto Maple Leafs. Tops. On top of the top was David Keon, the 24-year-old centre who scored two of Leafs' goals Thursday night to take Detroit Red Wings 4-1 in games.

SCORED SEVEN GOALS

During the series Keon scored seven goals and when he mounted the city hall steps Friday the applause was thunderous. A hockey official manning the public address system struggled valiantly to get the attention of the crowd but finally gave up and just waited until the applause and cheers died a natural death.

School children, on Easter holidays, made up a large portion of the crowds along the route and at city hall.

Friday was declared "Maple Leaf Day" in Toronto by Mayor Don Summerville.

After a formal introduction outside the players and officials moved inside to city hall chambers and received gold tie-clips, with the city crest engraved on them.

Dick Tiger to defend title in own country

LONDON (CP)—Nigerian Labor Minister J. M. Johnson conferred with Jack Solomon, London boxing promoter, Friday and later announced that Dick Tiger will defend his world middleweight title against Gene Fullmer early in July.

Tiger, a Nigerian who once campaigned out of England, is eager to defend his crown before his own people. The bout is scheduled for Liberty Stadium in Ibadan.

Two records set and another is equalled in Stanley Cup playoffs, Gordie Howe sets mark for assists

By RON ANDREWS

TORONTO (CP)—Two records were set and another two equalled in this year's National Hockey League Stanley Cup playoffs. The semi-final series between Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Black Hawks produced three of the marks.

The Wings and Hawks in their series, which Detroit won 4-2, were assessed the most penalties in a Cup playoff series and equalled the goal-scoring mark for two teams in a semi-final. Bobby Hull tied the mark of most goals in a semi-final.

Leafs' Dickie Duff chalked up the other record by scoring the two fastest goals ever fired at the start of a Stanley Cup game.

Another oddity about the three playoff series, which ended with Leafs winning their second straight Cup championship by defeating Detroit four games to one in the best-of-seven final, was that all games were decided in regulation time. This is the first year since the NHL gained full possession of the cup in 1927 that no overtime games were needed in the playoffs.

Toronto goaltender Johnny Bower, who gave his club great clutch netminding over the 19 games against Montreal Canadiens and Detroit, probably rates a mention in the record books, too. A search of NHL records reveals that Bower, in the semi-final against Montreal, became the first netminder to earn an assist in Stanley Cup playoffs.

GET 98 PENALTIES

The Wings and Hawks received 98 penalties in their six-game series. The former mark was 87, established in last year's six-game final between Toronto and Chicago.

Detroit players received 52 penalties, including 48 minors, two five-minute majors and two 10-minute misconducts for a total of 126 minutes. Hawks were penalized with 46 minors, two majors and one 10-minute misconduct, a total of 106 minutes. The total of 232 minutes, however, is short of the record of 241 minutes handed out in a six-game semi-final between Chicago and Montreal in 1961.

Hull, battered and bruised and suffering from a broken and cut nose and a shoulder injury, was the leading goal scorer of the playoffs. He scored eight times against "ings, tying the record set by Gordie Howe of Detroit in 1948 against New York Rangers and equalled by Jerry Toppazzini of Boston Bruins in 1958, also against Rangers.

The 44 goals Detroit and Chicago scored matched the output of Rangers and Boston in 1958 when Boston outscored New York 28-16 in winning six games and also by Detroit and Boston in a seven-game series in 1945, won by Detroit although each club scored 22 goals. This year, Wings outscored the Hawks 25-19.

Duff etched his name into the records in the first game of the final when he scored at the 49-second mark and again after one minute and eight seconds to start the Leafs on their way to a 4-2 victory.

The previous mark for the fastest two-goal scoring by a team at the start of a game was set in the second game of the 1947 final series, won by Leafs over Montreal Canadiens four games to two. Ted Kennedy scored at 1:12 and Vic Lynn at 1:36 as the Leafs went on to defeat Montreal 4-0 April 10 at Montreal.

RECORD IS 12 SECONDS

Duff's goals, 19 seconds apart, is not a record for the fastest two goals, however. That mark is shared by two Canadians—Phil Lepine, in 1931 against Chicago, and Bernie Geoffrion, in 1955 against Detroit—who scored two goals each in the space of 12 seconds.

Bower picked up his assist on the first goal of the opening game between Leafs and Canadiens at Toronto. He fed the puck to Leaf defenceman Allan Stanley, who in turn relayed it to Bob Pulford, the goal scorer.

Another record was extended when Howe increased his career total to 73 assists by getting nine in the 11 games he played. Leaf centre Red Kelly, a former Red Wing all-star defenceman, moved in his 14th playoff game, moving to within five games of Maurice Richards' record of most games played in Stanley Cup action. Kelly's 10 games this season gave him a total of 128. Richards, in 15 playoff years, played in 133 games for Canadians.
