Brilliant shots by the Japanese players brought the crowd to its feet shrieking with excitement. Harada and Tawara are at the far end of the courts, while Paris and Chacon are seen above putting up a determined defence.

SPARKLING PLAY of Raoul Chacon did not help him to break up the Japanese speedy attack. The latter took every set in the second day's tennis play.

CATHOLICS GOING TO LEGISLATURE WITH QUESTIONS

(By GEO. W. HINMAN, JR.)
Universal Staff Writer

Mexico City, Aug. 20.—The Catholic Church in Mexico will accept the challenge of President Calles and carry the fight for freedom to Congress. This was indicated authoritatively following the receipt today by Archbishop Mora Y. Del Rio of the adverse reply of Calles to the plea of the church issued Wednesday.

While many feel that Congress as at present constituted is certain to support Calles' policy, refusal of Calles to accept the archbishop's peace proposals advocating suspension of the regulations leaves no other course for the church except to appeal to the Legislature.

Church supporters professed to see in Calles' reply a more temperate tone than was noticeable in previous executive declarations, thus indicating a possibility of eventually working out a mutually satisfactory solution. Others emphasize that the reply does not yield in the slightest.

The Government today issued instructions regarding care of church edifices following reports from the country telling of the closing of certain churches by caretakers, thus violating previous orders.

BEAUDRY INQUEST WILL BE ADJOURNED AGAIN

LACK OF MATERIAL CLUES CONTINUES AS DETECTIVES MEET CROWN PROSECUTOR

BY JAMES R. WATSON

Joseph Antonio Beaudry, publisher of Le Prix Courant, shot and killed a week ago today by an as yet unapprehended, supposedly unknown slayer, is still unavenged, and according to police, threads in the fabric of evidence still are missing.

"The situation is no better, but it is no worse," declared Acting Chief of Detectives Hector Mercier last night. This came after a lengthy conference with Ernest Bertrand, K.C., crown prosecutor in charge of the case, at which were present Capt. Mercier, Sergeant Detective George Lajoie, and Sergeant Detective Pelletier.

Published statements in an afternoon paper yesterday that one or more persons were in custody were flatly denied by the detective bureau.

Yesterday was a day just like those which have preceded it. Detectives followed so-called clues, practically all of which were rumors and reports that led to nothing which could be used to further the investigation. And these rumors were as many and varied as on previous days.

One of them suggested a former employee of Le Prix Courant who had been discharged; another laid the crime to agents of the Soviet; a third hinted at a possible grievance through a business deal.

All proved abortive, however, according to detectives, who last night reiterated previous statements that "there are no new developments."

It was learned, however, that the coroner's inquest which was opened last Tuesday and adjourned until next Tuesday afternoon, would again be adjourned at the request of Captain Mercier, who is not ready to proceed with the case. His men have been so busy running down false leads, he intimated, that they are not ready to summon certain witnesses whose testimony may be needed to fasten the crime upon one particular person.

Capt. Mercier denied last night that provincial detectives are assisting city sleuths. It is customary, however, for men under Chief D. D. Lorrain of the Quebec force to investigate all murders in the province, whether inside or outside an incorporated municipality, and it is believed that two provincial detectives have been making inquiries. Results of their search are said to be as negative as in the case of Montreal surety agents.

While Capt. Mercier said to The Daily World that no developments were anticipated during the night, he qualified that statement by declaring that "something may turn up at any minute." An immediate arrest or retention of material witnesses would come as surprise, and would hinge upon new information, or information that would support some material evidence now in hand.

That there may be "something in the wind" was indicated by the conference held in the office of Ernest Bertrand, K.C., crown prosecutor, yesterday afternoon. While none would admit that the case was being discussed, reporters trailed the detectives to the office and discovered that a large bundle of papers and documents from the dead man's effects were examined. Conclusions reached at the meeting could not be learned.

Auditors are still at work on the books and correspondence relating to Le Prix Courant and other companies in which Mr. Beaudry was interested.

In this connection it is stated that back in 1907 or 1908 the dead man sold stocks in at least one mining company. So far as can be learned this stock is worthless today. Whether this fact has any bearing on the case is problematical.

The auditors will not complete their work before the beginning of the week, according to the detective chief.

"Cherchez la femme," quoted in many quarters, seems to be obscured early today by the general mystery of the murder, although inquiries are still being made in that direction.

BEAUDRY'S CASH AND ASSETS GO TO 2 BROTHERS

Widow Gets Income Of Estate For Life, Is Statement

The estate of Joseph Antonio Beaudry, victim of an assassin's bullets a week ago today as he sat at his desk in the office of Le Prix Courant, 198 Notre Dame Street East, goes to his two brothers, with the income therefrom for the use of his widow during her life-time.

This information was secured last night from an authentic source, the will of the dead man having disposed of Le Prix Courant and whatever other property entailed. The value of the property, insurance and the like could not be estimated.

It was also learned that the dead man had kept his own books for two months prior to his death instead of allowing one of his employees to do the work.

FAMOUS STILLMAN CASE IS REOPENED BY FRED BEAUVAIS

The famous Stillman case is not dead and buried after all, in spite of the reconciliation of James Stillman and his wife. The "Daily World" was informed last night by Fred Beauvais, who was co-respondent in the case, that he is taking action of damages for slander against James Stillman for a large amount, through a New York lawyer.

Beauvais, who now resides at Caughnawaga, was in town yesterday to collect from his Montreal attorney the balance owing him from a settlement in connection with the recently concluded case. He said his New York lawyer had failed to locate James Stillman although he had been looking for him for two months, and he was interested when informed by the interviewer that Mr. Stillman was reported on his private yacht last Monday, returning to New York to be present on the arrival of the body of his brother, who died at sea.

The last occasion on which Beauvais figured in the news was on the settlement by Mrs. Stillman of a claim for $3,000 made by Beauvais for services and expenses in the rounding up of witnesses in the divorce case.

Fred is taking an interest in politics and has registered as a voter at Chateauguay.

SPEEDY WORK BY DETECTIVES WHO CAPTURE YOUTH

With three minutes to spare before the arrival of a train, Sergeant Detectives E. Belanger and Rochon last night arrested Jean M. Lamoroux, aged 17, of Cornwall, Ont., for the chief of police of Alexandria, Ont.

A telephone message from the Ontario town informed detective headquarters that Lamoroux, wanted on a charge of stealing $45, was on board a train bound for Montreal. His age and the fact that he was wearing a light suit was all the information.

The detectives rushed to St. Henri Station, boarded the train, and picked Lamoroux from the passengers. He was taken to headquarters where he admitted his identity. He is being held for the Alexandria police.

TRAIN ARRIVES WITH ONE MORE THAN BOARDED IT

A C.P.R. train yesterday brought one more passenger from Toronto than boarded it in the Queen City. The passenger paid no fare, and arrived via the stork line. He was the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Monet, 3981 Delevanti Street, born en route.

MEIGHEN COMING Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader, will speak in Montreal August 31, it was announced last night. He will make a tour of the province with local speakers.

JAZZ KING AND BRIDE PROVE LIGHTNING CHANGE ARTISTS

IZZY OR ISN'T HE HERE, AND IF SO WHY? AND WHERE?

At a later hour than the ensuing, it was learned on good authority that the Berlins are at the Ritz, and several prominent local theatrical men, including George Rotsky, manager of the Palace Theatre, were waiting about the lobby and the supper garden hoping to see the song-man. It was thought that Berlin would come down to supper and to hear Tipaldi's orchestra jazz his latest songs. But Berlin was "tipped off" to the fact that newspapermen were waiting to greet him—so he stayed upstairs.

Where, oh where, is Izzy Ballin and his beautiful millionaire bride, Ellen Mackay?

Izzy, whom you know best as Irving Berlin, writer of jazz-songs that stay jazzed and mammy epics that would wring any mother's heart, is in Montreal this morning.

But Irving Berlin has so many names that you can't find out out who he is. Anybody on the street is liable to be Irving right this minute. No foolin'!

NO NEW HABIT

Irving got the name-changing habit a long time ago when he blossomed forth as a writer of song hits, and stopped being Izzy Ballin, song-plugger of frowsy Ghetto cafes and became Irving Berlin.

That he still has the habit is established by the fact that he just crossed the Atlantic on the C.P.R. liner "Montnairn" under the name of Burns.

That the charming and socially prominent Mrs. Berlin has acquired the same habit from Irving is established by the fact that she travelled under the nom de "Montnairn" of Mrs. Burns.

"Johnson" and "Jonathan" are other names tied-up to the songwriter and his bride within the last 24 hours, but he evidently acquired another new one at a late hour last night as he is reported to have arrived at the Ritz about ten minutes to ten under an incognito that he hadn't used before. For all anyone knows his name may be Smith at this very minute.

CHANGES LIKE CHAMELEON

Berlin is credited with the name-changing scheme as a way to avoid having his movements chronicled in the press. He sailed from Liverpool to Quebec on the "Montnairn" to avoid the spotlight that would have focussed on his bride and himself had he approached his beloved Broadway by way of Sanly Hook.

As "Mr. and Mrs. Burns" the young couple are declared to have crossed the Atlantic, maintaining their incognito throughout the entire journey.

On landing at Quebec, however, the song-writer bumped straight into three newspaper men from New York dailies who recognized him, and, after a thirty minute chase finally persuaded Berlin to make a brief statement. He admitted having booked passage to Quebec to avoid the publicity of arrival at New York.

It was reported from Quebec late last night that Mr. and Mrs. Berlin had left for Montreal by car late in the afternoon.

Another report had it that Mr. and Mrs. Berlin, under a brand-new incognito, landed in Montreal off the first steamer special from the "Montnairn" at 8:39 standard time.

AMONG THE MISSING

None of the hotels could offer any information up to midnight. No "Johnson," "Burns," "Jonathan" or plain ordinary Berlin signed the register at the Ritz, Mount Royal, Windsor or Queens.

The nearest thing to a clue came from the Ritz where the doorman reported the arrival of a car about ten minutes to ten from which a lady and gentleman disembarked. The man turned to his friend at the wheel and said "Call me about eleven in the morning under the name of —"

But the doorman didn't hear the most important part of it, to wit, the name. The desk declared that no one had registered at that hour.

Mrs. Berlin was formerly Ellen Mackay, daughter of one of New York's upper-ten families. At the time of her marriage to the song writer her father offered strenuous objection to the match and put his daughter under parental ban on the day when nuptials took place.

HAS PAPA RECONSIDERED?

So far as is known there has been no reconciliation, and it is said that the young couple are speeding to New York for another interview with Mrs. Berlin's father.

Another story has it that a cable reconciliation has been effected and that the prodigal children are en route for New York to participate in the fatted calf festivities.

And maybe it's just a new way to break into the news. Who knows?

GAYETY REOPENS WITH "TOMMY" CONWAY AS BOSS

A week from tomorrow evening the Gayety Theatre will open with "The Tempters," said to be an aggregation of pretty girls who can sing and dance. The entire house has been redecorated, a new balcony entrance built and a ladies' rest room provided. The theatre will be operated by the Mutual Burlesque Association, under the management of "Tommy" Conway, well known Montrealer, with the box office in charge of Eugene Lapiere.

SECRET SERVICE FILM AT PALACE

Air raids, battlefield thrills, enemy intrigue and the cunning of the British espionage organization are said to be vividly portrayed in "The Great Deception," which is being shown at the Palace next week. The plot, which is taken from "Yellow Dove," is a romance of the British secret service during the World War. Aileen Pringle plays the American girl who, despite suspicious appearances, retains her faith in her British sweetheart. Ben Lyon takes the part of the lucky man and Basil Rathbone depicts his German rival.

THE MERRY-GO-ROUND

by A MAN OF THE WORLD

"One all, Shimizu leading in the second set," the announcement of the referee in the tennis match yesterday reminds me of the telephone operator who called the sports editor to find out who won the boxing bout.

"Delaney got the decision," ye S. E., told the girl.

"In what round?" the girl asked.

OF COURSE

Yes, glints of April hovered in her eyes,

Above the rouge and lipstick plastered thick

Upon her face. In spite of all disguise

She seemed to be devoid of scheme and trick.

Her hair was dark and long—amazing sight!

Her dress was wide, and grazed her tiny feet.

She seemed to have a barely smiling fright—

Amused, yet begging you to be discreet.

She might have wandered from an album's page

Where photographs of maidens quaint and staid

Reveal the witchcraft of another age.

And sit, or stand, in modesty arrayed.

And then her voice came: "Hungry as a pig!

Aw, gee! This movie extra stuff is dumb.

Five hours in a hot long dress and wig!

If they don't take that scene soon I'll be numb!"

—Maxwell Bodenheim.

A NEW BUSINESS

A certain very popular bank on St. James Street, like all other banks, is accustomed to making loans to their good accounts. A man named Friedman had a note coming due, the amount of which was pretty steep. The day the note was due he called at the bank and saw the General Manager and told the High Mogul that he was sorry, but he could not meet the note. The president was shocked and gave him a hauling over the coals, telling him the rules and regulations of the bank, etc. The General Manager ended the conversation by saying, "Have you ever been in the banking business?" "No," said Friedman, and then Friedman said to the President, "Have you ever been in the shirt-waist business?" The president replied, "No," and Friedman said, "Well, you will be in the morning."

4 DIE IN ATTEMPT TO HIDE SECRET OF DAUGHTER'S BIRTH

London, Aug. 20.—(Daily World Dispatch) — At the inquest held over the bodies of Mrs. Margaret Halse and her three children who were found hanging by their necks with ropes attached to their cabin roof at Patmooreheath, Herefordshire, it was revealed that the woman's husband, William Halse, who had been separated from his wife for six years, did not know she had a third child, Patty, 5, and denied the child was his.

The Coroner concluded that Mrs. Halse feared a forthcoming visit of the two older children with their father would give him an opportunity to learn the secret of little Patty, and that worry over this was responsible for her act.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 21, 1926

The DAILY WORLD is printed and published by the MONTREAL WORLD PUBLISHING CO., LIMITED, at 220 Lemoine Street, Montreal; Leslie M. Roberts, Secretary-Treasurer.

THE GAZETTE AND "SEPARATION"

If the Montreal Gazette is deliberately trying to bring about the separation of Canada from the Empire it could not do its work in a more insidious and subtle way. Every day it raises the question of "Separation", accusing Mr. King of wanting to bring it about. Thus the Gazette accustoms the people of Canada, or that section that it reaches, to the idea of separation.

In its Thursday issue, its London correspondent, John MacCormac, said in his cable dispatch:—

"It is, of course, open at any time to a self-governing dominion to withdraw from the commonwealth (meaning the British Empire.—Ed. D. W.) We should certainly not go to war about it."

The Gazette can not claim that it has no responsibility for what its London correspondent says; at any rate, the public can make no distinction between what the Gazette says editorially and what its official London representative writes. It must be thoroughly well-known to the Gazette that the Dominion of Canada, whatever powers other dominions may have, has no power nor authority to withdraw itself from the Empire; that any such withdrawal could only be attempted by means of an Act of the Federal Parliament of Canada, and that such legislation would be beyond its powers, as defined in the British North America Act, which is Canada's written constitution.

Such withdrawal would require the sanction and approval of the Imperial Parliament. It is true that the late Mr. Bonar Law, a Conservative, declared that, "If the self-governing dominions chose to say 'Tomorrow we will no longer make a part of the British Empire' we would not try to force them. Dominion home rule means the right to decide their own destinies", but the Irish Free State, when its constitution was being considered by the British Parliament, was specifically refused the right of secession, the Government rejecting an amendment to that effect, while General Smuts, when Prime Minister of South Africa, clearly recognized that the Union of South Africa can not dissolve its connection with the Empire by an act of its own Parliament. Canada, in like manner, "has authority to legislate for the peace, order, and good government of Canada and to pass an Act dissolving the dominion as 'under the crown of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland'," says Professor W. P. M. Kennedy, in his book, the Constitution of Canada, "would be extra-territorial legislation of an extreme form and of undoubted invalidity."

Canada can only be severed from the Imperial tie by an act of the Imperial Parliament. The Gazette knows this, or should know it before it sets up as an instructor of the people in the rights and powers of the Canadian people. Mr. King, leader of the Liberal Party, accepts this position in every speech he makes on the constitutional issue, which is every speech he delivers in the present campaign. We are self-governing within the Empire and there is no desire on the part of Canadians to separate. But the Gazette cultivates the idea, tells the people of Canada they can separate whenever they choose and, by its and its party's opposition to the British Preference, sows the seeds of separation in the minds of those weak-minded enough to be influenced by anything the Gazette says, which, thank God, is not many!

The Tory organ of Montreal is simply following in the footsteps of the Tories of Lord Elgin's day, who burned down the Parliament Buildings, then located in Montreal, and carried on a bitter and virulent campaign for the annexation of this country to the United States, simply because they were opposed to the people of Canada having Responsible Government. The Tories by discussing it are fostering the idea of separation from the Empire; the Liberals are standing by the British constitution and for Canada as a self-governing dominion within the Empire.

WANTING IT BOTH WAYS

Much is being made in certain quarters of the inflow of American capital to Canada, and this is being pointed out as a danger to the country. Incidentally the blame is being placed on "those wicked Liberals" for this condition. Unfortunately for those who take the foregoing view, the influx of American capital is more than anything else a direct consequence of High Protection, the Conservative religion. One of the chronic arguments for high tariffs is that their imposition will compel American manufacturers to establish factories in Canada and, in that way, give employment to Canadian workers.

The Conservatives cannot have it both ways. If Protection is to be the means of compelling American manufacturers, wanting the Canadian market for their products, to establish here the party of Protection cannot logically grumble when Protection has produced the result it was intended to produce. But while we may expect grumbles from the Conservatives we should not look for logic.

NATIONAL CONSCIOUSNESS

It is now becoming a crime for Canadians to have a national consciousness. Thus Senator Lynch-Staunton:—

"There is another group who are zealous to make Canada an independent nation within the British Association, not realizing that when we have created a national consciousness we have passed the half mile stone on the road to separation."

In other words this typical representative of "the stupid party" would have Canadians love any country but their own. The Englishman may love England, the Welshman Wales, the Scot Scotland, and still be loyal to the "British Association", as Senator Lynch-Staunton terms the British Empire—a name quite good enough for Liberals. But a Canadian must not love Canada with the same fervid warmth that those of us who have left the Motherland still love the individual country from which we have come, or else they are half way on the road to separation!

Of all the darn fool arguments we have heard in this present election this strikes us as about the darnedest. The only deduction that can be made from the Senator's assertion is that Baron Byng and Mr. Meighen were trying to stifle and kill the national consciousness of Canada when they conspired to destroy the constitution.

GREAT SPANISH NAVAL PLAN TO COST MILLIONS

London, Aug. 20 — (By H. H. Stansbury, Universal Service Writer) — It has just come to light that King Alfonso, during his recent visit to London, held more than one secret conference with naval experts, to whom he confided an ambitious plan to rehabilitate the once-proud Spanish navy that since 1898 has consisted of only a few obsolete vessels. Immediately following these conferences, the Spanish monarch became so enthusiastic over his naval expansion plan, he had the royal decree authorizing immediate construction of the proposed new units, sent to London for his signature. This calls for the expenditure of 877,000,000 pesetas, or about $220,000,000 in the next ten years.

Provision is made for 12 additional submarines of the C type, with the modifications which experience has proved advisable.

SOCIETY BRAND BUYER CANCELS $17,000 ORDER

WESTERN STORE, FEARING EFFECT OF STRIKE STORY, TURNS DOWN SOCIETY BRAND

Retailers of Society Brand Clothes are finding customers refusing to buy the brand because of their resentment against the low wages paid the workers in the factory of Society Brand, and a buyers' strike throughout the country is rapidly gathering momentum.

BY OUR SPECIAL INVESTIGATOR

In a drawer in my desk lies a card. It is the card of the buyer for one of the largest dealers in men's and youths' clothes in a large and important Western city. This buyer came to Montreal to place his orders for clothes and, I am informed, placed his order for Seventeen Thousand Dollars' worth of clothes with Society Brand. In the Mount Royal Hotel he bought a copy of the DAILY WORLD and therein read one of this series of strike articles.

He has cancelled the order for Society Brand Clothes on the ground that if the articles appearing in the DAILY WORLD should reach his city his firm would never be able to sell the products of the Society Brand factory.

ANTI-SWEAT SHOP FIGHT

That is only piece of the evidence of the way the DAILY WORLD'S campaign in behalf of the sweated workers of Samuel Hart and Company and Society Brand is taking hold of the people's sympathies and helping the striking workers win their battle.

A BUYERS' STRIKE

This incident does not stand alone. It follows on the cancellation of a $3,000 order of Society Brand clothes a few days ago. This cancellation came from an important centre in the Province of Quebec. Another instance of how strongly the public is feeling about the underpayment of the clothing workers is shown by the experience of several retailers of Society Brand clothes. In one case, a gentleman went into an uptown store and was being fitted on with a suit of Society Brand clothes when he noticed the label and refused to buy the suit, leaving the store without making any purchase.

Yet another case is that of two men refusing to buy Society Brand clothes in a downtown store when they realised what clothes they were. Now, I call that fine work, not that I want to see the business of any retailer injured because of Samuel Hart's stupid attempt to beat back the tide of unionism, the tide on which other employers in his trade ride to business success, larger profits, and increased production. But it is fine to know there are men who, WHEN THEY KNOW THE FACTS, will refuse to buy and wear clothes that are made under sweated conditions by workers who are underpaid and who, in the case of girls and women, are consequently placed in circumstances which may easily render them ready prey to temptation. The manhood of Canada will revolt, it is revolting though but on a small scale as yet, against the wearing of Society Brand clothes, a silent revolt, if you will, but a revolt nevertheless.

SAM SEES DEFEAT

Inside the factories of Samuel Hart and Company and Society Brand all is not well. From reports that I get I gather that the workers there are only kept at their work by special inducements and promises of better things later. Some of them went to the bosses one day this week and asked, "What shall we do if the Union wins? How long shall we get along with the other workers when they come back?" The answer that was given was, "If we see the Union is going to beat us we will tell you two or three days before we settle with the Amalgamated, so you can go and join the union before the strike is settled." That incident clearly reveals two things: one, that the workers now at work for Society Brand realize that there is a possibility of the Union winning the strike; and, two, Samuel Hart realizes that there is a PROBABILITY of the Union winning. And it is equally clear that both of them, the workers who are "scabbing" and the employers who are employing scab labor, are worrying about the consequences.

Well, neither has anything to fear. I have the most satisfactory assurances from the Union leaders that there will be no attempt at retaliation on their part against either those who have stayed at work, or have gone to work during the strike, or against the firms that have been struck against. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union is out to help the clothing industry, not to kill it, and it will waste no time in foolish recriminations and acts of vengeance. This is what pleases me about the Amalgamated men, the leaders of the present strike, they are not out to destroy but to build up.

A COOPERATIVE SPIRIT

I have already expressed my high regard for Sidney Hillman, the president, who is now in Montreal directing and supervising the effort to secure living wages for Montreal's clothing workers—or, rather, such of them as are still "out." Mr. Hillman's spirit pervades the entire organization and his subordinates, imbued by the same ideals, seem to have the same practical common sense that characterizes the President. These men are all men who have worked their way to their positions of leadership from the ranks of labor. They are capable of going back into the factory and doing almost any job in it with efficiency. Their strength is in their knowledge and their experience and, as I see it, that employer is foolish and very ill-advised who does not seek the full cooperation of these men and of the Amalgamated, instead of fighting to beat back Unionism.

CONSTRUCTIVE UNIONISM

These strike articles are giving the DAILY WORLD a circulation far beyond the city of Montreal and the province of Quebec. There is hardly a retailer of clothing in the Dominion of Canada who is not receiving a copy of this paper with the strike articles in every day. And I want this wide public we are now reaching to get the right viewpoint about Labor unionism. Present day unionism, the unionism of the Amalgamated type, is not destructive, it is constructive. Sidney Hillman, the President, said to me on Wednesday, "Why should we want to put any employer out of business and close his factory? We don't want to see our members thrown out of work; we want to see them employed regularly at good wages and we want to see the employers making money, for then our members are making money and everybody is satisfied." NO MYTH ABOUT OKANAGAN BEAST SAY B.C. PEOPLE

Summerland, B.C., Aug. 20 — (Daily World Dispatch) — There are no sceptics at this part of the Okanagan Lake concerning the presence of the so-called "maniti" or sea serpent. Too many people have seen the monster.

Within the last three weeks it has been seen four or five times by nine or ten different people, some of whom claim to have obtained a pretty close view of it.

The description of the "maniti" as many now believe it is, given by nearly every one, coincided in many particulars. All claimed that it was anywhere between 10 and 16 feet long. Its head resembled that of a sheep, and one person who viewed it through field glasses stated that there appeared to be folds of skin which gave the neck a raised appearance. All agreed that it travelled with great speed, nearly 20 miles an hour. It travelled with sinuous movement, the undulations of the body being up and down.

Unionism is not antagonistic to the employers; its spirit and desire is cooperative. Anybody who knows working people know how loyal they are to their salt, how attached to their employers, or to the firm they work for, they really become. They love to "stick up" for the place they work at, the firm they work for, the plant they help to run. In a sense they feel it is their place, their firm, their plant. What fools employers are not to cash in on this inbred and instinctive loyalty. It is this spirit the Amalgamated is trying to encourage and which it practices itself in its relationship with employers.

UNIONISM FAIR TO ALL

It is commonly argued that the unions force the employers to pay wages that are too high to enable them to make their businesses pay in competition with others. But, if all employers are in agreement with the union in their particular industry, and all are paying the same rates of wages there is no undue competition on that score. As to wages, the competing firms stand equal. The only competition is then in efficiency, in better methods of production, in styles, and the like, and that sort of competition we shall always have with us. This is Sidney Hillman's argument, not mine, though I fully agree with it. And it is a common sense argument.

You people who have had your prejudices against Labor Unions, think the question out for yourselves. Is it not better for the community to have workers well-paid, with consequently high purchasing power and standards of living, contented and cooperative with their employers, rather than ill-paid, with low purchasing power and standards of living, and combative instead of cooperative? I believe it is and so will you if you think the question out for yourselves. Labor and Capital are not fundamentally or immediately antagonistic; they are mutually necessary. They are, or should be, partners in a joint enterprise. Capital has the machinery and the organizing ability; Labor has the power and skill to use the machinery, and the ideal system is where both come together and cooperate to the advantage of themselves and the community.

It is the purpose of these articles not merely to show sympathy with the striking clothing workers and help them win their battle for higher wages and better conditions of labor, but to do something constructive to assist the purposes of Labor unionism and secure thereby such conditions of labor in this city and country as shall ensure a highly-paid working class, with high purchasing power, not only as a measure of justice to the workers, but as the only means of making and keeping this city and country prosperous. Let yourself do some thinking over these points during the week-end. You may hear many a worse sermon if you go to Church.

HOLDUP SUSPECT TRAPPED BY WILES OF CHORUS GIRLS

New York, Aug. 20 — (Daily World Dispatch) — George W. Ford, a former bank clerk of Highland Park, Mich., is under arrest, charged with stealing nearly $8,000, as a result of his report to police that two chorus girls had robbed him of $5,000.

MYSTERY SHROUDS 4 KILLINGS IN MONTREAL DURING 5 YEARS

By JAMES R. WATSON

The killing of Joseph Antonio Beaudry last Saturday afternoon in his private office at Le Prix Courant, 198 Notre Dame Street East, has supplied the fourth murder in Montreal during the past five years for which no one has been convicted.

In two of the cases men were brought to trial, but acquitted of the charges. In another, police are certain they know the identity of the slayers who have never been caught. The fourth—and now the Beaudry affair—is a real mystery.

Probably the greatest sensation ever brought to light in Eastern Canada came when Raoul Delorme was found shot to death in the snow in a road on the outskirts of the city on February, 1921. Proceedings lasted for years, and finally the Rev. Abbe Delorme, half-brother of the dead man, was acquitted. No one has been found guilty of the crime.

CONSTABLE SLAIN

Constable J. B. Beaudry was shot by one of two men who had bundles of a suspicious nature under their arms. This was in March, 1923. The assailants have never been caught, although police have circularized the world with photos and descriptions of Mike White and Izzy Daskell, declared to have been recognized by another constable as the murderers.

William Clarke, a nightwatchman, was killed in the foundry of the Jenkins' plant in St. Henry one night about two years ago. A discharged employee was arrested, tried, convicted and sentenced to death. He secured a second trial and was acquitted. That crime still remains a mystery.

Mrs. Dupuis, wife of a railway worker, was found by her husband with her throat gashed from ear to ear some months ago. She died in a few minutes. Detectives have been unable to fasten the crime upon anyone.

Outside the city the most outstanding crime was the double axe murder of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bernard in the branch office of the Banque Canadienne Nationale at Rougemont on October 24th last. Not the slightest clue to the slayer has ever been found.

And now the list apparently has been increased by the present affair. Detectives, while they have given up neither hope nor work, seem unable to track down the killer.

Your Montreal and Mine

By James R. Watson — No. 16

Up clangs an ambulance and a tiny, broken form is carried tenderly, laid on an operating table, and silent, swift, efficient surgeons set to work to repair the too-often fatal damage inflicted by some speeding motor car.

The unconscious child, mangled perhaps beyond hope; the aged man to whom shock is worse than injury; the struggling worker hurt at his daily grind; the sailor in port who falls into a yawning hold—all find in hospital that relief from pain which is the bounden duty of disciples of Hippocrates, just as it is the duty of disciples of Christ to relieve spiritual anguish.

Montreal has its great hospitals which are filled to overflowing. There the sick, the halt, and the blind go in their hundreds. Some return; better in health, others are too far gone for aid, and others leave the institution stiff and cold.

They are marvels of organization, these hospitals. Physicians, nurses, orderlies, probationers, all work for the good of physical humanity. Surgeons, specialists, give of their time and knowledge so that health may return to their patients; nurses bathe heated brows, renew dressings; relieve suffering in their own efficient manner.

The out-door departments treat everything from dust in the eye to broken legs. On certain days may be seen all manner of men and women and children awaiting their turn to consult the great specialist who, when he makes a call on Sherbrooke Street, forwards an account which would keep many a family for a month. Yet he gives the same service, the same care to the little boy from the slums that he gives the rich man's son.

True, one hears criticism of the hospitals. But what would we do without them?

They are here for our service, and we never know when we may be in that hot, ether-filled operating room, with surgeons fighting to save our lives.

"I will tell you nothing but the truth," she said, her voice sounding like a sigh of relief.

He smiled gravely and shook his head slowly. "How long, I wonder, will it take me to understand you? You won't agree that there shall be nothing but the truth between us, but you will agree to tell me nothing but the truth. I would have thought the words meant the same thing, but I can see that your brain, more subtle than mine, makes a distinction. I understand, however: You have a secret from me. Well, I take that as a challenge; and I shall some day discover that secret."

"No, no!" she cried, starting up, her face pale. "If you care a little bit for my friendship, if it means anything to you, don't discover my secret. The moment you do, I shall have to leave you. Please, Mr. Thorne! Please!"

"A secret that concerns some other—friend," he said, a swift, stern flash in his eyes.

Gladys shook her head and smiled so sweetly that he was instantly placated. "Oh, no! I have no friends in the world but you and Mildred. This secret is my very own. It concerns me."

"Your husband, perhaps," he said quickly.

She smiled, showing her white teeth, and making all her dimples play about the corners of her mouth. "No," she said. "I tell you it is my own, and no one's else. And now I want to add an article to our agreement."

He laughed, knowing that there was to be a quip at his expense. "What is it?" he demanded.

"There is to be no third degree between us," she answered.

"Agreed!" he said. "I had no business to ask questions. Only—But there! I am sure Wall Street must be tired of waiting."

They separated, a smile and a glance of perfect understanding satisfying Gladys that there was no shadow of any sort between them.

She went to Miss Staples at once, and found her and her usually most correct department in a subdued ferment. Indeed, the news had got about the offices; and, as she learned afterward, it was being said that Mr. Thorne's unaccountable dislike for Mrs. Spencer had had to yield to her exceptional merit.

"He has told you?" Miss Staples demanded; quite in the tone of one who could conceive of but one person to whom that personal pronoun could refer.

"He told me that I was to be his confidential secretary. That is all. He said you would tell me whatever else I should know. Are you sure I am fit?"

"Of course you are, so far as that is concerned. And I have said I trusted you, Mrs. Spencer. That is why he is putting you into such a responsible position. And I am sure that you will be loyal to him; won't you?"

"You need not be troubled about that."

"No; I'm sure. Isn't he good? Did you know that he gives me a vacation of six weeks with full pay and two passes to Florida and return? It's worth while to put your heart and soul in your work, isn't it, when you are appreciated like that? Your pay is to be raised."

"Oh, Miss Staples!" cried Gladys. "Why, of course! You are to have forty a week."

"I can't take it; I can't," exclaimed Gladys. "How can I earn it? No, I'll tell him I can't take it."

"Not take it!" was Miss Staples's shocked exclamation. "Speak to him about it! He wouldn't know what to make of such a thing. It's the pay of the position. Of course you'll take it. I never knew any one quite so conscientious as you, Mrs. Spencer. Of course you'll take it. And you will have the desk in the little room off of his. You will take care of his telephone—guard him, you know. And don't mind his quick ways. Sometimes he's impatient, but he has so much on his mind, you see. And when he learns that you are trying to please—"

Gladys interrupted her with a question. It seemed to her that she could not endure such comment on a man with whom she already felt herself on terms of peculiar intimacy. And fortunately she had so many questions to ask that Miss Staples was kept busy answering her.

It was a day full of doubts and difficulties for Gladys, but she maintained an appearance of poise, particularly when she was with Robert, so that no one saw in her anything different from the usual. Indeed, Miss Staples almost indignantly commented to Miss Bonner on her calmness.

Robert, too, commented on her manner, but differently. He was kept exceedingly busy all the day, so that their only communication with each other was of business, and then usually in the presence of other persons. But once, in the afternoon, he called her for dictation, and after finishing it, said suddenly:—

"You act as if you had done

"And you inspire me."
"Mr. Thorne!" she said protestingly.

"It is the truth," he said quickly. "I'll tell you nothing but the truth. I have today made a decision that I have not been able to make for a week. And I tell you it has been due to the comprehending little friend I have won. I get ideas by looking at you."

"You didn't lack them before," she said with a smile.

"Ah!" said he, patting her lightly on the hand as he bent forward to get up, "you are a wretched little skeptic; but some day I shall convince you how valuable you are to me. I hope I shall mean as much to you."

That night she sat in her room, trying to make up her mind what to do. As it was her way to do she had sat down with the truth squarely facing her. "I love him," she said to herself, her sweet, winsome face pale and set. "I love him. Now what shall I do?"

During the day she had tried with all her might to forget one little thing; to put it out of her mind when it insistently returned. She had kept telling herself that she loved him, but that Miss Staples plainly did, also; so how could there be any harm or any danger in her remaining there with him?

"He doesn't know how I love him; I'll never tell him. He would laugh if he knew Miss Staples's se-had deliberately sat down with truth.

"He called me Gladys," she said to herself, a moan escaping her lips, but a throb of joy leaping from her heart. "He cares for me! Can a man and a woman have a friendship? What shall I do? What shall I do?"

It would have been easy to answer that there was but one thing to do—go away; leave his office. That would have solved the difficulty, but it was the one thing she knew she could not, or would not, do. She wished to know how she could remain with him and yet avoid danger.

She knew and admitted to herself without equivocation that she loved him. She recalled again and again with passionate joy how her heart had leaped when in the moment of emotion he had called her Gladys; how she had thrilled when he had taken her hand, or had touched her hand or wrist or shoulder. And she drew a deep breath every time she thought of that angry flash in his gray eyes when he had asked if her secret concerned some other friend; knowing, as she did, that he was thinking of some other man.

She was perfectly sure of her feeling for him, but she was not at all sure of his for her. It seemed for the most part like sheer presumption in her to imagine that he meant anything more than he said. How was it likely that he would care much for her when there was beautiful, perfect Barbara in his life? Surely it must be only as he said, her friendship and her help in his work that he desired.

Tired out at last with going over and over the matter, she told herself that she would watch carefully during the week to see if he betrayed anything more than simple friendship. Then she would decide what to do.

Danger

Gladys developed a marvelous aptitude for her new task during the days that followed. She was so eager to justify her fitness for the position she had been placed in that she spared no effort to master all its details. And she learned to look hungrily for the expression of surprise and delight with which Robert greeted every demonstration of her ability.

He talked very freely with her about his affairs in the course of their development; and once, being puzzled about the next step in an important matter, discussed it with her with a view to clearing his own mind, rather as thinking aloud than as expecting any comment from her, but she, listening avidly, timidly made a suggestion.

He stared at her, a slight frown on his brow, which already she knew to indicate the clearing up of a problem; then of a sudden he snatched up his telephone and called up the financier with whom he was especially engaged in the affair in question; and Gladys was startled to find him bringing the matter to a definite conclusion along the lines she had suggested.

When it was done and the receiver hung up, Robert looked at her and shook his head slowly, that look of admiration which she had learned to crave lighting up his keen eyes.

"You little witch!" he said. "How in the world did you work that out? You went straight to the point that I have been seeking all day long."

"It was a lucky guess," she said, flushing with pleasure.

"Ah, yes!" he laughed. "I know; the lucky guess of a silly little woman."

Some Charming New French Lingerie Modes

Harmonious Colors and Pastel Shades Fashion Dainty Undies

By ANNETTE BRADSHAW

There are fashions in undies just as there are in gowns and hats and shoes. One year the smart world inclines to bloomers and vests in the way of undergarments and the next year nothing but "teddies" will do.

Certainly, there is no garment which rivals the popularity of the chemise today. It combines the advantages of several undergarments in its own dainty, complete self. And the woman who desires above all things to look slim and girlish, knows the importance of having underclothes that are not bulky.

The teddy at the left is one of the most popular styles. It is a combination of bandeau brassiere and chemise. Really, it is all that is necessary under a silk gown in the warm weather. The lace is ecru while the crepe of which the chemise is fashioned may be pale peach, flesh, green or yellow. The dainty pin-tucks add to the distinction of the garment.

At the right is a more elaborate and unusual piece of lingerie. It combines the benefits of the slip and the chemise. The pleated ruffle at the bottom reaches almost to the hemline of the new short frocks and it is sufficiently full to take the place of the slip. The top or bodice is straight and very simple.

The combination undie has come to stay, for the modern woman likes simplified clothes and prefers to reduce the number of garments she wears to the minimum that is compatible with modesty and an attractive appearance.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliffe

SHE DESCRIBES A LOVELY COAT FOR EARLY FALL

I lunched today with a friend, at one of the smart restaurants, where one always sees well-dressed women.

It happened to be warm, so we had crisp lettuce and tomato aspic salad, with iced tea, lurching leisurely and watching the people drift in and out.

"By the way," Jean exclaimed on one of those characteristic quick inspirations of hers, "I've been invited to a showing of early Fall coats this afternoon. Couldn't you go with me?"

"I'd adore to," I answered truthfully. "But I wonder if Madame can spare me."

"Do phone her and find out," Jean urged. "Tell her it will be instructive as well as pleasant."

I followed Jean's advice, and Madame said she could let me off for a while.

"This man is a very exclusive women's tailor," Jean explained, after she had given instructions to the taxi driver.

I was charmed at the opportunity, for I felt sure I could give the girls at Madame's some pointers on their Fall coats.

We stopped at a building on upper Fifth Avenue, and I followed Jean into the elevator and out at a spacious floor done in soft gray. There were chairs ranged all about in the familiar manner of Madame's salon on the afternoon of a fashion showing.

"I feel very much at home, only it seems queer to be sitting and watching, instead of parading as a manikin," I whispered to Jean.

The room was almost full when we arrived, but smart-looking women continued to stream in, and soon the show began.

We saw many stunning coats, fur-trimmed and plain, many of them with deep armholes and bloused effects. Others had loose straightback panels, buttoned at one side or both.

Jean and I decided in favor of the simpler coats, and Jean, as is her habit, couldn't leave without first ordering one of the best-looking models shown.

I'm saving a drawing of it here in my diary, as I think it quite typical of the smart travelling or sports coat of this Fall. The material is grayish blue tweed, and the collar gray fox. At each side there is an unusual tab arrangement drawn through a slit in the material and held by a gray-blue bone button. There are also tabs fastened to the cuffs, held by smaller matching buttons.

The Home Kitchen

By Jeannette Norton

THE ELUSIVE KITCHENETTE

Our "light" housekeeping friends who have tiny kitchenettes usually want to show them to friends and tell what wonderful things may be done in them. We notice, however, that they soon tire of coaxing anything but frugal breakfasts and luncheons from their depths.

Friends who board or room are secretive about their kitchenettes that for good and sufficient reasons are kept in hiding. One woman has solved the problem perfectly and her kitchen lives in the open, though cleverly concealed. A tall four-fold screen hides from view a table equipped with two good-sized drawers. On the table are four cords running to four modern electric utensils. Beside the table is a small electric refrigerator. On the other side is a portable closet, with a long shelf running over and across all. A tea wagon stands in one of the folds of the screen with a tea service on it, over which is a linen and lace veil to keep off the dust.

Electric cooking laks the greasy smoke that makes it a problem to use a gas stove in small quarters. This fact allows concealment in the use of the electric kitchenette. The utensils are fascinating and one finds it difficult to restrict herself to only those actually needed.

Even with less equipment than that described, one may be quite comfortable with a kitchenette in the open, even if room or apartment has not provided a stuffy corner or a dark closet for its reception. Simplified living is desirable from many points of view for part of the year for grownups; where there are children it is another story.

Daddy Dusk

The Sandman

Nothing pleases a child more than to feel that people are interested in him. A nationally-known newspaper man who loves children, will tell here every day a story about Daddy Dusk, who takes little boys and girls for Dream Journeys every evening. Send Daddy Dusk the name of one or more of your children, so that he may print their names in the Daily World and take them on a journey to sleep. It delights a child to see his name in a Dream Story.

DADDY DUSK, Care of Daily World.

"I have a letter here from a little boy and girl who want to go to the Land of Flowers," said Doodle to Daddy Dusk.

Small felt hats with very high crowns, either draped or stiff, are being shown for Fall wear.

The jumper frock still holds its own, developed in satin, crepe or pastel chiffon.

"I'll be glad to take them," replied the old man.

Daddy Dusk hopped into the airship and away he went to Ross St., Verdun, where he stopped at the home of Marion and Willie Ingram, and, strange to say, they were not there to greet him. He looked in the beds, then under the beds, then all over her room, and still he could not find them.

By and by he discovered them sleeping on the sofa in another room.

"Come, we must hurry!" he whispered.

"I think it would be a good idea to go to the pansy fields first," said Daddy Dusk, "for if I take you to see all the flowers then you will get confused, there are so many of them."

"I love pansies," said Marion.

"Oh, look at the little people!" exclaimed Willie suddenly.

Daddy Dusk looked, but all he could see was a field of pansies. "Those are pansies you see — they look like little faces," he said.

"That's one thing we have learned," remarked the children.

CONSTANT WORK WILL CUT LIFE SHORT

By Royal S. Copeland, M. D.

Not long ago the Presbyterian ministers drafted a code of ethics and submitted it to the New York Presbytery. This document was divided into three parts: Personal standards, relations with the parish, relations with the profession. Since doctors rarely hold a convention without discussing our code of ethics, I was much interested in the proposed ministerial code. Two sections relating to personal standards I wish to quote:

"Part of the minister's service as a leader of his people is to reserve sufficient time for serious study in order thoroughly to apprehend his messages, keep abreast of current thought and devotion his intellectual and spiritual capabilities. "It is equally the minister's duty to keep physically fit. A weekly holiday and an annual vacation should be taken and used for rest and improvement."

Why isn't this good advice for all of us?

There is in the nature of every man a social and spiritual field which requires cultivation. We are bound to miss much of the joy of life if this field is neglected. One of the evils of modern life, as I see it, is the lack of opportunity for study and reflection. The other day we read about the trip of Thomas Jefferson's gig from Monticello to Philadelphia. Mounted on an automobile chassis, it did in a few hours what required six days when Jefferson drove it to the capitol, a hundred and fifty years ago.

The conditions of his day forced upon Jefferson time which could be used no other way than in study and meditation. We need to order our affairs so that in our day we may have time for self-examination. Soul growth is impossible otherwise.

I endorse what the preachers said about that. They are abreast of fact, too, when they point out the importance of health. It is a sinful neglect of duty to overlook the needs of the body.

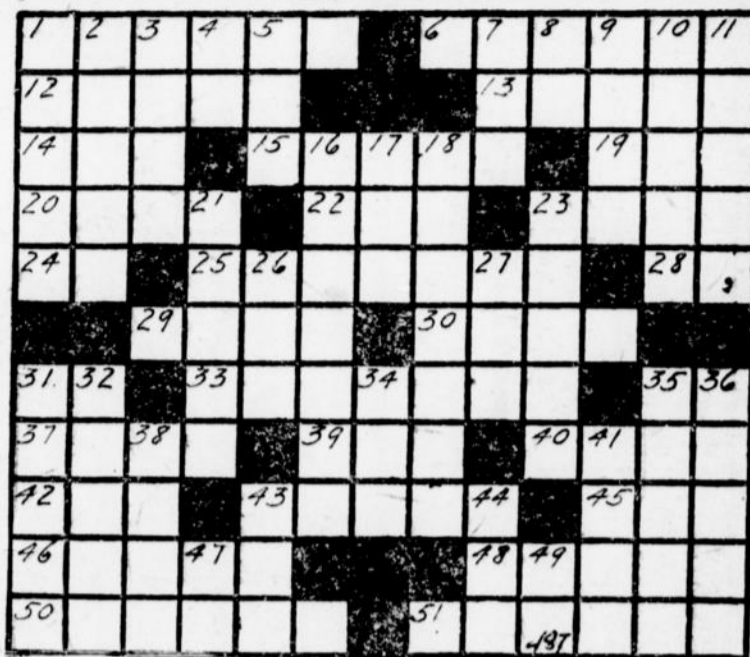

I don't care whether you are a preacher, a doctor, a lawyer, a farmer, or a housewife. No matter what your calling in life may be, your career will be stunted and starved unless you keep physically fit. Fundamental to success in any field is a foundation of good health.

To work seven days every week, year in and year out, means that your life will be shortened about fifteen per cent. One-seventh of your length of days is likely to be cut off from your career.

But this isn't all: If you work seven days a week your productivity will be materially decreased. Year in and year out, a six day worker will produce much more than a seven day worker.

Let us adopt the ministers' code. It is good.

ELEANOR BOARDMAN

The horoscope of Miss Eleanor Boardman shows why she has made such a success in the pictures, for Mars, star of energy and initiative, is with Neptune, lord of the silver sheet, and Venus, goddess of art, and Jupiter, ruler of finance, are merging their vibrations in the harmonious Libra, a sign which nearly always confers popularity.

The sun is now nearing the end of Leo, the sign of kings—the sign in which the great solar vibrations are most powerful, for the sun rules over the destiny of all the children of Leo. It is a fortunate sign, fiery, impulsive, highly gifted—the sun being the source of all life and creative energy; impulsive, inclined to be domineering, with some tendency to dramatic display, yet, withal, practical and persevering. Emotional and sometimes very amorous and pleasure loving, there is always something attractive and appealing about the people of Leo which makes it easy to forgive their faults. They are so generous and have such faith in the goodness of humanity that they bring out the best that is in the rest of us. When they are too indolent to make good use of their abilities and opportunities they can be very exasperating, and the only way to manage them seems to be through an appeal to their love for some one person. If they will not exert themselves for their own sake, perhaps they may for the person they love.

A successful year lies before those born August 21 or 22, for opportunities and unexpected favors will come to them. Today's child will be popular and gifted.

Wife or Stenographer --- Which?

He was constantly recalling to her that phrase about being silly; and because it showed how far from the truth he thought it, it always delighted her. In fact, he thought her the cleverest woman, excepting Mildred, he had ever met.

Another man with a lesser genius for affairs might have been deflected from his work by such close association with a woman who was increasingly attractive to him. Once he said to her with that note of admiration in his tone that always sent her heart upward with a leap:—

"You are almost distractingly beautiful."

"I'm glad it's only almost," she answered.

"It is only almost," he said. "You don't distract me, you stimulate me. I have never been so clear-headed."

"How I would like to be sure of that!" she murmured. "It is true," he assured her. "You listen so attentively; you comprehend so easily; you speak so wisely."

He did not add what was in his mind at the time. "In all of which you are so different from Barbara." Indeed he avoided all reference to Barbara when he was with Gladys.

He had spoken of Gladys to Barbara, however. He did so reluctantly, and only because he was afraid she would hear of her old boss's promotion from Mildred, if he did not. They were at dinner, and he said with studied carelessness:—

"Oh! I gave Miss Staples a vacation, and on her recommendation I have made Mrs. Spencer my confidential secretary."

Barbara looked at him. For some reason she was disturbed. "I hope she will prove equal to the work," she said.

"She has already proved more than equal," he retorted with a trace of sharpness in his tone

M.A.A.A. NINES HAVE BUSY WEEK-END SCHEDULED

Amateur baseball is down for three games over the week-end. This afternoon at M.A.A.A. grounds Section B will stage a scheduled game when the league leaders meet their old rivals in the M. A. A. A. nine. The Red and Blue, although out of the title race, are nevertheless anxious to score a win having been the only team to down North Branch this season. Manager Joe Hess will send Red Thomas to the mound with Carr to do the backstopping. Wainright will again get the heaving assign-ment with Chalmers behind the plate. These two teams always provide plenty of action and this game will be no exception. Alexandra Park will be the scene of a good doubleheader for Section A on Sunday afternoon. At 1.45 Excelsiors will meet the C.N.R. team. The feature clash will be the Montefiore-Columbus game. This will be Columbus's first game since their suspension by the A. A. U. Ladies are admitted free and the gentlemen will be taxed 35 cents.

CARSTEEL FAVORED FOR CHARITY CUP TO-DAY

EXPECT DEFENCE BATTLE IN FINALS ON MCGILL FIELD

And now we come to a consideration of the possibilities of the Charity Cup Final today at McGill Stadium, probably one of the most picturesque grounds in the world.

C.P.R. are up against Carsteel Admittedly the Thornton Park crowd have not been the effective force this season which was expected of them, but might it be said—it must be said—that C.P.R. are not the team which they used to be.

Again it will be a battle of defences. It will not be what Jim Keith calls a "circumscribed area" that the players will operate in tomorrow. They will have room enough to allow of their clothes handing out to dry. "Jack in the box" has always the advantage of the fellow who is hammering to get in, but today there will be—there must be—an exhibition of clean open football.

You ask me as you have an absolute right to ask, what is likely to be the outcome. You know that I cannot sit on a fence. I think Carsteel will win. Despite what you have read the line up of the Carsteel team has not been decided upon as yet. It is almost a certainty the forward line will include Davy Mackenzie, but just where he will be in the front rank has not been decided upon. We have this idea about the game, that the player who has been asked so long to stand on the touch line will be the deciding factor in the game.

You ask why. At the Stadium he will have room to operate. On a narrow ground you could do a very great deal that you could not accomplish on a field such as is the Stadium. That is where his true worth will be seen. We have no official knowledge but we have a hunch that Jack Green will be at inside right and Mackenzie will be at inside left.

Mac is not a spectacular player but he gets there all the same. He thinks before he kicks or heads a ball.

Of course C.P.R. will have a little say in the argument. When you have an Angel in your team then you have to go canny. There will be a Foreman on duty, and Bill Langley is certain to take a hand in the playing of the cards.

Still Carsteel should win.

CHALLENGE TO CAN. RECREATION F.C.

As most of the Montreal Soccer players are aware, Ste. Annes Hospital Amateur Football club—which, by the way is affiliated with the P. Q. F. A.—is some team and has some record.

Early in the season they were defeated in the first round of the Qualifying Cup by the Canadian National Recreation F.C. On July 23rd this same team was in receipt of a challenge by the hospital team but up to the hour of going to press there has been no reply from them.

As Montreal teams are aware, Ste. Annes prefer to play their games at home on the hospital grounds for the reason that the team was formed absolutely for the benefit of ex-soldier patients to provide them with games throughout the season and great pleasure is derived therefrom by ex-soldier patients who are unable to leave hospital.

To date Ste. Annes have scored 62 goals and lost only 21.

We should say that the National Recreation will be only too willing to accept the challenge, and we will be charitable in supposing that the industrious official stenographer is on his vacation. We have no proof of this however.

EAST AND WESTERN D.F.A. VICE-PRES.

It was at the Sons of Scotland smoker a suggestion was thrown out that the Dominion of Canada was too big to be managed on the old time regime.

I think somehow that the suggestion was made by myself.

The idea I have always maintained was the most practical plan was either a clean break away from the D.F.A. or the creation of Vice-Presidencies to be responsible to the Dominion body in matters of vital import but that in matters which are purely local they should, as Vice-Presidents, be vested with absolute power.

I understand from information received there is a possibility of the suggestion being adopted, but there is such danger of the Toronto dominance that it will be to the advantage of the legislators here to take heed of what may possibly happen in the future.

"East is East, and West is West and ne'er the Twain will meet—unless at the 'annual.'"

HINT TO PLAYERS FROM OLD COUNTRY

All players coming from the other side would be as well to call at 220 Lemoine Street before they do anything in the signing up line either for Canadian clubs or on the solicitation of representatives from the States.

I make the statement in view of certain inquiries which have been made.

BRENNANS FREE AS COMPLAINANT DIDN'T APPEAR

With the complainant missing and no evidence to offer against the accused by his attorney, Judge Cusson yesterday dismissed the charge against Mr. and Mrs. Jack L. Brennan, who were alleged to have obtained two horses from F. J. Lassiter by an act which, if committed in Canada, would have been theft.

James Crankshaw and Rene Tivierge appeared for the defence.

in Montreal with Marty Moran, he still insists that there are too many people who want to be presidents. Some achieve greatness, others have the load thrust upon them, and some carry the burden lightly. A lot of worldly wisdom in his remarks.

MURPHY STYLES REF. TRAFFIC COP

Murphy of Carsteel is a better humorist than he is a goalkeeper. That's saying something. We'll mention no names, but at a recent game when the official supposedly in charge was wasting his wind through a whistle, the Carsteel keeper was heard to observe that he should be "a traffic cop."

Can you beat this?

WHO HAD CHARGE OF THE MAROONS?

Am sorry to have to say, but it is certain that the P.Q.F.A. will make enquiries as to who was in charge of the Maroons touring the States. Jock Somerville wants to know.

SPARTANS STILL KEEP ON WINNING

On their way to the United States to play a series of Soccer matches under the direction of the Sparta Athletic Association of Chicago, the Spartans of Prague, champions of Czecho-slovakia, tied in their first match in Spain. They were pitted against a picked eleven of the best soccer players in Barcelona and the score was 2-2. The skill of "Kada" and Hajny of the Czech team won even the partisan Spanish to approbation.

WHAT IS REALLY WRONG WITH SOCCER HERE IN MONTREAL

Is there a Montreal League team, which as the result of their League fixtures, is solvent today?

This is not a question purposely framed with the ostensible object of "getting at" the P. Q. F. A. It is a query based upon knowledge as to the financial status of clubs who are struggling along to keep their head above water. The Leagues and the P.Q.F.A. have had a conference and thus early in the season they wonder why it is that the people are not flocking to the games as of yore. The referees were blamed. There were those who said that they were as good as there was in soccer.

Where? The whistlers have a great deal to do with the deterioration of the game. They either don't know how to control 22 players or are sublimely content to allow the said 22 to rule them. It is an open issue. We require the game to be freed from the puerility of thought which occupies a corner—a special corner—in their sepulchral brain pan. Given charge of a whistle means a very great deal, but you would actually think when you come in contact with some of these highly paid fellows, that the whistle was actually in charge of them.

Supposing you had a John Lewis, a Fred Kirkham, an Alick Jackson, a Peter Craigmyle, a Howeroft, oeh the whole bunch of men who are or were recognized in the game, do you think for one moment that the people in England would stand for some of the stuff which is handed out here? They wouldn't. Referees in Montreal have a very great deal to be held responsible for, firstly because of the exercise by some of a very great deal of unnecessary authority, too little authority, by others an inability to apply the rules of the game, and an overwhelming appeal to their superlative importance when in charge of a game where there is call for the exercise of that control which means so very much to men who know that they have a general in command.

There does not seem to any people about who are either anxious or willing to stand up for the liberty of the press. Newspapermen can do a very great deal. They are very jealous of their profession, and they do object to be treated as school-boys at the game when some people who are in partial control are in the infant class. Some people who climbed a pailing to get into see a game in the old country—commendable enterprise—come over here with the audacity that they dominated the situation where football was born, are shouting the loudest in Montreal. They should not be allowed to be heard.

We are of a mind to do everything to give the game a real helping hand along but if there are people who think that the Montreal Leagues can struggle without the aid of the press, they might as well be consigned to where there is no winter, because they don't know the first thing about their business.

Fred Davies can do a very great deal to consolidate matters, and he will have the unswerving support of any newspaper man who is capable of thinking rightly.

HARADA AND TAWARA TRIM CUBANS IN DOUBLES

JAPS MEET FRENCH TENNIS STARS IN DAVIS CUP SERIES WIN OVER CUBANS IN DOUBLES GIVE ORIENTALS MATCH HERE

By G. NORMAN COLLIE

Japan claimed the right to go to Forest Hills to play France in the semi-finals of the 1926 Davis Cup tennis tournament by decisively winning the doubles match over the Cuban team at the Mount Royal Tennis Club yesterday afternoon. Takeichi Harada, paired with Sekio Tawara, drove the Cuban team, composed of Captain Rogelio and Raoul Chacon, into submission in straight sets, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2.

Volley after volley of smashing forearm drives and hard chops were sent at the Cuban defences by the Japanese. At the start of the first set, the Cuban net defence seemed impenetrable. Harada and Tawara were having difficulty placing their shots, but after the second game they succeeded in breaking through with accurate placements and unreturnable drives.

The Cuban strategy consisted of working to net and there make their stand. As fast as they worked up, however, the Japanese drove them back with high lofts and sizzling smashes.

As in Thursday's games, the Orientals had it on the Cubans in service, their ball being driven with great force and accuracy. Twice during the first set, Tawara sacrificed game point to speed and double-faulted, practically making a gift of the third and seventh games to the Cubans.

JAPS BOMBARD CUBANS

Taking advantage of their one set lead, the Japanese bombard the Cubans throughout the second set. All Paris and Chacon could do was lob the ball in return, thus paying right into the hands of their opponents. Some of the Japs' shots were going wide and Tawara had difficulty in putting the ball across the net, but for the most part their smashing campaign was a continuous success.

Paris and Chacon fought hard to keep up the stiff pace their opponents were leading them and both teams brought sustained applause by amazing returns.

Tawara and Chacon drew the admiration of the spectators in the third set when they staged a stirring rally of backhand shots. The Cuban was tired from the first two sets, however, and on Captain Paris fell the brunt of the match set.

The dapper little Latin was all over the court, fighting a courageous but hopeless, last ditch battle. Several times he made hard pickups to earn the cheers of the gallery, and he made a bold attempt to beat the Japs at their own game, smashing drives.

PACE SLOWS CHACON

The terrific pace showed visibly on Chacon, whose last service was so weak as to be mediocre. He either double-faulted or barely lobbed the ball across the net. Both Tawara and Harada were playing him with good results, for Chacon could only net the slashing drives sent at him.

The Cubans took the first two games of the match set, but their lead was short-lived. From then on the Japanese marched steadily toward their goal, the match, and the Cubans were unable to swing another game into the win column.

TOBA BEATS HAM

In the exhibition singles preceding the Davis Cup match, Teijo Toba had an easy time defeating Dr. Arthur Ham, of Toronto, spare man on the Canadian Davis Cup team, 6-1, 6-4. Neither player was brilliant on the court, but Toba made several difficult shots that pleased the spectators. He had little difficulty returning his opponent's drives, and after short rallies, Ham returned the ball in listless fashion, either netting the ball, or giving Toba wide-open chances to make easy kills.

CAPT. SHIMIZU EXHIBITS

To make a clean sweep of the match thus far, Zenzo Shimizu, Japanese team captain, defeated William Crocker, Canadian Davis Cup team captain, in an exhibition singles match, 6-1, 6-0. Shimizu took things easy, depending a great deal on his tricky serve, which is difficult to fathom and often resulted in his opponent netting the serve.

Harada

The Japanese team captain went about the match in much the same manner as a man making out his income tax return, only with more apparent pleasure, and less difficulty. He is a matter-of-fact type of player, less colorful than his teammates, and depended chiefly on his wit to defeat his opponent. Crocker put up a game battle, but did not force the Japanese to exert himself.

Today, Capt. Paris will meet Tawara and Dr. Vincent Banet will meet Harada in the singles finals.

TORONTO FORGES AHEAD BY 6-3 WIN; YANKS AGAIN

New York, Aug. 20. — (Daily World Dispatch)—In a game which contained everything usually found exclusively in grammar school leagues, the Yanks defeated St. Louis, 10 to 4, gaining a game and a half on the Athletics, who were dropping two games they could not afford to lose.

The Browns contributed five errors to the general fun, while the Yanks duplicated two of the misplays. Both teams hit the apple hard, the starting pitchers on neither team being in uniform when the game ended.

Newark, Aug. 20.—(Daily World Dispatch)—Toronto got another foot on first place when they defeated the Newark Bears 11 to 2 this afternoon, while the Orioles were losing to Syracuse, 6 to 3.

St. Louis, Aug. 20. — (Daily World Dispatch)—By trimming the Giants, 6-2, St. Louis cut the Pittsburgh Pirates' lead in the National League to one-tenth of one percentage point. The Giants made their two runs in the fourth.

Cornell was Westward's last years Junior quarter and shows great promise. He is in fine condition having been paddling for Valois all season.

"I DON'T LIKE THE WAY--

YOU PART YOUR TEETH," howled Charlie Savard the first time he saw the cameraman getting ready to "shoot" his picture. Charlie is the official dispenser of traffic justice on the crowded corner of St. Peter and Notre Dame Streets. He spends many of his waking hours on his feet dodging automobiles, signalling street car conductors, and "bawling out" taxi drivers, with a good-natured grin that belies the gruff voice and shining insignia of law and order on his chest. The Daily World photographer swears he hasn't seen Charlie angry yet. Constable Savard says the way some motorists act they seem to think that "pedestrians should get permits from police headquarters before venturing on to the streets and pay an annual fee for being allowed to cross from one side to another."
