Woman asks inquest in burning

MONTREAL (CP) — The wife of a man who died when he was set afire by his own cigarette as he sat unattended and tied to a chair in a downtown hospital has demanded an inquest into the incident.

"I won't give up until I find out who's responsible for my husband's death," 43-year-old Noella Fontaine said Sunday as she greeted mourners at a funeral parlor.

How could a horrible thing like this be allowed to happen in a hospital in Fontaine said her 53-year-old husband, Robert, was helped out of bed at the Maisonneuve-Rosemont Hospital early Thursday and tied to a chair while he had his morning cigarette.

"He couldn't sit up on his own," she said, explaining her husband suffered from throat cancer. "He had to be tied, even when he sat up in bed.

Fontaine said a woman heard her husband screaming.

"She told me he'd turned into a human torch. The woman summoned a nurse, who called the fire department.' But Fontaine, a security guard, died several hours later.

His wife alleged the hospital tried to "cover up" the whole affair and has asked a lawyer to seek an inquest.

"I want to know who left my husband alone with that cigarette and why the hospital tried to keep it quiet," she said. know he had cancer, but he could

Arson suspected in $2 M St-Hyacinthe fire

ST. HYACINTHE, Que. (CP) — A fire that police think was deliberately set ripped through this city's business district early Sunday, destroying 21 buildings and causing an estimated $2 million in damage.

There were no deaths, but police said two of the 100 firemen who battled the fire for more than six hours were overcome by smoke.

Fire department spokesman Gerard
Hebert said 75 people were left homeless by the blaze, worst ever in this industrial centre of 25,000, located 45 kilometres northeast of Montreal on the Yamaska River.

Hebert said the blaze started at about 5:40 a.m. EDT in a rundown house awaiting demolition and quickly spread throughout a two-block section of the business district.

'The house was literally engulfed in flames by the time firemen arrived," he said. "Heat from the fire was so intense that it set off other fires across the street.

Additional firefighters came from surrounding municipalities, but by early afternoon the fire had reducd most of the buildings on the two blocks to smouldering rubble.

Hebert said investigators are "99.9 per cent certain" the fire was deliberately set. Three people were detained for questioning

Among buildings destroyed or damaged were five houses, 46 apartments, a pub, two barber shops, a sewing machine store and several clothing stores. Hebert estimated 50 jobs were lost.

"We lost everything," lamented Rita Roy as she watched firemen and demolition squads tearing apart the remains of her clothing store, which she opened two months ago and only finished renovating Saturday. She estimated her loss at $70,000 in stock,

Ducklings after spill

MONTREAL (CP) - Despite the dumping of 20,000 litres of used oil into the St. Lawrence River last week, hundreds of ducklings, not yet able to fly, are still living and the province is doing what it can to kep them alive.

"None of them has died" Claude Picard, spokesman for Environment Canada said Sunday, "and the danger diminishes as we speed up cleaning.

The marshy banks of the river downstream from here provide nesting grounds for thousands of aquatic birds. Officials, afraid ducklings will wander into the oily reeds, are patrolling the oil slick area in yachts and helicopters.

"Oil must be prevented from gathering on the down of the ducks, because the down is what protects them from the cold," explained Jean-Claude Presseau, superintendent of one of two sanitation firms cleaning up the spill.

Carelessness at home ups spray poisonings

MONTREAL (CP) - Carelessness around the home is responsible for a dramatic climb this year in pesticide poisonings in Quebec, says Donald Ecobichon, president of the Canadian Society of Toxicologists.

And the inability of many doctors to recognize symptoms of pesticide poisoning adds to the problem, he said in a weekend radio interview.

A recent Laval University report found 400 cases of pesticide poisoning have been reported this year, compared with 600 in all of 1980. Eighty per cent of the victims are under five years

"Most family doctors have probably never seen a case of pesticide poisoning," said Ecobichon. "If they did study something about it in medical school, they've probably forgotten it."

"Crop spraying is not the problem," said the toxicology society president, who also advises New Brunswick on the use of pesticides.

"Seventy-five to 80 per cent of pesticide poisoning cases are from urban and suburban use rather than

Ecobichon said many of the poisonings occur when people are exposed to pesticides being sprayed by neighbors in suburban areas, and when people don't heed instructions on packages of chemicals.

The French government gave Bani-Sadr political asylum when he arrived last Wednesday after escaping from Iran, but on the condition that he not engage in political activities while on French soil

Iran's revolutionary Islamic government, which ousted Bani-Sadr in June, quickly demanded that he be returned and there have been daily demonstrations at the French Embassy in Tehran. A spokesman for the French foreign

Many indicated they were being forced to lay off workers or close completely during the strike, and several said they were near bankruptcy.

Police red-faced as News in brief kids find bank loot

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg police were left with red faces after three children turned themselves into detectives to track down about $57,000 of loot from a bank

The children - Maureen McCoy and Marshall Parrot, both 11, and 12-year-old Crawford Parrott - decided to join the hunt for the money when police failed to find it after scouring an 11-block area around a west-end branch of the Royal Bank of Canada, robbed Thursday by two armed men.

McCoy said the children did not expect to find the money when they decided to play at being amateur

"We had very big doubts," she said. "We were just going out to see if we could, just for something to do." She said they started in the lane running behind their homes, where the robbers had been seen running from police who answered an alarm from the bank. "I thought it must be in there somewhere.

The children stumbled onto a dark, narrow space between a high fence and a garage facing the lane. They ducked into it and part way along they spotted some rocks.

"We thought that looked like a good place to hide it," McCoy said. They looked more closely and saw the top of a green duffle bag poking through the pile.

"It was sort of all of us who spotted it at the same time," McCoy said.

While they waited for police, the curious children peeked inside the bag. "I could see all kinds of thousanddollar-bills," more money than she'd ever seen before, McCoy said.

Beekeepers upset at spray go-ahead

WINNIPEG (CP) — Aerial spraying of the chemical Baygon to kill encephalitis-carrying mosquitoes is to start Tuesday in Winnipeg and four surrounding communities, despite protests by beekeepers.

Beekeepers claim thousands of honey-producing bees may be killed along with mosquitoes when spraying begins in Winnipeg, Portage la Prairie, Selkirk, Stonewall and Morris.

Manitoba Health Minister Bud Sherman approved the $1 million to $2.5 million spraying program on Thursday after declaring an emergency health situation in the province.

Sixteen cases of Western equine encephalitis have been confirmed in horses and blood samples from chickens used as test animals show levels of the virus are approaching those in the epidemic years of 1975 and 1977. So far, there have been no confirmed reports of any cases involving human beings. Jack Blowers, president of the Manitoba Beekeepers Association, said indiscriminate spraying is sure to damage the $11-million honey industry. There are about 1,500 beekeepers in the province.

Soil dumping final as residents protest

BORDEN, Ont. (CP) - Despite strong official statements that plans to move 4,000 tonnes of radioactive soil to this Canadian Armed Forces base are final, angry area residents aren't giving in without a fight.

More than 600 people demonstrated outside the base on Saturday, demanding the federal government do an environmental assessment before dumping the soil

Patty Moffatt, a spokesman for the Tosorontio Citizens Action Committee, which organized the protest, said Sunday the group will hold another rally today.

The residents protested the proposed dumping despite the statement Friday attributed to Energy Minister Marc Lalonde that, "You're wasting your time. The decision is made and is made to stay.'

In fact, Canadians have never filled the existing quota of 20,000 a year legally permitted to immigrate to the U.S. In the 1970s, immigrants from Canada reached a peak of 16,863 in 1978, while in 1975 only 7,308 Canadian immigrants entered the U.S., immigration officials say.

Gambia fighting continues

DAKAR, Senegal (AP) — Senegal claimed its troops control "all key sectors" of the capital of neighboring Gambia, and the rebels in the tiny West African country let pass another execution deadline for 29 hostages.

Gambian President Sir Dawda Jawara flew home to Banjul, the capital, on Sunday, declaring in a broadcast from Dakar that the attempted Marxist coup had been crushed. He urged all rebels to lay down their arms.

A Sunday afternoon deadline passed without further word from the rebels, who threatened in a broadcast to kill 29 hostages including 18 children - unless the troops from neighboring Senegal withdrew.

KNOWLTON, Que. (CP) - Stan Stubina may own a delicatessen called Marmalade but he finds country life anything but sweet.

Squirrel affection drops as Grey holds hostages

Following the bird-eating episode of a few weeks ago my affection for squirrels has plummeted sharply downwards. Strangely enough, as I like him less and less, Old Grey seems to have developed an all-absorbing passion

As soon as I open the kitchen door at 6:45 each morning, he comes running from somewhere alerted by the sound. Not content to watch from afar, he at once leaps to the screen door, feet widespread, eyes bright and hungry

I try to ignore him as I prepare breakfast but this is not easy. When I move to the sink to fill the coffee pot, he immediately shifts from door to kitchen window and peers in from there. My absolute horror is that he will get into the house. He needs only a few inches of open door and he moves like lightning.

Until this year I had forgotten an incident that happened many years ago at home on Montreal Street. My mother was entertaining at bridge one evening. Preparations for this event had been going on all day. Everything was shining with that special-for-company care. Sandwiches and little frosted cakes were made. The coffee urn was out, ashtrays, tallies, cards and score pads all in position, even the prizes were wrapped and tempting.

About 7 p.m. on that fateful evening, Mother, checking final details, sent me out to see if everything was comme il faut on the front porch. I suppose that in my excitement I must have left the screen door open a few inches. The next think I knew a big grey squirrel, a friend of my father's, had raced across the veranda and into the house. and Talk about panie; my mother was always afraid of squirrels, thinking them different from rats only by virtue of their luxurious tails. My father and I chased him around the rooms with the carefully arranged bridge tables and into the dining room where the poor creature found temporary refuge under the buffet. Unfortunately for him, he became helplessly entangled in wires that ran down from lamps on either side of the sideboard.

By this time, Williard Cross had arrived bringing some flowers from his garden. He joined the attempt to capture the intruder but I remember that it was Sydney Cross who crawled under the buffet and freed the terrified squirrel. He somehow got him into a box and he didn't lose a

So with this Freudian touch in my background, is it any wonder that after years of believing that I loved squirrels I now find that all my mother's fears have become mine?

Yesterday was the very worst day. I begged my husband not to open the kitchen door. He argued quite reasonably that either he open the door or that he call the bank to explain that he was squirrel-bound and unable to leave the house. Not amused, I went to the front door and rashly threw out a handful of peanuts. While our small monster ran for them my husband spurted out the back and reach-

About 11 a.m. my fears somewhat allayed I went out the downstairs door to hang my washing. I had time only to throw down the basked and dash inside before the squirrel was on the screen. The clothes sat out there all morning. A friend called around noon and I told her of my misadventures. She advised me to take a small pan of water with me to the clothesline and to douse him if he approached. I started to do this but as soon as I opened the door he was upon me - eager, inquisitive, overly affectionate. All my mother's talk of rats flooded my harried mind. I dropped the water on the doorstep and retreated in sheer panic, I think it was the touch of his soft fur on my bare

The clothes were left to mildew as they would but I stayed in the house and I kept the doors locked. In the late afternoon, however, after a careful scrutiny from the front windows, I emerged cautiously and made a run to my bicycle. I thought that I would ride over to tell Jeanne about the failure of the water treatment. I was gliding along, pleased with my own courage and enjoying the beautiful day when I was distracted by a sudden rustling of the grasses beside the road and out came that grey squirrel to run companionably along beside my bicycle?

I would still be travelling but for Jeanne's dog whose barling momentarily discouraged my unwanted escort. I seized the brief interval to drop my bicycle, race to the house and there remain until my husband could come to

Sun shines on Cookshire Fair

There was something for everyone at the Cookshire Fair, held over the weekend. A small midway kept the kids busy between frog-jumping contests while the older folk toured the garden displays and watched animal and crop judging. There were plenty of home-made goodies to be sampled as sunny skies brought the crowd out in droves. The light horses pulled the same weight in the horse-pulling contest as the PHOTO/CLAUDIA BOWERS heavyweights moving a 16,500 drag.

There were hot dogs of every size

Hot dog enthusiasts from as far away as Montreal gathered over the weekend in Eastman to help the local Optimists club raise funds by selling astronomical numbers of hot dogs.

The events ran over four days and included a small midway as well as special attractions such as puppet shows and a wet Tshirt contest. But what everyone came for were the hot dogs - 42 varieties in all representing the haute cuisine from around the world.

Where else but in Eastman can you hob nob with a friend as you titilate your palate with a sweet and sour wiener or a hot dog bordelaise?

While everyone in Eastman was enjoying themselves a group of learned men in California were discussing the meaning, or at least the origin of the hot dog.

Assistant city archivist Daniel Murphy tried to convince Judge Harry Low that a Malay tribe called the Igorottes, brought to San Francisco in the 19th century, created the wiener. "These people ate dog," and pilfered pets when supplies ran low, Murphy contended.

Philippine Consul General Romero Arguelles agreed: "They were referred to as hot dogs, just like hot goods or hot stuff."

Restaurateur Joe Jung insisted the hot dog really started out as "hot duck", created in 1869 by Yao Wen-yuan, a Chinese Others gave credit to New York as the site of the first dogs, an argument that Low ate it up, ruling the hot dog "probably had its spiritual home in New York".

'He was handed nine months in September 1980 for three burglaries so I certainly can't suggest a lesser term, although the learned defence will undoubtedly argue there was only one major crime," Crown attorney Claude Noi-

Michel Brun told the court he wasn't looking for any medals for his client, but suggested a term of six months would amply serve the interests of justice.

Judge Bernard Legare noted the accused was gainfully employed earning $7 an hour at the time of the crime. 'You appear to be a bright boy and you certainly knew what you were doing when you entered the house. You are not yet a hardened criminal but you are identifying yourself with that type of life. You were working so there was no excuse whatsoever for the crime.

Furthermore, you will have to report to a probation officer within 48 hours of your release and monthly for the first year of your two-year probation.

Let them eat stamps

Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet has once again shown you don't have to be smart, or even civil, to be a federal politician.

In a widely-quoted statement Friday, the long-time Liberal hack and Trudeau henchman said small businesses victimized by the long-running postal strike shouldn't blame it on the government if they are having troubles. He also said he didn't think any businesses had had that much trouble and none had gone broke as a result of not getting or sending any

Well, the minister needs his brain replaced if he really thinks these stupid things, and he needs his mouth replaced if he said them just Ouellet has been in Ottawa so long he must have forgotten what life is like out here in the real world, where people have to pay their bills, and businesses have to collect them. Perhaps the man 'in charge' at the post office isn't aware that most newspapers and magazines are delivered by mail, especially in rural areas. Or maybe, since it's obvious he can't or doesn't read, he doesn't know they exist.

Hundreds of thousands of Canadians work for mail-order companies selling everything from commemorative bird-baths to tractor parts. And they can't have an awful lot to do if there is no mail service. So, you might think, business isn't so hot these days. Some of these companies are having a rough time of it, some have already gone under. Ouellet is probably the only person in the country who hasn't heard.

What he seems to be saying is, 'let them eat

Better red than dead, say German people

BONN (AP) — Almost half the West German public would rather submit to Soviet domination than defend democracy and risk nuclear war, the respected Allensbach Institute says in a report on a public-opinion poll. The institute reported 48 per cent of 1,300 people questioned in May said it is more important to preserve peace than risk a nuclear holocaust in defence of democracy. A deep-seated revulsion to war is not new among the West Germans, many of whom recall the widespread destruction of the Second World War. And the extent of "better-Red-than-dead" sentiment this year was less than Allensbach's findings in surveys in 1976 and 1979, when 52 per cent put peace ahead of resistance to the Russians.

But the findings come amid growing differences between the West German government and the United States over defence spending and relations with the Soviet

AMOUNT CUT

Chancellor Helmut Schmidt told a news conference last week that he is cutting Defence Minister Hans Apel's request for an increase of $1.59 billion in West Germany's defence spending by almost 44 per cent, to $694 million. He blamed this and other budget cuts on the Reagan administration's refusal to bring U.S. interest rates down. The chancellor said defence expenditures will increase 4.2 per cent, the same rate as the total budget. But with inflation running about 5.8 per cent, this would mean a decrease in real expenditures.

West German newspapers devote much space to reports of growing anti-Americanism and a loose, unofficial "peace movement" opposed to western defence policies.

But the Allensbach Institute said its survey found no sizable increase in hostility toward the United States since the early 1970s, when the unpopular Vietnam war was still Fifty-six per cent believe West Germany should cooperate more with its U.S. ally, compared with only 36 per cent who held that view in a 1973 survey.

"This contradicts the opinion spread in the Federal Republic of Germany recently that anti-Americanism is increasing in Germany," the institute said.

CBC 'Journal' delayed by strike

By Trish Worron

TORONTO (CP) - A much-touted latenight news package, which CBC officials hoped would change the television viewing patterns of Canadians, is a major casualty of the technicians strike at the network. Movie fans, however, are the big winners in the labor dispute.

The CBC had planned to move The National from its traditional 11 p.m. time slot back to 10 p.m. and follow it with The Journal, a new 38-minute current affairs program of in-depth reporting and short documentaries.

Although network executives left no doubt that they are still committed to getting the hour-long package to air, they told a news conference Thursday they did not know how long the original Sept. 14 debut would be

Bill Morgan, head of current affairs. explained it would take 12 to 16 weeks to ready The Journal for broadcast after a settlement is reached with the striking technicians. The start-up time is needed to hire and train employees and make experimental runs with new equipment.

The 2,100 members of the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians have been on strike since May 21, preventing virtually all new program

Other series which will not make their originally scheduled mid-September appearances are the Fifth Estate, Marketplace, Quarterly Report and the dramas The Great Detective and Home Fires. As well, a three-part movie I Married the Klondike has been delayed along with The Tommy Hunter Show. Their starting dates are likewise tied to the end of the strike. OTHERS UNCERTAIN

The scheduling of other programs, such as The Beachcombers, for which eight episodes were completed before the strike, is not known.

But the new 10 p.m. news package is considered an essential element of the fall season as it would require revamping of the entire prime-time schedule and force viewers to break with a 26-year tradition of tuning in to The National at 11 p.m.

Even if the strike were to end within a few days, the package could not begin until some time after early November.

Peter Herrndorf, CBC vice-president, said the network had been counting on a launch in September, the time when it is easiest to change viewing patterns.

mid-season "it will make our job (of attracting viewers) a lot more difficult."

"But we still have confidence in the program and believe it is important.'

Movie buffs have reaped a bonanza as the network has acquired 23 movies to fill in the gaps left by regular programming.

A package of 13 MGM movies — including Gone With the Wind, 2001 - A Space Odyssey, Network and That's Entertainment — will be shown this fall along with 10 Canadian features.

The Canadian movies, which were to have been shown beginning in January, include the multi-award winner, Les Bons Desbarras, Silent Partner and Murder by

As well, the network has bought a series of one-hour programs by Second City, the comedy produced in Edmonton and shown in a 90-minute version this summer on NBC. The American network will continue to carry the show this fall. It has received critical acclaim in the United States for its Canadian stars, including John Candy, Andrea Martin, Dave Thomas and Catherine O'Hara.

The CBC is not alone in suffering disruptions to its fall season, which normally begins for all North American networks in mid-September.

A 13-week strike by American writers, He agreed that if the program begins in which only ended in mid-July, means that the premieres of U.S. shows — including those imported by all Canadian networks will be delayed from two weeks to two

Two new American shows bought by the CBC - Jessica Novak, a series about a journalist starring Canadian Helen Shaver and Mr Merlin, a children's program probably will not be ready for broadcast until the first week of November, said Jack Craine, head of television programming.

However, returning American shows, such as M.A.S.H., should be ready by early October, he said. REVENUE LOST

The long-running strike by baseball players is also playing havoc with some network schedules - including the CBC which normally carries games by the National League Expos.

Herrndorf would not say how much revenue the CBC has lost during the technicians' strike or what the budget is for The Journal, which has attracted such topflight journalists as Barbara Frum and Peter Kent.

But Bill Morgan said that about 35 editorial and support staff had been hired so far and he "did not doubt" an estimate of $2 million has been spent on such capital projects as new equipment and renovation of a studio.

The staff working on the show "are not underemployed at the moment but whether that will be the case over a period of time is something we don't know.

Reagan tax cuts get final approval

@1981 FORT WORTH STAR-TELEGRAM

By Glenn Somerville

WASHINGTON (CP) - While the Canadian economy sinks deeper into the doldrums, the Reagan administration has just nailed into place the final plank in its platform for a U.S. economic recovery.

Congressional approval Wednesday night for a massive, three-year tax cut proposal capped a bold and vigorous effort by President Reagan to put his conservative ideas for stimulating economic activity into

Whether or not Reagan's tax-cutting, budget-slashing proposals prove effective, the contrast between his administration's approach to managing the economy and that of Canadian authorities is striking

Last week, for example, while Reagan spent hours in the Oval Office of the White House cajoling congressmen by telephone into approving his economic policies, Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau was attending the royal wedding in London and preparing for a North African holiday.

As the U.S. president addressed the American people Monday night to rally support for proposals that he claimed would bring "a renaissance in America for Americans" - sparking a deluge of approving phone calls to the White House and to Capitol Hill — Canadian leaders were pursuing plans for a new international economic system designed to give more money to poorer countries. NEW DIRECTION SET

In just more than six months in office, Reagan has concentrated his efforts on putting into place policies that have set a new and greatly different course for the U.S. economy. It emphasizes private enterprise while reducing sharply federal involvement in the U.S. economy.

Tax cuts totalling a whopping $150 billion over the next three years — the largest in U.S. history — and trimming of at least $37 billion from projected spending for social programs are at the heart of Reagan's prescription for a healthy domestic economy.

During that time, Reagan has steadfastly resisted being drawn into debate over the United States' role in promoting aid to poorer countries, and held off allied nations' bickering over stringent U.S. monetary policies that are blamed for high interest rates at home and abroad.

In the course of charting recovery for the domestic economy, Reagan's determined optimism appears to be having some effect. That is also in contrast to the situation in

INFLATION EASING The U.S. annual inflation rate in June was 8.8 per cent, compared with 12.8 per cent in Canada. It marked the fourth successive month in which the annual inflation rate was below 10 per cent in the United States, while the Canadian rate remained in double digits.

With a far larger work force, the U.S. managed a 7.3-per-cent unemployment rate in June, the same as in Canada. And while the U.S. dollar strengthened in relation to other currencies on international exchange markets, Canada's grew weaker.

The Reagan administration's emphasis on a strong domestic economy is starting to pay political dividends as well. Besides demonstrating his mastery of Congress by winning acceptance for his programs, Reagan earned a 45-per-cent approval rating in polls conducted this month that measure how the public feels he is handling economic affairs.

In Canada, according to Gallup Polls, barely 18 per cent of Canadians countrywide feel the government is doing a good job in shaping economic policy. A whopping 67 per cent were critical of federal policies, according to findings released this week. POSTAL EXAMPLE

The handling of labor problems in the respective postal services of Canada and the United States represented another example of the difference in approach to economic

While Canada continues to endure a postal strike that now is more than a month old, amid complaints from businessmen that many are being driven to bankruptcy, the Reagan administration averted a strike earlier this month in the U.S. service by round-the-clock bargaining and a threat to arrest any strikers.

Similarly, Congress has demonstrated a willingness to clamp the new mood of austerity on itself in contrast to the case of Canadian parliamentarians.

In March this year, both the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives voted resoundingly to deny themselves a 16.3-percent pay increase. As Senator William Roth (R-Del.) commented at the time: "Any pay increase would be highly inappropriate because of what we are trying to achieve at this time.'

Much of what the Reagan administration is trying to achieve, in terms of new economic policies, has been achieved now with the passage of tax-cut and budgetreducing proposals.

In Canada, where economic policy seems much less defined, parliamentarians apparently felt no similar need to embrace austerity this month as they approved a 33.9per-cent pay raise for themselves to bring their basic salaries to $43,800 from $32,700.

Old-time war writers 'an anachronism' in modern combat exercises

Among visitors to Rendezvous 81, a huge concentration of troops and equipment at nearby Canadian Forces Base Gagetown, were 36 members of the Canadian War Correspondents Association, who came to observe the exercise and remember what it was like in Europe, Korea and Vietnam.

"In Vancouver there are maybe 25 stonemasons and about five sculptors," he said. "In Vernon there are only two or three at the most.'

Photographs of his work show lifesize marble sculptures of female figures, stone water fountains and even delicately sculpted flower vases.

"At first I will do things like walls,

As well as his wife and son, Dammers brought his 73-year-old mother because the immigration scheme allows him to bring an elderly relative who is not dependent on Canada's social services.

He has already hired one part-time assistant. If business is good he hopes to hire four to seven full-time employees in a year or 18 months.

Money disease the cause of Canadian inflation — Fraser disease of the monetary system is the main cause of Canadian inflationary difficulties, says the director of the Fraser Institute.

Inflation is rampant because there is about 30 per cent too much money in circulation in Canada, says Dr. Michael Walker of the Vancouver-based economic research organization.

"This estimate comes from a series of targets for the money supply that we established in 1976," he says.

He says it is no surprise that there are record deficits at the federal level and that "We have watched in each federal expenditures vastly succeeding year the money outstrip revenues.

Bothersome bird thinks out loud

Dear Ann: You said parrots and other talking birds do not know what they are saying, That they are only "imitators." Well, I must disagree.

Our parrot Boffo was purchased by my husband in New Orleans during the Second World War. (I did not know him then). When we married, in 1948, I had to take Boffo or there would be no wedding

I knew at the time Boffo swore a blue streak, said some very dirty words and there was no shutting him up. But I thought pet birds lived about as long as dogs, and figured Boffo wouldn't be around long. I was wrong. Parrots can live to be well over 100 years old. That damned bird will probably bury ME.

If birds don't know what they are saying, please explain why Boffo talks dirty only when we have highclass company? Also, he says "Hello" when I come in and "So long" when I leave. Thanks for an answer - if you can think of one. - Pittsburgh Reader

A few weeks ago George told me his wife wants to move to this city because his two kids miss him, and she can't raise them alone. Well, they arrived and had no place to stay, so George invited them to move in with us.

I know he doesn't care for his wife anymore and she doesn't seem particularly interested in him, but he hasn't done one thing about getting a divorce. What's more, he is using part of my pay cheque to buy them groceries and clothing. I realize he has an obligation to his family, but I feel angry and foolish. Any advice? - Stumped

The Geritol Four had to leave early due to another engagement so they were served lunch when the others went in to the Masonic Hall to play cards

After three games of cards were played we moved back into the Memorial Hall where about 65 sat down to a lunch of assorted sandwiches, pickles, various kinds of delicious cakes and squares, tea and coffee, served on tables covered with white cloths and centred with bouquets of lilacs.

The head table was occupied by the President and Mrs. Bracey, Mrs. Alma Rudd, Mrs. Edith Bracey, the Dunham Seniors' Club President Mrs. Chicoine, Mrs. Eddie, Mr. Milton Bracey and Mrs. Esther Wescott

The highlight of the lunch period was when a beautifully decorated birthday cake with one candle was brought in and placed before Mrs. Edith Bracey to celebrate her 95th birthday while the crowd sang Happy Birthday. This was such a surprise that Mrs. Bracey was for a few moments overcome with emotion. Mrs. Donald Guthrie was also wished a happy birthday as they both celebrate on the same day

Pictures were taken of the honoured lady cutting the cake with Mrs. Earl Bracey assisting her. Pieces of the cake were passed round for all to have a sample.

We were then entertained by Mrs. Eddie beautifully singing several hymns accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Esther Wescott. This was much enjoyed and the President extended thanks for their kindness. Mrs. Eddie replied that she would be pleased to accommodate at any time. Mrs. Dewing, President of the Franklin, Vt. Seniors spoke on their behalf expressing thanks for the delightful afternoon.

A birthday card had been sent to Mrs. Edith Bracey, Get-well cards to Lloyd Harris, Mrs. Gordon Ewing, Mrs. Clifford Rhicard and a Sympathy card to Mr. and

Mrs. Donald Guthrie. As it was Mr. and Mrs. Bracey's 50th wedding anniversary on Saturday, June 6, after the regular lunch was served, Mrs. Grace Short, on behalf of the Club, placed a large anniversary cake, attractively decorated by Sandra Wilson, before the honoured couple, also after which the secretary, on behalf of the Seniors, presented them with a 50th anniversary album. Sports Sher-Lenn split weekend playoff games

Saturday afternoon Park Extension defeated the Sher-Lenn squad 14-1 before over 1,500 spectators followed by Valleyfield's 16-0 throttling of Chateauguay.

On Sunday, Sher-Lenn, facing elimination, responded well to the pressure as they scored five-first inning runs, followed by six more in the third to put the game out of reach of the Chateauguay squad.

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) - For Bob Gibson, the trip to Cooperstown was as short as possible.

For Johnny Mize, it was long and agonizing. Gibson and Mize, along with Negro League pioneer Rube Foster, were inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame Sunday. Gibson, 45, returned to the spotlight only five years after his retirement. He is only the 11th man elected to baseball's shrine in his first year of eligibility.

Mize, meanwhile, has been retired for 28 years and eligible for the Hall for 23. But he was bypassed 20 times by the Baseball Writers' Association of America and twice by the Veterans Committee before making it this year.

"I certainly am proud to be here," said Gibson, who amassed 251 wins, 56 shutouts and 3,117 strikeouts in his outstanding 17-year career. He is the only pitcher to win the seventh game of a World Series twice and had seven consecutive Series victories in a 7-2 post-season record.

Never one to do things at half-speed, Gibson was the most intimidating pitcher in the game for much of the 1960s. He was so dominant in 1968 - 22-9, 13 shutouts, 268 strikeoqts and a phenomenal 1.12 earned run average that he won the first of his two Cy Young awards and the National League's most valuable player honor.

Following that season, which Gibson capped with a record 17-strikeout performance in the first game of the World Series against Detroit, baseball lowered the pitching mound to give batters a better chance to hit against the likes of Gibson, now a coach with New York Mets of the National League.

NOT BITTER Mize would have had an honest beef with the selectors about being overlooked despite some excellent career statitics. He hit 359 homers, including a National League record for left-handed hitters of 51 in 1947 with New York Giants. He won or tied for the NL home run title four times, captured the RBI crown three times and the batting title once.

And he's the only major leaguer to have hit three

Indy hearing ends

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The special United States Auto Club hearing on Bobby Unser's appeal of the Indianapolis 500 concluded Friday with what Unser called contradictory testimony.

Drivers Gordon Johncock and Scott Brayton testified the rule on blending into the pack after leaving the pits was made clear to the drivers during a pre-race meeting. But Unser said they contradicted chief steward Tom Binford's earlier testimony that drivers would be given a one or two-car leeway. USAC lawyer Henry Ryder later denied there was any contradiction. Ryder said the difference in testimony involved confusion between a rule and its enforcement.

Johncock, the 1973 Indy 500 winner, and Brayton, a rookie in the race on May 24 of this year, were called as rebuttal witnesses during the final day of testimony in the

Caponi seeks million

BOSTON (AP) — Donna Caponi, a Ladies Professional Golfers Association superstar, tripped the light fantastic to the bank again, but she had better watch her step.

LPGA officials are going by the rule book, playing no favorites. And that includes Caponi in her chase to become a $1 million winner on the tour in her 16th season

Caponi, a two-time winner of both the U.S. Open and LPGA titles, withstood controversy and fired a one-underpar 71 for a 72-hole total of 276 Sunday in capturing her fifth crown of the year in the $150,000 Boston Five tournament at Ferncroft Country Club. With top prize money of $22,500, Caponi increased her earnings for the year to $158,595 and her career total to $982,521 in a goal to join Kathy Whitworth in the millionaire queendom.

However, Caponi, also bidding for LPGA player of the year honors for the first time, was virtually overshadowed by controversy in the tournament.

The turmoil started in the second round Friday when rookie pro Deanie Wood sank her tee shot for an ace on the 16th hole. A spectator's guide inadvertently said an ace on the hole was worth a new car. It should have been listed for the sixth hole

The sponsoring Boston Five Cents Savings Bank admitted the error and settled for a $3,500 cash award to Wood. The Oklahoma City resident gladly accepted "my biggest cheque of my career." She went on to earn $322.50 with a 302 score in the tournament. But trouble really bubbled during the final two rounds. Kathy Young, winless in three years on the tour but tied for the halfway lead, was disqualified for signing an incorrect scorecard after the third round Saturday. That was the same day that Carol Mann was penalized two strokes for slow play.

Carmello Botera, Stacy Woods, George Kokozos and Roberto Canestran all scored a pair of runs for the Park Extension team. Daniel Larouche replied with the lone Stephane Bonhomme struck out 10 batters as Valleyfield deflated Chateauguay Saturday.

Martin St. Amant crossed the plate three times for the Valleyfield squad, while Marco Lapierre, Gaetan Sarrault, Serge Lefebvre, Eric Montpetit and Bonhomme scored twice each.

Bonhomme earned the win for Valleyfield, as Sylvain Sevigny took the loss.

With Chateauguay eliminated from the Provincial play-offs, the remaining three teams will continue in their quest for title of provincial champions. Next game will be 6:00, Tuesday evening at the Parade Grounds as Park Extension and Valleyfield go head-to-head.

Barnes returns triumphant, as Riders trounce Al's

By Anthony Ross

MONTREAL - Saskatchewan Roughriders' quarterback Joe Barnes squashed any rumors he was becoming Western Canada's next Joe Who? as he lead his club to a 43-23 thrashing of the Montreal Alouettes at Olympic Stadium.

Barnes, traded by the Als to Regina last season, completed 22 of 39 passes for 394 yards and five touchdowns and Montreal was never really in the game after the midway mark of the second quarter.

Operating with surgical precision Barnes directed the Alouette defence with his short passing game and kept out of the clutches of Junior Ah You and company by sprinting out on almost every play

"I think I played with more intensity today than I have in my entire career," said Barnes, who has split the quarterbacking duties this season with John Hufnagel.

"I'm excited I could show the people of Montreal that I can still play ball," Barnes added. "I've been up for the game all week. I haven't come down yet and I probably

Barnes was given a rousing ovation at the end of the game by what was left of the crowd of 33,209, but Montreal quarterback Vince Ferragamo was not so fortunate, getting the Bronx cheer from the faithful

Barnes, often on the receiving end of catcalls and jeers during his five-year tenure with Montreal, sympathized with Ferragamo.

"I feel sorry for Vince because I've been there," Barnes said.

"The things that happened to him today aren't that different from the things I experienced." Although Ferragamo completed 19 of 25 passes for 202 yards, he could not muster a sustained attack. "I was completing the short stuff but that wasn't enough," said the former Los Angeles Rams pivot, who was relieved by backup quarterback Gerry Dattilio late in

"Turnovers lost the game for us," said Montreal coach Joe Scannella.

The Alouettes gave the ball away four times in the game, twice on fumbles by running back David Overstreet and twice on Ferragamo interceptions. Overstreet fumbled the ball four times in the first half and felt afterwards he was responsible for the loss.

"A lack of concentration is the only way I can explain it," said Overstreet. "It's still no excuse. It was my fault, I put us in the hole and we couldn't climb out of it.

In the second quarter with Regina ahead 14-3 Overstreet raced 37 yards to the Roughriders' 20 but fumbled on the next play. Barnes took over and drove for a touchdown hitting David Edwards with a 47 yard strike six plays

Saskatchewan closed out the first half scoring with 47 seconds left in the half when he found Greg Fieger open in the end zone from eight yards away. The touchdown gave the Roughriders a 28-3 lead at the halfway mark and they

Montreal tried to mount a comeback in the second half but their anemic offence never got anything going. Ferragamo did connect with James Scott for a 16 yard TD but Regina was never really threatened. With seconds reamining in the third quarter Ferragamo threw his second interception right into the hands of Booby Hosea and Scannella replaced him with Gerry Dattilio. The Alouettes former number-one signal caller had brief flashes of success but the game was hopelessly out of reach. Datillio found tightened Nick Araki free in the end zone but it was the last whimper that would be heard from Montreal

Scannella was at a loss to explain either what was wrong with his club of high priced stars and what to do about their 1-4 record. "I'm not going to sit here and say we played well when we got killed but I don't know what we are going to do or what changes we can make because we don't have too many alternatives with all the injuries."

Montreal suffered more bad news when middle linebacker Tom Cousineau went down in the first quarter with a damaged forearm. Cousineau will visit the doctor today to determine whether he has strained or torn Scannella was asked who would be his starting quarterback in the Als' next contest Saturday in Winnipeg but he was noncommittal. "I won't answer that question now, it will have to wait until later in the week. I can say one thing, today's loss was a question of mistakes.'

Ferragamo, who claims he is still adjusting to the differences in the Canadian game, said he wasn't sure what the problem with the Alouettes was. "I can't explain it and I don't really know if we are getting better, staying the same or moving backwards.

Oosterhuis wins Canadian Open

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Peter Oosterhuis brought an eight-year drought to an end and Jack Nicklaus added to his frustration with another second-place finish in Sunday's final round of the $425,000 Canadian Open golf championship. Oosterhuis, a British-born regular on the Professional Golfers' Association tour, won 19 international events before he decided to move to the U.S. and become a regular on the lucrative PGA tour in 1974.

The 6-foot-4 Oosterhuis carded a one-under-par 70 to finish the 72-hole championship at four-under-par 280 on the 7,060-yard, par-71 Glen Abbey Golf Club layout.

Oosterhuis finished second to Lee Trevino in 1977, the first time the Canadian Open was staged at Glen Abbey, the permanent site for the national championship.

Oosterhuis's one-under score was one of only three subpar rounds on the final day of the tournament and earned him the Peter Jackson Trophy and $76,500, more than four times what he had earned on the tour this year. TIES FOR SECOND

His 280 total also left him only one shot clear of 1978 winner Bruce Lietzke, Andy North and Jack Nicklaus, who finished second for the fifth time. Lietzke had a 70, North and Nicklaus a 71.

U.S. Open champion David Graham of Australia and Mark Hayes were at 282 — two shots under par — and one stroke ahead of Bob Eastwood, Leonard Thompson and Tom Kite. Graham had a 70 — his third of the tournament and Hayes posted a 74.

Eastwood, who had five birdies in his first nine holes, checked in with 67, the lowest round of the day. Kite had a 74 and Thompson, who turned a course-record 62 Friday and held a one-stroke lead going into Sunday's final round, posted a five-over-par 76.

Baseball season gears up, again

CHICAGO (AP) — The agreement that ended the 50-day baseball strike is expected to be ratified by the 26 major league basball club owners at a meeting Tuesday in Chicago where owners also will formulate a plan to resume the season.

While ratification of the strike-ending agreement is virtually guaranteed, the question of how to resume play is a hot issue, in the words of New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner.

"It may divide the leagues," said Steinbrenner. "The public's not in a mood for gimmicks, so if we don't handle this carefully, it could backfire on us.' One proposal is for the season to be split, with the second half starting Aug. 10. If that option is chosen, firsthalf leaders in each division — the Yankees and Oakland A's in the American League and Philadelphia Phillies and Los Angeles Dodgers in the National — would face the second-half winners after the season ends Oct. 3.

Or, the owners could decide simply to resume play as scheduled and let the divisional races continue as if there had been no strike.

If the season were to be continued as it stood at the beginning of the strike many teams will find that their schedules have been thrown for a loop.

The Angels, for example, were supposed to be in New York June 16-18 and July 24-26. But all six games were wiped out by the strike, which began June 12 and ends Aug. 9 with the playing of the all-star game at Cleveland. Other interdivisional visits in the AL — six games, in each case - lost to the strike are a trip by Texas to Baltimore, Toronto's to Boston, Chicago's to Kansas City, Minnesota's to Cleveland and Oakland's to Detroit. The AL lost 382 games, 52 more than the National League. One game the NL will not lose is the 2-2 tie between St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs, suspended after 12 innings April 29. It was to have been made up when the Cards visited Chicago during the July 4 weekend, but NL President Chub Feeney ruled it could be completed before the teams' Sept. 21 game.

Other games, though, postponed due to inclement weather before the strike and rescheduled during it, will not be made up.

Handicapped games end with basketball

LONDON (CP) — A down-to-the-wire basketball match played before a packed, noisy house ended the 30th Stoke Mandeville Games for the paralysed Saturday as France nipped Sweden by a single point for the gold medal.

Soon after, a procession of wheelchairs began moving towards the entertainment tent next to the sports centre named after the driving force and founder of the games, Dr. E. Ludwig Guttmann.

The Canadian team won nine medals during the week-long competition.

With more than 800 athletes from 40 countries participating, the high level of training was more than amply demonstrated during the week with the athletes showing exceptional skill and endurance in a variety of sports including track and field, swimming, weightlifting and basketball.

World records fell with the predictability of fog over the English channel, and one belonged to Mark Burger of Edmonton, who set a mark of 28.76 seconds in the 25-metre backstroke in his class for quadraplegics.

Other medals for the Canadian team were won by Irene Wilson of Toronto with a bronze in swimming, Jerry Terwin of Winnipeg got a silver in the discus, and Tom Parker of Vancouver had a silver in archery. Originally Parker was credited with the gold medal, but a recount of the score knocked him out of first place by three points. ZIZAG COURSE

In the final events Saturday, Julian Wedge of Vancouver and Randy Dueck of Winnipeg placed fourth and seventh, respectively, in a slalom track competition where competitors must zigzag through a series of markers.

In the rifle shooting event, Richard Schell of Tramping Lake, Sask., finished in 13th place in the standing position and 12th in the prone.

All competitors were placed in one of seven different classes based on the severity of their injury.

Sharon Cook, president of the Canadian Wheelchair Sports Association, said for most of the athletes at the Stoke Mandeville Games, which started 30 years ago, it has taken at least a few years after their accidents to be ready mentally as well as physically to participate in a competitive sport.

Albert Mines: A church abandons a graveyard

ALBERT MINES - A large tortoiseshell cat greets visitors to the old Precieux-Sang burial ground off Rodgers Road, leading us through the latest desecration left by a group of campers evicted by Provincial police last Thursday.

It's a mess. Broken beer bottles, bean cans and pizza cartons are piled atop the debris of a bonfire made from stolen kindling and old tires. Bob and Carl, nearby residents of this former mining community perched atop the ridge between western Sherbrooke and Lennoxville, lift a square of charred carpet to reveal the bottom half of a broken tombstone: Gedeon and Caroline Laflamme, 1853-1934, 1859-

Other headstones, the smaller ones marking the graves of infants and children, have been dragged up to several hundred feet from their graves to serve as seats around the fire. Still other stones have been pushed over or broken, for no apparent reason. In one corner of the Catholic burial ground, an excavated and refilled grave appears to have served as a latrine.

"It's as if the church has washed its hands of this graveyard," says Bob. "They haven't even been up here since this latest business.'

The campers moved into the isolated cul-de-sac late in May, six young men and women with two or three tents. More showed up for the regular partying that went on, but local residents say there were at least the six regulars.

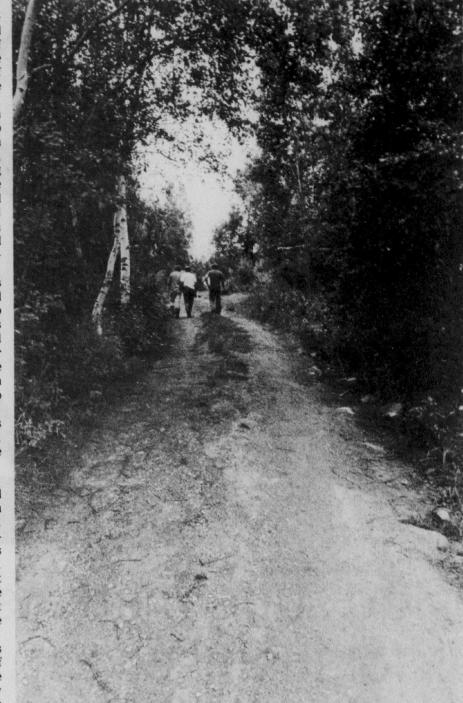

"It's a funny thing -- none of us felt it was our business to come right up here and challenge their right to camp. It was as if they had the right to be here and we were the intruders.

The campers weren't exactly bikers but they were a rough crowd from out of town, and neither Bob, a long-distance trucker, nor his neighbors had any intention of confronting the group only to suffer retaliations.

succeeding party and their searches for firewood began leading them onto neighboring property.

"I guess they were having trouble burning the poplars they were cutting in the graveyard, so they went up to that old house Gil Ross had torn down and helped themselves to the clapboards," said Bob. The campers also found a few score old tires, which they burned in a fire so big it bathed the entire ridge in a pink glow.

Even the Atomes, the local motorcycle gang with a clubhouse down the road, were supposedly disgusted with the antics of the newcomers. Several residents had called the Provincial Police detachment in Sherbrooke to complain, but since there were no specific complaints and Ross, the main injured party, had not yet returned from a year's sabbatical in Britain, a patrol car wasn't dispatched until last Thursday. According to residents, the patrol car arrived after 11, and stayed about half an hour after discovering only two people in the graveyard. The constable radioed headquarters, who Croteau and relayed the request of the two campers that they be allowed to stay until the next morning. Croteau said it was okay and the police left.

But the problem hasn't been resolved for the neighborhood.

Most of Albert Mines' current homeowners live there for the peace and quiet, of which there has been plenty since the vein of copper was mined out and the shafts closed in 1907. The graveyard welcomed its first permanent resident when Joseph Daigneault was buried there September 21, 1906 and has never been deconsecrated, though it fell into discuse when the nearby Eglise Precieux-Sang burned to the ground December 18, 1955. The last two to be phoned Precieux-Sang Cure Daniel buried there were the Beland brothers, who died in 1962; after them, parishioners were interred at St. Michel's Cemetery along with most others from Sherbrooke parishes.

> The Parish of Precieux-Sang, while it still includes Albert Mines, moved to a spanking new church on Thibault Street in Bergaminville, the big subdivision off Belvedere. The year the Belands were buried, the new church celebrated its first mass and the old graveyard's 20-year history of neglect and abandonment began.

> The graveyard serves as a local lovers' hotspot, and drinking ground and attracts a rowdy crowd. The Township of Ascot, that sprawling dogleg of a municipality with lots of land and not much in the way of a tax base, has been petitioned to control access to the graveyard; so has the parish. A stout gate which had barred access to the cemetery rotted and fell down sometime in the last few years, but neither the municipality nor the parish have made any moves to replace humble beginnings as a mission in mining company buildings with 540 parishioners in 1895, Precieux-Sang has grown to include 2,000 households and 6,700 members, though Cure Croteau admits he's finding it hard to convince his elders any money should be put into the old burial ground.

"All they have to do," said Carl, "is vicinity even know there's a graveyard

there, Though many of the old headstones bear the names of prominent

Sherbrooke families - Caya, Car-

That way, nobody'll go up there."

This recent hole, possibly used as a latrine, had been filled in.

Croteau took over the parish in January -- the 75th anniversary of its founding - and paid a visit to the graveyard a couple of months ago. He says it was in poor shape even before the campers arrived, with plenty of fallen stones and garbage around. Since his arrival, the parish has published an historical pamphlet and has otherwise marked its history, but there have been no attempts to clean up the old financial advisers of the parish, but I couldn't even find the rules of the cemetery. How can I go about asking that the parishioners help defray the expenses of upkeep when we don't even know the rules?'

He promised to enlist the help of locals to install a barrier and police the area, but wondered aloud whether it was the business of outsiders to tell the Church what to do with its burial

But while the Catholic Church hesitates in preserving a relatively recent slice of its local history Townshippers Inc. had no such second thoughts when it sent one of its cemetery - clearing crews around to

'We knew it was a Catholic graveyard up there but we felt there was no reason to segregate the French and the English," said Townshippers clearing brush, listing the 24 headstones and mapping their location.

Some grave markers were smashed into fragments and scattered.

About 20 per cent of the stones bore English names, Orr added.

"It was the only Catholic cemetery we did and we got permission from Vicar Thompson' (assistant cure and then cure from 1976 to 1980). But the project grant wasn't repeated this summer and Townshippers' cemeterypreservation program was one of the victims, he added.

So, apparently, is the old Precieux-Sang burial ground.

Broken headstones were used to make a fireplace.

These headstones were moved from surrounding graves to provide seating.

Oswald: "Fred Karpin is unique among writers on play in that he always uses hands with logical bidding. South has a standard twonotrump opening and North a perfect raise to six.

Alan: "South wins the diamond lead in dummy and leads the queen of clubs for a finesse. Of course, it would be super-serendipity if South played his ace of clubs by mistake, but South finesses and loses to the singleton king. Now South needs three spade tricks and must locate the queen. Oswald: "West leads a sec-

East has only one spade so South cashes his spade ace and finesses for West's queen with certainty of success.'

Former camper honoured

BROOKBURY - On Thursday, July 23, Mr. and Mrs. James Dougherty were invited to have supper at Camp Massawippi, Ayer's

After supper everyone gathered at Cabin E where Mr. and Mrs. Dougherty were asked to assist in planting a Colorado spruce tree in honour of their son, Danny, who had attended this camp for seven or eight summers prior to his passing away in May of this year.

Mark Lavalliere, Danny's cousin, spoke on this occasion saying how Danny was missed by everyone at camp and this tree was a memorial to him.

Wilson Troy then presented Mr. and Mrs. Dougherty with a model of Cabin E, which had been made by the campers.

Mr. and Mrs. Dougherty thanked them for the gift and the honour bestowed on their son, saying he would have been very proud.

Everyone sang along with Barry Barnette who played the guitar and Barry Cooney, in full dress, playing the bag pipes.

This evening will long be remembered by Danny's parents and many of his fellow campers.
